PRIVATION, s. [privatio, Lat.] the removal or destruction of any thing or quality; the act of degrading from an office.

PRIVATIVE, a. [privativus, Fr.] depriving or robbing a thing of that which belongs to it. Consisting in the absence of something; opposed to positive.

PRIVATIVE, s. that which is the absence of something; as, darkness is only the absence of light: in which example darkness is a privative.

PRIVATIVELY, ad. negatively.

PRIVATIVENESS, s. notation of absence of something that should be present.

PRIVET, s. in Botany, a shrub having white blossoms and black berries, common in garden hedges. It flowers in May and June.

PRIVILEGE, s. [Fr. privilegium, from privus and lex, Lat.] a peculiar advantage, immunity, or right.

To PRIVILEGE, v. a. to invest with peculiar rights or immunities; to exempt from taxes, &c.

PRIVILY, ad. in a secret manner.

PRIVITY, s. [privaute, Fr.] a private communication; consciousness.

PRIVY, a. [privus, Fr.] private; assigned to secret uses; clandestine; secret; conscious to any thing. Privy council, in the English Constitution, the permanent advisers of the sovereign in state affairs, differing from the cabinet and the ministry in this circumstance, that having been sworn members of the council, only the demise of the crown dismisses them from their post; but they do not undertake any of the duties of the office, unless specially called upon to do so.

PRIVY, s. a place of retirement; a water-closet.

PRIZE, s. [priz, Fr.] a reward gained by conquest or any performance.—[prize, Fr.] plunder; a ship taken from an enemy in time of war.

To PRIZE, v. a. [priser, Fr.] to rate, value, or esteem.

PRIZE MONEY, s. the shares of the products arising from the sale of prizes, &c. taken in war, which are distributed amongst the forces engaged in the capture.

PRIZEFIGHTER, (prizefighter) s. one that fights publicly for money.

PRIZER, s. [priseur, Fr.] he that prizes.

PRO, [Lat.] for; in defence. Pro and con, for and against.

PROBABILITY, s. [probab, Lat.] likelihood; the appearance of truth; evidence arising from the preponderation of argument; demonstration that does not produce certainty. Theory of Probabilities, that branch of mathematics which investigates the laws of chance, and determines the exact or numerical amount of expectation which may be entertained respecting the occurrence of any contingent event. On this theory the practice of Insurance Societies, Life Assurance, Annuity, and Benefit Societies, &c. &c. is founded.

PROBABLE, a. [Fr.] likely; having better arguments brought for than against it, but not certain or demonstrative.

PROBABLY, ad. likely; in likelihood.

PROBATE, s. [Lat.] the proof of wills in the spiritual court. Probate and Legacy Duty, in England, one of the manner of contrivances of the real-property holders for laying the burden of taxation on all but themselves.

PROBATION, s. [Fr.] proof; evidence; a state of trial or examination; a year of novitiate before being admitted to a monastic life.

PROBATIONARY, PROBATORY, a. serving for trial.

PROBATIONER, s. one in a state of trial; a novice.

PROBATUM EST, [Lat.] an expression added to the end of a receipt, signifying it is tried or proved.

PROBE, s. in Surgery, a slender instrument or wire used in searching the depth of wounds.

To PROBE, v. a. to try or search a wound by an instrument.

PROBE-SCISSARS, s. scissars which have a button at the end of one of their shanks, which is thrust into a wound.

PROBITY, s. [probite, Fr. probitas, Lat.] approved honesty, sincerity, or veracity.

PROBLEM, s. [problema, Gr.] a question proposed. In Mathematics, something to be done. See THEOREM.

PROBLEMATICAL, a. [problematique, Fr.] uncertain; disputable; unsettled.

PROBOSCIS, s. [Lat.] in Animal Anatomy, the trunk or snout of an elephant; also applied to that part of any other animal which resembles it.

PROBUS, M. AURELIUS, an emperor of Rome, who was raised to that dignity by the Syrian army, on the death of Tacitus. He defeated the Germans, forced the Persians to make peace, fortified the frontier between the Danube and the Rhine, endeavoured to introduce a taste for the arts of peace amongst the soldiers, and therefore was assassinated in 282 A. D., after a reign of 6 years.

PROCAECIOUS, (procacious) a. [procaez, Lat.] petulant; loose; insolent; saucy; malapert.

PROCAECITY, s. petulance; sauciness; insolence.

PROCATARCTIC, a. [prokatarcho, Gr.] forerunning; remotely antecedent.

PROCATARXIS, s. in Medicine, the pre-existent cause of a disease, which co-operates with others that are subsequent, whether internal or external.

PROCE/DURE, s. [Fr.] a manner of acting or conduct; process or operation.

To PROCEE/D, v. n. [pro and cedo, Lat.] to pass from one thing or place to another; to go or march in state; to issue, arise, or come from; to be transacted; to advance, or make a progress; to take effect; to be propagated; to be produced by an original cause.

PROCEE/DS, s. in Law and Commerce, produce or profits from sale, &c.

PROCEE/DER, s. one who goes forward; one that makes a progress.

PROCEE/DING, s. [procedé, Fr.] progress from one thing or action to another; procedure.

PROCE/LLOUS, a. [procella, Lat.] stormy; tempestuous.

PROCE/RITY, a. [procerus, Lat.] tallness; height of stature.

PRO/CESS, a. [procedo, Lat.] tendency, or progressive course; gradual progress; course; methodical and gradual series; course of law.

PRO/CESSION, (procession) s. a train marching in a ceremonious solemnity; a cavalcade.

PRO/CESSIONAL, (processional) a. relating to procession.

PRO/CESSIONARY, a. consisting in procession.

PRO/CHRONISM, (prochronism) s. [pro and chronos, Gr.] an error in chronology; a dating a thing before it happened.

PRO/CIDENCE, s. [procido, Lat.] falling down; dependence below its natural place.

PRO/CINCT, s. [procingo, Lat.] complete preparation; preparation brought to the point of action.

To PROCLA/IM, v. a. [proclamo, Lat. proclamer, Fr.] to denounce or publish in a solemn or legal manner; to tell openly; to out-law.

PROCLA/IMER, s. one that publishes by authority.

PROCLAMATION, s. [pro and clamo, Lat.] publication by authority; a declaration of the king's will openly published among the people.

PROCLIVITY, s. [proclivitas, Lat.] tendency; natural inclination or bias; readiness; proneness; propensity.

PROCLIVOUS, a. inclined; tending by nature.

PROCLUS, one of the most eminent of the Neo-Platonic philosophers, of the 5th century. After studying at a school in Asia Minor, and at Alexandria, he went to Athens; where he was finally the chief teacher of the Academy, and died in 485, aged 73 years. His writings relate not merely to the philosophical doctrines he had espoused, but also to the Geometry of Euclid, &c. He was the last teacher at Athens; and his genius and eloquence vainly strove to relume the ancient fire. He wrote against Christianity; but Christianity conquered Platonism.

PROCON/SUL, s. [Lat.] a Roman officer, who governed a province with consular authority.

PROCON/SULSHIP, s. the office of a proconsul.

PROCO/PUS, a Greek historian of the 6th century A. D. He held some offices under the famous general Belisarius, and was highly honoured by the emperor. He died in about 560, aged about 60 years. His works are, A History of his own Times, and Anecdotes, on the private history of the same period. They are of considerable value; and the second supplies, though it is a scandalous production, the deficiencies of the former.

To PROCRAS/TINATE, v. a. [procrastinor, from cras, Lat.] to defer or put off from day to day.—v. n. to be dilatory.

PROCRAS/TINATION, s. the act of delaying from time to time; dilatoriness.

PROCRAS/TINATOR, s. one that puts off from day to day.

PRO/CREANT, a. [procreo, from creo, Lat.] productive; propagating; pregnant.

TO PROCREATE, v. a. to generate or produce.
 PROCREATION, s. the act of generating or begetting.
 PROCREATIVE, a. generative or productive.
 PROCREATOR, s. a generator or begetter.
 PROCTOR, s. [contracted from procurator, Lat.] a manager of another's affairs; an attorney in a spiritual court; a magistrate of a university, whose business is to see that good order and attention to duty prevail among the students.

PROCTORSHIP, s. the office of a proctor.
 PROCUMBENT, a. [procumbo, Lat.] lying down; prone.
 PROCURABLE, a. acquirable; obtainable.
 PROCURACY, s. the management of any thing.
 PROCURATION, s. the act of getting or procuring; an act or instrument by which a person is empowered to treat, transact, receive, &c. in another person's name.

PROCURATOR, s. [Lat.] a manager, or one that transacts business for another.

PROCURATORIAL, a. made by a proctor.
 PROCURATORY, a. tending to procreation.
 TO PROCURE, v. a. [procuro, from pro and curo, Lat.] to transact for another; to obtain, or acquire; to contrive, or obtain by contrivance; to prevail on, or persuade; to contrive, or forward.

PROCURER, s. the act of procuring.
 PROCURER, s. one that gains; an obtainer. One who trades in seduction and lewdness.

PRODUCUS, one of the Grecian Sophists, (which see), who was the author of the famous heathen fable, entitled the Choice of Hercules, familiar to most English readers. Socrates, and some other eminent Greeks, were amongst his disciples. It is said that he was put to death on a similar charge to that for which his greatest pupil suffered. The latter part of the 5th century B. C. was the time of his greatest fame.

PRODICAL, a. [prodigus, from prodigo, Lat.] profuse, lavish, wasteful.

PRODICAL, s. a waster; a spendthrift.
 PRODICALITY, s. [prodigalité, Fr.] the act of spending to excess; extravagance.

PRODIGALLY, ad. profusely; wastefully; extravagantly.

PRODIGIOUS, a. [prodigium, Lat.] causing wonder and astonishment; enormous; monstrous; uncommonly great.

PRODIGIOUSLY, ad. in such a manner as to amaze.

PRODIGIOUSNESS, s. quality that excites admiration and wonder.

PRODIGY, s. [prodige, Fr.] any thing out of the common course of nature; any thing which astonishes by its greatness or novelty.

PRODITION, s. [prodo, Lat.] treason; treachery.

PRODITORIOUS, a. traitorous; treacherous; perfidious; apt to make discoveries.

TO PRODUCE, v. a. [pro and duco, Lat.] to offer to view or notice; to bring as an evidence; to hear or bring forth, applied to vegetables; to cause or generate. In Mathematics, to prolong or lengthen a line.

PRODUCE, s. that which any thing yields; amount, profit, or gain.

PRODUCER, s. one that generates or produces.

PRODUCIBLE, a. such as may be exhibited; such as may be generated or made.

PRODUCT, s. something yielded by lands, vegetables, or money; a work or composition; an effect.

PRODUCTILE, a. which may be produced.

PRODUCTION, s. [Fr.] the act of producing; the thing produced; the fruit or product; a composition.

PRODUCTIVE, a. having the power to effect or produce; fertile, generative, efficient.

PROEM, s. [pro and oime, Gr.] a preface, introduction, or prelude.

PROFANATION, s. [Fr. profano, Lat.] the act of applying any thing sacred to common or unholy use.

PROFANE, a. [Fr.] irreverent to sacred things; not sacred; secular; polluted.

TO PROFANE, v. a. to apply any thing sacred to common or unholy use.

PROFANELY, ad. with irreverence to sacred things.

PROFANENESS, s. want of reverence to things sacred.

PROFANER, s. a polluter; a violator.

PROFECTION, s. [proficio, Lat.] progression; advance.
 TO PROFESS, v. a. [professor, Fr. from pro and fateor, Lat.] to declare oneself in the strongest terms; to be of any opinion or religion; to lay claim to, or declare one's skill in, any art or science.—v. n. to declare openly.

PROFESSSEDLY, ad. according to open declaration made by himself.

PROFESSION, (profeshon) s. [Fr.] a calling or employment; a declaration; the act of declaring oneself of any party or opinion.

PROFESSIONAL, a. relating to a particular calling or profession.

PROFESSOR, s. [professeur, Fr.] one who openly declares himself of any opinion or party; one who publicly practises or teaches an art; one who professes to be religious.

PROFESSORSHIP, s. the station or office of a public teacher.

TO PROFER, v. a. [pro and fero, Lat.] to propose or offer; to attempt of one's own accord.

PROFER, s. an offer made, an essay or attempt.

PROFERER, s. he that offers.

PROFICIENCE, PROFICIENCY, (profishience, profishieny) s. [proficio, Lat.] profit; improvement or advancement in any thing.

PROFICIENT, (profishient) s. one who has made advancement in any study or business.

PROFICUOUS, a. advantageous; useful.

PROFILE, s. [Fr.] the side face; a half face; the outline of any figure.

PROFIT, s. [Fr.] gain or advantage; improvement.

TO PROFIT, v. a. [profiter, Fr.] to confer benefit or advantage; to improve.—v. n. to gain advantage; to make improvement; to be of use or advantage.

PROFITABLE, a. [Fr.] such as confers gain, improvement, or advantage. SYNON. Profitable is more applicable to gain; advantageous, to honour; beneficial, to health.

PROFITABLENESS, s. the quality of conferring gain, improvement, or advantage.

PROFITABLY, ad. gainfully; advantageously.

PROFITLESS, a. without gain or advantage.

PROFLIGATE, a. [profligo, Lat.] abandoned to vice; lost to virtue and decency.

PROFLIGATE, s. one that has lost all sense of virtue and decency.

PROFLIGATELY, ad. shamelessly.

PROFLIGATENESS, s. the quality of being profligate.

PROFLUENCE, s. progress; course.

PROFLUENT, a. [pro and fluo, Lat.] flowing forward.

PROFOUND, a. [profund, Fr. profundus, Lat.] deep; lowly; humble; intellectually deep, or not obvious to the mind; learned, or knowing beyond the common reach.

PROFOUND, s. a gulf; abyss; the main; the sea.

PROFOUNDLY, ad. with great reach of knowledge or contrivance; deeply.

PROFOUNDNESS, PROFUNDITY, s. depth, applied to place or knowledge.

PROFUSE, a. [pro and fundo, Lat.] lavish; too liberal, or abounding to excess.

PROFUSELY, ad. lavishly; with exuberance.

PROFUSENESS, s. lavishness; prodigality.

PROFUSION, (profushon) s. extravagance, or excess in expense; exuberant plenty.

PROG, s. victuals, or provisions of any kind. This word is not sanctioned by good usage.

PROGENITOR, s. [Lat.] a forefather; an ancestor in a direct line.

PROGENY, (progenie, old Fr. progenies, Lat.) a race; offspring; generation.

PROGNOSTIC, a. [pro and ginosko, Gr.] betokening disease or recovery before; foreshowing.

PROGNOSTIC, s. any thing which foreshows disease or recovery; any sign of future events.

TO PROGNOSTICATE, v. a. to foretell, foreshow, or presage.

PROGNOSTICATION, s. the act of foreknowing or foreshowing; prediction; foretoken.

PROGNOSTICATOR, s. a foreteller; foreknower.

PROGRAMME, s. [pro and grapho, Gr.] a letter sealed with the king's seal; a bill giving notice of something to be transacted.

ed in a school or university; the syllabus of a public address or performance.

PROGRESS, s. [pro and gradior, Lat.] course; passage; motion forward; intellectual improvement; a circuit, or journey.

To PROGRESS, v. n. to move forward; to pass. This word is not sanctioned by good usage.

PROGRESSION, (progrésion) s. [Fr.] a regular and gradual advance; motion forward; course; passage; intellectual improvement. In Arithmetic, &c., a series of numbers are said to be in arithmetical progression, when they increase or decrease by any common difference; as for example, 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, are in arithmetical progression, because they increase by 2, the common difference. Geometrical progression, is when they increase or decrease by any common ratio; for instance, 2, 4, 8, 16, 32, 64, are in geometrical progression, because they increase by the common ratio, or multiple, 2.

PROGRESSIVE, a. [progressif, Fr.] going forward; advancing, or increasing gradually.

PROGRESSIVELY, ad. by gradual steps or regular course.

PROGRESSIVENESS, s. the state of moving forward.

To PROHIBIT, v. a. [prohibeo, Lat. prohibere, Fr.] to interdict by authority; to debar or hinder.

PROHIBITER, s. a forbider; an interdicter.

PROHIBITION, (prohibition) s. [Fr.] the act of forbidding; hinderance; forbiddance.

PROHIBITORY, a. implying prohibition; forbidding.

To PROJECT, v. a. [pro and jacio, Lat.] to throw out, or cast forward; to exhibit or form a representation; to scheme, contrive, or form in the mind.—v. n. to jut out or shoot forward.

PROJECT, s. [projet, Fr.] a scheme; plan; contrivance. Synon. Project is a plan in order to execute a design; the design, is what we propose to execute.

PROJECTILE, s. such a body as, being put into motion by any particular force, continues to move with a certain velocity, either in a straight line, or a curve, according to circumstances, such as a stone thrown from a sling, an arrow from a bow, or a ball from a gun.

PROJECTILE, a. [Fr.] impelled forward.

PROJECTION, s. the act of shooting forwards; a plan or delineation; a scheme or plan of action. In Drawing, Mapping, &c., the general name of various modes of delineating the outlines of any required object, with mathematical accuracy. See GNOMONIC, ORTHOGRAPHIC, &c.

PROJECTOR, s. one that employs himself in forming schemes or designs; one that forms wild and impracticable schemes.

PROJECTURE, s. [Fr.] a jutting out.

To PROIN, v. a. [corrupted from prune,] to lop; to cut; to trim; to prune.

To PROLATE, v. a. [prolatum, Lat.] to speak, pronounce, or utter.

PROLATE, a. [prolatus, Lat.] oblate or flat.

PROLATION, (prolâtion) s. [prolatio, Lat.] pronunciation; utterance; delay; act of deferring.

PROLEGOMENA, s. [pro and lego, Gr.] a previous or introductory discourse.

PROLEPSIS, a. [pro and lambano, Gr.] a form of rhetoric, in which objections, &c. are anticipated.

PROLEPTICAL, a. previous; antecedent. In Medicine, when a paroxysm or fit returns sooner and sooner every time.

PROLEPTICALLY, ad. by way of anticipation or pre-emption.

PROLETAIRIAN, a. mean; vile; vulgar.

PROLIFIC, PROLIFICAL, a. [proles and facio, Lat.] fruitful; generative; productive.

PROLIFICATION, s. generation of children.

PROLIX, a. [prolixus, Fr. prolixus, Lat.] long; tedious; verbose; circumlocutory.

PROLIXITY, s. [prolixité, Fr.] the quality of being tiresome through length; tediousness.

PROLIXLY, ad. at great length; tediously.

PROLIXNESS, s. tediousness.

PROLOCUTOR, s. [Lat.] a foreman, or person chosen by a society to be their speaker.

PROLOCUTORSHIP, s. the office or dignity of a prolocutor. PROLOGUE, (prolôg) s. [Fr. from pro and logos, Gr.] an introductory discourse, peculiarly applied to a poem spoken before a play.

To PROLOGUE, (prolôg) v. a. to introduce by a formal discourse.

To PROLONG, v. a. [prolonger, Fr.] to lengthen out; to put off longer; to continue.

PROLONGATION, s. [Fr.] the act of lengthening; delay to a longer time.

PROLUSION, (prolûzion) s. [pro and ludo, Lat.] in Literature, is a term applied to certain pieces or compositions made previously to others, by way of prelude or exercise.

PROMETHEUS, in Heathen Mythology, the Titan who, according to some myths, created man; but, according to others, was only their divine friend, and stole fire from heaven for them; and who was punished by Zeus for it, by being fastened to a rock in the Caucasus, where he remained till delivered by Heracles. His story shadows forth very affectingly the knowledge or hope man had of a Divine deliverer from their rebellion against God.

PROMINENCY, s. [pro and maneo, Lat.] the quality of standing out beyond the other parts; protuberance; extant or jutting-out part.

PROMINENT, a. standing out beyond other parts; protuberant; extant.

PROMISCUOUS, a. [promiscuus, from miscuo, Lat.] mingled; confused; without distinction.

PROMISCUOUSLY, ad. indiscriminately; with a confused mixture.

PROMISE, s. [promitto, Lat.] assurance given of something to be done, or some benefit to be conferred. Figuratively, hope.

To PROMISE, v. a. to give a person notice or assurance of some benefit to be conferred.—v. n. to assure by a promise.

PROMISER, s. one who promises.

PROMISSORILY, ad. by way of promise.

PROMISSORY, a. containing profession of some benefit to be conferred, or of some debt to be paid. Promissory note, in Commerce, an engagement to pay a specified sum of money, on a given date, drawn on stamped paper.

PROMONT, PROMONTORY, s. [promontoire, Fr. promontorium, Lat.] in Geography, a head-land, or high land jutting into the sea, the extremity of which is called a cape.

To PROMOTE, v. a. [pro and moveo, Lat.] to forward, or advance; to prefer, or exalt.

PROMOTER, s. an advancer; a forwarder; an encourager.

PROMOTION, (promission) s. [Fr.] advancement or preferment; exaltation.

To PROMOVE, v. a. to promote; to forward; to advance. Seldom used.

PROMPT, a. [Fr. promptus, Lat.] quick; ready; acute; willing, without any new motive or incentive; ready, applied to payment.

To PROMPT, v. a. [prontare, Ital.] to help a person when at a loss in repeating by art; to incite; to remind.

PROMPTER, s. one who assists a public speaker when at a loss, or who persuades or advises a person to do a thing; an admonisher.

PROMPTITUDE, s. [Fr.] quickness; readiness; alacrity.

PROMPTLY, ad. readily; quickly.

PROMPTNESS, s. readiness; alacrity.

PROMPTUARY, s. [promptuaire, Fr. promptuarium, Lat.] a storehouse, repository, or magazine.

To PROMULGATE, (promulgue, v. a. [promulgo, Lat.] to publish; to make known by public declaration.

PROMULGATION, s. publication; open exhibition.

PROMULGATOR, s. a publisher; an open teacher.

PROMULGER, s. one that publishes, or teaches openly.

PROMOTOR, s. in Anatomy, a muscle of the radius, of which there are two, that help to turn the palm downward.

PRONE, a. [pronus, Lat.] bending or looking downwards; lying with the face downwards; sloping, applied to place. Figuratively, inclined, propense, or disposed to: generally in an ill sense.

PRONENESS, s. the state of bending, stooping, or lying with the face downwards; descent; inclination.

PRONG, s. [pronghen, Belg.] the tooth of a fork; a pitchfork; an instrument in husbandry.

PROMOUN, s. [promones, Lat.] in Grammar, a word used instead of nouns or names; as, I, thou, he; we, ye, they, &c. See RELATIVE, PERSONAL, &c.

To PRONOUNCE, v. a. [pro and nuncio, Lat.] to speak or utter; to utter or deliver solemnly and rhetorically; to form or articulate.—v. n. to speak with confidence or authority; to rebel.

PRONOUNCER, s. one who pronounces.

PRONUNCIATION, (pronunsi'eshən) s. [Fr.] the act or manner of uttering.

PROOF, s. in Arithmetic, is a means whereby the correctness of a calculation is ascertained. In Law, it denotes the mediums and arguments used to evince the truth of any thing; and is two-fold, viz. visd voce, by living witnesses; and a dead proof, such as that of deeds, records, &c. It also signifies trial or experiment. In Printing, the first printed copy of a sheet, &c., used for the purpose of detecting and correcting errors: also the first printed copies of an engraving, which are esteemed far more highly than the finished copies. Proof spirit, which is of the standard strength. Synon. Experiment relates, properly, to the truth of things; trial concerns, particularly, the use of things; proof has a greater relation to the quality of things.

PROOF, a. [an elliptical expression for of proof:] impenetrable; able to resist. Used with to or against.

To PROP, v. [propen, Belg.] to support by something placed under or against; to hinder from falling; to sustain or support.

PROP, s. [proppe, Belg.] any thing used to keep a thing from falling; a support; a stay.

PROPAGABLE, a. such as may be spread; such as may be continued by succession.

To PROPAGATE, v. a. [propago, Lat.] to continue or spread by generation or successive production; to extend or widen; to promote; to generate.—v. n. to have offspring.

PROPAGATION, (propagashən) s. [Fr.] continuance or diffusion by generation or successive production.

PROPAGATOR, s. a spreader; a promoter.

To PROPEL, v. a. [pro and pello, Lat.] to push or drive forward.

To PROPEND, v. n. [pro and pendo, Lat.] to incline to any part; to be disposed in favour of any thing.

PROPENSITY, s. inclination or tendency of desire to any thing; preconsideration; attentive deliberation.

PROPENSE, a. inclined or disposed, applied to either good or bad.

PROPENSION, (propenshən) PROPENSITY, s. [Fr.] disposition to any thing either good or bad; tendency.

PROPER, a. [proprie, Fr. proprie, Lat.] peculiar; belonging to one, so as to take it from others; natural; fit; adapted to; qualified; exact; just; elegant; pretty; tall or lusty; one's own, joined with the possessive pronoun, my, your, his, their, &c. In Grammar, the name given to substantives which are individual or specific, or names not applying to whole classes, as Thomas, Shakespeare, London, &c.

PROPERLY, ad. in a fit or suitable manner; in a strict sense.

PROPERNESS, s. the quality of being proper, tall, and well made.

PROPERTIUS, SEXTUS AURELIUS, a Roman poet who flourished at the Christian era. He was one of the poets patronized by Mecenas and Augustus, and was intimate with Ovid, Virgil, &c. He died in about 12, a. d., aged about 60 years. His poems are beautiful, but are not free from stains which make them unfit to be used in schools.

PROPERTY, s. in Law, it is used to denote that right by which a person possesses lands or tenements, goods or chattels, as his own. In Metaphysics, Logic, &c., that which necessarily belongs to every individual of a class. Real property is that which consists of lands, houses, and other hereditary things; personal property, of all else that belongs to any person. There are some very strange exceptions to these definitions, which can only be explained in law-terms.

PROPHASIS, (profasis) s. [pro and phemi, Gr.] an excuse; a pretence. In Medicine, a foreknowledge of diseases.

PROPHETCY, (profesy) s. [pro and phemi, Gr. prophēteia, Fr.] a declaration of something future; prediction.

PROPHESIER, s. one who prophesies.

To PROPHESY, (profesy) v. a. to foretell something future; to predict; to foretell; to prognosticate.—v. n. to utter predictions; to preach.

PROPHET, (profēt) s. [prophēte, Fr.] one who tells something future; a foreteller; a predictor.

PROPHETESS, (profetesess) s. [prophētesse, Fr.] a woman who foretells future events.

PROPHETIC, PROPHETICAL, (profetik, profetikal) a. [prophétique, Fr.] foreseeing or foretelling future events. It has of before the thing foretold.

PROPHETICALLY, (profetikally) ad. with knowledge of futurity; in manner of a prophecy.

To PROPHETIZE, (profetize) v. n. [prophétiser, Fr.] to give predictions.

PROPHYLACTIC, (profylaktik) a. [pro and phulasso, Gr.] preventive; preservative.

PROPINQUITY, s. [propinquitās, Lat.] nearness of situation, relation, time, or blood.

PROPTIABLE, (propishable) a. such as may be appeased or rendered favourable.

To PROPTIATE, (propishiate) v. a. [propitio, Lat.] to appease a person when angry or offended; to render favourable; to conciliate.

PROPTIATION, (propishishshən) s. [Fr.] the act of appeasing anger or resentment; the atonement, offering, or means, by which a person is rendered favourable.

PROPTIATORY, (propishiatory) a. having the power to appease or reconcile; expiatory.

PROPTIOUS, (propishious) a. [propitius, Lat.] favourable; kind; reconciling.

PROPTIOUSLY, ad. favourably; kindly.

PROPTIOUSNESS, (propishiousness) s. the quality of being favourable, kind, or reconciling.

PROPLASM, s. [pro and plasso, Gr.] mould; matrix.

PROPLASTIC, s. the art of making moulds for casting.

PROPOLIS, s. in Natural History, a thick, yellow, odorous substance, smelling like storax, nearly akin to wax, but more tenacious; wherewith the bees stop up the holes and crannies of their hives to keep out the cold air, &c.

PROPONENT, s. [propono, Lat.] one that makes a proposal; one who proposes a subject for discussion.

PROPORTION, (proporshən) s. [proportio, Lat.] the comparison between more than two quantities in respect of size; equal degree; degrees in harmony; size; form. In Arithmetic, direct proportion is when the same relation subsists between the first term and the second as between the third and fourth; thus, 4, 8, 5, 10, are in direct proportion. Inverse or reciprocal proportion, is when one quantity increases in the same proportion as another diminishes; thus, 4, 8, 5, 12, 4, are in inverse proportion. Arithmetical proportion, is the relation which two quantities, of the same kind, bear to each other with respect to their difference; thus, 2, 10, 5, 13, are arithmetically proportional. Geometrical proportion, is that relation of two quantities of the same kind, which arises from considering what part the one is of the other, or how often it is contained in it; thus, 5, 45, 9, 51, are geometrically proportional. Law of definite proportions, in Chemistry, is the fact that the different substances, and their compounds, will mingle and combine with other substances and compounds only in certain ratios. It is this discovery which has rendered mathematics available for the prosecution of chemical research.

To PROPORTION, (the ti is pron. like sh in this word and its following derivatives; as proporshən, &c.) v. a. [proportionner, Fr.] to adjust or equal in comparative degrees; to form with symmetry.

PROPORTIONABLE, a. adjusted or suited by comparative relation; such as is fit.

PROPORTIONABLY, ad. according to proportion; according to comparative relation.

PROPORTIONAL, a. [proportionel, Fr.] having a settled comparative relation; having a certain degree of equality; bearing some relation to that with which it is compared.

PROPORTIONALITY, s. the quality of being proportional.

PROPORTIONALLY, ad. in a stated degree.

PROPORTIONATE, a. suited, adjusted, or bearing some respect to another thing in comparison.

To PROPORTIONATE, v. a. to adjust according to settled rates to something else.

PROPORTIONATENESS, s. the state of being by comparison adjusted.

PROPOSAL, (propozal) s. a scheme or design offered to consideration or acceptance; offer to the mind.

To PROPOSE, (propoze) v. a. [pro and pono, Lat.] to offer for consideration.—v. n. to lay schemes or intend.

PROPOSER, s. one that offers any thing to consideration.
PROPOSITION, s. a sentence in which any thing is affirmed or denied, and offered for assent or denial; an offer of terms; proposal.

PROPOSITIONAL, a. considered as a proposition.
To PROPOUND, v. a. [pro and pono, Lat.] to offer for consideration; to propose.

PROPOUNDER, s. one that propounds; a proposer.
PROPRIETARY, s. [propriétaire, Fr.] a possessor in his own right.

PROPRIETARY, a. belonging to a certain owner.
PROPRIETOR, s. [proprius, Lat.] a person that has an exclusive right; a possessor or owner.

PROPRIETRESS, s. a female possessor in her own right; a mistress.

PROPRIETY, s. [propriété, Fr.] an exclusive right; accuracy, justness, or fitness; morality of conduct.

PROPT, the correct spelling of propped, the participle passive of To Prop.

To PROPUGN, (propān) v. a. [pro and pugno, Lat.] to defend, justify, or vindicate.

PROPUGNATION, s. defence.
PROPUGNER, s. one who defends, justifies, or vindicates.

PROPULSION, (propulshon) s. [pro and pello, Lat.] the act of driving forward.

PRORE, s. [prora, Lat.] the prow of a ship; used in poetry.
PROROGATION, s. [Fr. prorogo, Lat.] continuation; prolongation; the deferring to a longer and stated time; the interruption of the session of parliament by royal authority.

To PROROGUE, (prorogy) v. a. to protract or prolong; to put off to another time.

PRORUPTION, s. [pro and rumpo, Lat.] the act of bursting out.

PROSAIC, a. [prosaïque, Fr. prosa, Lat.] belonging to prose; resembling prose; dull; wanting animation.

To PROSCRIBE, v. a. [proscribo, Lat.] to doom to destruction; to interdict.

PROSCRIBER, s. one that dooms to destruction.
PROSCRIPTION, s. [proscribo, Lat.] the act of writing down a person's name in a list, and posting it in some public place, with a reward for any one that shall bring his head; the act of dooming the life of a person to death, and his goods to confiscation.

PROSE, (prose) s. [Fr. prosa, Lat.] generally, all kinds of literary composition not included in the description of poetry; but most frequently, a composition not written in verse, or metrical-ly; although a certain rhythm is allowable.

To PROSE, v. n. to describe any thing orally, or in writing, in a dull and inanimate way.

To PROSECUTE, v. a. [pro and sequor, Lat.] to continue endeavours; to carry on; to proceed or continue in any consideration or disquisition. In Law, to sue criminally; to pursue legally.

PROSECUTION, s. an endeavour to carry on; a continued attempt, or a continuation of an attempt. In Law, a suit against a person.

PROSECUTOR, s. one that continues his endeavours, or carries on any thing; one who sues another at law for some crime or trespass.

PROSELYTE, s. [proselutos, Gr.] one that is persuaded to change his religious or political sentiments; a convert.

PROSEMINATION, s. [prosemino, from semen, Lat.] propagation by seed.

PROSERPINE, in Heathen Mythology, the daughter of Ceres and Jupiter, who was carried off by Pluto, and married by him. Her name amongst the Greeks was Persephone.

PROSODIAN, s. one skilled in metre or prosody.

PROSODY, s. [pros and ode, Gr.] in old Grammars, that part which teaches the sound and quantity of syllables, and the measures of verse.

PROSONOMASIA, s. [pros and onoma, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure wherein a person speaks to things inanimate, as if they were living, and makes them return suitable replies. Allusion to the likeness of a sound in several names and words.

PROSOPOPEIA, s. [prosopeon and poieo, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure in which things are represented as if they were persons; personification.

PROSPECT, s. [prospicio, Lat.] a view of something distant; a place which affords an extended view; an object of view; view of something future, opposed to retrospect.

PROSPECTIVE, a. viewing at a distance; acting with foresight.

PROSPERCTUS, s. [Lat.] a written scheme or plan, after which any undertaking is proposed to be effected or done.

To PROSPEX, v. a. [Lat.] to make happy.—v. n. to be successful; to thrive.

PROSPERITY, s. [prosperité, Fr. prosper, Lat.] state wherein things succeed according to our wishes, and are productive of affluence and wealth. SYNOM. What we call good fortune, is the effect of chance; it comes unexpected. Prosperity is the success of conduct, and comes by degrees.

PROSPEROUS, a. successful; fortunate.
PROSPEROUSLY, ad. successfully; fortunately.

PROSPEROUSNESS, s. prosperity.
PROSPICIENCE, (prospiciens) s. [prospicio, Lat.] the act of looking forward.

PROSTERNATION, s. [prosterno, Lat.] dejection; depression; state of being cast down.

PROSTHEIS, s. [pros and tithemi, Gr.] in Surgery, that which fills up what is wanting; as when fistulous ulcers are filled up with flesh.

To PROSTITUTE, v. a. [pro and statuo, Lat. prostituer, Fr.] to sell to wickedness; to expose for vile purposes for hire.

PROSTITUTE, s. one that will do evil for money; a public strumpet.

PROSTITUTION, s. the act of selling oneself for evil purposes; the life of a public strumpet.

PROSTRATE, a. [prosterno, Lat.] lying at length; lying at mercy; lying on the ground in adoration.

To PROSTRATE, v. a. [prostratus, Lat.] to lay flat or throw down; to fall down in adoration.

PROSTRATION, s. the act of falling down in adoration; dejection; depression.

PROSTYLE, s. [pro and stulos, Gr.] a building having pillars only in the front.

PROSYLLOGISM, s. [pro and sullogismos, Gr.] in Logic, the connexion of two or more syllogisms, in such a manner, that the conclusion of the first is the major or minor of the following.

PROTAGORAS, an eminent Sophist of ancient Greece, who was taught by Democritus, whom he had pleased by his ingenuity as he was working as a painter. He taught oratory throughout Greece, visiting Athens occasionally. He also modified his master's views in philosophy. At Athens he was subjected to some sort of censure, for some assertions, relating to the gods, made in his writings. He was drowned, or died during a voyage he was making to Sicily. He flourished about 425 B. C.

PROTASIS, s. [proteino, Gr.] a maxim or proposition. In the ancient drama, the first part of a comedy or tragedy, which explains the argument of the piece.

To PROTECT, v. a. [pro and tego, Lat.] to defend; to cover from any evil; to shield.

PROTECTION, s. a defence, or cover from evil; a kind of passport, whereby a person is exempted from being legally molested.

PROTECTOR, s. [protector, Fr.] a defender, or one who guards from danger. Formerly, a person intrusted with the care of the kingdom during the king's minority.

PROTECTRESS, s. [protectrice, Fr.] a female that protects.

To PROTEIND, v. a. [pro and tendo, Lat.] to hold out or stretch forth.

PROTERVITY, s. [protervus, Lat.] petulance; peevishness; forwardness; coquetry; impudence; rudeness.

To PROTEST, v. n. [pro and testor, Lat.] to give a solemn declaration of one's opinion, or resolution; to note the non-payment of a bill of exchange, and claim payment of any of the endorsers.—v. a. to prove, show, or give evidence; to call as a witness.

PROTEST, s. a solemn declaration of one's opinion against something, generally applied to that made by peers in parliament when they disagree with a majority; an instrument or writing, whereby a person, on non-payment of a bill of exchange by one on whom it is drawn, is authorized to claim it from either of the endorsers or the drawer.

PROTESTANT, a. belonging to Protestantism.

PROTESTANT, s. [Fr.] in Ecclesiastical matters, one who sides with those that at first protested against the errors of the Church of Rome; one who dissents from Romanism. The name was first given in Germany to those who adhered to the doctrine of Luther, because in 1529 they protested against a decree of the Emperor Charles.

PROTESTANTISM, s. in Ecclesiastical affairs, the dogmas held in general by those who have dissented from the Church of Rome; the system opposed to Romanism.

PROTESTATION, s. [Fr.] a solemn declaration against any fact, resolution, or opinion.

PROTESTER, s. one who protests.

PROTEUS, in Ancient Mythology, one of the sea-gods, who had the power of changing his appearance, so as to elude those who sought to detain him to gain from him knowledge of the future.

PROTHONOTARSHIP, s. the office or dignity of the principal register.

PROTHONOTARY, s. [protonotario, Fr.] the head register or recorder of civil actions in the courts of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas.

PROTOCOL, s. [protokol, Belg. protocole, Fr.] the original copy of any writing.

PROTOGENES, an ancient Greek painter, who received some notice from Alexander the Great, and from Demetrius Poliorcetes. It was he who painted the foam on a horse's mouth by dashing the sponge he had wiped his brushes on at the picture, in despair. He flourished in 325 B. C.

PROTOMARTYR, s. [protos and martur, Gr.] the first martyr.

PROTOPLAST, s. [protos and plasso, Gr.] something formed first to serve as a model; an original.

PROTOTYPE, s. [protos and typos, Gr.] an original by which any thing is formed; archetype.

PROTRACT, v. a. [pro and traho, Lat.] to draw out, lengthen, or delay.

PROTRACTER, s. one who draws out any thing to a tedious length. A mathematical instrument in the shape of a semicircle, used in measuring angles. An instrument in surgery for extracting foreign substances out of wounds.

PROTRACTIION, s. the act of drawing into length, or delaying. In Surveying, laying down the dimensions of ground surveyed.

PROTRACTIVE, a. dilatory; spinning to length.

PROTREPICAL, a. [protrepo, Gr.] hortatory; suasive.

PROTRUDE, v. a. [pro and trudo, Lat.] to thrust or push forwards;—v. n. to thrust itself forwards.

PROTRUSION, (protrahion) s. the act of thrusting forward; a thrust, push.

PROTUBERANCE, s. [protubero, Lat.] something swelling above the other parts; prominence; tumor.

PROTUBERANT, a. swelling beyond the other parts; prominent.

PROTUBERATE, v. a. to swell out beyond the other parts.

PROUD, a. [prude, or prut, Sax.] having too high an opinion of one's own qualities, and too mean a one of those which belong to another; lofty, splendid, magnificent; disdainful baseless; daring, presumptuous; lofty of mien, or grand of person; ostentatious; eager for the male, applied to brutes.—[pryde, Sax.] fungous, applied to flesh.

PROUDLY, ad. arrogantly; ostentatiously.

TO PROVE, (proove) v. a. [probo, Lat.] to confirm or show by arguments or testimony; to try, bring to the test, or experience.

—v. n. to be found by experiment to succeed; to make trial.

PROVEDITOR, (provveditore, s. [provveditore, Ital.] one who undertakes to procure supplies for an army. A name formerly given to an officer, in Italy, who superintended matters relating to policy.

PROVENCAL, a. the general name of the troubadours, or trouvères, lyric poets, who sang almost wholly of love, and sometimes most licentiously, who flourished during the hey-day of chivalry, in the 10th and following centuries. Arnault de Maravilla was one of the best and most famed Provencal bards.

PROVENDER, s. [provende, Fr. provande, Belg.] dry food for cattle; hay and corn.

PROVERB, s. [proverbium, Lat.] a concise, witty speech, or sentence, applied on particular occasions as a rule of life; an adage; a saw; a by-word.

TO PROVERB, v. a. to mention as a commonly received saying or maxim.

PROVERBIAL, a. [Fr.] used as a proverb; suitable to a proverb; comprised in a proverb.

PROVERBIALY, ad. by way of proverb.

PROVERBS, THE BOOK OF, one of the books of the Old Testament, written almost wholly in poetry, the whole of the part especially attributed to Solomon being in couplets. Other parts are ascribed to other writers, and some chapters at the beginning contain a most magnificent description and eulogy of Divine wisdom. The greater part of the book consists of the record of Solomon's worldly and prudential wisdom, and are manifestly the product of no common experience. But there are, mingled with such proverbs, words relating to higher things, and breathing a far nobler spirit. It is the book for young men.

TO PROVIDE, v. a. [pro and video, Lat.] to procure beforehand; to get ready; to prepare; to stipulate or make conditions. To furnish or supply, with of or with before the thing. Used with against, to take measures for counteracting or escaping any ill. Used with for, to take care of beforehand. Provided that, implies on these terms or conditions.

PROVIDENCE, s. [Fr.] foresight displayed in taking measures beforehand; frugality, founded on a regard to futurity. The ceaseless exercise of God's wisdom, power, and love, by which all things are preserved.

PROVIDENCE, the semi-capital of Rhode Island, United States. It stands at the head of Narragansett bay, at the mouth of Providence river, over which are two bridges. The older parts of the city are not very regularly built; the wharfs are very spacious, and there are some very fine public buildings. It is a place equally famous for commerce and manufactures, and it communicates with the interior both by railroads and canals. Brown University is a flourishing institution, and has a good library. It is 306 miles from Washington. Pop. 23,171. There are 9 other places which have the same name in the United States.

PROVIDENT, a. cautious, forecasting, prudent, or taking measures beforehand.

PROVIDENTIAL, (provvidenzial) a. effected by, and to be referred to, the interposition of God.

PROVIDENTIALLY, ad. by the care of Providence.

PROVIDENTLY, ad. with foresight, prudence, or frugality, founded on a regard to futurity.

PROVIDER, s. he who provides or procures.

PROVINCE, s. [Fr. provincia, Lat.] an office or business peculiar to a person; a region; a tract. In Geography, a division of a kingdom or state, comprising several cities and towns, &c., all under the same government, and usually distinguished by the extent either of the civil or ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

PROVINCIAL, (provinzial) a. [Fr.] belonging to a province; foreign; rude; unpolished; belonging only to an archbishop's jurisdiction.

PROVINCIAL, (provinzial) s. a spiritual governor.

PROVINCIALISM, s. a peculiar word, or a word used with a peculiar meaning, not sanctioned by good usage in any country; but common in some district of it, and not known in other districts.

TO PROVINCE, v. n. [provincer, Fr.] to lay a stock or branch of a vine in the ground, to take root for more increase.

PROVISION, (provision) s. [pro and video, Lat.] the act of procuring beforehand; measures taken beforehand; stock collected; victuals, food, or provender; a term or condition.

PROVISIONAL, (provisional) a. [provisionel, Fr.] provided for temporary need.

PROVISO, (provizo) s. [Lat.] a provisional caution, condition, stipulation.

PROVOCATION, s. [provoco, Lat.] an act by which anger is caused. In Law, an appeal to a judge.

PROVOCATIVE, s. any thing which excites to action.

PROVOCATIVENESS, s. the quality of being provocative.

TO PROVOKE, v. a. to rouse, awake; to excite by offence; to make angry, or offend; to cause, promote, or excite; to challenge; to move or induce.

PROVOKER, s. one that raises anger; causer; promoter.

PROVOKINGLY, ad. in such a manner as to raise anger.

PROVOST, s. [prévôt, Fr.] the chief of any body or society; the executioner in an army.

PROVOSTSHIP, s. the office of a provost.

PROW, (pró) s. [proue, Fr. proa, Span. prora, Lat.] the head or fore part of a ship.

PROWESS, s. [prouesse, Fr.] bravery; military courage.

To PROWL, v. a. to rove over.—v. n. to wander in search of prey; to plunder.

PROWLER, s. one that roves about for prey.

PROXIMATE, a. [proximus, Lat.] next in the series or order of our ideas of reasoning; near and immediate.

PROXIME, a. next; immediate.

PROXIMITY, s. the state of being near; nearness.

PROXY, s. [contracted from procuracy,] the agency of another; the substitution of another instead of oneself; a person substituted or deputed to act instead of another; a vote given by the agency of another in one's own absence.

PRUDE, a. [Fr.] a woman affectively nice and modest.

PRUDENCE, s. [Fr. prudentia, Lat.] the act of saying words and actions according to the circumstances of things, or rules of expediency.

PRUDENT, a. [Fr. prudens, Lat.] ordering actions or words with a regard to their consequences alone.

PRUDENTIAL, (prudenshiad) a. eligible on principles of prudence.

PRUDENTIALITY, (prudenshiility) s. eligibility on principles of prudence.

PRUDENTIALLY, ad. according to the rules of prudence.

PRUDENTIALS, (prudenshiads) s. maxims of prudence or practical wisdom.

PRUDENTIUS, AURELIUS, a Roman Christian poet, a native of Spain, and by profession a jurist. His works are not without merit, though the old spirit had fled. He flourished in the later part of the 4th and the beginning of the 5th centuries.

PRUDENTLY, ad. in a discreet or judicious manner.

PRUDERY, s. affectation of niceness or modesty.

PRUDISH, a. affectively grave or nice.

To PRUNE, v. a. to lop or free trees from their superfluous branches; to clear from any excessiveness.

PRUNE, s. [Fr. prunum, Lat.] in Confectionery, a dried plum.

PRUNELLO, s. a kind of stuff woven with a mixture of silk and worsted, of which clergymen's gowns are made.—[prunelle, Fr.] in Horticulture, a kind of plum.

PRUNER, s. one that crops trees.

PRUNIFEROUS, a. [prunum and fero, Lat.] producing plums.

PRUNINGHOOK, PRUNINGKNIFE, s. a hook or knife used in cutting off the superfluous branches of trees.

PRURIENCE, PRURIENCY, s. [prurio, Lat.] an itching, immoderate desire or appetite to any thing.

PRURIENT, a. itching; pricking.

PRURIGINOUS, a. tending to prurience.

PRUSSIA, a great kingdom of Europe, lying on the Baltic, and bounded by Russia, Austria, and various German states, which also separate from it a large territory belonging to it, called Rhenish Prussia, and bounded by France, Belgium, and Holland. The area of both portions exceeds 100,000 square miles. The Bohemian and other S. frontiers of the E. part are mountainous, some points rising above 5000 feet in height. The Rhenish provinces are also mountainous, but the highest peaks are not above half the height of those of the E. division. The Vistula, the Oder, the Elbe, and the Rhine, are its chief rivers. Its mineral districts yield iron, lead, copper, silver, &c., coals, building-stone, marble, &c. Its plains are rich, and produce great abundance of corn, wine, fruits, timber, cattle, sheep, &c. &c. Game and wild beasts are not scarce; and there are some good fisheries. Its manufactures are chiefly for home consumption. Its trade is extensive, and it exports its abundant agricultural produce, receiving in return the superior manufactures of other lands. Its army is a very remarkable institution. Great outward results are boasted as the fruits of its compulsory state-education. It was till very recently an absolute monarchy. Berlin is its capital. Pop. about 14,000,000. One of the provinces of the kingdom is named Prussia, and lies next to Russia, on the Baltic. Its surface is gently undulating, and it is watered by the Vistula, and by many small lakes. It is almost wholly agricultural, but has in it the three great trading towns of Dantzic, Königsberg, and Elbing. Pop. about 1,250,000.

PRUSSIAN BLUE, s. in Painting, a very beautiful blue pigment, named in Commerce and Chemistry, the ferridcyanide of iron.

PRUSSIATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with Prussic acid.

PRUSSIC, a. properly called hydrocyanic acid; in Chemistry, a deadly poison found in small quantities in the leaves and blossoms of stone-fruits; to the kernels of which, as to almonds, &c., it imparts their peculiar, but agreeable flavour. Its antidotes are ammonia and chlorine, but the last must be used cautiously.

To PRY, v. a. to peep narrowly; to search or look curiously, officiously, or impertinently; used with into.

PRYNNE, WILLIAM, a lawyer, antiquary, and vehement politician of the most troubled time of the 17th century. He was educated at Oxford and Lincoln's Inn, where he made himself conspicuous by his stern and noisy Puritanism, proclaiming by his books the unloveliness of love-locks, and other cavalier abominations, and scourging all player-folk in his Histrio-Mas-tix. This last brought him under the notice of the Star-chamber, and he was brutally branded, &c. &c., as well as fined and imprisoned. During his incarceration, he was a second time subjected to the cruelties of that infamous court. The Long Parliament freed him, and he was eventually returned as a member of that august body. But after a while his zeal cooled, or rather heated on the other side, and he had to receive several severe admonitions, and even an imprisonment, with a view to quiet him. He was not subjected to any inconvenience at the Restoration; and after another quarrel, he died in 1669, aged 69 years. His writings are very numerous, and quite unbearable now.

PSALM, (sām) s. [psalms, from psallo, Gr.] a hymn or song on some holy subject.

PSALMANAZAR, GEORGE, a singular character of the former part of last century. A native of France, he professed himself a Formosan, and published a history of that island, for which he invented a language. But after some years, he was remarkable for sincere and unaffected piety, and subsisted by literary labours. He died in 1753, aged 74 years.

PSALMIST, (sāmist) s. [psalmiste, Fr.] a writer or composer of holy songs.

PSALMODY, (sāmody) s. [psalms and ode, Gr.] the act or practice of singing psalms.

PSALMOGRAPHY, (sāmography) s. [psalms and grapho, Gr.] the act of writing psalms.

PSALMS, (sāms) s. the name of one of the books of the Old Testament, which consists of a collection of sacred poems, written by various persons, Moses, David, &c. &c. Some of them were evidently intended to be used in public worship, and many are plainly the expression of individual feelings alone. They are the most excellent and valuable part of the Old Testament for the cultivation of earnest devotion, since amongst them are compositions which express almost every shade of religious feeling, from the profoundest gloom and despondency to the highest and most exulting faith. Many of them are strongly tinged with the peculiarities of Judaism; express doubts respecting man's immortality; breathe the most ferocious resentment, &c.; but there are many which evince the knowledge of the purest and most spiritual religion, and anticipate the expressions of the followers of Jesus. There are several which are properly called Messianic psalms, and utter in clear prophecy the hopes which were entertained amongst the Jews of the advent of the Christ of God, such as the 2nd, the 72nd, the 110th, &c. Several are written acrostically, each verse beginning with a letter of the Hebrew alphabet, in order; and of these the most remarkable is the 119th, which contains some of the most glowing declarations of love and gratitude for the instructions afforded by God himself, by means of his statutes and commands. The titles of the various psalms, ascribing them to certain writers, are by no means to be relied upon, it being known that they were prefixed long after the compilation was first made. The usual way of regarding these beautiful hymns, as all peculiarly inspired and specially relating to the Saviour and to the gospel, is not only incorrect, but also calculated to deprive readers of the best use of them, by depriving them of their humanity, and introducing a vague, irrelevant, and inconsistent mode of interpreting them. The more heartily they are read, the more simply they are interpreted, by one who knows, or is seeking to know, spiritual truth, the greater and more genuine will be the advantage and delight of the study. Taken as a whole, not only for their spirituality and devotion, but for their poetry also, they will bear away the palm from any similar collection, holding a like place in the affections and the worship of any people. Those which approach most nearly to them, have derived from them the best part of their light and beauty. They have always been largely used in Christian worship, and very many metrical translations of them exist in our country, the most faithful of which in spirit are unhappily most lacking in poetry.

PSALTER, (sailter) s. [psaltere, Sax. psalterion, Gr.] a psalm-book.

PSALTERY, (sailtery) s. a kind of harp or dulcimer played on with sticks.

PSEUDO, a. [pseudos, Gr.] a prefix to words, which signifies false, as pseudo-prophet, pseudo-patriot, a false prophet, &c.

PSEUDOGRAPHY, (seudgraphy) s. [pseudos and grapho, Gr.] false writing.

PSEUDOLOGY, s. [pseudos and lego, Gr.] false speaking.

PSHAW, interj. used as an expression of contempt and disregard.

PSKOF, called by foreigners PLESKOF, a government and a large town of Russia. The government is bounded by those of St. Petersburg, Novgorod, Tver, Smolensk, Vitepsk, and Livonia. It is a flat district, watered by many small rivers, most of which feed the Dwina. Agriculture is its great source of wealth; and its produce in corn, &c. is abundant. Timber also is plentiful and valuable here. The town, which is the capital, is seated on the river Velika or Velakia, and has some fine buildings, and a few valuable manufactures. It is 150 miles from Petersburg. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 57. 58. N. Long. 27. 52. E. Pop. of government, about 1,000,000.

PSYCHE, (Sylkee) in Ancient Mythology, the wife of Eros, or Cupid, who after painful wanderings, because of her disobedience to his injunctions, was received by Zeus amongst the gods. Her story is told very beautifully by Apuleius, and is looked upon as a philosopheme, representing the purification of the human spirit.

PSYLLI, the name given to those persons of Egypt, who from earliest times have practised the art of charming serpents, and who pretended to be able to sustain the bite of those whose poisons was deadly, without injury.

PTARMIGAN, in Ornithology, a bird allied to the grouse and partridge, found in the mountainous parts of Scotland. In winter, the whole plumage, except a few feathers on the breast, are white.

PTERODACTYLUS, s. [pteron and dactylus, Gr.] in Paleontology, a kind of reptile, which had one of the fingers of its fore extremities prodigiously elongated, and furnished (as the whole of the characteristic peculiarities of the animal show) with wings; so that it could make its way on the ground, in the water, and through the air. Its remains are found in the lias beds, and others of the oolitic series; and there are several well-marked species.

PTISAN, (Itaan) s. [ptisane, Fr. ptisane, Gr.] a medical drink made of barley boiled with liquorice, raisins, &c.

PTOLEMAIC, a. in Astronomy, the name given to that system or theory of the motions of the heavenly bodies, which originated with Hipparchus, and was perfected by Claudius Ptolemaeus. In it the earth is represented as the central body, at rest; and all the others, including the stars themselves, are borne round it by orbs, or deferents, or the primum mobile. In order to account for some palpable discrepancies between the theory of circular orbits and astronomical facts, it was supposed that the cycle, or deferent, did not immediately carry the planet, but that it carried a smaller circle, called an epicycle, which bore the planet, and that the combined motions of these produced the phenomena observed. This Ptolemaic system is one of the most astonishing products of that misapprehension of the Baconian philosophy, which reasons from phenomena, without the assumption of any initiative, or appropriate idea. The contrast of it, and the principle of its construction, with the solar system which originated with Copernicus, and was proved by Newton, will, better than any other instance, show what is a genuine inductive process, such as Bacon conceived it.

PTOLEMY, or PTOLEMAEUS, the name of a celebrated dynasty of Græco-Egyptian kings, under whom that country became famous as the centre of trade and science, beyond all the renown of its ancient glory; and under the latter reigns, also, subject to the power of Rome, then at the height of its empire. The Ptolemies ruled over Egypt and its dependencies from 323 to 30 B. C. Ptolemy I., surnamed Soter, was one of the most eminent of the generals of Alexander the Great, and received Egypt as his share of the Macedonian conquests. Although he was involved in the contests which prevailed so long amongst the other rulers of the Greek empire, he confined himself almost exclusively to the preservation of his own throne; yet he gained the S. part of Syria, Cyprus, Libya, and Cyrene, in addition to his first kingdom. He repelled the attacks of Perdiccas and Antigonus, and laid the foundation of this second period of Egypt's greatness. Alexandria was his capital; and he adorned it with its most famous buildings, and laid the foundation of its most splendid institutions. Learned men gathered together in his Museum; and all religions were allowed free exercise and expression. He was himself an author; and he greatly encouraged trade and commerce. He died in 284 B. C., having reigned 39 years. Ptolemy II., surnamed Philadelphus, followed in the steps of his father; having been engaged in only two wars; and having devoted himself to the encouragement of learning and science, and the establishment and extension of the commerce of the country. He began the celebrated Alexandrian library; and promoted the Greek version of the Old Testament, now known as the Septuagint. Intercourse by ambassadors was opened with Rome under him; and with him commenced those marriages between the brothers and sisters of the royal family, which form so prominent and revolting a feature in the history of the later Ptolemies. He died in 246 B. C., having reigned 38 years. Ptolemy III., surnamed Euergetes, who shared in the task for the arts of peace, which formed so distinguishing a feature in the two preceding kings, added to it a taste for foreign conquest, and subjugated Asia and Arabia, as far as the borders of Bactria and Æthiopia. He died in 221 B. C., after a reign of 25 years. The reigns and characters of the remaining kings of this dynasty, were marked by all the debauchery, and infamy, and feebleness, that show the harmful effect of excessive wealth to such a country. It ended in Egypt's becoming a province of Rome.

PTOLEMY, or PTOLEMÆUS, CLAUDIUS, a famous geographer and astronomer of Alexandria; who completed the system of astronomy begun by Hipparchus, and now called the Ptolemaic system, (which see), and wrote on geography from personal travel and observation. He wrote several works relating to astronomy, and greatly advanced that science. He flourished in the former part of the 2nd century A. D.

PTYALISM, (tyalism) s. [ptuo, Gr.] a salivation; effusion of spittle.

PTYSMAGOGUE, s. [ptysma and ago, Gr.] a medicine which discharges spittle.

PUBERTY, s. [puberté, Fr. pubertas, Lat.] the time of life when the sexes attain maturity.

PUBESENCE, s. [pubesco, Lat.] the state of arriving at puberty.

PUBESCENT, a. [pubescens, Lat.] arriving at puberty.

PUBLIC, a. [Fr. publicus, Lat.] belonging to a state or nation, opposed to private; open, notorious, or generally known; regarding not private interest, but that of the community, applicable to persons. Open for general entertainment, followed by house.

PUBLIC, s. the general body of a state, nation, or mankind; the people; general notice.

PUBLICAN, s. in Roman History, and the New Testament, a toll-gatherer. At present, one who keeps a public-house.

PUBLICATION, s. the act of making generally known, or of common use; promulgation; edition.

PUBLICLY, ad. in the name of the community; openly.

PUBLICNESS, s. state of belonging to the community; openness; state of being generally known or public.

PUBLICISPRITED, a. having regard to the general advantage above private good.

To PUBLISH, v. a. [publier, Fr.] to discover or make generally known; to put forth a book.

PUBLISHER, a. one who makes public or generally known; one who puts a book into the world.

PUCELAGE, s. [Fr.] a state of virginity.

PU'CKERON, s. in Entomology, a kind of aphid that is found in great swarms on trees and plants.

PUCK, s. in Northern and Teutonic Mythology, a mischievous practical-joker belonging to the class of fairies.

To PU'CKER, v. a. to gather into corrugations; to contract into folds or plications.

PU'DDER, s. See POTHER.

To PU'DDER, v. n. (see POTHER,) to make a tumult or bustle. — v. a. to perplex; to confound.

PU'DDING, s. [puding, Swed.] a kind of food boiled in a bag, or stuffed in some parts of an animal, or baked.

PU'DDING-STONE, s. in Geology, the common name of a solid kind of breccia or conglomerate, composed of small pebbles interspersed in a kind of limestone. This name is most usually given to nodules of the rock, found in the transported beds of the more modern formations.

PU'DDING-TIME, s. dinner-time, or time to begin dinner, the pudding being formerly the first dish served up; nick of time; critical minute.

PU'DDLE, v. a. to make muddy.

PU'DDOCK, PU'NOCK, s. [puddock or parrock,] a provincial word for a small enclosure.

PU'DENCY, s. [pudens, Lat.] modesty; shamefacedness.

PU'DICITY, s. [pudet, Lat.] modesty; chastity.

PU'DICIOUS, [pudishious] a. chaste; modest.

PU'DU, s. in Zoology, a very small species of sheep, a native of the Andes, in S. America.

PU'ERILE, a. [Fr. from puer, Lat.] resembling or becoming a boy or child; childish; boyish; silly; weak.

PU'ERILITY, s. [puerilité, Fr.] boyishness; childishness.

PU'ERPERAL, a. [puer and pario, Lat.] in Medicine, belongs to childbirth, as puerperal fever.

PUERTO RICO, commonly called Porto Rico, an island of the W. Indies, lying immediately to the E. of St. Domingo, or Hayti. It is about 85 miles long, and 30 broad. It has some high mountains, some points being about 3000 feet in elevation. The lower parts are fertile; and the island produces sugar, coffee, cotton, &c. &c. St. Juan is the chief place. Pop. about 400,000, of whom about 50,000 are slaves. This island belongs to Spain.

PUFF, s. [prof, Belg.] a quick blast of breath; a small blast of wind; a mushroom; any thing light, porous, and swelled with wind; a small light tart; an instrument used to powder hair with; any hyperbolic or exaggerated commendation.

To PUFF, v. n. [boffen, Belg.] to swell the cheeks with included breath; to blow with a quick blast; to blow with scornfulness; to breathe thick and hard; to commend to excess, or without reason. — v. a. to inflate or make swell as with the wind; to drive with a blast of breath scornfully; to raise the price of goods by unfair praise; to swell with pride.

PUFFER, s. one that puffs.

PUFFBALL, s. in Botany, a sort of roundish fungus, opening at the top, and full of pulpy impalpable seeds.

PUFFENDORF, SAMUEL, BARON VON, an eminent German historian and jurist. He studied at Leipzig and Jena; was first employed as a private tutor in a situation which took him to Denmark, where he was imprisoned, and subsequently was professor of international law at Heidelberg, and then at Lund in Sweden. In the latter part of his life he visited Berlin for a short time, and was finally raised to the post of royal historian of Sweden. He died in 1694, aged 62 years. His great work is that On the Law of Nature and of Nations; he also wrote a treatise On the Political Condition of Germany, which was the reason for his going to Sweden, a History of Sweden, a Life of Frederic III. of Brandenburg, &c. &c., and compiled the Elements of Jurisprudence. The chief excellence of Puffendorf's work, is its lucid arrangement and style, but he is not an original writer, having been indebted to the great Grotius for most of his knowledge on this profoundly momentous subject.

PUFFIN, s. in Natural History, a water-fowl allied to the auks; a kind of fish; a fungus filled with dust.

PUFFY, a. windy; flatulent; tumid, turgid, applied to style.

PUG, s. [piga, Sax.] a name given to a monkey, or any pet animal. Also a sort of Dutch dog.

PUGET, PIERRE, the celebrated French painter, sculptor, and architect. He studied in Italy, and afterwards more than once visited that home of art, on various missions, and resided for a time at Genoa. His great talents recommended him to the notice of Colbert, who obtained for him the patronage of Louis XIV. He died in 1694, aged 72 years. His greatest works of art are the Milo, and the Andromeda, which are at Versailles. As a painter and architect, he does not seem to have been so eminent, except in marine architecture, an art he was trained to by his father.

PUGH, (puh) interj. a word used to express contempt.

PUGIL, s. [pugille, Fr.] what may be taken up between the thumb and the two fore-fingers.

PUGNACIOUS, (pugnashious) a. [pugno, Lat.] fond of fighting; quarrelsome.

PUGNACITY, s. quarrelsomeness; inclination to fight.

PUNISNE, (puny) a. [Fr.] young; petty; inconsiderable; small.

PU'SSANCE, s. [Fr.] power; strength; force.

PU'SSANT, a. [Fr.] powerful; mighty; strong; forcible.

PUKE, s. the act of vomiting.

PUKER, v. n. to vomit; to spew.

PUKER, a. a medicine causing a vomit. These words are not sanctioned by good usage.

PULCHRITUDE, (pulkritude) s. [pulcher, Lat.] handsomeness, grace, comeliness; the reverse of deformity.

PULCI, LUIGI, one of the great poets of Italy, or rather of Florence, in the days of Lorenzo the Magnificent. He was of noble origin, and was highly connected, but he gained still worthier honours by his genius and wit, although his writings bear strong marks of the half heathen spirit of his age. He died in about 1487, aged about 55 years. His great poem is entitled Morgante Maggiore, and is a tale of old chivalrous heroes and adventures; the style of which is excellent, but the matter by turns vulgar and insipid, burlesque and serious, and at times even religious. The most remarkable passage in it is a guess or allusion to the American continent, which Europe certainly did not know of at the time.

To PULE, v. n. [piuler, Fr.] to cry like a chicken; to cry or whimper like a child.

PULICOSE, a. [pulicosus, Lat.] abounding with fleas.

PULING, a. [piuler, Fr.] sickly; weakly; crazy.

To PULL, v. a. [pulhan, Sax.] to draw towards one with continual violence; to draw forcibly; to pluck or gather, applied to fruits; to tear, to rend; to draw out the entrails of a fowl. Used with down, to subvert, ruin, or demolish; to degrade. Used with up, to eradicate; to extirpate.

PULL, s. the act of pulling; pluck; contest.

PULLEN, s. [pulain, old Fr.] poultry.

PULLER, s. one that pulls.

PULLEY, s. [poulet, Fr.] a young hen.

PULLEY, s. [poulie, Fr.] in Mechanics, a little wheel, with a channel round its edge, and turning round on a pivot. It is usually classed amongst the mechanical powers; and when several are employed in combination, the increase of power that is obtained is very great.

To PULLULATE, v. n. [pululo, Lat.] to germinate, bud, spring, or sprout.

PULMONARY, PULMO'NIC, a. [pulmo, Lat.] belonging to the lungs.

PULMONARY, s. [pulmonaire, Fr.] in Botany, the herb lungwort.

PULP, s. [pulpa, Lat. pulpe, Fr.] any soft mass; the soft or fleshy part of fruit.

PULPIT, s. [pulpitum, Lat.] used now almost exclusively for the raised desk or box from which sermons are delivered in places of worship.

PULPOUS, a. [from pulp,] soft; pappy.

PULPOUSNESS, s. the quality of being pulposus.

PULPY, a. soft; pappy.

PULSATION, s. [pulso, Lat.] the act of beating or moving with quick strokes against any thing opposing.

PULSATOR, s. a striker; a beater.

PULSE, s. the beating or throbbing of the heart and arteries; alternate expansion and contraction; oscillation; vibration; leguminous plants. To feel one's pulse implies, figuratively, to try to know one's mind.

To PULSE, v. n. to beat like the pulse.

PULSION, (pulsehon) s. [pulsus, from pello, Lat.] the act of forcing or driving forward.

PULTENEY, WILLIAM, EARL OF BATH, one of the leading characters of the English parliament in the earlier part of the last century. He studied at Oxford; and on his return from his continental tour, entered the House of Commons. He was, at first, a Whig, and friend of Walpole, and became, under George I., one of the ministry. Afterwards he became a sort of leader of the opposition, and was a most relentless antagonist of his former friend. He even legged with Bolingbroke in publishing a paper, called the Craftsman, to annoy him. Having at length accomplished his purpose, and obtained, in name, the seat of power so long held by Walpole, he lost much of his popularity; and when he soon after became Earl of Bath, the people saw that all his parliamentary eloquence respecting their rights, &c. had been a sham, and he lost their favour for ever. He died in 1764, aged 82 years. The class-books of schools have made some of the best specimens of his speeches familiar, and little more needs be known of them.

PULVERABLE, a. [pulvis, Lat.] capable of being reduced to dust.

PULVERIZATION, s. the act of reducing to powder.

To PULVERIZE, v. a. [pulvériser, Fr.] to reduce to dust or powder.

PULVERULENCE, s. [pulvis, Lat.] dustiness; abundance of dust.

PULVIL, s. [pulvillum, Lat.] sweet scents or odours.

To PULVIL, v. a. to sprinkle with perfumes in powder.

PUMA, s. in Zoology, a large animal of the cat tribe, which has been called the American lion. It is very fierce and ravenous, but preys principally upon cattle and deer, and seldom attacks man.

PUMICE, s. [pumex, Lat.] in Mineralogy, the scorie or light cinder that is thrown out of volcanoes during eruption. It is vitreous, and very porous, and is used in cabinet-making, &c. to smooth the surface of work.

PUMMEL, s. See POMMEL.

PUMP, s. [pompe, Belg. and Fr.] a machine formed on the principle of a syringe, by which water is drawn up from wells, &c.; a shoe with a thin sole and low heel.

To PUMP, v. n. [pumpen, Belg.] to work a pump; to throw out or draw up water by a pump.—v. a. to examine a person by artful interrogatories, so as to draw out some secret from him.

PUMPER, s. the person or instrument that pumps.

PUMPKIN, s. in Botany, the fruit of the gourd.

PUN, s. a quibble or equivocation arising from the use of a word which has two different meanings, or of two words nearly alike.

To PUN, v. n. to quibble, or to use a word in different meanings. To PUNCH, v. a. [poinçonner, Fr.] to make a hole by driving a pointed instrument; to strike with the fist.

PUNCH, s. a pointed instrument driven by a blow to make holes; a liquor made of rum or brandy, oranges or lemons, water and sugar; a strong, but small, stout-built horse, much bred and used in Suffolk; a short fat person.—[polichinelle, Fr.] a puppet, of great antiquity, and highly popular in most countries of Europe, and even in China, (under the name of Puntze), the performance with which varies much in different places, and in the hands of different parties, the fun of which is allowed to compensate for the worse than indifferent morality, which is the invariable characteristic of this gentleman. His name has been lately associated in England, by means of a weekly paper, with political and social satire of a high order, and tolerably strict right-mindedness.

PUNCHEON, s. [poinçon, Fr.] an instrument driven to make a hole or impression; a liquid measure containing 84 gallons.

PUNCHER, s. an instrument that makes a hole or impression, when driven by a hammer, &c.

PUNCTUO, s. [Ital.] a small nicety of behaviour; a nice point of exactness.

PUNCTILOUS, a. nice; exact; too nice in trivial parts of breeding.

PUNCTO, s. [puncto, Span.] a nice point of ceremony; the point in fencing.

PUNCTUAL, a. [punctuel, Fr.] comprised or consisting in a point; exact; nice; punctilious.

PUNCTUALITY, s. nicety; scrupulous exactness.

PUNCTUALLY, ad. nicely; exactly; scrupulously.

PUNCTUALNESS, s. exactness; nicety.

PUNCTUATION, s. [punctum, Lat.] the act of setting the stops or proper pauses to sentences.

To PUNCTULATE, v. n. [punctulam, Lat.] to mark with small spots.

PUNCTURE, s. [punctus, from pungo, Lat.] a hole made with a sharp-pointed instrument.

PUNDLE, s. a short and fat woman.

PUNGAR, s. [pugurus, Lat.] in Natural History, a kind of fish.

PUNGENCY, s. the power of pricking or causing a sensation of sharpness on the tongue; the power of affecting the mind.

PUNGENT, a. [pungens, Lat.] pricking; affecting the tongue with a sensation of sharpness or acridness.

PUNIC, a. [from Punicus, Lat.] belonging to, or relating to Carthage. Punic faith, was a Roman proverb for faithlessness, and which, in strict justice, ought to have been Roman faith, instead. Punic wars, were those long and costly campaigns with Hannibal and with the Carthaginian states, carried on in Italy, Spain, and Africa.

PUNICE, s. [punaise, Fr.] in Entomology, a bug; a wall-louse.

PUNICEOUS, [puniceous a.] [punicus, Lat.] purple.

PUNINESS, s. pettiness; smallness.

To PUNISH, v. a. [punio, Lat.] to chastise; to afflict with penalties or death, for the commission of some crime.

PUNISHABLE, a. [punissable, Fr.] worthy of punishment; capable of punishment.

PUNISHABLENESS, s. the quality of deserving or admitting punishment.

PUNISHER, s. one who inflicts pains for a crime.

PUNISHMENT, s. [punissement, Fr.] any penalty inflicted on account of the violation of some law; whether from resentment, or for the repression of the like conduct in society, or for the benefit and correction of the offender.

PUNITIVE, a. [punio, Lat.] inflicting pain or punishment for the violation of some law.

PUNITORY, a. punishing; tending to punishment. Punitory interest, in Civil Law, is such interest of money as is due for delay of payment or breach of promise, &c.

PUNSTER, s. [from pun], a quibbler; a maker of puns.

PUNT, s. a small, square, shallow boat, used on meres or lagoons, for the purpose of shooting wild-fowls.

PUNY, a. [puisiv, Fr.] young; inferior; petty.

PUNY, s. a person young and inexperienced; a novice.

To PUP, v. n. to bring forth whelps or puppies.

PUPA, s. [Lat.] in Entomology, the scientific name of the second stage of development in insects, called in the case of moths, butterflies, and such insects, the chrysalis.

PUPIL, s. [pupilla, Lat.] the circular or longitudinal opening in the forepart of the eye in men and animals, through which the rays of light are admitted, which produce vision.—[pupillus, Lat.] a scholar, or one under the care of a tutor; a ward; one under the care of a guardian.

PUPILAGE, s. the state of a scholar or ward.

PUPILARY, a. pertaining to a pupil or ward.

PUPPET, s. [poupée, Fr.] a small image moved by springs, and imitating the gestures of an actor; a person entirely under the direction of another.

PUPPET-SHOW, s. a play performed by wooden images moved by wires.

PUPPY, s. [poupée, Fr. from pupus, Lat.] a whelp, or young dog; a name of contemptuous reproach, implying a person to be unworthy the name of a man.

PURBECK LIMESTONE, s. in Geology, a compact, splintery kind of rock, most frequently abounding in shells, evidently of fresh water origin; and occurring most characteristically in the isle of Purbeck, in Dorsetshire; where, in the Anglo-Norman period, it used to be quarried, for making tombstones, columns, and other church ornaments. It belongs to the Wealden group.

PURBLIND, a. See POREBLIND.

PURCELL, HENRY, the great English composer, and organist of Westminster Abbey and the Chapel-royal. He died in 1695, aged 37 years; and was buried in Westminster Abbey. His works are very numerous, and are of almost every kind of composition: anthems, and other church music; operas, and other dramatic music; cantatas, glees, songs, &c. &c.; the present warm admiration and earnest study of which, are the best criticism upon. It is indeed a hopeful sign for music in England, that though she has not a Purcell now, she has those who can recognise his true genius, from the showy pretence of lately admired and popular composers.

PURCHAS, SAMUEL, an English divine and writer of the 17th century. His Pilgrimage, and Pilgrims, are works on geography, and geographical discovery, with accounts of the religions, manners, customs, &c. of the different countries. He published several other books, but these are the most famous. He died in 1628, aged 51 years.

PURCHASABLE, a. that may be purchased or bought.

TO PURCHASE, v. a. [purchasser, Fr.] to buy for a price; to obtain at any expense. In sea language, to draw in.

PURCHASE, s. [pourchas, old Fr.] any thing bought or obtained for a price; any thing of which possession is taken any other way than by inheritance. Also, in machines, power gained by means of a good fulcrum.

PURCHASER, s. a buyer; one that gains any thing for a price.

PURE, a. [purus, Lat. pur, Fr.] unsullied; clear, unaltered by any mixtures; not connected with any thing extrinsic; void of guilt, or sin; not vitiated, applied to speech; mere; chaste; ritually clean.

PURELY, ad. in a pure manner; innocently; merely.

PURENESS, s. the quality of being free from mixture, composition, guilt, or vitious modes of speech.

PURFILE, s. [pourfile, Fr.] a kind of trimming for women's gowns made of tinsel and thread; called also hobbin-work.

TO PURFILE, v. a. [pourfiler, Fr.] to decorate with a wrought or flowered border; to border with embroidery.

PURFILE, PUREFLEW, s. [pourfile, Fr.] a border of embroidery.

PURGATION, s. [purgo, Lat.] the act of cleansing from bad or vitious mixtures; the cleansing the body by medicine; the act of clearing from the imputation of guilt.

PURGATIVE, a. [purgatif, Fr.] having the power of cleansing the body, or cathartic.

PURGATORY, s. [purgatorio, Fr.] in Romanism, a part of the unseen world, in which unrepented venial sin is punished, and the soul purified from it, and fitted to enter heaven. Masses for the dead, indulgences, and some like things in Romanism, refer to this intermediate state.

TO PURGE, v. a. [purger, Fr. purgo, Lat.] to cleanse or clear; to clear from guilt, or imputation of guilt; to cleanse the body by medicine; to clarify from dregs or impurities, applied to liquor.

PURGE, s. a medicine which cleanses the body by evacuations.

PURGER, s. one who clears away any thing that is noxious; a purge; a cathartic.

PURIFICATION, s. [Fr. purus and facio, Lat.] the act of making pure, or cleansing from foreign mixtures; the act of cleansing from guilt, or bodily impurities.

PURIFICATIVE, PURIFICATORY, a. having the power or tendency to clear from impurities.

PURIFIER, s. a cleanser or refiner.

TO PURIFY, v. a. [purifier, Fr.] to cleanse from impurity, filth, corruption, barbarousness, or improprieties.

PURIM, in the Hebrew calendar, a solemna feast held on the fourteenth and fifteenth of March, in memory of their deliverance from the conspiracy of Haman by Esther.

PURIST, s. [puriste, Fr.] one who is affectually nice in the use of words.

PURITAN, s. in Ecclesiastical History, the name by which those who held by spiritual purify, rather than decent formality, in doctrine and worship, and by the pure or mere word of God, rather than ecclesiastical tradition, in the first hundred years of the history of the Church of England, were distinguished. Presbyterians, Anabaptists, and Independents also bore this name, which was, at the Restoration, superseded by that of Nonconformist, as that is, or ought to be, by Dissenter.

PURITANICAL, a. relating to, or resembling, Puritanism.

PURITANISM, s. the tenets of the Puritans.

PURITY, s. [purité, Fr. purus, Lat.] cleanness; freeness from dirt, foulness, guilt, unchasteness, or foreign mixtures.

PURL, s. an embroidered border; a kind of warm malt liquor, in which bitters are infused.

TO PURL, v. n. to murmur or flow with a gentle noise.—v. a. to adorn the edges with fringes or embroidery.

PURLIEU, (porleu) s. the borders of a forest; a border or enclosure; a neighbourhood, or close vicinity.

PURLINS, s. in Architecture, those pieces of timber that lie across the rafters on the inside, to keep them from sinking in the middle of their length.

TO PURLOIN, v. a. to steal, or take away the property of another privately.

PURLOINER, s. one that takes away the property of another privately.

PURPARTY, s. [pour and parté, Fr.] share; part in division.

PURPLE, a. [purpureus, Lat.] red tinted with blue. In Poetry, red, or any other rich and dark colour.

PURPLE, s. the purple colour; a purple dress.

TO PURPLE, v. a. [purpur, Lat.] to make purple or dark red.

PURPLES, s. in Medicine, spots of a livid red colour, which break out in malignant fevers; a kind of fever.

PURPLISH, a. somewhat purple.

PURPORT, s. [pourporte, Fr.] the design, effect, or tendency of a discourse or writing.

TO PURPORT, v. a. to show; to intend.

PURPOSE, s. [propositum, from propono, Lat. propos, Fr.] intention or design; effect; consequence; example; suitability to the end intended.

TO PURPOSE, v. a. to intend, design, or resolve.—v. n. to have an intention; to have a design.

PURPOSELY, ad. with intention or design.

PURPRISE, (purprise) s. [pourpris, old Fr.] a close or enclosure; also the whole compass of a manor.

TO PURR, v. n. to murmur like a cat when pleased.

PURSE, s. [purse, Brit.] a bag in which money is kept.

TO PURSE, v. a. to put into a purse; to gather up like the mouth of a purse.

PURSENET, s. a net of which the mouth is drawn together by a string.

PURSEPROUD, s. haughty on account of wealth.

PURSER, s. in a king's ship, is an officer who has the charge of the victuals, and takes care they are good, well laid up, and stored. He keeps a list of the ship's company, and sets down exactly the days of each man's admittance to pay.

PURSINESS, PURSIVENESS, s. shortness of breath.

PURSLAIN, s. [portulaca, Lat.] in Botany, a plant found in marshes and shallow stagnant waters, and flowering in September. The sea-purslain is a shrub found on the sea-shore. Cows, sheep, and goats eat it.

PURSUABLE, a. fit to be pursued.

PURSUANCE, s. the prosecution, process, or continuation of an attempt.

PURSUANT, a. done in consequence of any thing.

TO PURSUE, v. a. [poursuivre, Fr.] to chase or follow as an enemy in order to seize; to continue an attempt; to follow as an example; to endeavour to attain.—v. n. to go on, to proceed.

PURSUER, s. one who follows with a hostile intention.

PURSUIT, (pursuit) s. [poursuite, Fr.] the act of following with hostile intention to take; an endeavour to attain; a prosecution or continuation of a design.

PURSUIVANT, (pursuivant) s. [Fr.] a state messenger; an attendant on a herald.

PURSY, s. [poussé, Fr.] fat and short-breathed.

PURTENANCE, s. [appartenance, Fr.] the lungs, &c. of an animal.

PURVER, ANTHONY, one of those men who have, in spite of obstacles, made themselves masters of rare and valuable knowledge. He was a Quaker, and was no more than a shoemaker, or shepherd, at first; but by extraordinary application, he gained a very considerable knowledge of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, and became a schoolmaster at Andover. He undertook and actually accomplished a translation of the whole of the Sacred Scriptures, from having seen some mistranslations in the Authorized Version pointed out: and this work was printed. He died in 1777, aged about 75 years.

TO PURVEY, v. a. [pourvoir, Fr.] to provide with conveniences; to procure.—v. n. to buy in provisions.

PURVEYANCE, s. provisions; the act of procuring provisions.

PURVEYOR, s. one that procures victuals; a procurer.

PURVIEW, (parveur) s. [pourveu, Fr.] proviso; a providing clause.

PURULENCE, PURULENCY, s. [purulentus, from pus, Lat.] in Medicine, the generation of pus in a wound.

PURULENT, a. in Medicine, abounding with pus.

PUS, s. [Lat.] the matter of a well-digested sore.

TO PUSH, v. a. [pousser, Fr.] to thrust, or drive by thrusting; to press forward; to enforce or drive to a conclusion; to importune or tease.—v. n. to make a thrust, effort, or attack.

PUSH, s. a thrust; an assault; an impulse; a forcible effort or struggle; exigence; trial; a sudden emergence.—[pustula, Lat.] in Medicine, a boil, or large pustule.

PUSHER, s. one who pushes forward.

PUSHING, a. enterprising; vigorous.

PUSHPIN, s. a childish game, formerly, wherein pins are pushed alternately.

PUSILLANIMITY, s. [pusillanimité, Fr.] want of courage; meanness of spirit.

PUSILLANIMOUS, a. [pusillanime, Fr.] void of courage; mean-spirited, or narrow-minded.

PUSILLANIMOUSNESS, s. meanness of spirit.

PUSS, s. the common appellation for a cat; the sportsman's name for a hare; a ludicrous name for a woman.

PUSTULE, s. [pus, Lat.] a small swelling or tumour filled with matter; a pimple; an efflorescence.

PUSULOS, a. abounding in pustules or pimples.

TO PUT, v. a. [mittere, Dan.] to lay down or deposit; to place in any situation or condition; to expose or apply to any thing; to place, repose, or trust; to use any action by which the state or place of any thing is changed; to cause or produce. To put by, to turn off, divert, or thrust aside. To put down, to baffle, repress, crush, degrade, bring into disuse, confute, or commit to writing. To put forth, to propose, extend, emit, or exert. To put in, to interpose, or drive to harbour. To put in practice, to use or exercise. To put off, to pull off, or lay aside; to delay or defeat by some artifice or excuse; to pass off by fraud or deceit; to procrastinate; to discard; to obtrude by false appearances or recommendations. To put on, or upon, to impute or charge; to forward or promote; to impose or inflict; to assume or take. To put over, to refer. To put out, to place at interest; to extinguish, applied to light or sight; to shoot like a plant; to extend from the body; to drive from or expel; to publish; to disconcert. To put to, to kill by; to punish by; to assist with. To put to it, to perplex, distress, or press hard. To put up, to pass by unrequited; to expose to fate; to start; to hoard; to hide.—v. n. to go or move; to shoot or germinate. To put in, to enter a haven; to offer a claim. To put off, to leave land. To put to sea, implies to set sail, or begin one's course. To put up, to offer oneself as a candidate; to advance or bring oneself forward. To put up with, implies to bear without resentment. SYNON. Put seems to have a general sense; place, one more limited, meaning to put orderly and in a proper place.

PUT, s. an action or state of distress; a clownish person; an old-fashioned game at cards. A put off, implies a shift or excuse.

PUTAGE, s. [putain, Fr.] in Law, a prostitution on the woman's part.

PUTANISM, s. [putanisme, Fr.] the trade of a prostitute; whoredom.

PUTATIVE, a. [putatif, Fr. from puto, Lat.] supposed; reputed; imaginary.

PUTID, a. [puteo, Lat.] mean, low, or worthless.

PUTLOGS, PUTLOCKS, s. short pieces of timber, about seven feet long, used in building scaffolds, lying at right angles from the wall, and serving to bear the boards on which the builders stand.

PUTREDINOUS, a. [putresco, Lat.] stinking; rotten.

PUTREFACTION, s. [Fr. putris and facio, Lat.] the state or act of growing rotten; a kind of fermentation of the particles of bodies, which changes their form of existence.

PUTREFACTIVE, a. making rotten.

TO PUTREFY, v. a. to make rotten.—v. n. to grow rotten.

PUTRESCENCE, s. [putresco, Lat.] the state of rotting.

PUTRESCENT, a. [putrescens, Lat.] growing rotten.

PUTRID, a. [putridus, Lat.] rotten, corrupted. A putrid fever, in Medicine, one of the most deadly and contagious of that class of diseases.

PUTRIDNESS, s. rottenness.

PUTTER, s. one that states, proposes, or places. Followed by on, an inciter or instigator.

PUTTINGSTONE, s. in some parts of Scotland, stones are laid at the gates of great houses, which they call putting-stones, for trials of strength.

PUTTOCK, s. in Ornithology, a name of the buzzard.

PUTTY, s. a kind of powder on which glass is ground; a paste made of white lead, &c. and linseed oil, used by glaziers to fasten glass in windows; the powder of calcined tin is used in polishing.

PUY, LE, the capital of the department of Haute Loire, France. It stands on the Borne, and has a cathedral, a museum with a library, some hospitals, and other institutions relating to education and benevolence; but is not a handsome town, although it is finely situated. It has some trade, and is a great place for lace-making, and some other less important manufactures. It is about 290 miles from Paris. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 45.19. N. Long. 4.16. E.

PUY DE DÔME, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Allier, Creuse, Corrèze, Cantal, Haute Loire, and Rhone et Loire. It is about 70 miles by 60 in extent. The mountain of Auvergne cross it lengthwise, and it is named after one of the most remarkable elevations, the Puy-de-dôme, which is nearly 5000 feet high, but there are other heights which exceed 6000 feet. The Allier, the Cher, the Dordogne, and several other streams, but none of any great size, water it. It has also several lakes. Iron, lead, coal, and alum, with several other minerals, are found here. It yields also wheat, fruits, wine, and abundance of cattle, &c.; and furnishes, for various purposes, plenty of good timber. Its manufactures are not extensive. Clermont-Ferrand is its capital. Pop. about 600,000.

TO PUZZLE, v. a. [for postle, from pose.] to perplex or confound with difficulties; to make intricate; to tease, embarrass.

PUZZLE, s. embarrassment; perplexity.

PUZZLER, s. one who puzzles.

PYGARG, s. in Natural History, the name of a kind of eagle, but applied in the Bible to the antelope, or goat.

PYGMEAN, a. [from pygmy.] like a pygmy; belonging to a pygmy.

PYGMY, s. [pygme, Gr.] a person belonging to a nation in Thrace, fabled to be only three spans high, and to have been devoured by cranes; a dwarf, or very short person. It is usually spelt pygmy.

PYLORUS, s. [pute and ovros, Gr.] in Anatomy, the lower orifice of the stomach.

PYM, JOHN, one of the great statesmen of the Long Parliament. He studied at Oxford, and was by profession a barrister. He sat in several parliaments before that famous one, and distinguished himself as a zealous Puritan, and eloquent speaker. His talent for business also led him to take part in some of the most momentous proceedings of the Commons against the court, as in the impeachment of Buckingham, and of Strafford, afterwards, and in the celebrated Remonstrance, which provoked Charles to violate the privileges of the House. He was, perhaps, the most eminent man of his party, and certainly had more influence than any other. When the war broke out, Pym was made lieutenant of the ordnance for the Parliament, but died in about a month afterwards, in 1643, aged 59 years. He has long been held in esteem by constitutional writers, and his speeches have not been without admirers.

PYRAMID, s. [pyramis, Gr.] in Geometry, a solid, standing on a square or polygonal basis, and terminating at the top in a point. The pyramids of Egypt are the most enormous buildings known in the world. They are built on a square foundation, and most usually present their sides to the cardinal points. The most famous are constructed of huge masses of stone so arranged that the outside looks like 4 immense flights of stairs, leading to the small platform on the summit. A few, and those not the largest, are built of Egyptian unburnt brick. They are very numerous, both in Egypt and in Nubia, but most of them are small. The 3 largest are respectively 480, 450, and 340 feet in height. Several of them have been opened, after many fruitless efforts, and Belzoni, and many other enterprising travellers since, have penetrated into the interior. From their discoveries, it is concluded that they were intended for the burial-places of kings, but for which kings in particular can only be dimly conjectured. They are an abiding memorial of the ancient condition of that wonderful country, and indicate the existence of a despotic sovereign, and of most teeming abundance of all the necessities of life.

PYRAMIDAL, PYRAMIDICAL, a. resembling, or having the form of, a pyramid.

PYRAMIDICALLY, ad. in the form of a pyramid.

PYRE, s. [pyra, Lat.] a pile to be burnt; a funeral pile.

PYRENEAN MOUNTAINS, or PYRENEE'S, the chain of mountains which divides France from Spain, and extends from the Mediterranean to the Ocean, being about 212 miles in length. They are in average breadth about 45 miles across; and many of the peaks exceed 10,000 feet, and some even 11,000 feet in height. The rivers which spring from their sides, flow chiefly into the Adour and the Garonne, on the N. side, and into the Ebro on the S. There are several lakes embosomed in the recesses of this chain. Iron, copper, lead, and silver also, are found here, with building-stone and marble. There are, also, wide forests of valuable trees, which, beside timber, yield great quantities of pitch and tar. Many wild animals yet remain amongst them. Shepherds, hunters, miners, and smugglers live here. There are many passes, of greater or less difficulty, from one country to the other.

PYRENEES, BASSES, a department of France, bordering on Spain, and lying on the Bay of Biscay, bounded by the departments of Landes, Gers, and Hautes Pyrénees. It is nearly 90 miles long, and about 50 broad. It is very mountainous on the side next to Spain, and it includes several heights of the Pyrenean chain exceeding 8000 and 9000 feet. The Adour is its principal river, and almost all its other rivers are tributaries of the Adour. Iron, building-stone of various kinds, slate, &c. are the most valuable treasures of its mountain region. The lower part yields corn, fruits, wine and spirits, &c. Cattle and other domestic animals are reared in great numbers. The forests, too, are valuable. It has some manufactures. Its trade is pretty good. Pau is the capital. Pop. about 500,000.

PYRENEES, HAUTES, a department of France, lying on the Spanish frontier, and bounded by the departments of Basses Pyrénees, Gers, and Haute Garonne. It is in length 75 miles, and about 50 in general breadth. The Pyrenees send out branches through this department in all directions, and some of the loftiest summits, exceeding 10,000 and 11,000 feet, are within its boundaries. The Adour, the Garonne, and other small streams, which unite with them afterwards, water it. It yields iron and building-stone. There is also found here some good marble. The pastures and vineyards are the chief sources of agricultural wealth, but some corn, &c. is grown. In most of the larger towns, some kinds of manufactures are carried on. Tarbes is the chief town. Pop. about 300,000.

PYRENEES ORIENTALES, a department of France, lying on the Mediterranean, and bordering on Spain, bounded by the departments of Ariège and Aude. Its length is about 70 miles, and its average breadth about 15. It is exceedingly mountainous, and has several peaks more than 9000 feet high. It is watered by many small streams. Iron and excellent building-stone are found here. It yields corn, but not in great quantities; wine, fruits, sheep, &c. and good timber. Manufactures of various kinds are carried on, but not extensively. Perpignan is the capital. Pop. about 200,000.

PYRE-TICKS, s. [pyretos, Gr.] medicines which cure fevers.

PYRETOLOGY, s. [pyretos and logos, Gr.] a treatise on fevers.

PYRITES, s. [pur, Gr.] in Mineralogy, firestone; a peculiar variety of the ores of iron and copper.

PYROMANCY, s. [pur and mantia, Gr.] divination by fire.

PYROMETER, s. [pur and metro, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, the name of several ingenious instruments, by which the intensity of the heat of fires is measured.

PYROPHORI, s. in Chemistry, compound substances which heat of themselves, and take fire on the admission of atmospheric air.

PYROSOMA, s. in Natural History, a kind of marine infusorial animal, which emits a phosphorescent light.

PYROTECHNICAL, (pyrotechnikaî) a. [pyrotechnique, Fr.] engaged or skilled in fireworks.

PYROTECHNICS, PYROTECHNICY, (pyrotechnikaîs) s. [pur and techné, Gr.] the art of making fireworks.

PYRRHO, a Greek philosopher, who founded the sceptical school. He accompanied Alexander the Great on his expedition, and conversed with the Gymnosophists of India. After his return, he renounced the philosophy of Democritus, and with it all hope of solving philosophical questions. He was made high priest of Elis, (his native town,) and this sufficiently attests the character of his life. His philosophy was the denial of the possibility of philosophy. He flourished at the end of the 4th century and beginning of the 3rd B. C.

PYRRHONISM, s. in Philosophy, scepticism, or universal doubt.

PYRRHUS, a king of Epirus, who, in the beginning of the 3rd century, at the request of the inhabitants of Tarentum, invaded Italy and attacked the Roman state. After repeated victories, he was overcome at length;—the Romans having forgotten their terrors at the first sight of the Epiroti' elephants. By campaigns before this invasion, and after it, he gained possession of Macedonia, which, however, he did not long retain. But at last, during the siege of Argos, he was killed by a tile thrown from a window, in 272 B. C., after a reign of 40 years, in which he had acted like a military adventurer, rather than like a king.

PYTHAGORAS, the great philosopher of Grecian Italy, and the first aspirant after knowledge who bore that august name. From his native Samos, he travelled to Egypt and the East, gathering the best of all the lore that these lands could yield him, but animating and vivifying all with his own genius. Returning, he visited the great places of Greece, and finally established himself at Croton in Italy. Here he prosecuted his studies, and reduced his manifold cogitations to order; and as an attempt to realize his notions of what society should be, established a philosophical brotherhood, which, for a while, supplanted the old government of Croton, but ended in some sudden rising of the people, in which the philosopher himself perished, in about 500 B. C. Many years afterwards, when paganism and philosophy felt that if they could not show a hero who might compare with the Prophet of Nazareth, they could not endure; unable to ascribe to any of the later sages the powers and the deeds which must be found in such a one, Pythagoras was selected, and a mass of legendary stories, original and adopted, were told of him, and at last collected in a (so-called) Life of him, by Jamblichus. Happily for the name of the sage of Croton, no such fables were needed to preserve for it the veneration of mankind; his mathematical knowledge, his beautiful, and now clearly-proved, system of the universe; his spiritual philosophy, although veiled under figures and emblems, which the ignorant mistook for magic; were not wholly lost to the world, but found firmer and truer embodiments than even the sage himself conceived, and produced thinkers, and writers, and teachers, from whom much of the wisdom of the present day, even, has been learned.

PYTHIAN, a. the name of one of the Grecian national religious festivals, celebrated near Delphi, in honour of Apollo, whose temple and oracle were there. A laurel crown was given as the prize to the conquerors in the various games.

PYX, PYXIS, s. [Lat.] in the Roman Church, the box in which the host or consecrated wafer is kept. In Anatomy, the acetabulum, or hollow of the hip-bone.

Q

Q IS a consonant, the sixteenth letter of the English alphabet.

In the Gothic alphabet, it is in the form of an O, with a dot in the middle. Though it had a place in the Saxon alphabet, they generally substituted co for it in spelling, as, *ecce*lan, to quell, or kill in that manner. The q is never used alone in English, but is always followed by u, as in quibble, quarrel, quiet, quote, &c., and never ends any word. As a numeral, Q stands for 500; and with a dash over it thus, q̄, for 500,000. Used as an abbreviate, q stands for quantity, or quantum. Thus, among physicians, q. pl. is quantum placet, as much as you please; and q. s. quantum sufficit, i. e. as much as is necessary.—Q. E. D. among mathematicians, is, quod erat demonstrandum, i. e. which was to be demonstrated; and Q. E. F. quod erat faciendum, i. e. which was to be done. Q. D. among grammarians, is quasi dictum, i. e. as if it were said, or, as who should say.

QUAB, s. in Natural History, a sort of fish.

TO QUACK, v. n. [quacken, Belg.] to cry like a duck; in this sense it is often written quacke, to express the sound better. To chatter loudly and boastingly.

QUACK, s. a person who pretends to arts which he does not understand, generally applied to ignorant pretenders in physic; a mere empiric.

QUACKERY, s. the practice of physic without knowledge of the science of medicine.

QUACKSALVER, s. one who brags of medicines or salves; a mountebank; a medicaster; a charlatan.

QUADRA, s. [quadrans, Lat.] a word used in composition, signifying four.

QUADRAGE-SIMA, s. [quadragesima, Lat.] in the Ecclesiastical Calendar, is a denomination given to Lent from its consisting of forty days. Hence, also, the first Sunday of Lent is called Quadragesima Sunday, and the succeeding Sundays, Quinquagesima, Sexagesima, Septuagesima.

QUADRAGE-SIMAL, a. belonging to Lent; used in Lent.

QUADRANGLE, s. [quadratus and angulus, Lat.] a square; a figure with four right angles.

QUADRANGULAR, a. square; having four right angles.

QUADRANT, s. [quadrans, Lat.] the fourth part; the quarter; a quarter of a circle. In Astronomy, an instrument used in taking the altitude of any heavenly body; the largest of these were fixed to a solid piece of masonry, called mural quadrants. Hadley's quadrant is an instrument used, occasionally, instead of the sextant (which see); but the sextant, at sea; and larger, and complete, and more accurate instruments have almost banished the quadrant (properly so called) from the observatory.

QUADRANTAL, a. included in the fourth part of a circle.

QUADRATE, s. [quadratus, Lat.] square, or having four equal and parallel sides; divisible into four equal parts.—[quadrans, Lat.] suited; applicable: used with to.

QUADRATE, s. a square or surface having four equal and parallel sides. In Astrology, an aspect of the heavenly bodies, in which they are distant 90 degrees from each other.

To QUADRATE, v. n. [quadratus, Lat.] to suit, or be accommodated; followed by with.

QUADRATIC, a. square; relating to a square. Quadratic equations, in Algebra, are such as belong to the unknown side, the square of the root, or the number sought; and are of two sorts; first, simple quadratics, where the square of the unknown root is equal to the absolute number given; secondly, affected quadratics, which are such as have, between the highest power of the unknown number and the absolute number given, some intermediate power of the unknown number.

QUADRATURE, s. [quadratura, Lat.] the act of squaring; the first and last quarters of the moon; the state of being square; a quadrature; a square. Quadrature of the circle, one of the things which, as we are too wise to seek for the philosopher's stone, we expend our folly on, in this enlightened age. It is (like perpetual motion) a demonstrable impossibility.

QUADRENNIAL, a. [quatuor and annus, Lat.] containing four years: happening every fourth year.

QUADRIBLE, a. that may be squared.

QUADRIFID, a. [quatuor and fido, Lat.] cloven into four parts.

QUADRILATERAL, a. [quatuor and latus, Lat.] having four sides.

QUADRILATERALNESS, s. the property of having four right-lined sides.

QUADRILLE, s. [Fr.] a game at cards; also a kind of dance.

QUADRIN, s. [quadrinus, Lat.] a mite; a small piece of money, in value about a farthing.

QUADRINO-MIAL, a. [quatuor and nomen, Lat.] consisting of four denominations.

QUADRIPARTITE, a. [quatuor and pars, Lat.] having four parts; divided into four parts.

QUADRIPARTITELY, ad. in a quadripartite distribution.

QUADRIPARTITION, s. a division by four, or the taking the fourth part of any quantity or number.

QUADRIPHYLLOUS, a. [quatuor, Lat. and phylon, Gr.] having four leaves.

QUADRIREME, s. [quatuor and remus, Lat.] a galley with four banks of oars.

QUADRISYLLABLE, s. [quatuor, Lat. and syllable, s.] a word of four syllables.

QUADRIVALVES, s. [quatuor and valva, Lat.] doors with four folds.

QUADRIVIAL, a. [quatuor and via, Lat.] having four ways meeting at one place; resembling four cross-ways.

QUADRUPED, s. [quatuor and pes, Lat.] an animal that goes on four feet.

QUADRUPLE, a. [quadruplus, Lat.] four-fold.

To QUADRUPLE, v. a. [quadruplico, Lat.] to double twice; to make four-fold.

QUADRUPPLICATION, s. the taking a thing four times.

QUADRUPPLY, ad. to a fourfold quantity.

QUERE, v. imp. [Lat.] inquire; seek. A word made use of when a thing is recommended to inquiry.

To QUAFF, v. a. [etymology uncertain.] to drink; to swallow in large draughts.—v. n. to drink much.

To QUAFFER, v. n. to feed out.

QUAGGA, s. in Zoology, a species of wild horse, which inhabits the South of Africa.

QUAGGY, a. boggy; not solid.

QUAGMIRE, s. [i. e. quaking mire,] a bog which trembles under one's feet; a quaking marsh.

QUAIL, s. [quaglia, Ital.] in Ornithology, a bird allied to the partridge, &c.

To QUAIL, v. n. [quelen, Belg.] to languish or grow dispirited; to fade; to decline.

QUAILPIPE, s. a pipe with which fowls allure quails.

QUAINT, a. [compus, Lat.] nice; exact to excess; subtly contrived, fine spun, affected; neat, pretty.

QUAINTLY, ad. nicely; exactly; artfully; affectedly.

QUAINTNESS, s. petty elegance; nicety.

To QAKE, v. n. [ceacan, Sax.] to shake or tremble with cold or fear; to shake with the least jog or motion.

QUAKE, s. a shudder, or trembling motion.

QUAKEGRASS, s. in Botany, a kind of grass, of which there are two kinds, the small and the common, called also maddenhair.

QUAKERS, OR FRIENDS, in Ecclesiastical History, a religious body, which stands in direct and total contradiction to Romanism, and all schemes allied to it. Its members receive the sacred Scriptures as conveying the revelation God has been pleased to make of himself and his will to man, but they regard the "light within" every man as the especial guide furnished to each individual, to lead him into all truth and duty that pertains to him. They utterly abjure forms and formulas, and therefore maintain no creeds, observe no rites, (even of baptism and the Lord's supper,) and in public worship leave the public conduct to the accredited ministers without any reserve or direction. Their ministers are appointed on the ground of manifest ability, and a sufficient evidence of inward and spiritual call to that work. In private, as in public, they eschew formalities of devotion. Simplicity of dress, and the renunciation of all complimentary forms of address, are the only outward symbols of their faith. But in the promotion of education, in the abolition of slavery, in the spread of copies of the Bible, in passive resistance to war and all personal violence, to war taxes, and to the tithes and rates claimed by the Established Church, they have stood foremost, and not unfrequently alone. For nearly two centuries, until the late marriage act, they persisted in their own observance of that ceremony, and braved all consequences. They were the calmest and most distinguished martyrs of every form of state-churchism, both here, on the continent, and in the earliest stage of New England. But it must be added, the system which was instinct with life and power, as the living formula of such men as Fox and Barclay, has been degraded to worse than a dead letter by the practice of hereditary membership: simplicity of dress, speech, worship, &c., &c., (carried to such a length as the interdiction of all music and song,) with every other peculiarity of their habits, thus become a form, and a mere form, have been fearfully avenged, as outrages on nature, by the growth of a sly craft, and a special kind of worldly wisdom, that have made their name proverbial; and in this country a mere wreck is left, and that not notorious for its zeal for evangelical principles, whilst the majority of seceders has fraternized with the Church of England itself. Yet, whilst their present condition teaches us that formality may coexist with the repudiation of all forms, and that no regulations can make that which is the living and glowing expression of individual piety, a fitting expression for the average of the piety of a congregation, or of a community; it would be well for Christians to study their history, and take the step that ought to follow that so firmly planted for the first founders and martyrs of this remarkable church. See FOX, BARCLAY, PENN., &c.

QUALIFICATION, s. [Fr.] that which makes any person or thing fit; an accomplishment; abatement; diminution.

To QUALIFY, v. a. [qualifier, Fr.] to accomplish; to render fit for any thing or employment; to abate, soften, or diminish; to modify; to regulate.

QUALITY, s. [qualitas, from qualis, Lat.] nature, relatively considered; a property or accident; disposition or temper; character; accomplishment; rank; nobility; persons of high rank collectively.

QUALM, (quæm), [wealdin, Sax.] a sudden fit of sickness, or sickly languor.

QUALMISH, (quæmish) a. seized with sickly languor.

QUANDARY, s. [qu'en dirai je? Fr.] a doubt; a state of perplexity and uncertainty. A ludicrous word.

QUANTITY, s. [quantitas, from quantus, Lat.] that property of a thing which answers to the question, How much?; that which can be increased or diminished. In Prosody, the length of a syllable, as it respects the utterance of it.

QUANTUM, s. [Lat.] quantity; or amount.

QUARANTINE, s. [quarantain, Fr.] the time during which a ship's crew, coming from places affected with the plague, is restrained from intercourse or communication with others.

QUARLES, FRANCIS, a lawyer and writer of the first half of the 17th century; who was educated at Cambridge and Lincoln's Inn; and afterwards was in the service of the daughter of James I. and of Archbishop Usher. After the Irish rebellion and massacre, he held some office in the corporation of London; but made so unwise a display of his loyalty as to fly to the king at Oxford; upon which the parliament seized on his property, &c., as was usual in cases of open rebellion against them. He died (as some have said, of grief) in 1644, aged 52 years. He wrote several works; and of them his Emblems are the best known, having been adopted as a symbolical kind of work by the descendants of those whom he opposed. It is more remarkable for its piety, than for its poetry, or taste; yet here and there are lines or stanzas of great force and beauty.

To QUARREL, v. n. [quereller, Fr.] to debate, dispute, or fall into variance; to scuffle, squabble, fight.

QUARREL, s. [querelle, Fr.] a scuffle, petty fight, brawl, contest, or dispute; a cause of dispute; something that gives right to mischief or reprisal; objection; ill-will—(quadrilla, Ital.) a short, square-headed arrow used with a cross bow; a small lozenge-shaped pane of glass.

QUARRELLER, s. he who quarrels.

QUARRELSOME, a. [querelleux, Fr.] petulant; easily provoked to enmity; quarrelsome.

QUARRELSOME, a. inclined to brawls; easily provoked; choleric; irascible; petulant.

QUARRELSOMELY, ad. in a quarrelsome manner; petulantly; cholerically.

QUARRELSOMENESS, s. petulance; cholericalness.

QUARRY, s. [quarré, Fr.] a square; game flown at by a hawk; an open pit, or excavation, whence stone for building, &c. is dug.

To QUARRY, v. n. to prey upon. A low word.

QUARRYMAN, s. one who digs in a quarry.

QUART, (quært) s. [Fr.] the fourth part of a gallon; a vessel which holds the fourth part of a gallon.

QUARTAN, s. [quartus, Lat.] in Medicine, an ague happening every fourth day.

QUARTATION, (quærtation) s. an operation wherein a fourth part of gold and three parts of silver are compounded.

QUARTER, (quærtier) s. [quartier, Fr.] a fourth part; a region of the skies, alluding to the seamen's card, or the four points in the horizon; a particular part of a town or country; the place where soldiers are lodged or stationed; a proper station; mercy, or pardon of life, in battle; a measure of eight bushels; a part of a shoe, which reaches from the forepart to the heel; a cleft or chink in a horse's hoof from top to bottom.

To QUARTER, (quærtier) v. a. to divide into four parts; to divide, or break by force; to station or lodge soldiers; to divide into regions; to feed or diet; to lodge. In Heraldry, to bear in quadripartite or multipartite division, on the same escutcheon with one's family arms.

QUARTERAGE, (quærtierage) s. a quarterly allowance.

QUARTERDAY, (quærtierday) s. one of the days by which the year is divided into four parts, and on which rents are paid.

QUARTERDECK, (quærtierdeck) that part of the deck of a ship immediately before the poop.

QUARTERLY, (quærtierly) a. containing a fourth part.

QUARTERLY, (quærtierly) ad. once in a quarter of a year.

QUARTERMASTER, (quærtiermaster) s. one who regulates the quarters or lodgings of soldiers.

QUARTERN, (quærtiern) s. a gill, or the fourth part of a pint.

QUARTERSTAFF, (quærtierstaff) s. a stout pole, formerly much used as a weapon, in game and earnest, so called from the manner of using it, one hand being placed on the middle, and the other half way between that and the end.

QUARTILE, (quærtile) s. in Astrology and old Astronomy, an aspect of the planets when they are three signs, or 90 degrees, distant from each other; and is marked thus, ☾.

QUARTO, (quærtio) s. the size of a book in which a sheet is doubled so as to contain four leaves.

QUARTZ, s. in Mineralogy, a very common kind of pebble-stone, which is chemically designated oxide of silicium; the commonest species is of a dark yellow or brown colour, but the amethyst, onyx, and other precious stones are merely varieties of it.

To QUASH, v. a. [quasso, Lat. quassen, Belg.] to crush; to squeeze; to subdue suddenly; to make void, or annul—v. n. to be shaken with a noise.

To QUASSATE, v. a. [quasso, Lat.] to shake or brandish.

QUASSATION, s. a brandishing or shaking.

QUASSIA, s. in Materia Medica, &c., a kind of wood imported from the W. Indies, &c., from which is extracted an intense and valuable bitter.

QUATERNARY, s. [quaternarius, Lat.] the number four.

QUATER-COUSINS, (quæterkuzens) s. fourth cousins, which is the last degree of kindred.

QUATERNION, (quæternio, Lat.) the number four.

QUATRIN, s. [quatrain, Fr.] a stanza consisting of four lines rhyming alternately.

QUAVER, s. in Music, a note, two of which make a crotchet.

To QUAVE, v. n. [quæven, Sax.] to shake the voice; to speak or sing with a tremulous voice; to shake; to vibrate.

QUAY, (key) s. [quai, Fr.] an artificial bank on a sea or river, whereon goods are landed.

QUEAN, (quæen) s. a worthless woman; a strumpet.

QUEASINESS, (quæziness) s. the sickness of a nauseated stomach.

QUEASY, (quæzy) a. [of uncertain etymology,] sick with nausea; squeamish; causing nausea; fastidious.

QUEBEC, the capital of Canada, in North America. It stands on the St. Lawrence, at the point where it is joined by the St. Charles; and is partly on the summit, and partly at the base of the rock, whose promontory is called Cape Diamond. It has some fine public buildings, and is well fortified. It has many institutions for educational and charitable purposes, and a flourishing library. It has a considerable trade, especially carried on by steamers. Pop. about 35,000. Lat. 46. 50. N. Long. 71. 16. W.

To QUECK, v. n. to shrink; to show pain.

QUEEN, [quæen, Sax.] a woman invested with sovereign power; the wife of a king; a card used in gaming, painted with the figure of a queen.

To QUEEN, v. n. to play the queen.

QUEEN OF THE MEADOWS, s. in Botany, a name of the meadow-sweet.

QUEENSBOROUGH, Kent. A town of the Isle of Sheppey, situated at the mouth of the river Medway. The chief employment of the inhabitants is oyster-dredging. It is 44 miles from London. Markets, Monday and Thursday. Pop. 634.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE'S SOUND, the name of the narrow strait which divides Vancouver's island from the mainland, in N. America.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE, the name of two establishments at Oxford and Cambridge, the former of which was founded in the 14th century, and the latter in the 15th. The chapel of the latter is a fine building, and handsomely ornamented.

QUEEN'S COUNTY, a county of Leinster, Ireland. It is surrounded by the counties of Tipperary, Kilkenny, Carlow, Kildare, and King's County. It is about 35 miles in length, by 30 miles broad. It is somewhat hilly; and is watered by the Barrow and some of its tributaries, and by some other streams, which run into the Shannon. Lake or Lough Annagh is in its boundary. Coals are found here, and it is not deficient in other mineral treasures. In spite of bogs, there is a considerable extent of ground devoted to agriculture; but it is not in an advanced condition. It is by no means one of the best situated of the Irish counties for manufactures and trade, and the poor are degraded in proportion. Maryborough is the chief town. Pop. 153,920. It sends 3 members to the imperial parliament.

QUEER, a. odd; strange; particular.
QUEERLY, ad. particularly; oddly.
QUEERNESS, a. oddness; particularity.
QUEST, s. [questus, Lat.] in Ornithology, a ring-dove, a kind of wild pigeon.

To QUELL, v. a. [evellan, Sax.] to subdue or put down.—v. n. to die.

QUELLER, a. one that crushes or subdues.
QUELQUECHOSE, (kelkshoze) s. [Fr.] a trifle; a kickshaw.
To QUENCH, v. a. [quenecen, Sax.] to extinguish fire, allay thirst, or still any passion or commotion.—v. n. to cool; to grow cool.

QUENCHABLE, a. capable of being extinguished, allayed, or appeased.

QUENCHER, s. one that quenches; an extinguisher.
QUENCHLESS, a. not to be extinguished.
QUERELE, s. [querela, from queror, Lat.] a complaint to a court.

QUERENT, s. [querens, Lat.] the complainant; the plaintiff.
QUERIMONIOUS, a. [querimonia, Lat.] querulous; complaining.

QUERIMONIOUSLY, ad. querulously; with complaint.
QUERIMONIOUSNESS, s. complaining temper.
QUERIST, s. [quero, Lat.] one that asks a question; an inquirer.

QUERN, s. [queorn, Sax.] a handmill.
QUERPO, s. [corrupted from cuervo, Span.] a close-bodied coat or waistcoat.

QUERULOUS, a. [querulus, Lat.] mourning; habitually complaining.

QUERULOUSLY, ad. in a complaining manner.
QUERULOUSNESS, s. habit or quality of complaining mournfully.

QUERY, s. [quare, Lat.] a question or inquiry which wants a solution.

To QUERY, v. a. to ask questions.

QUEST, s. [queste, Fr. from quero, Lat.] search; the act of seeking; an examination; search made by several persons in company; request.—[contracted from inquest,] an unimpaired jury.

To QUEST, v. n. [quester, Fr.] to go in search.

QUESTANT, s. seeker; endeavourer after.

QUESTION, s. [quero, Lat.] any thing proposed to be examined, answered, or debated; the subject of debate; a doubt; a trial; examination by torture.

To QUESTION, v. a. to examine one by questions; to doubt, or be uncertain of.—v. n. to inquire; to debate with a person by interrogatories.

QUESTIONABLE, a. liable to doubt or dispute.

QUESTIONABLENESS, s. the quality of being questionable.

QUESTIONARY, a. inquiring; asking questions.

QUESTIONER, s. an inquirer; an interrogator.

QUESTIONLESS, ad. certainly; without doubt.

QUESTMAN, QUESTMONGER, s. a starter of lawsuits, or prosecutions.

QUESTRIST, s. a seeker; a pursuer.

QUESTUARY, a. [questus, Lat.] studious of profit.

QUEVEDO, VILLEGAS, FRANCISCO DE, an eminent Spanish poet. He was educated at the court, and being of a very active turn of mind, directed his attention to theology, law, science, &c., in turns, with great avidity. A duel compelled him to fly from Spain, and he obtained at Naples the friendship of the viceroy, who employed him in most important state transactions.

His fall involved the poet, who, after imprisonment and vain efforts at redress, retired and devoted himself to literature. He was once more seized upon by the government, and was so broken by anxiety and illness arising from his confinement, that he died in 1645, aged 65 years. His poems are almost all of a satiric order, and he has been pronounced as, next to Cervantes, the most ingenious of all Spanish writers.

QUIB, s. a sarcasm; a bitter taunt.

QUIBBLE, s. [quidlibet, Lat.] a conceit founded on the mere sound of words; a pun.

To QUIBBLE, v. n. to pun, equivocate, or play on the mere sound of words.

QUIBBLER, s. an equivocator.

QUIBERON, in France, a small peninsula in the department of Morbihan, to the N. of Belleisle; also a small island called the point of Quiberon, separated from the peninsula by a channel: the sea next it is called the Bay of Quiberon.

QUICK, a. [ovic, Sax.] living, opposed to death; swift, opposed to slow; speedy, opposed to delay; active, nimble, or sprightly.

QUICKLY, ad. When we are diligent we lose no time; when expeditious, we defer not, but finish immediately; when quick, we work with activity. Idleness, delay, and slowness, are the three defects opposite to these good qualities.

QUICK, s. that part of the nails, or hoofs, where sensitiveness begins.

To QUICKEN, v. a. [eviccan, Sax.] to make alive; to hasten; to actuate or excite.—v. n. to become alive.

QUICKENER, s. one who makes alive; that which accelerates or actuates.

QUICKEN-TREE, s. in Botany, the mountain ash.

QUICKGRASS, s. in Botany, the dog-grass.

QUICKLIME, s. lime not quenched with water.

QUICKLY, ad. speedily; nimbly.

QUICKNESS, s. speed; swiftness; activity; sensibility; sharpness; pungency.

QUICKSAND, s. a moving sand; unsolid ground.

To QUICKSET, v. a. to set with living plants.

QUICKSET, s. a plant set to grow; applied to young hawthorn trees, planted for the purpose of forming hedgerows, most generally.

QUICKSIGHTED, (quicksited) a. seeing soon; having a sharp sight.

QUICKSIGHTEDNESS, s. sharpness of sight.

QUICKSILVER. See MERCURY.

QUICKSILVERED, a. overlaid with quicksilver.

QUIDDANY, s. [quidden, Teut.] confection of quinces made with sugar; marmalade.

QUIDDIT, s. [quidlibet, Lat. quedit, Fr.] a subtlety or equivocation.

QUIDDITY, s. [quidditas, low Lat.] a trifling nicety, or cavil; essence; that which is a proper answer to the question, Quid est? What is it?

QUIESCENCE, s. [quiesco, Lat.] a state of rest; repose.

QUIESCENT, a. at rest, not changing place; lying at repose.

QUIET, a. still from disturbance, motion, passion, or strife; smooth; not noisy.

QUÎET, s. [quies, Lat.] rest, repose, tranquillity, peace, security.

To QUIET, v. a. to calm, or make silent; to put to rest; to pacify; to still.

QUÎETER, s. the person or thing that quiets.

QUÎETISTS, in Church History, the name given in the 17th century, and since, to enthusiasts, in any communion, who have professed so to be rapt in the contemplation and love of the Divine excellencies, as to have lost all thought of self, and every thing. This ardour of love they held to be the only condition befitting a Christian, and the sum of all duties. Madame Guion was one of the most distinguished of them.

QUÎETLY, ad. without noise, disturbance, motion, or resistance.

QUÎETNESS, s. a state of mind free from the turbulence of passion.

QUÎET SOME, a. calm; still; undisturbed.

QUÎETUDE, s. [Fr.] repose or tranquillity.

QUILL, s. [caulis, Lat.] the hard strong feather of the wing, of which pens are made; a pen; the substitute for hair on porcupines; a reed on which weavers wind their threads; an instrument with which guitars are often played.

QUILLWORT, s. in Botany, a British plant, of which there are three varieties, the long-leaved, short-leaved, and flexible.

QUILT, s. [kulcht, Belg.] the outer covering of a bed.

To QUILT, v. a. to stitch one cloth over another with some soft substance between them.

QUINERY, a. [quinque, Lat.] consisting of five.

QUINCE, s. [quinden, Teut.] in Horticulture, a fruit somewhat resembling a pear.

To QUINCH, v. n. to stir; to flounce as in resentment or pain.

QUINCTILIAN, or MARCUS FABIVS QUINCTILIANUS, a celebrated Roman orator and critic, whose history is very uncertain, but who seems to have spent some part of his time in Spain, to have had several distinguished men as his pupils in rhetoric, and to have died in about 120 A. D., aged about 80 years. His great work, called Oratorical Institutes, is a complete system of rhetoric, and contains much curious and valuable information, beside the system. Other works are attributed to him, some of which are yet extant.

QUINCUNCIAL, (quincunshial) a. having the form of a quincunx.

QUINCUNX, s. [Lat.] a peculiar kind of order adopted in planting, &c. &c., thus, . . . . .

QUININE, s. in Medicine, the essential principle of cinchona, or Peruvian bark. It is a most invaluable tonic.

QUINQUAGESIMA, s. [Lat.] in the Ecclesiastical Calendar, a Sunday so called, because it is the fiftieth day before Easter, reckoned in whole numbers; Shrove Sunday.

QUINQUANGULAR, a. [quinque and angulus, Lat.] having five corners.

QUINQUARTICULAR, a. [quinque and articulus, Lat.] consisting of five articles.

QUINQUEFID, a. [quinque and fido, Lat.] cloven in five.

QUINQUENNIAL, a. [quinque and annus, Lat.] lasting five years; happening once in five years.

QUINSEY, s. [corrupted from quinancy,] in Medicine, an inflammatory swelling in the throat.

QUINT, s. [Fr.] a sequence of five; commonly applied to five cards, at the game of piquet.

QUINTAIN, s. [Fr.] a post with a turning top, used in old times by squires in learning to tilt, and by burghers and others for amusement.

QUINTAL, s. [Fr.] a hundred pounds' weight.

QUINTESSENCE, s. [quintus and essentia, Lat.] the extract of any thing which contains all its virtues.

QUINTESSENTIAL, (quintessenshial) a. consisting of quintessence.

QUINTIN, s. [quintain, Fr.] an upright post, on the top of which is a bar turning on a pin, having a piece of board at one end, and a heavy sand-bag at the other. It was used as an exercise preparatory to tilting; and some dexterity was requisite, to escape a blow from the sand-bag in passing after having struck the board.

QUINTUPLE, a. [quintuplus, from quinque, Lat.] five-fold.

QUINTUS CURTIUS, surnamed RUFUS, the author of a History of Alexander the Great, which is not quite perfect. He flourished during the 1st century, but nothing is known of his life.

QUIP, s. a sharp jest or taunt; a sarcasm; a jeer; a joke.

To QUIP, v. a. to rally with sarcasm; to taunt; to jeer.

QUIPU, s. in Zoology, a species of weasel which lives under ground in South America.

QUIRE, s. [cheur, Fr.] a body of singers; a choir; that part of a church where service is sung.—[cahier, Fr.] a bundle of paper consisting of 24 sheets.

To QUIRE, v. n. to sing in concert.

QUIRISTER, s. one who sings in concert at divine service; a chorister.

QUIRK, s. a quick stroke or sharp fit; a smart taunt; an artful distinction; subtlety; evasion.

To QUIT, v. a. part. pass. quit, preter. I have quit, or quitted; [quitter, Fr.] to discharge an obligation of duty; to make even; to set free or discharge from; to perform; to clear a debt; to abandon or forsake; to resign, or give up.

QUITCH-GRASS, s. [cevice, Sax.] in Botany, dog-grass; called also couch-grass.

QUITE, ad. [quite, Fr.] entirely; perfectly; completely.

QUITTO, capital of Ecuador, S. America. It is a regularly and well built town, seated in a valley in the Andes, at a considerable elevation above the level of the sea. It has some fine buildings, connected with the government, &c. Its trade and manufactures are chiefly in the precious metals of the neighbourhood. Pop. about 50,000. Lat. 0. 14. S. Long. 82. 0. W.

QUITTRENT, s. a small rent paid yearly in token of subjection to the lord of the manor; by which the payer is quit and free from all other rents or services.

QUITS, interj. a word used when any thing is repaid, or the opposite parties in a game are even.

QUITTANCE, s. [Fr.] a discharge from debt or obligation; a return or recompence; an acquittance.

QUITTER, s. a deliverer; the scoria or dross of tin.

QUITTERBONE, s. in Veterinary Surgery, a hard round swelling on the coronet, between the heel and the quarter of a horse's foot.

QUIVER, s. [couverir, Fr.] a case for arrows.

To QUIVER, v. n. to quake; to play to and fro with a trembling motion.

QUIVERED, a. furnished with, or placed in, a quiver.

QUODLIBET, s. [Lat.] a nice point, or subtlety; a quirk.

QUODLIBETARIAN, s. [quodlibet, Lat.] one who talks or disputes on any subject.

QUODLIBETICAL, a. not restrained to a particular subject.

QUOIF, Coif, s. [coiffe, Fr.] a cap; particularly applied to that worn by a sergeant-at-law.

QUOIFFURE, s. [coiffure, Fr.] head-dress.

QUOIN, Coir, s. [coin, Fr.] a corner; a wedge used in raising cannon, and for keeping things firm.

QUOITS, Coir, s. a game played by throwing any thing from one stated point to another.

To QUOIT, v. n. to play at quoits; to throw from place to place.—v. a. to throw.

QUONDAM, s. [Lat.] having been formerly. A ludicrous word.

QUORRA, the name of the great river of W. Africa, which rises in the highlands near the coast, and flows in a somewhat circular course, with an immense sweep, into the Bight of Biafra. It is above 2000 miles in length, and receives the waters of a great river that runs from the eastward, in about the middle of its course. It was formerly called the Niger, or Nigir. The greatest curiosity existed respecting it, and many expeditions were fitted out to explore it, and many lives lost, till the Landers traced it from the point where Park perished to the ocean. See PARK, LEDYARD, LANDER, CLAPPERTON, DENHAM, &c.

QUORUM, s. [from the first word in the commission,] a bench of justices; one in a commission without whom the rest cannot act.

QUOTA, s. [quotus, Lat.] a share or proportion.

QUOTATION, s. the act of producing the passages of an author, either to illustrate or confirm; a passage produced from some author; citation.

To QUOTE, v. a. [quoter, Fr.] to cite a passage from an author.

QUOTER, s. he that quotes; a citer.

QUOTH, v. imperf. [eothon, Sax.] he says or said. It is sometimes applied to the first person, as quoth I; but never properly to the second.

QUOTIDIAN, a. [quotus and dies, Lat.] happening every day; daily.

QUOTIDIAN, s. in Medicine, a fever that returns every day.

QUOTIENT, (quoshient) s. [Fr. from quoties, Lat.] in Arithmetic, the number which shows how often a divisor is contained in a dividend.

QUO-WARRANTO, s. is a writ which lies against a person or corporation that usurps any franchise or liberty against the king, as to have a fair, market, or the like, in order to oblige the usurper to show by what right or title he holds or claims such franchise.

R IS the seventeenth letter of the alphabet, and is one the liquids. Its sound is uniform. In words derived from the Greek it is followed by an h, as in rhapsody, &c. Used as a numeral, R anciently stood for 80, and dashed thus, rr, for 80,000; but the Greek  $\rho$  signified 100. In the prescriptions of physicians, R stands for recipe, or take.

To RA'BATE, v. n. [rabattre, Fr.] in falconry, to recover a hawk to the first again.

To RA'BRET, v. a. [rabatre, or raboter, Fr.] to cut channels in the edges of boards, so as to make them fit each other.

RA'BRET, s. a joint made by rabbeting.

RA'BBI, RA'BIN, s. [Heb.] a doctor or teacher among the Jews.

RA'BBIT, s. [robbe, robbekin, Belg.] a small animal resembling the hare, that burrows in warrens, and is kept for its flesh and fur. There are many varieties of tame rabbits, as is well-known to most school-boys.

RA'BBLE, s. [rabula, Lat.] a tumultuous crowd of ungenteel people.

RA'BELAIS, FRANÇOIS, the celebrated French humourist, and held to be one of the boldest and deepest thinkers of his age. He was a monk; and having some skill as a physician, was introduced to the notice of Francis I. He went to Rome with the Cardinal de Bellay, and died, in a cure he received after his return, in 1553, aged 70 years. The work by which his name is immortalized, is entitled the Livres Heroic Deeds, and Sayings of Gargantua and Pantagruel, in which he has, under cover of a satire on the affairs and manners of his days, which is not always free from coarseness, disclosed whole mines of knowledge of mankind, and allegorized the profoundest wisdom.

RA'BID, a. [rabies, Lat.] fierce or furious; bad.

RA'BINET, s. a small piece of ordnance, between a falconet and a base.

RACCOON, s. See RACCOON.

RACE, s. [Fr.] a family ascending or descending; a generation; a particular breed.—[gray, Span.] a single sprig, applied to root-ringer; a particular strength or taste, applied to wine.—[ras, Isl.] a contest respecting swiftness, on foot, in boats, or horseback.

RACEHORSE, s. a horse bred to run against others.

RACEMATION, s. [racemus, Lat.] a cluster, like that of grapes.

RACEMIFEROUS, a. [racemus and fero, Lat.] bearing clusters.

RACER, s. one who runs to outstrip another; a racehorse.

RACINE, JEAN, one of the great French dramatic poets. He was well born, and was educated at Port Royal, during the season of its greatest literary celebrity, and at Paris. Being introduced to the literary world, and to the court at the same time, by some verses written on the marriage of the Grand Monarque, he devoted himself to those pursuits which have made his name so famous. He acted under the advice of Boileau, who was sincerely attached to him, and produced those great tragedies, which are still read and acted with admiration. He even competed successfully with Corneille. Louis appointed him and his friend historiographers royal; he was brought more closely into connexion with the court, and enjoyed the especial favour of Madame de Maintenon. For her he wrote his sacred dramas; and at her suggestion, also, a report on the condition of the poor in consequence of the wars, and the prodigality of the court, which falling into the king's hands, provoked a sarcastic remark, that, working on the enfeebled frame of the tender Racine, caused his death in 1699, aged 59 years. His Athalie, and Phèdre, are his great dramas; and Esther is one that commends the man as well as the poet to its readers. He was one whose sensibility was after the order of Sterne's, and whose vanity made him restless to enjoy his immortality before he died. As a father he appears in the most amiable light.

RACINESS, s. the quality of being racy or strong-tasted.

RACK, [racken, Belg.] an engine used in torturing; torture or extreme pain; any instrument which extends; a distaff; a wooden grate in which hay is placed for immediate use; a spirituous liquor (see ARACK); clouds driven by the wind, or imaginary figures in those clouds; a neck of mutton cut for the table.

To RACK, v. n. to stream like clouds driven before the wind.—v. a. to torment, harass, oppress by exaction; to extend; to draw off from the lees.

RA'CKET, s. a clattering noise; clamouring or noisy confused talking.—[raquette, Fr.] the instrument with which a ball is struck.

RACKING, s. a pace of a horse, like an amble, excepting that its time is swifter, and its tread shorter.

RACKOON, s. in Zoology, a North American animal which bears some resemblance to the badger. Its head is shaped somewhat like that of a fox, which it also resembles in its cunning.

RA'CK-RENT, s. rent raised to the uttermost.

RA'CY, a. [perhaps from rays, Span.] strong-tasted; tasting of the soil.

RAD, the old pret. of To READ.

RAD, RED, RON, [Sax.] a word used in composition, signifying counsel; as Conrad, powerful or skilful in counsel; Ethelred, a noble counsellor; Rodbert, eminent for counsel.

RA'DCLIFFE, DR. JOHN, an eminent physician, who having studied at Oxford, settled in London, and soon rose to the highest pitch of reputation for skill; which was aided, no doubt, by his eccentric and uncouth manners. He was attached to the court of James II. and of Anne; but this last employment was for the most part secret. He died in 1714, aged 64 years. His best service to the world was his bequest to the University of Oxford; from which the famous medical library, called the Radcliffe Library, has proceeded. His greediness for money during his life, made this return; good, indeed, but insufficient.

RA'DCLIFFE, MRS. ANNE, a famous novelist of the last and present centuries; who invented the hysterical romance, so profoundly admired by certain classes. The Mysteries of Udolpho produced endless shoals of such material horrors, with which country circulating libraries abound; and which the weekly newspaper novelists of this day reprint or imitate. She wrote other tales of like character; and a small volume of Travels, after a visit to Germany. She died in 1823, aged 59 years.

RA'DDOCK, RU'DOCK, s. in Ornithology, a name of the redbreast.

RA'DIANCE, RA'DIANCY, s. [radius, Lat.] a sparkling lustre; the quality of darting rays; glittering; splendour.

RA'DIANT, a. shining; brightly sparkling; emitting rays.

To RA'DIATE, v. a. [radio, Lat.] to dart rays; to sparkle; to shine.

RA'DIATE, a. in Botany, applied to those compound flowers in which the florets of the centre differ in form from those in the circumference; thus the daisy and sunflower are radiate flowers, because the florets in the centre are all tubular, but those in the circumference narrow or strap-shaped. It is also applied to the summits or upper part of the pistilla or pointals, when they are placed in a circle, as in the poppy.

RADIATED, a. adorned with rays.

RADIATION, s. a beamy lustre; emission every way from the centre. In Natural Philosophy, applied to the process by which a heated body is cooled to an average temperature by the dispersion of its superfluous caloric through the air.

RADICAL, a. [radix, Lat.] original; implanted by nature; serving to origination. In Politics, it is applied to a scheme of reform which should reach to the foundations of the present system. The Radical Reformers of the last generation are replaced by the Chartists in this.

RADICALS, in Chemistry, the elements of bodies. In Language, the letters which are used for the roots or fundamental and elementary forms of words.

RADICALITY, s. origination.

RADICALLY, ad. originally; primitively.

RADICALNESS, s. the state of being radical.

To RADICATE, v. a. to root; to plant firmly and deeply.

RADICATION, s. [Fr.] the act of fixing deep.

RA'DICLE, s. [radicule, Fr.] in Botany, that part of the seed of a plant which becomes the root.

RADISH, s. [radix, Sax.] in Horticulture, a small esculent root.

RA'DIUS, s. [Lat.] the semidiameter of a circle. In Anatomy, a long slender bone of the arm descending with the ulna, from the elbow to the wrist. In Optics, a straight line or ray of light. In Mechanics, the spoke of a wheel.

RA'DNOR, NEW, Radnorshire, S. Wales. It was formerly the county town. It is seated near the spring-head of the river Somerghil, or Hendwell, (which rises in the Hendwell pool, and empties itself into the Lug a little below Presteigne,) 162 miles from London Market, Thursday. The principal fair, on St. Luke's Day, O. S. Pop. 478. Pop. of Old Radnor, which lies next it, partly in Herefordshire, 1503.

RA'DNORSHIRE, a county of S. Wales, 25 miles in length, and 22 in breadth; bounded by Shropshire, Herefordshire, Cardiganshire, Brecknockshire, and Montgomeryshire. It is divided into 6 hundreds, which contain 4 market towns, and 52 parishes. The E. and S. parts of this county are tolerably level, and productive of corn; the other parts are rude and mountainous, devoted chiefly to the rearing of horned cattle, sheep, and goats. Some of the hills are nearly 1700 feet high. Lime and building-stone are its chief mineral products. Some cider is made here. The N. W. angle is an absolute desert, and almost impassable. There are a few manufacturing processes carried on. Presteign is its chief town. Pop. 25,356. It sends 2 members to parliament.

RAEBURN, SIR HENRY, an eminent portrait painter of the former part of this century, who acquired his skill without teacher or model, and afterwards matured it by the study of the great works of art in Italy. He received such honours as were appropriate to his art, and was appointed painter to the king, for Scotland. He died in 1823, aged 67 years.

To RAFF, v. a. to sweep, luddle, or take in a confused manner. To RAFFLE, v. n. [raffler, Fr.] to cast dice for a prize.

RAFFLE, s. the determination of a person's right to a prize by casting dice.

RAFFLES, SIR THOMAS STAMFORD, an eminent public functionary in the E. Indies. He began as a clerk in the India House, London, and was sent out as secretary to Pulo Penang, from which station he rose to be governor of Java. Afterwards he was head of the factory at Bencoolen, Sumatra; and in both stations of high trust effected many valuable reforms. He also established the settlement at Singapore, and founded the Anglo-Chinese college there. On his return to Europe, he lost, by the burning of the vessel, almost all his invaluable collections and papers, escaping with difficulty with his life. He died in 1826, aged 45 years.

RAFT, s. [probably from ratia, Lat.] a frame or float to carry goods or persons on water, made by laying or tying pieces of timber together.

RAFT, part. pass. of To REAVE or RAFF: torn; rent.

RAFTER, s. [rafter, Sax.] one of the pieces of timber which compose the roof of a building.

RAFTERED, a. built with rafters.

RAG, s. [perhaps from bracode, Sax.] a piece of cloth torn from the rest; any thing rent or tattered; worn-out clothes; a tatter.

RAGAMUFFIN, s. a person clothed in rags; a mean, paltry, sorry fellow.

RAGE, s. [Fr.] violent anger or fury; vehemence or increase of pain; outrageous passion.

To RAGE, v. n. to be hurried away by excessive anger; to exercise fury; to act with mad or ungoverned fury.

RAGEFUL, a. violent; furious.

RAGGED, (rag-ed) c. rent into tatters; uneven; consisting of parts almost disunited; dressed in tatters; rugged; not smooth.

RAGGEDNESS, (rag-edness) s. state of being dressed in tatters, or ragged.

RAGINGLY, ad. with vehement fury.

RAGMAN, s. one who deals in rags.

RAGOUT, (ragoo) s. [Fr.] meat stewed and highly seasoned.

RAGSTONE, s. in Mineralogy, a stone so named from its breaking in a ragged or irregular manner. The stone on which the edge of a tool new-ground is smoothed.

RAGWORT, s. in Botany, a plant of which there are several species; a kind of groundsel.

RAGUSA, a town of Dalmatia, Austria. It is about 2 miles in circumference, is pretty well built, and has an inaccessible mountain on the land side, and on the side of the sea a strong fort. This place is distinguished by the fineness of its manufactures; and the citizens are all traders. The harbour is good, and many branches of manufacture, &c. connected with navigation are busily carried on. Nevertheless, it is greatly fallen in its condition and importance. Pop. under 10,000. Lat. 42. 58. N. Long. 18. 10. E.

RAJAH, s. a title, denoting king, given in Hindustan, or the empire of the Mogul, to princes descended from those that ruled there before the conquest of the Moguls, who exercise sovereignty, but as tributaries to the Great Mogul formerly, and now to the British.

RAIKES, ROBERT, the founder of Sunday-schools, was a printer of Gloucester, who, having realized considerable property, devoted it, with all his influence and time, to benevolent and religious works. Of his principal institution we shall speak separately. He died in 1811, aged 76 years. See SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

RAIL, s. [riepel, Teut.] a cross beam fixed at the ends in two upright posts; a series of posts connected by beams, by which any thing is enclosed, differing from a pale, because it does not rise so high above the cross beam; an iron bar used in railroads. In Ornithology, a kind of bird, several species of which live in England.

To RAIL, v. a. to enclose with rails; to range in a line.—v. n. [railler, Fr.] to speak to or about with reproachful terms.

RAILER, s. one who insults or defames by opprobrious language.

RAILLERY, s. [raillerie, Fr.] light and jocose satire.

RAILROAD, RAILWAY, s. the name of roads along which iron bars, or rails, with flat surfaces, are placed for the wheels of vehicles used on them to run upon, the wheels being made with a flange, to prevent them from slipping off the rails. These roads are now constructed on a scale with which only the old Roman roads can be compared, and with all the appliances of modern engineering skill;—valleys being filled up and crossed on embankments or viaducts; hills trenched by cuttings, or pierced by tunnels; gentle inclinations of great length substituted for the natural surface; and deviations from the direct line only made to avoid idle expense, or to secure the traffic of important places. Steam locomotives alone are used, electric telegraphs are laid down, and every day new devices adopted to secure safety and rapidity of transit for passengers and goods. No application of steam-power can vie with this in its profound and extensive influence on mankind. The most remote provinces are brought within a few hours' distance of the metropolis; new towns are springing up around the greater stations on the various lines; the peculiar privilege of the wealthy, rapid and comfortable travelling, is within the reach of all classes; nations are united by safer bonds than royal treaties; and the most obstinate in adhering to the dead past, are hurried along by the general movement. But it must also be observed, that, perhaps, since the infamous South-Sea Bubble, few more gigantic or more baseless speculations have turned the heads of the sober and prudent middle-classes of England, than those respecting railways. In proof of which, the supplement to the Times newspaper of the 17th of Nov. 1845, which contained a tabular statement compiled by Mr. Spaekman, who was qualified by his position to speak authoritatively on this question, may be referred to. It showed that the capital then invested in completed railways in the United Kingdom amounted to £70,680,877; that in process of expenditure upon railways in progress was £67,359,325; and that required for the construction of 620 lines which were provisionally registered, and which were about to submit their plans, &c. to the government, with a view to obtain acts in the ensuing session of parliament, was the enormous sum of £563,203,000; whilst in addition to these projects, there were 643 companies which had not registered their prospectuses, and the capital of which could not be estimated. How far such speculations entered into the causes of the panic of 1847, it is impossible to say; but that ruin has followed them in hundreds of cases, where fortunes were gotten in single instances, is most notorious.

RAILWAYS. The first Railway Bill in England was obtained in 1801; and in 1804, a locomotive steam-engine was employed on the railroad at Merthyr Tydfil, in S. Wales. Most of the lines then were mere tram-roads, or plate-railways, and were intended only for the readier transport of heavy goods; while horse-power alone was, except in very few instances, employed. On the construction of the Liverpool and Manchester railway, and after its opening in 1830, a fresh spirit seemed to animate this branch of applied science and capital. Improvements in the engines, in the rails, in the modes of laying them, indeed in every part of these prodigious undertakings, amongst which the various codes of signals, and the electric telegraph, especially, are to be noted. There are in Great Britain and Ireland, at the present time, (1848,) nearly 3000 miles of railway in active use; by which all the important cities, towns, and ports are brought into direct communication with each other, and with the metropolis, in this island, though this is not the case with Ireland. The progress of most of those schemes which obtained the royal assent during the last two or three years, is completely stopped. The longest line in which the broad gauge is adopted, is the Great Western railway; in this, the rails are laid 7 feet apart; on almost all the others, they are laid 5 feet, or less, apart. On one line, that between Croydon and Epsom, about 18 miles long, the atmospheric principle was tried, but it is now worked by locomotive engines. On the less important lines, also, single lines of rails are used, for economy. By this vast network of iron roads, intersecting the whole country, the proposal of a gentleman named Thomas Gray, first made in 1820, for a General Iron Railway, to supersede all other means of public conveyance for passengers and goods, including canals and coasting traders, is, though without the unity that his plan was characterized by, in all material points secured, and will, in process of time, doubtless, be wholly secured; for as respects the carriage of heavy goods, the objections made to canals, by an intelligent correspondent of the Derby Mercury in 1824, are unanswerable: he says, "Canals take the richest land, are circuitous by following the valleys, and the carriage from them is ascending;" which objections do not in the least apply to railways. In the United States, the total length of the railroads which were in operation in 1843, exceeded 5000 miles. The most complete system of railways, and the most perfect in all details of arrangement for the safety and convenience of passengers, &c., is that adopted in Belgium, where the whole is in the hands of the government. In France, Germany, Italy, and even in Russia, these undertakings are commenced with more or less vigour and success. And the same may be observed of Egypt, and of several of the British colonies. The customary or average speed of passenger-trains, on all these roads, is about 25 miles per hour; mail-trains and expresses travel much faster; and on some extraordinary occasions, the rate of 60 miles per hour has been maintained with complete safety. In respect of this most momentous subject, the safety of the passengers, it ought to be observed, that the improved structure of the carriages and the rails, the simplification of the codes of signals, the extension of the telegraphs, and the greater care of all the officers on the lines, awakened by the prosecution of some of them, has gone far towards reducing the chances of accidents to those occasions which no human foresight, or even skill, can prevent. See TELEGRAPH.

RAIMBACH, ABRAHAM, an eminent engraver of this country, who is best known from his copies of many of Sir David Wilkie's most famous paintings. He was a member of the Royal Academy, and at one time practised as a miniature painter. He also engraved the illustrations to several works that appeared in the beginning of this century. He died in 1843, aged 67 years.

RAIMENT, s. [for arraiment, from array.] clothes, or dress.

RAIMONDI, MARC ANTONIO, a celebrated engraver of Italy, in the 16th century. He settled at Rome, where he engraved for Raphael, and also for Pietro Aretino, which last prints procured his imprisonment by the pope. His works are yet the admiration of those who are able to judge on such subjects. He died in about 1540, aged about 50 years.

To RAIN, v. a. and impers. [veniam, Sax.] to fall in drops from the clouds; to fall like rain.—v. a. to pour down as rain.

RAIN, s. [ren, Sax.] water fallen from the clouds in drops. When the vapour of which clouds are composed becomes so condensed that it is too heavy for the air to support it, it falls down in rain, hail, or snow.

RAINBOW, (rainbo) s. an optical phenomenon, occurring whenever the sun shines on a falling shower of rain; it consists of the segments of two concentric circles, in which the tints of the solar spectrum are arranged contrarily, and often repeated several times. This beautiful meteor is always seen opposite to the sun, and is occasioned by the combined refraction and reflection of its rays in the falling drops. Lunar rainbows are similar phenomena occasioned by the moon's rays; they are very faint, and not of frequent observation.

RAINDEER, REINDEER, s. [hranas, Sax.] a deer used in the northern countries for drawing sledges.

RAINGAUGE, s. in Meteorology, an instrument by which the quantity of rain that falls is measured.

RAININESS, s. the state of being showery.

RAINY, a. showery; wet.

To RAISE, (raise) v. n. [reiser, Dan. resa, Swed.] to lift or heave from the ground; to set a thing upright; to increase in current value; to erect or build; to prefer or exalt; to excite, rouse, or stir up; to bring into being; to call into view, applied to spirits; to utter loudly, applied to the voice; to bring from death to life; to collect, applied to money; to give rise to.

RAISER, (raiser) s. he that raises.

RAISIN, (raisin) s. [Fr.] in Commerce, &c., the fruit of the vine, dried in the sun, or in an oven.

RAKE, s. [racche, Belg. race, Sax.] an instrument with teeth, used in dividing ground, or grubbing up weeds.—[racaille, Fr.] a loose, disorderly, vicious, gay, and thoughtless person.

To RAKE, v. a. to scrape together or clear with a rake; to draw together by violence or extortion; to scour or search with vehement desire; to heap together and cover.—v. n. to search; to grope; to pass with violence.

RA'KER, s. one that rakes.

RA'KEHELL, s. a wild, vicious, or debauched person.

RA'KING, a ship in the act of cannonading another on the stern or head, so that the balls shall scour the whole length of her decks. This is frequently called raking fore and aft, being the same with what is called enfilading by engineers.

RA'KISH, a. like a rake; loose, lewd, dissolute.

RA'LEIGH, SIR WALTER, a distinguished public character of the reigns of Elizabeth and James I. He was of gentle birth, and studied at Oxford; after which, as was almost the fashion of the day, he served in the Protestant armies in France and the Low Countries, against the Romanists. He next joined in an attempt to colonize N. America, and after his return served in Ireland. He was next so happy as to fall into favour with the hero queen, and became one of the most assiduous and distinguished of her courtiers. After some years, he engaged in a second attempt at settling or planting a colony in N. America, and the result of it is patent to this day in the State of Virginia. In the Spanish invasion, and the reprisals made by Elizabeth, Raleigh took part, and after a deserved interruption of the royal favour, he embarked on that insane expedition which eventually won for England the province of Guiana. He took part, after the manner of the other courtiers, in the intrigues that disgrace the latter part of Elizabeth's reign, and obtained a reputation that led to his miserable fall. He was implicated in the plots that welcomed the Scottish king to the English throne, and was imprisoned for it, and at length, after 13 years, being released, he renewed his search for the vainly dreamt of land of gold, in Guiana, returned unsuccessful, and was beheaded to please the king of Spain, in 1618, aged 65 years. His History of the World is one of the best works of that kind which had then appeared, and abounds in passages of singular eloquence and beauty.

To RA'LLY, v. a. [raillier, Fr.] to reduce disordered forces to order; to treat with satirical mirth, or reproach with good humour; to banter.—v. n. to come together in a hurry; to come again into order; to exercise satirical merriment.

RAM, s. [Sax.] in Farming, a male sheep. An instrument with an iron head, formerly used in battering walls. In Astronomy, the first sign of the zodiac, which the sun enters at the time of the vernal equinox.

To RAM, v. a. to drive with violence, alluding to the motion of a battering-ram; to fill with any thing driven hard together.

RAMADAN, s. [Arab.] amongst Mohammedans, a great annual fast.

To RA'MBLE, v. n. [perhaps from ramb, Swed.] to wander; to rove, or go about without any fixed resolution or determined place.

RA'MBLE, a. a wandering, irregular excursion.

RA'MBLER, s. a rover; a wanderer.

RAMBOOZE, RA'MBOUSE, s. a drink made of wine, ale, eggs, and sugar, in the winter; but of wine, milk, sugar, and rose-water, in the summer.

RA'MEkin, RA'MEQUINS, s. [Fr.] small slices of bread covered with cheese and eggs.

RA'MENTS, s. [ramentum, Lat.] scrapings; shavings.

RAMIFICATION, s. [Fr. from ramus and facio, Lat.] division or separation into branches; the act of branching out; small branches.

To RA'MIFY, v. a. [ramifier, Fr.] to separate into branches.—v. n. to be parted into branches.

RA'MMER, s. an instrument by which any thing is driven hard; the stick with which a charge is forced into a gun.

RA'MMISH, RA'MISH, a. rank or strong-scented.

RAMMOHUN ROY, a distinguished Hindu, of the Brahminical caste, and a rajah; who having received a learned education, and being struck with the diversities of religious faith and doctrines, even amongst the members of his own caste, was led to a careful investigation of the evidences and character of these conflicting creeds, and having travelled to increase his information respecting them, ended by renouncing Hinduism, and adopting the sacred Scriptures as the basis of his belief. He wrote several works in opposition to the practices of the Hindus, and in defence of his own opinions; and experienced abundance of opposition and persecution. He was sent to England on a diplomatic errand, by the king of Delhi; and received great attention from all classes in England, with whom he visited. He died here in 1833, aged about 58 years. He is claimed by the Unitarians, as one of their views; and undoubtedly he approached more nearly in his sentiments to them, than to those of other bodies of religionists deriving their doctrines from the Bible.

RAMMUS, a. [rammus, Lat.] branchy; consisting of branches.

TO RAMP, v. n. [rampare, Fr. rampare, Ital. rempen, Sax.] to leap with violence; to climb, applied to plants.

RAMP, s. a leap or spring.

RAMPANCY, s. prevalence; exuberance.

RAMPANT, a. [Fr.] prevailing, or breaking through restraint; frisky, rompish. In Heraldry, reared up as if for combat.

RAMPART, RAMPRE, s. [rampart, Fr.] a massy bank of earth, cannon-proof, raised about the body of a place, and formed in bastions, &c.; the wall round fortified places.

RAMPION, s. [rampunculua, Lat.] in Botany, a plant, whose blossoms are purple, and grow in spikes. It is found in dry pastures, and on the downs in Sussex.

RAMSAY, ALLAN, an eminent Scottish poet of the last century. Dislike for his first trade, (that of wig-maker and dresser), led him to become a bookseller; and this incited him to literary activity. He published several volumes of original poetry, and edited some of the songs and poems of earlier bards; but it is by his Gentle Shepherd, one of the pieces of his last collection, that his name is preserved. He became by his poetic name, his trade, and his circumstances, a kind of centre for all the wits and writers of the northern metropolis; and died in 1758, aged 73 years.

RAMSAY, THE CHEVALIER ANDREW MICHAEL, a writer of the last century; who having been educated at Edinburgh, was afterwards received to the Roman Church, and engaged as tutor to several distinguished families of the French nobility, and to the old Pretender, who usually was called the Chevalier St. George. He returned to Scotland; and died in 1743, aged 57 years.

RAMSAY, DAVID, an American writer and physician, who took an active part in the American Revolution, as a legislator and member of congress, and added to the literature of his country several valuable works; such as Universal History, in 12 vols.; the History of the American Revolution; the Life of Washington, &c. He died in 1815, aged 60 years, from the effect of a pistol shot, fired at him by a maniac.

RAMSEY, Huntingdonshire. It was formerly famous for its wealthy abbey, and hence called Ramsey the Rich. Part of the gate-house yet remains, with a neglected statue of Ailwin, the founder. It is seated in the fens, among rich ground, proper for tillage and pasture, and near the meres of Ramsey and Whitlesey, which abound with fowl, and excellent pikes and eels. It is 68 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3680.

RAMSEY, an island of S. Wales, on the coast of Pembroke-shire, about 2 miles in length, and a mile and a half broad. Near it are several small ones, known by the name of the Bishop and his Clerks.

RAMSEY, a town on the N. E. coast of the Isle of Man, with a spacious haven, in which the largest ships may ride at anchor, with safety from all winds but the N. E., and then they need not be engaged. Lat. 54. 18. N. Long. 4. 20. W.

RAMSGATE, Kent. It is a sea-port of the Isle of Thanet, where two very substantial stone piers have been built for the security of the harbour, which is now capable of receiving 200 sail of ships. Ramsgate has some trade; but is much better known as a bathing-place. It is 72 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 10,900.

RAMSONS, s. in Botany, an herb allied to the onion.

RAMUS, PETER, a celebrated French scholar and philosopher, who was born in very humble life, and obtained his learning by the devotion of his leisure hours, when a servant in the college of Navarre. He opposed the blind deference every where paid to the authority of Aristotle, and experienced persecution in consequence, yet he was made professor of rhetoric and philosophy by the king. Having renounced Romanism, he fled from Paris, and returning at the treacherous peace made by Catherine de Medici, fell in the St. Bartholomew, in 1572, aged 57 years. His works are very numerous, and amongst his followers his authority was as great as that of Aristotle amongst others.

RAN, the preter. of TO RUN.

TO RANCH, v. a. [corrupted from wrench,] to sprain; to injure by a violent twist.

RAN/CID, a. [raeco, Lat.] strong-scented; musty.

RAN/CIDNESS, RAN/CIDITY, s. strong scent, as of old oil; mustiness.

RAN/COROUS, a. spiteful in the highest degree.

RAN/COROUSLY, ad. in a malignant manner.

RAN/COUR, s. [rancoeur, old Fr.] hatred continued; inveterate malignity.

RAND, s. [rand, Belg.] a border, or seam.

RAN/DOM, s. want of direction, rule, or method; chance; hazard; roving motion.

RAN/DOM, a. done by chance or without design; moving without direction.

RAN/FORCE, s. the ring of a gun next the touch-hole.

RANG, preter. of TO RISE.

TO RANGE, v. a. [ranger, Fr.] to place in order or rank; to rove over—v. n. to rove at large; to be placed in order.

RANGE, s. [rangée, Fr.] a rank, or any thing placed in a line; a class or order; an excursion; room for excursion; compass taken in by any thing excursive, extended, or placed in order; the step of a ladder; a kitchen stove; a beam of a coach.

RAN/GER, s. one that roves about; a dog that beats the ground; an officer that looks after the game of a forest.

RANGOON, a great port of the Burmese empire. It stands on the Irrawaddy, and is irregularly and unsubstantially built. Ship-building is carried on here to some extent, and it is the seat of most of the commerce of the empire. Near it is Pagoda, to which pilgrimages are made. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 16. 47. N. Long. 96. 15. E.

RANK, a. [ranc, Sax.] strong; growing too fast; fruitful; bearing strong plants.—[rancaidus, Lat.] strong-scented; gross; coarse.

RANK, s. [rang, Fr.] a line of men placed abreast; a row; a class, or order; degree of dignity; high place.

TO RANK, v. a. [ranger, Fr.] to place abreast; to range or include in any particular class; to dispose in a regular manner.—v. n. to be ranged; to be placed.

TO RAN/KLE, r. n. to fester, or breed corruption. To be inflamed, applied both to the body and mind.

RAN/KLY, ad. in a coarse or gross manner.

RAN/KNESS, s. exuberance; superfluity of growth.

RAN/KY, s. [mus araneus, Lat.] in Zoology, the shrewmouse.

TO RAN/SACK, v. a. [ran, Sax. and saka, Swed.] to plunder or ravage; to search narrowly; to violate.

RAN/SOM, s. [ranson, Fr.] the price paid for redemption of a prisoner.

TO RAN/SOM, v. n. [ransonner, Fr.] to free from punishment or captivity by money.

RAN/SOMLESS, a. free from ransom.

RAN/SOMER, s. one who redeems.

TO RANT, v. n. [randen, Belg.] to make use of pompous or high-sounding language without any proportionable dignity of thought.

RANT, s. high-sounding language without proportionable dignity of thought.

RAN/TER, s. a ranting fellow.

RAN/TIPOLE, s. a wild, immodest young woman.

TO RAN/TIPOLE, v. n. to run about wildly. Both these words are low.

RAN/ULA, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, a soft swelling of the salivary glands, under the tongue; occasioned by congestion, and occasionally becoming a large tumour.

RAN/UICULUS, s. [Lat.] in Botany, a well-known genus of flowers, called likewise crowfoot.

To RAP, v. n. [hrappan, Sax.] to strike with a smart and quick blow.—v. a. to affect with rapture; to snatch away. To rap and rend, is to seize by violence.

RAP, s. a quick smart blow.

RAPACIOUS, (rapaciousus) a. [rapace, Fr. rapax, Lat.] given to plunder; seizing by violence; ravenous; greedy.

RAPACIOUSLY, (rapaciously) ad. by rapine; by violent robbery; ravenously; greedily.

RAPACIOUSNESS, (rapaciousness) s. the quality of being rapacious.

RAPACITY, s. [rapacitas, from rapio, Lat.] the act of seizing by violence; the exercise of plunder; ravenousness.

RAPE, s. [rapit, Fr. rapuit, Lat.] the violent forcing of a woman. In Botany, the wild navel; a sort of cabbage. A division of a country, sometimes meaning the same as a hundred, and at other times signifying a division consisting of several hundreds. The stalks of the clusters of grapes when dried, and used in making of vinegar.

RAPIHAEL SANZIO, or D' URBINO, (correctly RAFFAELLO,) one of the greatest painters of Italy, and of the world. His father was a painter, and he studied under Perugino, and at Florence, using the works of Michael Angelo, Leonardo da Vinci, Fra Bartolomeo, &c. He was patronized by Julius II. and Leo X., and under their encouragement, at Rome, produced his most celebrated pictures. He excelled also as an architect, and the church of St. Peter's at Rome is almost wholly from his design. He also constructed several other fine buildings. As a sculptor he might have attained a high rank. He died in 1520, aged but 37 years, but having achieved an immortal name. The Caricatures of Hampton Court, are his sketches of designs for tapestry in the Sistine Chapel at Rome; and England has to thank her Puritan king, Cromwell, for the possession of them. Some of his pictures are almost as well known as these, in England, by the numerous engravings of them. But no engravings can convey any notion of the colouring and effect of these masterpieces of art.

RAPHOE, an Irish bishopric in connexion with Derry. The city is in Donegal, a county of Ulster, where cathedral is a very plain building. The trade is pretty good. It is 138 miles from Dublin. Pop. 1362.

RAPID, a. [rapide, Fr. rapidus, Lat.] quick; swift; impetuous.

RAPIDITY, s. [rapidus, Lat.] swiftness of motion; celerity.

RAPIDLY, ad. swiftly; quickly.

RAPIDNESS, s. swiftness; celerity.

RAPIER, s. [rapiere, Fr.] a small sword used only in thrusting; the small sword.

RAPIER-FISH, s. in Natural History, the swordfish.

RAPIN DE THOYRAS, PAUL, an English historian, but a native of France, expelled by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes to Holland, whence he came to this country with the Prince of Orange. He wrote his great History of England at Wesel in the duchy of Cleves, where he died in 1725, aged 64 years. His work reached only to the death of Charles I., but it was continued by other writers, and for a long time was a work of the first authority.

RAPINE, s. [rapine, Lat.] the act of taking away the goods of another by violence.

RAPPER, s. one that strikes.

RAFT, s. a trance; an ecstasy.

RAPTURE, s. [rapio, Lat.] ecstasy; violence of a pleasing passion; uncommon heat of imagination; rapidity; haste.

RAPUROSUS, a. ecstatic; transporting.

RARE, a. [rare, Fr. rarus, Lat.] uncommon, scarce; excellent; thin, opposed to dense; thinly scattered; raw.

RA'RESHOWN, s. a show carried in a box.

RA'REFACTION, (rarefaction) s. [Fr.] the art of making any medium thin, or of extending the parts of a thing so that they shall take up more room.

RA'REFABLE, a. capable of being made thinner.

To RA'REFY, v. a. [rarefier, Fr.] to make more thin.—v. n. to become thin.

RA'RELY, ad. not often; seldom; finely; nicely; accurately.

RA'RENESS, s. the quality or state of happening seldom and being uncommon; value arising from scarcity.

RA'RTY, (rarety, Fr. rartas, Lat.) uncommonness; a thing valued for its scarceness or uncommonness; thinness.

RA'SCAL, s. [Sax.] a mean fellow; a scoundrel; a sorry wretch.

RASCALITY, s. villainess; knavery.

RASCALLY, s. one of the meanest rank.

RASCALLY, a. mean; worthless.

To RASE, RAZE, v. a. [raser, Fr.] to skim or brush the surface; to destroy or overthrow; to erase or blot out.

RASH, a. [rasch, Belg.] hasty; violent; inconsiderate.

RASH, s. [raschia, Ital.] satin. In Medicine, an efflorescence of red spots on the skin, perhaps corrupted from rash.

RASHER, s. a thin slice of bacon.

RASHLY, ad. in a hasty and thoughtless manner.

RASHNESS, s. foolish contempt of danger; inconsiderate haste; precipitation; temerity.

RASK, ERASMUS, an eminent Danish grammarian, who studied at Copenhagen, and afterwards travelled in N. Europe, to make himself more acquainted with the old Teutonic languages. Later in his life he travelled in Persia and India, and added the knowledge of the varied tongues of those regions to his already extensive learning. He held various situations at Copenhagen at different periods, being professor of literature, oriental languages, &c. &c., in which he taught most luminously the great principles of comparative grammar. But his works are generally of greater value yet; and particularly his Anglo-Saxon grammar, which is still the chief storehouse of information respecting that dialect, which is of such great interest to England, and has been translated. He died in 1832, aged 45 years.

RASP, s. [raspo, Ital.] in Botany, a raspberry.

To RASE, v. n. [raspen, Belg. rasper, Fr.] to rub to powder with a very rough file; to wear away the surface with a rough file.

RASP, s. a rough file.

RASPATORY, s. [raspatoir, Fr.] a surgeon's rasp.

RASPBERRY, s. in Horticulture, a kind of fruit.

RASPBERRY-BUSH, s. in Botany, a species of bramble, having serrated leaves, white blossoms, and red berries.

RASURE, (see RASE), s. [rado, Ital.] the act of scraping or shaving; a mark in writing made by rubbing or scratching out a word or letter.

RAT, s. [Fr.] in Zoology, an animal larger than a mouse, that infests houses and ships. To smell a rat, implies to suspect danger, or to be put on the watch.

RATABLE, a. set at a certain value.

RATABLE, ad. proportionally.

RATAFIA, (ratafee) s. a fine cordial prepared from the kernels of apricots and spirits.

RATAN, s. a small Indian cane; an instrument of punishment used by schoolmasters; a common species of mahogany.

RATCH, RASH, s. in Clockwork, a sort of wheel, which serves to lift up the detents every hour, and thereby make the clock strike.

RATE, s. [ratas, Lat.] a price fixed to any thing; a settled allowance or quantity; degree; that which sets the value; the manner of doing a thing; a tax imposed by a parish, &c. for local purposes. Rate of a ship of war, is its order, degree, or distinction, as to magnitude, burden, number of men, and guns.

To RATE, v. a. to value at a certain price; to tax; to chide vehemently.—v. n. to make an estimate.

RATEEN, s. a thick woollen stuff, quilted, or woven on a loom with four treadles, like serges. They are chiefly manufactured in France, Holland, and Italy, and are mostly used as linings.

RATH, s. a hill.

RATH, a. [Sax.] early; coming before the usual time.

RATHER, ad. [the comparative of rath, now out of use.] more willingly; preferably; in a greater degree; more properly; especially. To have rather, is to prefer, or desire in preference.

RATIFICATION, s. [Fr.] the act of confirming.

RATIFIER, s. the person or thing that ratifies.

To RATIFY, v. a. [ratius and facio, Lat.] to confirm; to settle; to validate.

RATIO, (ratio) s. [Lat.] proportion. In Mathematics, the relation of magnitudes and quantities. It is most profoundly treated of in the 5th Book of Euclid's Elements, a part of that work which has been more perplexed by commentators, and others, than any other. See PROPORTION, &c.

To RATIOCINATE, (rashiocinate) v. n. [ratiocinor, from ratio, Lat.] to reason; to argue.

RATIOCINATION, (rashioinashon) s. [ratiocinatio, Lat.] the act of deducing consequences from premises; the process of reasoning.

RATIOCINATIVE, (rashioinative) a. argumentative; advancing by process of discourse.

RATION, (the it in this and the following words is pron. like sh: as, rashon, rashonal, rashionally, &c.) s. [ratio, Lat.] in the Army, is a portion of ammunition, bread, drink, and forage, distributed to each soldier in the army, for his daily subsistence, &c.

RATIONAL, a. [rationalis, from ratio, Lat.] having the use of reason; agreeable to reason; wise, judicious.

RATIONALE, s. [Lat.] a reasonable account of the grounds on which any thing is founded.

RATIONALISM, s. in Theology, is the name given to the tenets and principles of certain divines of recent times, who, rejecting all supernatural agency in respect of the Scriptures, and of the events they record and the doctrines they contain, succeeded in extinguishing for themselves and their followers all religious light, and in provoking more searching and satisfactory exhibitions of the truths they denied, and in calling forth a warmer and more exalted piety in those who held by them. The Unitarians, in this country, have been the chief avowers of this system; and both here and in Germany, its native land, it is rapidly dying out as a system.

RATIONALIST, s. one who admits of nothing but what he can account for on the principles of ratiocination; one who prefers ratiocination to revelation.

RATIONALITY, s. the possession of reason; reasonableness.

RATIONALLY, ad. reasonably; with reason.

RATIONALNESS, s. the state of being rational.

RATISBON, an ancient and strong town of Bavaria, in Germany; it was free and imperial, and the see of a bishop. In the town-hall the general diets of the empire met. It stands at the junction of the Danube and the Regen, and across the former is a fine stone bridge. It is well built, and has a great many fine buildings. It has also several valuable institutions for learning and benevolence, and an excellent trade. It is 63 miles from Munich. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 49. 0. N. Long. 12. 11. E.

RATSBANE, s. poison for rats; arsenic.

RATTEEN, v. See RATEEN.

To RATTLE, v. n. [ratelen, Belg.] to make a quick noise with shaking things together not very sonorous; to speak eagerly and noisily.—v. a. to make a thing sound by shaking; to stun with noise; to scold.

RATTLE, s. a quick noise, nimbly repeated; empty and loud talk; an instrument having something included in a hollow part, to cause terror or surprise. In Botany, a kind of plant too common in corn-fields and meadows.

RATTLEHEADED, (rattleheaded) a. giddy; unsteady.

RATTLESLAKE, s. in Zoology, a snake so called from the rattle at the end of its tail.

RATTOON, s. in Zoology, a West Indian fox.

To RAVAGE, v. a. [ravager, Fr.] to lay waste, sack, spoil, plunder, pillage, ruin, ransack.

RAVAGE, s. [Fr.] spoil or plunder.

RAVAGER, s. a plunderer; a spoiler.

RAUCITY, s. [raucus, Lat.] hoarseness; loud, rough, hoarse noise.

To RAVE, v. n. [reven, Belg. réver, Fr.] to be delirious, or talk irrationally; to burst into fits of fury like a mad person.

To RAVEL, v. a. [ratelen, Belg.] to entangle, or entwine; to unweave, or undo something woven; to hurry over in confusion.—v. n. to fall into perplexity or confusion; to work in perplexity; to be busy with intricacies.

RAVELIN, s. [Fr.] in Fortification, a work having two faces, that compose a salient angle without any flanks.

RAVEN, s. [thrax, Sax.] in Ornithology, the largest and fiercest bird of the crow kind. It is often kept tame and taught to talk.

To RAVEN, (réven) v. a. [refran, Sax.] to rob; to devour with great eagerness.—v. n. to prey with rapacity.

RAVENNA, a province of the Papal States, Italy. It lies between Tuscany and the Adriatic, and is bounded by the provinces of Ferrara, Bologna, and Forlì. It touches the Apennines, but they are not within its borders; the part next the sea is marshy; and it has no rivers of importance. It is chiefly agricultural; and produces corn, cattle, silk, and wines in tolerable abundance. Ravenna, its capital, stands near the sea, and abounds in noble buildings, particularly churches, which are rich with paintings, monuments, &c. It has a valuable library, and various excellent collections. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 44. 25. N. Long. 12. 40. E. Pop. of province, about 150,000.

RAVENOUS, a. hungry to excess.

RAVENOUSLY, ad. with raging voracity.

RAVENOUSNESS, s. the quality of raging after prey; furious voracity.

RAVENSCROFT, THOMAS, an English composer, known chiefly and most honourably by several good and grave psalm-tunes; but who aspired fruitlessly at higher notoriety. He died in 1640, aged 48 years.

RAUGHT, (raud) the old preterite and participle passive of TO REACH.

RAVIN, s. prey; food gotten by violence; rapine; voraciousness.

RAVINE, s. a deep hollow, usually formed by a great flood, or long-continued running of water.

RAVINGLY, ad. with frenzy; with distraction.

To RAVISH, v. a. [ravis, Fr.] to violate a person's chastity by force; to take away by violence; to delight to ecstasy.

RAVISHER, s. he that embraces a woman by violence; one who takes any thing by force.

RAVISHMENT, s. [ravissement, Fr.] the act of violating chastity by force; excessive delight; rapture.

RAW, a. [raa, Dan. roh, Teut.] not boiled nor roasted; not dressed enough either by roasting or boiling; not covered with the skin; bleak; chill; new; immature; sore; ignorant or inexperienced, applied to the judgment.

RAWBONED, a. having bones scarcely covered with flesh.

RAWHEAD, s. the name given to a spectre.

RAWLY, ad. in a raw manner; unskillfully; newly.

RAWNESS, s. the state of neither being boiled nor roasted, applied to food; inexperience, applied to the judgment; hasty manner.

RAY, s. [raie, Fr. radius, Lat.] a beam of light or knowledge. In Natural History, a kind of fish, which has spines on its back.

To RAY, v. a. [rayen, Fr.] to streak; to mark in long lines.

RAY, JOHN, the eminent naturalist and divine of the 17th century. He was of no distinguished origin, yet he studied at Cambridge, and devoted himself to the study of Natural History, during the very heat and madness of the civil wars. At the Restoration he entered the Church; but refusing to sign the Articles and formularies, at the English St. Bartholomew, in 1662, he was deprived of his fellowship, and cast forth from her bosom. During the greater part of his after-life he resided with his friend, whose name is inseparably connected with his own, Francis Willoughby; and with him made a continental tour for the purpose of studying natural history yet more extensively. He was a Fellow of the Royal Society, and communicated many valuable and interesting papers to its archives. He died in 1705, aged 77 years. The work which has made his name most widely known is his treatise of Natural Theology, called, The Wisdom of God manifested in the Works of Creation; but his fame rests more securely still in the scientific world on his Botanical works, in which he was the immediate precursor of Linnæus in nomenclature, and was in advance of him in method of classification; and on his Zoological works, which he published conjointly with Willoughby, and which have been eulogized by Cuvier himself. He published some other works, of less moment; and his letters were edited after his death.

RAYNAL, WILLIAM THOMAS FRANÇOIS, known better as the ABBÉ RAYNAL, one of the innumerable political writers of ante-revolutionary France, and who contributed a share, though not perhaps a very great one, to the universal excitement which brought on the general overturn. He had travelled, (both from taste and on compulsion,) and read extensively; and was deeply imbued with the philosophy of the age. He was made of some importance for a time, by the burning of his vivid writings by the hangman; but neither he nor his works could else have received any great attention, then, or afterwards. He died in 1796, aged 85 years.

RAZE, s. See RACE.

To RAZE, RASE, v. a. [rasus, from rado, Lat.] to overthrow, ruin, or demolish; to efface; to extirpate.

RAZOR, RA'SOR, s. [Lat.] an instrument used in shaving.

RAZURE, s. [rasure, Fr.] See RASURE.

RE, is an inseparable particle used by the Latins, and from them borrowed by us, to denote iteration or backward action; as, return, to come back; reperuscure, the act of driving back.

REACCESS, (re-ak'ses) s. a visit renewed.

To REACH, (reech) v. a. [reacan, Sax.] to touch with the hand extended; to arrive at, or retain; to fetch from some place distant, and give; to transfer; to penetrate to; to be adequate to; to extend to, or spread abroad.—v. n. to be extended afar; to make efforts to attain; to penetrate.

REACH, (reech) s. the act of taking or bringing by extending the arm; the act of taking or touching with the arm extended; power of attaining; the limit of the understanding; a contrivance or artifice; extent.

To REACT, v. a. to act back again; to return an action or impulse.

REACTION, (re-ak'shun) s. [Fr.] the action whereby a thing acted upon returns the action upon the agent.

To READ, (reed) v. a. preter. and past part. read, but pronounced red; [read, Sax.] to peruse, or utter by the voice, any thing written or printed. Figuratively, to discover by marks, or learn by observation; to know perfectly; to understand.—v. n. to perform the act of perusing writing; to be studious in books; to know by reading.

READEPTION, (re-ade'pshun) s. [re and adeptus, Lat.] recovery; act of regaining.

READER, (reeder) s. one that peruses any thing written or printed; one studious in books; one whose office is to read prayers in churches.

READILY, (redily) ad. without hesitation, hindrance, or delay.

READINESS, (rediness) s. [See READY.] the quality of doing any thing without delay or hesitation.

READING, (reading) s. the art of perusing words written or printed; study consisting in the perusal of books; a lecture; a public recital; variation of copies.

READING, (Reading) Berkshire. It is pleasantly seated on the river Kennet, near its confluence with the Thames, and has several bridges. The newer parts of the town are tolerably well built, and there are several public edifices, which greatly ornament it. It has also some interesting ruins. It has a good trade, possessing several valuable manufactures, beside being an emporium for corn, malt, &c. It has also by canal and railroad great facilities for the transport of its commodities. It is 39 miles from London. Markets, Saturday (for corn), and Monday (for cattle). Fairs, February 2, May 1, July 25, and September 21. Pop. 18,937.

READMISSION, (re-admission) s. the act of admitting again.

To READMIT, v. a. to let in again.

To READORN, v. a. to adorn again.

READY, (redy) a. [red, Sax.] quick in performance; fit, or prepared; willing; eager; near; being at the point; facile; easy; opportune; done without hindrance or hesitation; expeditious; nimble.—ad. readily; so as not to need delay.

REAFFIRMANCE, s. second confirmation.

REAGENTS, s. in Chemistry, substances which are added to mineral waters or other liquids, as tests to discover their nature and composition.

REAL, a. [reel, Fr. realis, from res, Lat.] relating to things, not persons; true, opposed to fictitious; genuine. In Law, consisting of things immovable, as land.

REALGAR, s. in Chemistry, red arsenic or sandarach.

REALISM, s. in Philosophy, the doctrine of the objective reality of general notion, which was maintained by the great schoolmen, and largely affected the forms of dogmatic theology. The causes of its adoption by the church were, that it was, in truth, philosophy held in subordination to church authority;—that a dictatorial and speculative theology readily combined with it;—that men were taught to distrust their senses and experience, and to rely only on clear consequences from unquestioned speculative principles. The reason for its failure to lead man's mind onward was, that its only instrument was the Aristotelian logic. See NOMINALISM.

REALITY, s. [réalité, Fr.] truth, or real existence, opposed to appearance; something intrinsically important.

To REALIZE, v. a. [réaliser, Fr.] to bring into being or act; to convert money into land, or paper currency into money.

REALLY, ad. actually; truly. Indeed.

REALM, (reim) s. [roiaume, royaume, Fr.] a kingdom; kingly government.

REAM, (reem) s. [rime, Fr. rime, Belg.] a bundle of paper consisting of 20 quires.

To REANIMATE, v. a. to animate again; to restore to life; to revive.

To REANNE'X, v. a. to annex again.

To REAP, (reep) v. a. [repan, Sax.] to cut corn at harvest; to gather or obtain.—v. n. to harvest.

REAPER, (reeper) s. one that cuts corn.

REAPINGHOOK, (reepinghook) s. a kind of sickle used in cutting corn.

REAR, (rear) s. [arriere, Fr.] the hindmost troop of an army, or the last line of a fleet; the last class.

REAR, (rear) v. a. raw; neither well roasted nor sodden.

To REAR, (rear) v. a. [arcran, Sax.] to raise up; to lift up any thing fallen; to bring up from an infant state; to educate or instruct; to mount or elevate.

REARWARD, (reearward) s. the last troop; the end; tail or train behind; the latter part.

REARMOUSE, RE'ARMOUSE, s. [aremus, Sax.] in Zoology, the general name for the bat.

To REASCEND, v. a. to climb or mount again; to go up a second time.

REASON, (the eas is pron. like eez, in this word and its following derivatives; as, recon, reasonable, &c.) s. [raison, Fr. ratio, Lat.] true and clear principles; correct deductions from premises; the cause, or final cause; right; justice; a just account. In Metaphysics, or Psychology, that faculty in man which makes him truly man. It has for its objects, truth or ideas, all that is essentially spiritual and supersensuous; it is the source of universal and necessary truths, and does not depend on experience in any way, being the same in all men, only in various degrees of clearness, of development, and purity. See UNDERSTANDING.

To REASON, v. n. [raisonner, Fr.] to deduce consequences correctly from premises; to debate, discourse, or endeavour to convince.—v. a. to examine by the rules of reasoning.

REASONABLE, a. [raisonable, Fr.] having the faculty of reason; consistent with reason; just; moderate; tolerable; correct.

REASONABLENESS, s. agreeableness to reason; moderation.

REASONABLY, ad. agreeably to reason; moderately.

REASONER, s. [raisonneur, Fr.] one who reasons; an arguer.

REASONING, s. argument.

REASONLESS, a. void of reason.

To REASSEMBLE, v. a. to collect or assemble again.

To REASSE'RT, v. a. to assert anew, or a second time.

To REASSUME, v. a. [reassumo, Lat.] to resume; to take again.

To REASSURE, v. a. [reassurer, Fr.] to free from fear; to restore from terror.

REATE, (reef) s. in Botany, a kind of long small grass that grows in water, and complicates itself together.

To REAVE, (reave) v. a. pret. reft, [refjan, Sax.] to take away by stealth or violence.

REAU'MOUR, RENE-ANTOINE FERCHAULT DE, a celebrated French natural philosopher of the earlier part of the last century. He was trained for the legal profession, but renounced it, and devoted himself to science. The greater part of his life was passed at Paris, in the ceaseless and noiseless pursuit of his favourite studies, in carrying out which he amassed a considerable collection of animals, plants, minerals, &c. &c. He died in 1757, aged 74 years. His name is best known in this country by a peculiar scale for the thermometer, which is not however adopted, although more simple and philosophical than that of Fahrenheit. He studied with close attention the habits of various insects and shell-fish, and communicated the results to the French Academy of Sciences. Various experiments of great cost, and of considerable value, were also made by him, on the manufacture of porcelain, of steel, of pearls, &c., on tinning iron, hatching eggs, on making of cordage, &c. The record of his manifold discoveries and observations is to be found in the Memoirs of the Academy, and in his own works.

REBAPTIZATION, s. [rebaptization, Fr.] repetition of baptism.

TO REBAPTIZE, v. a. [rebaptiser, Fr.] to baptize again.
TO REBATE, v. n. [rebattre, Fr.] to blunt; to deprive of keenness.

REBATE. See DISCOUNT.

REBECK, s. [rebec, Fr.] a three-stringed fiddle.

REBEL, s. [rebelle, Fr. rebellis, from bellum, Lat.] one who opposes lawful authority.

TO REBEL, v. n. [rebello, Lat.] to rise in opposition to lawful authority.

REBELLE, s. one that rebels.

REBELLION, s. [Fr. rebellio, Lat.] the act or state of taking up arms, or otherwise opposing lawful authority.

REBELLIOUS, a. opponent to lawful authority.

REBELLIOUSLY, ad. in opposition to lawful authority.

REBELLIOUSNESS, s. the quality of being rebellious.

TO REBELLOW, [rebelló] v. n. to echo back a loud noise.

REBOATION, [re and boo, Lat.] the return of a loud bellying sound.

REBOLLEDO, BERNARDINO, COUNT, one of the heroes of the later part of the 30 years' war, and a writer of some eminence in Spain. After distinguishing himself in the wars, he resided for some time at Copenhagen as Spanish ambassador; where he was of great service to the Danish king. He was minister of war after his return, and died in 1676, aged 80 years. He wrote some agreeable madrigals, and lighter kinds of poetry; and some paraphrastic versions of the Psalms. He also attempted some didactic poems on Danish History and Geography, and on Politics, but without the like success.

TO REBOUND, v. n. [rebondir, Fr.] to spring back again from any surface.—v. a. to reverberate or beat back.

REBOUND, s. the act of flying back after being driven with force against any thing.

REBUFF, s. [rebuffade, Fr.] a quick and sudden resistance or check; repulsion.

TO REBUFF, v. a. to beat back; to oppose with sudden violence.

TO REBUILD, [rebuild] v. a. to build again; to re-edify; to repair.

REBUKABLE, a. worthy of being found fault with.

TO REBUKE, v. a. [rebouche, Fr.] to chide; to find fault with; to repress by an unexpected reproach; to reprehend.

REBUKE, s. any chiding expression; a check; oburgation.

REBUKER, s. a reprehender; a chider.

REBUS, s. [Lat.] a word represented by a picture. A kind of riddle, in which the different syllables of a word are hidden under some picturesque representation.

TO REBUT, v. n. [rebute, Fr.] to retire back.—v. a. to drive back; to repel an accusation, &c.

REBUTTER, s. an answer to a rejoinder.

TO RECALL, [rekdul] v. a. to call back; to call again; to revoke.

RECALL, [rekdul] s. the act or power of calling back; revocation.

TO RECAUT, v. a. [re and canto, Lat.] to retract, or contradict what one has professed, said, or done.

RECAUTION, s. the act of contradicting what a person has professed, said, or done; retraction.

RECAUTER, s. one that recants.

TO RECAPITULATE, v. a. [récapituler, Fr.] to mention again; to repeat again in a distinct manner.

RECAPITULATION, [s. Fr.] a distinct repeating of the principal points or arguments of a discourse; detail repeated.

RECAPITULATOR, a. repeating again.

TO RECAPARY, v. a. to carry back.

TO RECEED, v. n. to fall back; retreat; desist.

RECEIPT, [reséit] s. [receptio, Lat.] the act of receiving; a writing acknowledging the receiving of money; a physician's prescription, or direction for making any thing consisting of various ingredients; reception; admission.

RECEIVABLE, [recevable] a. [recevable, Fr.] capable of being received.

TO RECEIVE, [receve] v. a. [recevoir, Fr.] to take or obtain any thing as due; to take or obtain from another; to admit; to take into a place or state; to conceive in the mind; to entertain as a guest.

RECEIVER, [recever] s. in Chemistry, a vessel of earth, glass, &c. for receiving any distilled liquor. In Pneumatics, it is a glass vessel for containing the thing in which an experiment in the air-pump is to be made. In Law, it is commonly understood in a bad sense, and used for such as knowingly receive stolen goods from thieves, and conceal them. Receiver also signifies an officer; of which there are several kinds, denominated from the particular matters they receive, the places where, and the persons from whom.

RECENCY, [recens, Lat.] the state of being lately done, or existent.

RECENSION, [resénshon] s. [recens, Lat.] enumeration; review; a corrected edition.

RECENT, a. not long existent; new; late; fresh.

RECENTLY, ad. freshly; newly.

RECENTNESS, s. the quality of being lately used, made, or done; newness.

RECEPTACLE, [s. receptaculum, from recipio, Lat.] a vessel or place into which any thing is received. In Botany, the base, or seat, upon which the other parts of a flower are placed; thus, in dandelion, the round dotted surface that remains at the top of the stalk after the removal of the florets or seeds, is the receptacle.

RECEPTIBILITY, [s. receptio, Lat.] possibility of receiving.

RECEPTION, [s. receptio, Lat.] the act of receiving or entertaining opinion generally admitted; the state or manner of being received or entertained; treatment at first coming.

RECEPTIVE, a. having the quality of admitting what is communicated.

RECEPTORY, a. generally or popularly admitted.

RECESS, [s. recessus, Lat.] retirement; departure; a place of retirement or secrecy.—[reces, Fr.] an abstract of the proceedings of an imperial diet.

RECESSION, [reséshon] s. [recessio, Lat.] the act of retreating.

TO RECHARGE, v. a. [recharger, Fr.] to change again.

TO RECHARGE, v. a. [recharger, Fr.] to accuse in return; to attack again.

RECHARGE, [rechét] s. in Hunting, a particular blast of the horn, to call the hounds from a counterscent, when they have lost their game.

RECIDIVATION, [s. re and cado, Lat.] the falling a second time; a backsliding; relapse.

RECIDIVOUS, a. subject to fall again.

RECIPE, [s. Lat. from the first word of a medicinal prescription.] a medicinal prescription or receipt.

RECIPIENT, [s. recipiens, from recipio, Lat.] the receiver; that to which any thing is given.

RECIPROCAL, [a. reciprocus, Lat. reciproque, Fr.] mutual; alternate; returned equally on both sides; affecting both parties alike; done by each to each. In Geometry, reciprocal proportion is, when, in four numbers, the fourth number is so much less than the second as the third is greater than the first, and vice versa.

RECIPROCALLY, ad. mutually; interchangeably.

RECIPROCALNESS, s. mutual return; alternateness.

TO RECIPROCATE, v. n. to act mutually or alternately.

RECIPROCACTION, RECIPROCITY, s. the state wherein any action is done mutually by each party.

RECISION, [reséshon] s. [re and cado, Lat.] the act of cutting off.

RECITAL, s. the relating of a thing a second time; rehearsal; repetition; enumeration.

RECITATION, s. repetition; rehearsal.

RECITATIVE, RECITATIVO, s. in Music, a passage in which the words are pronounced more musically than in common speech, and less than in a song.

TO RECITE, v. a. [re and cito, Lat. réciter, Fr.] to relate; to rehearse; to tell over; to enumerate.

RECITER, s. he that recites.

TO RECK, v. n. [recan, Sax.] to care; to heed; to mind; to rate at much.—v. a. to heed; to care for.

RECKLESS, [a. reckelss, Sax.] careless; heedless; mindless.

RECKLESSNESS, s. carelessness; negligence.

TO RECKON, (usually pron. riken.) v. a. [recan, Sax. rekenen, Belg.] to count or find out the number of any collection; to estimate, value, or account.—v. n. to compute. To call to punishment, used with with. To lay stress or dependence upon, used with upon.

RECKONER, (riken) s. one who computes; one who calculates cost.

RECKONING, (rekening) s. a computation; an account of time; accounts of debtor and creditor; money due for entertainment at a public-house; an account taken; esteem or value. A reckoning book, is a book in which money received or expended is set down.

RECLAIM, v. a. [re and clamo, Lat.] to reform or make better; to reduce to the state desired; to recall, or cry out against; to tame; to bring under cultivation.

RECLINE, v. a. [reclino, from clino, Lat.] to lean back or sideways.—v. n. to lean, rest, or repose.

RECLINE, a. in a leaning posture.

RECLOSE, (reclize) v. a. to close again.

RECLUDE, v. a. [recludo, from claudo, Lat.] to open.

RECLUSE, a. [reclusus, Lat.] shut up from company; retired.—s. a retired person; a hermit.

RECOAGULATION, s. second coagulation.

RECOGNISANCE, (reknowledge) s. [Fr.] acknowledgment of a person or thing; a badge; a bond of record, testifying the recognisor to owe to the recognisee a certain sum of money.

TO RECOGNISE, (recognize) v. a. [re and agnosco, Lat.] to acknowledge; to recover and avow knowledge of any other thing; to review or examine judicially.

RECOGNISE/E, (recognise) s. the person in whose favour a bond is drawn.

RECOGNISOR, (recognizer) s. one who gives a bond to another.

RECOGNITION, s. review; renewal of knowledge; acknowledgment; memorial; knowledge avowed.

TO RECOIL, v. n. [recoiler, Fr.] to rush or bound back again; to fall back; to fail or shrink.

RECOIL, s. the rebounding or starting back of a cannon, &c. after explosion.

TO RECOIN, v. a. to coin over again.

RECOINAGE, s. the act of coining anew.

TO RECOLLECT, v. a. [re and colligo, Lat.] to revive in, or recover to, the memory; to recover reason or resolution; to collect again.

RECOLLECTION, s. the act whereby an idea is sought after by the mind, and found, and brought again to view.

RECOLLECTS, in Ecclesiastical History, a congregation of reformed Franciscans, called also Friars-minors of St. Francis.

TO RECOMFORT, v. a. to comfort or console again; to give new strength.

TO RECOMMENCE, v. a. [recommencer, Fr.] to begin anew.

RECOMMENCEMENT, s. a beginning a thing anew.

TO RECOMMEND, v. a. [recommander, Fr.] to praise to another; to render acceptable; to describe a person as worthy of the countenance of another; to commit with prayers.

RECOMMENDABLE, a. [Fr.] worthy of recommendation or praise.

RECOMMENDATION, s. the act of detailing the good qualities of a person, to gain a favourable reception from another.

RECOMMENDATORY, a. that recommends to another.

RECOMMENDER, s. one who recommends.

TO RECOMMIT, v. a. to commit anew.

TO RECOMPACT, v. a. to join anew.

RECOMPENCE, s. [recompense, Fr.] the act of making a return or equivalent; compensation.

TO RECOMPENSE, v. a. [recompenser, Fr.] to repay, or requite; to return, or give in requital; to make up by something of equal value; to redeem or pay for.

RECOMPLEMENT, s. new complement.

TO RECOMPOSE, (recompose) v. a. [recomposer, Fr.] to settle or quiet anew; to form or adjust anew.

RECOMPOSITION, (recomposition) s. composition renewed.

TO RECONCILE, v. a. [re and concilio, Lat.] to make a person to like, or be liked again; to make consistent; to restore to favour. SYNON. To reconcile, supposes some dispute or disagreement. To adjust, supposes only some distance or difference.

RECONCILABLE, a. [reconciliable, Fr.] capable of renewed kindness; consistent; possible to be made consistent.

RECONCILABLENESS, s. consistence; possibility to be reconciled; disposition to renew love.

RECONCILER, s. one who renews friendship between others; one who discovers the consistence between propositions.

RECONCILIATION, RECONCILEMENT, s. [Fr.] renewal of friendship; restoration to favour; agreement of things seeming opposed.

TO RECONDENSE, v. a. [re and condense anew.

RECONDITE, a. [reconditus, Lat.] abstruse; profound; secret.

TO RECONDUCE, v. a. [reconduco, Fr.] to conduct again.

TO RECONJOIN, v. a. to join anew.

TO RECONQUER, v. a. [reconquerir, Fr.] to conquer again.

TO RECONNOITRE, (reconnoiter) v. a. [reconnoître, Fr.] in War, to examine the nature and situation of ground, &c.

TO RECONSECRATE, v. n. to consecrate anew.

TO RECONVEY, v. n. to assemble anew.

TO RECONVEY, v. a. to convey again.

TO RECORD, v. a. [recoardor, Lat. recoarder, Fr.] to register any thing so as to preserve the memory of it; to celebrate, or cause to be remembered in a solemn manner.

RECORD, s. a register or authentic memorial.

RECORDE, ROBERT, one of the first English mathematicians. He was a physician, and became Royal Physician under Edward VI. and his successor, and he taught this science and wrote on it; but his chief claim to fame arises from his mathematical knowledge, which he displayed as a tutor in both universities, and in various books. He was a man of originality and penetration; which the quaint style of his writings appears rather to enhance than to conceal. He died in 1558, whilst a prisoner for debt, aged about 55 years.

RECORDER, s. one who registers any event; the keeper of the rolls in a city; a person chosen to assist the magistrates, &c. of a city or corporation, in matters of justice, and proceedings in law. In Music, a kind of flageolet.

TO RECOUCH, v. a. to lie down again.

TO RECOVER, v. a. [recooverer, Fr.] to restore from sickness or disorder; to repair; to regain; to release; to reach.—v. n. to grow well from a disease, or any evil.

RECOVERABLE, a. capable of being cured or regained.

RECOVERY, s. cure; the power or act of regaining; the state of a person cured. In Law, the cutting off an entail.

TO RECOUNT, v. a. [raconter, Fr.] to tell in a minute and distinct manner.

RECOURSE, (redress) s. [recours, Fr. from re and curro, Lat.] application or attendance for help or protection; access.

RECOUSEFUL, a. moving alternately.

TO RECREANT, a. [récrant, Fr.] cowardly; mean-spirited; crying out or recanting for fear; apostate; false.

TO RECREATE, v. n. [re and creo, Lat.] to refresh after labour; to amuse when weary. Figuratively, to delight or gratify; to revive or relieve.

RECREATION, s. refreshment after toil or weariness; amusement; diversion.

RECREATIVE, a. refreshing; giving relief after labour or pain; amusing; diverting.

RECREATIVENESS, s. the quality of being recreative.

RECREMENT, s. [recrementum, from recreo, Lat.] dross; scoria; superfluous or useless parts.

RECREMENTAL, RECREMENTIOUS, a. drossy; coarse.

TO RECRIMINATE, v. n. [recriminere, Fr.] to return one accusation with another.

RECRIMINATION, s. [Fr.] the act of returning one accusation by another.

RECRIMINATOR, s. he that returns one charge with another.

RECRUDESCENT, a. [recrudescens, from crudus, Lat.] in Medicine, growing painful again, applied to wounds. Figuratively, breaking out afresh.

TO RECRUIT, (rekrut) v. a. [recruter, Fr.] to repair any thing wasted by fresh supplies; to supply the deficiencies of an army by new men.—v. n. to raise new soldiers.

RECRUIT, (rekrut) s. the supply of any thing wasted; a new soldier.

RECTANGLE, s. [Fr. rectus and angulus, Lat.] an angle consisting of 90 degrees; a right angle.

RECTANGULAR, a. having an angle consisting of 90 degrees; right-angled.

RECTANGULARLY, ad. with right angles.

RECTIFIABLE, a. capable of being set right.

RECTIFICATION, s. [rectus and facio, Lat.] the act of setting a thing right which is wrong; the process of distilling spirits a second time, in order to increase their strength.

To RECTIFY, v. a. to make right or reform; to increase the strength of spirits by repeated distillation.

RECTILINEAR, RECTILINEOUS, a. [rectus and linea, Lat.] consisting of right lines.

RECTITUDE, s. [Fr.] straightness, opposed to curvity; uprightness, or freedom from any vice or bias, applied to the mind.

RECTOR, s. [Lat.] a ruler; the chief officer of a university. In the Church of England, a parson who receives the great tithes of a parish, with or without the others.

RECTORSHIP, s. [rector, Fr.] the rank or office of a rector.

RECTORY, s. in the Church of England, the benefice or dwelling-house of a rector.

RECUBATION, s. [recubo, Lat.] the act of lying or leaning.

RECUMBENCY, s. [recumbo, Lat.] the act of lying or leaning; rest; repose.

RECUMBENT, a. lying down; leaning.

RECUERABLE, a. [recupero, Lat.] easy to be recovered.

RECUERATION, s. the act of recovering.

RECUERATIVE, RECUERATORY, a. pertaining to recovery.

To RECURE, v. n. [re and curro, Lat.] to come back, or revive to the mind.—[recurir, Fr.] to have recourse to, or take refuge in.

RECURRENCE, RECURRENCE, s. return.

RECURRENT, a. [recurrens, from re and curro, Lat.] returning from time to time.

RECURRENCE, [rekirahon] s. [recursus, Lat.] return.

RECURRENCE, RECURRENCE, s. [re and curro, Lat.] flexure backward.

RECURRENCE, a. bent backward.

RECUSANT, [rekúant] s. [recuso, Lat.] one that refuses to comply with the terms of a community or society. In Ecclesiastical matters, a nonconformist, or one who refuses to conform to the observances of a state church.

To RECUSE, [rekúze] v. n. [recuser, Fr.] to refuse. A juridical word.

RECUSION, [rekúshon] s. [recusio, Lat.] the act of beating back.

RED, a. [Sax. rūd, Brit.] of a red colour. It is one of the three primary colours of the solar spectrum. Dyers reckon it a mother-colour, and have many different shades of it. It is chiefly produced by kermes, cochineal, and madder.

REDAN, REDENT, s. in Fortification, an indented work, made in form of the teeth of a saw, with salient and co-entering angles.

REDARGUATION, s. [redarguo, Lat.] a disproving or refuting.

REDBREAST, [redbréast] s. in Zoology, one of the names of the robin, derived from the colour of the feathers on its breast and face.

RED DEER, s. in Natural History, the species of deer yet found wild in the N. parts of Great Britain.

To REDDEN, [rédn] v. a. to make red.—v. n. to grow red, or blush.

REDDISH, a. somewhat red.

REDDISHNESS, s. a tendency to redness.

REDDITION, s. [reddo, Lat.] restitution.

REDDITIVE, a. in Grammar, answering to a question.

REDDLE, [réd] s. a pigment used for marking sheep and other coarse work, made of clay and the red oxide of iron.

To REDEEM, v. a. [re and emo, Lat.] to relieve by paying a price; to recompense; to release by atonement; to free from guilt; to free, or pledge by paying what money was lent on it, together with the interest.

REDEEMABLE, a. capable of redemption.

REDEEMABLENESS, s. the state of being redeemable.

REDEEMER, s. one of the titles or offices of our Lord Jesus Christ.

To REDELIVER, v. a. to deliver back.

REDELIVERY, s. the act of delivering back.

To REDEMAND, v. a. [redemandar, Fr.] to demand back.

REDEMPTION, [redémshon] s. [redimo, Lat.] the release of a pledge, &c., by repayment of the loan with interest. In Theology, the work of our Lord Jesus Christ, as the Saviour of mankind.

REDEMPATORY, [redémptory] a. [redemptus, Lat.] paid for ransom.

RED-EYE, in Ichthyology, a kind of fresh-water fish, otherwise called the rudd, common in many of the rivers of Germany and England. It is all over of an elegant red, but no part of it of so deep a colour as the eyes.

REDFORD, See RETFORD.

RED-GAME, s. in Ornithology, the red grouse or gorcock.

REDHIBITION, s. [re and habeo, Lat.] in Civil Law, an action to make void the sale of certain goods, and to oblige the seller to take them back.

REDHOT, a. heated so as to appear red.

REDINTEGRATE, a. [redintegratus, from re and inter, Lat.] restored; renewed; made new.

REDINTEGRATION, s. renovation; restoration. In Chemistry, the restoring any mixed body or matter, whose form has been destroyed, to its former nature and constitution.

REDLEAD, [rédled] s. in Chemistry, minium; lead calcined.

REDNESS, s. the quality of being red.

REDOLENCE, REDOLENCE, s. sweet scent.

REDOLENT, a. [redoleo, Lat.] sweet of scent.

To REDOUBLE, [redóuble] v. a. [redoubler, Fr.] to repeat often; to increase by frequent addition of the same quantity.—v. n. to become twice as much.

REDOUT, [redóit] s. [redoute, Fr.] an outwork of a fortification; a fortress.

REDOUTABLE, [redóitable] a. [redoutable, Fr.] terrible to enemies; formidable.

REDOUTED, [redóitéd] a. [redouté, Fr.] awful; formidable.

To REDOUND, v. n. [re and unda, Lat.] to be driven back again; to conduce; to result.

To REDRESS, v. a. [redresser, Fr.] to set right, or amend; to relieve, remedy, or ease; more properly applied to things.

REDRESS, s. a relief of grievances; reformation; remedy.

RED SEA, a narrow sea which divides Africa from Arabia.

It is separated from the Mediterranean on the N. by the Isthmus of Suez, and communicates by the Strait of Babelmandel on the S. with the Indian Ocean. The length of this sea is nearly 1500 miles, and its average width about 150; but the Strait of Babelmandel, and the two arms at the N. extremity, are only about 15 or 16 miles wide. It abounds with coral reefs, &c., but its name is derived from its ancient designation, the Sea of (or bordering on) Edom (Edom signifying red). Between its arms at the N. end lies the peninsula of Sinai, the scene of the greatest old-world transaction, the Divine legislation of the Israelitish nation. Across one of those arms Moses conducted the Israelites in safety when they left Egypt; and in it, on the same occasion, the Egyptian host, with their king, perished. It was the medium of the oriental commerce of Solomon and his successors, and its trade is considerable at the present day.

To REDESK, [redésk] v. n. applied to iron, which, when too hot, breaks or cracks under the hammer.

REDSHANK, s. in Ornithology, a water bird, about the size of the common plover, with legs of a beautiful red.

REDSTART, REDTAIL, s. in Ornithology, a small migratory warbler, which has a red tail, which it shakes incessantly, and a spot of white over its bill.

REDSTREAK, [rédstreak] s. in Horticulture, an apple so called from its colour, preferred to all other fruit for making cider. Also, cider made from redstreak apples.

To REDUCE, v. a. [re and duo, Lat.] to bring to its former state; to reform any disorder; to break into small pieces; to de-grade; to bring into a state of want or misery; to subdue.

REDUCEMENT, s. the act of bringing back, subduing, reforming, or diminishing.

REDUCER, s. one that reduces.

REDUCIBLE, a. possible to be reduced.

REDUCIBLENESS, s. quality of being reducible.

REDUCTION, s. [Fr.] the act of breaking into pieces, or bringing into order from a state of disorder. In Arithmetic, the bringing of numbers of different denominations into one. In Chemistry, the restoration of metallic oxides to their original state of metals.

REDUCTIVE, a. [réductif, Fr.] having the power of reducing.

REDUCTIVELY, ad. by reduction; by consequence.

REDUNDANCE, REDUNDANCY, s. [redundantia, Lat.] a state wherein things abound to excess; superfluity; superabundance.

REDUNDANT, a. [re and unda, Lat.] superfluous; abounding to excess; using more words or images than are useful.

REDUNDANTLY, ad. superfluously; superabundantly.

To REDUPLICATE, v. a. to double.

REDUPLICATION, s. the act of doubling.

REDUPLICATIVE, a. [reduplcatif, Fr.] double.

REDWING, in Ornithology, the name of a bird of the thrush kind, called also in some places, the wind-thrush, or swine-pipe.

To REE, v. a. to riddle; to sift.

To RE-ECHO, (re-eko) v. n. to echo back.

REECHY, a. (corrupted from reek.) smoky; sooty.

REED, s. [reed, Sax. ried, Teut.] a hollow knotted stalk; a small pipe; an arrow. In Botany, a plant of the grass kind, of which four kinds are natives of England, viz. the common, small, branched, and sea reed. They all flower in June and July.

To RE-EDIFY, v. a. to build again; to rebuild.

REEDED, a. covered in or made with reeds.

REEDEN, a. consisting of reeds.

REEDMACE, s. in Botany, a kind of rush, called also the catstail; of which we have two species, that bear spikes of male and female flowers, and are found in ditches and ponds.

REEDY, a. abounding with reeds.

REEF, s. in Ships, that part of the lower edge of a sail, which can be tied up by means of strings, so as to lessen the surface presented to the wind. Reefing, is the operation of reducing a sail, by taking in one or more of the reefs. In Physical Geography, or Hydrography, a narrow coral-rock, just under the surface of the water, fringing islands, &c. &c., or surrounding them parallel to the line of shore, at various distances. They particularly abound in the Pacific Ocean, and are the most serious impediment to the navigation of that vast sea; as they frequently occur where no land is perceptible, being formed on a sunken rock; and as they are not always betrayed by the surf and breakers. See CORAL, ZOOPLYTE, &c.

REEK, s. [ree, Sax. reuke, Belg.] steam; smoke; vapour.

To REEK, v. n. [reecan, Sax.] to smoke; to steam; to emit vapour.

REEKY, a. smoky; tanned; black.

REEL, s. [reol, Sax.] a turning frame on which yaro is wound from the spindle.

To REEL, v. n. [rollen, Belg. ragla, Swed.] to stagger; to incline first to one side and then to the other, in walking.

RE-ELECTION, s. repeated election.

To RE-ELECT, v. a. to enact anew.

To RE-ENJOY, v. a. to enjoy a second time.

To RE-ENTER, v. a. to enter again; to enter anew.

To RE-ENTHRONE, v. a. to replace on a throne.

RE-ENTRANCE, s. the act of entering again.

To RE-ESTABLISH, v. a. to establish again.

RE-ESTABLISHER, s. one that re-establishes.

RE-ESTABLISHMENT, s. the act of re-establishing; the state of being re-established; restoration.

To RE-EXAMINE, v. a. to examine again.

REEVE, s. [gerefa, Sax.] the bailiff of a franchise or manor.

REEVE, s. in Ornithology, the name of a bird, the male of which, from the long feathers round his neck, is called the RUFF.

To REFECT, v. a. [re and facio, Lat.] to refresh; to restore after hunger and fatigue.

REFECTION, s. refreshing after hunger and fatigue.

REFECTIVES, s. in Medicine, preparations which refresh and renew strength.

REFECTORY, s. [refectoire, Fr.] a room for refreshment or eating.

To REFEEL, v. a. [refello, from fallo, Lat.] to refute; to repress. To REFERE, v. a. [refero, Lat.] to send or dismiss for information or judgment; to address or apply for judgment; to consult a book for proof or information on any point.—v. n. to have respect or relation.

REFEREE, s. one to whom any thing is submitted or referred.

REFERENCE, s. relation; respect; view towards; dismission to another tribunal; a note pointing out a passage in any book as a proof, &c. of any statement.

REFERENDARY, s. one of whose decision any thing is referred; an officer in the court of Chancery; the master of requests.

To REFERMENT, v. a. to ferment anew.

REFERRIBLE, a. capable of being considered as in relation to something else.

To REFINE, v. a. [raffiner, Fr.] to clear from dross or any impurities, to polish; to make elegant; to make accurate.—v. n. to affect nicety; to improve in point of accuracy; to grow pure.

REFINEMENT, s. the act of cleansing from dross, foulness, or impurity; improvement in elegance; artificial practice; affectation of elegance.

REFINER, s. one that clears from dross or impurity; improver in elegance; inventor of superfluous subtilties.

To REFIT, v. a. [refaire, Fr.] to repair; to restore after damage.

To REFLECT, v. a. [re and flecto, Lat.] to bend or throw back.—v. n. to throw back light, or an image represented in a mirror; to throw back the thoughts on themselves or things past; to consider attentively; to throw or bring reproach.

REFLECTION, s. bending back; flying back.

REFLECTION, s. the act of throwing or bending back; thought employed on things past; the perception of the operation of one's own mind; attentive consideration; censure. In Optics, the throwing back of the rays of light from any surface, and especially from the surface of a mirror, which always takes place at an angle exactly equal to the angle of incidence. This is the cause of the power possessed by polished surfaces to give images of objects opposite to them; which images are usually called reflections. Heat also may be reflected in the same way.

REFLECTIVE, a. throwing back images; considering things past; considering the operations of the mind.

REFLECTOR, s. a considerer. In Optics, a mirror, or a reflecting telescope.

REFLEX, a. directed backward.

REFLEX, s. reflection.

REFLEXIBILITY, s. in Optics, the disposition of rays of light to be reflected or refracted.

REFLEXIBLE, a. in Optics, capable of being thrown back, or turned from their natural course, applied to rays of light.

REFLEXIVE, a. having respect to something past; capable of reflecting.

REFLEXIVELY, ad. in a backward direction.

REFLOAT, (refloo) s. ebb; reflux.

REFLORESCENCE, s. [re and floresco, Lat.] the quality of flourishing or blossoming anew.

To REFLOURISH, (reflourish) v. a. to flourish anew.

To REFLOW, (refloo) v. n. [refluere, Fr.] to flow back.

REFLUENT, (sometimes accented on the first syllable;) a. [refluens, Lat.] flowing back; running back.

REFLUX, s. [re and fluo, Lat.] the act of flowing back; the backward course of water.

REFOCILLATION, s. [refocillo, Lat.] restoration of strength by refreshment.

To REFORM, v. a. [re and formo, Lat.] to change from worse to better.—v. n. to alter or make a change from worse to better.

REFORM, s. reformation or amendment. In Politics, the doctrine of continual progress and improvement in institutions and laws, by the laying aside of what is unsuited to the age, and by the adoption of all that can raise a state as near as is possible to ideal perfection in its forms.

REFORMATION, s. the act or state of change from worse to better. SYNON. Reformation signifies often the act of reforming; reform, seldom any other than the effect. In Church History, the great revolt against the authority of the Roman see, which happened in the 10th century. It was so called, because, in Germany and Switzerland, where it began, the efforts made were mainly directed to the casting off of all errors in doctrine, ceremonies, &c. &c. It does not, in this sense, correctly describe the English revolt, except as it was maintained by the Puritans, and by their successors the Nonconformists and Dissenters, because the only change truly made was the substitution of the monarch for the pope, as head of the church, a change of very questionable worth.

REFORMER, s. one who makes a change from bad to better; one who seeks to free religion from erroneous forms, &c., and to present it in its purest and simplest forms. In Politics, one who advocates and seeks to effect the reform of the institutions and laws.

To REFRACT, v. a. [re and frango, Lat.] to break the natural course of a ray of light; to beat back or resist.

REFRACTION, s. [fr.] in Optics, the changing of the direction in which a ray of light is moving, which is occasioned by its passing into a medium of a different character from that it has been moving in. The angle of refraction is different for the differently coloured rays of the spectrum, being greatest in the violet, and least in the red rays. The broken appearance of a stick partly plunged in water is the most universally-known example of this change; twilight, also, is occasioned by it. Heat is also subject to refraction.

REFRACTIVE, a. having the power of refracting.

REFRACTORINESS, s. sullen obstinacy; stubbornness; perverseness.

REFRACTORY, a. [réfractoire, Fr.] obstinate; stubborn; not submitting to authority or command; contumacious. In Chemistry, a term applied to earths or metals that are either infusible, or that require an extraordinary degree of heat to change or melt them.

REFRAGABLE, a. [re and frango, Lat.] perverse; liable to be confuted.

To REFRAIN, v. a. [re and frænum, Lat.] to hold back; to keep from action.—v. n. to forbear; to abstain; to spare.

REFRANGIBILITY, s. in Optics, the disposition of a ray of light to be turned out of its natural course by passing out of one medium into another.

REFRANGIBLE, a. [re and frango, Lat.] capable of being turned out of its natural line, or their natural course, applied to the rays of light.

REFREATION, s. [re and frænum, Lat.] the act of restraining.

To REFRESH, v. a. [refraîcher, Fr.] to refresh after labour, pain, or want; to repair or improve any thing impaired by new touches; to cool; to refrigerate.

REFRESH, s. that which refreshes.

REFRESHMENT, s. relief after pain, hunger, or fatigue. Figuratively, food or rest.

REFRIGERANT, a. [Fr.] cooling; mitigating heat.—s. in Medicine, a preparation which has the effect of cooling the body by reducing the pulse.

To REFRIGERATE, v. a. [re and frigo, Lat.] to cool.

REFRIGERATION, s. the act of cooling; the state of being cooled.

REFRIGERATIVE, REFRIGERATORY, a. cooling; having the power to cool.

REFRIGERATORY, s. that part of a still which is filled with water, and condenses the vaporized fluid; any thing internally cooling.

REFT, the old pret. and past part. of To REAVE; taken or took away.

REFUGE, s. [re and fugio, Lat.] shelter from danger or distress; protection; an expedient.

To REFUGE, v. a. [réfugier, Fr.] to shelter or protect.

REFUGEE, s. [réfugie, Fr.] one that flies his country for shelter. This name has been more particularly given to the French Protestants, who were obliged to abandon their country at the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685.

REFULGENCE, s. sparkling or bright splendour.

REFULGENT, a. [re and fulgeo, Lat.] bright; glittering; shining; splendid.

REFULGENTLY, ad. in a shining manner.

To REFUND, v. n. [re and fundo, Lat.] to pour back. Figuratively, to restore or repay what is received. Used with the reciprocal pronoun himself, to reimburse.

REFUSAL, (refusal) s. the act of denying to receive any thing offered, or of granting a thing requested; the right of having a thing before another; pre-emption; option.

To REFUSE, (refûse) v. a. [refuser, Fr.] to deny any thing required or offered.

REFUSE, s. unworthy of acceptance after a choice is made.

REFUSE, s. that which is disregarded when the rest is taken.

REFUSER, (refûser) s. he who refuses.

REFUTAL, s. [refuto, Lat.] the act of proving false or erroneous.

REFUTATION, s. [refutatio, Lat.] the act of refuting, or showing any thing to be false or erroneous; refutal.

To REFUTE, v. a. [refuto, Lat.] to prove false or erroneous, applied to persons or things.

To REGAIN, v. a. [regagner, Fr.] to gain a second time; to recover any thing lost.

REGAL, a. [regalis, from rex, Lat.] royal; kingly.

REGALE, s. [Lat.] the prerogative of a king; an entertainment given to ambassadors.

To REGALE, v. a. [régaler, Fr.] to feast; to give an entertainment; to refresh; to gratify.

REGALEMENT, s. [Fr.] refreshment; entertainment.

REGALIA, s. [rex, Lat.] the rights and prerogatives of a king; which, according to civilians, are in England six: viz. 1. The power of judicature. 2. The power of life and death. 3. The power of peace and war. 4. A right to such goods as have no owner, as waifs, estrays, &c. 5. Assessments; and, 6. The coining of money. Regalia is also used for the apparatus of a coronation, as the crown and sceptre with the cross, that with the dove, the globe, St. Edward's staff, the orb with the cross, the several swords, &c. In Church affairs, the rights and privileges which cathedrals, &c. enjoy by the grants of kings.

REGALITY, s. [regalitas, Lat.] royalty; sovereignty; kingship.

To REGARD, v. a. [regarder, Fr.] to value; to look upon as worthy of notice; to respect or mind; to observe religiously; to respect or have relation to; to look toward.

REGARD, s. [Fr.] attention to as a matter of importance; respect; esteem; relation; note or eminence; reference; look or aspect; an object of sight.

REGARDABLE, a. observable; worthy of notice.

REGARDANT, in Heraldry, a lion, or any beast of prey, painted as looking behind him.

REGARDEUR, s. one that regards.

REGARDFUL, a. attentive; taking notice of; observant; respectful.

REGARDFULLY, ad. attentively; heedfully; respectfully.

REGARDESS, a. heedless; negligent; not taking notice.

REGARDESSLY, ad. without heed.

REGARDESSNESS, s. heedlessness; negligence; inattention.

REGATTA, s. a boat race, both by sailing and rowing.

REGENCY, s. [rego, Lat.] authority; government; government administered for another; the district governed by a vicergerent; those who are intrusted with the government in behalf of another.

To REGENERATE, v. a. [re and genero, Lat.] to produce anew. In Theology, to renew by a change of affections, &c.

REGENERATE, a. produced anew. In Theology, born again, or having one's affections, &c. changed by Divine grace.

REGENERATENESS, s. the state of being regenerate.

REGENERATION, s. [Fr.] new birth; the change or renewal of man, by Divine grace, to the Christian life.

REAGENT, a. [regens, from rego, Lat.] governing; exercising authority for another.

REGENT, s. a governor or ruler; one invested with authority for, or ruling in behalf of, another.

REGENTSHIP, s. the office or state of a regent.

To REGIMINATE, v. a. [re and germino, Lat.] to spring or bud out again.

REGIMINATION, s. the act of sprouting again.

REGGIO, a city of Modena, Italy. In the cathedral are many capital paintings and sculptures; and the town contains many other fine buildings, and especially convents. It has a good trade in silk. It is 12 miles from Modena. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 44. 40. N. Long. 10. 38. E.

REGIBLE, a. governable; manageable.

REGICIDE, (re and cædo, Lat.) the act of killing a king; one who kills a king.

REGIMEN, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, that regulation in diet and living, suitable to the preservation or recovery of health. Rule; government.

REGIMENT, (réjiment) s. [Fr.] a body of soldiers under one colonel.

REGIMENTAL, a. belonging to a regiment. Used in the plural for the particular uniform by which one regiment is distinguished from another.

REGIOMONTANUS, the assumed name of an eminent astronomer of Germany, in the 15th century, whose real name was Johannes Müller; who was born at Königsberg, which, in Latin, is called Regiomontanus. He studied at Leipzig and Vienna; and accepted the professorship of Astronomy at the latter place. Thence he went to Italy, to continue his studies; and afterwards, on the invitation of Sixtus IV., settled at Rome, where he died in 1476, aged 40 years. To him we owe many translations and commentaries, together with several original works. He nearly perfected trigonometry; and invented the present notation of decimal fractions. The translation of the Almagest of Ptolemy was completed by him, and enriched with illustrations. He was engaged on the reform of the calendar at the time of his death; and he also calculated the places of the planets for many years. He constructed an orrery, improved the mechanism of clocks; and made several wonderful automata. His labours, with those of his teacher at Vienna, Parbach, form the connecting link between the astronomy of the middle ages and that of modern times.

REG'ION, s. [regio, Lat.] a tract of land; a country; tract of space; a part of the body; place or rank; a division or part of the atmosphere.

REG'ISTER, s. [registre, Fr. registrum, Lat.] an account of any thing committed to writing in some book kept for that purpose; an officer who commits any account or transaction to writing; a trap-door affixed to the upper part of a stove, to regulate the quantity of atmospheric air admitted to the fire-place, or to open or shut the communication with the chimney at pleasure.

To REG'ISTER, v. a. [registrer, Fr.] to commit to writing, in order to preserve from oblivion; to enrol, or set down in a list.

REGISTRATION, s. the entry of names, of births, deaths, and marriages, of inventions and improvements, &c. &c. in a public record, as an authentic record for legal and other purposes.

REG'ISTRY, s. the act of inserting in a register; the place where a register is kept; a series of facts recorded.

REG'LET, s. [réglet, Fr.] ledge of wood exactly planed, by which printers separate their lines in pages widely printed.

REG'NANT, a. [Fr.] predominant; reigning; having power; prevalent.

REG'NARD, JOHN FRANCIS, a comic writer of France, at the end of the 17th century. He visited Italy, and as he was returning with his property, was captured by an Algerine pirate and sold as a slave. His taste for good living had made him acquainted with the art of cookery, which was brought into requisition in his servitude; but at last, being caught in an intrigue with one of his master's concubines, and having before him the choice of Mohammedism or the bowstring, the French consul ransomed him, and he returned to France. Subsequently he made a journey to the N. Cape; and died in 1710, aged about 60 years. His comedies are highly esteemed; and he produced other poetical works. His situations under government were only the fruits of his money, not of his reputation, or statesmanship.

To REG'ORGE, v. a. [regorger, Fr.] to vomit up; to swallow back; to swallow eagerly.

To REGRA'FT, v. a. [greffer, Fr.] to graft again.

To REGRA'NT, v. a. to grant back.

To REGRATE, v. a. to shock or offend.—[gratter, Fr.] to engross or forestall.

REGRA'TER, s. [regrotier, Fr.] a forestaller; an engrosser; one who buys any wares or provisions, and sells them again in the same market, or five miles round it; also one who furnishes old arms, &c. to make them look new.

To REGREET, v. a. to re-salute; to greet a second time.

REGREET, s. a return or exchange of salutation.

To REGRESS, v. n. [re and gradior, Lat.] to go back; to return; to pass back to the former state or place.

REGRESS, REGRE'SSION, s. passage back; a return or going back; the power of passing back.

REGRET, s. [Fr.] vexation; sorrow for something past; grief; bitterness of reflection. SYNON. Remorse is the grief occasioned by the recollection of what could and ought to have been done differently. Regret, that occasioned by what could not have been prevented.

To REGRET, v. a. [regretter, Fr.] to grieve at something done or past; to be uneasy at.

REGULAR, a. [regula, Lat.] conformable or agreeable to rule or method. In Geometry, a regular body is a solid, whose surface is composed of regular and equal figures, and whose solid angles are all equal: of these there are but five possible; viz. 1. the pyramid, comprehended under four equal and equilateral triangles; 2. the cube, whose surface is composed of six equal squares; 3. that which is bounded by eight equal and equilateral triangles; 4. that which is contained under twelve equal and equilateral pentagons; 5. that, the sides of which are twenty equal and equilateral triangles.

REG'ULAR, s. [régulier, Fr.] in the Romish Church, a priest who follows the rule of monastic life. In the Army, a regiment, or a soldier belonging to the troops of the line.

REGULARITY, s. [régularité, Fr.] conformity to rule; order; method.

REGULARLY, ad. in a manner agreeable to rule, method, or order.

To REGULATE, v. a. [regula, Lat.] to adjust by rule or method; to direct; to manage.

REGULATION, s. the act of regulating.

REGULATOR, s. [Lat.] one that directs or adjusts by rule or method; the part of a machine which adjusts the rate of its motion; a clock made use of to adjust the motions of others.

REGULUS, s. [Lat.] the finer and most weighty part of metals, which settles at the bottom on melting. In Astronomy, a star of the first magnitude, situated in the heart of the Lion, one of the zodiacal constellations.

To REGURGITATE, v. a. to throw or pour back any thing absorbed.—v. n. to be poured back.

REGURGITATION, s. resorption; the act of swallowing back.

REHABILITATION, s. in Canon Law, signifies the restoration of a delinquent to his former condition.

To REHEAR, (rehéar) v. a. to hear again.

REHEARSAL, (rehéarsal) s. recital; repetition. In Music and the Drama, the private recital of a piece before the representation of it publicly.

To REHEARSE, (rehérsé) v. a. to repeat, recite, or relate; to try, recite, or pronounce, as preparatory to public exhibition.

REID, DR. THOMAS, a minister of the Scottish kirk, whose name was at one time high in repute, as that of a great philosopher. He studied at Aberdeen, and occupied a chair in that university, whence he removed to a like situation at Glasgow. He once visited England, and spent the latter part of his life in his parish. He died in 1796, aged 86 years. His chief works are, his Inquiry into the Human Mind on the Principles of Common Sense, and his Essays on the Intellectual and Active Powers of the Human Mind. He was the founder of the Scotch school of metaphysics, and his only service in that study, is his having called attention, more decidedly than it had been given before, to psychology. He was a genuine Scotch thinker, but neither subtle nor profound, and free from all adulteration of genius. His writings are read only by those who are compelled, as students, to see what every one who has made any stir in the world has said; but it is a weary and barren quest, even for them. For those who can and do possess and use common sense, it is worse than superfluous.

To REJE'CT, v. a. [re and icio, Lat.] to dismiss without compliance; to refuse; to cast off; to throw aside, as useless or evil.

REJE'CTABLE, a. that may be rejected.

REJE'CTION, s. [re and icio, Lat.] the act of casting off or throwing aside.

REG'LE, s. [régle, Fr.] a hollow cut to guide any thing; regulator.

To REIGN, (reïn) v. n. [regno, Lat. régnér, Fr.] to enjoy or exercise sovereign authority; to be predominant; to prevail; to obtain power or dominion.

REIGN, (reïn) s. [régné, Fr. regnum, Lat.] royal authority; the time during which a person exercises sovereign authority; a kingdom or dominion.

To REIMBA'RK, v. a. [rembarquer, Fr.] to take shipping again.

REIMBARKATION, s. [rembarquement, Fr.] the act of going on shipboard again.

To REIMBODY, v. a. (written more frequently, but less properly, embody), to reduce to a body again.

To REIMBURSE, v. a. [re and in, Lat. and bourse, Fr.] to repay; to repair any loss or expense by an equivalent.

REIMBURSEMENT, s. reparation or repayment.

To REIMPRE'GNATE, v. a. [re and inpregnare] to impregnate anew.

REIMPRE'SSION, (re-impréshon) s. a second or repeated impression.

REIN, (rên) s. [réne, Fr.] that part of a bridle by which the driver keeps a horse in hand and guides him. Figuratively, government. To give the reins, is to remove restraint or give liberty.

To REIN, v. a. to govern by a bridle. Figuratively, to restrain or control.

REINDEER, s. in Zoology, a species of deer, which is found in most of the northern regions of Europe, Asia, and America. In Lapland this animal is used for draught, being organically fitted for rapid travelling over snow, and is the only substitute for the cow, the sheep, and other cattle of the temperate climate.

To REINFECT, v. a. [re and inficio, Lat.] to infect or corrupt again.

To REINFOURCE, v. a. [renforce, Fr.] to add new force or strength; to recruit.

REINFORCEMENT, s. a fresh supply of men, arms, &c.

REINHOLD, ERASMUS, a German mathematician and astronomer of the 16th century. He was professor of those sciences at Wittenberg, and died in 1553, aged 42 years. He published several Tables of the Motions, &c. of the Planets, in some part grounded on his own observations, and wrote on the new Planetary Theory of Purbach. He also translated and commented on a part of Ptolemy's Almagest.

REINS, s. not used in the singular; [renes, Lat.] the lower and the smallest part of the back; the kidneys.

To REINSERT, v. a. to insert a second time.

To REINSPIRE, v. a. to inspire anew.

To REINSTALL, (re-install) v. a. to seat again; to put again in possession.

To REINSTATE, v. a. to put again into possession.

To REINTEGRATE, v. a. [re and integer, Lat.] to renew with regard to any state or quality; to repair; to restore. See RED-INTEGRATE.

To REINVEST, v. a. to invest anew.

To REJOICE, v. n. [rejoir, Fr.] to be glad; to joy; to exult; to receive pleasure from something past; used with or or at.—v. a. to make joyful or glad; to exhilarate; to glad.

REJOICER, s. one that rejoices.

To REJOIN, v. a. [rejoindre, Fr.] to join again; to meet one again.—v. n. to make answer to an answer or reply.

REJOINER, s. [rejoindre, Fr.] an answer by the defendant to the plaintiff's replication or reply.

REJOINT, s. [rejoindre, Fr.] shock; succession.

REJSKE, JOHN JAMES, an eminent orientalist and philologist, who studied at Halle and Leipzig, and was eventually rector of St. Nicholas' college at the latter place. He died in 1774, aged 58 years. His writings show the most enthusiastic devotion to his studies, especially to the Arabic language, and both those and his Greek works are yet of great value. His wife, Ernestina Christina, (by birth Müller), shared his studies and his enthusiasm, and carried on some of his works after his death: she died in 1798, aged 63 years.

To REITERATE, v. a. [re and itero, Lat.] to repeat again and again.

REITERATION, s. [Fr.] repetition.

To REJUDGE, v. a. to try a second time; to review; to re-examine.

REJUVENESCENCY, s. [re and juvenis, Lat.] restoration of youth.

To REKINDLE, v. a. to set on fire or inflame again.

RELAND, ADRIAN, a learned orientalist of Holland, who studied at the great universities of that country, and rose to hold the office of professor of philosophy at Harderwick, and of oriental languages and church history at Utrecht. He died in 1718, aged 42 years. His works on the Mohammedan Religion, and the Geography of Palestine, are the most valuable of his productions; but the others, on Hebrew Coins, on the Spots of the Temple, as portrayed on the Arch of Titus, &c., are of considerable worth to the biblical student.

To RELAPSE, v. n. [re and labor, Lat.] to slip or fall back; to fall back into vice, error, danger, &c.; to fall back from a state of recovery.

RELAPSE, s. a fall into vice or error once forsaken; a return to any state, especially into sickness, from a state of recovery.

To RELATE, v. a. [relatum, from refero, Lat.] to tell or relate; to ally, or be near by kindred.—v. n. to have relation or respect.

RELATER, s. teller; narrator.

RELATION, s. the manner of belonging to any person or thing; respect; reference; regard; connexion of one thing to another; kindred; alliance of kin; a person related to another by birth or marriage; a recital of facts; a narrative.

RELATIVE, a. [relativus, from refero, Lat. relatif, Fr.] having relation, connexion, or regard; considered as belonging to and respecting something else.

RELATIVE, s. a person allied to another by birth or marriage. In Grammar, a name given to the interrogative or to the demonstrative pronoun, when they are used in an accessory sentence, in relation to some word in the principal sentence, called the antecedent. Who, which, what, where, whence, whither, when, how, and that, are so used.

RELATIVELY, ad. not absolutely; as it regards something else.

To RELAX, v. a. [relaxo, from laxus, Lat.] to slacken any thing strained; to make less rigorous; to make less attentive or laborious; to ease; to loose.—v. n. to be mild, remiss, or free from rigor.

RELAXATION, s. the act of loosening any thing strained; the cessation of restraint; abatement of rigour, attention, or application.

RELAY, s. [relais, Fr.] horses placed in different stages on a road to relieve others.

To RELEASE, (relâche) v. a. [relascher, Fr.] to free from confinement, servitude, pain, obligation, or restraint.

RELEASE, (relâche) s. discharge from pain, penalty, claim, confinement, or servitude; an acquittance from debt. In Law, the relinquishment of all the right a man has in lands or tenements, in favour of another, effected by means of a deed, after the manner of a conveyance.

To RELEGATE, v. a. [relego, from lege, Lat.] to banish; to exile.

RELEGATION, s. [Fr.] exile; judicial banishment.

To RELENT, v. n. [releatir, Fr.] to soften, or grow less rigorous, hard, or tense; to soften in temper; to give, melt, or grow moist.—v. a. to slacken; to soften or mollify.

RELENTLESS, a. un pitying; unmoved by kindness or tenderness.

RELEVANT, a. [Fr.] relieving.

RELEVATION, s. [relevo, Lat.] a raising or lifting up.

RELIVANCE, s. trust; dependence; confidence; repose of mind. Used with on before the object of trust.

RELIC, s. generally used in the plural; [reliquæ, Fr. from relinquo, Lat.] that which remains of any thing after the rest is lost or decayed; the body of a person after death; any thing kept in the memory of a person deceased.

RELICT, s. [relictus, Lat.] a widow; a woman whose husband is dead.

RELIEF, (relâf) s. [Fr.] alleviation or mitigation of sorrow, pain, or distress; that which frees from danger, pain, or sorrow; the dismissal of a sentinel from his post; the prominence of a figure in a stone, &c.; the recommendation of any thing by the interposition of something different.—[relievium, low Lat.] in Law, remedy of wrongs; also, a payment under a feudal tenure, made to the lord, on particular occasions.

RELIEVABLE, (relâvable) a. capable of relief.

To RELIEVE, (relève) v. a. [relievo, Lat.] to recommend by the interposition of something of a different nature; to support or assist mutually; to ease from pain or sorrow; to succour or rescue from danger; to give rest to a soldier, by placing another in his post; to right by law.

RELIEVER, (relèveur) s. one who relieves.

RELIEVO, (relievo) s. [Ital.] that part of a figure which projects beyond the ground on which it is carved. It is distinguished into alto, where the figures are much raised, and basso, where they are raised but little.

RELIGATION, s. [re and ligo, Lat.] the act of binding fast, or tying back.

To RELIGHT, (relit) v. a. to light anew.

RELIGION, (this word and its derivatives are pronounced religion, religions, &c.) s. [religio, Lat.] that life which springs from the knowledge of God and of man, of the relation between them, and of the obligations arising from that relation; any system of faith and worship. SYNON. Religion must be distinguished from theology or creed, and from piety or devotion, although it is not unfrequently confounded with all of them. It is the entire life, with all its expressions, such as has been defined. Theology is the science of religion, and creed is the formula expressing the result of the science. Piety is the universal sentiment of veneration for God, which may exist where there is little religion, and devotion is the outward expression of piety. Rightly regarded, there is but one religion, that developed in the sacred Scriptures, since that alone answers to the definition. Others are not in that sense false religions, they are not religions at all.

RELIGIONIST, s. a person attached openly to any system of faith or worship.

RELIGIOUS, a. pious; devout; living in the observance of the obligations of religion; teaching religion. Among the Romanists, bound by the vows of the monastic life. Figuratively, exact or strict.

RELIGIOUSLY, ad. piously; in conformity with the obligations of religion; according to the rites of any religion; reverently; with veneration; exactly, or with strict observance.

RELIGIOUSNESS, s. the quality or state of being religious.

TO RELINQUISH, v. a. [relinquo, Lat.] to forsake, leave, desert, quit, release, give up, forbear, or depart from.

RELINQUISHMENT, s. the act of forsaking.

RELICUARY, s. [reliquaire, Fr.] a shrine or casket in which the relics of deceased saints are kept.

RELISH, s. [relâcher, Fr.] the effect which any thing has on the organs of taste, generally applied to something agreeable; a small taste. Figuratively, fondness or delight in any thing; sense, or a power of perceiving; cast; manner.

TO RELISH, v. a. to give a taste to, or season any thing; to have a liking to.—v. n. to have a pleasing taste; to give pleasure; to have a flavour.

RELISHABLE, a. gustable; having a taste.

TO RELIVE, (revive) v. n. to revive; to live anew.

RELUCENT, a. [relucens, from lux, Lat.] shining; transparent; pellucid.

TO RELUCT, v. n. [re and luctor, Lat.] to struggle again.

RELUCTANCE, RELUCTANCY, s. unwillingness; repugnance; struggle in opposition.

RELUCTANT, a. unwilling; acting with repugnance.

TO RELUCTATE, v. n. to resist; to struggle against.

TO RELUME, RELUMINE, v. a. to light anew; to rekindle.

TO RELY, v. n. to put trust or confidence in; to rely or depend upon. Used with on or upon.

TO REMAIN, v. n. [re and maneo, Lat.] to be left out of a greater number or quantity; to continue; abide; to be left as not comprised.—v. a. to await; to be left to.

REMAIN, s. any thing left; relic; residuum; residue; a dead body. Generally used in the plural.

REMAINDER, a. remaining or left.

REMAINDER, s. what is left; a dead body; remains.

TO REMAKE, v. a. to make anew.

TO REMANCIATE, v. a. [re, manus, and capio, Lat.] to sell or return a commodity to him who first sold it.

TO REMAND, v. a. [re and mando, Lat.] to send or call back.

REMANENT, s. [re and maneo, Lat.] the part remaining.

REMARK, s. [remarque, Fr.] an observation; a note or criticism.

TO REMARK, v. a. [remarquer, Fr.] to note, observe; to distinguish, point out, or mark.

REMARKABLE, a. [remarquable, Fr.] observable; worthy of observation or notice.

REMARKABLENESS, s. observableness; worthiness of observation.

REMARKABLY, ad. observably; in a manner worthy of observation.

REMARKER, s. an observer; one that remarks.

REMBRANDT, PAUL GERRETZ, VAN RHYN, the great painter of the Dutch school. He studied for awhile under Lastman, at Amsterdam, but was more indebted to his own great genius for his fame, than to his teacher. His fame and his wealth rose suddenly on his selling one of his pictures at the Hague. He had many pupils; and he amassed, in a spirit not at all accordant with that of his art, a large fortune. He died in 1674, aged 68 years. The peculiarity of his paintings is well known from those that are in the public galleries of England, and from numerous copies. But it is not that peculiar artifice, by which he brings in such prominence the chief figure in his picture, or the key to his scene, that has effected his renown, so much as his having taken his inspiration from Nature herself.

Perhaps he is the greatest artist from whose mind the appreciation and even the apprehension of some forms of beauty seemed to be entirely lacking.

REME/DIABLE, a. capable of remedy; curable.

REME/DILESS, a. not admitting cure or remedy.

RE/MEDY, s. [remedium, from medeor, Lat. remède, Fr.] a medicine by which any distemper is cured; the cure or removal of any uneasiness or evil; reparation; means of repairing.

TO REMEDY, v. a. [remédier, Fr.] to cure or heal; to remove or repair any mischief.

TO REMEMBER, v. a. [remember, old Fr.] to bear any thing in mind; to recall to the mind; to mention; to remind.

REMEMBERER, s. one who remembers.

REMEMBRANCE, s. [Fr.] the act of the mind by which it recalls any idea it once had; memory; retention in memory; honourable memory; recollection; any token by which one is kept in memory.

REMEMBRANCER, s. one that reminds; one that puts in mind. The name of certain officers of the Exchequer, and of one of the city of London, who has the right of admission to the houses of parliament, to watch and report the proceedings as far as they respect the city; he also reminds the lord mayor of the days of public business, &c.

TO REMIGRATE, v. n. [re and migro, Lat.] to remove back again.

REMIGRATION, s. removal back again.

TO REMIND, v. a. to revive in the memory.

REMINISCENCE, s. [reminiscor, Lat.] recollection; recovery of ideas.

REMINISCENTIAL, (reminissential) a. relating to reminiscence.

REMISS, a. [remissus, Lat.] wanting vigour; slack; slothful, or careless; negligent.

REMISSIBLE, a. admitting forgiveness.

REMISSION, (remission) s. [remitto, Lat.] abatement; relaxation; moderation; cessation of intenseness; forgiveness or pardon.

REMISSLY, ad. in a careless, negligent, or slack manner.

REMISSNESS, s. want of care, attention, vigour, or ardour.

TO REMIT, v. a. [re and mitto, Lat.] to make less intense; to forgive a punishment, or pardon a fault; to give up or resign; to defer; to refer; to send money to a distant place.—v. n. to grow slack, or less violent.

REMITMENT, s. the act of remitting to custody.

REMITTANCE, s. the act of paying money at a distant place; a sum of money sent to a distant place.

REMITTER, s. one that sends money to distant places. In Law, where a person having two titles to lands, &c., and coming to such by the last title, and that being defective, he shall be restored to, and adjudged into, the lands, &c. by his former more ancient titles.

REMNANT, s. [corrupted from remanent,] any thing that is left or remains; residue.

REMO/TEN, a. melted again.

REMONSTRANCE, s. [Fr.] a strong representation of the ill consequences of any proceeding.

TO REMONSTRATE, v. a. [re and monstro, Lat.] to show reason against any thing in strong terms. Used with against.

REMONSTRANTS, s. in Church History, a name given to the Arminians in Holland, from the petition they presented to the States of Holland and West Friesland in 1610, which they entitled a Remonstrance.

REMORA, s. [Lat.] a let or obstacle.

TO REMORATE, v. a. [re and moror, Lat.] to hinder; to delay.

REMORSE, s. [re and mordeo, Lat.] uneasiness occasioned by a consciousness of guilt; pity; tenderness; sympathetic sorrow; sting of conscience.

REMORSEFUL, a. tender; compassionate.

REMORSELESS, a. un pitying; cruel; savage.

REMOTÉ, (removeo, Lat.) distant, applied to time, relation, or place; foreign; not agreeing.

REMOTELY, ad. at a distance.

REMOTENESS, s. the quality of being distant, applied to relation, time, or place.

REMOTION, s. the act of removing; the state of being removed to a distance.

REMOVABLE, (removable), a. such as may be removed.
REMOVAL, (removal), s. the act of putting out of any post or place; translation to another place.

To REMOVE, (remove), v. a. [re and moreo, Lat.] to take away or put from its place; to place at a distance.—v. n. to change place or abode.

REMOVE, (remove), s. change of place; a step in the scale of gradation; a small distance.

REMOVER, (remover), s. one who removes.

To REMOUNT, v. a. [remontar, Fr.] to mount again.

RENUMERABLE, a. rewardable.

To REMUNERATE, v. a. [re and munus, Lat.] to reward; to recompense; to repay; to requite.

REMUNERATION, s. reward; requital; recompense; repayment.

RENUMERATIVE, a. exercised in dispensing rewards.

To REMURMUR, v. a. [re and murmuro, Lat.] to utter back in murmurs; to repeat in low hoarse sounds.—v. n. to murmur back; to echo a low hoarse sound.

REMUSAT, JEAN PIERRE ABEL, an eminent linguist of the present century. He was professor of Chinese and its cognate languages at the College of France, and edited the Journal des Sceaux. He died in 1832, aged 44 years. His works, which are of extreme value to the student of comparative grammar, relate chiefly to the languages which his professorship made his principal study.

RENASCENT, a. [re and nascor, Lat.] produced again; rising again into being.

RENASCIBLE, a. possible to be produced again.

To RENAVIGATE, v. a. to sail again.

RENCOUNTER, s. [rencontre, Fr.] the action of two bodies that meet, or strike against each other; clash; opposition between persons; a casual engagement; a combat without premeditation.

To RENCOUNTER, v. n. [rencontrer, Fr.] to clash; to collide; to meet an enemy unexpectedly; to skirmish with another; to fight hand to hand.

To REND, v. a. pret. and past part. rent [rendan, Sax.] to tear with violence; to lacerate.

RENDER, s. one that rends; a tearer.

To RENDER, v. a. [rendre, Fr.] to pay or give back; to give on demand; to make; to represent; to translate, followed by in or into; to surrender, followed by up; to afford.

RENDER, s. a surrender.

RENDEZVOUS, (rendezvous) s. [Fr.] a meeting, or place of meeting, appointed.

To RENDEZVOUS, v. n. to meet at a place appointed.

RENDITION, s. surrendering; the act of yielding.

RENEGADE, RENEGADO, s. [Span.] one that leaves his religion on base principles; an apostate; one who deserts to an enemy; a revolter.

To RENEGE, v. a. [renego, from nego, Lat.] to deny; to disown.

To RENEW, v. a. [renovo, from novus, Lat.] to renovate; to restore to its former state; to begin again, or repeat; to make anew, or change to a new state of life.

RENEWABLE, a. capable of being renewed.

RENEWAL, s. the act of restoring or reducing to its former state; renovation.

RENFREWSHIRE, a county of Scotland, lying on the Frith of Clyde, and bounded by Lanarkshire, Dumbartonshire, and Ayrshire. It is 30 miles long, and about 15 broad. The parts near the Clyde are fruitful, with some gentle uplands; those to the S. W. and W. are more barren, hilly, and moorish. Some points in its hills exceed 1000 feet in height. It yields coal, iron, building-stone of various kinds, &c. &c. The convenience of the Clyde and Frith, there being safe riding on all the coast, has much contributed to the improvement of the country. Some of the chief manufactures of Scotland are carried on in this county, and it is also the seat of the greatest trade. Renfrew is its capital, and is a place of very little importance, standing near the Clyde, with some small manufactures. It is about 40 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 2027. Pop. of county, 155,072. It returns three representatives to parliament, and has a share in a fourth.

RENITENCY, s. that resistance in solid bodies, when they press upon, or are impelled against, each other,

RENITENT, a. [renitens, Lat.] acting against any impulse by elastic power.

RENNELL, MAJOR JAMES, an eminent English geographer, who first served in the British navy, but afterwards in the E. India Company's military forces, and became surveyor-general for Bengal. After his return to England he was occupied entirely with his studies and his valuable publications, and died in 1830, aged 88 years. His great works are the Geography of Herodotus, the Geography of Africa, and of the Plain of Troy, the Marches of the British Army in India, &c. &c.

RENNES, an ancient, large, and populous city in the department of Ille et Vilaine, France, containing 8 parish churches besides the cathedral, and several convents. Its streets are broad and straight; and the ground square, in which are the Palace of Justice and the Hotel de Ville, is very elegant. It is seated on the river Vilaine, which divides it into two parts, and has some valuable institutions. It is about 200 miles from Paris. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 48. 7. N. Long. 1. 36. W.

RENNET, RENNETING, s. [rennet, Fr.] in Horticulture, a kind of apple.

RENNIE, JOHN, an eminent civil engineer and mechanist. His works which brought him into general notice were the Albion mills, and the machinery of Whitbread's brewery. Afterwards he superintended the erection of Waterloo, Southwark, and new London bridges, the Plymouth breakwater, the harbours at Ramsgate, London, Hull, and Sheerness, the Kennet and Avon and several other canals, and finally the Bell-rock lighthouse. He died in 1821, aged 60.

To RENOVATE, v. a. [renovo, Lat.] to renew; to restore to its first state.

RENOVATION, s. [Fr.] the act or state of being renewed; renovation; renewal.

To RENOUNCE, v. a. [re and nuncio, Lat.] to disown; to abnegate; to quit upon oath.

RENOUCEMENT, s. act of renouncing; renunciation.

REOWN, s. [renommée, Fr.] praise widely spread; celebrity.

To REOWN, v. n. [renommer, Fr.] to make famous; to celebrate.

REOWNED, part. a. famous; celebrated; eminent.

RENT, s. [from rend] a hole made by tearing; a slit; a break; a laceration.

To RENT, v. a. [from rend] to tear.

RENT, s. [rente, Fr.] revenue; an annual payment for the hire of any thing; money paid for any thing held of another. In Political Economy, referring to the hire of land for agricultural purposes, is the money which is paid for the use of the soil, under certain conditions; but with it is confounded the hire of the house and farm-buildings also; and in these times the brisk competition for farms has raised the general average of rent, so as to make the definition usually received,—viz. that rent is a portion of the produce, paid for the use of the soil,—quite inapplicable. It is also usually quite overlooked, that the rent of land is not all that is expected from the hirers; and the covenants or agreements imposed on them, are now a far more serious burden and impediment to good and profitable husbandry, than even the increased rental.

To RENT, v. a. [renter, Fr.] to hold by paying rent; to set to a tenant.

RENTABLE, a. that may be rented.

RENTAL, s. schedule or account of rents.

RENT-CHARGE, s. in Law, a substitute for tithes, being a charge on the land, at a certain valuation of it according to its quality and use, regulated by the average price of corn for the preceding 7 years. This commutation, which is not open to the serious charges that could be brought against the old system, is yet open to charges peculiar to itself. The period for the averages is decidedly too long, and no changes of arable land into pasture, or vice versa, alter the rate of payment for it, as already fixed by valuation. And these are independent of the general objections to tithes. See TITHES.

RENTIER, s. he that holds by paying rent; a tenant. A renter varden is an officer in most of the companies of London, whose business is to receive the rents or profits belonging to the company.

RENVersed, a. [renversé, Fr.] overturned.

To RENUMERATE, v. a. [re and numero, Lat.] to pay back.

RENUNCIATION, s. [renunciatio, Lat.] the act of renouncing.

To REORDAIN, v. a. [réordonner, Fr.] to ordain again, on supposition of some defect.

REORDINATION, s. repetition of ordination.

To REPACIFY, v. a. to pacify again.

REPAID, past part. of TO REPAY.

To REPAIR, v. a. [re and paro, Lat.] to restore after any loss or damage; to fill up anew; to amend by an equivalent.

REPAIR, s. reparation; supply of loss, damage, or injury.

To REPAIR, v. n. to go to.

REPAIR, s. [repaire, Fr.] resort; abode; the act of going to a place.

REPAIRER, s. amender; restorer.

REPANDOUS, a. [repandus, Lat.] bent upwards.

REPARABLE, a. [re and paro, Lat.] capable of being amended, or retrieved.

REPARABLY, ad. in a manner capable of remedy by restoration, amendment, or supply.

REPARATION, s. the act of repairing the damages made by time in a building, or in any other thing; supply of what is wasted; recompence, or amends made for an injury.

REPARATIVE, s. whatever makes amends.

REPARTÉE, s. [repartie, Fr.] a smart or witty reply.

To REPARTÉE, v. n. to make smart replies.

REPARTITION, s. [Fr.] the act of dividing or sharing again.

To REPASS, v. a. [repasser, Fr.] to pass back or again.—v. n. to go back in the same road.

REPAST, s. [repas, Fr.] a meal; a refreshment; victuals.

To REPAST, v. a. [repâtre, Fr.] to feed or feast.

To REPAY, v. a. [repayer, Fr.] to pay back in return, requital, or revenge; to recompence; to reimburse.

REPAYMENT, s. the act of repaying; the thing repaid.

To REPEAL, (repeal) v. a. [rappeller, Fr.] to revoke; abrogate; annul.

REPEAL, (repeal) s. abrogation; revocation; abolition.

REPEALABLE, (repealable) a. capable of being repealed.

To REPEAT, (repet) v. a. [re and peto, Lat.] to do or speak the same thing more than once.

REPEATEDLY, (repeatedly) ad. over and over; more than once.

REPEATER, (repeater) s. one that recites; a watch that strikes the hours on the pressure of a spring.

To REPEL, v. a. [re and pello, Lat.] to drive back any thing, or an assailant.—v. n. to act with a force contrary to that which is impressed.

REPELLENT, s. that which has a repelling power.

REPELLER, s. one that repels.

REPENT, (repent) v. n. [repentir, Fr.] to think on any thing past with sorrow; to express sorrow for something past; to have such sorrow as produces amendment.—v. a. to remember with sorrow, used with the reciprocal pronoun.

REPENTANCE, s. [Fr.] sorrow for any thing past; such sorrow as produces amendment; penitence.

REPENTANT, a. [Fr.] sorrowful for what is past.

To REPEOPLE, (repeop) v. a. to stock with people anew.

REPERCUSSION, (repercussion) s. [re and percussio, Lat.] the act of driving back; rebound.

REPERCUSSIVE, a. [repercussif, Fr.] having the power of driving back, or causing a rebound.

REPERTITIOUS, (repertitious) a. [reperio, Lat.] found; gained by finding.

REPERTORY, [répertoire, Fr. from repertorium, Lat.] a treasury; a magazine.

REPETEND, s. [repeto, Lat.] in Arithmetic, that part of an infinite decimal fraction which is repeated ad infinitum; thus in the examples 2.666 and 1.131313 the 666 and 131313 are the repetends; the former being denominated single, because one figure only is constantly repeated, and the latter compound, because more than one are repeated.

REPETITION, s. the doing the same thing more than once; the act of reciting or rehearsing; recital from memory, opposed to reading.

REPIANO, REPIENO, s. in Music, signifies full, and is used to distinguish those violins in concertos, which play only now and then to fill up, from those which play through the whole concerto.

REPIGNORATION, s. the redeeming of a pledge.

To REPIÑE, v. n. to fret, vex, grieve, or be discontented; to murmur.

REPNER, s. one who frets or murmurs.

To REPLACE, v. a. [replacer, Fr.] to put again into the same place; to restate.

To REPLANT, v. a. to fold one part often over another.

To REPLANT, v. a. [replanter, Fr.] to plant anew.

REPLANTATION, s. the act of planting again.

To REPLENISH, v. a. [re and plenus, Lat.] to stock or fill.—v. n. to regain the former fullness.

REPLETE, a. [repleto, Lat.] full; completely filled; filled to excess; followed by with.

REPLETION, s. [Fr.] the state of being too full.

REPLEVIABLE, a. [replegiabilis, low Lat.] to be restored after being seized.

To REPLEVIN, REPLEVY, v. a. [replegio, low Lat.] to take back, or set any thing at liberty that is seized by way of security.

REPLEVIN, s. in Law, is a remedy granted on a distress, by which the first possessor has his goods restored to him again, on his giving security to the sheriff that he will pursue his action against the party restraining, and return the goods or cattle, if the taking them should be judged lawful. In case of a distress for rent, the tenant must bring his writ of replevin within five days, otherwise the goods are to be appraised and sold.

REPLICCA, REPLICATO, s. [Ital.] in Music, signifies to repeat.

REPLICATION, s. [replico, Lat.] an answer; a reply.

To REPLY, v. n. [répliquer, Fr.] to answer; to make a return to an answer.—v. a. to return as an answer. Used with to, against, or upon.

REPLY, s. [réplique, Fr.] an answer, or a return to an answer.

REPLYER, s. he that makes a return to an answer.

To REPOLISH, v. a. [repolir, Fr.] to polish again.

To REPORT, v. a. [raporter, Fr.] to spread any thing by rumour; to give account of; to give repute; to relate.

REPORT, s. rumour, or popular fame; public character or reputation; an account returned; relation; an account of judicial cases; sound, or loud noise.

REPORTER, s. relator; one that gives an account.

REPORTINGLY, ad. by common fame.

REPOSAL, (reposál) s. the act of reposing.

To REPOSE, (repose) v. a. [re and pono, Lat.] to lay to rest; to confide or trust in without any suspicion, followed by upon or in; to lodge or lay up, followed by in.—v. n. to sleep, or take one's rest; to rest in confidence.

REPOSE, (repose) s. sleep; rest; quiet; cause of rest or confidence.

REPOSEDNESS, (reposedness) s. state of being at rest.

To REPOSITE, (reposit) v. a. to lay up or lodge as in a place of safety.

REPOSITION, (reposition) s. the act of replacing.

REPOSITORY, (repository) s. a place wherein any thing is safely laid up; a collection of various goods; a magazine.

To REPOSSESS, (repossess) v. a. to possess again.

To REPREHEND, v. a. [re and prehendo, Lat.] to find fault with; to chide; to reprove; to charge with as a fault; used with of.

REPREHENDER, a. a blamer; a reprover.

REPREHENSIBLE, a. [Fr.] worthy of blame or censure; culpable.

REPREHENSIBLENESS, s. blamableness.

REPREHENSIBLY, ad. blamably; culpably.

REPREHENSION, (reprehension) s. [re and prehendo, Lat.] the act of finding fault; chiding or blaming.

REPREHENSIVE, a. given to reproof.

To REPRESENT, (the s in this word and its following derivatives is pron. like z; as, represent, &c.) v. a. [represento, Lat. repræsentor, Fr.] to exhibit or show as if present; to describe or show in any particular character; to fill the place of or personate another by a vicarious character; to serve in the House of Commons for a county or borough.

REPRESENTATION, s. [Fr.] an image or likeness of any thing; the act of supporting a vicarious character; a respectful declaration; a public exhibition.

REPRESENTATIVE, a. [représentatif, Fr.] exhibiting a likeness; bearing any character by commission from another. Representative System, the method of appointing or electing deputies to represent the interests of the Commons in parliament; that form of limited monarchy, in which such deputies, so chosen, form part of the legislature of a state.

REPRESENTATIVE, s. one exhibiting the likeness of another, or serving as agent for another; that by which any thing is shown; a member of the House of Commons.

REPRESENTER, s. one who shows or exhibits; one who is agent for another.

REPRESENTMENT, s. image or idea proposed, as exhibiting the likeness of something.

To REPRESS, v. a. [repressus, from reprimō, Lat.] to crush or subdue.

REPRESSION, (représsion) s. [repressio, Lat.] the act of crushing or subduing.

REPRESSIVE, a. having power to repress; acting to repress.

To REPRIEVE, (reprévoir) v. a. [repréire, Fr.] to free from immediate sentence of death; to give respite.

REPRIEVE, (reprévoir) s. a temporary suspension of sentence of death.

To REPRIMAND, v. a. [reprimander, Fr.] to reprove; to chide; to reprehend; to check.

REPRIMAND, s. [reprimande, Fr.] reproof; reprehension.

To REPRINT, v. a. to renew an impression; to print a new edition.

REPRISAL, (reprizal) s. [reprisaille, Fr.] something seized as a retaliation for robbery, or damage sustained.

REPRISE, (reprize) s. [reprise, Fr.] the act of taking something in retaliation of injury received.

To REPROACH, (reprôcher) v. a. [reprocher, Fr.] to charge with a fault in censorious language; to upbraid.

REPROACH, (reprôcher) s. [reprôche, Fr.] the act of finding fault censoriously; any thing which exposes to disgrace.

REPROACHABLE, (reprôchable) a. worthy of reproach or censure.

REPROACHFUL, (reprôchful) a. censorious; disgraceful; shameful; ignominious.

REPROACHFULLY, ad. censoriously; ignominiously.

REPROBATE, a. [reprobo, Lat.] lost to virtue and grace; abandoned; profligate.

REPROBATE, s. a person lost to virtue; a profligate; one abandoned to wickedness.

To REPROBATE, v. a. to disallow or reject; to abandon to wickedness and all its consequences; to abandon to one's sentence without hopes of pardon.

REPROBATENESS, s. the act of being reprobate.

REPROBATION, s. [Fr.] in Theology, the act of abandoning, or the state of being abandoned, to sin and all its consequences. A sentence of condemnation.

To REPRODUCE, v. a. [reproduire, Fr.] to produce again; to produce anew.

REPRODUCTION, s. [Fr.] the act of producing anew.

REPROOF, s. blame or reprehension spoken to a person's face; censure; reprehension.

REPROVABLE, (reprôvable) a. blamable; culpable; worthy of reprehension.

To REPROVE, (reprôver) v. a. [reprouver, Fr.] to blame; to censure; to charge to the face with a fault; to reprehend; to reprove; to disprove.

REPROVER, (reprôver) s. one that reproves.

To REPRUNE, v. a. to prune a second time.

REPTILE, a. [repto, Lat.] creeping on the ground.

REPTILE, s. in Natural History, that class of vertebrated animals, which includes the tortoise tribe, the crocodiles and lizards, serpents, and the frog tribe. Most of them are oviparous, or ovo-viviparous. See under the various genera, &c.

REPTITIOUS, (reptitious) a. creeping.

REPUBLIC, (république, Fr. from res and publicus, Lat.) a form of government in which all the citizens are equal as to both rights and privileges; a commonwealth. Also, but improperly, a state the liberty of whose subjects is in some sort guaranteed by a constitution.

REPUBLICAN, a. belonging to a commonwealth; placing the government in the people.

REPUBLICAN, s. one who holds a republic to be the best form of government.

REPUABLE, a. fit to be rejected.

To REPUDIATE, v. a. [repudio, Lat. repudior, Fr.] to divorce; to reject; to put away; to disown.

REPUDIATION, s. [Fr.] divorce; a putting away; rejection; disownal.

REPU'GNANCE, REPU'GNANCY, s. [Fr.] inconsistency, or contrariety; struggle of opposition; reluctance.

REPU'GNANT, a. [Fr. repugno, from pugno, Lat.] disobedient; contrary; opposite.

REPU'GNANTLY, ad. contradictorily.

To REPUL'ULATE, v. n. [re and pululo, Lat.] to bud again.

REPUL'SE, s. [re and pello, Lat.] the condition of being driven off from any attempt, or put aside from any design; denial; check.

To REPUL'SE, v. a. to beat back or drive off.

REPULSION, (repulsion) s. the act or power of driving off from itself. In Physics generally, a force by which the particles of bodies are prevented from coming into actual contact.

REPULSIVE, a. driving off; having the power to beat back or drive off.

To REPURCHASE, v. n. to buy again.

REPUTABLE, a. honourable; generally esteemed; celebrated.

REPUTABLY, ad. without discredit.

REPUTATION, s. [Fr.] the general character of a person; credit; honour.

To REPUTE, v. a. to hold, account, or esteem; to think.

REPUTE, s. public character; established opinion; esteem.

REPU'TELESS, a. disgraceful; disreputable.

REQUEST, (requête, Fr.) the act of asking any thing of another; an entreaty; petition; demand; the state of being desired.

To REQUE'ST, v. a. [requester, Fr.] to ask a favour of another; to entreat; to solicit.

REQUE'STER, s. a petitioner; a solicitor.

REPUT'CKEN, v. a. to reanimate.

REQUIEM, s. [Lat.] a hymn so called from its being used in imploring rest for the dead.

REQUIRABLE, a. fit to be required.

To REQUI'RE, v. a. [re and quero, Lat.] to ask a thing as one's right; to make necessary; to need.

REQUISITE, [the s is pron. like z in this word and its derivatives; as requizite, &c.] a. [requisitus, Lat.] necessary; needful; not to be done without.

REQUISITE, s. any thing essential or indispensably necessary.

REQUISITELY, ad. necessarily; in a requisite manner.

REQUISITENESS, s. necessity; the state of being requisite.

REQUITAL, s. a return made for any good or bad office; retaliation; a reward.

To REQUITE, v. a. [requiter, Fr.] to repay, or return good or ill; to recompense.

RE'WARD, a. the rear or last troop of an army.

To RESALUTE, v. a. [re and saluto, Lat.] to salute or greet anew.

To RESC'ND, v. a. [rescindō, Lat.] to cut off; to abrogate or annul, applied to laws.

RESC'SSION, (ressission) s. the act of cutting off; abrogation.

RESC'SSORY, a. [rescissore, Fr.] having the power to cut off.

RESCRIPT, (rescriptum, from rescribo, Lat.) the edict or decree of an emperor.

To RESCUE, v. a. [rescousse, old Fr.] to set free, or deliver from confinement, danger, or violence.

RESCUE, s. an act whereby a person is delivered from violence, danger, or confinement.

RESCUER, s. one that rescues; a deliverer.

RESEARCH, (recherche) s. [recherche, Fr.] diligent search or inquiry; scrutiny.

To RESEARCH, (resérch) v. a. [rechercher, Fr.] to examine; to inquire; to scrutinize.

To RESEAT, (reséer) v. a. to seat again.

RESEIZER, (reseizer) s. one that seizes again.

RESEIZURE, (reséizure) s. repeated seizure; seizure a second time.

RESEMBLANCE, s. [Fr.] likeness; similitude; representation.

To RESEMBLE, v. a. [ressembler, Fr.] to compare; to represent as like something else; to be like.

To RESENT, (rezent) v. a. [ressentir, Fr.] to take well or ill; to be offended at, or return, an injury; to have a due sense of.

RESENTER, (rezenter) s. one who feels injuries deeply.

RESENTFUL, (rezentful) a. malignant; easily provoked to anger, and long retaining it.

RESENTINGLY, (rezétingly) ad. with deep sense; with strong perception; with continued anger.

RESENTMENT, (rezément) s. [ressentiment, Fr.] a strong or hasty sensation of good or ill; a deep sense of injury.

RESERVATION, s. [Fr.] the act of concealing in the mind; something kept back, or not given up; custody.

RESERVATORY, s. [réservoir, Fr.] a place in which any thing is reserved or kept.

To RESERVE, (usually pron. rezérve), v. a. [re and servo, Lat.] to keep or save for some other time or purpose; to retain; to keep; to store.

RESERVE, (rezérve) s. something stored or saved against some future exigence; something concealed in the mind; exception; a prohibition; an exception in favour of a person or thing; caution observed in behaviour.

RESERVED, (rezervé) a. not too free in behaviour or discourse; sullen; close.

RESERVEDLY, ad. not with frankness; not with openness; with reserve.

RESERVEDNESS, (rezervéness) s. the quality of keeping one's secret sentiments.

RESERVER, (rezérveur) s. one that reserves.

RESERVOR, s. [Fr.] a place where any thing is stored up, or collected in large quantities; reservoir.

To RESETTLE, v. a. to settle again.

RESETTLEMENT, s. the act of settling again; the state of settling again.

RESIANCE, s. in Law, residence; abode; dwelling.

RESIANT, a. [resciant, Fr.] resident; present in a place.

To RESIDE, v. n. [re and sedeo, Lat.] to dwell; to abide; to live.—(resido, Lat.) to subside; to sink; to fall to the bottom.

RESIDENCE, s. [Fr.] the act of continuing or dwelling in a place; a place of abode; habitation; dwelling; sediment.

RESIDENT, a. dwelling or having abode in any place.

RESIDENT, s. [Fr.] one who dwells in or inhabits any place.

RESIDENTIARY, (residenziary) a. holding residence; attending in a journey.

RESIDUAL, RESIDUARY, a. relating to that part which remains.

RESIDUE, RESIDUUM, s. the remainder; that which is left.

To RESIGN, v. a. [re and signo, Lat.] to give or yield up a claim or possession; to submit without opposition or resistance.

RESIGNATION, s. [Fr.] the act of yielding or submitting without resistance or doubt.

RESIGNER, (resigné) s. in Law, the person to whom the thing is resigned.

RESIGNEE, (resigné) s. one that resigns.

RESIGNMENT, (resignément) s. the act of resigning.

RESILIENCY, RESILIENCY, RESILIATION, s. [re and salio, Lat.] the act of starting or leaping back.

RESILIENT, a. starting or springing back.

RESIN, (résine) s. [resine, Fr. resina, Lat.] in Vegetable Physiology, &c., a secretion from a plant that will not dissolve in water, but only in oils or spirits. Gum-resins are partly soluble in water, and gumme wholly so.

RESINOUS, (résineux) a. partaking of the nature and properties of resin. See ELECTRICITY.

RESINOUSNESS, (résineousness) s. the quality of being resinous.

RESIPISCENCE, s. [Fr.] repentance.

To RESIST, v. a. [resisto, Lat. réister, Fr.] to oppose, or act against; to hinder; to act against the impression of external force.

RESISTANCE, RESISTENCE, s. the act of resisting; opposition; the quality of not yielding to external force; the power of checking or preventing motion.

RESISTIBILITY, s. the quality of resisting.

RESISTIBLE, a. that may be resisted.

RESISTLESS, a. not to be opposed; irresistible.

RESOLVABLE, a. capable of being separated or analyzed; capable of being explained.

RESOLUBLE, a. [re and solvere, Lat.] capable of being dissolved or melted.

To RESOLVE, (the s in this word and its derivatives is usually pron. like z), v. a. to inform, explain, or clear from any doubt or difficulty; to analyze; to melt; or dissolve.—v. n. to determine; to melt; or be dissolved; to be fixed in an opinion; used with on or upon.

RESOLVE, s. a fixed resolution; determination.

RESOLVEDLY, ad. with firmness and constancy.

RESOLVEDNESS, s. resolution; constancy; firmness.

RESOLVEND, s. in Arithmetic, a term in the extraction of the square and cube roots, &c., signifying the number arising from increasing the remainder after subtraction.

RESOLVENT, s. that which has the power of causing solution.

RESOLVER, s. one that forms a first resolution; one that dissolves; one that separates parts.

RESOLUTE, a. [résolu, Fr.] fixed; determined; constant; steady; firm.

RESOLUTELY, ad. determinately; firmly; constantly; steadily.

RESOLUTENESS, s. determinateness; the state of being fixed in resolution.

RESOLUTION, s. [Fr. from resolvo, Lat.] the act of clearing from doubt or difficulty; the act of separating any thing into its constituent parts; dissolution; a fixed determination, or settled thought; steadiness, constancy, firmness; the determination of a cause in a court of justice; the change of a discord into harmony, in Music.

RESOLUTIVE, a. [résolutif, Fr.] having the power to dissolve or relax.

RESONANCE, s. [re and sono, Lat.] sound; re-sound; echo.

RESONANT, a. sounding or echoing.

To RESORT, v. n. [ressortir, Fr.] to have recourse to; to go publicly, or repair to. In Law, to fall back.

RESORT, s. an assembly, or numerous body of men meeting in the same place; concourse; the act of visiting; spring; or active power; resource.

RESORTER, s. one that frequents or visits.

To RESOUND, v. a. [re and sono, Lat.] to echo; to sound back; to sound; to tell so as to be heard far; to celebrate by sound; to return sounds; to sound with any noise.—v. n. to be echoed back.

RESOURCE, s. [ressource, Fr.] some new and expedient means that offer; an expedient; shift.

To RESPECT, v. a. [re and specio, Lat.] to regard, or have regard to; to consider with a low degree of reverence; to have relation to; to look toward.

RESPECT, s. regard; attention; a low degree of reverence; partial regard; good will; a consideration or motive; relation or regard.

RESPECTABLE, a. meriting respect; venerable.

RESPECTER, s. one who prefers one before another from a partial regard.

RESPECTFUL, a. paying due reverence; ceremonious; full of outward civility.

RESPECTFULLY, ad. with some degree of reverence.

RESPECTIVE, a. relating to particular persons or things; relative; reciprocal; particular.

RESPECTIVELY, ad. particularly; relatively.

RESPERSION, (respersion) s. [respergo, Lat.] the act of sprinkling.

RESPIRATION, s. [Fr. respira, from re and spiro, Lat.] the act of breathing; relief or respite from labour. In Physiology, the process, in both plants and animals, by which the fluids of the organism are supplied with oxygen, so as to continue to maintain life.

RESPIRATOR, s. an ingenious contrivance, by which fine metallic wires, or a piece of sponge fitted in a frame, and fastened before the mouth, are warmed by the breath, and communicate warmth to the air received into the lungs; used by asthmatic and consumptive persons with marked success.

RESPIRATORY, a. relating to, or connected with, the process of respiration.

To RESPIRE, v. n. to breathe; to catch breath; to rest, or take rest.

RESPIRE, s. [respit, Fr.] a reprieve, or the suspension of a capital sentence; a pause or interval.

To RESPIRE, v. a. to relieve by a pause or intermission; to suspend or delay.

RESPLENDENCE, RESPLENDENCY, s. brightness; lustre; splendour.

RESPLENDENT, a. [re and splendo, Lat.] bright; shining; having a beautiful lustre.

RESPLENDENTLY, ad. with lustre; splendidly.

To RESPOND, v. a. [respondere, Lat.] to answer an argument or objection; to correspond or suit.

RESPONDENT, s. one who answers in a suit, or in a set dispute.

RESPONDENTIA, s. in Commerce, is a term applied to money, which is borrowed, not upon the vessel, as in botomy, but upon the goods and merchandise contained in it, which must necessarily be sold or exchanged, in the course of a voyage, in which case the borrower, personally, is bound to answer the contract; and he is said to take up money at respondentia.

RESPONSE, [responsum, from respondere, Lat.] an answer or reply made to an objection or argument; an answer made by the congregation, or clerk, in liturgical worship.

RESPONSIBLE, a. answerable, or accountable; capable of discharging any obligation.

RESPONSIBLENESS, s. the state of being accountable.

RESPONSION, (responsiōn) s. [responsio, Lat.] the act of answering.

RESPONSIVE, a. [responsivus, Lat.] answering; making answer; correspondent; suitable.

RESPONSORY, a. [responsorius, Lat.] containing answer.

REST, [Sax.] sleep; the state of death; cessation from motion, disturbance, or bodily labour; a support on which any thing leans; a place of repose; remainder, or what remains. In Music, a mark denoting a pause, in the playing or singing, and the length of it.

REST, a. others; those not included in any proposition.

To REST, v. n. to be asleep or dead; to cease from motion, labour, or disturbance; to remain satisfied; to lean upon; to be supported, followed by upon; to be left or remain.—v. a. to put into a state of repose or quiet; to confide in; used with upon.

RESTAGNANT, a. [re and stagnare, Lat.] remaining without flow or motion.

To RESTAGNATE, v. n. to stand without flow.

RESTAGNATION, s. the state of standing without flow, course, or motion.

RESTAURATION, s. [restaurare, Lat.] the act of recovering to its former state; reinstitution, or advancement on new and surer principles.

To RESTEM, v. a. to force back against the current.

RESTFUL, a. quiet; being at rest.

RESTHATROW, s. in Botany, a thorny plant with butterfly-shaped blossoms. There are two British species, viz. the corn and creeping rest-harrow; the former is found on barren land, and goes also by the names of camcock, petty-whin, and ground furze; and the latter on the sea-coast, having pink blossoms. Both kinds flower in June and July.

RESTIEF, RE-STIVE, RE-STY, [restif, Fr.] unwilling to stir, comply, or go forward, generally applied to a horse; headstrong; stubborn; froward; obstinate.

RESTIFFNESS, s. unwillingness; frowardness.

RESTINCTION, s. [restringere, Lat.] the act of extinguishing.

RESTITUTION, s. [restitutio, Lat.] the act of restoring any thing lost or taken away; the act of recovering a former state.

RESTLESS, a. unable to sleep; unquiet; unsettled; in continual motion or action.

RESTLESSLY, ad. unquietly; without rest.

RESTLESSNESS, s. a state wherein a person cannot sleep, will not cease from action, or is always in motion.

RESTORABLE, a. what may be restored.

RESTORATION, s. the giving again what had been taken away; the recovery of what had been lost. In English History, the recovery of the English crown by the Stuarts, in the person of Charles II. In Architecture, a drawing showing what a ruined edifice was originally, as far as can be determined by the appearance of the ruins, &c.

RESTORATIVE, a. having the power to recruit any waste.

To RESTORE, v. a. [restaurare, Lat.] to give or bring back what is lost, wasted, or taken away; to retrieve from decay; to recover passages, in books, from their corruption.

RESTORER, s. one that restores.

To RESTRAIN, v. a. [restringere, Fr.] to withhold or keep in; to hinder; to repress, suppress, keep in awe; to confine, or limit.

RESTRAINABLE, a. capable to be restrained.

RESTRAINEDLY, ad. with restraint.

RESTRAINER, s. one that restrains; one that withholds.

RESTRAINT, s. [restraint, Fr.] an abridgment of liberty; a prohibition; restriction; hindrance; repression.

To RESTRICT, v. a. [restringo, from stringo, Lat.] to limit or confine.

RESTRICTION, s. [Fr.] confinement; limitation.

RESTRICTIVE, a. expressing limitation. In Physic, binding or astringent.

RESTRICTIVELY, ad. with limitation.

To RESTRINGE, v. a. [restringo, Lat.] to limit; to confine.

RESTRINGENT, a. [Fr.] possessing a restraining quality; styptic; astringent.

RE-STY, a. See RESTIFF.

To RESUBLIME, v. a. to sublime another time.

To RESULT, v. n. [re and salto, Lat.] to fly back; to rise as a consequence; to be produced as an effect, or flow as a consequence.

RESULT, s. resilience; the act of flying back; an effect flowing from the operation of any particular cause; a consequence or inference from premises.

RESULTANCE, s. [Fr.] the act of resulting.

RESUMABLE, a. capable of being taken back.

To RESUME, v. a. [re and sumo, Lat.] to take back what has been given or taken away; to take again; to begin again any thing suspended, dropped, or given over.

RESUMPTION, (resūmshon) s. [Fr.] the act of resuming.

RESUMPTIVE, a. taking back.

RESUPINATION, (resupino, from supino, Lat.) the act of lying on the back.

RESUPINE, a. [resupinus, Lat.] lying with the face upwards.

To RESURVEY, v. a. to review; to survey again.

RESURRECTION, s. [Fr. from resurgo, Lat.] revival after death; the act of rising again after death.

RESUSCITATION, (s. [re and suscito, Lat.] the act of stirring up anew; reviving or arising again.

To RETAIL, v. a. [retailer, Fr.] to divide, or sell in small parcels; to sell at second hand.

RETAIL, s. a sale consisting in small quantities.

RETAILER, s. one who sells by small quantities.

To RETAIN, v. a. [retinere, from teneo, Lat.] to preserve from loss or without discharge; to keep without loss; to keep in pay or hire.—v. n. to belong to or depend on, used with; to keep or continue.

RETAINER, s. a dependant; adherent; hanger-on, for subsistence. In Law, a servant who wears a person's livery, but does not dwell in his house. Also the fee given to a counsellor to retain his services, and prevent his being engaged by the other party in the suit. This is frequently given a long while before a trial, or when, perhaps, there is only a chance that a trial may be necessary.

To RETAKE, v. a. to take again.

To RETALIATE, v. a. [re and talio, Lat.] to return in kind, or like for like; to requite; to repay.

RETALIATION, s. the act of returning like for like.

To RETARD, v. a. [retardo, from tardus, Lat.] to hinder in motion or swiftness; to delay or put off.—v. n. to stay back or delay.

RETARDATION, s. the act of hindering action in motion; delay; hindrance.

RETAORDER, s. obstructer; hinderer.

To RETCH, v. a. [hærecan, Sax.] to contract convulsively, as before vomiting, applied to the stomach; to stretch or lengthen; to gape or yawn.

RETCHESS, a. careless; reckless.

RETECTION, (s. [relectus, from relego, Lat.] the act of discovering to view.

RETENTION, s. [Fr. retentio, from retinere, Lat.] the act of retaining, keeping to, containing, or preserving; limitation or restraint. In Medicine, that state of contraction in the vessels of the body, which makes them hold fast their contents.

RETENTIVE, (a. [retentivus, Fr.] having the power of retaining, or preserving in the mind.

RETENTIVENESS, s. the quality of retention.

RETFORD, or REDFORD, EAST, Nottinghamshire. It stands on the east side of the river Idle, over which there is a handsome bridge. The principal trade of this place is in hops and malt. The canal from Trent to Chesterfield passes near this place. It is 140 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2680. Redford West, communicates with E. Redford by a stone bridge over the Idle. Pop. 618.

RETICENCE, s. [Fr. reticentia, from taceo, Lat.] concealment by silence.

RETICLE, RETICULE, s. [rete, Lat.] a small net; a small elegant bag, carried by ladies as a substitute for a pocket.

RETICULAR, a. in the form of a net.

RETICULATED, a. [reticulatus, Lat.] made of net-work; formed with meshes.

RETIFORM, a. [rete and forma, Lat.] having the form of a net.

RETINA, s. in Anatomy, the inner tunic of the eye, on which the images of the objects seen are thrown.

RETINUE, s. [retinue, Fr.] a number attending on a great person; a train.

RETIRE, v. n. [retirer, Fr.] to go to a place of privacy; to withdraw from sight; to retreat from danger; to quit a public station, or a company.—v. a. to withdraw, or take away.

RETIRED, a. secret; private; withdrawn.

RETIREDNESS, s. the state of being free from public employ, or company; privacy.

RETIREMENT, s. the state of one who quits a public station, or a populous place; a private abode, or way of life.

RETORT, v. a. [re and torqueo, Lat.] to throw back; to return an argument, censure, or any incivility; to bend backwards.

RETORT, s. a censure or reproach returned. In Chemistry, a glass vessel with a curved neck, to which the receiver is fitted, used in distillation, &c.

RETORTER, s. one that retorts.

RETORTION, s. the act of retorting.

RETOSS, v. a. to toss back.

TO RETOUCH, (retüch) v. a. [retoucher, Fr.] to improve by new touches.

TO TRACE, v. a. [tracer, Fr.] to trace back.

TO RETRACT, v. a. [retractus, from re and traho, Lat.] to recall; to recant; to take back; to resume.—v. n. to withdraw concession.

RETRACTATION, s. [Fr.] recantation; change of opinion.

RETRACTION, s. the act of withdrawing something advanced, or changing something done; recantation.

RETREAT, (retreät) s. [retraite, Fr.] a place of privacy or solitude; the act of going back to avoid a superior force; a place of security.

TO RETREAT, (retreät) v. n. to go to a private or solitary dwelling; to take shelter; to retire from a superior enemy; to quit a former place.

TO RETRENCH, v. a. [retrancher, Fr.] to cut off, or pare away; to confine or lessen, applied to expenses.—v. n. to live with less expense or pomp.

RETRENCHMENT, s. [retranchement, Fr.] the act of lopping or paring away any thing superfluous, applied to writings; the act of lessening, applied to expense; an intrenchment covered by a parapet.

TO RETRIBUTE, v. a. [re and tribuo, Lat.] to pay back; to recompense.

RETRIBUTION, s. [Fr.] the act of repaying; a return suitable to an action.

RETRIBUTIVE, RETRIBUTORY, a. repaying; making repayment.

RETRIEVABLE, (retreüvable) a. capable of being retrieved.

TO RETRIEVE, (retreüce) v. a. [retrower, Fr.] to recover or restore after loss, impair, waste, or corruption; to regain, or bring back.

RETRIMENT, s. [retrimentum, Lat.] dress or dregs.

RETROACTION, (retroäktion) s. [retro and ago, Lat.] the act of driving back.

RETROACTIVE, a. having the power to drive back.

TO RETROGRADE, v. n. [retro and cedo, Lat.] to go backwards.

RETROCESSION, (retroäktion) s. the act of going backwards.

RETROGRADATION, s. [retro and gradior, Lat.] the act of going backward. Retrogradation of the nodes of the moon, in Astronomy, is their motion from east to west, or from Aries to Pisces, &c., making a complete revolution in 19 years, nearly.

RETROGRADE, a. [Fr.] going backwards; contrary or opposite. In Astronomy, the planets are said to be retrograde, when, by their motion in the zodiac, they move contrary to the order of the signs; as from the 29° of Pisces to the 28° of the same sign; but this retrogradation is only apparent, and occasioned by the observer's being placed on the earth; for from the sun, the centre of the planetary motions, they always appear direct, and never either stationary or retrograde.

TO RETROGRADE, v. a. to go backwards.

RETROGRESSION, (retrogräshon) s. the act of going backwards.

RETROSPECT, s. [retro and spicio, Lat.] a look cast on things behind; the consideration of things past.

RETROSPECTION, s. the act of considering things past.

RETROSPECTIVE, a. looking backward.

TO RETUND, v. a. [retundo, Lat.] to blunt; to obtund; to turn the edge.

TO RETURN, v. n. [retourner, Fr.] to come back to the same place, or state; to go or come back; to make answer, retort, or reply.—v. a. to repay, requite; give or send back; to give account of; to transmit.

RETURN, s. the act of coming back; retrogression; revolution; vicissitude; repayment of money; profit; remittance; retribution; requital. Returns, or days in back, are certain days in each term, appointed for the return of writs, &c. In Building, it is a side or part that falls away from the foreside of any straight work.

RETURNER, s. one who pays or remits money.

RETZ, CARDINAL DE, whose family name was John Francis Paul de Gondy, a great political intriguer in France, during the 17th century. He was, in his earlier life, a very profligate man; but after being elevated to high rank in the church he was somewhat more guarded in his conduct, although far from reformed. In the Fronde he served under the king first, and afterwards against him. He was imprisoned on the restoration of order, but escaped; and after some time, having been pardoned by Louis XIV. he retired from the stage he had played so busy a part on; and died in 1679, aged 66 years. His Memoirs are valuable as records of the times, although he may be partial in the picture he gives of himself.

REUCHLIN, JOHN, called also CAPNION, after the prevalent custom of his age of translating the names of scholars into Latin or Greek, an eminent German scholar and philologist, of the age before the Reformation. He studied in France first, and afterwards at various celebrated universities, and began to practise as a jurist. He afterwards travelled in Italy with a German noble, and greatly increased his learning, whilst he was received with all honour from the scholars and patrons of scholarship in that country. He held a distinguished rank amongst the great men of his times, and was professor of Hebrew and Greek at Wittenberg, Ingolstadt, and Tübingen. He taught Melancthon, and was a man of liberal opinions, as he proved in his controversy with a bigoted converted Jew, named Picferkom, although he did not side with the incipient Reformation. He died in 1522, aged 67 years. He wrote the first Hebrew grammar and lexicon for Germany, and several other works.

TO REVEAL, (reveäl) v. a. [revelo, Lat.] to discover; to show; to disclose; to lay open; to impart something from heaven.

REVEALER, (reveäler) s. one that shows or makes known; one that discovers to view; a discoverer.

REVELLE, s. [Fr.] the beat of a drum in the morning, to summon the soldiers.

REVEL, an opulent and well-fortified city of Esthonia, in Russia, formerly one of the Hans Towns. The harbour is spacious and convenient, and a part of the Russian fleet is usually stationed in it. It is a place of considerable trade, and much frequented by English and Dutch merchants. It is seated on the Gulf of Finland, partly on a mountain, 200 miles from Petersburg. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 50. 26. N. Long. 24. 44. E.

TO REVEL, v. n. to feast with loose and clamorous mirth.

REVEL, s. a public rejoicing time; or a feast with loose and noisy jollity.

TO REVEAL, v. a. [re and vello, Lat.] to retract; to draw back. REVELATION, s. [Fr. revelo, Lat.] discovery; particularly applied to the discovery of sacred truths by the Scriptures, or by supernatural means. See APOCALYPSE.

REVELLER, s. one who feasts with noisy jollity.

REVEL-ROUT, s. a mob; an unlawful assembly; rabble.

REVELRY, s. loose, noisy mirth.

To REVENGE, v. a. [revancher, Fr.] to return an injury; to punish for injuries.

REVENGE, s. satisfaction for an injury, taken by the injured party, without regard to law or justice.

REVENGEFUL, a. addicted to return injuries; vindictive.

REVENGEFULLY, ad. vindictively.

REVENGER, s. one who punishes crimes; one who resents injuries.

REVENUE, s. [Fr.] income; or the annual profits of lands or other funds; the income of a government, from all sources.

REVERBERANT, a. [re and berbero, Lat.] resounding; beating back.

To REVERBERATE, v. a. to beat back. In Chemistry, to heat in a furnace, where the flame is beat from the top back on the bottom.—v. n. to be beat back; to resound.

REVERBERATION, s. [Fr.] the act of beating or driving back.

REVERBERATORY, a. [réverbatoire, Fr.] beaten or driven back. In Chemistry, &c., applied to a furnace closely stopped at the top, so as to return the flame upon the matter placed near the bottom.

To REVERE, v. a. [révérer, Fr. from re and verere, Lat.] to regard with awe; to pay submissive respect; to venerate.

REVERENCE, s. [Fr.] awful regard; an act of obeisance; an academical title, usually given to the clergy.

To REVERENCE, v. a. to look on as an object of respect and awful regard.

REVERENCER, s. one who regards with reverence.

REVEREND, a. [Fr.] venerable; deserving awe and respect, on account of years and station; an academical title now given to the Romanist and English clergy.

REVERENT, a. humble; expressing awful regard and veneration.

REVERENTIAL, (révérential) a. [reverential, Fr.] expressing reverence; proceeding from awe and veneration.

REVERENTIALLY, ad. with reverence.

REVERENTLY, ad. respectfully; with awe.

REVERER, s. one who venerates; one who reveres.

REVERIE, s. [Fr.] loose musing; irregular thought; delirium; distraction.

REVERSAL, s. the act of changing a sentence.

To REVERSE, v. a. [re and verso, Lat.] to turn upside down; to overturn; to turn back; to contradict or repeal; to put one thing in the place of another.—v. n. to return.

REVERSE, s. change; a contrary or opposite; that side of a coin on which the emblem, royal arms, or designation, is impressed.

REVERSIBLE, a. [Fr.] capable of being reversed.

REVERSION, (réversion) s. [Fr.] the state of being to enjoy after the death of the present possessor; succession, or right of succession. Reversion of series, in Algebra, is the finding the value of the root, or unknown quantity, whose powers enter the term of an infinite series, by means of another infinite series in which it is not contained.

REVERSIONARY, (réversionary) a. consisting in reversion; to be enjoyed after the death of another.

To REVERT, v. a. to change; to turn to the contrary; to reverbate, or beat back.—v. n. to return or fall back.

To REVEST, v. a. [re and vestio, Lat.] to clothe again; to re-invest; to vest again in a possession or office.

REVESTIARY, s. [révestiaire, Fr.] a place where dresses are deposited.

REVISION, (révision) s. [re and vivo, Lat.] return to life.

To REVICTUAL, (revict) v. a. to stock with victuals again.

To REVIEW, (revue) v. a. to look back; to consider any thing past, or examine a second time; to see again.

REVIEW, (revue) s. second examination; the act of surveying an army, when performing its exercise; an essay on any book, showing its value or worthlessness, analyzing its contents, and examining its statements; also, a periodical work devoted to such essays.

To REVILLE, v. a. to reproach; to treat with contumely.

REVLIER, s. one who reviles.

REVISAL, (revizal) s. a second examination or review.

To REVISSE, (revise) v. a. [re and viso, Lat.] to review; to examine or look over a second time.

REVISE, (revise) s. a second perusal or examination; among printers, a second proof of a sheet after it is corrected.

REVISEUR, (reviseur) s. [réviseur, Fr.] an examiner; a superintendent.

REVISION, (révision) s. [Fr.] review.

To REVISIT, (revizit) v. a. [re and visit, Lat.] to visit again.

REVISAL, s. the act of restoring from a state of languor, oblivion, or obscurity; particularly applied to the restoration of religious fervour and piety after a period of coldness and decay.

To REVIVE, v. n. [re and vivo, Lat.] to return to life; to recover from a state of obscurity, oblivion, or languor.—v. a. to bring to life again; to raise from languor, insensibility, or oblivion; to bring back to the memory; to quicken. In Chemistry, to recover from a mixed state.

REVIVER, s. that which invigorates or revives.

REVIVIFICATION, s. the act of recalling to life.

REVIVISCENCY, s. renewal of life.

REUNION, s. [Fr.] return to a state of juncture, concord, or cohesion; a meeting or festival to celebrate restored or perpetuated friendship.

To REUNITÉ, v. a. to join any thing separated; to reconcile.—v. n. to join or cohere again.

REVOCABLE, a. [Fr. from re and oco, Lat.] that may be recalled or repealed.

REVOCABLENESS, s. the quality of being revocable.

To REVOCATE, v. a. to recall; to call back.

REVOCATION, s. [Fr.] act of recalling; state of being recalled; repeal; reversal.

To REVOKE, v. a. to repeal, or reverse; to check; to draw back.

To REVOLT, v. n. [révolter, Fr.] to fall off from one to another, including the idea of something bad or rebellious.

REVOLT, s. [révolte, Fr.] change of sides; gross departure from duty; desertion.

REVOLTER, s. one who changes sides; a deserter.

To REVOLVE, v. n. [re and volve, Lat.] to roll in a circle; to perform a course in a circle. In Law, to fall in a regular course of changing possessors.—v. a. to roll any thing round; to consider or meditate upon.

REVOLUTION, s. [Fr.] the course of any thing which returns to the point from whence it sets out; a space measured by any body revolving in an orbit; rotation round an axis. In Politics, organic changes in states, whether effected peacefully or by physical force; distinguished from a revolt, which is merely the defiance of existing authorities by a small party in a state; and from a rebellion, which is a revolt on a larger scale, and only proposes the change of the parties who hold the supreme power; both which, also, are always characterized by the use of physical force, whilst some of the greatest revolutions have been accomplished without any display of it, and in others it has been an accidental accompaniment, not bearing at all on the question at issue. In History, the Puritan Revolution is the great change that was effected in the government and laws of this country taken by the years 1640 and 1660, beginning with the stand taken by the Long Parliament against absolutism in Charles I., and prelating in Laud and others, and ending by the treason of General Monk, who, seeing the divisions and disorganization of the Puritans, restored Charles II. (See CHARLES and CROMWELL.) The Glorious Revolution is a name given by the Whigs to the change effected in 1688, when James II. was compelled to abdicate, and William III. was made king; by which the aristocracy obtained the actual supremacy in the state, which they have held ever since. The French Revolution is the name usually assigned to that portion of French history which commences with the financial difficulties of Louis XVI., and ends with the establishment of the Directory; but which would be more properly continued to the present day, since the revolution of 1830, and that of the present year, (1848), are, in truth, but continuations of the resolute effort to obtain political freedom, which was checked by the violence of the Reign of Terror, overthrown for a time by the establishment of the Directory, and by the Consulate, the Empire, and the restoration of the Bourbons, in 1815; was revived in 1830, and again overthrown by the bourgeoisie, or middle classes, and by the petty, family ambition of the Citizen King; and has now, under fairer auspices, been again revived by the proclamation of a republic, and other measures of the Provisional Government. During the period usually designated the French Revolution, there were, in fact, many revolutions; the stand made by the commons' delegates, and the assumption of the name of National Assembly, was the first; the Tennis-court Oath was another; the fall of the Bastille, which made the others significant, was the third;—and of the same kind were the swearing to the new constitution; the decree of detronement, and the declaration of a republic, &c. &c., till the last exercise of the sacred right of insurrection, which was quelled by Buonaparte's artillery. It is remarkable, that the first resistance to the old régime was made by the privileged classes, by their organs the parlements; and the next, by the middle classes, in the Assembly. The armed rising of Paris, and the taking of the royal fortress, the Bastille, which broke the power of the court, was effected by the working classes almost wholly, whilst the constitution prepared by the Assembly was one which the middle classes alone could approve; and in the subsequent struggle, when the republic was declared, there was no good faith intended towards the men who had only their manual skill and their patience as their wealth, by the Girondins; who, therefore, fell before the representatives of the democratical idea, the Reign of Terror, which no one would venture to justify, yet was the only thing which saved France from the coalized kings, and an immediate restoration of royalty; but it had also the unhappy result of misrepresenting democracy, and of making the nation take, with little murmuring, a constitution less favourable to the multitudes, than that which the nation had indignantly overthrown; and, furthermore, of making the steps of Buonaparte to the imperial throne comparatively free from impediments. Three kings, and two successful risings of the people, have shown what a mockery the charter was; and this latest change has proved, beyond controversy, that a monarchy based on republican principles, is a soleism that human nature cannot endure. The hopes entertained respecting the recent change, rest not only on the manifest progress of the people during the last 60 years, but on all the circumstances preceding, attending, and consequent on the abolition of royalty by the arms of the people. And, perhaps, few circumstances speak more favourably respecting the stability of the new republic than this:—It required many years, and countless armies, before, to effect any change in the other absolute governments of Europe, and they all returned to their former condition at the peace, in 1815;—now, not two months are past, and almost every government in Europe feels itself unsafe; and from some of the very worst, constitutional liberty has been already wrested, without the raising of a finger, much less the threat of invasion, on the part of the fountain of modern European liberty—France.

REVULSION, (revulsiō), s. [revellō, Lat.] the act of drawing humours from one part of the body to another.

REYNOLDS, SIR JOSHUA, a celebrated English portrait painter. Having early in life exhibited a strong predilection for that study, he was placed with the eminent painter, Hudson, for instruction; and soon commenced on his own account, with some distinguished patronage. He afterwards travelled in Italy, where he devoted himself to the study of the works of the great artists, collected in almost all the cities there. On his return he rapidly rose in general estimation, and received most substantial rewards for his skill. He was the first president of the Royal Academy, and was knighted; and subsequently received from other sources other honorary titles, marking the high esteem which was entertained for him; being finally appointed painter to the king. He belonged to the club which boasted the names of Johnson, Burke, Garrick, and others; and he delivered and published several valuable lectures to the Academy. Beside his portraits he painted many other pictures, most of which are familiar in this country by the many engravings from them. He died in 1792, aged 69 years; and was buried in St. Paul's cathedral. The history of British Art since his days testifies to his great influence; but it may be questioned whether that has been an unmixed benefit to it. It is but in the present generation that our artists are beginning to study it anew.

TO REWARD, (re in this word and its derivatives is pronounced, like au; rewards, rewarder, &c.) v. a. [from re and aiudare] to give in return; to repay; to recompense for good.

REWARD, s. some benefit conferred on a person for doing well.

REWARDER, s. one that rewards; one that recompenses.

RE'ZAN, RIA'ZAN, a government of Russia, bounded by the governments of Moscow, Tula, Tamboff, and Vladimir. It is about 160 miles in length, and 100 broad. The country is populous, and fertile in corn, and had formerly its own princes. Pop. about 1,500,000. Rezan is the capital.

RHABDOMANCY, s. [rhabdos and manteia, Gr.] divination by a wand.

RHÆTIA, in Ancient Geography, a country lying S. of the Danube, between Vindelicæ and the Alps. It was inhabited chiefly by the Germanic tribe named Rheti, whence it received its designation. Its principal towns were Curia, Veldidena, and Tridentum. The Ænus, the Athesis, the Rhenus, &c. were its rivers. The Alps now called the Tyrolese, or Rætian Alps, were included in this country.

RHAPSODY, s. [rhapto and ode, Gr.] one who writes without regular dependence of one part upon another.

RHAPSODY, s. any composition consisting of parts made without necessary dependence or mutual connexion.

RHEIMS, a large and ancient city in the department of Marne, France. The remains of an amphitheatre, a castle, and a triumphal arch, are among the ancient monuments of the Romans here. It is long and narrow, and the houses are low, but the grand square is very elegant. Here are manufactures of flannel, coverlets, and other woollen stuffs; and their gingerbread is famous. It is seated in a plain, surrounded by hills, which produce excellent wine, on the river Vesle, 100 miles from Paris. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 49. 15. N. Long. 0. 41. E.

RHEINBERY, s. in Botany, a name of the buckthorn.

RHEINISH PROVINCE, that part of the kingdom of Prussia lying on the Rhine. It borders on France, Belgium, Bavaria, several of the smaller states of Germany, and the Netherlands; and is isolated from the rest of Prussia, excepting Westphalia. It is mountainous, except in the part next Belgium and the Netherlands; and some of its heights exceed 1500 and 2000 feet. The Rhine, the Moselle, &c. are its chief rivers. It yields many valuable metals, coals, building and other kinds of stone, &c. &c. abundantly. And in the valleys and plains it is fertile, and produces corn in great plenty, and other sorts of agricultural wealth, with cattle, sheep, &c. In manufactures it is equally rich; and has great advantages for trade, although not near the sea. It contains 5 governments, or lesser provinces; and Aix-la-Chapelle, Dusseldorf, Cologne, Mentz, Treves, &c. are its principal cities. Pop. about 2,500,000.

RHETORIC, s. [Gr.] the art of speaking so as to rouse or persuade; oratory; the science of persuasion, as logic is of conviction.

RHETORICAL, a. [rhetoricus, Lat.] figurative; oratorical; belonging to rhetoric.

TO RHETORICATE, v. n. [rhetorico, Lat.] to play the orator by making use of figurative expressions, and addressing the passions.

RHETORICIAN, (retorician) s. [rhetoricien, Fr.] one who teaches the science of rhetoric.

RHEUM, s. [rheuma, Gr. rheuma, Fr.] in Physiology, &c., a watery fluid, secreted by the mucous lining of the nose and fauces.

RHEUMATIC, a. proceeding from rheum; belonging to the rheumatism. Rheumatic Fever, or Acute Rheumatism, is a less persistent, but far more trying disease, than common rheumatism; it is also always occasioned by cold, or wet; whilst rheumatism may be constitutional or hereditary.

RHEUMATISM, s. in Medicine, a severe pain in the muscular parts of the arms or legs, in the back, neck, or head; arising often from exposure to cold and damp.

RHEUMY, a. full of sharp moisture.

RHIN BAS, a department of France, adjoining to Bavaria and Baden, and bounded by the departments of Haut Rhin, Vosges, Meurthe, and Moselle. It is about 65 miles in length, and 40 in mean breadth. It is hilly, owing to the neighbourhood of the Vosges, and is watered by the Rhine, the Sarre, the Ill, &c. &c. Coal and iron are found, but not abundantly; building-stone and limestone, &c. are more plentiful. Corn, tobacco, wine, cattle, timber, &c. &c. are produced in great abundance. It has also good and valuable manufactures in many of the towns. The capital is Strassburg. Pop. about 600,000.

RHIN HAUT, a department of France, lying next to Baden and Switzerland, and bounded by the departments of Bas Rhin, Vosges, Haute Saône, and Doubs. It is 60 miles long, by 30 broad. It is mountainous, and has points exceeding 4000 feet in height. The Rhine, the Ill, and other lesser rivers water it. Building-stone of the most valuable and durable kinds abounds; with iron, lead, and other metals. Agriculture is not neglected; and corn, wine, cattle, &c. are plentifully produced. It has also in its towns many useful and valuable manufactures. Colmar is its capital. Pop. about 500,000.

RHINE, a large river of Europe, rising in the Alps, in the Grisons, running through and between Switzerland, Germany, France, and the Netherlands, till it enters the N. Sea, by several mouths, after a course of about 1000 miles, having received the waters of a vast number of streams from both sides, some of which are of considerable size. It is celebrated for the romantic beauty of its scenery, especially in the French and Prussian part; and there are some magnificent cataracls in its course, called the Falls of the Rhine. Basel, Strassburg, Mainz, Bonn, Cologne, Coblenz, Düsseldorf, &c. stand on its banks, beside many ruins of old baronial castles.

RHINOCEEROS, s. [rhin and keras, Gr.] in Zoology, a large animal covered with thick scales, and having a horn, or two horns, growing out of its nose. It is an inhabitant of India and the Burman empire, and is a very formidable and untamable beast.

RHODE ISLAND, one of the United States of N. America. It lies on the Atlantic, and is bounded by the States of Connecticut and Massachusetts. It is 49 miles long, and 29 broad, and is the smallest State in the Union. The N. W. part is hilly and rocky, but the remainder is level. The rivers are not large. Narraganset Bay extends above 30 miles into the State, and contains a number of fine islands; of which the principal are, Rhode Island, 15 miles long, and about 3 broad; Canonicut, 8 miles long, and 1 broad; &c. It has several fine harbours. Iron, copper, coal, and limestone are found here. Corn, fruits, cattle, &c. are produced abundantly. It has, beside, excellent fisheries. Its manufactures are cotton, woollen, iron goods, cordage, &c., and are greater in proportion to its population than those of any other State. It has 62 banks, and no public debt. There is but one college. It is divided into 5 counties, and Newport and Providence are the seats of government, the latter being the second town in New England. Pop. 108,530. This State was founded by Roger Williams, when he was forced to fly from Massachusetts because of his advocacy of religious liberty, in 1644.

RHODES, an island of the Mediterranean Sea, near Asia Minor, about 40 miles long, and 15 broad. It played a conspicuous and celebrated part in ancient history, and the colossal image of the Sun, which bestrode the entrance of its harbour, was one of the wonders of the then world. It afterwards was held by the knights of St. John of Jerusalem. It is a fertile island, with but little trade, and is very badly ruled by Turkey. Rhodes is its capital. Pop. about 30,000. The town of Rhodes is situated in Lat. 36. 26. N. Long. 28. 12. E.

RHODIUM, s. [rhodon, Gr.] in Chemistry, a metal discovered by Wollaston, with a white colour and metallic lustre, brittle, and extremely hard. It is not attacked by any of the acids in its pure state, and is oxidized by being ignited with nitre, or the bisulphate of potash.

RHODODENDRON, s. [rhodon and dendron, Gr.] in Botany, a handsome kind of flowering shrub, found on the S. borders of Asia and Europe, and in America; of which several species are commonly cultivated in gardens in this country.

RHOMBIC, a. shaped like a rhombus.

RHOMBOIDAL, a. approaching in shape to a rhombus.

RHOMBOIDES, s. [rhombos and eidos, Gr.] a quadrangular figure, having its opposite sides and opposite angles equal; a parallelogram. In Natural History, a kind of mussel-fish; a turbot-fish. In Surgery, a pair of muscles of the shoulder-blade, so called from their figure.

RHOMBUS, RHOMB, s. [rhombe, Fr. rhombos, Gr.] in Geometry, an equilateral quadrangular figure, having two opposite angles acute, and two obtuse.

RHÔNE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Saône et Loire, Loire, Isère, and Ain. It is 60 miles long, and about 25 broad. Some heights connected with the Cévennes occupy the W. part of this tract, and some of them attain to between 3000 and 4000 feet in elevation. The Rhône is its chief river, but there are several others connected with it, and with other large streams. Coal, with copper and lead, and some useful kinds of stone and earth, are found here. Corn, fruits, wine, sheep, &c. &c. are produced abundantly. It has, too, large forests of valuable trees, and good fisheries. The manufactures of the department are valuable. Lyons is the capital. Population, about 520,000.

RHÔNE, a large river of France, rising in Mount Fourche on the confines of Switzerland. After a course of above 500 miles, partly in Switzerland and partly in France, during which it flows through the Lake of Geneva, it falls into the Mediterranean Sea by several mouths. Geneva, Lyons, Avignon, and other cities stand on its banks.

RHUBARB, s. [rhabarbarum, Lat.] in Botany and Medicine, the root of a plant, or genus of plants, growing in China, Siberia, India, &c., which is remarkable for its purgative and astringent properties, and is a very valuable, though by no means agreeable drug. Some kinds of this plant are cultivated in England, and of the thick leaf-stalks agreeably acid tarts are made, before the fruits are in season.

RHUMB, s. [rumb de vent, Fr.] in Navigation, is a vertical circle of any given place, or the intersection of such a circle with the horizon; in which last sense rhumb is the same with the point of the compass.

RHYME, s. [rime, Fr.] that peculiar structure of lines of poetry, which prevails in most modern lyric verse, but was unknown to Greek and Latin poets, by which the last syllable or syllables of two or more lines, are made to have the same sound. Figuratively, poetry; a poem. Allyme or reason, is a proverbial expression for number or sense.

To RHYME, v. n. to have the same sound; to make verses.

RHYMER, RHYMSTER, s. one who makes rhymes; a versifier.

RHYTHM, s. [rhythmos, Gr.] in Music, is used to signify a certain number of pulses in any given time. In Poetry, the harmonious structure of the lines of composition, resembling the cadences of music.

RHYTHMICAL, a. harmonical; having proportion of one sound to another.

RIAL, RYAL, a Spanish silver coin, equal to about sixpence three farthings sterling.

RIB, s. [tribe, Sax.] in Anatomy, an arched bone, sustaining the inside of the thorax. Any piece of timber or other matter used to strengthen the side of a ship; any prominence running in lines.

RIBALD, s. [ribald, Fr.] a loose, rough, or brutish person.

RIBALDRY, s. [ribaldie, Fr.] lewd, coarse language.

RIBAND, RIBBON, s. [rubande, ruban, Fr.] a fillet, or narrow slip of silk, worn for ornament.

RIBBED, a. having ribs.

RIBBLE, a river which rises in the West Riding of Yorkshire, and, crossing Lancashire, falls into the Irish Sea below Preston.

To RIBBROAST, v. n. to beat soundly. A burlesque word.

RIC, a. [Sax.] powerful, rich, or valiant.

RICARDO, DAVID, a distinguished political economist, of Jewish family; who having accumulated a considerable property by trade, and on the stock exchange, devoted his attention to the great questions connected with the wealth of nations, and wrote in the Morning Chronicle, on the Currency, Taxation, Population, &c. He afterwards entered parliament, and became a great authority on those matters, for the collective wisdom of the nation. The notorious bill of Mr. Peel in 1819, which produced such disastrous results in England, and has yet bitterness in store for her, was based on his principles, and supported by his assertions; and although he had to admit that he was mistaken, it has never been laid aside. He died in 1823, aged 51 years.

RICE, s. [oryza, Lat.] in Botany, Commerce, &c., an esculent grain, cultivated in the E. Indies, tropical Americas, &c., and covered with a husk like barley.

RICE BIRD, s. in Natural History, a beautiful bird found in the islands of Sumatra, Java, &c., which lives much on rice, and is very destructive. Also, a bird which lives on rice, but which is peculiar to the tropical countries of the W. hemisphere.

RICE PAPER, s. the name given to small thin sheets of a vegetable substance, brought from China, used for painting with brilliant opaque colours. It is supposed to be made by cutting, with a very sharp knife, the pith of a tree spirally.

RICH, s. [riche, Fr. rica, Sax.] abounding in money, lands, or other possessions, applied to persons; splendid, valuable, sumptuous, applied to dress; having any quality in great quantities, or to a great degree; fertile, applied to soil.

RICH, CLAUDIUS JAMES, a learned orientalist, who receiving, chiefly because of his great proficiency in the oriental languages, an appointment in the E. India Company's service, resided for some years at Bagdad, where he made a great collection of antiquities connected with ancient Babylonia. He returned to that city, after a visit to Europe; and whilst journeying to India, died at Shiraz, in 1821, aged 44 years. He published Memoirs of Ancient Babylon; and his journals were printed after his death. His MSS., which contain his own astronomical observations, as well as the collections he made, are in the British Museum.

RICHARD, the name of three English kings. The First, surnamed, from his chivalric prowess, Cœur de Lion, or the Lion-hearted, was son and successor to Henry I. He had been engaged with his brothers and their mother in those disgraceful and unsuccessful rebellions against his father; and had at last, in conjunction with Philip Augustus of France, made war on his father, the vexation of which was believed to have caused his death. His reign began with a most merciless attack on the Jews throughout the kingdom, and he was not clear from suspicion of abetting it. But shortly, along with the French king, he set out on the famous 3rd Crusade. The armies met at Messina, in Sicily, and there the dissensions began, which caused the fruitless termination of that costly armament. At Sicily Richard set some matters straight with the king; at Cyprus he gained his first notable victory, though not against the Muslims. The first undertaking in Palestine, was the siege of Acre, which terminated by a capitulation; and there the private piques of the leaders broke out into open quarrel. The king of France returned to Europe, and Richard prosecuted the crusade. But though he gained a terrible name for his personal valour and might, and was the victor at Ascalon and Jaffa, he could not attempt Jerusalem, and he would not look on the city that he had purposed to rescue from the infidel. Returning to Europe, without his army, and without his train, in a small vessel, and endeavouring to make his way through Germany in disguise, he was discovered, and imprisoned by the emperor, so secretly that none knew the place of his confinement. Meanwhile the affairs of England did not thrive. The people, oppressed by public burdens, harassed by the proud barons, used as tools for John's designs of usurpation, were in great straits and disorder; but the generosity and bravery of Richard had made him thoroughly popular, and a great effort was made to redeem him from his captivity. This was at length done, and he returned to his kingdom again, and restored tranquillity. The cruel execution of Long-beard, a Saxon patriot, was almost the only other home event of this reign; the rest of which was an often-interrupted war with the king of France, signalized by some brilliant victories won almost wholly by Richard's name and sword. At length, whilst besieging the fortress of one of his Norman barons, who had refused some feudal service, he was shot by a cross-bow man; and died in 1199, aged 42 years, having been king for about 10. This monarch, who is every where cited as the ideal of chivalry in its palmiest days, represents the social spirit of that age, when the strong hand alone was the title to reverence. In spite of all his faults, he had many noble points in his character; and his pardon and reward to the archer, by whose hand he fell, for his bravery when brought as a prisoner before him, reveals the true secret of the existence and praise of the knightly feudalism, which played so large a part in the history of human progress. But he fits not at all with our idea of a king. He was a true knight-errant, and was, unfortunately for England, the inheritor of its throne. Richard II. was son to the Black Prince, and succeeded his grandfather, Edward III. He was a feeble, fickle, and unfortunate prince. The war with France, inherited with the crown, was carried on ingloriously, and terminated by truces and marriages. The two great events of the reign were, the preaching of John Wicliffe, in spite of all the attempts made by the friars and bishops to convict him of heresy and destroy him; which not only laid the foundation for the genuine Reformation under the Puritans and their successors in after ages, but kindled the fire that, from the days of Huss to those of Luther, and onward, in spite of 30 years' wars, and persecutions of most varied and fearful kinds, throughout all N. Europe drove away papal darkness, and kept safe from foes so malignant the spiritual truths we now possess:—and the revolt of the serfs, who, feeling in this new doctrine that they were men, before God, no less in account than lords and kings, and that nevertheless they were treated as cattle and goods, and ground to the dust with taxes to support the prodigal and useless wars, determined to made an effort to obtain their freedom. Persecution kept the former effort down; and falsehood, and armed force of soldiers and of law, destroyed those who were at all prominent in the latter. Richard interfered in a solemn trial by battle, which he had himself permitted, between the son of John of Gaunt and the Duke of Norfolk, and banished both parties; but before the term of his exile had expired, the Duke of Hereford returned to claim his lands and titles, which fell to him by his father's death; and being greatly seconded by the whole nation, deposed the petulant and feeble king; who was soon afterwards put to death by violence or hunger in Pontefract castle, in 1399, aged 33 years, having been king in name and position for 11. Richard III. was the youngest son of Richard Duke of York, who began the bloody wars of the Roses; and under him, and under his brother Edward, afterwards Edward IV., he distinguished himself for his bravery, and also for his unscrupulous cruelty. He is charged, with great show of truth, with having by assassination, or by plot, removed all that stood between him and the throne after Edward IV., and he was by him left regent during the minority of his son, who was proclaimed under the title of Edward V. Soon afterwards the young king disappeared, and Richard, by the popular choice, impelled by the machinations of some of his creatures, was declared king. He is believed to have removed, under the forms of justice, all the instruments he had used to gain the throne, the last being Buckingham, who was actually in arms to second the attempt of the Earl of Richmond, who was about to invade England. At the battle of Bosworth field, after an obstinate contest, the wars of the two houses of York and Lancaster were ended by the death of Richard, and the proclamation of the conqueror as Henry VII. Richard fell in 1485, aged 35 years, having reigned somewhat more than 2. The popular belief respecting him, which represents him as the "crook-backed tyrant," is most probably a tradition that dates from his own times, for he had many opponents, and contests were then, as now, carried on by scurrilous squibs, as well as by swords. He could not be much worse than the lords he was opposed by, but he was stronger than they. He had a better title to the crown than Henry VII., who was far below him in all but kingcraft, and therefore it was useful to blacken his name, that his successful rival might keep without war, what he had won by war. He is not now charged with the murder of Edward V., and efforts have been made to clear his memory from all reproach.

RICHARD OF CIRENCESTER, a Benedictine monk of Westminster, who wrote several works on history and theology, but the treatise to which he owes his fame, is On the Ancient State of Britain. No traces of his personal history are known beyond these. He lived in the latter part of the 14th century.

RICHARDSON, SAMUEL, an eminent English novel-writer of the former part of the last century. He was a printer by trade, and obtained the office of printer of the Journals of the House of Commons: afterwards he purchased or obtained by election other advantages of a like nature. His first work was a volume of Familiar Letters, and out of that his novel called Pamela arose; his next, Clarissa, established his reputation; and Sir Charles Grandison did not injure it. He published some smaller works also. His character was excellent, though not notorious for its elevation. His writings mark a new era in English works of fiction. He died in 1761, aged 72 years.

RICHELIEU, CARDINAL DE, ARMAND JEAN DU PLESSIS, an eminent statesman and minister of France in the earlier part of the 17th century. He was first intended for the army, but an opening occurring in the church, he was trained for it, and made a bishop at a very early age. He had the good fortune to be made almoner by the queen-mother, and thence he rose to be secretary of state. When the king and his mother quarrelled, the bishop was forbidden the court; but afterwards, being successful in an effort to restore peace, he was made prime minister and cardinal. His ministry was marked by great and daring schemes, by the unscrupulous use of every means to carry them out, and by a most astonishing amount of success; yet it was to them that much of the woes of France during the last two generations may be ascribed. He laid the foundations of the absolutism which Louis XIV. built up. He secured France to the Church of Rome, without incurring the odium that the St. Bartholomew had done, or the revocation of the Edict of Nantes did after his death. He may be regarded also as one of the founders of that international policy, which seems now about to expire, and which preserves Europe and humanity by the much talked of balance of power. To this may be ascribed the part he took in the 30 years' war, and other secret movements and machinations to get for France a greater weight in European affairs, and to punish and awe such as would not consent to it. He left many of his schemes to be completed by his successor, Cardinal Mazarin, who entered into his spirit and purposes most heartily. Amongst other monuments which he left in Paris, the ci-devant Palais Royal is the one whose subsequent history is the most remarkable. He died in 1642, aged 57 years. An autobiography has been published.

RICHES, s. [richesses, Fr.] money or possessions; a splendid, sumptuous appearance.

RICHLY, ad. in a splendid, wealthy, pteous, or abundant manner; truly, used in an ironical sense.

RICHMOND, Surrey. Here is a royal palace, where the kings of England formerly resided, with a very fine park, and delightful gardens. It is a mere village, but its beautiful situation, and the rich and diversified prospect from a hill near the river, make it a favourite resort in the summer-time. It is 9 miles from London. Pop. 7760.

RICHMOND, Yorkshire, N. Riding. Here is a flourishing paper-manufactory. It is pleasantly seated on the river Swale, over which it has a stone bridge; and it has several remains of its military and monastic edifices, which made it, in olden time, a place of great importance. It is 232 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3992.

RICHMOND, the capital city of Virginia, United States. It stands on the James river, at the lower falls, and at the head of the tide-water, over which are 2 bridges, connecting it with Manchester. Its noble situation is much enhanced by the regularity of its plan, and the excellence of its buildings. The government buildings and the numerous public edifices are very fine. There are 3 colleges here. In trade and manufactures it is alike eminent. It is 117 miles from Washington. Pop. 20,153. There are 20 other places in the Union that bear the same name.

RICHMOND, LEGH, an English clergyman, whose little work called Annals of the Poor, containing those exquisitely written religious biographies, The Dairyman's Daughter and The Young Cottager, conjointly with his simple piety and devout life, have made well-known to all classes in England. He edited also a work of larger pretensions, almost unknown, except amongst the clergy of the evangelical school, called The Fathers of the English Church, a selection from the writings of early divines, similar in its scope to the publications of the Parker Society. He died in 1827, aged 55 years.

RICHNESS, s. the quality of abounding in money, possessions, finery, or fertility; abundance, or perfection of any quality.

RICHTER, JEAN PAUL FRIEDRICH, an eminent German writer of the last age. He received his first instructions from his father, who was a rural minister; and afterwards at a public school, and at Leipzig, studied, with the purpose of following his father's steps. But Literature and Art wooed and won his heart, and Theology was renounced. After a long and brave conflict with great poverty,—during which he continued his studies; took private pupils; wandered to many German cities; wrote his first works, and with great difficulty found a publisher,—he found favour with those who could appreciate his genius, married, obtained a pension from the government of Bavaria, and settled at Baireuth. There he spent, with few and brief visits to other places, the remainder of his active literary life, receiving the honours and friendships his merit deserved. He died in 1825, aged 62 years; having been blind for nearly a year. His writings occupy 60 small volumes; and are chiefly works of fiction, of which Hesperus, and Titan, are reckoned the master-pieces; and Quintus Fixlein, Flower, Fruit, and Thorn Pieces, Invisible Lodge, Wild Oats, &c. &c. the chief of the others. He also wrote a treatise on Education, called Lexana, an Introduction to Aesthetics, a treatise on the immortality of the Soul, called Selma, &c. Some of these works are now made familiar to English readers. The chief element of them all, as it was of the man himself, is most loving humour. His style is most fantastical, yet genuine;—metaphors piled on metaphors, culled from every region of knowledge; fancies of the wildest, most daring nature; language, so peculiar, that even for his own countrymen a dictionary of his words was needed;—characterize all his works, philosophical, satirical, imaginative. He enjoyed the hearty esteem of the greatest literary men of his day; and his death was regarded as a universal loss.

RICK, s. a pile of corn or hay, regularly heaped up, and sheltered from wet; a heap of corn or hay.

RICKETS, s. [rachitis, Lat.] in Medicine, a disease in children, in which the bones grow soft, and the muscles flaccid, whilst the other organs of the body lose their tone and vigour. It is not always fatal.

RICKETY, a. disordered with the rickets.

RICKMAN, THOMAS, an English architect, who was led to this profession from having adopted the study of Gothic architecture as an amusement for the leisure of his business. He was originally a Quaker, and was trained partly for the medical profession; but afterwards became a clerk in Liverpool, where he commenced that pursuit which led to his present eminence. He built a great number of new churches, and some other buildings in the Gothic style; and published a standard work on his favourite study. He died in 1841, aged 65 years.

RICOCHET, s. [Fr.] a rebound; a mode of firing canons and mortars, so that the shot or shell, rebounding from the ground once or twice, shall strike a fortified work at a particular angle, which can be done in no other way.

RICTURE, s. [riatura, Lat.] a gaping.

RID, pret. of TO RIDE.

TO RID, v. a. [arēdan, Sax.] to set free from danger or trouble; to destroy; to despatch.

RIDDANCE, s. deliverance from danger, encumbrance, trouble, or any thing one is glad to be freed from.

RIDDEN, participle of TO RIDE.

RIDDLE, (ridl) s. [rædels, Sax.] a question or problem, expressed in obscure terms, in order to try a person's wit; any thing puzzling or not easily solved; an enigma.—[hridle, Sax.] a coarse or open sieve.

TO RIDDLE, (ridl) v. a. to solve or explain a riddle; to sift by a coarse sieve.—v. n. to speak obscurely.

TO RIDE, v. n. pret. rid or rode, part. rid or ridden; [ridan, Sax.] to travel on horseback, or in a carriage drawn by horses. Figuratively, to travel in, or be borne by, any vehicle; to manage a horse; to be supported in motion.—v. a. to manage insolently and at will; to sit on so as to be carried.

RIDER, s. one who is carried on a horse, or on a vehicle; one who manages or breaks horses; an inserted leaf.

RIDGE, s. [hrigg, Sax. rig, Dan.] the top of the back; the rough or sharp top of any thing, alluding to the vertebrae of the back; ground thrown up by the plough; the top of the house rising to an acute angle. In Farriery, ridges of a horse's mouth are wrinkles of the flesh in the roof of the mouth, running across from one side of the jaw to the other.

TO RIDGE, v. a. to form a ridge.

RIDGY, a. rising in a ridge.

RIDICULE, s. [ridiculum, from rideo, Lat.] wit which provokes laughter by representing any person or thing as comically contemptible.

TO RIDICULE, v. a. to expose to laughter by representing as odd and unbecoming.

RIDICULER, s. he that ridicules.

RIDICULOUS, a. worthy of laughter; exciting contemptuous mirth.

RIDICULOUSLY, ad. in a manner worthy of laughter or contempt.

RIDICULOUSNESS, s. the quality of being ridiculous.

RIDING, s. a district; a division of a county.

RIDING-COAT, s. a coat made to keep out weather.

RIDLEY, BISHOP NICOLAS, one of the English reformers and martyrs of the 16th century. He studied at Cambridge and in France; and entering the ranks of the clergy, won the favour of Cranmer, through whose influence he was made a bishop. He did great service to the Reformation, by his plain and powerful discourses; but having made Bonner his enemy, and sided with the partisans of Lady Jane Grey, he was imprisoned by Mary; subjected to the mockery of a trial; condemned for heresy, and burnt, in company with Latimer, at Oxford, in 1555, aged about 55 years.

RIDO'TTO, s. an entertainment of singing, music, &c.; an opera.

RIE, RYE, s. in Botany, an esculent grain, bearded like barley, which differs from wheat in having a flatter and coarser grain.

RIENZO, COLA DI, the last Roman tribune, a man who in the 14th century attempted the renovation of the republic in the Eternal City. He had no advantages of birth, but he was eloquent, and had raised himself to a lofty pitch of enthusiasm by meditating on the ancient freedom and glory of Rome, and by contemplating its bondage and distractions as he daily witnessed them. Being at length sent to Avignon, as a deputy to Pope Clement VI, who then resided there, he so acquitted himself, that the pope made him apostolic notary. He gradually prepared the people for the great attempt he had long cherished; and finally, taking advantage of a favourable opportunity, the city was seized by the people, and himself and the bishop of Orvieto, the pope's vicar, appointed tribunes. He lacked statesmanship, and the qualities of a general, however, and so could not establish the power he had gained. He was at the end of 7 months deserted by the people, and he fled the city. Being after some years given up to the pope, he was imprisoned, but it was thought that he might be useful to the papal cause, and he was sent, with the dignity of Roman senator, to the city again; but he was once more unable to guide those he aroused, a new sedition overthrew his power, and he was assassinated at the foot of the stairs of the Capitol, in 1354, 7 years after he first attempted to restore ancient liberty.

RIETI, a town of the Papal States, Italy. It stands on the Velino, in the midst of a beautiful and fertile plain, on the W. side of the Apennines. It has some fine public buildings, and some good institutions for educational and benevolent purposes. There are several branches of manufacture carried on here. It is about 50 miles from Rome. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 42. 24. N. Long. 12. 53. E.

RIFE, a. [ryfe, Sax. riif, Belg.] prevailing; abounding; frequent: generally applied to contagious distempers.

RIFELY, ad. prevalently; abundantly.

RIFENESS, s. prevalence; abundance.

To RIFLE, (riif) v. a. [rijselen, Belg.] to rob; to plunder; to pillage.

RIFLE, s. a gun whose barrel, instead of being smooth in the inside, is formed with a number of spiral channels, resembling female screws. The rotation given to the ball by this means counteracts or prevents deviation or deflection.

RIFLER, s. robber, plunderer, pillager.

RIFT, s. [from rive,] a cleft; a breach; an opening.

To RIFT, v. a. to cleave or split.—v. n. to burst or open.

RIG, [brigg, Sax.] the top of a hill falling on each side; a back. To run or play one's rig, is to merrily upon, or ridicule.

To RIG, v. a. [hrigg, Sax.] to dress; to fit with tackling.

RIGA, a large, populous, and opulent city of Russia, capital of the government of Livonia. It stands on the Dwina, which is crossed by a bridge of boats. It is well fortified, and has a great number of public buildings, such as a palace, a cathedral, exchange, town-hall, &c. It has, beside, an astronomical observatory, and a fine public library. It is a place of considerable manufacturing industry, as well as of trading enterprise. In the last respect, it ranks next to St. Petersburg itself, having a fine harbour, and being better situated than the ports on the White and Black Seas for foreign trade. Pop. about 65,000. Lat. 56. 57. N. Long. 24. 6. E.

RIGADON, s. [rigadon, Fr.] a gay brisk dance.

RIGATION, s. [rigatio, Lat.] the act of watering.

RIGGER, (rig-er) s. one that rigs or dresses.

RIGGING, (rig-ing) s. the sails or tackling of a ship.

RIGGISH, (rig-ish) a. wanton; full of ridiculous pranks.

RIGHT, (the gh is mute in this word and its following derivatives; as, riht, rihtful, &c.) a. [rigt, Sax. recht, Belg.] proper, suitable, or becoming, opposed to wrong; true, opposed to erroneous; bearing a right judgment; honest or just; that side which is opposed to the left; straight, opposed to crooked; perpendicular.

RIGHT, interj. well done; used as an expression of approbation.

RIGHT, ad. in a proper, just, or true manner; in a direct line. Frequently used in titles, as right honourable, right reverend.

RIGHT, s. justice; freedom from error; just claim, or that which belongs to a person; property or interest; a privilege; the side opposite to the left. To rights, implies straight, or in a direct line; but after set, deliverance from error.

To RIGHT, v. a. to do justice to, or relieve from wrong.

RIGHTEOUS, (Alteous) a. [rihtweise, Sax.] just; honest; virtuous; leading a religious or upright life; equitable.

RIGHTEOUSLY, ad. honestly; virtuously.

RIGHTeousNESS, s. virtue; goodness; conduct agreeable to the laws of morality and religion.

RIGHTFUL, a. having just right of claim; honest or just.

RIGHTLY, ad. according to truth and justice; properly; suitably; not erroneously.

RIGHTNESS, s. conformity to truth; rectitude.

RIGID, a. [rigido, Lat.] stiff, unpliant, or not to be bent; severe or inflexible, applied to conduct; sharp, cruel, stern.

RIGIDITY, s. [rigiditas, Fr.] the state of being stiff; stiffness of appearance.

RIGIDLY, ad. in a stiff, severe, or inflexible manner.

RIGIDNESS, s. severity; inflexibility.

RIGOL, s. a circle.

RIGOROUS, a. severe; allowing no abatement; stern; exact; scrupulously nice.

RIGOROUSLY, ad. severely; without tenderness or mitigation.

RIGOUR, s. [rigor, Lat.] cold; stiffness. In Medicine, a convulsive shuddering, with a sensation of cold. Figuratively, severity of conduct, or want of condensation and compliance; strictness; rage or cruelty; hardness.

RILL, s. [riculus, from rius, Lat.] a small brook; a little streamlet.

To RILL, v. n. to run in small streams.

RIM, s. [rime, Sax.] a border, or margin; that which encircles any thing.

RIME, s. [hrim, Sax.] hoar frost.

To RIME, v. n. to freeze with hoar frost.

RIMOSE, a. [rima, Lat.] full of clefts or chinks.

RIMOSITY, s. the quality of being full of clefts or chinks.

To RIMPLE, (rimpl) v. a. to pucker; to contract into corrugations.

RIMY, a. steamy; foggy; full of frozen mist.

RIND, (rimd) s. [rind, Sax. rinde, Belg.] the bark, husk, or outside covering of vegetables.

To RIND, (rimd) v. n. to strip of its bark, husk, or outside covering; to decorticate.

RING, (ring) s. [hring, Sax.] a circle; a circle of gold or other metal worn as an ornament; a circle of metal to be held by; a circle made by standing round; a circular course; a number of bells harmonically tuned; a metallic sound. Ring, a number, in Natural History, are circles of rank grass in meadows and pastures, occasioned, as is now known by several kinds of fungus, which growing first in a cluster, and exhausting the soil of the properties by which they are supported, shed their seed around them, and leave their remains as a kind of manure to the grass; whilst every year the circle becomes wider, as they cannot spring up on the soil they have already grown on.

To RING, v. a. pret. and past part. rung; [hringing, Sax.] to strike bells or other bodies so as to make them sound; to encircle; to fit or supply with rings.—v. n. to sound like a bell; to make bells sound; to sound or tinkle; to be filled with a bruit or report, followed by of.

RING-BONE, s. in Farriery, a hard callous substance growing in the hollow circle of the little pastern of a horse; it sometimes goes quite round like a ring, from whence it derives its name.

RINGDOVE, s. [rhingelduyre, Teut.] in Ornithology, a kind of wild pigeon.

RINGER, s. he who rings.

RINGLEADER, s. the head of a riotous crowd.

RINGLET, s. [diminutive of ring,] a small ring or circle; a curling lock of hair.

RING OUZEL, s. in Ornithology, a bird allied to the blackbird, but distinguished by a band round the fore-part of the neck.

RINGSTREAKED, a. marked with circular streaks.

RINGTAIL, s. in Natural History, a kind of kite with a whitish tail.

RINGWORM, s. in Medicine, a cutaneous disease affecting the head, in childhood especially, occasioned, as is believed, by a very minute species of parasitical insect.

To RINSE, v. a. [rinser, Fr.] to cleanse by washing; to wash the soap out of clothes.

RINSER, s. one who washes or rinses; a washer.

RIO DE JANEIRO, or simply Rio, the capital city of Brazil, in S. America. It stands on the shore of a fine bay of the same name, which forms a most excellent harbour. It is a finely and regularly built town, being chiefly constructed of stone; and it is adorned with several noble churches, a large (but not very handsome) palace, and a magnificent aqueduct. In manufactures and trade, it stands at the head of the towns of Brazil. Pop. about 250,000. Lat. 23. 0. S. Long. 43. 12. W.

RIOT, s. [riotte, old Fr. riotto, Ital.] wild and loose mirth; an uproar, or serious tumult. In Law, it is, when three or more persons, assembled together, commit some unlawful act with force and violence, to the disturbance of the peace. To run riot, is to act without control or restraint.

To RIOT, v. n. [riotte, old Fr.] to abandon oneself to pleasure; to feast in a luxurious manner; to raise a sedition or uproar.

RIOT ACT, s. in Law, a statute, 1 Geo. I. c. 5, authorizing and directing the mode of dispersing mobs, or riotous assemblies of people, of above 12 in number. It is commonly applied to a form of proclamation enjoined to be used by justices of the peace before any active measures are resorted to.

RIOTER, s. one who is dissipated in luxury; one who excites an uproar.

RIOTOUS, a. [riotoux, Fr.] luxurious; wanton; seditious or turbulent.

RIOTOUSLY, ad. luxuriously; with licentious luxury; seditiously; turbulently.

RIOTOUSNESS, s. the state of being riotous.

To RIP, v. a. [hrupan, Sax.] to cut asunder with a knife any thing sewed; to tear in pieces; to take away from by laceration. Figuratively, to disclose or bring to view any thing industriously concealed.

RIPE, a. [ripe, Sax. rijp, Belg.] brought to perfection by time and growth; mature; resembling ripe fruit; finished; brought to the point of taking effect; qualified by gradual improvement.

To RIPE, RIPEN, v. n. to grow fit for use by time; to be matured.—v. a. to make ripe.

RIPELY, ad. maturely; at the proper time.

RIPENESS, s. the state of being full grown; fit for use, or perfect.

RIPPER, s. one who rips; one who tears.

To RIPPLE, (ripl) v. n. to fret on the surface, as water swiftly running.

RIPPLE-MARK, s. in Geology, the small ridges and hollows produced in the sands of a very flat beach, by the action of the short and insignificant waves of an ebbing tide. Similar marks are found in the lower beds of the oolitic formation, in some sandstones, &c., often accompanied by the tracks of turtles, tortoises, birds, crabs, &c.; and in one case, by the signs of a smart shower of rain. These traces have remained, through unknown ages, disclosing the existence of races of animals now extinct, and chronicling indelibly the condition even of the weather, when on those occasions they wandered in quest of food. Few of all the remains of the earlier world are so remarkable as these, since they are not, like broken and scattered bones, empty and petrified shells, &c., subjects for rigid scientific investigation and classification, but they appeal at once to the imagination, and serve to set that old time living before our eyes.

RIPPON, or RYON, Yorkshire, W. Riding. It has a remarkably fine market-place, adorned with a curious obelisk. It had once a flourishing woollen manufacture, and was afterwards noted for its manufacture of hardware, particularly spurs; but is now of no repute. It has a magnificent cathedral church, adorned with 3 lofty spires, and very exquisitely built. It has also some excellent charitable institutions. It is pleasantly situated on the river Ure, or Aire, over which it has 2 stone bridges; 222 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Fairs, on Thursday after June 24, Thursday after March 21, on May 12, the first Thursday in June, on Holy Thursday, and on the first Thursday after August 22, and November 22. Pop. 15,024.

RIPTOWEL, s. a gratuity given to tenants, after they had reaped their lord's corn.

To RISE, (rise) v. n. preter. rose, part. risen; [risen, Sax. reisen, Belg.] to get up from the ground; to get up from a bed, seat, or after a fall; to spring or grow up; to be advanced with respect to rank or fortune; to increase in value or esteem; to swell; to amend; to come into notice; to begin to act; to make an insurrection; to be roused or excited to action; to elevate, applied to style or sentiment; to be revived after death; to appear above the eastern horizon, applied to the heavenly bodies. To rise up for, or against, is to defend or to attack any person.

RISE, (rise) s. the act of getting up from any seat or from the ground; ascent; a place that assists a person in an ascent; an eminence; the first appearance of any of the heavenly bodies above the horizon; increase in any respect; beginning or original; increase of sound.

RISER, (rise) s. one that rises.

RISIBILITY, (risibility) s. the quality of laughing.

RISIBLE, (risible) a. [risibilis, from rideo, Lat.] having the faculty of laughing; ridiculous, or fit to excite laughter.

RISK, s. [risque, Fr. riesg, Span.] hazard; peril; danger; venture.

To RISK, v. a. [risquer, Fr.] to hazard; to venture; to endanger.

RISKER, s. one that risks.

RITBOCK, s. in Zoology, a species of antelope, found in the interior of Africa to the north of the Cape of Good Hope.

RITE, s. [rit, Fr. from ritus, Lat.] a solemn act of religion; an external ceremony.

RITSON, JOSEPH, an eminent English antiquary, who was professionally a lawyer, and held the office of deputy high bailiff of the Duchy of Lancaster. He was never noted for amiability, and his lack of urbanity was confirmed by a controversy he was involved in with the guild of critics on English poetry and poets. He became at last totally deranged, and died in 1803, aged 55 years. His most valuable works are collections of old English ballads and songs; which remain the standard publications in that interesting department of literature and history.

RITTENHOUSE, DR. DAVID, an eminent American mathematician. He was almost wholly self-taught; and was first engaged in mere farm labour, notwithstanding which he pursued his favourite study with the greatest eagerness and success. His fame obtained him the appointment of observing the last transit of Venus, in conjunction with several other eminent men, for the American Philosophical Society; and he succeeded Dr. Franklin in the presidency of that society. After the establishment of the United States, he was made director of the Mint. He died in 1796, aged 64 years. He has been universally regarded as the American Newton; and his treatises, in the Transactions of the Philosophical Society, are reckoned valuable; but all the anecdotes related of his skill, &c. are not capable of substantiation.

RITUAL, a. [rituel, Fr.] done according to some religious institution; solemnly ceremonious.

RITUAL, s. a book containing the rites or ceremonies of divine worship.

RITUALIST, s. a stickler for ceremonies in worship; one skilled in the rites.

RIVAL, s. [ricialis, Lat.] one who is in the pursuit of the same thing as another; one who is a competitor with another for a woman's affections; one who endeavours to surpass another; antagonist.

RIVAL, a. making the same claim; pursuing the same object; emulous.

To RIVAL, v. a. to oppose, or endeavour to gain something attempted by another; to endeavour to equal or excel; to emulate.

RIVALITY, RIVALRY, s. [ricialis, Lat.] emulation; rivalry; competition.

RIVALSHIP, s. the state of a person who endeavours to obtain the same thing as another.

To RIVE, v. a. part. riren, [ryft, Sax.] to split; to cleave; to force asunder by driving in something blunt.—v. n. to be split.

To RIVEL, v. a. [gerifed, Sax.] to contract into wrinkles or corrugations.

RIVEN, participle of To RIVE.

RIVER, s. [rieviere, Fr. rius, Lat.] a stream of water formed by the union of many rivulets in one channel, and discharging itself into a lake, or into the sea. There are some few rivers that terminate in a subterranean channel; and some small streams are absorbed in deserts, without reaching the sea.

RIVERHORSE, s. in Natural History, the hippopotamus.

RIVERWEED, s. in Botany, the general name of submerged fresh-water plants.

RIVET, s. a pin clenched at both ends.

To RIVET, v. a. to fasten by a pin clenched at both ends; to fasten strongly.

RIVULET, s. [riulus, Lat.] a small river, brook, or stream of running water.

RIXDOLLAR, s. a silver coin struck in Germany, valued at 4s. 6d. sterling.

ROACH, (röch) s. in Natural History, a common fresh-water fish.

ROAD, (röd) s. [rade, Fr.] a large path travelled by carriages; a place where ships may anchor; incursion; journey. Turnpike Road is one which is kept in repair by tolls levied on vehicles and animals passing along it, and collected at turnpike gates. A Railroad is one along which are laid bars of iron for the wheels of the vehicles used on it to run upon. A Tramroad is similar to a railroad, but instead of bars, plates of iron are used.

To ROAM, (röm) v. n. [romigare, Ital.] to wander without a settled purpose; to ramble; to rove.—v. a. to range or wander over.

ROAMER, (römer) s. a Rambler; a rover; a wanderer.

ROAN, (rön) a. [rouen, Fr.] of a bay, sorrel, or black colour, with gray or white spots thickly interspersed, applied to horses.

To ROAR, (rör) v. n. [rarum, Sax.] to make a loud noise, applied to that of a lion or other wild beast; to make a great outcry in distress; to sound as the wind or sea; to make a great noise.

ROAR, (rör) s. the cry of a lion or other beast; an outcry of distress; a clamour or noise of merriment; any loud noise.

ROARER, s. a noisy brutal man.

ROARY, (rör) s. [ros, Lat.] dew.

To ROAST, (röst) v. a. [röster, Fr.] to dress meat on a spit which turns round before a fire; to dress before a fire; to heat any thing violently. To rule the roast, (or roost), is to govern, manage, or preside.

ROASTING, s. in Metallurgy, an operation by which mixtures with any metals, capable of sublimation, are separated.

ROB, s. juice made thick.

To ROB, v. a. [rober, old Fr. robbar, Ital.] to take away unlawfully, and by force. To be robbed, is to lose any thing by violence, or by secret theft; but in the active voice, to rob is applied only to the taking any thing away by open violence; and to steal, to the taking any thing away by secret theft.

ROBBING, s. one who deprives another unlawfully of his property.

ROBBERY, s. theft committed by force or without privacy.

ROBE, s. [robbe, Fr. roba, Ital.] a gown of state, worn by persons of distinction; a gown worn by infants.

To ROBE, v. a. to clothe in a robe; to dress in a proper manner.

ROBBERSMAN, ROBERTSMAN, s. in the Old Statutes, a bold and stout robber or night thief, said to be so called from Robin Hood.

ROBERT, the name of three kings of Scotland. The first was the celebrated Robert Bruce (see that name). The second was a Stuart, and the first of that house who occupied the throne. He succeeded David II., and maintained, by the aid of the French, a desultory war against England. The most remarkable circumstance connected with him, was his obtaining a bull sanctioning his marriage with his former mistress, and declaring their offspring legitimate. He died in 1390, aged 74 years, having reigned 19. The third, his eldest son and successor, was engaged in a war with England, carried on chiefly by the famous Hutspur; he had promised help also to that warrior in his rebellion against Henry IV. He died in 1406, aged about 70 years, having reigned 10.

ROBERT, bishop of Lincoln, surnamed Grosstete, an eminent character in English history, both as a scholar and as a church reformer. He was trained at Oxford, and completed his course at Paris; and was noted as much for his scientific knowledge, as for his knowledge of languages, theology, &c. &c. In this he was the predecessor of the more famous Roger Bacon, as, in his efforts after reformation, he was of Wicliffe. He died in 1253, aged about 75 years.

ROBERTSON, DR. WILLIAM, an eminent Scottish divine and preacher and speaker, soon obtained a considerable name. He was afterwards made to the king (for Scotland). He died in 1793, aged 72 years. His great works are the History of Charles V., the History of America, and the History of Scotland; and his minor works are valuable and important. He has long since taken his place amongst British classics.

ROBESPIERRE, FRANÇOIS MAXIMILIEN JOSEPH ISIDORE, one of the most prominent characters of the French Revolution. He was early left, the eldest of three orphans, and to his brother and sister he always showed himself a most devoted protector and friend. He studied law at Paris, with considerable credit, and received an appointment at his native town, Arras, through the favour of his patron the bishop of the place. He gave up his appointment, which was his only means of support, on having to conduct a capital case; for he was an idolatrous believer in Jean Jacques Rousseau, and in the new age of liberty and humanity that he foretold. Such was his standing then, that he was returned as a deputy to the States-General; and from the time that he first caught the public attention, he never ceased to grow in importance and popularity, till his overthrow. His history is, indeed, that of France from that time to his death. The Jacobin club, when it was won from the hands of the aristocratical demagogues, was the great engine by which he worked, overawing the Convention, and swaying the universal mind of France with resistless force. Order, law, public decency and morality, the truths of natural religion, but highest of all, the people—France itself, he loved with all the earnestness that was in his nature. Moral courage he had, of the most unflinching kind, and the simplest and purest of home-pleasures gratified his social tastes. Unlike most of the other leading men of his times, no one had been able to tamper with him; he had deserved, and had received, the title of Incorruptible. Yet he was, in truth, inordinately vain, and, physically, a very coward. Nor was he of unspotted faith, for he often masked the deadliest purposes under the appearance of civility, and even of friendship. His whole political career shows that he was a man possessed by a fixed idea. He had taken it from Rousseau; had reduced it to a formula, as well as a man of narrow pedant-mind, and bald law-training, could; and all he sought was its realization as an authentic fact. He lived for this alone; and he lived in it, till to himself and to his admirers, who were at one time all France, he became its incarnation, or at least its supreme priest and living symbol. And thus it was that he never altered his opinions; and the people, who never found him inconsistent, who knew his domestic life and character, and who always readily received abstract truths and ideal formulas, trusted him as the corner-stone of the republic. Thus, amid a flow of events more rapid, more varied, more astounding, than we can well conceive, he seemed to be the only one who had rightly divined the future, who was the statesman of the age. He bearded Mirabeau in the arena of the National Assembly, accepted the constitutional monarchy, availed himself of every successful plot, of every fruitful insurrection, whilst he took part in none; hailed the proclamation of the republic with unfeigned triumph, shuddered at and justified the September massacres, voted Louis and all that sided with him to the scaffold, fought with and overthrew the Girondins, allowed and used the dictatorship of the Committee of Safety, sat silent whilst all the madness and the mummeries of the sensuistes and the temple-robbers were performed, and, as soon as the opportunity offered, crushed the perpetrators of those outrages on humanity; then, passing from enthusiasm to fanaticism, as that which never could be realized appeared to draw near, he hoped to secure its speedy advent by sending to the guillotine all who seemed to oppose it; immolated the trusted associates of his earlier labours, wrung from the same assembly that had worshipped Reason impersonated by an opera-syren, and sanctioned the inscribing on every cemetery "Death an eternal sleep," the decree respecting the Supreme Being, and that "consolatory principle" the immortality of the soul, trusting on this, as a foundation, to rear a temple for the world's wonder and worship, to raise up a regenerated France; and at last, rid of all dreaded rivals, cherished the desperate hope that one more plunge into that sea of blood, in which he had, as he fondly thought, been carried so far, would bring him to his long and madly desired haven. And this last hope deceived him. He was not a practical man; for a sudden emergency he could not produce an extemporaneous expedient. He had—let it not be doubted—a conscience; and he fell before a conspiracy of men who feared for themselves and the station they had risen to through the fall of others; being unsupported by the people, who were decimated by the very means that had saved France, and who trembled each man for his own head, and deceived respecting the power of those who at the last hour could only share his destruction. He fell suddenly and completely, maimed by a pistol-shot by one of his captors; he was executed where he had made so many perish so cruelly, in 1794, aged but 35 years. The reports of speeches, prepared by himself, are all his literary remains; and they will hardly repay the perusal, though once so potent.

ROBIN HOOD. See HOOD.

ROBIN-REDBREAST, s. in Ornithology, a familiar bird, so named from the colour of its breast.

ROBINS, BENJAMIN, an eminent English mathematician of the last century. He was mainly indebted to his own genius and industry for his attainments; having had few advantages from teachers. He removed from Bath to London, where he became a private teacher in mathematics, and filled up the intervals of his leisure by treatises on the same subject; and especially with reference to scientific gunnery, and fortification; which, as he was by birth and training a Quaker, must have been perilously fascinating to him. He at length was appointed chief engineer to the E. India Company; and had hardly begun his work at Madras, before he was seized by a fever and died, in 1751, aged 44 years. He had something to do with the writing of Lord Anson's Voyage round the World, and has had the entire work ascribed to him.

ROBISON, JOHN, a distinguished mathematician and natural philosopher of Scotland. He was educated at Glasgow, and afterwards went several voyages in vessels of the royal navy; but was compelled to renounce all hopes of advancement from that occupation. After an appointment as lecturer on Natural Philosophy at Glasgow, he received one in a naval school at Cronstadt, Russia, which he did not long retain. He was next made professor of Natural Philosophy at Edinburgh; and he occupied himself with various treatises on that branch of knowledge, which were published in the Encyclopædia Britannica, and Philosophical Transactions of Edinburgh. He died in 1805, aged 65 years.

ROBOREOUS, s. [roboreus, from robor, Lat.] made of oak.

ROB ROY, by birth Macgregor, but by assumption, on the banning of that name by statute, Campbell. He was a Highland chieftain, who lived as a cattle dealer and as a freebooter; and abundantly plagued the Whigs, and lowland gentry and farmers, with his activity and daring. He was out with the old Pretender in 1715; and for that, lost his estates, which was the chief reason for his adopting the wholesale system of robbery and plunder that has made his name so well known. He died in about 1735, at a very great age.

ROBUST, Robustus, s. [robustus, Lat.] strong made; vigorous; requiring strength.

ROBUSTNESS, s. strength; vigour.

ROCAMBOLE, s. in Botany, a kind of wild garlic.

ROCHDALE, Lancashire, and Yorkshire, W. Riding. It is situated in a vale on the Roche, surrounded by hills which abound in coals; and has flourishing manufactures of hats, bays, serges, and other woollen and cotton goods. It is 198 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 84,718.

ROCHE-ALUM, s. [roche, Fr.] in Chemistry, a purer sort of alum.

ROCHEFORT, a sea-port town of Charente Inférieure, France, where are several large magazines of naval stores. Its harbour is very commodious and much frequented. It is fortified, and well supplied with good literary and benevolent institutions. It has also some valuable manufactures. It is about 300 miles from Paris. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 45. 56. N. Long. 0. 53. W.

746

ROCHEFOUCAULD, FRANÇOIS, D. DE LA, a distinguished man of letters in the court of Louis XIV. He took part in the war of the Fronde; but afterwards lived in retirement, and died in 1680, aged 67 years. His Memoirs of Anne of Austria, and his Reflections, are the best known of his works. The latter displays great knowledge of human nature, as seen at courts; but we search it in vain for any of that knowledge which a loving, active heart ever possesses. There is a remarkable coincidence between the shade of these thoughts and that of Pascal's; but Pascal's arose from his profound view of man's sin, and the duke's from such a disappointment as made the wise king of Israel declare that "all was vanity."

ROCHELLE, a handsome, rich, and celebrated town of Charente Inférieure, France, with a very commodious and safe harbour. It has 7 gates; the houses are fine, and supported by piazzas, under which persons may walk in all weathers; and the streets in general are as straight as a line. The inhabitants carry on a considerable trade, and have some good manufactures. It is 220 miles from Paris. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 46. 9. N. Long. 1. W.

ROCHESTER, Kent. It was formerly much larger than at present, having now only one parish church besides the cathedral. It consists chiefly of one principal street, which is paved. It has two free-schools, the one called the King's, and the other the City School. The cathedral is a fine old building, and the castle is a very noble relic of the Saxon age. It stands on the Medway, over which is a long and handsome bridge; and Strood lies on the west of it and Chatham on the east. It is 29 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Friday. Pop. 11,743.

ROCHESTER, a city of New York, United States. It stands on the Genessee river, which here makes three several falls, amounting to 265 feet in all, and thus creates a very great water power. The Erie canal passes through it on a fine aqueduct, and it communicates with the W. by railroad. It is well built, with many noble public edifices and institutions, and with a capital trade. It is equally famous for its manufactures, and is a place of great importance. It is 369 miles from Washington. Pop. 20,191. There are in the Union 11 other places bearing this name.

ROCHESTER, JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF, one of the worst amongst the most licentious courtiers of Charles II. He was a keen wit, and was thus frequently reconciled to his unprincipled monarch, after he had seriously offended him. Worn out in bodily health, and with exhausted passions, he at last turned his attention to matters of another import. According to his episcopal panegyrist he made an edifying end; but too much stress must not be laid on displays of religious fervour under such circumstances. He died in 1680, aged 32 years.

ROCHET, s. a surplice.

ROCK, s. [rocc, Sax.] a vast mass of stone fixed in the earth; a part of one of the solid strata of the earth. In Geology, the general name for the solid strata of the earth's crust. Figuratively, a rock means protection or defence.—[rock, Dan.] a distaff.

TO ROCK, v. a. [roquer, Fr.] to shake or move backwards and forwards; to move in a cradle. Figuratively, to lull or quiet.—v. n. to move to and fro in a cradle; to be violently agitated.

ROCK-CRYSTAL, s. in Mineralogy, a very clear kind of quartz.

ROCKDOE, s. in Natural History, a species of deer.

ROCKER, s. one who rocks a cradle.

ROCKET, s. [rochetto, Ital.] in Pyrotechny, a cylindrical paper filled with combustible powder, and fastened to a stick, which mounts in the air and bursts. Congreve Rockets are cylindrical cases of iron, of different weights and thickness, attached with great accuracy to their stick, and having the upper end of a conical form: they are very destructive instruments, whether used in sieges or in fields; but they are not always easy of management, because of the wind. A far better use of these projectiles is that of carrying a rope over a vessel in distress, so as to establish a communication with the shore. In Botany, the name of several British plants, allied to the cresses. One species is peculiar to the seashore.

ROCKBURY, s. in Mineralogy, a name of the garnet, when of a very strong, though not deep, red, with a fair cast of the blue.

ROCKSALT, s. in Mineralogy, mineral salt.

ROCKWORK, s. stones fixed in mortar, to resemble a rock.

ROCKWORT, s. in Botany, a plant, called also rockcress.

ROCKY, a. full of rocks; stony; hard, or obdurate.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS, the name used to designate the mountain range that runs parallel to the W. coast of N. America, throughout its whole length, and joins the Andes at the Isthmus of Panama. It is employed in a more restricted signification for that part of the range which crosses the territory of the United States, and is also named the Chippewayan Mountains. They are about 3000 miles in length, and from 200 to 300 in breadth, and are mostly covered with perpetual snow. The Missouri and all the rivers falling into the Mississippi from the W. are supplied by streams flowing from these mountains.

ROD, s. [roede, Belg.] a long twig; any thing long and slender; a sceptre; an instrument used in measuring; a measure containing sixteen feet and a half; a bundle of twigs used in flogging children, and whipping syllabubs; correction.

RODE, pret. of To RIDE.

RODNEY, GEORGE BRYDGES, LORD, a distinguished British naval commander. He entered the service early, and was first made governor of Newfoundland; afterwards he destroyed the stores prepared for invading England, at Havre de Grace. He was ruined in obtaining a seat in parliament; and retired to France, where he was invited into their service; but soon afterwards, being appointed to the command of the Mediterranean fleet, he gained two great and decisive victories, which finished his public services. He died in 1792, aged 74 years; and was buried in St. Paul's cathedral.

RODOLPH, the name of two emperors of Germany, the second of whom was an imbecile and unprincipled ruler, but the first stands conspicuous as a mighty and magnanimous monarch. He was a warrior of some renown, when, quite unexpectedly, he was elected to the imperial crown; and he had to make good his election against one rival at least,—Otto of Bohemia, who was killed in battle. He was the founder of the house of Hapsburg, and so of the present imperial dynasty of Austria. He died in 1291, very aged, having reigned about 19 years. His reign was characterized by one remarkable feature for those times, internal tranquillity.

RODOMONTADE, RHODOMONTADE, s. [Fr. from a hero in Ariosto, called Rodomonte.] an empty, noisy bluster; brag.

RODOMONTADE, v. n. to brag, or boast.

ROE, s. [ra deer, Sax.] in Natural History, the smallest of the deer kind known in our climate, and is almost extinct, except in some parts of the Highlands of Scotland. The eggs or spawn of fish.

ROGATION, s. [rogo, Lat.] a litany or supplication. Rogation Week, is that immediately preceding Whit-Sunday, and is so called from three fasts, held on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, named rogation days, from the extraordinary prayers and processions then made for the fruits of the earth; or, as a preparation for celebrating Holy Thursday.

ROGUE, (rog) s. a wandering beggar; a vagrant; a vagabond; a villain or thief. Used likewise as a term of affectionate pleasantry.

To ROGUE, (rog) v. n. to play the vagabond; to wander; to play knavish tricks.

ROGUEY, (rogery, the g pron. hard,) s. knavery or arch tricks.

ROGUISH, (rogish) a. knavish; slightly mischievous; waggish. ROGUISHLY, (rogishly) ad. in a knavish manner; wantonly; like a rogue.

ROGUISHNESS, (rogishness) s. the qualities of a rogue.

To ROIST, or ROISTER, v. n. [rister, Isl.] to behave in a turbulent and blustering manner.

ROISTER, ROISTERER, s. a turbulent or blustering fellow.

ROLAND, MADAME MANON JEAN, one of the most distinguished characters in the French Revolution. Her father, by name Philippon, was an engraver and painter in enamel, and she was educated in the best way that was open to his means. Part of this training was accomplished at a convent, where she found ample encouragement and opportunity for cherishing the dreams that were natural to her impassioned spirit. Plutarch was her one beloved book; and Rousseau's Heloise completed in her what the old Greek hero-historian had begun. She was married to a man much older than herself, an inspector of manufactures at Amiens, Roland de la Platrière, in whom she thought she discerned one of Plutarch's antique republicans. He was a rigid, narrow soul, incorruptibly upright, the Veto of scoundrels: incapable of appreciating his wife, yet filled with the profoundest love and reverence for her pure and lofty mind. They both sympathized most heartily in the revolutionary movement; and the appointment of Roland to the National Convention by the city of Lyons, to which he had removed, soon brought them into the centre of that giddy and fatal whirlpool. He attached himself to the Girondins, and during their day of power was made Minister of the Interior. Madame Roland soon became the animating spirit of that party, and at her house assembled regularly all those masters of oratory, those dreamers of Utopian republics, those sorrowfully mistaken leaders of the great Revolution. The September massacres were the first awakening of these high-souled sleep-walkers to the true meaning of the times they were working in. The struggle between the Girondins and the Mountain unfolded the whole of the dreadful fact to them. Madame Roland was once compelled to defend herself at the bar of the Convention, and she did it triumphantly. But her success was not to be forgiven; Roland gave up his office, and left Paris; every day showed more surely that his party must fall. An insurrection accomplished their overthrow, and Madame Roland was imprisoned. After being confined in various prisons, and with different companions, (one of whom was the future empress Josephine,) during 6 months, she was tried, according to the established mockery of legal forms, and guillotined, in 1793, aged 37 years. Her husband was found near Rouen, a few days afterwards, self-slain: he died aged 61 years.

To ROLL, (the o pron. long.) v. a. [rouler, Fr. rollen, Belg.] to move any thing by a successive application of its different parts on the ground; to move any thing round upon its axis; to make a thing move in a circle; to wrap round about; to form into round masses, by rubbing on a surface; to pour in a stream or waves.—v. n. to move or be moved by a successive application of its parts on any surface; to perform a periodical revolution; to run on wheels; to move in a tumultuous manner; to turn on an axis.

ROLL, s. the act of moving by a successive application of its parts on the ground; any thing rolling; a mass made round; a round or cylindrical body, used in breaking clods, &c.; a kind of small loaf.—[rotulus, Lat.] a register, catalogue, or chronicle.

ROLLER, s. in Ornithology, a species of birds which sometimes visits this country. It is about the size of a magpie, of a blue colour, with a black beak.

ROLLIN, CHARLES, an eminent French historian. He was educated at Paris by the kindness of a Benedictine, who had noticed his early display of talents; and subsequently he entered that religious order. He held the professorships of rhetoric and elocution, and was afterwards twice chosen rector of the university. He would have received that honour a third time, had he not been suspected by the Jesuits of favouring their opponents, the Jansenists. The rest of his life was spent in retirement,—but a retirement often molested by the malicious and groundless accusations of his enemies. He died in 1741, aged 80 years. His chief work, which is well known in England by translations, and is not superseded in its popularity yet, is his Ancient History. He also wrote a Roman History, and an Essay on Literary Education. But in all his works the rhetorician is more discernible than the scholar; and it is to its easy style, and kind-hearted faithfulness, that his history owes its long and general reputation.

ROLLING-PIN, s. a round piece of wood tapering at each end, used in making paste.

ROLLING-PRESS, s. a press with which copperplates are printed.

ROLLO, surnamed the GANGER, the great Northman warrior, or sea-king, who, after various adventures, by which he established his reputation for valour and command, led a formidable expedition against France, ravaged the N. part of that country, and endangered the throne. A treaty was entered into between Charles the Simple and the fierce rover, who, tired of his wanderings, agreed to accept the part he had conquered, to hold it as a fief of the French monarch, and to be baptized as a convert from Odin's faith. This was the foundation of the duchy of Normandy, on which the fortunes of our own island were suspended: it took place in 912. Rollo's baptismal name was Robert, and that was transmitted to several of his successors.

ROLLS, s. The office of Rolls in Chancery Lane is appointed for the custody of the rolls and records in Chancery. The master of this office is the second person in that court, and in the absence of the lord chancellor he sits as judge.

ROMPOLY, s. a sort of game, in which, when a ball runs in a certain place, it wins.

ROMAGE, s. [romagio, Ital.] a tumult or bustle.

ROMAINE, WILLIAM, a distinguished evangelical clergyman of the English Church, in the last century. He was educated at Oxford, and after various country curacies, &c. he held successively, or together, lectureships in St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, St. Dunstan in the West, St. George's, Hanover Square, and the living of St. Anne's, Blackfriars. He was for a short time Gresham Professor of Astronomy. He died in 1795, aged 84 years. His memory is cherished as that of one of the few who, during a period of unexampled decline in piety, preserved his own in undiminished fervour, and rekindled that of very many. For that all his Hutchinsonian absurdities are forgiven, his bigoted opposition to the naturalization of the Jews forgotten, and his inconsistency in his firm attachment to the institution in which he was a minister. Whitefield was amongst his numerous friends. His writings are chiefly sermons; and that which has ever been one of the classics of Calvinism, and has made his name most widely known, is his tripartite Life, Walk, and Triumph of Faith.

ROMAN, a. related to, belonging to, or originating in Rome.

ROMANCE, a. sprung from the Romans, or Italians, applied to the earliest forms of the French, Italian, and Spanish languages.

ROMANCE, s. [romanza, Ital.] a story or narrative of fictitious adventures; a lie.

To ROMANCE, v. n. to lie; to forge.

ROMANCER, s. a liar; a forger of tales.

ROMANISM, s. in Theology, the ecclesiastical and doctrinal system of the Church of Rome, as settled finally by the Council of Trent. The peculiar features are, the supremacy of the bishop or pope of Rome over all the Church, as head of it, and vicar of God, infallible in his decisions, to whom most complete subjection is due; the denial of salvation to any who are not members of the Church, (i. e. of the Church of Rome,) and the utter lack of any thing beyond a formal and external conformity to its creeds and ceremonies for the participation of all the blessings it arrogates as peculiarly its own.

To ROMANIZE, v. a. to Latinize; to fill with modes of the Roman speech.

ROMANS, PAUL'S EPISTLE TO THE, one of the writings composing the New Testament, and one of the profoundest treatises on the most momentous subject in the world. It is, properly speaking, not a letter, except in the salutation, &c. at the opening, and the end. The substance of it is a severely logical treatise on that statement made almost at the outset,—that the gospel is “the power of God, unto salvation, for every one that believeth; for the Jew first, but also for the Greek.” It opens with a proof of the necessity of salvation by both Jews and Gentiles, and then proceeds to the statement of the salvation of the gospel, especially as proclaimed to both. Answers to various objections and difficulties, which might be urged against his representation, from all sides, and respecting all the various points of it, follow; and some fine preceptive, hortatory, and casuistical illustrations of the practical exhibition of the gospel conclude that part of the work. Students of this record of inspired wisdom should be aware, that in it the apostle argues more by illustration and example, than by dry and formal logical propositions; and that the present division of chapters and verses often interrupts and divides parts of a closely connected train of reasoning. There are some parts of this Epistle, as the latter half of the 5th chapter, the whole of the 7th, verses 18—23 of the 8th chapter, and the 9th chapter, that have been the subjects of numerous and bewildering controversies from the very commencement of the practice of commenting on the sacred Scriptures; but a due regard to the scope of the entire work, and to that of each section of it, will save any student who desires rather to discover the meaning of the writer, than to find proofs for his own opinions, from the unhappy influence of such fruitless polemical discussion. It may also be advantageously compared with the Epistle to the Galatians, and contrasted with that addressed to the Hebrews. It appears to have been written at Corinth, during the first tour made by Paul in Greece, shortly before his voyage to Jerusalem.

ROMANTIC, a. resembling a romance; wild; improbable; fanciful.

ROME, the capital of the Papal States, Italy; and, both in Ancient and Modern History, the most important city in the world. It stands on the Tiber, and was, in the height of the former glory, unequalled for its extent and splendour, as is abundantly testified by the numerous ruins of walls, temples, aqueducts, bridges, sewers, baths, columns, triumphal arches, &c., with the stupendous amphitheatre called the Coliseum. It does not now cover more than half its original area; but on the side next St. Peter's, it has passed over the ancient boundary. The seven hills, which are so famous in old story, and which have given to Rome one of its most common epithets, may yet be traced. They are the salient angles of the most ancient banks of the river, or else isolated masses; and their names are, the Aventine, Capitoline, Palatine, Esquiline, Viminal, Quirinal, and Caelian mounts. Mounts Janiculum and Vaticanus lay on the other side of the Tiber. Its streets are tolerably regular, and the finest is named the Corso, from the races which take place in it. It is walled entirely round, and on the river, at the N. W. angle, stands the strong fortress of the St. Angelo. There are 4 bridges now over the river. The churches are particularly splendid. St. Peter's cathedral is the largest building for religious purposes in Christendom. Several of the most remarkable of the others, as the Pantheon, &c., were originally heathen temples, or courts of justice. It is especially rich in palaces, porticoes, theatres, hospitals, &c., but the Vatican palace surpasses all others in magnitude and splendour. In libraries, rich in MSS. and curious lore, the city abounds; and there is no deficiency of collegiate and academical institutions. The churches and palaces are adorned with the most precious works of art. Innumerable fountains and the old Roman aqueduct supply the city copiously with water. The most remarkable circumstances connected with Rome are the great elevation of the soil since the erection of columns, and buildings, even in the later times of empire, by which their basements and lower parts are completely covered up; and the depopulation of the S. W. part of the old city, which was thickly inhabited, by a deadly malaria, which prevails there in the summer. Rome is not a place of trade or manufactures to any great extent. Ecclesiastics and the religious (of both sexes) give a marked character to its population. Students in literature and art are exceedingly numerous, especially the latter. Benevolent institutions are abundant. Pop. about 150,000. Lat. 41. 54. N. Long. 12. 29. E.

ROMILLY, SIR SAMUEL, an eminent barrister and legislator of England. He did not receive university education, and Gray's Inn was his law school. He rapidly rose to eminence in his profession, and attracted the attention of the political leaders of the Whig school, having already made the acquaintance of Mirabeau and others of the great orators and statesmen of the popular side, in France. The court of Chancery was the chief field of his forensic labours. He soon afterwards entered parliament, and was made solicitor-general during the brief administration of Fox. The rest of his career was parliamentary, and he exerted all his ability and knowledge for the reform of the criminal code, beside taking an active part in the opposition. The death of his lady, and the excitement of the public business, at last unning his mind, and he committed suicide in 1818, aged 61 years. We owe to him some of the most important alterations lately made in criminal law, and the present efforts made to abolish the barbarity of capital punishments may also be ascribed to the success and the perseverance of his efforts in this legal branch of philanthropy.

ROMISH, a. popish.

ROMNEY, NEW, Kent. It was once a very large place, containing five churches, a priory, and an hospital, with a good harbour; but since the sea retired from it, it is much reduced. The two great meetings for all the Cinque Ports are held here on the Tuesday after St. Margaret's day. It is seated on a hill, in the middle of Romney Marsh, 71 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 955.

ROMNEY MARSH, a remarkable promontory of Kent, formed by the alluvium of the two tidal currents that encompass England, and meet at that point.

ROMNEY, GEORGE, an eminent English painter, who was apprenticed to a portrait painter of Kendal; and afterwards removing to London, rose rapidly into distinction, not merely for portraits, but also in general art. He visited Paris, and, at a later period, Rome; and derived great advantage from the study of the masterpieces collected in France and Italy. He was equally famous in his professional portrait painting, and in the truly artistic department, the historic-picture. His illustrations of Shakspeare and Milton, his fancy pictures, and even his unfinished sketches and cartoons, give unquestionable proof of his great power as an artist. It is to be lamented that his conduct as a man was not conformable to his well-deserved reputation: during the whole of his triumphant career in London, he had left his wife in loneliness at Kendal; returning to her, after he had relinquished his work, he soon sank into a condition worse than idiocy, and died in 1802, aged 68 years.

ROMP, s. a rude, boisterous girl, fond of sport or play; rough or rude play.

To ROMP, v. n. to play in a rude or boisterous manner.

ROMSEY. See RUMSEY.

ROMULUS and RE/MUS, in ancient Roman legend, the twin sons of a vestal, by Mars the god of war; who being cast into the river, because of a prophecy which threatened evil to her uncle at the hand of her children, were saved from it, and nurtured by a she-wolf, and by a woodpecker. Afterward they were brought up by a herdsman, and grew to be the boldest and most trusted of all the shepherds of the country. An accident led to the discovery of their parentage, when they inflicted on the usurper of Alba the predicted evil. They next determined to found a city on the banks of the Tiber; and retiring to determine by auspices who should be the founder and give his name to it, Remus first saw 6 vultures, and then Romulus beheld 12; which gave to him, not without indignation on the part of Remus, the victory. Remus, next, leaping contemptuously over the sacred furrow drawn to mark out the bounds of the city, was killed by his incensed brother. Rome was thus founded in 753 b. c. Opening an asylum, he soon found himself at the head of a desperate population. The Rape of the Sabine women supplied them with wives. War followed, and alliance; Tatus and Romulus dividing the power, till Tatus' death, not without the fratricide's contrivance, left him sole king. New wars, and prodigious achievements, defeats as well as victories extending his power, fill up the rest of his reign; which ends by his assumption amongst the gods under the title Quirinus. Such is the lay, or the "garland," recording his life and deeds. Out of it Niebuhr has attempted to evolve some sure facts; but the best way is to treat it as a lay, and of no more value than as showing the spirit and the pride of the Romans when they first invented it; just as the marvels recorded of long dynasties of British kings, long anterior to the invasion of Cæsar, and the knightly legends of Prince Arthur and the heroes of the Round Table, show the spirit of the times when they first emanated, but are purely fabulous.

RONDEAU, (rônde) s. [Fr.] an ancient kind of poetry, consisting of thirteen verses divided into three couplets; at the end of the second and third, the beginning of the first is repeated in an equivocal sense, if possible.

RONDLE, s. [from round.] a round mass.

RONION, a. a fat plump woman.

RONT, s. an animal stunted in the growth.

ROOD, s. [from rod.] a measure containing the fourth part of an acre, or 50 perches, poles, or rods square. A pole or measure of 16 feet and a half.—[rode, Sax.] the cross, which in Romanist churches is set up for worship.

ROODLOFT, s. a gallery in the church on which reliques or images were set to view.

ROOF, s. [from roof, Sax.] the cover or top of a house; the vault or inside arch which covers a building; the palate or upper part of the mouth.

To ROOF, v. a. to enclose or cover with a roof; to enclose in a house.

ROOFY, a. having roofs.

ROOK, s. [from rook, Sax.] in Ornithology, a bird resembling a crow: it feeds on insects and grain.—[rocco, Ital.] one of the pieces used in the game of chess, called also the castle. Figuratively, a cheat or sharper.

To ROOK, v. n. to rob; to cheat.

ROOKE, SIR GEORGE, an eminent British admiral, whose first services were in establishing William III. against James, in his Irish campaign. In the actions at Beachy Head, La Hogue, Vigo, Cadiz, and Toulon, he bore a distinguished part; and so also at the taking of Gibraltar. The last few years of his life were spent in private life. He died in 1709, aged 58 years.

ROOKERY, s. a nursery for rooks.

ROOKY, a. inhabited by rooks.

ROOM, s. [from Sax. rûm, Goth.] space or extent of place; space or place unoccupied; passage or space for passing; space or opportunity free from obstruction; an apartment in a house; place of another; stead.

ROOMAGE, s. space; place.

ROOMINESS, s. quality of extent; space.

ROOMY, a. wide; spacious; capacious.

ROOST, s. [from Sax. rōst] that on which a bird sits to sleep; the act of sleeping; applied primarily to fowls, and figuratively to men.

To ROOST, v. n. [roesten, Belg.] to sleep as a bird; to lodge, in burlesque language.

ROOT, s. [from roed, Belg. rôt, Swed.] in Botany, that part of a plant which enters the ground, imbibes the juices of the earth, and transmits them to the plant for nutrition. Figuratively, the bottom or lower part; a plant whose roots are eaten; the original, first cause, or ancestor; an impression, or lasting effect and residence. In Mathematics, a quantity considered as the basis of a higher power. In Grammar, a primitive word, from whence others are derived or compounded.

To ROOT, v. n. to fix the root, or strike far into the earth; to turn up the earth.—v. a. to fix deep and firm in the earth; to impress or fix deeply; to pull up by the roots; to turn up out of the ground, used with up; to destroy entirely, eradicate, or extirpate, to banish, used with out.

ROOTED, a. fixed firmly and deeply in the earth, or any other place; radical.

ROOTY, a. full of roots.

ROPE, s. [from Sax. roep or roop, Belg.] a cord, string, halter; a row of things hanging down.

To ROPE, v. n. to draw out into threads or viscous filaments.

ROPE-DANCER, s. one who can dance on ropes.

ROPEGRASS, s. in Botany, a kind of grass, of which are made ropes for fishing-nets, which are remarkable for lasting long without rotting.

ROPEMAKER, s. one whose trade is to make ropes.

ROPERY, s. [from rope.] rogue's tricks.

ROPINESS, s. viscosity; glutinousness.

ROPY, a. viscous; glutinous.

ROQUELAURE, (rôquelore) s. [Fr.] a long cloak used by men.

ROQATION, s. [from ros, Lat.] a falling of dew.

RORID, a. [from roridus, Lat.] dewy.

RORIFEROUS, a. [from ros and fero, Lat.] producing dew.

RORIFLUENT, a. [from ros and fluo, Lat.] flowing with dew.

ROSA, SALVATOR, a great painter, poet, and musician of Naples; who, after receiving instructions from Francanzani and Falcone, and studying nature in the wildest parts of the mountainous region of Naples, and amongst the wildest companions, went to Rome, where he soon obtained patronage, and executed many fine paintings. He was concerned in the insurrection of Tomaso Aniello, and was obliged to leave Naples in disguise. He afterwards carried on his practice of painting at Florence and Rome, and died in 1673, aged 58 years. His paintings are not all of equal excellence; but in his landscapes, which are mostly such as may be met with in the Apennines and on the rocky coast of S. Italy, he has infused into the scene a horror, that is to most persons far from agreeable, though natural enough in those lonely and dangerous parts. Some of his historical paintings are very fine. In his poetry and music he seems to have been possessed of the same originality of genius. He wrote some plays also, and took part in the representation of them, with success.

ROSARY, (rozary) s. [from rosarium, from rosa, Lat.] a bunch or string of beads on which the Romanists count their prayers.

ROSCID, a. [from rosceidus, Lat.] dewy; abounding with dew.

ROSCIUS, QUINTUS, a famous Roman actor, whose name has become proverbial for superiority in that profession, and for the histrionic profession itself. He received many marks of esteem and honour from the great men of his day, and was a friend of Cicero. He died in about 60 b. c.

ROSCOE, WILLIAM, a distinguished English writer, who owed all his celebrity to his determined perseverance and industry. He received but a meagre education; and was afterwards employed as a lawyer's clerk; when he devoted all his leisure to the study of languages, and to the attainment of scientific knowledge, and the cultivation of artistic taste. He was afterwards in practice as an attorney; and pursued his literary studies, and the promotion of literary tastes, in Liverpool. He also published some of his principal works; and joined in the agitation against slavery. He was for a short time the representative of Liverpool; and he carried on for some time, also, a banking establishment, which in the end was a failure, and caused the dispersion, by sale, of his books and works of art, that had been so costly a treasure to him. The remainder of his life was spent in his favourite pursuits, and amongst his numerous and attached friends. He died in 1831, aged 78 years. His great works are his Lives of Lorenzo the Magnificent, and of Leo X., and on them his name rests; the others are of more fugitive order. The great charm of his writings is the style, which is marked by most finished elegance. His histories are not deficient in research, nor yet in elaborate criticism on the writers of the times he describes. The translations from the poems are particularly pleasing. But as history they must not be read, being mere panegyrics, in which all that would not suit the lustrous ideals he wished to portray is slurred over with a lawyer's tact, or sedulously suppressed. He has even stepped out of his way to prove Lucretia Borgia worthy of the name of the martyr of chastity. His youngest son, Henry, was a barrister, and followed in his father's steps as a cultivator of literature. He published his father's Life, Lives of British Lawyers, and several works on legal matters, beside editing North's Lives. He died in 1836, aged 36 years.

ROSCOMMON, a county of Connaught, in Ireland. It is 60 miles in length, and from 12 to 37 in breadth; and is bounded by Longford, East Meath, Sligo, Leitrim, Galway, and Mayo. It is a level, fruitful country, and by the help of good husbandry yields excellent corn. Here are some extensive bogs, and but few hills, yet some of them are about 1000 feet high. The Shannon and the Suck are its chief rivers; but there are several loughs, or lakes. The principal town is Athlone; but the assize town is Roscommon, which is a small town, where are an old castle and an abbey, with some public buildings of more recent date, for more civilized purposes. It is 68 miles from Dublin. Pop. 3439. Pop. of county, which contains 50 parishes, 253,591. It returns two representatives and a moiety to the imperial parliament.

ROSE, (rose), a. rose, Fr. rosa, Lat.] in Botany and Horticulture, a large family of plants, amongst which are the most admired and beautiful of our garden flowers. In all countries where any species are found, from the earliest times, this flower has been the especial favourite of poets. A great many varieties are indigenous to Great Britain; but the varieties produced by culture are innumerable. The leaves of this flower are used for some medical purposes, and a delicious perfume is extracted from them. To speak under the rose, is to disclose a secret, or reveal any thing which will not be discovered afterwards.

ROSE, preter. Of To Rise.

ROSEATE, (roseate) a. rosat, Fr.] rosy; full of roses; blooming, fragrant, purple, as a rose.

ROSEBAY, s. in Botany, a shrub with wide-spreading and trailing branches, and purplish flesh-coloured blossoms. It is found on mountains in the north of England.

ROSELLINI, HIPPOLITO, one of the late investigators of the ancient monuments and language of Egypt and the valley of the Nile. Having completed his studies, he became Oriental professor at Pisa, and afterwards went to Paris with Champollion, whose works on Egypt had already attracted his attention. He next accompanied that eminent scholar to that land of wonders, and the result of their researches was left for Rosellini to publish, by the early death of his companion. He had resumed his former professorship, but he subsequently relinquished it, and soon after died, in 1843, aged 43 years. His work is a most valuable one, but beyond the reach of all but the great.

ROSE-MALLOW, s. in Botany, a plant larger than the common mallow.

ROSEMARY, (rosemary) a. ros marinus, Lat.] in Botany, a common garden plant, which flowers early, and has a pleasant scent, especially when dried.

ROSEN, FREDERIC AUGUSTUS, an eminent Oriental scholar, a native of Hanover. He received his education chiefly at Leipzig and Berlin, where he gained a deserved reputation for his knowledge of the Sanscrit, and enjoyed the friendship of the most distinguished scholars of Germany. He accepted the office of professor of Sanscrit in University college, London, where he maintained his reputation by many valuable publications, and greatly extended the circle of his warmly-attached friends. In the midst of these engagements, he was arrested by death, in 1837, aged but 32 years. Most of his publications were for the use of scholars or students; the more popular were merely parts of works of extensive sale.

ROSENMÜLLER, the name of two eminent theologians and biblical scholars of Germany. The father, John George, was theological professor at Erlangen and Leipzig successively, and published a useful work, entitled Scholæ (or Critical Notes) on the New Testament. He died in 1815, aged 79 years. Ernest Frederic Charles, his son, was professor of Arabic and other Oriental languages at Leipzig, and published Scholæ on the Old Testament, a work more valuable than the corresponding one of his father's; an excellent Arabic Grammar, and several essays on Biblical Antiquities. He died in 1835, aged 67 years.

ROSENOBLE, (rose-noble) s. an English gold coin, in value anciently sixteen shillings.

ROSET, (roset) s. a red colour for painters.

ROSETTA, a town of Egypt, situated on the Nile, not far from one of its mouths. It is a place of some trade, and has lately advanced in importance and in wealth. It stands in the midst of a very fertile country, but its chief trade is foreign, although it has a very indifferent harbour. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 31. 24. N. Long. 30. 27. E. Near this town was discovered the famous Rosetta-stone, now in the British Museum, which, containing a royal proclamation by Ptolemy V., in about 200 B. C., inscribed in three different characters, viz. the hieroglyphic, the cuneiform, (or common), and the Greek, led to the discovery of the meaning of the hieroglyphs, which has already cast such remarkable light on some parts of the Old Testament history, as well as on ancient Egyptian history.

ROSEWATER, (rosewater) s. water distilled from roses.

ROSCIRSIANS, or, the brothers of the Rosy Cross, a secret association of men who professed to know all sciences and languages, so as to have the gift of perpetual youth, and various other much-coveted blessings as the fruit of their knowledge. Little is known accurately of them, and that little is misrepresented by the excessively rational inquirers of the last century, who have been most interested in them.

ROSIN, (rozin) s. See RESIN.

TO ROSIN, (rozin) v. a. to rub with rosin.

ROSINY, (rozinny) a. resembling rosin.

ROSS and CROMARTY, a shire of Scotland, lately consolidated, lying in the N. part of the country, part on the mainland, and part in the Western Isles, or Hebrides, and bounded by the counties of Sutherland and Inverness. The length and breadth of this county cannot be given accurately. The mainland is mountainous, several hills reaching, or approaching 4000 feet in height. Murray Frith, Cromarty Frith, and Dornoch Frith, are the chief bays on the E. coast; whilst, on the W., the Minch, between Lewis and the mainland, and the strait separating the Isle of Skye from the mainland, may be called the principal inlets. There are no very large streams; but Lewis, and the mainland too, abound with lakes. Building and limestone are found here, but not much sought after. Agriculture is attended to with considerable diligence and profit; and, beside corn, sheep are reared in great numbers. The fisheries are of considerable value to all the coast towns. Tain, Dingwall, and Cromarty are the chief towns. Pop. 78,685. It returns one member to parliament, and moieties of two others.

ROSSEL, s. light land.

ROSTRATED, a. [rostrum, Lat.] adorned with beaks of a ship.

ROSTRUM, s. [Lat.] the beak of a bird or ship; a scaffold or pulpit, whence orators are anciently harangued; a pipe which conveys liquor into the receiver in common alembics; a pair of crooked scissors used in dialing wounds.

ROSY, (ricy) a. [rosa, Lat.] resembling a rose in bloom, beauty, or fragrance.

TO ROT, v. n. [rotan, Sax. rotten, Belg.] to putrefy, or lose the cohesion of its parts.—v. a. to corrupt or make putrid.

ROT, s. a distemper among sheep, affecting their lungs; a putrid decay. See Day-not.

ROTATION, s. [rota, Lat.] the act of whirling round; the state of being whirled round; revolution on an axis; a turn or succession.

ROTATOR, s. [Lat.] that which gives a circular motion.

ROTATORY, s. having a whirling motion; being in rotation. Rotatory animalcule, in Natural History, the general name for a large genus of infusorial animals, which are furnished with ciliae at their upper extremity, which is sometimes bifid, by the regular motion of which they impart a whirling motion to the water, and bring their food within reach. They also seem capable of changing place by means of these ciliae. They exhibit in a remarkable degree the tenacity of life peculiar to the lowest orders of animals.

ROTE, s. [rout, Fr.] words uttered by mere memory without meaning; memory of words without understanding their meaning.

To ROTE, v. a. to fix in the memory without informing the understanding.

ROTHER-NAILS, s. [corrupted from rudder and nails,] nails with very full heads, used in fastening the irons of rudders.

ROTHERHAM, Yorkshire, W. Riding. It has a large iron manufacture, for which it has long been famous. It is seated on the river Don, at its conflux with the Rother, and enjoys other facilities for the carriage of its manufactures. It has some handsome buildings, and is in general a good-looking place. It is 160 miles from London. Market, Monday. Fairs, Whitsunday and December 1st. Pop. 5505.

ROTTHAY, Bute, Scotland. It stands on a small bay on the E. side of the island, of which it is the chief town, and is most noted for an old castle that was once a royal residence. It is a busy place, both in fishing, trade, and manufactures. It is about 100 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 5789.

ROT'TEN, a. corrupted or putrid. Figuratively, wanting firmness, solidity, or honesty.

ROT'TENNESS, s. state of being rotten; putrefaction.

ROT'TENSTONE, s. in Domestic Economy, a friable, clayey earth, of a light grayish brown colour, and somewhat unpleasant smell, used for polishing bright ware. It is found in various parts of England.

ROTTERDAM, a large, strong, handsome, and rich town, capital of S. Holland, in the Netherlands. It has one of the finest harbours in the kingdom, which renders it a place of great trade. It is built in the usual manner of Dutch towns, and has many handsome buildings. It has some manufactures also; and some valuable institutions for education and benevolence. It is seated on the river Maese, 30 miles from Amsterdam. Pop. about 80,000. Lat. 51. 57. N. Long. 4. 25. E.

ROTUND, a. [rotundus, Lat.] round; circular; spherical.

ROTUNDIFOLIOLUS, a. [rotundus and folium, Lat.] having round leaves.

ROTUNDITY, s. [rotunditas, Lat.] the quality of being round.

ROTUNDA, s. [rotundo, Ital.] a building of a round form, both on the outside and in the inside, such as the pantheon at Rome.

ROUBILLIAC, LOUIS FRANCIS, an eminent sculptor, born in France, but for the greatest part of his life an inhabitant of England. He produced several of the most striking monuments in Westminster Abbey, such as that for the Duke of Argyle, and that for Mrs. Nightingale; besides Handel's statue at Vauxhall, and Sir Isaac Newton's at Cambridge. He is said to have displayed a taste for poetry also. He died in 1762.

To ROVE, v. n. [røffer, Dan.] to ramble, wander, or walk about without any particular determination.—v. n. to wander over.

ROVER, s. a wanderer; a fickle or inconstant person; a robber or pirate. At rovers, in Archery, without any particular aim.

ROUEN, the capital of the department of Seine Inférieure, France. It is seated on the river Seine, over which it has a fine stone bridge, and a long and good bridge of boats. The streets are narrow, crooked, dirty, and consist of wooden houses; but notwithstanding its disagreeable appearance, it is one of the most opulent and important places in France. The public buildings are very grand and elegant, especially the cathedral. The lines of Rouen, particularly what are called the Siamoise, are much esteemed; and there are also manufactures of cloth, &c. &c. It is a place of some trade, and the river forms an excellent harbour. There are here several valuable institutions, and a good library. It is 80 miles from Paris. Pop. about 100,000. Lat. 49. 27. N. Long. 1. 6. E.

ROUGE, (roge) s. [Fr.] red paint.

ROUGH, (this word, and its following compounds, pronounced ruff, as ruffcast, ruffdrift, &c.) a. [rurh, krubge, Sax.] having inequalities on the surface, opposed to smooth; rugged; austere, applied to the taste; harsh, applied to sound; severe, rude, or void of civility, applied to behaviour; hard-featured; not finished or polished; coarse; tempestuous, applied to weather.

To ROUGHCAST, v. a. to form in an inelegant manner, with inequalities on its surface; to form any thing in its first rudiments.

ROUGHCAST, s. a rude model; a kind of plaster, very uneven in its surface, because mixed with pebbles, &c.

ROUGHDRAUGHT, s. a draught of a thing performed without nicely.

To ROUGHDRAW, v. a. to trace coarsely.

To ROUGHEN, v. a. to make rough.—v. n. to grow rough.

To ROUGH-JEW, v. a. to form in a rude manner.

ROUGHLY, ad. with uneven surface; harshly; rudely; severely.

ROUGHNESS, s. inequality of surface; austerity, or stringency of taste; harshness of sound; severity, or want of civility or elegance of behaviour or treatment; violence of operation, applied to medicine; an unpolished or unfinished state; want of elegance in dress or appearance; tempestuousness, applied to weather; coarseness of features.

To ROUGHWORK, v. a. to work coarsely over without the least nicely.

ROUNCEVAL, s. in Horticulture, a species of pea, so called from Roncesvalles, a town at the foot of the Pyrenees.

ROUND, a. [rond, Fr. rondo, Ital. rund, Belg.] cylindrical, circular, or spherical; orbicular; smooth, applied to the sound of periods; too great to be stated exactly, or stated without attending to more than the higher figures, applied to quantities and numbers; quick, applied to motion. Plain; without reserve; followed by with.

ROUND, s. a circle, sphere, orb; a rundle, or step of a ladder; the time in which a thing passes through the hands of a company, and comes back to the first; a revolution; a discharge of musketry; a walk performed by an officer in surveying any district. In Music, a short composition, for several voices, so written that each should sing the same notes, but at various times, much as in a catch.

ROUND, ad. every way; on all sides; in a circle or revolution; in a circular manner. Not in a direct line, followed by about.

ROUND, prep. on every side of; circularly about; all over.

To ROUND, v. a. [rotundo, Lat.] to surround or encircle; to make circular; to raise figures to a relief; to move about any thing; to make smooth, applied to periods.—v. n. to grow to a circular form.—[runden, Teut.] to whisper.

ROUNDABOUT, a. ample or extensive; indirect or loose.

ROUNDEL, ROUNDELAY, s. [rondelet, Fr.] a kind of poetry consisting of thirteen verses, eight of which are of one kind of rhyme, and five of another; it is divided into three couplets, and has the beginning of the roundel repeated at the end of the second and third couplets in an equivocal sense, if possible.—[rondele, Fr.] a round form or figure.

ROUNDER, s. circumference; enclosure.

ROUNDEADS, (roundheads) s. a nickname given during the civil wars of the 17th century to the Puritans, from their custom of cropping their hair round.

ROUNDOUSE, s. the constable's prison, in which disorderly persons, found in the street, are confined.

ROUNDISH, a. somewhat round; approaching to roundness.

ROUNDLY, ad. in a round form; openly; plainly; briskly; completely; in earnest.

ROUNDNESSE, s. circularity; sphericity; rotundity; smoothness; honesty; openness.

ROUS, FRANCIS, one of the prominent persons in the Puritan Revolution of the 17th century. He studied at Oxford, entered parliament, earnestly desired the establishment of a theocratic republic, and was made by the Protector one of the Upper House, and provost of Eton. He yet speaketh, by the version of the Psalms, sung in the northern kirks, and generally used in his day; which was intended to be an improvement on Sternhold and Hopkins, but was not. He died in 1659, aged 85 years.

TO ROUSE, (rouze) v. a. [see TO RAISE or RISE.] to wake from rest; to excite to thought or action; to drive a beast from his lair.—v. n. to awake from slumber; to be excited to thought or action.

ROUSE, (rouze) s. [ruseh, Teut.] a quantity of liquor rather too great for sobriety.

ROUSER, (rouzer) s. one who rouses.

ROUSSEAU, JEAN BAPTISTE, a French lyric poet of the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th century. He sprang from humble life; but received a good education, and became page or secretary to some embassies. He was afterwards banished, on a false charge of having written libellous verses; and visited Switzerland and Vienna, when he was patronized by Prince Eugene. He died at Brussels in 1741, aged 72 years.

ROUSSEAU, JEAN JACQUES, the Luther of the French Revolution, according to Coleridge's eloquent historical parallel. His life was one of the most extraordinary character. Born at Geneva, and early losing the comfort of a home, being also harshly treated by the engraver to whom he was apprenticed, he acquired many evil habits, and finally left the country, to wander about Savoy, where he was, when almost perishing, sheltered and fed in a monastery. He had been introduced to the well-known Madame de Warens; and after being dismissed from the convent on refusing to be a priest, he entered her service, and stayed with her, with some interruptions, for about 10 years. He next entered the service of the French ambassador to Venice, and returning with him to Paris, became acquainted with the girl Theresa Levasseur, who lived the rest of his life with him as mistress and wife, and survived him. He was now introduced to the literary circle at the metropolis; and soon took his rank with them by producing his prize essay for the Dijon Academy, and his comic opera of the Village Conjuré. But he was obliged to resort to the miserable work of copying music, for his bread; and by this means he supported himself for the greater part of his after life. His life was afterwards very unsettled, chiefly because of the opposition that he awakened by his writings, which he now issued in rapid succession; some of which were condemned to be burnt by the hangman. We find him at Montmorency, in the house of Madame d'Épinay; at Geneva, Chambéry, Neuchâtel, England, Paris, till at last he settled at Ermenouville, where he died suddenly in 1778, aged 66 years. Of his morals little can be said favourably; yet he saw the evil of some things that he had done, and married the girl he had seduced, and lamented that he had caused their offspring to be sent to the foundling hospitals. His religious opinions were tainted, but not corrupted by the prevalent scepticism, and he separated from the Encyclopedists, who would have had him renounce even the judgment his taste so eloquently pronounced on the Scriptures, and on the character of Jesus: his taste alone seems to have spoken, for his Confessions betray no conviction, no spiritual discernment, respecting the truth of the gospel. He was also, most evidently, mentally diseased; and took up a thousand unreal fancies, against which he strove, as though they were not the children of his own brain. His Emile contains his educational theory; his New Héloïse, (a voluptuous novel,) his theory of love and marriage; but in his Social Contract he developed his political dream, and it was the passionate belief in that, which was the plastic force during the popular and terrible days of the French Revolution, and caused him to be entitled the hero-writer of that convulsive movement. He also wrote his Confessions, and several other works, occupying above 20 octavo volumes in all. The influence of these writings is passed away, and students read with some astonishment that they did actually once shake the world.

ROUT, s. [rot, Belg. route, Fr.] a clamorous or tumultuous crowd. Figuratively, a clamour or bustle; confusion of an army defeated.

TO ROUT, v. n. to assemble in tumultuous and clamorous crowds.—v. a. to defeat, or disperse by defeating.

ROUTE, s. [route, Fr.] a road; a way.

ROW, (ro) s. [reih, Teut.] a rank or file; a number of things ranged in a line.

To ROW, (ro) v. n. [rowan, Sax.] to make a vessel move on the water by oars.—v. a. to drive by oars.

ROWAN TREE, s. in Botany, a name of the mountain ash.

ROWE, ELIZABETH, a quietist of the English order, was the daughter of a Dissenting minister, and lost her husband soon after her marriage; after which she lived in retirement, lightened only by the occasional visits of attached friends. She died in 1737, aged 63 years. Her Devout Exercises of the Heart is the best known of her writings, and it came out under the recommendation of Dr. Watts.

ROWEL, (ow pron. as in now) s. [rouelle, Fr.] the pointed part of a spur which turns on an axis. In Surgery, a seton, or roll of hair, silk, &c. put into a wound to promote a discharge.

To ROWEL, v. a. to pierce through the skin, and keep a wound open by a rowel.

ROWEN, s. a field kept up till after Michaelmas, that the corn left on the ground may sprout into green.

ROW'ER, (roer) s. one that rows.

ROWLANDSON, THOMAS, a skilful caricaturist of the last generation. He studied at Paris, and at the royal academy of London, and died in 1827, aged 71 years. His plates of Dr. Syntax's various tours are known to all, and are, perhaps, his most humorous works.

ROXBURGHSHIRE, a county of Scotland, sometimes called Teviotdale. It borders on England, and is bounded by Berwickshire and the shires of Dumfries and Selkirk. It extends near 30 miles in length, and about 18 in breadth. The Cheviot hills are in this county, some of which are about 2000 feet high. The Tweed, the Teviot, the Eden, the Liddel, &c. water it. Coal and various kinds of building-stone are found here. Grazing is the chief branch of farming attended to. The principal towns are Jedburgh, Kelso, Hawick, and Melross. Roxburgh, with its castle, is situated near Kelso, 32 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 642. Pop. of county, 46,025. It sends one member and a moiety to parliament.

ROYAL, a. [Fr.] kingly; regal; belonging to or becoming a king. Figuratively, noble; illustrious.

ROYALIST, s. [Fr.] an adherent to a king.

To ROYALIZE, v. a. to make royal.

ROYALLY, ad. in a kingly manner; regally; as becomes a king.

ROYAL-OAK, in Astronomy, one of the new southern constellations.

ROYALTY, s. [royauté, or royauté, Fr.] kingship; the character, office, or ensigns of a king.

To ROYNE, v. a. [royner, Fr.] to gnaw; to bite.

ROYSTON CROW, s. in Ornithology, a name of the hooded crow, which is of a grayish colour, except in its wings, tail, and neck, which are black. It frequents the S. half of England during the winter, but returns to the N. parts of the island in the spring.

ROYTELET, s. [Fr.] a little or petty king.

To RUB, v. a. [rubio, Brit.] to clean or smooth any thing by passing something over it; to touch so as to wear off some of the surface; to touch so as to leave something of that which touches behind; to move one body upon another. Figuratively, to hinder by collision; to remove by friction. Used with down, to clean or curry. Used with up, to excite or awaken.—v. n. to fret, or wear by friction; to get through difficulties.

RUB, s. a hindrance or obstruction; the act of rubbing; inequality of ground which hinders a bowl in its course; a difficulty, or cause of uneasiness.

RUBBISH, s. ruins of building; fragments of matter used in building; a confused mass; any thing vile or worthless.

RUBBER, s. one thing that passes one thing hard over the surface of another; any thing used to rub with; two games out of three; a whetstone; a coarse file.

RUBBLE-STONE, s. a kind of stone that has been rubbed or worn by water.

RUBENS, PETER PAUL, the great painter of the Flemish school. Having studied under the most eminent masters of his own country, he visited Italy, where he devoted himself principally to the study of Titian's chef-d'œuvre. He was employed by the Duke of Mantua, not only as an artist, but also on a particular embassy to Madrid, where he stayed and executed many pictures of courtiers and others, and then returned. He was recalled by domestic affliction to his native city, Antwerp; and there he now married and settled. He visited Paris and Madrid professionally; and from Madrid went to England as an ambassador, and received abundant honour from Charles I. He married again, and not many years after died, in 1640, aged 63 years. His paintings are very numerous, and there are several both wholly executed by himself, and also after his designs and sketches, in this country. His portrait of himself is familiar, by engraved copies, to most readers. He is held to have been one of the greatest masters of all that can be supplied by experience and study to an artist; and most of his pictures show him possessed of the artist's spirit also.

RUBICAN, a. [Fr.] bay, sorrel, or black, with a light gray or white on the flanks, applied to the colour of a horse.

RUBICUND, a. [rubicundus, from rubr. Lat. rubicunde, Fr.] inclining to redness; blood-red.

RUBIED, a. of the colour of a ruby.

RUBIFIC, a. of rubr. and ficio, Lat.] making red.

RUBIFORM, a. [rubr. and forma, Lat.] having the form of red.

To RUBIFY, v. a. to make red.

RUBIGINOUS, a. [rubigo, Lat.] rusty; foul.

RUBIOUS, a. [rubro, Lat.] ruddy; red.

RUBRIC, s. [rubricque, Fr.] ritual or formal directions in the Common Prayer and law books, so termed because originally printed with red ink.

RUBRIC, a. red.

RUBRICATED, a. [rubricatus, Lat.] smeared with red.

RUBY, s. [rubr., Lat.] in Mineralogy, a precious stone of a red colour; redness; any thing red.

RUBY, a. of a red colour.

RUCATION, s. [ructo, Lat.] a belching arising from flatulence.

RUDDER, s. [rader, Belg.] an instrument at the stern of a vessel by which its course is governed. Figuratively, any thing that guides or governs the course.

RUDIMAN, THOMAS, a Scottish grammarian; who after having studied at Aberdeen, became a keeper of the advocate's library at Edinburgh; and subsequently added the occupations of auctioneer and printer to that work. He died in 1757, aged 83 years. His Rudiments of the Latin Tongue disputed the palm with the Eton Latin Grammar, and deserved it quite as well. It is now quite superseded. He edited various works, which gained him considerable reputation.

RUDINESS, s. the quality of approaching to redness.

RUDILE, s. [rudis, Lat.] red earth.

RUDDOCK, s. in Ornithology, a name of the red-breast.

RUDDY, a. [rudis, Sax.] pale red; approaching to red; of a fresh blooming colour.

RUDE, a. [rudis, Lat. rode, Sax.] rough, coarse, brutal; uncivil; tumultuous; boisterous, violent, turbulent; harsh; untaught, ignorant; unpolished; rugged, or shapeless; artless, inelegant; performed merely with strength.

RUDELY, ad. in a coarse, brutal, violent, rough, boisterous, or unskilful manner.

RUDENESS, s. want of civility, elegance, or instruction; violence; stouriness, or rigour.

RUDENTURE, s. [Fr.] in Architecture, the figure of a rope or staff, sometimes plain, and sometimes carved, wherewith the flutings of columns are usually filled up.

RUDERARY, a. [rudero, Lat.] belonging to rubbish.

RUDERATION, s. in Architecture, the laying of a pavement with pebbles or little stones.

RUDIMENT, s. [Fr. rudimentum, Lat.] the first principles of a science or education; the first unpolished draught or beginning of any thing.

RUDIMENTAL, a. relating to first principles; initial.

RUDOLPHINE TABLES, an extensive series of astronomical tables constructed by Tycho Brahe and Kepler, under the patronage of the Emperor Rudolph at the first, who hoped to find them profitable for astrological purposes. See KEPLER, BRAHE, &c.

To RUE, v. a. [Fr. rue, Sax.] to grieve, regret, or lament.

RUE, s. [rue, Fr. ruta, Lat.] in Botany, an aromatic herb, commonly grown in gardens, and often carried at funerals.

RUEFUL, a. woeful; sorrowful.

RUEFULLY, ad. mournfully; sorrowfully.

RUEFULNESS, s. sorrowfulness; mournfulness.

RUFF, a. (see RUFFLE,) a linen ornament gathered and formerly worn round the neck. In Ichthyology, a small river fish, so called from the shape of its dorsal fin; almost peculiar to the Wensum, that flows through Norwich.

RUFFE, s. in Ornithology, the name of a small species of bird, the female of which is called reeve; it is allied to the woodcock, &c., and the males are remarkable for their pugnacity in the pairing season.

RUFFIAN, s. [ruffiano, Ital.] a hired murderer; a robber, or boisterous and mischievous fellow.

RUFFIAN, a. brutal; savagely boisterous.

To RUFFLE, (riff) v. a. [ruffelen, Belg.] to contract into wrinkles, or make rough; to discompose, applied to the temper; to surprise; to throw together in disorder; to contract into plaits.—v. n. to grow rough or boisterous; to flutter; to jar.

RUFFLE, (riff) s. plaited or gathered linen, or any kind of ornamental fringe, worn as an ornament on the wristband, &c. A disturbance or commotion, applied to the mind.

RUFFERHOOD, s. in Falconry, a hood to be worn by a hawk when she is first drawn.

RUG, s. [rugget, Swed.] a coarse nappy woollen cloth; a coarse nappy coverlet used for mean beds.

RÜGEN, an island of the Baltic, belonging to Prussia. It is very rocky, and hence its coast outline is most irregular. A remarkable forest, with a lake in its depths, is said to have been the scene of the worship of the oldest of the Teutonic divinities. Corn and cattle are produced abundantly. The fisheries are also very valuable. Bergen is the chief town on it. Population, about 30,000. Lat. (of Bergen) 54. 23. N. Long. 13. 35. E.

RUGGED, a. [rüg-ed] a. [rugget, Swed.] full of unevenness or inequalities on the surface; rough; without order; savage or brutal, applied to temper; stormy or boisterous, applied to weather; rough or harsh, applied to sound; surly, applied to aspect; rough or shaggy.

RUGGEDNESS, (rüg-ness) s. the quality of being rough.

RUGGIN, s. a nappy cloth.

RUGINE, s. [Fr.] a surgeon's rasp.

RUGOSE, a. [ruga, Lat.] full of wrinkles.

RUHNKEN, DAVID, a distinguished German scholar of the last century. He studied at Königsberg, Göttingen, and Leyden, and very early obtained considerable celebrity for his attainments. After some travels in France and Spain, he was appointed to a professorship at Leyden, of which university he was afterwards rector and librarian. He died in 1798, aged 75 years. His works, and editions of classics, are very numerous, and are amongst the most valuable for students and scholars that appeared before the late great advances made in the science of language.

RUIN, s. [ruina, from ruo, Lat.] the fall or destruction of cities or houses; the remains of a demolished building; loss of happiness or fortune; destruction; mischief or bane.

To RUIN, v. a. [ruiner, Fr.] to demolish, subvert, destroy; to deprive of happiness or fortune; to impoverish.—v. n. to fall in ruins; to run to a state of decay and destruction; to be impoverished.

To RUINATE, v. a. to destroy, demolish, or involve in poverty and misery.

RUINATION, s. subversion, or destruction.

RUINER, s. he that ruins.

RUINOUS, a. fallen to decay; pernicious; destructive.

RUINOUSLY, ad. in a ruinous manner; mischievously; destructively.

RULE, s. [regula, from rego, Lat.] government, empire, sway, or supreme command; an instrument by which lines are drawn; a canon or precept applicable to the direction of particular thoughts or actions; propriety or regularity of behaviour. In Law, an order in some one of the higher courts. Rule of Three, in Arithmetic, an application of some of the simplest principles of Proportion to commercial operations; by which a member is found that stands in the same proportion, directly or inversely, to another given number, as two other given numbers stand in to each other. The Double Rule of Three, is an extension of the rule to the more complicated case of the discovery of a number in certain proportions to 5 others, given.

To RULE, v. a. to control; to govern with power and authority; to manage; to settle as by rule.—v. n. to exercise power or authority in governing.

RULER, s. a governor, or one who has supreme authority or command; an instrument used in drawing lines.

RUM, s. a kind of spirits distilled from sugar or treacle.

To RUMBLE, (rûmbel), v. n. [rommelen, Belg.] to make a hoarse, low, continued noise.

RUMBLER, s. the person or thing that rumbles.

RUMFORD, BENJAMIN, COUNT, whose original name was Thompson, a citizen of New England, of considerable eminence as a practical natural philosopher. In the War of Independence he sided with England; and received as his reward, knighthood, the secretaryship of an embassy, and at last the post of under secretary of state. Subsequently he entered the service of the Elector Palatine, and of the Duke of Bavaria; and by the last, for his manifold and valuable scientific services, he was created Count Rumford. He afterwards returned to England, where he joined in the establishment of the Royal Institution; and finally settled in France, where he died in 1814, aged 62 years. His Essays, &c., contain many valuable suggestions, respecting improvements in the processes of the useful arts, &c., that are not even yet adopted.

RUMINANT, a. [rumino, Lat.] having the property of chewing the cud. In Zoology, the designation of an order of quadrupeds, including the ox, sheep, goat, deer, camelopard, camel, &c. &c.

To RUMINATE, v. n. [ruminare, Fr. rumino, Lat.] to chew the cud; to muse, or meditate; to think on again and again.—v. a. to chew over again; to meditate over and over again.

RUMINATION, s. [ruminatio, Lat.] the property or act of chewing the cud. Figuratively, meditation; reflection.

To RUMMAGE, v. a. to search, or plunder; to evacuate.—v. n. to search places.

RUMMER, s. [ramer, Belg.] a large drinking cup or glass with a broad mouth.

RUMOUR, s. [rumor, Lat. rumeur, Fr.] flying report, not well established; bruit; fame.

To RUMOUR, v. a. to spread a report.

RUMOURER, s. a reporter; a spreader of news.

RUMP, s. [rumpff, Teut.] the end of the back-bone; the buttocks; tail-piece of a bird.

To RUMPLE, (rûmpel) v. a. [rompelen, Belg.] to wrinkle or disorder.

RUMPLE, (rûmpel) s. [hyrmpelle, Sax.] a pucker or plait made by negligence or carelessness.

RUMSEY, a town in Hampshire, with a market on Saturday. It is governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, 12 burgesses, a town-clerk, recorder, and two sergeants at mace. Here is a large manufactory for shalloon. It is 74 miles from London.

To RUN, v. n. [ryuen, Sax. rinuen, Goth. rennen, Belg.] to move swiftly; to have a general tendency; to discharge purulent matter; applied to wounds; to take a course, applied to ships; to contend in a race. To run away, to make an escape, or leave unexpectedly; to stream or flow, applied to liquors; to be liquid, or melt; to pass; to go away or vanish; to move in any direction. To be busied upon, applied to the mind, and used with on or upon. Used with over, to be exuberant, or to be mentioned cursorily. Used with after, to search, to go out of the way for. Followed by in with, to close or comply, to agree. To run away with, to hurry without deliberation.—v. a. to melt or cast, applied to metals; to hazard, risk, or venture, applied to fortune. To run down, to chase till weary. Figuratively, to truss or overbear. To run through, to stab or pierce with a weapon, so that the point appears on the contrary side; to pass through.

RUN, s. the act of running; course, motion, or direction; flow or cadence, applied to verse; uncontrolled course or humour; long reception; continued success. In the long run, signifies the end, or at last.

RUNAGATE, s. [renegat, Fr.] an apostate; a deserter, fugitive, rebel, renegade.

RUNAWAY, s. one that flies from danger; a fugitive.

RUNDLE, s. a round or step of a ladder; something put round an axis; a peritochium. In Botany, a composition of flowers, in which a number of slender fruit-stalks proceed from the same centre, and rise nearly to the same height, so as to form a regular surface at the top; as in the hemlock, carrot, &c. It is more usually called an umbel.

RUNDLET, s. a small barrel. See RUNDLE.

RUNG, the pret. and past part. of To RING.

RUNIC, a. the name of the letters used in inscriptions, &c.

by the ancient Teutonic nations of N. Europe; of which several remarkable specimens exist in Great Britain. In the times when they were used, as the most meagre scholarship was most rare, those who were able to read and write them were deemed magicians, and the letters were thought to possess magic properties.

RUNNEL, s. a rivulet; a small brook.

RUNNER, s. one that runs; a racer; a messenger; one employed by a banker or news-monger to collect money or news abroad; a shooting sprig; one of the stones of a mill.

RUNNET, s. [geronnen, Sax.] a liquor made by steeping the stomach of a calf in hot water, and used for curdling milk. Sometimes, but improperly, spelt runnet.

RUNNYMEAD, s. a paltry, scurvy street.

RUNNYMEAD, a place near Egham, in Surrey, where King John was compelled to sign Magna Charta. See JOHN, &c.

RUNT, s. [Teut.] any animal small below the natural growth of its kind.

RUPEE, s. an Indian coin, value 2s. 3d.

RUPERT, PRINCE, the son of Elizabeth, daughter of James I., who married the Elector Palatine. He was exiled for exciting a rebellion in Bohemia, and came to England, where Charles I. employed him in his army, during the Civil War. He distinguished himself by most fiery courage, and the most infatuated bad generalship;—lost most of the battles he fought in; took Bristol, and other towns, and then surrendered Bristol, which was one of the chief causes of Charles's ruin, and which lost him the king's confidence for awhile. He afterwards served in the fleet, and after various adventures was defeated by Blake, and sailed to the W. Indies, where he led a very piratical life for some time, and at last returned to France. After the Restoration, he was received by Charles II., served in the fleet with as little distinction as before, and at last betook himself to the more wise and useful amusement of making mezzotint plates, and little explosive globes of glass, called after him Prince Rupert's drops. He died in 1682, aged 63 years.

RUPTION, s. [rumpo, Lat.] a breach.

RUPTURE, s. [Fr.] the act of breaking; the state of a thing bursting; a breach of peace, or act of hostility. In Surgery, hernia.

To RUPTURE, v. a. to break; to burst; to suffer disruption.

RUPTUREWORT, s. in Botany, a genus of British plants, used by the old herbalists as a specific for diseases in the kidneys, &c.

RURAL, a. [Fr. ruralis, from rus, Lat.] belonging to, existing in, or resembling, the country.

RURALITY, RU'RALNESS, s. the quality of being rural.

RURICOLIST, s. [rus and colo, Lat.] an inhabitant of the country.

RU'RGINOUS, a. rus and gigno, Lat.] born in the country.

RUSE, (ruze) s. [Fr.] cunning; artifice; little stratagem; trick; fraud; deceit.

RUSH, s. [rise, Sax.] in Botany, a very large class of plants, growing in wet and marshy places, with round long stems or leaves, full of pith, and used in making brooms, mats, chair-seats, and candle-wicks. Figuratively, any thing proverbially worthless.

To RUSH, v. n. [hreoosan, Sax.] to move violently and rapidly.

RUSH, s. a violent course or motion.

RUSH, DR. BENJAMIN, an eminent American physician. He received his general education at Princeton college, and studied medicine at Edinburgh and London. He was member of congress for Pennsylvania, on the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Subsequently he held professorships of chemistry, physic, &c. in succession, at Pennsylvania university. He was also an officer in the mint of the United States. His investigations respecting the yellow fever, made his name as widely and as favourably known in Europe as it was in his own country. He died in 1813, aged 68 years. His writings on different medical subjects contain much that is extremely valuable.

RUSHGRASS, s. in Botany, a genus of the grass-like plants.

RUSHLIGHT, (rûshlight) s. a candle with a rush partly stripped of its bark for a wick.

RUSHWORTH, JOHN, one of the historical collectors and annalists, whose materials are amongst the most valuable for students and writers of history. He studied at Oxford, and afterwards at Lincoln's Inn. But although nominally a barrister, he seems not to have been engaged in actual pleading. He

BURLEY HOUSE

ORMANTON PARK

L I N C O L N S H I R E

- Rutland is the Hundred:
1. Alton.
  2. East.
  3. Marston.
  4. Oakham.
  5. Wansley.

County returns 2 members.

0 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

RUTLANDSHIRE

EMPINGHAM

introduced himself, with all the zeal of a newspaper reporter, on all occasions when any thing relating to the impending struggle between the crown and the parliament was in hand, and saw the first Scottish invasion. He next was engaged in the service of the House of Commons, in a somewhat miscellaneous way, and then became secretary to General Fairfax, whom he attended during his campaigns. He appeared once or twice under Cromwell, and after the Restoration, but in very great necessities; and died in 1690, aged about 80 years. His work is of great bulk, and contains a great store of curious information respecting his own times.

RUSHY, a. abounding with rushes; made of rushes.

RUSK, s. [rice, Sax.] hard biscuit made for store.

RUSSELL, LORD WILLIAM, one of the patriots and martyrs to liberty, belonging to the constitutional school. He was a mere youth during the Puritan Revolution, and does not appear in England, except as a student at Cambridge, till the Restoration. He was once called to the king's councils, but finding that his Majesty acted without their advice, and contrary to their known desire, he gave up this charge. When the question arose of excluding James, (then Duke of York,) from the succession, Russell was warmly in favour of it, and took the lead in the attempt to effect it. This led to the revival of the state of things that had caused the civil war and the death of Charles; but there were no men in England now like those of the Long Parliament. An insurrection was plotted, and Russell shared in the plot, hoping by that means to bar the throne against the Romanist duke. Upon the information obtained of this scheme, the government built the famous Eye-house Plot; and, contrary to all law and justice, convicted Russell of having contrived the king's death, sentenced him to the traitor's death, and beheaded him in 1683, aged 42 years. It is chiefly by the Whigs, to whose earliest numbers Lord Russell belonged, that he has been held up as a martyred patriot. Sidney, who fell shortly after him, will be regarded as more truly one, when questions of dynasties shall cease to be the all-absorbing subjects of statesmen, and the advocates of a feebly-supported claimant to the throne shall cease to be pronounced, therefore, the defenders of their country. Lady Russell, who was first Lady Vaughan, has given something of the mild beauty of her loving and courageous character to the Whig patriot. She sat before him and acted as his amanuensis on his trial. Her letters show that this was sincere. She survived him 40 years, dying in 1723, aged 86 years.

RUSSET, a. [roussel, Fr.] of a reddish brown or gray colour. Coarse, rustic, or homespun.

RUSSET, s. coarse, or country, dress.

RUSSET, RU'SSETTING, s. in Horticulture, a name given to several species of pears or apples, on account of their colour.

RUSSIA, (Rûssia) one of the largest empires in the world, extending from the shores of the Baltic, in Europe, across the whole width of Asia, to the British Possessions of N. America. Sweden, Prussia, Austria, and Turkey bound it in Europe; and in Asia, Turkey, Persia, Tatar, and Chinese Tatar. For particulars relating to Asiatic Russia, see KAMTSCHATKA, SIBERIA, GEORGIA, CIRCASSIA, &c. Russia in Europe is the vast and almost uninterrupted plain which reaches from the countries already named as the W. boundary of the empire, and the Baltic Sea, to the Ural Mountains; and from the Black Sea, to the White Sea and Frozen Ocean. The only mountains in this vast tract are the Uralian chain, extending along nearly half the E. European frontier, (see URAL MOUNTAINS,) and lesser chains in Finland, and the peninsula at the head of the Black Sea, called the Crimea. The rivers are the Volga, the Don, the Dnieper, the Doiester, the Danube, the Duna, the Dwina, the Petcheora, with their numerous tributaries, &c. The Black Sea, the Sea of Azov, the Gulfs of Riga and Finland, the White Sea, and some smaller bays of the N. Ocean, are its great marine inlets. There are very many lakes in the N. W. part of this territory, those of Ladoga and Onega being the largest. Gold, copper, and iron, in great quantities are found in the Uralian Mountains, with platinum and several other metals. Not much coal is found; but building stone of all kinds, valuable marble, &c. &c. abound. The forests of the country furnish excellent timber, tar, pitch, &c. Corn in immense quantities, cattle, horses, &c. &c. are raised. Hides and tallow, and the product of the wide and productive fisheries, are also to be numbered amongst their sources of wealth. In manufactures Russia is not greatly distinguished, unless it be for its linen and its leather. Autocracy is the form of its government, the very existence and privileges of the nobles depending on the will of the emperor. The greater proportion of the population are serfs, or slaves, attached to the soil with trees and others fixtures on the estates. The army is kept in admirable discipline; but it has no spirit save fear of the lash; and exile to Siberia keeps down all aspirations in other classes as degradingly and as surely. The police espionage is most perfect; the whole life of every man is known to the government; all his words and deeds that can by any means bear a suspicious construction are reported and recorded. The established religion is an offshoot from the Greek Church; but there is a certain kind of toleration shown to dissidents. There are several universities, which are not inefficient for general instruction, although, of course, under the control of the emperor; that at Moscow is the largest: besides these there are very many high schools, &c. St. Petersburg is the capital; the old capital was Moscow, whence was derived the ancient name of the country, Muscovy. Pop. of the whole empire, about 62,500,000; of Russia in Europe, about 48,000,000.

RUST, s. [rust, Sax.] the red oxide of iron, produced by moisture; the calx or flour of any metal; loss of power by inactivity.

To RUST, v. n. to have its surface corroded or tarnished; to degenerate or grow inactive by idleness.—v. a. to make rusty.

RUSTIC, a. [rusticus, from rus, Lat.] rural; country; rude or unpolite; savage; artless; simple; plain or unadorned.

RUSTIC, s. a clown, or unpolished countryman. In Architecture, a kind of building in imitation of nature, particularly when the stones in the face of a building are hatched or picked with the point of a hammer.

RUSTICAL, a. rough; savage; unpolite.

RUSTICALLY, ad. savagely; inelegantly; rudely.

To RUSTICATE, v. n. to reside in the country.—v. a. to banish into the country.

RUSTICITY, s. [rusticitas, Lat.] the qualities of one who lives in the country; broadness of pronunciation; rudeness of manners; rural appearance; simplicity.

RUSTINESS, s. the quality or state of being rusty.

To RUSTLE, (rustle) v. n. [ristlan, Sax.] to make a noise like that of silk when brushing against any thing, like that of trees when blown by the wind, or that of bushes when any one pushes through them.

RUSTY, a. covered with rust; impaired by inactivity.

RU'STYBACK, s. in Botany, a genus of ferns; some English species are found in the clefts of rocks, and others in turfbogs.

To RUT, v. n. [Fr.] to have a desire of coming together, applied to deer.

RUT, s. [route, Fr.] the track of a wheel worn in a road.

RUTH, BOOK OF, one of the historical writings of the Old Testament, containing the narrative of the marriage of one of the ancestors of David, with a young Moabitess, who had been left a widow. It is one of the most affecting and graceful pastorals that are known, and gives a lively picture of the simplicity of manners at the time of the events it records.

RU'TLANDSHIRE, the smallest county of England, 15 miles in length, and 11 in breadth. It is bounded by Leicestershire, Nottinghamshire, Lincolnshire, and Northamptonshire. It contains 48 parishes, and two market-towns. It yields good stone for building purposes. The air is very good, and the soil rich, producing excellent corn, and feeding a great number of cattle and sheep. The principal rivers are the Welland and the Gwash, or Wash. It is well wooded, and abounds in gentlemen's seat. Oakham, in the fertile vale of Catnose, is the county town. Pop. 21,302. It sends two members to parliament.

RUTHFUL, a. rueful; woeful; sorrowful.

RUTHFULLY, ad. woefully; sadly; sorrowfully.

RUTHLESS, a. cruel; pitiless; barbarous.

RUTHLESSLY, ad. cruelly; barbarously.

RUTHLESSNESS, s. want of pity.

RU'TTIER, s. [route, Fr.] a direction of the road, or course at sea.

RU'TTISH, a. wanton or lecherous.

RU'TSDAAL, JACOB, a celebrated Dutch landscape painter. His pieces are woods, groves, &c. with streams and cataracts; and their truth in design and colouring is most remarkable.

He painted a few sea-pieces, and executed several etchings also. He died in 1681, aged 45 years.

RU'YTER, MICHAEL ADRIAN, a famous naval commander of Holland, of the 17th century. He was once beaten by Blake, in the sea-fight in which he commanded with Van Tromp; and he had the advantage in an engagement with Prince Rupert and Monk. He sailed up the Medway, also, and burned the ships at Sheerness. He was distinguished in many other great battles, and had various success; and he fell in an engagement with the French, off Messina, in 1676, aged 69 years.

RYE, s. [ryge, Sax.] in Botany and Agriculture, a species of corn, whose ear is awned like barley, and the straw filled up with light pith. It grows well on light soils, and is ready for harvest earlier than other corn. It was formerly much used as an article of food amongst the poor; and makes a wholesome and palatable bread, when mixed with wheat flour, but of a darkish colour. Ergot of Rye is a kind of parasitical fungus, which grows on the kernel of the rye, and consumes it. It is very poisonous, but possesses the remarkable property, when exhibited in small quantities, of stimulating the contractile power of the uterus, in child-bed.

RYE, Sussex. It is one of the Cinque Ports, and has a small harbour, which gives it an inconsiderable trade. It is 63 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 4031.

RYEGATE, or REYGATE, Surrey. It has a market-house, which was formerly a chapel dedicated to Thomas à Becket. It is charmingly situated in the vale of Holmesdale, 21 miles from London. Market, Tuesday; and a monthly one on Wednesday. Pop. 1604.

RYEGRASS, s. in Botany, a sort of grass resembling rye.

RYLAND, WILLIAM WYNNE, an eminent engraver of the last century, who introduced a peculiar kind of engraving into England, in which the lines are not continuous, but consist of series of dots, which gives a very soft appearance to the print. He was afterwards found guilty of passing a forged bill, but it was not proved that he had committed the forgery; and he was executed in 1783, aged 51 years.

RYMER, THOMAS, a learned antiquary, who studied at Cambridge and Gray's Inn, and became eventually historiographer royal. His great work, which is of the greatest value to students of history, is his collection of public treaties, conventions, &c., between the kings of England and other sovereigns, known as Rymer's Fcedera. Some other valuable historic collections are unpublished. He died in 1713, aged about 75 years.

RYSEBRACK, JOHN MICHAEL, an eminent Dutch sculptor of the last century. He came to this country early in life, and gained, in time, considerable reputation by his various works; several of the best of which are in Westminster Abbey and other public places, but the greater number are to be found in private collections. He died in 1770, aged 77 years.

S

S IS the eighteenth letter of our alphabet. It is a dental sibilant. In the beginning of a word, s has invariably its natural and genuine sound, except in the case of the words sure and sugar; in the middle of it, it is sometimes pronounced like z; as, rose, prose, rosy, easier, miser, nosel, resident, busy, &c. In the end of monosyllables it sometimes sounds like s, as in this, thus, &c., and sometimes like z, as in as, has, is, his, &c., and generally where es stands in verbs for eth, as gives. In some words it is silent, as in isle, viscount, &c. At the end of some words it is doubled; as in brass, kiss, loss, mass, trespass, &c. In abbreviations, S stands for societas, or socius; as F. R. S. for Fellow of the Royal Society. In Medicinal prescriptions S. A. signifies secundum artem, i. e. according to the rules of art. Used as a numeral, S anciently denoted seven. In books of Navigation, S stands for south; S. E. for south-east; S. W. for south-west, &c.

SAADI, one of the great Persian poets, whose works have been made familiar to Europe and England by numerous translations. He lived a most varied life; he was a soldier for some time, and had the hard fate to be taken prisoner by some of the Christian troops; for many years he travelled, and thus became acquainted with the manners and customs of various nations, and the latter part of his life was spent as an anchorite and writer. He died in 1291, aged 116 years. His great poems are the Gulistan, (or garden of Roses,) and the Bostan; his minor poems are very numerous.

SABA, one of the W. Indian islands, lying immediately N. of St. Eustatia, between St. Croix and St. Bartholomew. It is a small island, not being more than 9 miles round its coast, and is very rocky, and has no harbour. Cotton and fruits are grown in a small part of the interior. It belongs to the Dutch. Pop. above 1000. Lat. 17. 40. N. Long. 63. 20. W.

SABAISM, s. the worship of the heavenly bodies, which prevailed at a very early period in S. W. Asia.

SABBATH, s. [sabbath, Heb.] amongst the Jews, the rest from all secular occupations, observed by Divine command on the seventh day of the week. This name is applied, but incorrectly, to the Lord's day, or the first day of the week; on which, from the beginning, religious assemblies amongst Christians have been held, to commemorate the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. Intermixture of pain or sorrow; time of rest.

SABBATH-BREAKER, s. amongst the Jews, one that violates the sabbath.

SABBATICAL, a. resembling the sabbath; enjoying or bringing intermission of labour.

SABBATISM, s. the observance of the sabbath.

SABELLIANISM, s. in Theology, a representation of the doctrine of the Trinity, which derives its name from an ecclesiastic of Ptolemais, Africa, of the 3rd century, named Sabellius, who was included amongst the heretics designated Patristians. He taught that there was but one God, of whom the Father, Son, and Spirit were different names, representing the different relations in which he stood to man. He had many followers, and has to this day those who advocate his opinions. The arguments and reasonings employed for and against this representation, show how impossible it is to investigate subjects of so lofty and mysterious a nature as that of the being of God, by the aid of school logic; and the total absence of dogmatic formulas in the New Testament, whilst every representation that is available for the intended effect is used by the sacred writers, should teach caution against the ascription to the formula we may hold by of the authority of a direct revelation from heaven.

SABINE, s. [Fr. sabina, Lat.] in Botany, a plant, the same with savin.

SABINES, an ancient tribe of Italy, dwelling in the neighbourhood of Rome, and united with Rome at a very early period of its history. According to the legendary tales of the kings, Tatius, who reigned conjointly with Romulus, was a Sabine, as was Numa Pompilius, the second king. Their original seat was in the neighbourhood of Ameternum, and they were closely connected with the Sabelli and Samnites. They worshipped the god of war and death under the symbol of a javelin.

SABLE, (sibb) s. [sibella, Lat.] in Zoology, a black species of weasel which inhabits the northern parts of Asia and America. Their furs are esteemed more valuable than that of any other animal.

SABLE, (sibb) a. [Fr.] black.

SABLIERE, s. [Fr.] a piece of timber as long, but not as thick, as a beam; a sand pit.

SABRE, (sibber) s. [Fr.] a curved sword; a falchion.

SABULOSITY, s. [sabulum, Lat.] sandiness; grittiness.

SABULOUS, a. sandy or gritty.

SACCADE, (sakskide) s. [Fr.] a violent check given to a horse, by tightening the reins very suddenly.

SACCHARINE, (sakkarine) a. [saccharum, Lat.] possessing the taste or any other qualities of sugar.

SACCHETTI, FRANCIS, an Italian novelist and poet of the 14th century. He filled some of the first offices in the republic of Florence. He imitated Boccaccio in his novels, and Petrarch in his lyric poems, but the latter have never been printed. His tales have often been printed, and are especially valuable, as a history of the manners of his age. He died in about 1400, aged about 70 years.

SACCHI, ANDREA, an eminent painter of the Roman school, in the 17th century. He studied under Albano, and was honoured by the patronage of Urban VIII., and others of the great and wealthy men of the age. Many of his works remain in the churches and galleries of Rome, and are admired for their harmony of colour, design, &c. He died in 1664, aged 70 years.

SACCCHOLACTIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to mucus or gum.

SACCHOLATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with sacchcolactic acid.

SACERDOTAL, a. [sacerdos, Lat.] belonging to priesthood; priestly.

SACHEL, SA'CHEL, s. a small leather bag or strap, used by children to carry their books in.

SACHEM, s. a name given to the chief among the N. American Indian tribes.

SACHEVERELL, DR. HENRY, an English clergyman, who in Queen Anne's reign made a great stir, and acquired notoriety, by attempting to revive the high-church notions of Laud and the Non-jurors. He was an Oxford man, and held situations at St. Saviour's, Southwark (where his incendiary sermons were preached); at Salatin, in Shropshire; and St. Andrew's, Holborn; which were given him by admirers of his zeal. An ill-advised impeachment, and trial, by the House of Commons, gratified his appetite for fame; which his abilities and eloquence would never have acquired. And the opinions of the queen, and the burning of his sermons by the hangman, made him a sort of champion of a party then verging towards its nadir, in the state. He died in 1724, aged about 50 years.

SACHS, HANS, one of the meister-singers, or popular poets of Germany, in the earlier part of the 16th century. He was a shoemaker by trade; but after he had acquired the art of versemaking, and admission to the guild of bards, he devoted himself to that calling, wandering from city to city, and singing his hymns in the churches. He was a Protestant, and wrote in praise of the Reformation. His works, which consist of plays, sonnets, fables, merry tales, &c. &c., are very numerous, and the taste and refinement of them not remarkable; but they were admired by the people, and played no mean part in instructing them in the new faith. His real name was Loutzdorffer, and he died in 1576, aged 82 years.

SACK, s. [sak, Heb. sakkos, Gr. saccus, Lat. sac, Fr. sach, Brit. sae, Sax. saco, Port. &c. &c.] a large bag; the measure of three bushels; a loose robe worn by a woman.—[see, Fr.] a kind of sweet wine.—[sacar, Span.] the act of storming, plundering, or pillaging a town; pillage or plunder.

To SACK, v. a. to put up in bags; to take by storm; to plunder, pillage, lay waste, or destroy.

SACKBUT, s. [sacabuche, Span. sambuca, Lat. sambuque, Fr.] a musical instrument of the wind kind, resembling a trumpet in its use, but differing from it in form and size.

SACKCLOTH, s. coarse cloth of which sacks are made, formerly worn in times of public fasting and lamentation.

SACKER, s. one that takes and pillages a town.

SACKPOSSET, s. a posset made of milk, sack, and some other ingredients.

SACKVILLE, GEORGE, LORD, an English soldier and statesman of the last century. He was the third son of the first Duke of Dorset, and studied at Dublin. In the army he fought at Dettingen and Fontenoy, with distinction; but failing to obey his superior's orders at Minden, he fell into disgrace, and was dismissed from the service. Subsequently, he held the office of colonial secretary, under Lord Bute, during the American war. On succeeding to the estates of Lady Germaine, he took that name, and died in 1785, aged 69 years. Some persons ascribed to him the authorship of the Letters of Junius.

SACRAMENT, s. [sacrament, Fr. sacramentum, Lat.] an oath or any other ceremony producing a strong and lasting obligation. In the Churches of Rome and England, a symbolical rite, by which profoundly spiritual truths are represented as in a mystery; and by partaking in which, spiritual grace and strength is alleged to be imparted. In the Roman Church there are seven sacraments, viz. baptism, confirmation, the eucharist, marriage, orders, penance, and extreme unction. In the English Church, two, viz. baptism, the sacrament of regeneration, and the Lord's supper, or the sacrament of spiritual life, are specially distinguished by this name. In almost all other communities it is disused.

SACRAMENTAL, a. [sacramental, Fr.] belonging to the sacrament.

SACRAMENTALLY, ad. after the manner of a sacrament.

SACRED, a. [sacre, Fr. sacer, Lat.] set apart for holy uses; consecrated; holy; inviolable.

SACREDLY, ad. inviolably; religiously.

SACREDNESS, s. holiness; sanctity.

SACRIFIC, a. [sacrificus, Lat.] employed in sacrifice.

SACRIFICABLE, a. capable of being offered in sacrifice.

SACRIFICATOR, s. [sacrificator, Fr. sacer and facio, Lat.] sacrificer; offerer of sacrifice.

To SACRIFICE, v. a. [sacrificer, Fr.] to offer any thing to Heaven; to destroy or give up for the sake of something else; to kill; to devote with loss.—v. n. to make offerings to God.

SACRIFICE, s. [Fr.] the act of offering to Heaven; any thing offered to Heaven; any thing destroyed or quitted for the sake of something else; any thing destroyed.

SACRIFICER, s. one that sacrifices.

SACRIFICIAL, (sacrificial) a. performing sacrifice; belonging to sacrifices.

SACRILEGE, s. [Fr. sacer and lego, Lat.] the crime of taking any thing dedicated to Divine worship, or profaning any thing sacred.

SACRILEGIOUS, a. polluted with the crime of sacrilege; violating things sacred.

SACRILEGIOUSLY, ad. profanely; in a sacrilegious manner.

SACRIST, SACRISTAN, s. [sacristain, Fr.] in the Church of Rome, one that has the charge or care of the sacred utensils.

SACRISTY, s. [sacristie, Fr.] an apartment where the consecrated vessels are kept; a vestry.

SACY, BARON SILVESTRE DE, an eminent Oriental scholar of France. He studied at home, under the care of his widowed mother, and at an early age was acquainted with several of the Oriental languages, as well as the usual classical and modern tongues, that form part of a finished education. Before he was 30, he had attracted attention by his writings and acquired the beginning of his fame. During the Revolution he was made Professor of Arabic, at Paris; under the empire, Professor of Persian; after the restoration of the Bourbons, he was ennobled, and entered the Chamber of Deputies, and by Louis Philippe he was raised to the peerage. He died in 1838, aged 80 years. His works are very numerous, and valuable to Oriental scholars, amongst which, as most valuable, may be mentioned his Arabic Grammar. He published the text and translations of several celebrated Eastern poems, &c.

SAD, a. [saggad, Sax.] full of sorrow; melancholy; gloomy; grave; serious; calamitous; afflictive; dark, applied to colour; heavy; weighty.

To SAD'DEN, (sâdn) v. a. to make sorrowful, melancholy, or gloomy; to darken; to make cohesive, applied to land.

SAD'DLE, (sâdl) s. [sadd, Sax. sadel, Fr.] the seat put on a horse's back for a person to sit on.

To SAD'DLE, (sâdl) v. a. to cover with, or put on, a saddle. Figuratively, to load or burden.

SAD'DLEBACKED, a. hunch-backed, applied to men; having the back low, and the head and neck raised, applied to a horse.

SAD'DLER, SA'DDLEMAKER, s. one that makes saddles.

SAD'DUCEES, a deistical sect amongst the ancient Jews, who rejected the belief in the existence of spirits and of a future life. They were the freethinkers of Romanized Judea, and stood in direct opposition to the Pharisees; with whom they, nevertheless, combined in opposing our Lord, and the early preachers of Christianity. They received the law of Moses as authoritative, but not as expounded by the traditions of the elders, and did not refuse the other books of the Old Testament. The doctrine of Providence was also consistently rejected by them. Greater part of their peculiar tenets were afterwards dropped.

SAD'DLY, ad. miserably; mournfully.

SAD'NESS, s. the state of a person in affliction; melancholy look; dejection of mind; seriousness, or sedate gravity.

SADOLETO, JACOPO, one of the distinguished scholars of the age of Leo X. He studied at Ferrara and Rome, entered the Church, and was soon appointed secretary by Leo, with the gift of a bishopric also. Clement VII. also appointed Sadoleto his secretary, but he resigned his office before the sack of Rome by the troops of Constable Bourbon. By Paul III. he was made a cardinal, and employed in various diplomatic engagements. He died in 1547, aged 70 years. His works were elegant compositions, and aided in the revival of learning, and his character added to the influence of his writings in the age when he was known and esteemed.

SAFE, a. [safu, Fr. salvus, Lat.] free from danger, hurt, or loss; secure.

SAFE, s. a place to put victuals in free from mice, &c.; a pantry; a buttery.

SAFECONDUCT, s. a guard through an enemy's country; convoy; a pass.

SAFEGUARD, s. defence or security from danger; a convoy; a pass, or warrant to pass.

SAFELY, ad. with safety.

SAFENESS, s. the quality of being free from danger.

SAFETY, s. freedom from danger or hurt; custody, or the state of being secured from escaping.

SAFFRON, s. [saffran, Fr. saphar, Arab.] in Botany, a flower resembling the crocus, which is used in medicine, and for tincturing any thing yellow. See CROCUS.

SAFFRON, a. yellow, or of the colour of saffron.

SAFFRON-WALDEN. See WALDEN.

TO SAG, v. n. to hang heavy.—v. a. to load.

SAGACIOUS, (sagacious) a. [sagax, Lat.] quick of scent or thought; acute in making discoveries.

SAGACIOUSLY, (sagaciously) ad. with quick scent; with acuteness of penetration.

SAGACIOUSNESS, (sagaciousness) s. the quality of being sagacious.

SAGACITY, s. [sagax, Lat.] quickness of scent; acuteness of discovery, or apprehension.

SAGAMORE, s. a king or supreme ruler among the N. American Indians.

SAGE, s. [sage, Fr.] in Botany, an herb used in cooking.

SAGE, a. [Fr.] wise, grave, prudent, discreet.

SAGE, s. a person of gravity and wisdom.

SAGELY, ad. gravely; prudently.

SAGENESS, s. wisdom; gravity.

SAGHALEEN, a large island of Asia, lying E. of Chinese Tatar, and forming the N. boundary of the Sea of Japan. It extends from the boundary of Siberia and Tatar, by the mouths of the river Amur, where it nearly touches the mainland, 700 miles, to the island of Jesso, from which it is divided by the Straits of La Perouse. It is extremely narrow, and its outline is rendered remarkable by several deeply indented bays and acute promontories. But little is known of its interior.

SAGITTA, in Astronomy, the Arrow or Dart, a constellation of the northern hemisphere, near the Eagle.

SAGITTAL, (sagittal) a. [sagitta, Lat.] belonging to an arrow. In Anatomy, applied to a suture of the head, resembling an arrow.

SAGITTARIUS, s. [Lat.] in Astronomy, the name of one of the southern signs of the zodiac, which the sun enters on the 22nd of November.

SAGO, s. in Commerce, &c., the farinaceous pith of a kind of palm, growing in the E. Indies. It undergoes considerable preparation before it is exported. It is a most nutritious kind of food for invalids, &c.

SAHARA, or ZAHARA, the name of the Great Desert of Africa, which occupies the whole of the interior of the N. part of that continent. It reaches from the fertile valley of the Nile, with few interruptions, to the Atlantic Ocean; and from the range of Atlas, and the borders of Tripoli and Barca, to the Mountains of Soudan and the Mountains of the Moon. At the lowest computation its area is about 2,500,000 square miles. Lake Tehad, the River Quorra, and the river that runs from the Lake into the Quorra, are, with the exception of, occasionally, pools and small streams, the only irrigants of this immense tract. It is an ocean of sand, and, except in the neighbourhood of the rivers, and in the small spots round the pools, almost wholly destitute of even the traces of vegetation. Travelling here is extremely dangerous, for beside the heat, and utter want of all supplies, except at long distant intervals, the wind often raises the light sand in huge whirling pillars in the air, which could bury whole caravans beneath them. The neighbourhood of the Quorra and the greater oases are inhabited by very fierce and rude negro tribes, especially in the region S. of the river. Timbuctoo is a city of some extent in the very heart of this waste; but a caravan route exists between it and Morocco, along which some kind of barbaric traffic is kept up. Another route leads from Kano, in Soudan, to Tripoli. The camel is the only beast capable of making such journeys as these. Lions, panthers, antelopes, gazelles, ostriches, vultures, and a few other animals are found; but not over all the region. Acacias, (which yield gum arabic,) and mimosas, are the principal vegetation of the bushy tracts which occur on the borders. Amongst the most remarkable productions of this desert, are extensive beds of salt, three of which are known, and visited by commercial adventurers. Natron lakes also occur. Many fulgurites have been found by travellers, and masses of meteoric iron. The sand of the desert is chiefly white and gray quartz powder, but the origin and history of it cannot be divined in our present state of information.

SAIC, s. [saica, Ital. saigue, Fr.] a Turkish vessel used in carrying merchandise.

SAID, pret. and past part. of TO SAY.

SAIL, s. [segl, Sax. seyl, Belg.] a sheet made of canvass, and attached to a spar of wood, or a rope, so that it should catch the wind, and by that means secure the propulsion of the vessel. Also, a long and narrow surface formed by a canvass sheet or by movable vanes, so arranged on an arm or beam that when acted on by the wind it imparts a rotatory motion to mill machinery: 4 or 6 are commonly used. Figuratively, a wing; a ship or vessel. To strike sail, is to lower the sail; and to confess inferiority.

TO SAIL, v. n. to move by means of sails; to pass by water; to swim; to pass along smoothly.—v. a. to pass by means of sails; to pass through.

SAILING, s. in Navigation, the practical rules for determining the place of a vessel during her voyage, and the distance passed over in any time. Parallel sailing is the rule, when the ship's course is along any parallel of latitude; Great circle sailing, when it is along any circle that divides the globe into two equal parts, as a meridian, or the equator; Mercator's sailing, when the vessel is continually changing both its latitude and longitude; Middle latitude sailing, is another rule for the same case. There are other rules which apply to sailing by traverses, or a succession of tacks against a head wind; to the effects of a current, &c. &c. But all these rules depend on the principles of trigonometry, and cannot well be popularly explained.

SAILOR, v. n. a seaman.

SAILYARD, s. the pole on which the sail is extended.

SAINT, s. [sanctus, Lat.] a person eminent for holiness; a person canonized by the Romish Church.

TO SAINT, v. a. to number or reckon among the saints; to canonize.—v. n. to act with a show of piety.

SAINT AUGUSTINE, a city of Florida, United States. It stands on a peninsula, fronting Matanzas Sound, which is an excellent and spacious harbour. It is regularly built, and has some fine houses and public edifices. The harbour is commanded by a strong fort. The mildness of the climate makes it a favourite resort of invalids. It is 880 miles from Washington. Pop. 2549.

SAINT CLAIR, a lake in N. America, lying between Lake Huron and Lake Erie, about 24 miles long, and 30 wide; also the broad river uniting the Lake with Lake Huron.

SAINT CROIX, a river of Maine, United States, forming the boundary between the States and the British Possessions. It has several falls in its course, and is navigable for 12 miles from its mouth. Also a river and lake in Wisconsin, United States, the waters of which run into the Mississippi.

SAINTED, a. holy; reckoned among the saints.

SAINTFOIN, s. [sa'nfuin, s. [Fr.] in Botany, a genus of plants, of which there is but one species, viz. the cock's-head saintfoin, a native of England. It has winged leaves, prickly shells containing one seed, and red blossoms. It is cultivated like clover for feeding cattle, and is particularly advantageous in dry hilly situations and chalky soils.

SAINT HILAIRE, GEOFFROY STEPHEN, a distinguished French anatomist and natural historian. He studied in the college of Navarre, and acquired such a reputation for his skill and ability, that he received an appointment in the Jardin des Plantes, and ultimately shared the Zoological Professorship with Cuvier. In after years he was professor of anatomy at Paris. On the Restoration of the Bourbons he became a member of the Chamber of Deputies. During his life he travelled to Egypt,

(with the expedition under Buonaparte,) and to Portugal, and he died in 1844, aged 72 years. His works are very numerous, and are amongst the most valuable of modern natural history. He deserves particular mention as being the first to apply systematically to the animal frame, the idea of Morphology, which had been so successfully developed by the poet Goethe with respect to plants.

ST. JAMES'S WORT, s. in Botany, a species of groundsel.

ST. JOHN'S WORT, s. in Botany, several species of tutsan go by this name.

SAINT LOUIS, a city of Missouri, United States. It stands on the Mississippi, and is chiefly built on the second bank of the river, which is 40 feet higher than the first. It is very regularly planned, and contains many handsome buildings, amongst which the cathedral deserves particular mention. There are three excellent colleges here, with libraries, museums, &c. &c. It is admirably situated for trade, commanding not only all the far west, whence are brought furs, &c., but also all the commerce of the Mississippi, Illinois, Ohio, and Missouri, to the N. of it. It is 1132 miles from New Orleans, which alone surpasses it in that part of the States. It is 808 miles from Washington. Pop. 16,469, of whom 1531 are slaves.

SAINTLY, adj. like a saint; becoming a saint.

SAINT PIERRE, JACQUES BERNARDIN, HENRI DE, a French writer, who was first a military engineer, and served for some time in Russia, and who, passing safely through the Revolutionary storm, received various honours from Buonaparte and his brother Joseph. He died in 1814, aged 83 years. His Paul and Virginia is the most widely known of his works, and is the apotheosis of the prudery which, when virtue was unknown, was supposed to be it. His Studies of Nature contain many instructive observations and reflections, but also too many fanciful theories to be of any real value to a naturalist.

SAINT SALVADOR, a city of Bahia, Brazil. It stands on the strait leading to All Saints' Bay, and has some fine buildings, though it is in general a poor place. The harbour is good, and it is a place of considerable trade. There is a college here, which has a tolerable reputation. Pop. about 200,000. Lat. 12. 57. S. Long. 38. 30. W. It is commonly called Bahia.

SAINT'S DAY, s. in the Churches of Rome and England, the day on which the birth, death, &c. of a canonized person are commemorated.

SAINTSHIP, s. the character or qualities of a saint.

SAINT SIMON, CLAUDIUS HENRY, COMTE DE, the founder of the new social scheme called after him Saint Simonism, which enjoyed for a time great favour amongst the speculative and philanthropic of France. The nobleness of labour; the abjuration of all property, as a robbery committed on society by individuals; and some similar doctrines, were the basis of the scheme. It was superseded by Communitarianism, as taught by Fourier, but not without having produced a deep impression on the nation. St. Simon wrote in explication and defence of his views; and died in 1825, and 63 years. See SOCIALISM.

SAKE, s. [see Sax. sæce, Belg.] final cause, end, or purpose; regard to any person or thing.

SAKER, s. anciently, a small sort of cannon.

SALA'CIOUS, (salsiduous, s. [salar, Lat.]) lustful.

SALA'CIOUSLY, (salsiduously) adj. lecherously; lustfully.

SALA'CITY, s. [sala'ctas, Lat.] lust; lechery.

SALAD, s. [sala'de, Fr.] herbs which are eaten raw.

SALADIN, or SALAH-ED-DEEN, the famous sultan of Egypt. He was a Kurd by nation, and rose by his great military skill under Nourredin to be, on the death of the last Fatimide caliph of Egypt, the lord of that country. Having established himself on the throne, he advanced to the subjugation of Syria, and not only took from the caliph the greater part of that territory, but also overthrew, at the fatal battle of Tiberias, the Frank kingdom of Jerusalem. He was next engaged in opposing the 3rd crusade, in which he lost Acre, and was defeated at Ascalon by the fiery valour of the English king. But the weakness and divisions of the crusading army saved his cause, a truce was concluded, and soon afterwards Saladin died, in 1193, aged 56 years. The chivalric character of this chief, commonly called, in old ballads, the Saldan, was always celebrated; and in all the humanities of the times, he seems to have been at least equal, if not superior to, the Lion-hearted king.

SALAMA'NCA, an ancient, large, handsome, rich, and populous city of Spain, capital of a province of the same name. It has a famous university, consisting of 24 handsome colleges. It is adorned with magnificent ecclesiastical buildings, a large public square, fine fountains, and every thing else that can contribute to the beauty and commodiousness of a city. The schools form a noble mass of buildings. The cathedral is one of the handsomest in Spain, and has a fine steeple. It is seated partly in a plain, and partly on hills, and is surrounded by a wall. The river Tormes, which washes its walls, has a bridge over it 300 paces long, built by the Romans; and without the walls is a fine Roman causeway. It is 153 miles from Madrid. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 41. 8. N. Long. 5. 16. W.

SALAMA'NDER, s. [salamandra, Fr. salamandra, Lat.] in fabulous Natural History of the middle ages, a kind of lizard, very poisonous, and capable of living in the hottest fire. The Florentine artist, Benvenuto Cellini, almost alone amongst non-professionals, has said that he had seen it; and he would have forgotten it, but for a box on the ears given him by his father to impress it on his memory. The name is now given, having no other legitimate possessors, to a family of frogs, who rejoice in a cooler element than did Cellini's Salamander.

SALAMA'NDRIAC, s. resembling a salamander.

SAL-AMMONIAC, s. in Trade, a combination of ammonia with the muriatic acid.

SALARY, s. [salar, Fr. salarium, from sal, Lat.] stated hire; annual or periodical payment.

SALE, s. [sald, Belg.] the act of selling; market, or vent; price; a public or proclaimed exposition of goods by auction or at a market.

SALE, GEORGE, an eminent Orientalist of this country, of the beginning of the last century. He wrote parts of the Universal History, and of the General Dictionary; but his chief work was a translation of the Koran from the Arabic, with an introductory Essay on its doctrines, style, history, commentators, &c., both of which are of great value to such as cannot refer to the original sources of information. He died in 1736, aged 56 years.

SALEABLE, a. fit to be sold.

SALEABLENESS, s. fitness for sale.

SALEBROUS, a. [salebrosus, Lat.] rugged; uneven.

SAL'EM, a city of Massachusetts, United States. It stands on a tongue of land between two inlets, called North and South Rivers. Over the former is a bridge, more than 1500 feet long, and the latter is the harbour. It is well, but irregularly, built, and has some fine public edifices and institutions. It is supplied by an aqueduct with water; and has a large and handsomely planted public square, about 10 acres in extent, on the N. side of it. Its trade and manufactures have been surpassed by other towns, more favourably situated, in late years; but it is not of inconsiderable importance. It is 454 miles from Washington. Pop. 15,082. There are no fewer than 39 other places in the Union called by this name; one of which, in North Carolina, is a Moravian village, and has a celebrated female academy for that denomination, and a pop. of about 1000.

SAL'ERNO, a province of the kingdom of Naples, lying on the Mediterranean Sea, and extending from its shore to the Apennines. It is watered by the river Sele and its tributaries. It is also called Principato Citra (whic see). Salerno, its capital, stands on the gulf of the same name, and has some fine and ancient buildings, amongst which the cathedral is conspicuous. It has some trade, particularly at an annual fair. It is about 30 miles from Naples. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 40. 39. N. Long. 14. 45. E.

SA'LES, ST. FRANCIS DE, a distinguished French ecclesiastic, of the conclusion of the 16th and beginning of the 17th centuries. He studied under the Jesuits at Paris, and afterwards at Padua devoted himself to law. But he entered the church soon after his return to France, and rapidly gained great renown as a preacher. He was afterwards engaged in an attempt to regain part of Switzerland to the Church of Rome, and endeavoured to make a convert of the famous Theodoric Beza. His success was such that he was made a bishop, and fixed his abode at Geneva; and for many years spent his life in the most unambitious labours for the advancement of what he regarded as the true church. He had adopted the views of the Quietists; and he carried them out not only in his own case, but by the power he had as a spiritual director of others, with all the zeal he had. He was especially noted for the influence he exerted thus over Madame de Chantal; whose fervent love for him, as her director, went to the very verge of safety. He enjoyed during his life-time the great renown his devotion deserved; and died in 1622, aged 55 years. Alexander VII. canonized him.

SALSMAN, s. one who sells clothes ready made; one who sells cattle for others.

SALWORK, s. work done in a careless manner; and fit only to be exposed to shops.

SALFORD, Lancashire. It is now incorporated in Manchester, and is described under that name. Pop. 53,200.

SALIENT, a. [Fr.] in Heraldry, in a leaping posture.

SALIC LAW, an ancient law of France, which rendered women incapable of succeeding to the throne.

SALIENT, a. [salio, Lat.] leaping; panting; springing with a swift motion. In Fortification, projecting at an acute angle beyond the general line of works.

SALIFEROUS SYSTEM, in Geology, that group of formations characterized by the presence of salt in the form of rocks and springs; of which the new red sandstone and the magnesian limestone are the representatives in England. See those names.

SALIFIABLE, a. in Chemistry, capable of forming salts.

SALINE, SALINOUS, a. [salinus, from sal, Lat.] saltish; consisting of salt.

SALISBURY, (Salsberry) or NEW SARUM, Wiltshire. It is pleasantly situated on the river Avon, that waters most of the principal streets, which are large and spacious. It has several handsome buildings, particularly the cathedral, which is a stately, handsome building, with a lofty spire. Its chief trade arises from the silk manufacture. It is 80 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday and Saturday. Pop. 10,086.

SALISBURY PLAIN. See STONEHENGE and WILTSHIRE.

SALIVA, s. [Lat.] the fluid by which the mouth and tongue are moistened; spittle; any thing spit.

SALIVAL, SALIVARY, a. relating to or consisting of spittle. The Salivary Glands, in Anatomy, are situated behind and under the lower jaw, and are 6 in number; they secrete the saliva.

TO SALIVATE, v. a. to evacuate the spittle; to bring on an increased action of the salivary glands, by the use of medicine.

SALIVATION, s. [salivatio, Lat.] a secretion of spittle. In Medicine, the state of increased action of the salivary glands, which accompanies some diseases, or is produced by mercurial medicines.

SALIVOSUS, a. [salivus, Lat.] having the nature of spittle; consisting of spittle.

SALLÉE, an ancient town of Fez, in Africa, long noted for its rovers, or pirates, who make prizes of all Christian ships that they meet, except there is a treaty to the contrary. It is 150 miles S. of Gibraltar. Lat. 34. 5. N. Long. 6. 38. W.

SALLET, SALLETING, s. See SALAD.

SALLOW, (sallo) s. [salix, Lat.] in Botany, a tree of the willow kind.

SALLOW, (sallo) s. [salo, Teut.] sickly, morbid; of a greenish yellow.

SALLOWNESS, (salliness) s. yellowness; sickly paleness.

SALLOWTHORN, s. in Botany, a shrub, also called sea buckthorn. The common sawlthorn is a kind of willow.

SALLUSTIUS, CAIUS CRISPUS, a Roman historian. He was a plebeian by birth, but rose into notice by his advocacy of popular opinions. He was attached to Julius Cæsar, and being expelled from the senate, he joined his friend in his army, and shared some of his campaigns. After that in Africa he was left in charge of the province. He built a magnificent palace subsequently, at Rome, which was used in the days of the empire by the emperors themselves, and died in 34 B. C., aged 52 years. His moral character was sufficiently bad to receive censure in those days of licence. We have two works by him, both of great excellence, the History of Catiline's Conspiracy, and of the War with Jugurtha; and these were almost the first carefully written histories that had appeared at Rome. Some fragments of a larger history also remain.

SALLY, s. [sallie, Fr.] an unexpected issue or eruption from a place besieged; a range or excursion; a flight of wit; an escape, frolic, or extravagant flight.

TO SALLY, v. n. to burst out suddenly from a place besieged. SALLYPORT, s. a gate from which sallies are made.

SALMAGUNDI, s. [corrupted from selon mon gout, or c'est à mon gout, Fr.] a mixture of chopped meat, salmon, pickled herrings, &c.

SALMASIUS, or SAUMAÏSE, CLAUDE DE, an eminent French writer of the 17th century. He studied at Paris and Heidelberg, and soon obtained a vast reputation. His first appointment was at Leyden, but he received invitations to other universities; and paid a long visit to the celebrated Christina of Sweden. Charles II., then in exile, employed him to defend the cause of royalty against the English people; but he met with a respondent capable of writing in liberty's defence, and who deemed the loss of eyesight small when compared with the honour of so glorious a task. Hedied before he had rejoined to Milton's magnificent treatise, in 1653, aged 57 years. His works are numerous, and consist of editions of various classics with commentaries, essays on subjects of political economy, &c. &c.

SALMON, s. [salmo, Lat.] in Ichthyology, a large river fish, which are caught with spears used by men on horseback, in the shallow bays of the sea-coast of N. Britain, and by net, or hook and line, in the rivers, when they ascend them in the spawning season. They are esteemed a great delicacy, and are caught in great numbers for the markets in the S. part of the kingdom.

SALMONTROUT, s. in Ichthyology, a trout somewhat resembling a salmon.

SALONICHI. See THESSALONICA.

SALOON, s. [salon, Fr.] a long and lofty hall, forming part of a palace or other large building, and used for various purposes.

SALSAFY, SALSIFY, s. in Botany, a provincial term for the purple goatsbeard.

SALSAMENTARIOUS, a. [salsamentarius, from sal, Lat.] belonging to salt things.

SALSOACID, a. [salsus and acidus, Lat.] having a taste compounded of saltiness and sourness.

SALSU/GINOUS, a. [salsugo, Lat.] saltish; somewhat salt.

SALT, (sault) s. [Goth. sealt, Sax. sal, Lat. sel, Fr.] in Chemistry and Commerce, the chloride of sodium, the most universally used of all compounds of the class, and one of the most valuable to man. It gives a relish to his food, and aids the digestive process at the same time; it preserves meat, fish, &c. from corrupting; it is an excellent manure for some soils, and in other departments of the useful arts is equally important. It is obtained from deposits in the earth, which characterize some formations; and also, more usually, by evaporation from sea water, or the water of salt springs. In the plural, acids combined with alkalies, earths, or metallic oxides. Figuratively, a taste or smack wit, merriment.

SALT, (sault) s. having the taste of salt; impregnated or seasoned with salt.

TO SALT, (sault) v. a. to rub with salt; to season with salt.

SALTAN, (sault) s. [salto, Lat.] jumping; dancing.

SALTASH, Cornwall. It is seated on the descent of a steep hill. It has some trade, especially in malt, and is 220 miles from London. Market, Saturday.

SALTATION, s. the act of dancing or jumping; beat; palpitation.

SALT/CAT, (saultcat) s. a lump of salt, made at the salterns, and given to pigeons.

SALTCELLAR, s. a vessel of salt set on the table.

SALTER, (saultier) s. one who sells or makes salt.

SALTERN, (saultern) s. a place where salt is made.

SALTIER, (saultier) s. [saultière, Fr.] in Heraldry, a bearing in the form of a St. Andrew's cross.

SALTISH, a. somewhat salt.

SALTNESNESS, (saltiness) s. having the taste of salt.

SALTPAN, SALTPIT, (saultpit) s. a pit from whence salt is dug.

SALTPETRE, (saultpéter) s. [sal and petra, Lat.] in Domestic Economy, the common name for nitre.

SALTZBURG, a circle of Austria, lying next to Bavaria, and bounded by the Tyrol, Illyria, Styria, Traun, Lausirch, and Inn. It is about 60 miles in length, by 50 in breadth. It is a mountainous country, but pretty fertile, and contains mines of copper, silver, and iron. The valleys produce corn, &c., and afford most excellent pastures. It is most romantically beautiful, abounding in lakes, cascades, &c. The principal town is of the same name. It is seated on the Saltz, and has a very fine bridge over it. It is surrounded by mountains; and is well built, with many fine public edifices, such as the cathedral, the episcopal palace, the colleges, &c. &c. It has a few manufactures, and an inconsiderable amount of trade. Near it are some considerable salt-works. It is 140 miles from Vienna. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 47. 45. N. Long. 13. 2. E. Pop. of circle, about 150,000.

SALVABILITY, s. possibility of being saved.

SALVABLE, a. [salvo, Lat.] possible to be saved.

SALVADOR, a. town of Congo, capital of the country of Pemba. It stands on a craggy mountain, and has a large palace, where the king resides, and a Portuguese bishop. It contains several churches. Pop. about 40,000; of whom 4000 are white. The Portuguese live in a quarter by themselves. Lat. 5. 42. S. Long. 14. 1. E.

SALVAGE, s. [salvo, Lat.] money paid by the owners for taking a vessel from an enemy, or for saving goods from the danger of the seas.

SALVATION, s. preservation from the consequences of sin; the possession of the blessings of redemption.

SALVATORY, s. [salvatore, Fr.] a place where any thing is preserved.

SALUBRIOUS, a. [salubris, from salus, Lat.] wholesome; promoting or confirming health.

SALUBRITY, s. [salubritas, Lat.] the quality of promoting health.

SALVE, (adv.) s. [salvus, Lat.] in Medicine, a thick kind of unguent. Figuratively, help or remedy.

To SALVE, v. a. to cure with medicines; to help; to remedy; to help something by an excuse or reservation.

SALVER, a. a vessel on which glasses or other things are presented to guests.

SALVO, s. [Lat.] an exception, excuse, or reservation.

SALUTARINESS, s. wholesomeness, or the quality of promoting health.

SALUTARY, a. [salus, Lat.] wholesome; promoting or contributing to health.

SALUTATION, s. [salutatio, Lat.] the act or style of saluting; greeting; salute.

To SALUTE, v. a. to pay a person a compliment, or wish him well, at meeting; to greet; to hail; to please or gratify; to kiss.

SALUTE, s. salutation; greeting; a kiss; the firing of cannon in compliment of any person, or event, &c.

SALUTER, s. he who salutes.

SALUTIFEROUS, a. [salus and fero, Lat.] healthful; conducive to health.

SAMARCAND, a city of Bokhara, Asia. It is pleasantly situated, and abounds with fine buildings. It is the seat of learning for the kingdom, and has most of the manufactures of the country also. But the jealousy of the government prevents strangers from having access to it. Lat. 39. 56. N. Long. 66. 52. E.

SAMARIA, that part of Palestine which lay between Galilee and Judea. It arose, as a separate province, on the colonization of the country, which was depopulated by the captivity of the Israelites, with Assyrians and others, who conformed in part to the Jewish law, but held themselves to be distinct from the restored Jews. The chief city was called Samaria, or Sebaste.

SAMARITANS, the people from Assyria, and the dependencies of that king, who were planted in Palestine, in the place of the Israelites, who were carried as captives to Assyria. They are known in history as a sect of Jews, although disowned by the Jews of Judea. They received the five books of Moses, but rejected the rest of the Old Testament. They had also a temple on Mount Gerizim, where they worshipped, instead of at Jerusalem. In other respects they did not differ much from Jews, unless it was in rejecting the tradition of the elders as received by the Pharisees. The characters in which their copies of the Pentateuch are written, were borrowed from the Phœnicians, and show the transition from the Hebrew to the Greek alphabet. Their copies also present some valuable various readings.

SAME, s. [samo, Gothic, samma, Swed.] not another; identical; very; of the like sort, kind, or degree; mentioned before.

SAMENESS, s. identity; the state of being not another, or not different.

SAMLET, s. [a diminutive of salmon,] in Ichthyology, a small salmon. See SMELT.

SAMNITES, a large tribe of aborigines in Italy, who occupied the Apennines, and were amongst the most hardy of all the Italian opponents of Rome, not being finally conquered till the days of Marius and Sylla. They sprang from the Sabines, and were simple-minded mountaineers, and included under their name several lesser tribes; which being disunited during the long struggle with Rome, at last were forced to succumb. They had no constitution, and in their own country no works of art have been discovered.

SAMOS, one of the chief islands of the Archipelago, lying near the coast of Asia Minor, off the promontory named Troglum. It is very hilly, and Mount Ampelos is of considerable altitude. It was famous for its commerce, and for its cultivation of the fine arts, being one of the most active of the Ionian settlements. Its chief town was named Samos. There are many traces of its former inhabitants, but it now shares the general degradation of the Turkish empire. The name of its chief town is Chora. Pop. above 10,000. Lat. 37. 44. N. Long. 26. 39. E.

SAMOTHRACE, an island of the Archipelago, lying off that part of the mainland anciently called Thracia. It is mountainous, and celebrated in Grecian history chiefly as the cradle of the Cabiric worship and mysteries.

SAMOYEDS, the name of a numerous nation of N. Asia. They neither have, nor appear ever to have had, any kind of regular government. They have a large head, a flat face, high cheek bones, small eyes, a flat nose, a wide mouth, a yellow complexion, large ears, straight, harsh, black hair, a short neck, little or no beard, and short legs. They live partly in the country bordering on the N. Ocean, and partly in and about the Altaic range of mountains. Most of them are subject to Russia: their numbers cannot be ascertained; but they are amongst the most uncivilized of the remains of the nomade Tatars or Scythians.

SAMP, s. a name given in America to a sort of bread made of the maize or Indian corn.

SAMPHIRE, s. in Botany, an umbelliferous plant found on the sea-coast. Poor people on the sea-coast eat it as a potherb, and it is very generally used as a pickle. There are some other plants growing in this country called by this name.

SAMPLE, (adv.) s. [from example,] a specimen; a part shown, that judgment may be made of the whole.

SAMPLEL, s. [exemplar, Lat.] a pattern of work; a piece of work wrought by girls, to teach them marking, &c.

SAMUEL, the most eminent of the early Hebrew prophets. He was dedicated in his infancy to the service of God, and whilst yet a child received his prophetic commission. He acted as judge or inspired ruler of the Israelites for many years, and at last, on their urgent request, with God's permission, gave them as a king, Saul. But he did not cease till his death to exercise his prophetic office, and had often to oppose the will of Saul, who, after his death, endeavoured to obtain instructions from him by the use of incantations. He also anointed David as Saul's successor during his life-time. To him is attributed the establishment of institutions of a remarkable nature, but of which little is certainly known, called the schools of the prophets. They appear to have been places where the instruction of the religious teachers of the people was carried on. He died in about 1060 B. C. There are two books of the Old Testament called by his name in our Version, which are named by the Septuagint the First and Second Books of the Kings (those so called in our Version being called the Third and Fourth). They contain the Jewish history from the birth of the prophet, to the removal of the plague that visited the Israelites, after the census taken by David. They are ascribed by critics, on the ground of a passage in the First Book of Chronicles, to Samuel, and Gad and Nathan, two of his successors in the prophetic office.

SANABLE, a. [sano, Lat.] curable; remediable.

SANATION, s. the act of curing.

SANATIVE, a. having the power to heal or cure.

SANATORY, a. [sanatio, Lat.] curing, healing; intended to restore health.

SANCHONATHON, an ancient historian of Phœnicia, of whose works, all the genuine remains are a few fragments quoted by Eusebius, the ecclesiastical historian, and others. The age in which he lived cannot be ascertained.

SA'NCROFT, DR. WILLIAM, one of the most eminent of the nonjurors at the accession of William III. Whilst yet at Cambridge, he suffered for his rejection of the Covenant, when it was imposed on the whole nation by the Long Parliament; and afterwards he went to the continent. At the Restoration he soon was marked for preferment, and rose swiftly to the highest post in the church, the archbishopric of Canterbury. He was one of the seven prelates imprisoned by James II., and was deprived of his primacy on refusing to take the oath to William and Mary. Soon after this fall, he died, in 1693, aged 77 years. He was a consistent Anglican in his ecclesiastical creed, yet not altogether so rigid as most of those who have lately paraded his name as that of one of the true lights of the church. He wrote a few works, of no great account.

SANCTIFICATION, s. [Fr.] the state of being free, or the process of freeing, from the dominion of sin; the act of making holy; consecration.

SANCTIFIER, s. one that sanctifies or consecrates.

To SANCTIFY, v. a. to free from the pollution and power of sin; to free from guilt; to make holy; to secure from violation.

SANCTIMONIOUS, a. [sanctimonia, from sanctus, Lat.] having the appearance of holiness; saintly.

SANCTIMONY, s. a scrupulous austerity; appearance of holiness; holiness.

SANCTION, (sankshon) s. [sancio, Lat.] the act which confirms a thing, and makes it obligatory.

SANCTITUDE, s. [sanctus, Lat.] holiness; goodness.

SANCTITY, s. [sanctitas, Lat.] a state of holiness; godliness; purity.

SANCTORIUS, a distinguished Italian physician, of the 16th and 17th centuries. He studied at Padua, and first practised at Venice, but was appointed to a medical professorship at Padua, where he continued many years. Eventually he resumed his practice, and died at Venice in 1636, aged 75 years. He wrote several books, which contributed greatly to the advancement of medical science, but are quite superseded now.

SANCTUARY, s. [sanctuarium, Lat.] a holy place; a place of refuge or protection; asylum; shelter or protection.

SAND, s. [Dan. and Belg.] fine gritty earth; powdered flint or quartz rock; a barren country covered with sands.

SANDAL, s. [sandale, Fr. santalum, Lat.] a loose shoe; a protection for the foot, consisting of a sole, which is attached to the foot by straps.

SANDAL WOOD, s. in Commerce, the wood of a small tree, growing in the East Indies, which is easily worked and yet is very durable, and when burned emits a very powerful and agreeable odour. It is also used as a dyewood, and is largely exported for that purpose. It is called commonly Red (or Yellow) Sanders (or Sandal) Wood.

SANDARACH, (sándarakh) s. [sandarague, Fr. sandaraea, Lat.] in the Useful Arts, a dry hard resin of whitish colour, of which pounce is made; employed also by varnish-makers and druggists. See ORPIMENT.

SANDBACH, Cheshire. It is seated on the river Wenlock. In the market-place are two square stone crosses, adorned with images. It is 161 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 9209.

SANDBLIND, a. afflicted with a defect in the sight, in which small particles seem continually flying before the eyes.

SANDBY, PAUL, an eminent English aquatint engraver, and sketcher. His views taken in Wales and Scotland, &c. were so much admired that he was chosen a member of the Royal Academy, and was afterwards appointed chief drawing-master at the Military Academy at Woolwich. He died in 1809, aged 77 years.

SANDED, a. barren, covered with sand.

SANDEMANIANS, s. in Ecclesiastical History, a sect that originated in Scotland, about the year 1728, and were first called Glassites, from John Glass, their founder, afterwards by their present name, in 1755, from Mr. Robert Sandeman, who expounded their principles. Their peculiar practices are chiefly the incidental, or temporary, or national observances mentioned in the New Testament, which they regard as Divine ordinances. In doctrine they regard eredit, or belief, to be faith. In discipline, they are very strict and severe. They are not, at present, very numerous either in England or Scotland.

SANDERLING, s. in Ornithology, a bird, allied to the woodcock, snipe, &c.

SANDERS, s. [santalum, Lat.] See SANDAL WOOD.
SANDEVER, s. [saindever, Fr.] the scum produced in making glass.

SANDISH, a. approaching to the nature of sand; loose.

SAND MARTEN, s. in Ornithology, a small kind of swallow, which excavates a deep narrow hole in steep sand banks, for the purpose of nidification. It is of a brownish mouse colour above; and is as elegant in flight as the rest of its tribe.

SANDSTONE, s. in Geology, a rock formed by the agglutination of sand by heat, or by the saturation of the sand with some solidifying fluid. Some are very hard and close in their texture; others very loose, and even laminated. Old and New Red Sandstone, are names of collections, or groups of beds of every variety, limestone, breccia, &c., as well as sandstone.

SANDWICH, Kent. It was once a considerable sea-port, but it is now much decayed on account of the river Stour, on which it is seated, being so choked up with sand, as to admit only small vessels. Its trade is chiefly the export of agricultural produce and garden stuffs for the London markets. It is, nevertheless, a Cinque-Port. It is 67 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 2913.

SANDWICH ISLANDS, a group of 13 islands in the N. Pacific Ocean. They are chiefly of volcanic origin, and are surrounded by coral reefs. The air of these islands is, in general, salubrious, and many of the vegetable productions are the same with those of the Society Islands. The natives resemble those of the other Polynesian Islands. The pop. of the whole group is under 200,000. See OWYHEE.

SANDWICH LAND, a long group of small islands in the S. Atlantic Ocean, farther S. than S. Georgia. They abound with volcanoes, many of them in the greatest activity, and were found covered with snow, in the hottest season of the year in that hemisphere, down to the sea beach. They exhibit no traces of organic life.

SANDWORT, s. in Botany, a species of chickweed, which grows in sandy soils.

SANDY, a. abounding in, or consisting of, sand.

SANDY, GEORGE, an English traveller and poet, of the former part of the 17th century. He studied at Oxford, and afterwards visited Italy and the East; of which travels he published an account, adorned and illustrated with many curious and interesting engravings. His poetical works were chiefly translations from Ovid, and paraphrases of various parts of Scripture. He died in 1643, aged 66 years.

SANDYX, s. a kind of red earth.

SANE, a. [sanus, Lat.] whole; healthy; sound.

SANG, preter. of To SING.

SANGALLO, ANTONIO, a famous Italian architect, of the 16th century. He was a native of Florence; but studied under his uncles, and under Bramante, at Rome, where he gained sufficient reputation to be employed after his master on St. Peter's. Leo X. and several succeeding popes patronized him, and intrusted many great public works, such as fortifications, palaces, churches, &c. to him. His style and solidity of work is greatly admired. He died in 1546, at a great age.

SANGIAC, s. a Turkish governor of a city or province.

SANGUIFEROUS, a. [sanguis and fero, Lat.] conveying blood.

SANGUIFICATION, s. [sanguis and facio, Lat.] the production of blood.

SANGUIFIER, s. producer of blood.

To SANGUIFY, v. n. to produce blood.

SANGUINARY, a. [sanguis, Lat.] bloody; cruel; murderous.

SANGUINE, a. red, or like blood, applied to colour; abounding with blood. Cheerful, applied to temper; warm, ardent, or confident.

SANGUINENESS, SANGUINITY, s. ardour; heat of expectation; confidence.

SANGUINEOUS, a. constituting blood; abounding with blood.

SANHEDRIM, s. [synedrium, Lat. syn and hedra, Gr.] the supreme council or court of judicature among the Jews, consisting of seventy elders, over whom the high priest presided.

SANICLE, s. [Fr. sancicula, Lat.] in Botany, an umbelliferous plant, found in woods and hedges, and flowering in May and June. The leaves are slightly bitter and astrigent.

SANIES, s. [Lat.] serous putrid matter; pus.

SA'NIOS, a. [sanies, Lat.] discharging pus.

SA'NITARY, a. [sanitas, Lat.] relating to the preservation of health.

SA'NITY, s. [sanus, Lat.] health; soundness of mind.

SANK, preter. of TO SINK.

SAN MARINO, a small republic of Italy, lying in Urbino, one of the Papal States; and consisting of a town so called, and a small territory surrounding it. The town stands on a mountain, and is remarkable only for its ancient castle. The land around it yields wine, oil, silk, and pasturage for cattle. It is about 10 miles from Rimini, on the Adriatic. Pop. under 10,000. Lat. 43. 57. N. Long. 12. 25. E.

SANMICHE'LI, MICHAEL, a great Italian architect, who was specially noted for his construction of forts and military works. He studied at Rome; and was employed in building several cathedrals, at Verona, and other places; and in fortifying various places in Italy, and the islands then possessed by its different states. He also erected palaces and other public buildings; and died in 1559, aged 75 years.

SANNAZA'RO, GIACOMO, a celebrated poet of Naples, in Italy, in the 15th and 16th centuries. He was of distinguished family, but attained nobler distinction by his learning and his writings. He attended Frederic to France, when he was held as a prisoner there; and spent the latter part of his life in a village on the Summa of Vesuvius. He died in 1530, aged 72, and was buried near the tomb of Virgil, at Posilipo. His Arcadia is his great poem; but he also wrote sonnets, &c., and a Latin poem on the Birth of the Virgin. Sannazaro enjoys great fame, without being much read in these days.

SA'NSCRIT, the name of the national language of Hindustan, which is the basis of almost all its varied dialects used at the present time. It is a very copious, flexible, and finished language; and the study of it has cast greater light on the science of Grammar than that of any other in recent days. It is the most perfect of the family of tongues called Indo-European, or Indo-Germanic; and is approached more nearly by the Greek than by any other of the group. The literature of this language is very rich; and includes poems of all kinds, histories, scientific treatises on Astronomy, Music, Grammar, Rhetoric, Philosophy, Law, &c. &c.

SANSON, NICHOLAS, a distinguished geographer of France, of the 17th century. He displayed very early his remarkable talent in the construction of maps, and was through it introduced to the notice of Cardinal Richelieu. He now became an engineer, and received many proofs of the favour of the Grand Monarque. He died in 1667, aged 67 years. He published a great number of maps; but later surveys and more accurate calculations have made them obsolete.

SANSOVINO, GIACOMO TATTI, an eminent Italian architect and sculptor of the 16th century. He studied these arts under Centucci and others, and pursued them at first at Rome. Afterwards he removed to Venice, where, in both his professions, he laboured most devotedly, and adorned that city with some of its noblest palaces and sculptures. He died in 1578, aged 91 years.

SANTA MAU'RA, one of the Ionian Islands, in ancient times named Lencas. It lies N. of Thiaki and Cephalonia, off the S. extremity of Albania, near the entrance to the Gulf of Arta. It is about 20 miles long, and about 6 wide. It is very mountainous, the loftiest point being 3000 feet high. It is tolerably productive in all the commodities of the climate, and it has excellent fisheries. Amaxichi is the chief place, and it has also a very strong fort, called by its name, which is on a separate island at high water. Pop. about 20,000.

SANTIA'GO, the capital of Chili, S. America. It stands on a plain in the W. slope of the Andes, and is a regularly built city, but not imposing in its appearance, the frequency of earthquakes preventing much attention to architecture: yet it has some fine buildings. The most remarkable structure is a sort of embankment skirting the small stream that passes it, to preserve the city from the flood that rushes down in the rainy seasons. There is a college here, and a good trade is carried on, as it has a fruitful country round it, and there are valuable mines near. Valparaiso is its sea-port. Pop. about 50,000. Lat. 33. 25. S. Long. 70. 30. W.

SAÔNE ET LOIRE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Côte d'Or, Nièvre, Allier, Loire, Rhône, Ain, and Jura. It is about 85 miles long, and about 65 broad. It is crossed by the mountain chain of the Cevennes; but the chief points are under 2000 feet, and only one reaches 3000 feet in height. The rivers after which it is named are its chief ones, but it has others of some importance which feed them. It yields coal, iron and other metals, building-stone, and stone used in various arts, abundantly. Corn, wine, &c. are produced. It has excellent pastures, and woods. The towns are the scenes of considerable manufacturing industry. Mâcon is the capital. Pop. about 350,000.

SAÔNE, HAUTE, a department of France, bounded by the departments Côte d'Or, Jura, Doubs, Haut Rhin, Vosges, and Haute Marne. It is about 70 miles in length, by about 40 in breadth. On the side towards the department Vosges, it is mountainous, and has heights nearly 4000 feet above the sea. The Saône and its tributaries water it. Iron and coal, with durable building-stone, and other valuable kinds of rock, are plentiful. Corn, wine, cattle, timber, &c. &c. are amongst the produce of its agricultural parts. It has also good manufactures of various kinds. Vesoul is the chief place. Pop. about 350,000.

SAP, s. [Belg. sappe, Sax.] in Vegetable Physiology, the circulating fluid of plants, the increased supply of which by the roots, in the spring, is the cause of the sudden revival of the active powers of the branches in putting forth leaves, &c.

To SAP, v. a. [sapper, Fr. zappare, Ital.] to undermine; to demolish or subvert by digging under.—v. n. to proceed by digging under.

SAPAJOU, s. in Natural History, a species of monkey, with a prehensile tail, common in tropical S. America.

SAP-COLOURS, a name given to various expressed vegetable juices of a viscid nature, which are inspissated by slow evaporation for the use of painters, &c.; sap-green, gamboge, &c. are of this class.

SAP'ID, a. [sapidus, Lat.] tasteful; palatable.

SAP'IDITY, SA'PIDNESS, a. tastefulness.

SAP'IENCE, s. [sapientia, from sapio, Lat.] the habit or disposition of mind which implies the love of wisdom; wisdom; sageness; knowledge.

SAP'IENT, a. [sapiens, Lat.] wise or sage.

SAPLESS, a. destitute of sap or vital juice; dry; old; husky.

SAP'LING, s. a young tree or plant.

SAPONACEOUS, SA'PONARY, a. [sapo, Lat.] having the qualities of soap; soapy.

SAP'ORIF, s. [Lat.] taste; power of affecting or stimulating the palate.

SAPORIFIC, a. [sapor and facio, Lat.] producing taste.

SAP'PER, a. in the Army, a soldier whose duty it is to work in the construction of trenches during a siege, &c. Sappers and Miners, the general name of the engineering corps of the British army, but confined in usage to the private soldiers, the officers being designated engineers.

SAP'PHIRE, (sâfire) s. [sapphirus, Lat.] in Mineralogy, a kind of corundum of a beautiful sky colour. It is used in jewellery for its beauty.

SAP'PHIO, an ancient Greek poetess of Mitylene, in the island of Lesbos. Most of the alleged facts respecting her life are completely legendary, as is the story of her death by the lover's leap. A very few intimations respecting her may be found in her remaining poems, and in those of her contemporary and fellow countryman, Alceus. We have but one of her odes perfect; but the beauty of it, and of the fragments of others which have in greater part perished, makes scholars estimate this an inestimable loss. She flourished about 600 B. C. A particular kind of lyric verse, which she first used, is known by her name.

SAP'PINNESS, s. the quality of abounding in sap or juice. Figuratively, defect of understanding.

SAP'PY, a. abounding in sap; juicy; succulent; young; weak or infirm.

SARABAND, s. [sarabande, Fr. carabande, Span.] a musical composition, generally played very grave and serious; also a Spanish dance.

SARACENS, the general name of the Arabians, used during the contest with the growing Mohammedan empire in Asia and Africa. It was equivalent to Mussulmans, and did not designate the people of a country so much as the professors of a religion.

SARAGO'SSA, a city of Arragon, in Spain. It stands on the Ebro, and is large, handsome, and well built. The streets are long, broad, well-paved, and very clean, and the houses from three to six stories high. It is adorned with many magnificent buildings, and ecclesiastical edifices are both numerous and splendid. In Holy Street they hold their bull-fights. The cathedral is a spacious Gothic building; but the finest church is that of Nuestra Señora del Pilar, where is a statue of Mary and the Infant, covered with the costliest jewels, and gold. The town-house is a sumptuous structure; and the quays are very fine. The Ebro receives here two other rivers, and over it is a long and noble bridge of stone. Saragossa is the see of an archbishop, and has a good university; and is 175 miles from Madrid. Pop. about 60,000. Lat. 41. 45. N. Long. 0. 53. W.

SARATOV, a city of Asiatic Russia, capital of a government of the same name, seated on the Volga. It is built principally of wood, but has some handsome public buildings, and some useful institutions. It is the centre of a considerable and increasing trade. Pop. about 50,000. Lat. 51. 27. N. Long. 45. 57. E.

SARCASM, s. [sarcasme, Fr. sarcasmus, Lat.] a keen reproach; gibe; taunt.

SARCASTIC, SARCASTICAL, a. satirical; taunting; severe.

SARCASTICALLY, ad. tauntingly; severely.

SARCENET, s. a fine thin-woven silk.

To SARCLE (sarke) v. a. [sarculum, Lat.] to weed corn.

SARCOLE, s. [sarz and lele, Gr.] in Surgery, a fleshy excrescence of the testicles.

SARCOLOGY, s. [sarz and logos, Gr.] is that part of Anatomy which treats of the soft parts, viz. the muscles, intestines, arteries, veins, nerves, and fat.

SARCOMA, s. [sarz, Gr.] in Surgery, a fleshy excrescence, growing in any part of the body, especially the nostrils.

SARCOPHAGOUS, (sarkifigus) a. [sarz and phago, Gr.] feeding on flesh; caustic.

SARCOPHAGUS, s. [Lat.] a stone coffin, such as was used amongst many nations of antiquity, that buried their dead, and did not burn them, as the Greeks and Romans did.

SARCOPHAGY, s. the practice of eating flesh.

SARCOPTICS, s. in Medicine, preparations which assist the reproduction of flesh.

SARDANAPALUS, the last king of Assyria, according to the Grecian account of that monarchy. He lived a most luxurious and dissipated life; and when his armies were defeated by the Medes, and himself threatened in Nineveh, being unable to retrieve his fortunes, he burnt himself alive with all the sharers and the apparatus of his voluptuous effeminacy. This is supposed to have happened in about 780 B.C. But little is known certainly respecting it; and no name occurs in the Old Testament at all resembling this monarch's, nor any circumstances like those of his life and death.

SARDINIA, KINGDOM OF, a European state, consisting of the island of Sardinia, and Savoy, Piedmont, Genoa, and Nice, in the N. W. part of Italy, next to France. (See those names.) The Italian portion lies on the Mediterranean sea; and is bounded by France, Switzerland, Venetian Lombardy, Parma, and the smaller states near the sea. The Alps form its frontier towards Switzerland and France, and occupy almost all Savoy. They run in a wide circle round Piedmont, and joining the Apennines shut Nice and Genoa between them and the sea. Several of the loftiest peaks belong to this kingdom, some of which exceed 5000 feet in height, and others range about 2000. The Po, with its fertile country, is its chief river. It is on the whole a fertile country, producing corn, wine, oil, fruits, silk, cattle, &c. &c. It has also some manufactures, but not of great account. Its commerce is considerable. Turin is the capital. Pop. about 4,000,000; or with the island of Sardinia, 4,500,000.

SARDINIA, an island of the Mediterranean Sea, 162 miles in length, and 70 in breadth. A mountain chain occupies the centre of the island, the highest point of which exceeds the altitude of 5000 feet. There are several rivers, but none of any great size, and the coast has several very fine harbours. The soil is fertile in corn and wine, and there are a great number of oranges, citrons, and olives. On the coast is a fishery for anchovies and coral. Cattle and sheep are numerous, as well as horses, which are very good for labour and the road; it contains mines of silver, lead, sulphur, and alum, and they make a good deal of salt. Cagliari is the capital. Pop. above 500,000.

SARDIS, or (correctly) SARDIS, the capital of the ancient kingdom of Lydia, in Asia Minor. It stood on the river Pactolus, and was famous for its immense wealth and magnificence. It is rendered of note in history by the tale of its last king, Croesus. It was one of the seven churches of Asia, to which messages are sent in the first chapters of the Apocalypse. It is now called Sart; and a few wretched hovels, erected amongst the grand ruins of its former splendour, bear testimony to the truth of the charges brought against it, and the faithfulness of the judgments that were denounced.

SARDONIC, a. [from Sardinia,] applied to an affected or convulsive smile, that ill disguises bitterness of heart.

SARDONYX, s. [sardios and onyx, Gr.] in Mineralogy, a species of onyx, whereon the white lies like a plate, of a reddish colour. It is one form of quartz.

SARK, s. [cyrk, Sax.] in Natural History, a shark. In Scotland, a shirt.

SARK, two of the Channel Islands, lying between those of Guernsey and Jersey, on the coast of France. They are very small, and do not differ in productions from the others, except that a silver lead mine has been opened in little Sark. Pop. 785.

SARMATIA, the ancient Roman name of S. Russia, from the Vistula to the Don. It was inhabited by nomadic or barbarous tribes, with whom they had little intercourse, except in trading for amber from the Baltic. Amongst the Greeks this name was extended, so as to include the country between the Don and the Caspian Sea also.

SARSE, s. [sas, Fr.] a sieve made of fine lawn.

To SARSE, v. a. [sasser, Fr.] to sift through a lawn sieve.

SARTHE, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Indre et Loire, Maine et Loire, Mayenne, Orne, Eure et Loir, and Loir et Cher. It is about 60 miles in each direction. It is generally level, and is watered by the Sarthe, the Huine, the Loir, and other tributaries of the Loire. Iron is found here, and building-stone, slate, &c. &c. It produces in abundance corn of all kinds, with wine, cider, fruits, &c. Cattle and sheep are plentiful. Several kinds of manufactures are carried on in the towns. Le Mans is the chief town. Pop. about 500,000.

SARUM, OLD, Wilts. It once covered the summit of a high, steep hill; but there is nothing now to be seen of it but some small ruins of a castle, with a double intrenchment and a deep ditch. It is 83 miles from London. Pop. 7.

SASH, s. a belt or silken band worn by officers by way of distinction, and by ladies; a window with large panes made with frames which go in grooves, and are let up and down by pulleys.

SASSAFRAS, s. in Materia Medica, the wood of an American tree, of the laurel kind; an infusion of which is useful as a stimulant, and in arthritic or rheumatic affections.

SASSARI, a city of Sardinia. It is seated in a plain, and is a pleasant place, with a fine cathedral. It is famous for a fountain called Russel, which is said to be much more magnificent than the best at Rome. There is a university here, and several other fine institutions. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 40. 46. N. Long. 8. 30. E.

SAT, the preter. of To SUR.

SATAN, s. [Heb.] a name of the devil; any wicked spirit.

SATANIC, SATANICAL, a. devilish; infernal.

SATCHEL, s. See SACHEL.

To SATE, v. a. [satis, Lat.] to feed too much or beyond the desires of nature; to glut; to satiate; to pall.

SATELLITE, s. [satelles, Lat.] in Astronomy, a secondary planet, or moon, which moves round a primary planet.

To SATIATE, (sashiate) v. a. [satis, Lat.] to satisfy; fill; pall; glut; to gratify any desire; to impregnate with as much as it can receive; to saturate.

SATIATE, (sashiate) a. glutted; full to satiety.

SATIETY, (sashetty or sashetty) s. [satiety, Fr. from satis, Lat.] more than enough; state of being palled.

SATIN, s. [Fr. satinn, Belg.] a soft, close, and shining silk.

SATIRE, s. [sativa, Lat.] a poem in which wickedness and folly are censured.

SATIRIC, SATIRICAL, a. [satirique, Fr.] belonging to satire; censorious; severe in reproach; invective.

SATIRICALLY, ad. with invective; with intention to censure or vilify.

SATIRIST, s. one who writes satires.

To SATIRIZE, v. a. [satirizer, Fr.] to censure, as in a satire.

SATISFACTION, s. [satis and facio, Lat.] the act of giving complete or perfect pleasure; the state of being pleased; freedom from uncertainty or suspense; gratification; atonement; recompence, or amends for a crime or injury.

SATISFACTORILY, ad. so as to content.

SATISFACTORY, a. [satisfactorio, Fr.] atoning; giving satisfaction; making amends.

To SATISFY, v. a. to please to such a degree that nothing more is desired; to feed to the full; to recompense; to convince; to give atonement or amends for an injury. — v. n. to make payment.

SATRAP, s. the chief governor of a province in Persia.

SATURABLE, a. impregnable with anything till it will receive no more.

To SATURATE, v. a. [satur, Lat.] to impregnate till no more can be imbibed.

SATURATION, s. in Chemistry, the act of dissolving a solid in a fluid, or mixing one fluid with another, or causing a solid to absorb a fluid till it can receive no more.

SATURDAY, s. [sæter and dag, Sax.] the last day of the week.

SATURITY, s. [satur, Lat.] fullness.

SATURN, s. [Saturnus, Lat.] in Heathen Mythology, the Latin name of the deity called by the Greeks Kronos, who was represented to be the father of Zeus, or Jupiter, and to have had such a fear of being dethroned by his offspring, that he ate them as soon as they were born. Jupiter being preserved by a pious fraud, realized his apprehensions, and deprived him of the sovereignty of heaven. He was represented in painting very much in the same way that Time is impersonated amongst us. In Astronomy, the planet whose orbit is next beyond that of Jupiter, and which ranks next to him in size, in the Solar System. His distance from the sun is about 907,000,000 miles, and he revolves round it in about 29½ years. His rotation on his axis is performed in about 10½ hours. His diameter is about 80,000 miles, so that he is nearly 1000 times as large as the earth. When viewed through a powerful telescope he appears to be at times marked with light belts, as Jupiter is; and to be attended with 7 moons; but the most remarkable feature is a broad flat ring, or combination of rings, that surrounds him equatorially. The inner edge of this series of rings is about 19,000 miles distant from the planet; and the whole series is about 60,000 across, whilst its thickness is not much more than 100 miles. The phenomena which these rings present to observers here, are very remarkable; but their appearances from different points of Saturn's surface, and at different periods of the year and day, are plainly most wonderful, as they must span the sky like a luminous arc for one part of the planet; and eclipse the sun on the other side for no less a time than about 15 years; while the numerous moons would be seen in their different phases, now under and now above this stupendous arc. Among astrologers, a sign of misfortune. In Chemistry, it is an appellation given to lead. In Heraldry, it denotes the black colours in blazoning the arms of sovereign princes.

SATURNALIA, in ancient times, the feasts held in honour of Saturn; which, as they occurred in the season of harvest, were made a time of general rejoicing, not unattended with shameless licence.

SATURNIAN, a. [saturnius, Lat.] golden; happy; belonging to the planet Saturn.

SATURNINE, a. [saturninus, Lat.] gloomy, grave, or melancholy; supposed to be born under the influence of the planet Saturn.

SATYR, s. [satyrus, Lat.] in Heathen Mythology, a fabulous kind of demi-god, or rural deity, represented with goat's feet, and sharp pricked-up ears.

SATYRIUM, s. [satyrium, Lat.] in Botany, a name of the orchis.

SAVAGE, a. [savage, Fr.] wild, or uncultivated; untamed, or cruel; untaught, barbarous, uncivilized.

SAVAGE, v. a. to make wild or savage.

SAVAGE, RICHARD, an English poet of the last century. He was the son of the Countess of Macclesfield, by Lord Rivers, and was abandoned and discarded by both his guilty parents. He was first made a shoemaker, but he gave this up on learning his own history, and attempted to gain the attention of his mother. He now entered upon a most irregular literary career, publishing poems and plays, and taking part in their representation, and squandering his money in the most reckless and profligate manner. He was tried and condemned for the murder of a person in a public-house, but was pardoned by the king. The friendship of Lord Tyrconnel he foolishly and ungratefully lost. For some years he had a pension from the queen, in acknowledgment of a birthday ode. And at last, after enduring great want, he died in the prison at Bristol, where he was confined for debt, in 1743, aged 45 years. His poems have long ceased to be read, and the generous biography written by Dr. Johnson alone preserves his name.

SAVAGELY, ad. barbarously; cruelly.

SAVAGENESS, s. barbarousness; cruelty.

SAVANNAH, s. [Span] an open meadow without wood; pasture ground, in America.

SAVANNAH, a river of Georgia, United States. It is formed by the union of the Tugalo and Kiowee rivers, and is 600 miles long. It enters the Atlantic through Tybee Sound.

SAVANNAH, a city of Georgia, United States. It stands on the river of the same name, and is regularly planned and well built. It has many public squares, adorned with rows of trees. It has a good harbour, well fortified; and on Tybee Island, at the mouth of the river, is a lighthouse. It has a considerable trade, as the river furnishes so expeditious a mode of communicating with the interior. It is 662 miles from Washington. Pop 11,214, of whom 4694 are slaves. There are five other places bearing this name in the States.

SAVARY, NICHOLAS, a French traveller of the last century. He travelled in Egypt and the countries round the Levant, and was there about five years. After his return, he published accounts of his travels, and a translation of the Koran and other Arabic works. Neither his accuracy nor his scholarship were great, however. He died in 1788, aged 38 years.

SAUCE, s. [Fr.] in Cookery, any liquid or other thing eaten with food to improve its taste. To serve one the same sauce, is to return one injury by another.

To SAUCE, v. a. to accompany food with something to give it a higher relish; to gratify the palate; to intermix with something good or bad.

SAUCEBOX, s. an impertinent, impudent fellow.

SAUCEPAN, s. a small skillet used in making sauces, &c.

SAUCER, s. [saucciere, Fr.] a small hollow plate on which a tea-cup stands.

SAUCILY, ad. impudently; in a saucy manner; petulantly; impertinently.

SAUCINESS, s. impudence; petulance; impertinence.

SAUCISSE, SAU'SAGE, s. in Military Art, is a long train of powder, sewed up in a roll of pitched cloth, about two inches in diameter, serving to set fire to mines.

SAUCISSON, s. [Fr.] in Fortification, faggots made of large boughs of trees bound together. They are commonly used to cover men, to make epaulments, traverses, or breast-works in ditches full of water, to render the way firm for carriages.

SAUCY, a. [salsus, Lat.] pert; contemptuous of superiors; impertinent; petulant; insolent.

To SAVE, v. a. [sauver, Fr. salvo, from salvus, Lat.] to preserve or rescue from danger, destruction, or misery; to reserve or lay by money; to prevent from spending; to spare or excuse; to save; to reconcile. To save one's tide, is to embark just time enough to accomplish a voyage before the tide turns; and, figuratively, to take, embrace, or not lose an opportunity. — v. n. to be cheap.

SAVE, ad. except; not including.

SAVEALL, (sæveal) s. a small pan fixed in a candlestick to burn the ends of candles.

SAVEIT, s. a rescuer; one who lays up and grows rich; one who escapes loss, though without gain; an economist.

SAVILLE, SIR HENRY, a distinguished English scholar of the latter part of the 16th and the beginning of the 17th century. He studied at Oxford, and afterwards travelled on the continent. After his return he was appointed tutor in Greek and mathematics to Queen Elizabeth; and afterwards held the offices of Warden of Merton College, and Provost of Eton. He died in 1622, aged 72 years. There are yet, at Oxford, professorships of astronomy and geometry which were founded by him.

SAVIN, s. [Fr.] in Botany, an herb, a species of juniper.

SAVING, a. frugal; laying by money, and refraining from expense.—ad. with exception or favour of.
SAVING, s. the act of avoiding expense; any thing preserved from being expended; an exception in favour of.
SAVINGLY, ad. with parsimony.
SAVINGS' BANKS. See BANK.

SAVOIR, s. [savoir, Fr.] the title given to our Lord Jesus Christ, descriptive of his chief relation to mankind; a redeemer.
SAU'MAREZ, JAMES, LORD DE, an eminent British admiral during the last great war. He was a native of Guernsey, and early entered the service, and his first engagements were in the American war. In the battle off the Dogger Bank, in the victory off Cape St. Vincent, at the Nile, near Gibraltar, and in others sharply contested engagements, he bore a distinguished part. During the latter part of the war he had the command of the fleet in the Baltic, where his services as a diplomatist, rather than as a naval commander, were called into play. Subsequently he received at home, and from abroad, all the honours that his services had merited; and he died in 1836, aged 79 years.

SAUNDERSON, DR. NICHOLAS, an eminent English mathematician of the beginning of the last century. He was blind from the first year of his life, from the small-pox, but he triumphed over this great obstacle, studied with great diligence and success at the Penmanship free-school, and having at length attained to considerable proficiency in mathematics, went to Cambridge, and lectured on that science. His success here was very great, and he gained the friendship of Sir Isaac Newton, and the other great men of the day. He was at last made Lucasian Professor of Mathematics; and received other rewards of his incredible perseverance in spite of difficulties. He died in 1739, aged 57 years.

SAUNTER, v. n. [saunter, Fr.] to wander about in an idle manner; to linger.

SAVONAROLA, GIROLAMO, one of the precursors of the Reformation, and a champion of political freedom. He was a Dominican monk, and had acquired great influence in Florence by his eloquence in preaching. He was unsparing in denouncing the vices of the age, and in exposing the crimes and irregularities of the ecclesiastics; nor did he less fervently declare the great principles of political liberty. He refused absolution to Lorenzo the Magnificent, on his death-bed, because he would not promise to restore freedom to Florence. During the incapable government of Piero, and troubled times that followed it, he was the head of the party who demanded political freedom, and at the same time did not change the tone he had assumed, in preaching against social and ecclesiastical corruption, not sparing the pope himself. The unyielding firmness with which he opposed the pardon of some conspirators against the freedom of Florence, brought the opposition that was springing up against him amongst the ecclesiastics and the nobility to a head, and the attack was made by setting up a Franciscan friar to out-preach the great orator. A companion of Savonarola, after this contest had gone on for some time, unwarily challenged the Franciscan to the ordeal of fire in proof of the litigated matter. All was prepared, when Savonarola required that his friend should be permitted to carry the host with him in passing between the two blazing piles. This was rejected as blasphemous sacrilege, and the influence of the reformer fell instantly. He was dragged, by the people who had idolized him, to prison. Savonarola had believed that he had the prophetic gift, at times, from some threats he had uttered being realized by the invasion of Charles VIII., and his friends had encouraged his belief. On this a capital charge was founded, and after a formal trial, he was burnt, with the unwise champion of his cause, on the very pile that had been raised for the ordeal, in 1498, aged 46 years. He wrote several works, in which the truths of Christianity are powerfully stated, considering the age, and the circumstances of the writer.

SAVORY, s. in Botany, a plant, whose leaves have a grateful smell, and a penetrating pungent taste.

SAVOUR, s. [savour, Fr.] a scent or odour. Figuratively, a taste.

TO SAVOUR, v. n. [savourer, Fr.] to have any particular scent or taste; to betoken or have an appearance of something.—r. a. to like; to relish, or take pleasure in; to give a taste of.

SAVOURY, a. [savourous, Fr.] pleasing to the smell; relishing; flavorful; piquant.

SAVOY, s. [from the country in which it grows:] in Cookery, a sort of cabbage, with embossed and curled leaves.

SAVOY, a duchy of Italy, forming part of the kingdom of Sardinia. It lies amongst the Alps, on the borders of Switzerland and France, and is bounded by Piedmont. It is about 80 miles long, by 50 broad. It lies wholly on the W. side of the main ridge of the Alps, but it has many lofty peaks within its boundaries, Mont Blanc being the loftiest. It has several lakes, and the Lake of Geneva is partly within this duchy. The Isere, and other tributaries of the Rhone, water its valleys. It yields iron, lead, copper, a kind of coal, building-stone in abundance, marble, &c. &c. There is little corn, but wine, silk, fruit, and cattle are produced plentifully. Its capital is Chamberri. Pop. about 525,000.

SAURIAN, a. [sauros, Gr.] in Natural History, belonging to the class of lizards and crocodiles.

SAURIN, JAMES, a French Protestant preacher, eminent for his eloquence. His father was driven from his country by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and retired to Geneva, where the son, for a time, studied. Afterwards he became minister to French congregations at London, and at the Hague. He died in 1730, aged 53 years. His published works consist of Sermons, which sustain the reputation he enjoyed during his life, and have been translated into English; and a treatise on the State of Religion in France.

SAURIN, JOSEPH, a French mathematician, and, at first, himself a Protestant preacher, but being compelled to leave France for Switzerland, he left the ranks of the dissidents, for Romanism; and returning to his country enjoyed the favour of several of the great dignitaries, and of the king also. He gained a considerable name by his physical studies, but did not originate any advance in the sciences. He was once imprisoned on a false accusation; and died in 1737, aged 78 years.

SAUSAGE, s. [sauissie, Fr.] in Cookery, a well-known food, made of pork, veal, or beef minced very small, with salt and spice, and put into a gut, or only rolled in flour.

SAUSSURE, HORACE BENEDICT DE, a celebrated geologist and traveller of Geneva, where he was educated, and at first made philosophical professor. During this time he laid the foundation of his after fame, visiting Italy, England, France, &c., and devoting himself, especially, to the difficult and dangerous task of ascending the Alpine mountains, to ascertain their height, and study their phenomena. This led him to the study of meteorological instruments, in which he made some decided improvements. In after life, when he had renounced his professorship, he took part in the political movements at Geneva which followed the French Revolution, and he died in 1799, aged 59 years. His works are details of his travels, and observations in all branches of natural history.

SAUVEUR, JOSEPH, an eminent French mathematician, who first treated of that branch which develops the laws of musical acoustics. He had the misfortune of being totally dumb during the first seven years of his life, and afterwards he had other difficulties almost as formidable to contend with; but he triumphed over them by his energy and perseverance, and almost without an instructor attained to such repute in mathematical science, that he was employed in various services by persons of distinction, as Prince Eugene, &c. He was highly esteemed by Vauban for his knowledge of military engineering, and received an appointment connected with that science. He also held the post of mathematical professor in the Royal College. He died in 1716, aged 63 years.

SAW, the pretor, of the SEE.

SAW, v. [saga or sige, Sax; sawe, Dan.] a flat blade, the edge of which is regularly notched with teeth, used to cut wood, metal, &c.—[saghe, Belg.] a saying; a sentence; a proverb; an adage.

TO SAW, v. a. participle sawed or sawn; to cut timber or other materials with a saw.

SAWDUST, s. dust made by cutting wood with a saw.

SAWFISH, s. in Ichthyology, a large fish, which has a long and flat bony projection from its muzzle, the sides of which are toothed, so as to make it look something like a large and deep cut saw.

SAW-MILL, s. a mill in which large saws are worked by machinery driven by wind, water, or steam-power; and used in cutting planks, veneers, &c. &c.

SAW/PIT, s. a pit over which timber is laid to be sawn.

SAWER, SAW'YER, s. one who cuts timber with a saw.

SAW'WORT, s. in Botany, a plant, one species of which is used by dyers to give a yellow colour to coarse woollen cloths.

SAXE, MAURICE, COUNT DE, commonly called Marshal Saxe, a very celebrated and successful general in the beginning of the last century. He was the illegitimate son of the Elector of Saxony and king of Poland; and displayed tastes which such equivocal parentage might explain. His whole life was that of a soldier of fortune. When only 12 years old he was in his first action; and in attempting to make good his title to the duchy of Courland, and in the service of France, in the wars with Austria and England, he spent the whole of his life. He was equally successful in sieges, as those of Tournay and other towns in Flanders; in open fields of battle, as Fontenoy, which he retrieved when almost routed; and in defensive engagements against overpowering numbers. He was not so successful in the French effort to second the hair-brained attempt of the young Pretender. He received all the honours that such a country as France was could heap on a fortunate general; and died in 1750, aged 54 years. He was not much of a scholar, yet he wrote a book called My Reveries, containing some of his military cogitations and experiences.

SAXE, the name of four small German duchies; the most considerable portions of which lie between Prussia, Saxony, Bavaria, and Hesse Cassel, but of which some small districts lie in the Bavarian and Prussian territories; and which are very confusedly intermixed with each other. Saxe-Altenburg lies partly on the Saal and partly on the Pleisse, which are its chief streams. It is under 500 square miles in extent. It has no very elevated hills; and its soil is, in general, most productive. It has also iron mines, and yields some valuable kinds of stone and earth. Corn of all kinds abounds; it rears plenty of cattle and sheep; and supplies good timber. It has some manufactures. Altenburg is its capital, which stands on the Pleisse. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 50. 58. N. Long. 12. 30. E. Pop. of duchy, about 125,000. Saxe-Coburg-Gotha consists of two larger and several smaller isolated portions, and is altogether nearly 800 square miles in extent. It is generally mountainous, the highest points being about 3000 feet in elevation. None of the rivers are large. Iron and other metals, coal, and various kinds of building-stone and earth are found here. The lower districts yield corn, timber, cattle, &c. &c. In the towns some branches of manufacture are carried on very industriously. Coburg and Gotha are the chief places. (See COBURG.) Gotha, Pop. about 14,000. Lat. 50. 58. N. Long. 10. 43. E. Pop. of duchy, about 160,000. Saxe-Meiningen-Hildburghausen-Saalfeld consists of one large tract, and some detached smaller portions; and is, in total area, about 900 square miles. It lies on the river Werra, and is crossed by the Saal; but some parts are mountainous, and it has heights of about 2500 feet. It is rich in metals, iron, copper, and lead being obtained from mines, and gold from the sands of the river. It also yields various kinds of stone for building, &c., and useful earths and clays. Corn, fruits, timber, cattle, &c. are produced abundantly. There are also many valuable manufactures carried on in the towns. Its chief towns are Meiningen; Pop. about 5000. Lat. 50. 35. N. Long. 10. 25. E. Hildburghausen; Pop. about 3000. Lat. 50. 25. N. Long. 10. 41. E. And Saalfeld; Pop. about 4000. Lat. 50. 48. N. Long. 10. 38. E. Pop. of duchy, about 160,000. Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach consists of three larger and several smaller separate portions; in total area, about 1500 square miles. Eisenach and Neustadt are mountains, their highest points ranging at about 2500 feet. The Werra and the Saal are the chief rivers, the others are small. Iron, &c., with some useful kinds of stone and earth, are found. Weimar is the most productive portion in respect of agriculture; and yields corn, fruits, cattle, &c. There are some manufactures also. Weimar is the capital. Jena is the university for this and the surrounding states. (See EISENACH, JENA, WEIMAR.) Pop. about 270,000.

SAXE-LAUBENBURG. (See LAUBENBURG.)

SAXIFRAGE, s. [saxum and frango, Lat.] in Botany, a genus of plants, common in England; two species having bright yellow flowers, and another a very beautiful white flower.

SAXO GRAMMATICUS, a Danish historian of the 12th century. Very little is known of the history of the writer, but his work is of considerable value.

SAXONS, the people who formerly inhabited various districts in the N. of Germany, and who sent forth the greater number of the adventurers that seized upon the island of Britain after it was relinquished by the Romans, and laid the foundation for the present British race. In the history of this country they are usually designated Anglo-Saxons, because of the fusion that took place in language, manners, &c. between the two tribes of Angles and Saxons, after the conquest of Britain. The Anglo-Saxon language is the basis of the present English tongue, modern research proving that the intermixture of foreign elements amounts to no greater proportion than 3-8ths of the whole stock of words, there being from 21,000 to 23,000 out of between 35,000 and 38,000 words that are of pure Saxon origin. But the original tongue possessed more power in grammatical forms, and was able to express, without the periphrases of auxiliary verbs, and prepositions, which we use, most of the relations of words. The remains of the Anglo-Saxon literature are tolerably copious.

SAXONY, a kingdom of Germany, surrounded by Prussia, Altenburg, Weimar, Reuss, Bavaria, and Austria. It is about 130 miles long, and about 50 broad. The part that lies next Austria is very mountainous, some points of the Erzgebirge range being about 3000 feet, and one about 4000 feet in height; the other parts are lower, but not many are less than 1000 feet high. The N. part is a plain which is connected with the mountains by an undulating and broken tract, having many hills of nearly 1000 feet high. The Elbe is its chief river. Iron, copper, lead, tin, gold, with coal, and many other valuable metals and minerals, are found here. Corn, wine, timber, cattle, &c. are produced. Its manufactures are exceedingly valuable, especially those of woollen goods, linen, and lace. Its trade is chiefly maintained by the great fairs at Leipzig; but the Elbe is navigable for large barges, and some trade is carried on by it. Dresden is the capital; and Leipzig its university, and great trading-place. Pop. about 1,800,000.

SAXONY, a province of Prussia, bordering upon and intermixed with the various German states of Mecklenburg, Hanover, Brunswick, Anhalt, Hesse-Cassel, Weimar, Eisenach, Gotha, Schwartzburg, Meiningen, Reuss, Altenburg, and Saxony, and bounded by the province of Brandenburg. It is of a very irregular triangular form, each side being about 150 miles long. Some parts of it are mountainous, and in it is the famous mountain, the Brocken, which is about 3500 feet high. The Elbe is its great river. Copper, iron, silver, &c., with building-stone, &c., are found abundantly. Corn, wine, &c., with timber and cattle, are plentifully produced. It has many important manufactures. Magdeburg is its chief town. Pop. about 1,700,000.

TO SAY, v. a. preter. said, [seegan, Sax. seggen, Belg.] to speak, tell, or utter words; to allege or affirm.—v. n. to speak.

SAY, s. [saga, Sax.] a speech.—[contracted from assay,] a sample, a trial by a sample.—[soie, Fr.] a kind of silk.

SAY, JEAN BAPTISTE, an eminent political economist of France. He first appeared as a journalist during the Revolution, and afterwards enjoyed some patronage from Buonaparte, which he lost by voting against the project of an empire. His after-life was completely private, except as regards the publication of his works and occasional lectures on his favourite study. He died in 1832, aged 65 years. His works, which are almost all on Political Economy, are not distinguished by much that is novel, being chiefly illustrations and vindications of Adam Smith's doctrines; but they were much thought of in France.

SA'YING, s. an expression; words; opinion delivered sententiously; a saw, or adage.

SCAB, s. [scabies, from scabo, Lat.] in Surgery, a hard crust covering a wound or sore. In Veterinary Surgery, the mange in sheep.

SCABBAR, s. [schap, Teut.] the sheath of a sword.

SCAB'BED, SCAB'BY, a. covered with scabs; paltry; worthless.

SCAB'BIENESS, s. the quality of being scabby.

SCAB'BIUS, s. in Botany, a plant with blue blossoms, and naked fruit-stalks, found on heaths and hilly pastures. A species found in marshes is called, from the singular truncated form of its root, the devil's-bit scabious.

SCAB'IOUS, a. [scabiosus, Lat.] leprous; itchy; scabby.

SCAB'ROUS, a. [scabreus, Fr. scaber, Lat.] rough; rugged; harsh; unsmooth.

SCAD, s. in Natural History, a kind of fish, supposed to be the same with the shad.

SCÆVOLA, a name that often occurs in Roman history, the most famous bearer of which is the hero of one of the lays of early Rome, C. Milius Sævola, who, when Lars Porsena besieged the city, penetrated to his tent, with the intention of assassinating him; but having slain an attendant by mistake, and being taken, and brought before the Etruscan leader, thrust his right hand into a fire burning near, to show his contempt of any sufferings that might be inflicted on him; and boasted that Rome had 300 young men who would do the same; which so struck the invader, that he dismissed him safely, and sought to make peace with the state. The authentic facts of the case cannot be ascertained now.

SCÆFFOLD, s. [eschafaut, Fr. schavot, from schuwen, Belg.] an occasional gallery or stage, raised either for shows, executions, or spectators; platforms erected on the sides of a building for the workmen to stand on.

SCÆFFOLDAGE, SCÆFFOLDING, s. a frame or stage erected for a particular occasion; a building erected in a slight manner.

SCAGLIO'LA, s. in Building, an imitation of marble of any sort. It is laid on brick, or any other ground-work, in the manner of stucco, and takes a very fine and lasting polish.

SCALA'DE, SCALA'DO, s. [scaldare, Fr. scaldado, Span. cala, Lat.] a furious assault made on a place by ladders raised against the walls.

SCALARY, a. [scala, Lat.] proceeding by steps like those of a ladder.

To SCALD, (skald) v. a. [scaldare, Ital.] to injure the skin by boiling water.

SCALD, (skauld) s. in Medicine, a disease, in which the head is covered with a scurf or scab.

SCALD, (skald) a. mean; paltry; sorry.

SCALD, SKALD, s. [Islandic.] a bard or poet.

SCALE, s. [scale, Sax. skal, Isl.] a flat dish of metal in which things are weighed; one of the small overlapping plates which form the outer covering of fishes; a lamina or thin plate which arises on metals.—[scala, Lat.] a ladder, or means of ascent; the act of storming by ladders; a regular gradation or series which rises gradually higher; a ruler used in measuring proportions; the series of musical proportion; any thing marked at equal distances. A Pair of Scales is the common name for the instrument used in Commerce to ascertain the weight of commodities, called in Mechanics a Balance. Scales, in Music, are called diatonic, when they consist simply of a note and its octave with the six intervening notes; chromatic, when the semitones are introduced in addition; and enharmonic, when all the tones between the note and its octave, that are ever sounded in any key, are introduced at the proper intervals.

To SCALE, v. a. [scalare, Ital.] to mount or climb by ladders; to weigh, measure, or compare; to take off a thin plate or lamina; to strip off scales; to pare off a surface.—v. n. to peel off in thin pieces.

SCALED, a. squamous; having scales like fishes; scaly.

SCALE'NE, SCALE'NUM, s. [Fr. Lat.] a triangle which has all its three sides unequal.

SCALIGER, the name of two celebrated scholars of the 16th century. Julius Cesar, or The Elder Scaliger, was born near Lago Garda, in Austria Italy, and spent the first part of his life in the service of the Emperor Maximilian, as a soldier in the service of France, a theological student, and a student in medicine; and at last devoted himself to scholarship, when he was approaching middle age. He settled at Agen, in France, whose bishop was one of his patrons, and carried on his studies and his medical practice, and died in 1558, aged 74 years. His works are very numerous, and contain great stores for curious students. He had the acquaintance of most of the learned men of his time; but his arrogance and vanity kept him from their friendship. Joseph Justus, or The Younger Scaliger, was son of the preceding, and derived most of his learning from his father or by his own efforts, though he studied at Bourdeaux and at Paris. Having embraced Protestantism, he became Professor of Literature at Leyden, at that time the most eminent university in Europe. He lived there absolutely and slavishly devoted to study, yet never renouncing his inherited self-admiration; and died in 1609, aged 69 years. His writings and editions of classics are numerous, and highly valuable; his great knowledge of languages, Oriental and classical, enabling him to bring so much erudition to bear on his subjects. His treatise on Chronology is especially useful to scholars.

SCAL'INNESS, s. the state of being scaly.

SCALL, (skauld) s. [skalldur, Isl.] leprosy; baldness.

SCALL'ION, s. [scallio, Ital.] in Botany, a kind of onion.

SCALL'LOP, s. [scallop, Fr.] in Natural History, a fish with a hollow and pectinated shell; the shell of a scallop fish. Any thing drest in a scallop shell.

To SCALL'LOP, v. a. to cut or mark on the edges with waving lines; to dress any thing in a scallop shell.

SCALP, s. [scalpo, Ital.] in Anatomy, &c., the skin which covers the top of the head.

To SCALP, v. a. to cut off the skin which covers the head.

SCALPEL, s. [Fr. scalpethum, Lat.] a kind of knife chiefly used in dissections and surgical operations.

SCALY, a. covered with scales.

To SCAMBLE, (skembt) v. n. to be turbulent or rapacious; to scramble, or get by struggling with others; to shift in an awkward manner.—v. a. to mangle or maul.

SCAMBLER, s. [Scottish.] an intruder upon a person's generosity or table.

SCAMMONIATE, a. made with scammony.

SCAMMONY, s. [scammonium, Lat. scammonē, Fr.] in Materia Medica, a concreted resinous juice, tender, friable, light, of a grayish brown colour, and disagreeable odour, which is obtained from the root of a kind of convolvulus that grows in Asia.

To SCAMPER, v. n. [schampere, Ital. schampen, Belg.] to fly with speed and fear; to march with eagerness.

To SCAN, v. a. [scando, Lat. scandre, Fr.] to prove a verse by examining its rhythm, &c.; to examine in a nice and curious manner.

SCANDAL, s. [skandalon, Gr. scandalō, Fr.] an offence given by the faults of others; a reproachful and infamous aspersion; infamy. Scandalum magnatum, in Law, is a defamatory speech or writing to the injury of a person of dignity; for which a writ that bears the same name is granted for the recovery of damages.

To SCANDAL, v. a. to treat opprobriously; to charge falsely with faults.

To SCANDALIZE, v. a. [skandalizo, Gr. scandaliser, Fr.] to offend by some action supposed criminal; to reproach, defame, or disgrace.

SCANDALOUS, a. [scandaleux, Fr.] giving public offence; infamous; reproachful; shameful; opprobrious; disgraceful; openly vile.

SCANDALOUSLY, ad. shamefully; censoriously; opprobriously.

SCANDALOUSNESS, s. the quality of giving public offence.

SCANDERBEG, (or PRINCE ALEXANDER,) the great Albanian warrior of the 15th century, whose real name was George Castriot, who resisted for many years the establishment of the Turkish power in Albania. His father had submitted to the Turks, and himself and his brothers were trained in Mohammedism, as hostages by Amurath II. Being intrusted with a military command on the entrance of the army into Hungary, he joined with Hunniades, the vaivode of Transylvania, deserted the sultan and Islam, and proclaimed himself Prince of Albania. He maintained, throughout the rest of his life, war against the Mussulman invaders of Europe; and, in spite of defeats and dangers, and by every means that skill, and strength, and valour could employ, kept them at bay till he died, in 1467, aged 63 years.

SCANDINAVIA, in Ancient Geography, the name by which the countries N. of Germania and Sarmatia in Europe were designated, although very little of them was known even to the best informed of the Roman writers.

SCANSION, (skanshon) s. [scansio, from scando, Lat.] the act or process of scanning a verse.

To SCANT, v. a. [skaaner, Dan.] to limit, straiten, or keep within narrow bounds.

SCANT, a. wary; parsimonious; scarce; less than what is requisite.

SCANTILY, ad. niggardly; sparingly; narrowly.

SCANTINESS, s. narrowness; want of space, amplitude, quantity, or of greatness.

SCANTLET, s. a small pattern or quantity.

SCANTLING, s. [scantillon, Fr.] a small quantity cut as a pattern; a size or measure; a small piece, proportion, or quantity; small squared timber, used for rafters, &c.

SCANTLY, ad. hardly; scarcely; narrowly; penuriously.

SCANTNESS, s. narrowness; meanness; smallness.

SCANTY, a. narrow; small; short of its proper quantity; poor; sparing; niggardly.

To SCAPE, v. a. [contracted from escape,] to shun or fly.—v. n. to get away from danger.

SCAPE, s. flight from danger; a means of escape; an evasion; a freak or start, owing to inadvertence; an act of vice.

SCAPE-GOAT, in the Jewish Antiquities, the goat which was set at liberty on the day of solemn expiation. For the ceremonies on this occasion, see Lev. xvi. 5, 6.

SCAPEMENT, s. in Clock-work, a general term for the works communicating the impulse to the pendulum.

SCA'PULA, JOHN, a Swiss scholar, who published a very useful Greek lexicon, which has often been reprinted, and which is constructed on a most serviceable plan, every word being arranged under its assumed, or presumed, radical. He is accused of piracy in this work, with too much appearance of justice. He lived at the end of the 16th and the beginning of the 17th centuries, and nothing more is known respecting him.

SCA'PULA, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the shoulder-blade.

SCA'PULAR, SCA'PULARY, a. [scapula, Lat.] relating or belonging to the shoulders.

SCAR, s. [scar, Fr. eschara, Gr.] the seam or mark of a wound, after it is cured.

To SCAR, v. a. to mark as with a sore or wound.

SCA'RAB, s. [scarabée, Fr. scarabæus, Lat.] in Natural History, a beetle; an insect with sheathed wings.

SCA'RAMOUCH, s. [escaramouche, Fr.] a buffoon in a motley dress.

SCA'RBOROUGH, Yorkshire, N. Riding. It is seated on a steep rock, near which are such craggy cliffs that it is almost inaccessible on every side. It has a good harbour, possesses a considerable shipping trade, is much engaged in the fisheries, and is the best harbour of refuge between Newcastle and the Humber. It is a place of considerable resort, both for sea bathing, and for the sake of the mineral waters. It is attractive also by its scenery, &c. And it is supplied with all the apparatus of fashionable and refined leisure. It is 237 miles from London. Markets, Thursday and Saturday. Pop. 10,060.

SCARCE, a. [scarso, Ital. schers, Belg.] hard to be met with; rare; not plentiful or common.

SCARCE, SCA'RCELY, ad. with difficulty; hardly; scantily.

SCARCENESS, SCA'RCITY, s. penury; smallness of quantity; rarity; uncommonness; infrequency.

To SCARE, v. a. [scorare, Ital.] to fright; to terrify; to frighten; to strike with sudden fear.

SCA'RECROW, s. an image or clapper used to frighten birds; any thing to raise terror.

SCARF, s. [schärfe, Fr.] any ornament that hangs loose on the shoulders.

To SCARF, v. a. to throw loosely on; to dress in any loose garment; to join beams of timber securely.

SCARF-SKIN, s. the outward skin of the body; the cuticle; the epidermis.

SCARIFICATION, s. [Fr. from scarifico, Lat.] in Surgery, an operation wherein several incisions are made in the skin by a lancet, or some such instrument.

SCARIFIER, s. he who scarifies; an instrument by which scarifications are made. In Agriculture, a machine for breaking up the soil more effectually than can be done by a plough, and in conditions in which a plough will not act; one of great value in modern farming.

To SCARIFY, v. a. [skariphos, Gr. scarifico, Lat. scarifier, Fr.] in Surgery, to let blood, by making several incisions in the skin, as in cupping.

SCARLATINA, s. [from scarlet,] in Medicine, the fever commonly known as scarlet fever; which varies considerably in its violence and danger.

SCARLATTI, the name of two celebrated musical composers of Italy, the elder of whom, Alessandro, remained, after studying at Rome, at his native place, Naples, and was the first musician of celebrity in that since famous seat of the Muses. His works are very numerous, and consist of church-services, operas, and smaller pieces of all kinds. He died in 1725, aged 75 years. His son, Domenico, after various residences in Italy and Portugal, settled at Madrid; where he died in 1751, aged 68 years. His works also are various and numerous, and he has the additional praise of being one of the friends of the more celebrated Handel.

SCARLET, s. [scarlatina, Fr. scarlate, Ital.] a beautiful bright red, but not shining; cloth dyed scarlet.

SCARLET, a. of a scarlet colour. Scarlet Fever, in Medicine, the common name for the dangerous variety of Scarlatina.

SCARP, s. [escarpe, Fr.] the slope on that side of a ditch which is next to a fortified place, and looks towards the field.

SCA'RAPA, ANTONIO, the great Italian anatomist. He studied at Padua, and was first appointed Anatomical Professor of Modena; and subsequently occupied the same professorship at Pavia, and was made chief of the faculty there. He travelled in England, France, &c., chiefly with a view to his own pursuits, and maintained an active correspondence with the most eminent men and societies throughout Europe. His works are exceedingly numerous, and are all of the most valuable character, the engravings being made from his own drawings. He died in 1832, aged 84 years.

SCARRO'N, PAUL, the great French satiric and comic poet of the 17th century. He was first a student for the ecclesiastical profession, but his profligate habits were in the last degree unfit for that, yet he continued till disabled by means of one of his shameless frolics in carnival season. He removed to Paris, where his wit procured him a living. He also married, with the most generous views, a lady, afterwards secretly wedded to royalty, as Madame de Maintenon. He continued in the same condition of suffering, and semi-dependence, semi-poverty, and frivolous gaiety till his death, which, though in keeping with his life, is not pleasing to contemplate. He died in 1660, aged 50 years. His works are well known by English translations, and his comedies are especially amusing.

SCATCH, s. [escache, Fr.] a kind of horse-bit for bridles.

SCATHLESS, a. [Sax.] without injury, or loss.

To SCATTER, v. a. [scatteran, Sax. schatteren, Belg.] to throw loosely about; to sprinkle; to dissipate or disperse; to spread thinly.—v. n. to be dispersed or dissipated.

SCATTERLING, s. a vagabond; one who has no fixed habitation.

SCATURIENT, a. [scaturiens, Lat.] springing as a fountain.

SCATURI'GINOUS, a. [scaturigo, Lat.] abounding in springs or fountains.

SCA'VAGE, s. a toll or custom anciently exacted by mayors, sheriffs, and bailiffs of cities and towns corporate, of merchant strangers, for wares exposed and offered to sale within their liberties; which was prohibited by 19 Hen. VII., but the city of London still retains this custom.

SCA'Venger, s. [scaven, Sax.] one whose office it is to see that the streets are kept clean.

SCENERY, (scenery) s. the appearance of places or things; the representation of a place in which an action is performed; a collection of scenes used in a play-house.

SCENE, (seen) s. [Fr. scene, Gr. scena, Lat.] the stage; the dramatic theatre; the general appearance of any action; display; representation; series; a part of a play, generally applied to so much as passes between the same persons in the same place; the place represented by the stage; a picture or hanging on the stage, relative to some place or building, adapted to the play.

SCEN'IC, (scénik) a. [scénique, Fr.] dramatic; theatrical.

SCENOGRAPHICAL, (scénographikal) a. [skene and grapho, Gr.] drawn in perspective.

SCENOGRAPHICALLY, ad. in perspective.

SCENOGRAPHY, (scénography) s. the art of perspective.

SCENT, (scent) s. [sentir, Fr.] the power or sense of smelling; chase followed by the smell.

To SCENT, (scent) v. a. to smell; to perceive any thing by the nose, or organ of smelling; to perfume, or communicate odours.

SCÉPTIC, s. [skeptikos, Gr.] in Philosophy, one who inquires into the evidences of propositions, in order to establish those which are true, and reject those which are false. In common usage, employed in a bad sense, to denote one who doubts or rejects the truths of religion without inquiry into their evidence, or without allowing to their evidence its true worth.

SCÉPTICISM, s. in Philosophy, the system of Pyrrho, or of universal doubt respecting both facts and truths, based on the impossibility of removing all the difficulties out of the way of establishing them. (See PYRRHO.) Also, in common usage, infidelity in regard to the truths of religion.

SCEPTRÉ, (sépter) s. [Fr. sceptrum, Lat. skeptron, Gr.] a royal staff borne in the hand by kings, &c., as a mark of their sovereignty.

SCEPTRED, (séptred) a. bearing a sceptre.

SCHAFHAUSEN, (in all German names the sch is pronounced like our sh, as, Schaffhausen, Sheeller, Shinder, &c.,) one of the cantons of Switzerland. It adjoins to Baden, and is bounded by the cantons of Zürich and Thurgau. It is about 30 miles long, and about 10 broad in the middle part. It is not exactly mountainous, and its chief river is the Rhine, which is its S. boundary. Iron and other valuable mineral products are found here, and it yields corn, wine, fruits, timber, cattle, &c. There are also a few manufactures. Its capital is of the same name, and stands on the Rhine, over which it has a bridge. It is fortified, and has some fine public buildings. There is a college here, with a valuable library, and it has a good trade. Pop. about 8000. Lat. 47. 41. N. Long. 8. 39. E. Pop. of canton, about 35,000.

SCHALKEN, GODFREY, a Dutch painter, celebrated for his candlelight scenes. He visited England, but his reputation was mostly obtained in Holland. He died in 1760, aged 63 years.

SCHAUMBURG, or SCHAUENBURG. See LIPPE.

SCHÉDULE, (schédule) s. [schedula, from scheda, Lat.] a small scroll, or inventory; a scroll annexed to a will or other writing, containing something referred to in the main writing.

SCHÉELE, CHARLES WILLIAM, an eminent Swedish chemist, who settled at a small place near Stockholm, and prosecuted his researches with the aid of Bergman and Gahn. He made several great discoveries, as, of the manner of obtaining tartaric acid; of fluoric and several other acids; of chlorine; of oxygen and nitrogen gas, (not knowing that the former had already been discovered,) &c. &c. He died in 1786, aged 44 years. He may be reckoned one of the martyrs of science, for he had few advantages in carrying on his most productive experiments, and he died in consequence of his arduous in his favourite pursuit.

SCHÉLDT, a European river, which springing up in France, flows partly in that country, partly in Belgium, and partly in the Netherlands, entering the North Sea by several mouths in the latter country, after a course of upwards of 200 miles. Valenciennes, Tournay, Ghent, Antwerp, and other towns of note stand on its banks.

SCHÉMATISM, (schématism) s. [schema, Gr.] combination of the aspects of heavenly bodies; particular form or disposition of a thing.

SCHÉMATIST, (schématist) s. a projector; one given to forming schemes; a contriver.

SCHEME, (skēm) s. a plan, system, or design, wherein several things are brought into one view; a project, draught, contrivance; any literal or mathematical diagram; combination of the heavenly bodies.

SCHEMER, s. a contriver; a projector.

SCHÉSIS, (schésis) s. [Gr.] habit of the body. A figure in Rhetoric, whereby a certain affection or inclination of the opponent is feigned, on purpose to be answered.

SCHÉDAM, a town of the Netherlands, standing on a canal, near the wide estuary through which the Rhine and Meuse enter the N. Sea. It has a harbour, and some trade; but is chiefly noted for its distilleries of Hollands gin, to which it gives a familiar name. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 51. 55. N. Long. 4. 23. E.

SCHILLER, JOHANN CHRISTOPH FRIEDRICH, the great German poet and dramatist. He was first destined for the ministry in the church; but afterwards studied law at Stuttgart, as well as the drill-sergeant system would permit. Here he practised in medicine, and produced his first work, the Robbers; which, whilst it astounded all Germany, and laid the foundation of his future glory, brought him so much trouble that he at last left Stuttgart, and entered the service of the manager of the Mannheim theatre, as a regular play-writer. After working there a year and a half, he went to Leipzig; and not long afterwards, to Dresden; and at both places continued his literary activity unabated. He soon visited Weimar, and gained the friendship of Goethe; then gained a lady-love at Rudolstadt, and lived awhile there; and at Goethe's instance, afterwards, received the Historical Professor's chair at Jena, where he married. Here he achieved the most brilliant triumphs of his genius; and resided wholly, with the exception of a few visits to Berlin, &c., for about 10 years. The remainder of his life was spent at Weimar, where he died in 1805, aged 46 years. His dramas are his greatest works, and of these the Wallenstein, and Wilhelm Tell, Maria Stuart, and the Maid of Orleans are the grandest; Don Carlos shows his first emergence into the region of true art; and the Robbers, which is one unutterable exaggeration, may be regarded as a fierce defiance to the dramatic pedantry and untruth of the age. He also translated some of Shakespeare's plays. His poems are very numerous, and very beautiful, realizing most completely the idea of philosophical poetry. The Song of the Bell, the Song of Joy, &c. are very beautiful; but most of them are known by no inferior translations here. In History, he produced a Narrative of the Thirty Years' War; and in Philosophy, a series of Essays and Letters, of great depth and beauty. He was a devoted adherent of Kant's new Critical Philosophy, and in this respect was the very antithesis of his greater friend, Goethe. In other things he lived a noble, laborious, and beautiful life, and by his works has painted his inmost heart in true colours for our love and emulation.

SCHIRAS, a large and famous town of Farsistan, Persia, and is the capital of that province. It is seated at the N.W. end of a spacious plain, surrounded by very high hills, under one of which the town stands. It is a very beautiful place, and is adorned with mosques, gardens, &c. &c. It is famous in the East for its wine. The ruins of Persepolis are 50 miles to the N. E. of this place. It is 225 miles from Ispahan. Lat. 29. 40. N. Long. 52. 55. E.

SCHIRRHOU, (skirrhou) s. [skirrhos, Gr.] consisting of a hard insensible tumour.

SCHIRRUS, (skirrurus) s. in Medicine, a hardened gland.

SCHISM, (schim) s. [schizo, Gr.] in Ecclesiastical affairs, a division or separation in a church; a party formed in a church, or party-spirit which may exist there. In the latter sense it is used in the New Testament; in both senses it may be correctly employed in reference to any churches of the present day; but its most common use, to designate persons separating from a church, (whether that of Rome or England, i. e. whether standing on the pretensions of spiritual or temporal power,) is incorrect, and is simply a word of abuse and railing. Dissent is not, properly, schism, but Puritanism and Nonconformity may be indicted for it.

SCHISMATIC, (schizmatik) s. one who leads or follows in a schism; one who subscribes articles of religion with a mental reservation, or in a non-natural sense.

SCHISMATICAL, (schizmatikal) a. inclining to or practising schism.

To SCHISMATIZE, (schizmatize) v. a. to take part in a schism. SCHLEGEL, the name of several eminent men of letters and scholars in Germany, the most famous of whom are, August Wilhelm von Schlegel, who studied in Göttingen, and early acquired a name for his scholarship and his poetical talents. His translation of Shakespeare increased his renown, and led to a professorship at Jena. Thence, after some years, he removed to Berlin, where he encountered the famous Madame de Staël, in company with whom he travelled, and worked in literature. He was once secretary to Bernadotte of Sweden; afterwards he visited France and his friend de Staël, and finally settled as a professor at Rome, where he diligently laboured in Oriental studies, and died in 1845, aged 78 years. His criticism in literature was better than his scholarship, and his remarks on Shakespeare are surpassed only by those of Goethe and Coleridge. His poems are his best writings, and his historic and linguistic essays are not superior, as the works of a German. His brother, Friedrich von Schlegel, differed in many respects from him. He studied at Göttingen and Leipzig, and was first associated with his brother, and with Schleiermacher, in different critical and editorial works, as well as being engaged in writing and bringing out some works independently, and lecturing, by which he produced a great impression. He visited Paris, and returning, settled at Vienna, having joined the Roman Catholic Church. He was now associated with his brother, and with Novallas and Tieck, in several literary plans and labours; but during the whole time he continued to study and write on his own responsibility. He devoted himself especially to Oriental languages, and attained some celebrity in that branch of knowledge; he was also for a short time employed by Metternich at the Imperial or National Diet; and in delivering his lectures, he occasionally visited other places of note in Germany. He died in 1829, aged 57 years. Beside his poems, and works on Oriental languages, he has contributed to general literature many valuable critical essays. His Lectures on the Philosophy of Life, Language, and History, are highly esteemed; but though abounding with learning, and remarkably fair for a convert to Rome, are filled with strange fantasies in psychology, and etymology also. All his writings evince the genuine devoutness of his disposition.

SCHLEIERMACHER, FRIEDRICH ERNST DANIEL, a great German scholar, critic, divine, and preacher. He received his first impression and instructions amongst the Hermhutters, and afterwards studied at Halle. His first engagements were scholastic, and then he became a preacher, settling, after a remove or two, at Berlin. Here he commenced his literary career, in various essays, and afterwards in his magnificent translation of Plato. His next appointment was to a professorship at Halle, whence he was drove him, and he returned to Berlin. He did not relinquish his ministerial work, till he was made theological professor at Berlin. He died in 1834, aged 66 years. The learning and eloquence displayed by Schleiermacher in all his works, spoken and written, was such as to exert great influence on the highest and most cultivated classes of Germany; and the exquisite spirit of faith and religion which pervaded all he said and did, turned all his influence to the best account. In his theology, he cannot be ranked with any recognised class, since, though he assented to the dogmas of some communions, he did not agree with them in the grounds of his assent, and he differed yet more widely from them in his decided spirituality of mind. He joined to all his other qualities, that of the most captivating and unaffected playfulness, so that he was customarily designated amongst his students and friends, the sixty-years-old boy. A few of his writings, and a few extracts, have been translated into English, but the greater part of his labours are as yet inaccessible to readers here.

SCHLE/SWIG. See SLE/SWICK.

SCHOLAR, (scholar) s. one who receives instruction from a master; a disciple; a man of letters; a pedant.

SCHOLARSHIP, (scholarship) s. learning; knowledge acquired by education at school, university, &c., by the study of authors, or converse with people of genius and letters; an exhibition or pension allowed a scholar or student.

SCHOLASTIC, (scholastik) a. [scholasticus, from schola, Lat.] practised in the schools; acquired at, or befitting, a school. Scholastic Philosophy, the system which arose from the study of Aristotle, and his commentators, and from the assumption of their dicta, as the axioms and laws by which the science of both truth and fact was to be constructed. The most melancholy consequences of this prodigious error are to be found in the history of theology; physical science had its Bacon, but no Heracles has yet arisen to unchain Divine truth from the cold and barren rocks, to which the despots of the mind, six centuries ago, bound it. See AQUINAS, NOMINALISM, REALISM, THEOLOGY, &c.

SCHOLASTICALLY, ad. according to the niceties or methods of the schools.

SCHOLIAST, (scholiast) s. [scholiaste, Fr.] a writer, or author, of explanatory notes.

SCHOLIUM, (scholium) s. [Lat.] a note or explanation.

SCHOOL, (school) s. [schola, Lat.] a house where persons are instructed in any science or art; a state of education; a particular system of teaching. British Schools, the name given to those day schools for the people, from which, on Lancaster's plan, religious sectarianism is rigidly excluded. Infant Schools, are those in which children under six years of age are taught the exercise of the faculties that are active then, and trained for further instruction. Normal Schools, are those maintained in connexion with an establishment for educating teachers, to serve as an exercise and pattern to them. Sunday Schools, are those valuable institutions begun by Robert Raikes, at a time when day schools were rare, and few opportunities were given to the children of the poor of obtaining any instruction at all, for the purpose of doing the best that could be done, in the unoccupied hours of the day of rest, by voluntary and gratuitous teaching, to supply the deficiency. Their original intention is almost lost sight of through the wonderful progress of British and other day schools since his time; and as the instruction is almost wholly confined to religious subjects, and the support of them has become a great part of the form of evangelical religion, great need exists at the present moment for a complete change in them, and for something vital and efficient to be substituted for what is almost every where to be found. National Schools, are those carried on on Dr. Bell's system, the peculiar mark of which is the exclusion of the children of all who differ from the Church of England, or the subjection of them to the inculcation of her catechism and forms. Training Schools, are institutions for the education of teachers of schools for the people, of which several, maintained by different societies, and in various degrees of efficacy, exist in London, and are known to most persons. Grammar or Endowed Schools, are old institutions, originating usually in some bequest of funds for educating a certain number of pupils according to a particular routine, and called grammar schools from the fact that almost all scholarship was formerly included in the meaning of that word. Proprietary Schools, are grammar schools raised by a company of shareholders, who pay efficient masters, and obtain (sometimes) a good per centage on the money they have invested, beside having certain privileges in respect to the introduction of pupils.

To SCHOOL, (school) v. a. to instruct or teach; to teach with superiority; to tutor.

SCHOOLBOY, s. a boy that goes to school.

SCHOOLFELLOW, s. one bred in the same school.

SCHOOLMAN, (schoolman) s. in Philosophy and Theology, the name by which Aquinas and the other doctors, who regarded Aristotle as the Prometheus of the mind, are usually known.

SCHOOLMASTER, (schoolmaster) s. one who presides and teaches in a school.

SCHOOLMISTRESS, s. a woman who governs a school.

SCHOONER, s. a small kind of one-masted vessel, less than a sloop.

SCHREVELIUS, CORNELIUS, a classical editor of Leyden, where he was rector of the high school. He published a Latin and Greek Lexicon, which was of some use in his days, and which is perversely preferred by some teachers of these days, who are sceptical respecting the progress made in the study and knowledge of Greek, during the last 200 years. He died in 1667, aged 53 years.

SCHULTENS, the name of several learned Orientalists of Holland, the most eminent of whom were Albert Schultens, who, after studying at the best universities of the country, became Oriental Professor at Leyden, and wrote, amongst other works, a Commentary on the Book of Job, another on the Proverbs, and some treatises on Hebrew. He died in 1750, aged 64 years. Henry Albert Schultens was professor at Amsterdam, and published many valuable works in the Arabic language, &c. He died in 1793, aged 44 years.

SCHWARZ, BERTHOLD, a Cordelier monk of Germany, in the 13th century, to whom is commonly attributed the invention of gunpowder.

SCHWARZ, CHRISTIAN FREDERIC, one of the early missionaries to India. He had been educated at Halle, and was one of those who shared the zeal of the celebrated Francke for the revival of evangelical piety and zeal. He laboured chiefly under the auspices of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, an old Church of England institution. He acquired so great a reputation for probity in India, that he was the only person, on several occasions, whom the natives would receive to treat with respecting the British affairs there; and the rajah of Tanjore bequeathed to him the education of his son. He died in 1798, aged 74 years, and is held in repute even to the present day amongst all classes of religionists.

SCHWARZBURG, a principality of Germany, now divided into two branches. The territory consists of two portions, with a total area of about 750 square miles. They are both bordering on Prussia, and bounded on other parts by the adjoining Saxon duchies, Weimar, Gotha, &c. The Upper country is very mountainous, but the Lower is more level; yet it has some lofty hills. A few small rivers alone water them. Iron, lead, copper, and other metals, with building-stone, slate, and other useful kinds of stone and earth, are found here. Corn, timber, cattle, &c. are raised. Some manufactures are carried on in the chief towns. The largest of the separate principalities is Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt, of which Rudolstadt is the capital. Pop. above 60,000. The smaller is called Schwarzburg-Sonderhausen, and has for its capital Sonderhausen. Pop. about 60,000. Total pop. of Schwarzburg about 120,000.

SCHWEITZ, a canton of Switzerland, surrounded by the cantons of Zurich, Zug, Lucerne, Unterwalden, Uri, and Glarus. It is about 80 miles long, by about 40 broad. It lies amid the loftiest parts of the Alps, the general height of which is about 5000 feet, and some points are very much higher. The Lakes of Zurich, Zug, Lucerne, &c. either border on it, or are partly included in it. Cattle, timber, and dairy products are its chief wealth and articles of trade. Its manufactures are not important. Schweitz, its capital, stands in a beautiful valley, and has some good buildings, and various interesting relics of the former history of the freedom of Switzerland. Pop. about 3500. Lat. 47. 0. N. Long. 8. 42. E. Pop. of canton, about 45,000.

SCIA/GRAPHY, s. [sciatographie, Fr. from skia and grapho, Gr.] in Architecture, the profile or section of a building, to show the inside thereof. In Astronomy, the art of finding the hour of the day or night by the shadow of the sun or moon.

SCIATIC, SCIATICA, (the sci in this and the following words is pron. always like si.) s. [Lat. sciaticus, Fr.] in Medicine, the rheumatism in the hip.

SCIATICAL, a. afflicting the hip.

SCIENCE, s. [Fr. scientia, Lat.] properly, and philosophically, knowledge of any kind methodized. (See METHOD, PHILOSOPHY, INDUCTION, &c.) Popularly, natural philosophy, especially the practical and experimental part of it. Science is distinguished from Art: this being the study of the beautiful, that of the true. The Sciences are distinguished from the Arts: those being the development and systematic arrangement of principles, these the application of them in practice. Science is also distinguished from literature; that being the discovery and methodizing of any branch of human knowledge, this the teaching of it by speech or writing.

SCIENTIAL, (sciensial) a. producing certainty or knowledge.

SCIENTIFIC, SCIENTIFICAL, a. [scientia and facio, Lat.] producing certainty or demonstrative knowledge.

SCIENTIFICALLY, ad. so as to produce knowledge.

SCILLY, a cluster of islands and rocks, lying off Cornwall, about 150 in number, consisting chiefly of granite and similar rocks. St. Mary's is the largest and most cultivated, and has two villages on it. Agriculture, grazing, and fishing are carried on, and are the chief support of the people. They are dangerous to ships, and there is a lighthouse upon one which is named St. Agues. Pop. of St. Mary's, 1545; of the whole group, 2582.

SCIMITAR, s. See CIMETER.

SCINDE, See SINDE.

TO SCINTILLATE, v. n. [scintillo, Lat.] to sparkle; to emit sparks.

SCINTILLATION, s. [Fr. scintillatio, Lat.] the act of sparkling; sparks emitted.

SCIOLIST, s. [sciulus, diminutive from sciens, Lat.] one who knows many things superficially; a smatterer in science or literature.

SCIOLOUS, a. superficially knowing.

SCION, s. [Fr.] a small twig taken from one tree to be ingrafted into another.

SCIPIO, a celebrated family name in the history of Rome. The most distinguished bearers of it were,—Publius Cornelius Scipio, who was several times defeated by Hannibal on his invasion of Italy, and afterwards in Spain, in conjunction with his brother, gained several victories over the Carthaginian forces, till, at length, he fell in battle, and his army was totally routed, in 212 B. C. P. Cornelius Scipio Africanus, son of the preceding, began his career in the disastrous defeats which laid all Italy at Hannibal's mercy. He was sent, on his father's death, into Spain, where he was so successful as to retrieve all the Roman losses in that part. After a lapse of time, occupied with affairs of minor importance, he carried the war into Africa, and after some brilliant victories at Zama, finally overthrew the great general who had so long been the terror and the scourge of Rome. It was this which obtained him the honourable surname by which he is distinguished. After having engaged in war with Antiochus, and been involved in some of the ceaseless personal contests amongst the chief men in the state, in some of which he narrowly escaped with his life, he left Rome, and died in about 185 B. C. P. C. Scipio Emilianus Africanus, adopted son of the preceding, after gaining a great name in Greece, Spain, and Africa, was sent into the last country to complete the destruction of the great rival to the city of the Tiber; he took Carthage, and it was razed to the ground. He next appeared before the walls of Numantia, in Spain, and that city, which had resisted for so many years, fell before him. The attempt of the Gracchi involved Scipio, who was found murdered in his own house, in 129 B. C. P. C. Scipio Nasica Serapion, was the embodiment of all the aristocratic, antipopular intentions and aspirations of this great family, without any reputation for military prowess, or any fame of glorious deeds done in defence of Rome, to enable historians to rebuke the fierce and fickle democracy. They all hoped to destroy the republic; the exile of the Elder Africanus, and the death of the Younger, were the rewards of their treason. This man had all the insolence that Shakespeare has endowed Coriolanus with,—he asked a poor voter whose "most sweet voice" he was soliciting, when he saw how hard his hands were,—"if he walked on them?" He opposed the Gracchi, and the senate rid both themselves and the city of his presence, by an embassy to Asia, where he died in about 130 B. C.

SCI'RE-FA'CIAS, s. [Lat.] in Law, a writ whereby a person is called on to show cause why a judgment passed should not be put in execution. This writ is not granted before a year and a day is passed after the judgment is given.

SCISSORS, s. always used in the plural; [scindo, Lat.] a small pair of blades with a sharp edge, moving on a rivet, and used for cutting paper, cloth, &c.

SCISSILE, a. [Fr. scissible, Lat.] capable of being cut or divided by a sharp edge.

SCISSION, (scishon) s. [Fr. scissio, Lat.] the act of cutting.

SCISSURE, s. [scissum, Lat.] a breach, rupture, fissure, crack, or rent.

SCLEROTIC, (sklerotik) a. [skleros, Gr.] hard; generally applied to one of the tunics of the eye. See EYE.

SCLEROTICS, (sklerotika) s. [skleroo, Gr.] in Medicine, preparations which harden and consolidate the parts they are applied to.

TO SCOOT, (skot) Scotch, v. a. to stop a wheel by putting a stone or piece of wood under it.

TO SCOFF, v. n. [schoppen, Belg.] to ridicule with insolence. To treat with contemptuous and reproachful language, used with at.

SCOFF, s. derision; ridicule; expression of scorn.

SCOFFER, s. one who ridicules, or derides another with insolence, contumely, or sauciness.

SCOFFINGLY, ad. in contempt; in ridicule.

TO SCOLD, (skold) v. n. [scholden, Belg.] to quarrel with or chide in a vehement, clamorous, and rude manner; to brawl.

SCOLD, (skold) s. a clamorous, quarrelsome woman.

SCOLLOP, s. See SCALLOP.

SCOLOP/ENDRA, s. in Natural History, a venomous insect having many legs.

SCONCE, s. [schantz, Teut.] a fort or bulwark. Figuratively, the head; a candlestick, which moves on a rivet, and is fixed against a wall.

SCOOP, s. [schoepe, Belg.] a kind of large ladle, used to throw out liquor; an instrument made of bone, and used in eating the pulp of an apple, &c.

TO SCOOP, v. a. [schoppen, Belg.] to get by means of a scoop; to ladle out; to empty or carry off in a hollow instrument; to cut hollow deep.

SCOOPER, s. one who scoops. In Zoology, a water-fowl. SCOPE, s. [scopus, Lat.] the object of a person's actions or designs; an aim, intention, or drift; the final end; room, or space; liberty, or freedom from restraint.

SCOP/OLI, JOHN ANTONY, an Italian naturalist and physician. He studied at Trent and Innsbruck, and his first appointment was as physician for the mines in Tyrol. Afterwards he was made mineralogical professor at Chemnitz, and finally professor of natural history at Pavia. He died in 1737, aged 64 years. His work relates chiefly to botany, which he studied with great diligence in Tyrol, &c.

SCOP/ULOUS, a. [scopulus, Lat.] abounding in rocks.

SCORBU/TIC, SCORBU/TICAL, a. [scorbutique, Fr. scorbutus, Lat.] afflicted with the scurvy.

SCORBU/TICALLY, ad. with tendency to the scurvy; in the scurvy.

To SCORCH, v. a. [scorened, Sax.] to change the colour of any thing by heat; to burn superficially; to burn; to parch.—v. n. to be burnt on the outside; to be dried up.

SCORE, s. [skora, Isl.] a notch cut with an edged instrument; a line drawn; an account kept by notches cut in wood, or by lines drawn by chalk; a debt; an account of something past; part of a debt; a reason or motive; sake. Twenty; probably because twenty, being a round number, was distinguished on tallies by a long score. Music in score, is that which is written each part, either for the voice or for instruments, on a separate staff, but all so as to be read together.

To SCORE, v. a. to set down as a debt; to impute or charge; to mark by a line.

SCORIA, s. [Lat.] dross; recrement.

SCORIOUS, a. [scoria, Lat.] drossy.

To SCORN, v. a. [schernen, Belg. escorner, Fr.] to despise, slight, contemn, vilify, deride, disdain.—v. n. to scoff, or treat with contemptuous language, used with at.

SCORN, a. [escorne, old Fr.] an act of contumely and contempt; slight; scoff; derision. To laugh to scorn, to deride as contemptible.

SCORNER, s. one who treats a person or thing with contempt or ridicule; a despiser; a scoffer.

SCORNFUL, a. disdainful; insolent; looking upon or treating with contempt; acting in defiance.

SCORNFULLY, ad. contemptuously; insolently.

SCORPION, s. [Fr. scorpion, Lat.] in Zoology, a reptile resembling a lobster, but his tail ends in a point, and has a very venomous sting. One of the signs of the Zodiac, which the sun enters about October 24.

SCORPION-GRASS, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, one of the British species of which is the forget-me-not.

SCOT, s. [scot, Fr.] shot; payment. Scot and lot, what is due from a person as a parishioner, &c. Scot free, denotes a person being excused paying his share to his reckoning, or being remitted some punishment.

SCOT, REGINALD, the first opponent of the vulgar superstition respecting witchcraft. He studied at Cambridge, and devoted his leisure to gardening and writing. His Discovery of Witchcraft excited considerable opposition from those who reasoned that if a man should not believe in the devil, he would not believe in God. But he now bears the palm. He died in 1599, at an advanced age.

SCOTLAND, the name of the N. part of the island of Great Britain. It is bounded on all sides by the ocean, except the S., where it is separated from England by the river Tweed, the Cheviot hills, the river Esk, and Solway Frith. It is 380 miles in length, and about 190 in breadth where it is broadest. There are about 300 islands belonging to Scotland, some of which are very considerable. These are called the Western Islands, the Orkneys, and the Shetland Islands. The physical features of the country will be found under GREAT BRITAIN, and the names of the separate counties. Scotland was an independent kingdom till James VI. was called to the throne of England; and in the reign of Queen Anne, the kingdoms were united under the name of Great Britain. Sixteen peers are elected to represent the nobility, and 53 commoners to represent the counties and boroughs, in the same parliament with that of England. There are five universities in Scotland, viz. St. Andrew's, Glasgow, Edinburgh, New Aberdeen, and Old Aberdeen. It is divided into 34 counties, and Edinburgh is the capital. The established religion is the Presbyterian. Pop. 2,620,184.

To SCOTCH, v. a. to cut, or make slight marks with an edged instrument.

SCOTCH, s. a slight cut; a shallow incision.

SCOTOMY, s. [skotoma, from skotos, Gr.] a dizziness or swimming in the head, causing dimness of sight.

SCOTT, SIR MICHAEL, a naturalist and philosopher of Scotland, in the 13th century, whose history has been, through the reverence of the people, darkened by so many legendary tales, that it is difficult to discover the facts of it. He travelled in England, and some parts of the continent, and was knighted by several sovereigns, as well as by the Scottish king. He died in about 1293. Some of his writings exist. But his fame rests chiefly on the allusions to his magical skill made by poets of most European nations.

SCOTT, SIR WALTER, the great novelist, poet, and historical antiquary, was first a law student, and barrister, and rose to be sheriff of the county of Selkirk, and one of the principal clerks of the session of Scotland. He was made a baronet at the coronation of George IV. When the extreme anxiety and toil which followed the crash of his fortunes had preyed greatly on his health, he visited Italy, and returned only to die, in 1832, aged 61 years. Few lives of literary men have been so remarkable as Sir Walter Scott's. The number, the variety, the superior excellence of his writings; the effect produced by them on the writings of those who entered the field after him; the splendour of his connexions; his princely hospitality at Abbotsford; the unparalleled money transactions in which he was involved by his works, and by which he was ultimately ruined; these,—with the incredible fund of anecdote, history, ballads, legends, &c. &c., that he had amassed, and by a most wonderful memory retained, and with which his conversation was as much enriched as his books,—make his history a greater romance than any which he has written. In his early days, he tried his 'prentice hand on translations and editions of old poetry; and came before the world first with the Lay of the Last Minstrel. Amongst the numerous poems that followed, Marmion and the Lady of the Lake may be especially mentioned. When that faculty seemed to grow dull, he commenced his novels, and for a long time unknown he charmed all readers with his Waverley, Guy Rimering, Antiquary, tales of covenanted, and of chivalry; tales of the golden days of Queen Bess, and of the Pretender's rebellions; of Highland catenans, and English Puritans; and continued it with inexhaustible fertility and variety, till the prophets of his failure ceased to vituperate his becoming effete in sheer despair. At last, reduced to a literary drudge, he wrote Lives and Histories, Letters on Witchcraft, Tales of a Grandfather; and ceased not producing till truly death-stricken. The endless series of editions, in all forms, and at every imaginable variety of price;—the numberless translations of them;—the endless illustrations in every style of art;—best attest the hold they have on the taste and feelings of men. Respecting his monetary affairs, it is impossible to make the prodigality and criminality of them apparent, without more space than can be afforded here; they form one of the most portentous warnings against all temptations of "accommodation bills" that the trading world has ever received. And to literary men they are a warning, no less emphatic, against supposing that the powers and reputation of a man of letters may be without guilt, or safely, reduced to the category of mere merchandise.

SCOVEL, s. [scopa, Lat.] a sort of mop for sweeping ovens; a maulkin.

SCOUNDREL, s. [scoundrulo, Ital.] a mean rascal; a low petty villain; a person of base principles and actions.

To SCOUR, v. a. [skur, Dan. schuren, Belg.] to rub a surface hard with any thing tough in order to cleanse it; to remove by scouring; to cleanse, bleach, whiten; to clear from opposition. In Physic, to purge violently. To pass swiftly over, applied to the motions of animals.—v. n. to run with great swiftness; to scamper; to perform the office of cleaning household utensils.

SCOURER, s. one who cleans by rubbing; one who runs swiftly; a purge.

SCOURGE, (scurje) s. [escourge, Fr.] a whip with several cords or thongs; a lash. Figuratively, vindictive affliction; one that afflicts, harasses, or destroys.

To SCOURGE, (scurje) v. a. to lash with a whip; to punish or chastise.

SCOURGER, (scurjer) s. one that chastises; a punisher.

SCOUT, s. [escout, Fr.] one who is sent privily to observe the motions of an enemy; an advice-boat; a person employed on errands in a college.

To SCOUT, v. n. to go out in order to make secret observations on the motions of an enemy.

To SCOWL, (one pron. as in how.) v. n. [scyllian, Sax.] to frown; to look angry, sour, or sullen; to pout.

SCOWL, s. a look of gloom or discontent.

SCOW'LINGLY, ad. sullenly.

To SCRABBLE, (skrabl) v. n. [krabbelen, Belg.] to paw or scratch with the hands; to climb by the hands; to scramble.

SCRAGG, s. [scraghe, Belg.] any thing lean or thin.

SCRAGGED, (skragg-ed) a. [corrupted from craggd,] rough; full of protuberances or asperities.

SCRAGGY, (skragg-y) a. lean; thin; rough or rugged.

To SCRAMBLE, (skrámbli) v. n. [see TO SCRAMBLE] to struggle so as to catch or seize any thing with the hands before another; to climb by the help of the hands, used with up.

SCRAMBLE, (skrámbli) s. an easy struggle for any thing, in which one endeavours to seize before another; the act of climbing by the help of the hands.

SCRAMBLER, s. one that scrambles; one that climbs by the help of the hands.

To SCRANCH, v. a. [schrantzer, Belg.] to grind something cracking or brittle between the teeth.

SCRANNE, a. grating by the sound; vile, worthless.

SCRAP, s. a small piece; a bit, fragment, or crumb.

To SCRAPE, v. a. [scrappen, Sax. scrappen, Belg.] to take off the surface by the action of a sharp instrument; to erase writing with a knife; to collect or gather by great pains, care, and penurious means. To scrape acquaintance, is to curry favour, or insinuate into familiarity.—v. n. to make a harsh noise; to play badly on a fiddle; to make an awkward bow.

SCRAPE, s. [scrup, Swed.] perplexity; difficulty; distress; a bow.

SCRAPE, s. an edged instrument used to scrape with; a thin iron at a door, on which a person cleans his shoes; a miser; a bad player on a fiddle.

To SCRATCH, v. a. [krutzen, Belg.] to mark or tear with slight, uneven, ragged cuts; to tear with the nails; to wound slightly; to wound with any thing keen which leaves a mark or line on the skin; to write or draw awkwardly.

SCRATCH, s. a ragged and shallow cut; a wound given by the nails; a slight wound; a kind of wig.

SCRATCHER, s. he that scratches.

SCRATCHES, s. cracked ulcers or scabs in a horse's foot.

SCRATCHINGLY, ad. with the action of scratching.

SCRAW, s. [Irish and Erse.] surface or scurf.

To SCRAWL, v. a. to draw or mark in an irregular and awkward manner.—v. n. to write ill.

SCRAWL, s. writing performed in an awkward and unskillful manner.

SCRAWLER, s. a clumsy, inelegant writer.

SCRAY, s. in Ornithology, a name of the sea-swallow.

SCREABLE, a. [scree, Lat.] that may be spit out.

To SCREAK, (skreek) v. n. [skrige, Dan.] to make a shrill or hoarse noise, like that of a person terrified, or like that of a rusty hinge; to creak.

SCREAK, (skreek) s. [skrige, Dan.] a shrill noise made by a person on the sight of something terrifying. See SCREECH.

To SCREAM, (skreem) v. n. [shreman, Sax.] to cry out with a shrill voice in terror or agony.

SCREAM, (skreem) s. a shrill loud cry made by a person in terror or pain.

To SCREECH, (see TO SCREAK) v. n. [scrækia, Isl.] to utter a loud shrill cry, when in terror or agony.

SCREECH, s. cry of horror and anguish; harsh, horrid cry.

SCREECHOW, s. in Ornithology, a large kind of owl.

SCREEN, s. [eseran, Fr.] any thing that affords shelter or concealment, or is used to exclude cold or light; a riddle to sift sand, coals, &c. In Ecclesiastical Architecture, a partition of open and ornamental work, of wood, stone, or metal, between the different parts of a church, and particularly between the nave and the chancel.

To SCREEN, v. a. to shelter, hide, or conceal; followed by from.—[cerno, Lat.] to sift; to riddle.

SCREW, s. [scroev, Belg. escrovi, Fr.] in Mechanics, a well-known instrument, the power of which arises from the same principle as that of the inclined plane. Endless Screw, one that revolves on its axis, and by the revolution turns a cogged wheel, &c. Female Screw, a cylindrical hollow, with the threads of the screw cut round its sides. Male Screw, the common screw. Archimedes' Screw, an endless screw, the threads of which were so contrived, that when it was placed in an inclined position with the lower end immersed in water, it raised the water by its revolutions, and poured it out on the level of its upper extremity. The last improvement in steam-packets consists in the use of an endless screw, of no great length, with very broad threads, bedded in the keel of the vessel, instead of paddle-wheels, to propel it.

To SCREW, v. a. to turn by, or fasten with, a screw; to deform by contortions, applied to the face; to squeeze or press; to extort; to oppress.

To SCRIBBLE, (skribli) v. n. [scribillo, diminutive from scribo, Lat.] to write in a careless and incorrect manner.—v. a. to fill with careless writing.

SCRIBBLE, (skribli) s. careless or worthless writing.

SCRIBBLER, s. a petty author; an author of no merit.

SCRIBE, s. [Fr. scriba, Lat.] a writer; a public notary.

Amongst the Jews, a person skilled in the law, and employed in transcribing it for the use of others.

SCRINE, s. [scrinium, Lat.] a coffer or chest; a place where writings or curiosities are deposited.

SCRIP, s. [skreppa, Isl.] a small bag, budget, or satchel.—[scriptio, Lat.] a schedule; a small paper, or writing.

SCRIPTURAL, a. contained in the Sacred Scriptures; biblical.

SCRIPTURE, s. [scriptura, from scribo, Lat.] writing. The Scriptures, or Sacred Scriptures, is a designation of the Bible.

SCRIVENER, s. [scrivano, Lat.] one who draws contracts, or deals in conveying or placing money at interest.

SCROFULA, s. [scrofa, Lat.] in Medicine, the name of the dreadful hereditary disease, commonly called the king's evil, from a superstitious belief that the touch of a crowned king could cure it. Its most common form is a suppurating tumour; but it does not affect one part of the body more than another, nor always show itself so. It is often brought on by damp, and want of exercise and ventilation.

SCROFULOUS, a. diseased with scrofula.

SCROLL, (skróll) s. a writing rolled up into a cylindrical shape.

SCROTOCELE, s. [scrotum, Lat. and cele, Gr.] in Medicine, a hernia of the scrotum.

To SCRUB, v. a. [schrobben, Belg.] to rub hard with something coarse.

SCRUB, s. a mean or base person; any thing mean or despicable; a worn-out broom.

SCRUBBED, SCRUBBY, a. [scrubet, Dan.] mean; dirty; vile; worthless; sorry.

SCRUPLE, (skrüpl) s. [scrupule, Fr. from scrupulus, Lat.] a doubt, difficulty, or perplexity, which the mind cannot easily resolve. In Medicine, a weight, containing 20 grains. Proverbially, any small quantity.

To SCRUPLE, (skrüpl) v. n. to doubt or hesitate.

SCRUPLER, s. one that hesitates; a doubter.

SCRUPULOSITY, s. nice or excessive caution or doubtfulness; fear of acting in any thing which may chance to give offence, or may contradict some precept; tenderness of conscience.

SCRUPULOUS, a. [scrupulosus, Fr. scrupulosus, Lat.] afraid to do or comply for fear of violating any precept, or of hazarding any loss or danger; nice; careful; cautious.

SCRUPULOUSLY, ad. carefully; nicely; anxiously.

SCRUPULOUSNESS, s. the state of being scrupulous.

To SCRUSE, v. a. to squeeze; to crowd.

SCRUTABLE, a. [scrutari, Lat.] discoverable by inquiry.

SCRUTATION, s. [scrutatio, Lat.] search; examination; inquiry.

SCRUTATOR, SCRUTINEER, s. an inquirer; a searcher; an examiner.

To SCRUTINIZE, SCRUTINY, v. to search or examine with exactness.

SCRUTINOUS, a. captious; full of inquiries. A word little used.

SCRUTINY, s. [scrutin, Fr.] a nice, exact, and scrupulous search, examination, or inquiry.

SCRUTOIRE, s. [scribeiro, or escritoire, Fr.] a piece of furniture containing drawers for writings.

To SCUD, v. n. [skutta, Swed.] to run or fly away in a hurry, or with precipitation.

SCUFFLE, (skiffli) s. a confused tumult or broil.

To SCUFFLE, (skiffli) v. n. to fight in a confused and tumultuous manner.

To SCULK, v. a. [skulke, Dan.] to lurk or lie close in hiding-places.

SCULKER, s. a lurker; one who conceals himself through shame or mischief.

SCULL, s. [skola, Isl.] in Anatomy, the bone which defends and includes the brain. A small boat; one who rows in a small boat; a short oar; a great number or shoal of fish.

SCULLCAP, s. a head-piece; night-cap.

SCULLER, s. [skiole, Isl.] a boat which has but one rower; a cock-boat; one that rows a small boat.

SCULLERY, s. [escuelle, Fr.] a place where kitchen utensils, as kettles, dishes, &c., are cleaned and kept.

SCULLION, s. one who washes the dishes, and does the other drudgery of a kitchen.

SCULPTILE, a. [sculpo, Lat.] made by carving.

SCULPTOR, s. [sculpteur, Fr.] one who cuts or carves wood or stone.

SCULPTURE, s. [Fr.] the art of carving wood or stone; carved wood; the art of engraving on copper.

SCUM, s. [schym, Belg. scume, Fr. ekum, Dan. schiuma, Ital.] the froth which rises on the top of any liquor; the dross, refuse, or that part of filth which swims on the top of any liquor in fusion.

To SCUM, v. a. to take off the filth which rises to the top of any liquor when boiling. See TO SKIM.

SCUMMER, s. [escumoir, Fr.] a vessel or instrument with which filth, &c. is taken from the top of any liquor. See SKIMMER.

SCUPPERHOLES, s. [schoepen, Belg.] small holes on the deck of a vessel, through which water is carried into the sea. The leathers over these holes are called scupper-leathers, and the nails with which they are fastened scupper-nails.

SCURF, s. [scurf, Sax. scurff, Dan.] in Medicine, a cutaneous disease, in which the natural exfoliations of the skin are monstrously increased.

SCURFINNESS, s. the state of being scurfy.

SCURRILOUS, a. [scurra, Lat.] low; mean; abusive; lewdly; vulgar; grossly opprobrious.

SCURRILOUSLY, ad. with gross reproach; expressed in gross terms.

SCURRILOUS, a. using low, mean, and vile reproaches; grossly opprobrious; lewdly jocose.

SCURRILOUSLY, ad. with gross reproach; with low buffoonery.

SCURVY, s. in Medicine, a painful and dangerous disease of the skin, arising from peculiar food, &c., and gradually spreading to the mucous lining of the interior organs. It used to be the scourge of the navy, till attention to diet and ventilation were more common amongst captains and officers.

SCURVY, a. affected with the scurfy; vile; base.

SCURVY-GRASS, s. in Botany, a plant supposed to be a specific against the scurfy.

SCUT, s. [skott, Isl.] a tail; applied to such animals as the hare, deer, &c.

SCUTAGE, s. [scutum, Lat.] a tax imposed anciently for furnishing the king's army with men.

SCUTCHEON, s. [succione, Ital.] the shield or bearing of a family, in heraldry. See ESCUTCHEON.

SCUTELLATED, a. [scutella, Lat.] divided into small surfaces.

SCUTIFORM, a. [scutum and forma, Lat.] shaped like a shield.

SCUTTLE, (skütt) s. [scutell, Celt.] a wide shallow vessel; a box for holding coals; a small grate.—[from scud,] a quick pace; an affected hurry in walking. In a ship, the small holes cut for passage from one deck to another, or the windows cut in cabins for the sake of light.

To SCUTTLE, (skütt) v. n. to run with an affected hurry.

SCYLLA, the name of some dangerous rocks in the Straits of Messina, much celebrated by the old poets.

SCYTHE, s. an instrument for mowing grass, &c.

SCYTHIA, in Ancient Geography, the name by which the N. part of European Russia, and all Asiatic Russia, and Tatar were known. The inhabitants were chiefly nomadic tribes, resembling the modern Tatars. The boundaries between it and Sarmatia were not at all accurately defined. No intimate knowledge of the people was possessed, till the inundation of Europe by the vast horde which ultimately overthrew the Roman empire.

SEA, (the a in this word and its following compounds is pron. like ee, as in see.) s. the vast tract of waters encompassing the whole earth; a part or division of those waters; a part of the ocean which lies near and washes the coast of some particular country, from whence it is generally denominated; as, the Irish Sea, the Mediterranean Sea, the Arabian Sea, &c.

SEABAR, s. in Ornithology, a species of sea swallow.

SEABREACH, s. irruption of the sea by breaking the banks.

SEABREEZE, s. a wind blowing from the sea.

SEACABBAGE, s. in Botany, a kind of colewort growing near the sea.

SEACALF, s. in Natural History, a name of the seal.

SEACARP, s. in Ichthyology, a spotted fish that lives among stones and rocks.

SEACHART, s. a map on which the coasts of the sea are delineated.

SEACOA, s. a coal so called because conveyed by the sea; pit-coal.

SEACOAST, s. a shore, or land which borders on the sea.

SEACOMPASS, s. the mariners' compass.

SEACOW, s. in Natural History, a name of the manatee, a kind of seal.

SEAFARER, s. one that travels by sea; a mariner.

SEAFARING, a. used to the sea; travelling by sea.

SEAFENNEL, s. in Botany, a name of the samphire.

SEAFIGHT, s. a battle fought on the sea.

SEAGRASS, s. in Botany, a common plant with grass-like leaves, growing near the sea.

SEAGREEN, a. resembling the colour of the distant sea.

SEAGULL, s. in Natural History, the general name of a large family of birds, that frequent the sea, and live on fish, commonly called seagulls, &c.

SEAHEDGEHOG, s. in Natural History, the common name of the different kinds of echinus.

SEAHOG, s. in Natural History, the porpus.

SEAHOLLY, s. in Botany, a name of the eryngo.

SEAL, (seel) s. [sele, or seol, Sax. seel, Dan.] in Natural History, the name of a large class of marine or amphibious mammalia, especially frequenting the N. seas, and yielding great quantities of oil.—[sigel, Sax.] a small stone, or piece of metal, or glass, on which coats of arms, &c. are engraved, used in fastening of letters, and affixed to writings as a testimony; the impression of a seal in wax, or on a wafer; act of confirmation. The Great Seal is that whereby all patents, commissions, warrants, &c., coming from the king, are sealed. The Privy Seal is that usually first set to grants that are to pass the Great Seal.

To SEAL, (seel) v. a. to close, or fasten; to confirm or attest with a seal; to ratify; to shut or close up, followed by up; to mark with a stamp.—n. to fix a seal, followed by unto.

SEALER, (seeler) s. one who seals.

SEALINGWAX, (seelingswax), s. a composition used in fastening or closing letters.

SEALION, s. in Zoology, a large kind of seal.

SEAM, (seem) s. [seam, Sax.] the edge of cloth where two pieces are joined together; the joining of the planks in a ship; a cicatrice or scar; a measure.—[seme, Sax.] tallow; grease; hog's lard.

To SEAM, (seem) v. a. to join the edges of two pieces of cloth, or to fasten the edges of two pieces of timber together; to mark with a scar.

SEAMAN, s. plur. seamen; a sailor.

SEAMARK, s. a point or mark in the sea, which mariners make use of to direct their course by.

SEAMLESS, (seemless) a. having no visible joining or seam.

SEAN, SEINE, (seine) s. [seign, Sax.] a very large net, used to catch fish in the sea, made like a drag-net, but sometimes without a cord, 200 fathoms in length, and from 2 to 6 fathoms in depth.

SEAPANTHER, s. in Ichthyology, a fish like a lamprey.

SEAPIECE, (seepiece) s. a picture representing a prospect of the sea.

SEAPORT, s. a harbour.

SEA-WATER, s. the water of the ocean.

SEAR, (seer) a. [searian, Sax.] dry; not green.

To SEAR, (seer) v. a. to burn or cauterize.

To SEARCE, (seer) v. a. [sasser, Fr.] to sift finely.

SEARCE, (seer) s. a fine sieve; a bolter.

To SEARCH, (serch) v. a. [chercher, Fr.] to examine into; to explore; to look through; to try; to inquire; to seek after something lost, hid, or unknown. In Surgery, to probe. Used with out, to find by seeking.—v. n. to make inquiry; to try to find, followed by for or after.

SEARCH, (serch) s. inquiry; examination; quest; pursuit; act of seeking.

SEARCHER, (sercher) s. an inquirer; examiner; one who seeks after anything hid or unknown. An officer in London, who examines the bodies of the dead, in order to detect any violence.

SE/ARCLOTH, (searcloth) s. [searclath, Sax.] a plaster.

SE/ASHELL, s. a shell of a sea-fish.

SE/ASHORE, s. the coast of the sea.

SE/ASICK, a. sick on board a vessel at sea; a disorder attending people at their first going to sea.

SE/ASIDE, s. the edge of the sea.

SE/ASON, (seazon) s. [saison, Fr.] one of the four parts of the year; a particular time, or period of time; a fit time; a small space of time; that which gives a relish to food.

To SE/ASON, (seazon) v. a. [assaisonner, Fr.] to mix food with any thing that gives it a high relish; to give a relish to; to fit for any use by time or habit.—v. n. to become fit for any purpose.

SE/ASONABLE, (seazonable) a. done at a proper time; convenient or proper, with respect to time; opportune.

SE/ASONABLENESS, (seazonableness) s. propriety with respect to time.

SE/ASONABLY, ad. properly with respect to time.

SE/ASONER, (seazoner) s. one who seasons, or that which gives a relish to any thing.

SE/ASONING, (seazoning) s. that which is added to any thing to qualify it, or give it a relish.

SE/A-SURGEON, s. a surgeon employed on board a ship.

SE/AT, (seet) s. [setl, old Teut.] a chair, bench, or any thing which supports a person when sitting; a chair of state; throne; tribunal. Figuratively, a post of authority; residence, mansion, or abode; situation.

To SE/AT, (seet) v. a. to place on a seat; to place in a post of authority; to fix or settle in any place; to place in a firm manner, or to fix.

SE/ATERM, s. a word used by sailors.

SE/AWARD, (seaward) a. toward the sea.

SE/AWEEB, s. in Botany, the general name for all submerged marine plants.

SE/BA/CIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to animal fat or tallow.

SE/BA/STIAN, Str. a large and handsome city of Brazil in S. America, capital of the province of Rio Janeiro, and seated at the mouth of the river of that name, which forms a very extensive and commodious harbour. The city is large, well-built, and populous, but standing upon low ground, and surrounded by hills of vast height, is not very healthy. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 22. 54. S. Long. 43. 11. W.

SE/BA/TES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with sebaceous acid.

SE/CANT, s. [seco, Lat.] in Geometry, the right line drawn from the centre of a circle, cutting and meeting with another line called the tangent without it.

To SE/CE/DE, v. n. [secedo, Lat.] to withdraw, or refuse associating in an affair.

SE/CE/DER, s. one who shows his disapprobation by withdrawing.

To SE/CE/RN, v. a. [secerno, Lat.] to separate finer from grosser matter; to make the separations of juices in the body.

SE/CE/SSION, (seeshon) s. [secedo, Lat.] the act of departing; the act of withdrawing from councils or actions. In Ecclesiastical History, the name of a Presbyterian body in Scotland, which has seceded from the Established Kirk, but not altered its form of government, or its doctrinal standards.

SE/CKENDORF, LUDWIG VON, the German historian of Lutheranism, who studied at Strasburg, and, after his travels, held important offices under the Duke of Gotha and other German princes, and finally under the Elector of Brandenburg. He died in 1692, aged 60 years. Beside his great Apologetic History of Lutheranism, he wrote other works on Ecclesiastical History, Politics, &c.

SE/CKER, DR. THOMAS, a distinguished English prelate of the last century. His parents were Dissenters, and he was trained for the ministry amongst them, and had amongst his fellow students the future Bishop Butler, and Dr. Samuel Chandler. After attempting the ministry, he relinquished it, and began to study medicine, but was persuaded to join the Established Church, and entered Oxford. Having completed this new academical course, he became a clergyman, and rose with such rapidity, that 12 years after his ordination he was made Bishop of Bristol. His next step was to the see of Oxford, and his last, to the primate's chair, being made archbishop of Canterbury. He died in 1768, aged 70 years. His learning was celebrated in his time, but he has left no work to sustain his reputation.

To SE/CLU/DE, v. a. [secludo, Lat.] to confine from; to shut up from; to shut out or exclude.

SE/CLUSION, (seclashon) s. the act of confining.

SE/COND, s. [secundus, Lat.] the next in order to the first; inferior; next in value or dignity.

SE/COND, s. [Fr.] one who accompanies another in a duel, to direct or defend him; one who supports or maintains; the sixtieth part of a minute, marked thus [']. In Music, the interval between two adjoining tones.

To SE/COND, v. a. to support, or maintain; to follow in the next place.

SE/CONDARILY, ad. in the second degree or order.

SE/CONDARY, a. not the chief, not the primary or first; acting by commission. A secondary fever, is that which arises after a crisis. A secondary planet, in Astronomy, is a satellite, or moon.

SECONDARY, s. a delegate; a deputy. In Geology, the name assigned in some arrangements of the strata, to all formations from the coal to the chalk.

SE/COND-HAND, s. possession of a thing which has been enjoyed by another before.—a. applied to knowledge, implicit, or borrowed from another. Applied to dress, worn or laid aside by another. At second hand, implies in imitation; borrowed, or transmitted, opposed to primarily, or originally.

SE/CONDLY, ad. in the second place.

SE/COND-RATE, s. the second in order, dignity, or value.—a. for one of the second order.

SE/COND-SIGHT, s. the power of seeing things future, said to be possessed by some of the Scotch highlanders and islanders.

SE/COND-SIGHTED, a. having the power of seeing things future or at a distance.

SE/CRECY, s. privacy; the state of being concealed, or hidden; solitude; retirement; the quality of preserving from discovery; close silence; fidelity to a secret.

SE/CRET, a. [Fr. secretus, Lat.] unrevealed, concealed, kept hidden, or undiscovered; unseen; faithful in keeping a secret, or any thing from discovery; unknown; privy.

SE/CRET, s. something kept from public notice or knowledge; a thing unknown; privacy; secrecy.

SE/CRETARY, s. [secrétaire, Fr.] one intrusted with the management of public business; one who writes for another. Secretary of State, the name borne by the officers of the cabinet ministry in England, who conduct the internal or home affairs of the country; the affairs of the colonies; and the foreign affairs of the state, or the intercourse with the governments of other countries.

SE/CRETARYSHIP, s. the office of a secretary.

To SE/CRE/TE, v. a. [secrno, Lat.] to put aside, or hide. In the animal economy, to separate.

SE/CRE/TION, (sekréshon) s. [secretio, Lat.] in Physiology, the act of separating the various fluids of the body; the fluid separated. This word is applied to a similar process in plants also.

SE/CRETIST, s. a dealer in secrets.

SE/CRETITIOUS, (sekréshious) a. parted by animal secretion.

SE/CRETLY, ad. in such a manner as not to be publicly known; latently; privately.

SE/CRETNESS, s. the quality of being hid, or of keeping a secret.

SE/CRETORY, a. performing the office of separating the fluids. SECT, s. [sekte, Fr. secta, Lat.] a body of men following some particular teacher, or adopting some peculiar tenet.

SE/CTARY, s. [seclaire, Fr.] one who joins with others in the adoption of a peculiar opinion; a follower; a pupil.

SE/CTA/TOR, s. [Lat.] an imitator; a disciple, a follower.

SE/CTION, (seishon) s. [Fr. sectio, from seco, Lat.] a part of a divided thing; the act of dividing; a portion of a chapter, marked thus (§). In Geometry, it denotes a side or surface of a body or figure cut by another; or the place where lines, planes, &c. cut each other. In Architecture, the section of a building is the same with its profile; or a delineation of its heights and depths raised on a plane, as if the fabric were cut asunder so as to show its inside.

SE/CTOR, s. [seclteur, Fr.] in Geometry, is an instrument made of two flat ruled united by a joint, with lines of sines, tangents, secants, equal parts, &c. drawn on them. The use of this instrument cannot be easily described; and the value of it depends so much on the extreme accuracy of its construction, that in most instances it is better to resort to calculations.

SECULAR, a. [secularis, from seculum, Lat. seculier, Fr.] relating to the affairs of the present world, opposed to spiritual or holy; belonging to the laity, in opposition to the clergy, in some communions; happening once in a century. Secular priest, is a person not bound by the rules of any monastic society; opposed to regular. Secular games, in antiquity, were solemn games held among the Romans, once in 100 years, for three days. In Astronomy, it is applied to variations which are operated by the period of the node, and require an immense space of time for their consummation.

SECULARITY, SECULARNESS, s. worldliness, or attention to the things of the present life.

To SECULARIZE, v. a. [seculariser, Fr.] to convert from consecrated to common use.

SECUNDINE, s. [secundae, Lat.] in Anatomy, the after-birth, or membrane in which a fetus is wrapped.

SECURE, s. [securus, Lat.] free from fear, terror, or danger; careless through confidence of being out of danger; safe.

To SECURE, v. a. to ascertain; to make certain; to put out of hazard; to make safe, or place out of the reach of danger; to insure; to make safe or fast.

SECURELY, ad. without fear; carelessly.

SECURITY, s. [securitas, Fr. securitas, from securus, Lat.] the state of being free from fear or danger; want of care from too great a confidence of safety; any thing given as a pledge; a person bound for another; safety; certainty.

SEDAN, s. a kind of covered chair, conveyed by means of poles by two men; a chair.

SEDAN, a town of the department of Ardennes, France. It stands on the Meuse, over which is a bridge, and is fortified, being one of the chief frontier towns. It has some fine buildings, and is particularly active in the woollen manufacture. It is 160 miles from Paris. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 49. 42. N. Long. 4. 45. E.

SEDATE, a. [sedatus, from sedeo, Lat.] tranquil; calm; unruffled; serene; quiet; undisturbed; composed.

SEDATELY, ad. calmly; without disturbance.

SEDATENESS, s. a disposition of mind free from disturbance; calmness; serenity.

SEDATIVE, s. in Medicine, a preparation which has a tendency to produce sleep, but in a somewhat different way from the action of narcotic medicines. In common with them, excess is fatal to life.

SEDENTARINESS, s. the state of being sedentary.

SEDENTARY, a. [sedentaire, Fr. sedentarius, from sedeo, Lat.] passed in sitting still, or without motion and action; inactive or sluggish.

SEDGE, [seeg, Sax.] in Botany, a water-plant, which has the male and female flowers in separate spikes, called also the flag.

SEDGE-WARBLER, s. in Ornithology, a migratory bird, which builds its nest amongst the rushes and flags growing out of marshes, &c. It is not an agreeable songster.

SEDGY, a. overgrown with flags.

SEDIMENT, s. [Fr. sedimentum, from sedeo, Lat.] that which settles at the bottom.

SEDITION, (sedishōn) s. [Fr. seditio, Lat.] a tumult; insurrection; a tumultuous assembly in order to subvert an established government; a political offence of the same kind, but less grave than treason.

SEDITIOUS, (sedishious) a. [seditieux, Fr. seditious, Lat.] turbulent; tumultuously factious.

SEDITIOUSLY, ad. tumultuously; with factious turbulence.

SEDITIONESS, s. turbulence; disposition to sedition.

To SEDUCE, v. a. [seduco, Lat.] to draw aside from the right; to mislead; to tempt; to debauch; to deprave; to deceive.

SEDUCEMENT, s. means used to draw from the right.

SEDUCER, s. a tempter; a corrupter.

SEDUCIBLE, a. corruptible; capable of being drawn aside from the right.

SEDUCTION, s. [Fr.] the act of drawing aside from the right.

SEDULITY, s. [sedulus, Lat.] assiduity; laboriousness; industry; intenseness of endeavour; application.

SEDULOUS, a. assiduous; ambitious; diligent; laborious.

SEDULOUSLY, ad. diligently; industriously; laboriously.

SEDULOUSNESS, s. industry; diligence; assiduity.

SEE, s. [sedes, from sedeo, Lat.] the seat or diocese of a bishop.

To SEE, v. a. preter. I saw, past part. seen; [seon, Sax. siem, Belg.] to perceive by the eye; to discover; to descry; to attend; to observe; to find.—v. n. to have the sense of sight; to discern, so as to be free from deceit, followed by through, or into; to inquire; to be attentive; to scheme; to contrive.

SEE, interj. [the imperative of To see] observe! behold! lo! look!

SEED, s. [Dan. seed, Sax. and Belg.] in Botany, that part of a plant which contains the embryo of a new plant. It is carefully protected, and often furnished with a plume, a wing, a hook, &c. to secure its removal to a fitting spot for germination. It consists of the germ of the new plant, and the seed-lobes, which are destined for its nutriment, when it first begins to grow. An original or first principle; progeny, race, or offspring.

To SEED, v. n. to produce seed.

SEEDBUD, s. in Botany, the lower part of a pointed or pistil, containing the embryo fruit.

SEEDCAKE, s. a cake interspersed with caraway seeds.

SEEDCOAT, s. in Botany, the covering of a seed.

SEEDLING, s. a young plant raised from seed.

SEEDLOBES, s. in Botany, the parts of which the internal substance of the seed is composed.

SEEDPEARL, s. small grains of pearl.

SEEDPLOT, s. the ground on which plants are raised from seed, to be afterwards transplanted.

SEEDTIME, s. the season of sowing.

SEEDVESSEL, s. in Botany, that part of the plant which contains the seeds, and varies very much in character in different plants.

SEEING, a. abounding with seed.

SEEING, s. perception by the eyes; sight; vision.

SEEING, s. SEEING THAT, ad. since, it being so that.

To SEEK, v. a. pret. and past part. sought; [secan, Sax.] to look or search for; to endeavour to gain or find; to pursue by secret machinations.—v. n. to make search, or inquiry; to endeavour after; to make the object of pursuit, followed by after. To seek, is an adverbial expression, implying at a loss, or without expedients or experience.

SEEKER, s. one that seeks or inquires.

To SEEL, v. a. [seeller, Fr.] in Falconry, to close the eyes.—v. n. [syllan, Sax.] applied to vessels, to lean on one side.

SEELY, a. lucky; foolish; simple; silly.

To SEEM, v. n. [ziemen, Teut.] to look alike, appear, or have the appearance of. It seems, signifies that there is appearance, only, without reality; and at other times it is synonymous to forsooth.

SEEMER, s. one that carries an appearance.

SEEMING, s. external or fair appearance; opinion.

SEEMINGLY, ad. in appearance; in show; in semblance.

SEEMLINESS, s. comeliness; grace of appearance; decency; beauty; handsomeness; grace.

SEEMLY, a. [soomelicht, Dan.] decent; becoming; proper; graceful; fit.

SEEMLY, ad. in a decent manner; in a proper manner.

SEEN, a. skilled; versed.

SEEN, past part. of To SEE.

SEER, (see-er) s. one who perceives objects by the sight; one who can foresee future events; a prophet.

To SEESAW, v. a. to move with reciprocating motion.

SEESAW, s. a reciprocating motion.

To SEETH, v. a. pret. I sod or seethed; past part. sodden; [soedan, Sax.] to prepare by hot or boiling water; to boil, or decoct in hot water; to steep in hot water till all its virtues are lost.—v. n. to boil or be hot.

SEETHER, s. a boiler; a pot.

SEETZEN, ULRICH JASPER, a celebrated traveller, who studied at Göttingen, and after making the needful preparation set out, under the auspices of the Duke of Saxe-Gotha, for the interior of Africa. He visited Constantinople, Smyrna, Jerusalem, Aleppo, and Damascus, and made each a centre of exploring excursions, in which he visited many parts not known before to European travellers, and during his stay in which he continued his studies in Arabic and other languages. He afterwards went to Cairo, and travelled in Arabia, having professed Mohammedism, in order to be able to visit Mecca and Medina. But he was (as is generally believed) poisoned by the Imams of Sana, in 1811, aged 44 years. His journals and drawings were recovered, and are very valuable.

SEGE/STAN, a province of Afghanistan, Asia. It lies next to Persia, Belochistan, and Hindustan. The country is in general mountainous; the plains are barren, covered with a fine sand, which is sometimes raised by the wind in such a degree, as to overwhelm whole caravans, and the valleys are the only habitable parts. Zereng is the capital. Very little is known of this country.

SEGMENT, s. [Fr. segmentum, from seco, Lat.] in Geometry, a figure contained between a chord and an arch of the circle, or so much of the circle as is cut off by that chord.

SEGNITY, s. [seguis, Lat.] sluggishness; inactivity.

SEGOVIA, an ancient, large, and handsome city of Spain, in a province of the same name. Here the best cloth in Spain is made, and very fine paper. The cathedral, the castle or alcazar, the royal chapel, and the Mint, are the richest and most remarkable buildings. The aqueduct is a work of the Romans, and is 3000 paces in length, and supported by 177 arches of a prodigious height, consisting of two rows, one placed above the other. It is seated on a mountain between two hills, near the river Araya, 47 miles from Madrid. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 41. 0. N. Long. 3. 48. W.

TO SE/GREGATE, v. a. [seorsum and grex, Lat.] to set apart; to separate from others.

SEGREGATION, s. [Fr.] separating from others.

SE/GUR, LOUIS PHILIPPE, COMTE DE, a French diplomatist. He first fought in America; and was afterwards ambassador to St. Petersburg. During the Revolution, he was sent in the same capacity to Berlin; and on his return was in some danger, but escaped and left France, to which he did not return till the end of the Reign of Terror. He held various offices under the empire; and was made a peer at the restoration; but having taken part with Napoleon during the 100 days, he was deposed from all his dignities on the final establishment of the Bourbons. He is best known now by his writings, which are numerous; the most interesting of which are his Memoirs, and his Political Picture of Europe from 1786 to 1796. He died in 1830, aged 77 years.

SEJANUS, L. ALIUS, the great minister of the Roman emperor Tiberius; who being intrusted with the sole management of the affairs of the empire, and having found that the emperor was not averse to the removal by violence of such as were nearly related to him, attempted to clear the way to the throne for himself. But having advanced too daringly with his project, during the residence of Tiberius at Capree, his plans were suspected; and he was put to death in the most cruel and ignominious manner, in 31 A. D.

SE/IGNIOR, SE/IGNOUR, (señior) s. [seigneur, Fr.] a lord, Grand Seigneur, the title of the emperor of the Turks.

SE/IGNORY, (señiory) s. [seigneurie, Fr.] a lordship; a territory, dominion.

SE/INE, s. See SEAN.

SEINE, one of the chief rivers of France, rising in the hills of Langres, and flowing with a very meandering course in a N. W. direction to the English Channel; which it enters by Havre de Grace, after a course of about 350 miles. The largest of its tributaries is the Marne.

SEINE, a department of France, lying in the midst of the department of Seine et Oise. It is about 15 miles in diameter, being almost circular. It has no considerable hills; the loftiest ground being under 500 feet in elevation. The Seine flows through it. Building-stone and plaster of Paris are largely obtained here. It yields abundance of corn, and common wine, and has plenty of cattle, horses, &c. Paris is its capital; and thus it is an important manufacturing department. Pop. about 1,250,000.

SEINE INFÉRIEURE, a department of France, lying on the N. coast, and bounded by the departments of Somme, Oise, Eure and Calvados. It is about 70 miles long, and 45 broad. It is not very hilly; and the coast line consists almost wholly of chalk cliffs. The Seine is its great river. It is not very rich in mineral wealth; but it produces abundance of corn, fruit, cattle, horses, timber, &c. &c.; and has excellent fisheries, valuable manufactures, and a considerable trade. Rouen is its capital. Pop. about 750,000.

SEINE ET MARNE, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Oise, Seine et Oise, Loiret, Yonne, Aube, and Aisne. It is about 70 miles in length, by about 40 in breadth. It is generally level; and is watered by the two rivers after which it is named, and by their tributary streams. Its chief mineral product is grit, or chert, used in the manufacture of millstones. Corn, wine, cattle, cheese, timber, &c. &c. are abundantly produced. It has some manufactures in the larger towns. Melun is its chief town. Pop. about 350,000.

SEINE ET OISE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Seine et Marne, Loiret, Eure et Loir, Eure, and Oise; and surrounding the department of Seine. It is about 70 miles by 50 in extent. The surface of this tract is diversified by no considerable elevations; and it is watered by the Seine and the Oise, with some smaller rivers. Building-stone, and some kinds of useful earths, are its chief mineral treasures. Corn, fruits, wine, cattle, sheep, &c. &c. are plentifully produced. Several useful manufactures are carried on in the towns, and the pottery of Sèvres is famous every where. Versailles is the capital. Pop. about 400,000.

TO SEIZE, (seeze) v. a. [saïsr, Fr.] to take possession of; to lay hold on by a sudden effort; to grasp; to fasten on; to take forcible possession of by law; to have in one's possession.—v. n. to fix one's grasp on any thing.

SE/IZIN, (seizen) s. [saisine, Fr.] in Law, the act of taking possession; any thing possessed.

SEIZURE, (seizure) s. the act of seizing; the thing seized; possession; the act of taking forcible possession of.

SE/LAH, s. [Heb.] a word which occurs in the Book of Psalms, and the prophecies of Habakkuk, which our translators knew not how to translate, and which commentators do not know how to explain.

SE/LDEN, JOHN, a famous jurist, historical antiquary, and patriot statesman of the 17th century. He was of comparatively humble origin on his father's side, and studied at Oxford, by means of an exhibition given him by Dr. Juxon. Having determined on the law, he entered Clifford's Inn, and afterwards the Inner Temple, where he soon gained no small reputation and practice, both at the bar and otherwise. He also commenced his literary career with the friendship of Ben Jonson, and of others of the stars of the court of letters of the day. He was favoured with a visitation of the learning, wit, and threatenings of King James, on occasion of his great work on Tithes, and strongly counselled the protestation which the House of Commons made against granting supplies without redress of grievances. This last caused his imprisonment, which lasted about a month. He next entered parliament, and here he was engaged most actively in support of the measures which preceded the civil war; for which he was again imprisoned, and continued in confinement, with a few interruptions, for nearly five years; during which time he carried on his literary labours most industriously. In the Long Parliament he figures as a moderate constitutionalist, but sufficiently pledged to the Parliament side to be employed by it in the Assembly of Divines, and to be made keeper of the records in the Tower, though he was once sounded by the king's side, and did not believe love-locks unlovely. He did not give up his episcopate-monarchical dream till the triumph of the Parliament and the conduct of the king demonstrated its hopelessness; and his last political act was to vindicate the independence of parliament from the interference of the Scotch commissioners, during the last effort to conciliate the two contending parties. He never relinquished his studies nor his publications during the whole of his public life; and he died in 1654, aged 70 years. His writings are exceedingly numerous, and various as his extensive learning. His Tithes, Tithes of Honour, Privileges of the Baronage of England, Mare Clausum, (or Defence of the Empire of the Sea claimed by England,) his legal treatises, his works on Hebrew law and customs, are treasures of information even to the present day. A small book of his Table Talk, contains some fine specimens of his clear intelligence and great scholarship. He belonged, in his spirit and politics, though not in fact, to the Cudworths and Lockes, who continued to represent one principal element of the Puritan Revolution, after the magnificent rule of Oliver Cromwell, and the petty contentions that broke out on his death, had passed away.

SE/LDOM, ad. [seldem, or seld, Sax.] not frequent or often; rarely.

To SELE/CT, v. a. [selectum, from seligo, Lat.] to choose by way of preference from others.

SELE/CT, a. chosen, or culled out, from others on account of superior excellence.

SELE/CTION, (selékshon) s. [selectio, from seligo, Lat.] the act of choosing; choice; the collection of things so chosen.

SELE/CTOR, s. one that selects.

SELE/NE, in Heathen Mythology, one of the names under which the moon was worshipped amongst the Greeks.

SELENT/ES, s. in Mineralogy, the moon-stone; a kind of tale. See TALE.

SELENIUM, s. in Chemistry, an elementary substance, brittle, opaque, with a metallic lustre and the aspect of lead when in mass, but of a deep red colour when reduced to powder. It is chiefly found in combination with iron pyrites.

SELENOGRAPHIC, SELENOGRAPHICAL, a. pertaining to the description of the moon.

SELENOGRAPHY, (selénography) s. [selene and grapho, Gr.] a description of the moon.

SELEUCUS NICATOR, one of the generals of Alexander the Great, who on the division of the empire, at the death of Perdiccas, received Babylon as his province. He was first the ally of Antigonus, but afterwards he took part in the wars against him, and at his fall obtained a large accession to his territories, and became the lord of Asia. He next attempted to add the Macedonian kingdom to his dominions, but soon after he passed into Europe he was assassinated by one of his rivals, in 281 B.C. He had all the elements of a great king, and would have been conspicuous in those days as such, had not the madness for conquest been so deeply rooted in him. Yet he founded a dynasty of Syrian kings, called the Seleucids, which only fell before conquering Rome, after flourishing for above 200 years.

SELF, reflex. pron. plural selves; [Teut.] it is used only in connexion with personal pronouns, giving them an emphatic or a reflexive sense. There is some little confusion in the cases of the different pronouns, which usage has suffered this to be attached to.

SELFHEAL, s. in Botany, a plant with oblong egg-shaped leaves, and blue, purplish, or white blossoms, found in pastures, and flowering in August.

SELFISH, a. attentive to one's own interest, with absolute disregard to others; mercenary; sordid; ungenerous.

SELFISHLY, ad. with regard only to one's own interest; without love of others.

SELFISHNESS, s. attention to one's own interest, without any regard to others; self-love.

SELFSAME, a. the very same.

SELJUKS, or SELJUKIANS, a dynasty of Turkish kings, who ruled in the E. provinces of the Mussulman empire in the decline of the power of the caliphs. They were of Tatar origin, and were named after the father of the first king. They began to rule in 1055; and after having produced some of the most valiant warriors and noble princes that have ever ruled in those parts, such as Alp Arslan and Malek Shah, they fell before the Ottoman or Ottoman princes, in about 1300.

SELKIRK, ALEXANDER, a sailor, who, in consequence of some disagreement with his captain, was set on shore on the island of Juan Fernandez, where he lived in complete solitude, a veritable Robinson Crusoe, for above 4 years. De Foe's inimitable romance does not at all depict the poor sailor's condition, which was so forlorn, that he hardly knew his own tongue when he was discovered and brought off. Cowper's verses, though not energetic, are more faithful.

SELKIRK, Selkirkshire. Here is a manufacture of boots and shoes, which has been long established, and another of inkle. It is seated on the river Etrick, 36 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 1675.

SELKIRKSHIRE, a county of Scotland, bounded by Edinburghshire, Berwickshire, Roxburghshire, Dumfriesshire, and Peeblesshire. It is about 24 miles long, and from 8 to 17 wide. It is a hilly country, yielding pasture to innumerable flocks of sheep and black cattle, but the valleys bear good crops of hay and corn. The rivers abound with fish, and the woods with game and birds, both of song and of prey. The principal rivers are the Tweed, the Etrick, the Yarrow, and the Gala. Its capital is Selkirk. Pop. 7900. It sends one member to the imperial parliament.

SELL, s. [selle, Fr.] a saddle. In Building, ground-sell is the lower piece of timber, on which the whole superstructure is raised; window-sell, (called also window-sill), is the bottom piece in a window-frame.

To SELL, v. a. pret. and past part. sold; [syllan, Sax.] to dispose of any thing for money; to vend.—v. n. to carry on trade.

SELLANDERS, s. a kind of sore in the bending of a horse's houghs.

SELLER, s. the person that sells; a vender.

SELTERS WATER, s. the name of the famous mineral water of the duchy of Nassau, Germany, which is largely exported, for use in complaints which only the rich can afford to entertain.

SELVA, the name given to the densely wooded region bordering on the banks of the river Amazon in S. America, which is wholly impervious to men, except by the larger streams and water-courses; and is inhabited chiefly by wild beasts, &c., and a few very barbarous aboriginal tribes. It is computed that the extent of this forest-desert is about 200,000 square miles.

SELVES, plural of SELF.

SEMAPHORE, s. [sema and phero, Gr.] the French name for the telegraph; which see.

SEMBLANCE, s. [Fr.] likeness; resemblance; appearance; show.

SE/MEN, s. [Lat.] the seed of animals or vegetables.

SEMI, s. [Lat.] a word used in composition, and signifying half.

SE/MIBREVE, s. [Fr.] in Music, a note equal to two minims, or four crotchets.

SEMICIR/CLE, (semicircul) s. [semi and circulus, Lat.] a half round; a part of a circle divided by the diameter.

SEMICIR/CULAR, a. half round.

SEMICOLON, s. [semi and kolon, Gr.] a point made thus (;) indicating a close connexion between two sentences both in sense and Grammar.

SEMDIA/METER, s. [semi and diameter, Lat.] half the line which is drawn through the centre of a circle, divides it into two equal parts.

SEMDOUBLE, s. in the Romish breviary, such offices and feasts as are celebrated with less solemnity than the double ones, but yet with more than the single ones.

SEMI/FLU/ID, a. imperfectly fluid.

SEMI/LUNAR, SEMI/LUNARY, a. [semilunaire, Fr.] resembling in form a half moon.

SEMI/METAL, s. in Chemistry, a name formerly given to some substances, now classed with the true metals.

SE/MINAL, a. [semen, Lat.] belonging to seed; contained in the seed; radical.

SEMINA/LITY, s. the nature of seed; the power of being produced.

SEMINARY, s. [seminaire, Fr.] the ground on which any thing is sown; the spot or original stock whence any thing is brought; a place of education.

SEMINA/TION, s. the act of sowing; the act of shedding or dispersing the plants.

SEMIN/FIC, SEMIN/FICAL, a. [semen and facio, Lat.] productive of seed.

SEMI/PEDAL, a. [semi and pes, Lat.] containing half a foot.

SEMIQUA/VER, s. in Music, a note half the length of the quaver.

SEMI/RAMIS, the famous Assyrian queen, wife and successor of the first monarch of that empire. The traditional account of her reign and deeds is such as to justify her being regarded as a mythic personage, and the representative of a whole age. The chief acts ascribed to her are the enlargement and beautifying of Babylon, and the improvement of the surrounding country. No date can be certainly ascribed to her reign.

SEMI/SPHERICAL, (semispherical) a. belonging to half a sphere.

SEMI/TER/IAN, (semiterian) s. in Medicine, a kind of ague.

SEMITIC, a. [from Shem.] a general designation of the Chaldaic, Hebrew, Syriac, Coptic, Æthiopic, and Arabic languages, and their varieties.

SEMITONE, s. in Music, the interval of half a tone, or that between any note and the sharp next above it, or the flat next below it.

SEMI-VOWEL, s. in Grammar, a letter which represents an imperfect sound, as well as the modification of a vowel sound, in which view it is called a consonant. The liquids and syllables, l, m, n, r, s, z, are so called.

SEMPLER, JOHANN SOLOMON, the eminent Rationalist divine of Germany, who was, for a long course of years, theological professor at Halle, and died in 1791, aged 66 years. He was one of the most able and determined rejecters of all supernaturalism in religion, and by his discarding from the sacred narrative every thing of that kind, reduced the Bible to a most unbelievable fragment, purposeless and valueless. He wrote also on ecclesiastical history.

SEMPITERNAL, a. [sempiternus, Fr. from semper and eternus, Lat.] continual; perpetual; without end.

SEMPSTRESS, s. [seamstress, Sax.] a woman who is skilful at needlework.

SE'NA, SE'NNA, s. in Botany and Medicine, a shrub, the leaves of which are much prized for their purgative virtue.

SE'NARE, a. [senarius, Lat.] consisting of six; belonging to the number six.

SE'NATE, s. [senat, Fr. senatus, Lat.] an assembly of counsellors, or of men met together to enact laws, and debate on matters which respect the state; the name of the upper branch of the legislature of the United States, N. America.

SE'NATEHOUSE, s. a place where a public council meets; the place where university examinations are held.

SE'NATOR, s. [Lat.] one that sits in a public council.

SE'NATORIAL, SE'NATORIAN, a. [senatorial, Fr. senatorius, Lat.] belonging to the senate.

To SEND, v. a. pret. and past part. sent: [sendan, Sax. senden, Belg.] to dispatch from one place to another; to commission by authority to go and act; to emit; to produce; to inflict; to grant, as from a distant place; to diffuse; to propagate; to let fly, cast, or shoot—v. n. to deliver up or despatch a message. Followed by to, to desire by message a person to come; to cause to be brought by another.

SE'NECA, LUCIUS ANNÆUS, a celebrated Roman moralist, philosopher, and statesman, in the 1st century. Born in Spain, he studied at Rome, Athens, and Alexandria; and at last undertaking the legal profession, soon rose to some eminence. He was made tutor to Nero, by his mother; and after the accession of his pupil to the imperial throne, on a charge of being accessory to the conspiracy of Piso, he was commanded to put himself to death, which he did with Stoical fortitude, in 65 A. D., aged about 70 years. He wrote several treatises on moral questions, a work on natural history and science, and many epistles, which are of some interest both as revealing the true spirit of Stoicism, and as throwing light on the manners of the times. To him are attributed also some plays, or dramatized stories, which have so little dramatic power that his admirers have been fain to invent another Seneca to whose charge to lay them. It is greatly to be regretted that his character was not pure enough to illustrate his writings, nor yet to make his death a martyrdom.

SE'NECA, a large and beautiful lake in New York, United States. It is 40 miles long, and from 2 to 4 miles wide; and very deep, so as never to be frozen over.

SE'NEFELDER, ALOYS, the inventor of the art of lithography. He was making experiments in printing of various kinds, and was attempting to etch on a prepared surface of stone, in the same way as on copper, when being asked by his mother to make out a list for some domestic purpose, he hastily wrote it on the stone, which, suggesting a novel experiment, resulted in this most useful invention. He subsequently greatly improved upon his first plan, and lived to see his invention raised to one of the foremost places amongst the useful arts. He died in 1834, aged 62 years.

SE'NEGAL, a large river of W. Africa; which rising in the mountain range on the S. of the Great Desert, with a somewhat circuitous course, flows into the Atlantic Ocean, N. of Cape Verde, near St. Louis, by several mouths, after a course of above 1000 miles.

SENEGAMBIA, the name applied to that part of W. Africa lying between the Great Desert and the Atlantic Ocean, and extending from the Great Desert to Sierra Leone. It varies greatly in character in different parts; some portions of it near the seashore being low and level, with richly fertile soil, and other parts, especially near Cape Verde, being broken and rocky. In the interior, the land rises, and passes from a fine table-land country into a very mountainous district, whence the great rivers spring. The Senegal and the Gambia are its chief rivers, but there are many others. Its chief mineral wealth is gold, which is found in the sand of the rivers, and is washed out of the mountains; and in very rude mines in the mountains iron also is found. Several kinds of grain, tropical fruits, valuable timber, &c. &c. grow here abundantly. The population consists of several tribes of negroes, independent of each other, and in different degrees of civilization. Mohammedism has not wholly superseded Fetichism, and the efforts of missionaries have made as yet but little impression. The settlements formed by the Portuguese, French, and English are wholly for trading purposes; and the trade carried on by them consists in the productions of the interior of Africa, as well as those of the country itself. No calculation has been made of the population of this tract.

SENE'SCEENCE, s. [senex, Lat.] the state of growing old.

SENE'SCHAL, (śeneschal) s. [śeneschal, Fr.] a person who formerly had the care of entertainments in great houses; a steward; a major-domo.

SE'NGREEN, s. in Botany, a kind of saxifrage.

SE'NILE, a. [senilis, from senex, Lat.] belonging to old age.

SE'NIOR, s. [Lat.] one older than, or born before, another; an aged person.

SENIORITY, s. the quality of being born before another; priority of birth.

SE'NNA, s. [seno, Lat.] See SENA.

SE'NNA, or MOXOSO/TAPA, a country of Africa, lying opposite to Madagascar. It is level near the sea, but mountainous inland. One large river, with numerous tributaries, waters it. Iron, gold, &c. are found here. Grain of different kinds, coffee, sugar, &c. &c. are grown plentifully. Its capital is of the same name. Population unknown. Lat. 17. 27. S. Long. 35. 2. E. It belongs to Portugal.

SE'NNAR, a country of Africa, lying on the Nile, between Abyssinia and Nubia. Near Abyssinia, and on the W. boundary, it is mountainous, the rest is tolerably level and fertile. The different branches of the Nile are its only rivers. It yields iron and gold; and grain of several different kinds, fruits, timber, &c. &c. are plentifully produced. It has many rude manufactures, but excels in all kinds of articles made of leather. Its trade consists chiefly in the transit of slaves and commodities from the interior of Africa, for which it has some considerable markets. Kartoon is its chief town. It is subject to Egypt. Population unknown.

SE'NNIGHT, (senult) s. [contracted from sevensnight,] a week.

SENSATION, s. [Fr.] in Mental Philosophy, the reception of any impression from the senses. Generally, a deep and vivid impression, accompanied by expressions of emotion. Also, the sense of feeling.

SENSE, s. [sens, Fr. sensus, from sentio, Lat.] in Mental Philosophy, the faculty of receiving, by means of a bodily organ, impressions from the external world. The senses are usually reckoned to be five in number, viz. sight, touch, hearing, taste, and smell, to which some have added that which is exercised by the muscular system, and produces the sensation of resistance or force. This faculty must be distinguished both from the organ by which it is exercised, and the mind which exercises it and receives its impressions. Of the senses of animals we have yet but the most imperfect knowledge. Figuratively, apprehension; understanding; reason, or reasonable meaning; opinion; consciousness; moral perception; meaning.

SENSELESS, a. void of life, perception, reason, understanding, or pity.

SENSELESSLY, ad. in a senseless manner.

SENSIBILITY, s. [sensibilité, Fr.] quickness of sensation; liveliness of emotion; possession of the sense of feeling.

SENSIBLE, (sensibil) a. [Fr. sensibilis, Lat.] having the use of the senses; affected by good or ill, by arguments or pity; reasonable or judicious.

SENSIBLY, ad. in a manner evident to the senses; judiciously.

SENSITIVE, a. [sensitif, Fr.] having sense.

SENSITIVE PLANT, s. in Botany, a genus of plants, the leaves and flowers of which contract themselves when touched, but expand again if left undisturbed.

SENSO'RIUM, Se'nso'ry, s. [sentio, Lat.] in Physiology, that part of the brain with which the nerves of sensation communicate; the seat of sense; an organ of sensation.

SENS'UAL, a. [sensuel, Fr.] consisting in, or depending on, sense; pleasing to the senses; carnal, opposed to spiritual; devoted to sense; lewd; luxurious.

SENS'UALIST, s. a carnal person; one devoted to corporeal pleasures.

SENS'UALITY, s. [sensualité, Fr.] the quality of being lewd, or devoted to corporeal pleasures.

To SENS'UALIZE, v. a. to plunge in sensual pleasures, or to subject the mind to the senses.

SENS'UOUS, a. tender; pathetic; appealing only to the senses. SENT, the past participle of To SEND.

SENTENCE, s. [Fr. sententia, Lat.] the decision of a judge; doom; a moral instruction or maxim, delivered in few words; a short paragraph; a period in writing.

To SENTENCE, v. a. [sentenceier, Fr.] to pass the last judgment; to condemn.

SENTE'NTIOUS, (sententious) a. [sententieux, Fr.] abounding with short periods or moral maxims.

SENTE'NTIOUSLY, ad. in short sentences.

SENTENTIOUSNESS, (sententiousness) s. the quality of abounding in pithy sentences; brevity with strength.

SENTIMENT, s. [Fr.] sense considered distinctly from language; affectation of vivid emotion; a thought exciting emotion.

SENTIMENTAL, a. given to the affectation of emotion; romantic; tending to excite emotion.

SENTINEL, Se'ntry, s. [sentinelle, Fr.] a soldier who watches to prevent surprise; a soldier placed at a particular post.

SEPARABILITY, s. the quality of admitting its parts to be broken or disunited.

SEPARABLE, a. [Fr. separo, Lat.] capable of having the union of its parts broken or disjoined; possible to be disjoined from something.

To SEPARATE, v. a. [separo, Lat.] to break or divide the parts from each other; to disunite; to sever from the rest; to set apart; to segregate; to withdraw, used with from.—v. n. to part from or quit; to be disunited.

SEPARATE, a. divided from the rest; disunited from the other parts; disengaged or abstracted.

SEPARATELY, ad. apart; singly; distinctly.

SEPARATENESS, s. the state of being separate.

SEPARATION, s. [Fr.] the act of breaking the union between parts; disjunction; disunion; a state wherein the two parties do not live together, applied to marriage.

SEPARATIST, s. in Ecclesiastical matters, one who quits the communion of an established church; a seceder.

SEPARATORY, a. used in separation.

SEPIMENT, s. [sepiumentum, from sepio, Lat.] a hedge; a fence.

SEPOSITION, (sepozishon) s. [seorsum and pono, Lat.] the act of setting aside or apart; segregation.

SEPOY, s. the name given to a native soldier in Hindustan.

SEPT, s. [septum, Lat.] a clan, race, tribe, generation.

SEPTEMBER, s. [Lat.] the ninth month of the year; the seventh from March.

SEPTE'NARY, a. [septenarius, from septem, Lat.] consisting of seven.—s. the number seven.

SEPTE'NNIAL, a. [septem and annus, Lat.] lasting seven years; happening once in seven years.

SEPTE'NTRION, s. [septentrio, Lat.] the seven stars, called likewise Charles's Wain, which form part of the constellation of the Great Bear. In Cosmography, it signifies the same with north; and hence septentrional is applied to any thing belonging to the north, as septentrional signs, parallels, &c.

SEPTFOIL, s. in Botany, the upright tormentil.

SEPTIC, SEPTICAL, a. [sepo, Gr.] in Medicine, having the power to produce or increase putrefaction.

SEPTUAG'E'NARY, a. [septuagenaire, from septuaginta, Lat.] consisting of seventy.

SEPTUAG'E'SIMA, s. in the Church Calendar, the third Sunday before the first Sunday in Lent; so called because about 70 days before Easter.

SEPTUAGINT, s. the ancient Greek version of the Old Testament, so called from the supposition that it was the work of seventy-two interpreters. It was made about 280 years B. C., and was much used by those Jews which were dispersed amongst the nations which spoke the Greek tongue; and the study of it has been of great service in the criticism of the New Testament.

SEPTUPLE, a. [septuplex, Lat.] seven times as much.

SEPU'LCHRAI, (sepulchral) a. [Fr. from sepelio, Lat.] belonging to a funeral or the grave.

SEPU'LCHE, (sepulcher) s. [Fr. sepulchrum, Lat.] the cavity in which a dead body is interred; a grave or tomb.

To SEPU'LCHE, (sepulcher) v. a. to bury; to entomb; to inter.

SEPU'LTURE, (sepultura, Lat.) burial; interment.

SEQUA'CIOUS, (sequacious) a. [sequaz, from sequor, Lat.] following, attendant; ductile, pliant.

SEQUEL, s. [sequela, Lat.] the conclusion, or succeeding part; an event; a consequence, or inference.

SEQUENCE, s. [sequor, Lat.] order of succession; series; arrangement. In Gaming, cards which follow one another on the same suit, as 3, 4, 5, or king, queen, &c.

SEQUENT, a. [sequens, Lat.] following; consequential; succeeding.

To SEQUE'STER, v. a. [séquester, Fr.] to separate from the society of others for the sake of privacy; to put aside or remove; to withdraw; to deprive the owner of the use, property, or possession, by regular course of law.

To SEQUE'STRATE, v. n. to separate from company.

SEQUESTRATION, s. [Fr. sequestro, Lat.] separation; retirement; disunion; disjunction. In Common Law, it is setting aside the thing in controversy from the possession of both the parties that contend for it. It is also a kind of execution for debt, in the case of a beneficed clergyman, of the profits of his living, directed to the churchwardens, to receive the same, to satisfy the judgment. In Civil Law, it is used in various senses; and it is also used to signify the gathering up the fruits of a vacant benefice, for the use of the next incumbent of the church.

SEQUESTRA'TOR, s. one who takes from a man the profit of his possessions.

SERAGLIO, (seraglio) s. [Pers.] the palace of a prince or lord; in which sense the houses of the ambassadors of England, France, &c. are, at Constantinople, called seraglios. Used, by way of eminence, for the palace of the grand seignior at Constantinople, where he keeps his court, in which his concubines are lodged, and where the youth are trained up for the principal posts of the empire. Figuratively, a house of lewd women.

SERAPH, (seraf) s. in the plur. seraphim; [saraph, Heb.] in Poetry, and amongst the Jews, one of the orders of angels.

SERAPHIC, SERAPHICAL, (seráfikal) a. [séraphique, Fr.] angelic, or like a seraph.

SERAPHINE, s. a musical instrument, the sound of which is produced by the vibration of metallic tongues, as in the accordion, acted on by wind, as in an organ, admitted to them by keys; externally resembling a piano-forte. It possesses considerable power, and may be made of great sweetness and delicacy of tone by skilful playing.

SERAP'IS, in Heathen Mythology, one of the gods of Egypt, whose character and worship is not very well understood. Yet it was plainly of astronomical origin, and at one time spread far and wide amongst the surrounding nations, and even to Greece and Rome.

SERASQUIE'R, s. a generalissimo or commander-in-chief of the Turkish forces in Europe.

SERE, a. [searum, Sax.] dry or withered.

SERENADE, s. [Fr. serenata, Ital. serenus, Lat.] music or songs with which lovers entertain their mistresses in the night.

To SERENADE, v. a. to entertain with music in the night.

SERENE, a. [seren, Fr. serenus, Lat.] calm, placid, quiet; tranquil, even of mind, untroubled, without any disturbance.

Without clouds or rain, applied to the weather. Also a title of honour given to several princes, and to the principal magistrates of a republic.

SERENELY, ad. calmly; coolly; quietly.

SERENITY, SERENESS, s. calmness; peace; evenness of temper; coolness of mind; tranquillity.

SERGE, (sarge) s. [serge, Fr.] a kind of woollen cloth.

SERGEANT, (serjeant) s. [sergent, Fr. sergente, Ital.] an officer who attends on, or executes the orders of, magistrates. It is the highest degree taken at the Common Law, as that of doctor is of the Civil Law; the court of Common Pleas is allowed them to plead in by themselves, but they are not restrained from pleading in any other court. In the Army, (also spelt sergent), a sergeant is an inferior officer in a company of foot, or troop of dragoons. A title given to some of the king's servants, as sergent chairegeon, sergent painter, &c.

SERJEANT AT ARMS, an officer of the court, having a kind of police duty, in connexion with the different members of the legislature.

SERIES, s. [Lat.] an order wherein things regularly follow and are connected with each other; a course or succession. In Mathematics, it is the term employed to designate a number of algebraic or arithmetical quantities, written down in a particular order, in conformity to some law; and either expressing the last result of a process, or else as being the only process by which certain results can be arrived at. A series is called indefinite, finite, infinite, converging, &c. &c., according to its character. And the laws respecting them belong to the higher branches of mathematical science.

SERINGAPATAM, a fortified town of Mysore, in Hindustan. It is situated on an island in the river Cauvery, over which it has a bridge. It has some fine buildings, and was once the seat of government for the kingdom of Mysore, at which time it was very populous and wealthy; but after the fall of Tippoo Saib, and the subjugation of Mysore by the British, it fell into comparative insignificance. It is about 300 miles from Madras. Pop. under 10,000. Lat. 12. 26. N. Long. 76. 16. E.

SERIOUS, a. [serious, Lat.] grave; solemn; not volatile, opposed to levity; important, weighty, in earnest, opposed to trifling.

SERIOUSLY, ad. gravely; solemnly; in earnest; without levity.

SERIOUSNESS, s. gravity; solemnity; earnest attention.

SERK. See SARK.

SERMOCINATION, s. [sermocinatio, from sermo, Lat.] the act or practice of holding long discourse.

SERMON, s. [Fr. sermon, Lat.] a discourse read or spoken on some text for the instruction of the people.

SEROSITY, s. [serosité, Fr.] in Physiology, the watery part of the blood.

SEROUS, a. [seruus, Fr. from serum, Lat.] thin or watery; adapted to the serum.

SERPENT, s. [Fr. serpens, from serpo, Lat.] in Natural History, a large class of reptiles, which are sufficiently distinguished by not having feet. Their general appearance is well known; and some of the most remarkable, with the British species, are noticed under their respective names. An instrument of music, made in a serpentine form, of considerable power in the bass part, now superseded by the Ophicleide. In Astronomy, a constellation in the northern hemisphere.

SERPENTARIUS, in Astronomy, a constellation of the northern hemisphere.

SERPENTINE, a. [serpens, Lat.] resembling a serpent; winding like a serpent.

SERPENTINE, s. in Mineralogy, a kind of rock, usually of a fine green colour, and believed to be of igneous origin.

SERPIGINOUS, a. diseased with a serpio.

SERPIGO, s. [Lat.] a tetter; a species of herpes: vide serp.

SERRATE, s. [serratus, a. [serra, Lat.] having indentures or jaws, like the teeth of a saw.

SERRATION, s. [serratura, s. indenture like the teeth of a saw.

TO SERRY, v. a. [serrer, Fr.] to press or drive close together.

SERTORIUS, QUINTUS, a Roman who appears very prominently in the latter part of the history of the republic. He first engaged in civil and forensic strife; but afterwards became a captain in the army of Marius. Foreseeing the triumph of Sylla, he went to Spain; where by his courage and skill, and the personal powers by which he surpassed them in their own arts, and admirably contrived appeals to their superstition, he organized a formidable force amongst the natives in opposition to Rome. He gradually gained possession of the whole country, and being joined by some soldiers of his old general, who had escaped from Rome, he extended his conquests into Gaul. Being driven back by Pompey, he turned against him, and defeated him; and after a life of most romantic exploits and adventures, in wrestling with the power of the City, he was assassinated by his lieutenant, in 72 n. c. Pompey killed the assassin when he gave himself up, and destroyed all the documents he brought with him.

SERVAL, s. in Natural History, a wild animal of the cat tribe, found in S. Africa. It is beautifully spotted, and not more ferocious in disposition than the common cat.

SERVANT, s. [Fr. servus, from servo, Lat.] one who is hired and obedient to another.

TO SERVE, v. a. [servio, Lat.] to attend; to obey; to supply with food; to bring in; to do business for another for hire; to supply with anything; to obey as a soldier; to promote; to comply; to satisfy; to stand instead of any thing to one, followed by for; to require.—v. n. to act as a servant; to be in subjection; to attend; to act in war; to produce the end desired; to suit; to condescend; to officiate or minister.

SERVETUS, MICHAEL, a medical practitioner of the 16th century, whose name is well known from his having been burnt as a heretic at Geneva. He was born in Spain, and afterwards settled in Switzerland, where he joined the Reformers, but with no intention of allowing them to play the part of the pope towards him. He published some works in which his notions respecting Trinitarianism were developed; which, not being satisfactory either to the Romanists or to the Swiss leaders, procured his imprisonment at Vienne in France. But after his sentence he escaped, and was imprisoned at Geneva, where he underwent a second trial under the immediate direction of Calvin himself, and was finally, after consultation with all the reforming body, burned slowly to death, in 1553, aged 44 years. His works are little known and little valued now. His death is only one of a thousand proofs of the compatibility of the cruellest fanaticism with the most opposite professions. It is a favourite theme of declamation amongst Arminians and Unitarians, but it is not clear that the proof of the guilty bigotry of Calvin will establish their dogmas, nor is it clear which of these schools has the fairest claim to the use of this quasi-argument for their own opinions.

SERVIA, a tributary principality of Turkey in Europe, adjoining to Austria, and bounded by Wallachia, Bulgaria, Roumelia, and Bosnia. It is about 150 miles long, by 100 broad. It is crossed in every direction by mountain chains, connected with the Dinaric Alps on one side, and the Balkan on the other. The rivers are the Danube, the Sava, the Morava, and their numerous tributaries. It is chiefly a pastoral country, its mineral wealth remaining almost unexplored. Saint Andrya is the seat of government, and Belgrade is one of its chief places. Pop. about 600,000.

SERVICE, s. [Fr. servitium, Lat.] business done for hire; the attendance of a servant; place; office of a servant; attendance on a superior; a profession of respect, intimating a being ready to assist or acknowledge subjection; obedience; employment; military duty; purpose; use; advantage; favour; a course or order of dishes; a paper of sweetmeats. In Botany, a kind of hawthorn; also the mountain ash or quicken-tree. In some Churches, the performance of public acts of devotion.

SERVICEABLE, a. [serviciable, old Fr.] profitable; useful; active; diligent; officious.

SERVILE, a. [servil, Fr. servilis, from servio, Lat.] slavish; meanly submissive, fawning, or cringing; dependent, mean; belonging to slaves.

SERVILELY, ad. meanly; slavishly.

SERVILENESS, SERVILITY, s. base or mean submission and subjection; the condition of a slave.

SERVITOR, s. [serviteur, Fr.] a servant. A student in the university of Oxford, who attends on another for his maintenance and education. See Sizar.

SERVITUDE, s. [Fr. servitus, Lat.] the state of a slave; service; servants, collectively.

SERVILIUS TULLIUS, in the legendary history of Rome, the 6th king. In the accounts which have been drawn up from the old laws and popular traditions, he is represented as being the child of a slave in the household of Tarquin, the Etruscan monarch. Abundant auguries foreshadowed his future fame to the queen Tancquil. On the murder of the king, Servius was appointed to a kind of regency, which ended in confirmed monarchy. He was especially the "good king." His two daughters were married to the two sons of Tarquin, and in spite of glory in a war, and glory in popular domestic administration, out of that marriage sprang woe to him and to Rome. His own daughter conspired with her sister's husband to overthrow the people's king. Having murdered their spouses, they agreed to seize on the kingdom. Young Tarquin's retainers slew Servius; his own daughter insultingly drove her chariot over his corpse. But years afterwards, when the kingly name and title had become odious in Rome through Tarquin's tyranny, the people looked back with fondness to the institutions of this king; and the senate even forbade the public market to be held on the nones of the month, lest the people from the country should join the citizens, and effect by violence the restoration of his laws.

SE'NUM, s. [Lat.] in Physiology, the thin or watery part of the blood.

SE'SAME, SE'SAMUM, s. in Botany, a plant growing in S. Asia and Egypt, the seeds of which are abundantly used for food in those parts, and the name of which is well known to all readers of the story of Ali Baba, in the 1001 Nights.

SESOSTRIS, the name by which Ramesses III., one of the early kings of Egypt, of the dynasty of the Pharaohs, surnamed the Great, is also called. He was a great warrior, and his arms were chiefly directed against wealthy commercial countries, by which he spread his power to the borders of Europe and India. His internal administration of Egypt was equally splendid:—canals, temples, surveys, taxes, all proceeded under his direction, to the great confirmation of the throne, and the enriching of the royal treasury. His names and titles, his wars and triumphs, are to be found on the walls of the temple and palaces at Luxor and Carnac; and though undoubtedly exaggerated, they yet convey the impression of a real and not a mythic personage, and of deeds that deserved his great fame. He flourished about 1500 B. C.

SE'SQUI, s. [Lat.] a word used in composition, signifying one and a half.

SE'SQUIALTER, SE'SQUIALTERAL, a. [sesquialter, Lat.] in Geometry, is a ratio where one quantity or number contains another once and half as much more, as 6 and 9.

SE'SQUILICATE, a. in Mathematics, is the proportion one quantity or number has to another, in the ratio of one and a half to one.

SESS, (for assess), s. a rate, tax, cess charged.

SE'SSION, (se'shōn) s. [Fr. sessio, from sedeo, Lat.] the act of sitting; an assembly of magistrates, or senators; the time or space during which an assembly sits without intermission; a meeting of justices. In Scottish Presbyterianism, the name of the parochial authority, composed of the minister and elders. In academies and colleges, a term of study, occupying the greater part of a year. The ministerial sessions are distinguished into Quarter Sessions, Petty Sessions, and Special Sessions, at each of which particular cases are tried, and local and other business transacted.

SE'STERCE, s. [Fr. sestertium, Lat.] a Roman coin, equal to the fourth part of a denarius. See COINS.

To SET, v. a. pret. and past part. set; [setian, Sax. setten, Belg.] to place or put in any situation, condition, or posture; to regulate, or adjust by some rule; to fix as motionless; to suit or fit to music; to plant; to reduce from a fractured or dislocated state; to intersperse, or mark; to fix; to determine; to place in view, to exhibit as an object, used with before; to take at play; to value, estimate, or rate; to reject or remit for the present, used with by; to fix in metal; to predetermine, or settle; to bring to an edge, by rubbing on a hone. Used with against, to oppose, or to alienate a person's affection from another; with apart, to neglect for a season, or reserve for some particular purpose; with aside, to reject, abrogate, or omit for the present; with down, to mention in writing, or to register; to fix, or establish; to fix on a resolve; with off, to decorate or recommend; with forth, to display, explain, place in order, or show; with on, or upon, to incite, or animate; to attack or assault; to employ in an affair; with out, to begin a discourse or journey; to adorn or embellish; to raise or equip, applied to fleets or armies; to show, display, recommend, or prove; with up, to supply with money for carrying on trade at first; to raise or exalt in power or dignity; to establish or fix; to advance or purpose; to begin a trade openly; to profess publicly; with to, to apply oneself to any undertaking.—v. n. to go below the horizon, applied to the sun, &c.; to be fixed; to be extinguished, or unable to see, applied to the eyes; to fit music to words; to begin a journey; to plant; to catch birds by a dog, that lies down and discovers them. Used with about, to fall to; to begin; with in, to become settled in a particular state; with on, or upon, to begin a journey or enterprise; with out, to have beginning; to begin a journey or course; to begin the world.

SET, part. regular; not loose or careless; made to conform to some rule.

SET, s. a number of things suiting each other, and necessary to form a whole; the apparent sinking of the sun, &c. below the horizon; any thing put into the ground for growth; a wager at dice; a game; a sufficient number of persons to play a game.

SETA'CEOUS, (set'ishuous) a. [seta, Lat.] bristly; set with, or consisting of, strong hairs.

SETON, s. [Fr. seton, Lat.] in Surgery, the state of a wound when the skin is taken up by a needle, and kept open by a twist of hair or silk, that the humours may vent themselves. Among Farriers, a rowel.

SETTEE, s. [setol, Sax.] a large long seat with a back.

SETTERWORT, s. in Botany, a kind of hellebore.

SETTING-DOG, SE'TTER, s. a dog taught to find game, and show it by lying down near it.

SETTLE, (sett) s. [setol, Sax.] a seat or bench.

To SETTLE, (sett) v. a. to place in a certain or safe state after calamity or disturbance; to fix in any place or way of life; to free from ambiguity or doubt; to fix, and make certain or unchangeable; to free from change of opinion; to make close; to fix inseparably or strongly, used with upon; to make the dregs or sediments of liquor fall to the bottom; to put into a state of calmness; to people a country.—v. n. to sink and continue at the bottom; to subside; to fix one's abode; to choose or fix a method of life; to rest or grow calm; to make a jointure for a wife; to contract.

SETTLE, Yorkshire, W. Riding. It is seated on the river Ribble, over which it has a stone bridge, at the foot of the hills which part this county from Lancashire, 231 miles from London. Markets, every Tuesday, and every other Monday for cattle. Pop. 2041.

SETTLEMENT, s. the act of settling; the act of giving possession; a jointure granted a wife; the dregs of liquors; a place where a colony is established; an act of forsaking a roving for a domestic and regular life. In the Poor Laws, the right of receiving relief in a particular union, or parish, determined now by 5 years' industrial residence. This part of the law, as it used to stand, operated most unfavourably to the poor, in effect, chaining them down to a particular spot, and preventing them from attempting to better their condition by seeking work out of their parish. The full effect of the new law cannot yet be known.

SEVEN, a. [seofon, Sax.] consisting of four and three.

SEVENFOLD, a. [seofon foldie, Sax.] repeated or folded seven times; septuple.—ad. in the proportion of seven to one.

SEVENNIGHT. See SEVENIGHT.

SEVENSCORE, a. seven times 20, or 140.

SEVENTEEN, a. [seofontyne, Sax.] seven and ten.

SEVENTEENTH, a. [seofonteotha, Sax.] the ordinal of seventeen; the next after the sixteenth.

SEVENTH, a. [seofontha, Sax.] the next in order to the sixth; containing one part in seven. In Music, the interval between any note and another separated from it in the scale by five others.

SEVENTHLY, ad. in the seventh place.

SEVENTIETH, a. [handseofontigtha, Sax.] the tenth seven times repeated; the seventh part of the tenth part of any thing.

SEVENTY, a. [handseofontig, Sax.] seven times ten.

To SEVER, v. a. [sever, Fr.] to 'part from the rest by force; to distinguish, separate, or put into different orders or places; to keep distinct or apart.—v. n. to make a separation or distinction, followed by between.

SEVERAL, a. different; distinct from one another; divers; many, generally applied to any number more than two; particular, or single; appropriate.

SEVERAL, s. a state of separation; any enclosed or separate place.

SEVERALLY, ad. distinctly; particularly; separately.

SEVERANCE, s. separation; partition.

SEVERE, a. [Fr. severus, Lat.] apt to blame, or punish; rigorous; cruel; sharp, rigid, austere; harsh, strict, morose, censorious, hard, inexorable; painful, afflictive; concise; grave, sober, sedate.

SEVERELY, ad. painfully; ferociously; strictly.

SEVERITY, s. [sévère, Fr. severitas, Lat.] the quality of being severe.

SEVERN, one of the largest rivers in England. It springs from Pliolinnion in Montgomeryshire; and after a course of about 200 miles through the counties of Montgomery, Salop, Worcester, and Gloucester, falls into the Bristol Channel. The Avon and the Wye are its chief tributaries. At its junction with the narrow sea it is about 2 miles across. It is the channel of a considerable trade, which is much increased by the canals. It is subject to the remarkable tidal phenomenon called the Bore (which see).

SEVERUS, the name of two emperors of Rome in the declining days of its power. L. Septimius Severus was proclaimed emperor by the Illyrian army when news was brought of the purchase of the diadem by Didius Julianus. Marching on Rome, he put the purchaser to death, was acknowledged by the senate, and immediately took measures to establish his power and defeat his rivals. Pescennius Niger was defeated near the Issus and slain. Albinus was defeated in Gaul and killed himself. He next engaged in war with the Parthians, and afterwards, to keep his legions employed, undertook an expedition into Britain, where he pushed the Roman dominion farther into Caledonia, and secured his conquest by a new wall from the Clyde to the Forth. At York, on his return, he died, in 211, after a reign of about 17 years. M. Aurelius Alexander Severus had been adopted by Heliogabalus, and succeeded to the throne on his assassination. Although very young, he showed that he did not neglect the careful instructions of his mother; and he endeavoured to restore discipline to the army, and authority to the senate. Having gained a victory over the Persians, he was advancing against the German tribes on the Rhine, when he was murdered by his soldiers, who were tired of his strict discipline, in 235, after a reign of 15 years.

SEVIGNE, MARIE DE RABUTIN CHANTAL, MARC-CHIONESS DE, a French lady, every where renowned for the elegance of her epistolary composition. She lived, after her husband had fallen in a duel, in irreproachable widowhood, devoted to the education of her children, and writing to her friends those letters which have obtained her a posthumous but abiding name. She died in 1696, aged 69 years.

SEVILLE, a large city of Spain, capital of a province of the same name. It stands on the Guadalquivir, and is protected, in appearance, by walls of every style of construction, and entered by above a dozen gates. Though not very regularly built, it is yet a handsome place, from the numerous fine squares, and the many noble public edifices. Of these, the cathedral, with its campanile, the old Moorish palace, and many of the churches and convents, are particularly splendid. There is a university here, and a fine library. It abounds too in works of art, especially by the principal native artists. Its trade is yet of some account, and is carried on by way of Cadiz. Its most illustrious period was under the Moorish kings, and under the Christian kings of the 16th century. Pop. about 125,000. Lat. 37. 25. N. Long. 5. 49. W.

SEVOCAATION, s. [seorsum and voco, Lat.] the act of calling aside.

SEVRES, DEUX, a department of France, bounded by the departments of La Vendée, Charente Inférieure, Charente, Vienne, and Maine et Loire. It is about 75 miles long, by 35 broad. It is hilly, but has no lofty eminences. The rivers are the two Sèvres, (whence its name,) and some smaller streams, tributary to the Loire, &c. A little iron, and some building-stone, &c. are found here. It produces corn, wine, brandy, fruit, cattle, &c. &c. There are many woods also, and too much game, even of the fiercest kind. Niort is the capital. Pop. about 325,000.

TO SEW, (sō v. a. [sua, Lat.] to join or work with threads drawn through by a needle; to drain a pond of its fish.—v. n. to work with a needle and thread.

SEWER, s. [asseur, old Fr.] an officer who serves up a feast.—[issuer, Fr.] a passage for water to run through; an under-ground drain; a natural drain for a tract of country, such as a river. Commissioners of Sewers are persons appointed to attend to the condition of rivers and all outlets for the drainage of the country, and also to the general condition of the coast as it regards inroads of the sea, &c. But in London, this same name is borne by the different bodies of men who have the charge of the artificial drainage (both above and under ground) of the metropolis.

SEX, s. [sexe, Fr. sexis, Lat.] the ground of the distinction of gender, as male, female, and neuter; analogically applied to plants, from the functions of some of the organs on flowers. Used, absolutely, for the female sex.

SEX, [Lat.] a word used in composition, signifying six.

SEXAGENARY, a. [sexaginta, Lat.] aged sixty years.

SEXAGESIMA, s. [Lat.] in the Ecclesiastical Calendar, the second Sunday before Lent; so called because about the 60th day before Easter.

SEXENNIAL, a. [sex and annus, Lat.] lasting six years; happening once in six years.

SEXTAIN, s. [sextans, Lat.] a stanza of six lines.

SEXTANT, s. in Mathematics, denotes the sixth part of a circle, or an arch comprehending sixty degrees. Also, an astronomical instrument made like a quadrant, excepting that its limb comprehends only sixty degrees. In Astronomy, a constellation of the southern hemisphere.

SEXTILE, a. [sextilis, Lat.] in Astronomy, the aspect of two planets when 60 degrees distant, or at the distance of two signs from one another.

SEXTON, s. [corrupted from sacristan,] an under officer who digs graves; sometimes applied to the person who opens pews and preserves order, &c. in a church.

SEXTUPLE, (sextuplus) a. [sextuplus, Lat.] six-fold.

SEXTUS EMPIRICUS, a Greek philosopher of the latter part of the 2nd century. He wrote against all science, even Mathematics, and pushed scepticism to the utmost boundary of human knowledge. His works on Pyrrhonism, and against Mathematicians, are valuable to students of philosophy.

SEXUAL, a. of or belonging to a sex. The Sexual System of Botany, is the system of Linnaeus, whose orders and classes were distinguished by the number, arrangement, &c. of the stamens and pistils of flowers.

SEYCHELLE ARCHIPELAGO, the name of a group of islands lying in the Indian Ocean, almost midway between Madagascar and Hindustan. They are very rocky, except in the valleys, where they produce excellent tropical fruits, &c. They are also frequented for the purpose of catching turtles. On the largest, named Mahé, is a town of the same name. They belong to Great Britain. Pop. under 10,000. Lat. 4. 15. S. Long. 55. 30. E.

SFORZA, the name of a family of great note in the history of the Italian republics. The founder of it, Sforza Attendolo, was a peasant of great bodily strength and courage, who engaged in the service of one of the greatest military leaders of the condottieri, Alberic da Barbiano, and carried out his military system, when he had risen to be a leader himself, with consummate dexterity. He was engaged, now on one side, and now on the other, during the interminable contests of the rival states; but made himself most famous during the contests respecting the kingdom of Naples, between Ladislaus, Louis of Anjou, Joan II., Alphonso of Arragon, &c., in the course of which he was made Count of Cotignola, his native village, by Martin V. He was drowned at the passage of the Pescara, in 1424. Francesco Sforza, his son, succeeded to his father's command, and rendered the name far more illustrious. Joan of Naples raised him to the rank his father had enjoyed, and afterwards he fought in the cause of the Milanese, and then against them, in the course of which wars, though sometimes defeated, he made good his claim to be regarded one of the greatest captains of the age. He now married the daughter of the Duke of Milan, and when, on the Duke's death, Milan was proclaimed a republic, he entered its service, with his veteran army, gained many great advantages for the state during its conflict for existence, and at last turned against the republic, and forcibly made himself Duke of Milan. He was supported in his "tyranny," not merely by his own great abilities, but by the alliance of Cosmo de' Medici, the "tyrant" at Florence; and Milan had little cause to regret his unconstitutional acquisition of the throne. He died in 1466, having been Duke for 16 years. Ludovico Sforza, surnamed the Moor, was first guardian to Galeazzo Sforza's infant son, and in the hope of keeping his power, invited Charles VIII. into Italy, but afterwards aided in the successful opposition made to him. Louis XII., whom the Moor had offended, had an ample revenge, in his defeat and captivity, in which he died, in 1508. The last of the race who appears in history was another Francesco Sforza, son of Ludovico, who received the duchy of Milan as a nominal grant from Charles V. He died in 1535.

SHA/BINESS, s. meanness; paltriness.

SHA/BBY, a. [shauppy, Boh.] mean, with respect to dress; paltry; with respect to conduct.

TO SHA/CKLE, (shákli) v. a. [shaackelen, Belg.] to chain, fetter, bind, or deprive of liberty.

SHA/CKLES, (shákli) s. not used in the singular; [shaackels, Belg.] chains for prisoners; fetters; gyves.

SHAD, s. in Ichthyology, a sea-fish of the herring kind.

SHADDOCK, s. in Botany, a tropical fruit, belonging to the same class as the orange, lemon, &c.

SHADE, s. [schade, Belg.] the darkness made by intercepting the light; obscurity; a place where the rays of the sun are excluded; any thing which intercepts the light; screen; shelter; the parts of a picture painted with dark colours; a colour, or gradation of light; the figure formed by the interception of light; a spirit; a ghost.

TO SHADE, v. a. to intercept the light; to shelter or hide; to cover or screen; to mark with different gradations of colours; to paint in dark colours.

SHA/DINESS, s. the state of being shady.

SHA/DOW, (shádó) s. [eschaduwe, Belg.] the representation of a body by its intercepting the light; darkness; shelter formed by intercepting the light or heat; an obscure or dark place; the dark part of a picture; a ghost, spirit, or shade; an imperfect or faint representation; favour or protection; inseparable companion; a type, or mystical representation.

TO SHA/DOW, (shádó) v. a. to intercept the light; to cloud or darken; to conceal, hide, or screen; to protect; to mark with various gradations of colour or light; to paint in dark colours; to represent imperfectly or typically; to make cool or gently gloomy by the interception of light or heat.

SHA/DOWY, (shádóe) a. gloomy; dark; opaque; typical; faintly representative; unsubstantial.

SHA/DY, a. full of shade; free from the glare of light, or sultriness of heat.

SHAFT, s. [seef, Sax.] an arrow.—[Belg.] a narrow, deep, and perpendicular pit; any thing straight, as the spire of a steeple, the funnel of a chimney, &c. In Botany, a part of the pistil extending upon the seed-bud, and supporting the summit; also called the style.

SHAFTESBURY, Dorsetshire. It stands on a hill, and retains but a small part of its ancient splendour and importance. It is 100 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Population, 3170.

SHAFTESBURY, ANTHONY ASHLEY COOPER, EARL OF, one of the statesmen, or party-leaders, in the reign of Charles II. He was a member of the legal profession, and had studied at Oxford and Lincoln's Inn. He was in one of Charles I.'s parliaments, and was summoned by Cromwell to the convention of Puritan notables, having given signal proofs of antiroyalism. He also sat in Cromwell's parliaments, and was one of his council. He aided the Restoration, and sat at the trial of the regicides. He was, of course, a member of the council, and he uniformly opposed Lord Clarendon; he afterwards formed one of the famous Cabal ministry, and was next made lord chancellor. It was while he held the seals that he opposed the court, and advocated the Test Act, although he had been opposed to it, fellow, the Corporation Act. This caused his dismissal, and he now joined the opposition, in which he distinguished himself so much that he was sent to the Tower, and was forced to humble himself. He next took up the abominable business of Titus Oates, and so got into power again. He used his power to pass the Habeas Corpus act, and to attempt the exclusion of the Duke of York from the succession. His untiring zeal against James led to his dismissal from the council, and to his imprisonment and trial for high treason, but the court could not obtain a verdict even from the grand jury. He had hoped to overturn both Charles and his brother, and secure the crown for the Abolom to whom he was now the Achilles, but the Duke of Monmouth was not popular enough, nor the king and the Duke of York sufficiently unpopular, for this; he therefore left England hastily for Holland, where he died in 1683, aged 61 years. His character is amply shown by his public life, and in his repartee to Charles, admitting himself to be, "for a subject, the most profligate man in England."

SHAFTESBURY, A. A. COOPER, EARL OF, grandson of the preceding, an eminent English philosophical writer. After his return from travelling, he entered parliament, but soon renounced public life because of his feeble health, and visited the continent again, where he became acquainted with the most distinguished literary men of the liberal school. He once appeared again in public, in the House of Lords, but spent the greater part of his time abroad, or in elegant and studious retirement, and died at Naples, in 1713, aged 42 years. His various writings were published with the title of "Characteristics of Men, Manners, &c." The student may derive some help from the perusal of his essays and letters, but the profound reverence for the philosophy of Plato which they display, cannot compensate for the ignorance of man's true condition; nor can the warm and poetical devoutness which animates his deism, compensate for the ignorance respecting the true nature and design of God's revelation in the gospel, which is but too evident.

SHAG, s. [seegaag, Sax.] a kind of cloth or stuff, with a long rough pile of wool or hair; rough woolly hair.

SHAGGED, SHAGGY, (shág-ge, shág-ee) a. ruggedly hairy; rough; rugged.

SHAGREEN, s. [chagrin, Fr.] the skin of a fish remarkably rough.

TO SHAKE, v. a. preter. shook, past part. shaken, or shook; [seacan, Sax. shecken, Belg.] to put into a vibrating motion; to move with quick returns backwards and forwards; to make to totter or tremble; to throw down or off by a violent action; to drive from a resolution, or make afraid. To shake hands, is to pay compliments at meeting, or to take leave. To shake off, to rid oneself from; to free from or divest.—v. n. to tremble, or to be put into a tremulous motion; to be in terror; to totter.

SHAKE, s. concussion; a tottering or tremulous motion. In Music, an ornament in singing, consisting in the rapid and graceful utterance of two notes alternately, at a suitable part of a piece.

SHAKER, s. the person or thing that shakes.

SHAKERS, in Ecclesiastical History, a sect uniting an exaggeration of early enthusiastic Quakerism with cenobitic and misogamic notions. It is of English birth, but has found a more favourable field for development in the United States, where they have several settlements.

SHAKESPEARE, or SHAKSPERE, WILLIAM, the great poet and dramatist, was the son of a substantial yeoman at Stratford-on-Avon, who is misnamed by persons who are not acquainted with the customs of his age, a butcher. He married there, and afterwards removed to London, (not, however, from being caught red-handed in deer-stealing,) and became a theatrical proprietor, actor, and writer for the stage, enjoying the esteem, not only of the other distinguished poets and writers of the golden days of "good Queen Bess," but also of all the patrons of literature which adorned the court. Subsequently, having realized some property, he returned to his native place, and continued the great literary labours he had begun, amidst all the facilities for such studies the vicinity of the Avon afforded; and having begun to enjoy his immortality, died there, in 1616, aged 52 years. Little more than this brief outline of an active life is clearly ascertainable. The pious zeal of biographers has disinterred a great variety of legal and commercial documents and memoranda, and has suggested a host of probabilities respecting the filling up of the wide intervals between the scanty certainties; but it has not, and cannot by such means bring out Shakspeare's life as a genuine reality for our reverent study. The writings which are, and must ever be, Shakspeare for us, consist of a collection of Sonnets, the poems entitled Venus and Adonis, the Rape of Lucrece, and a Lover's Complaint, with parts of the Passionate Pilgrim, and a few other fragments, and his Dramas. Critics have been at the pains of showing us that in all probability Pericles of Tyre and Titus Andronicus were only in part written by the great bard, and that he had also a share in the composition of some, as the Two Noble Kinsmen, not included in his works. They have also, to demonstrate the little that is known of the facts of his life, endeavoured, but almost in vain, to suggest the order and dates at which the genuine plays were written. During the last half century, also, the whole spirit of the students and commentators on Shakspeare has undergone a change; the most unwearied efforts have been made to restore the true readings in many passages which actors and critics had corrupted, and æsthetical science has been employed in raising this favourite child of the Muses to the loftiest place upon their sacred hill. The former notions of Shakspeare's "wild" and "artless" lays, about the penury of scholastic attainments, &c., have been overturned by demonstrations of his profound and all-pervading judgment, of his wide and varied information, and, above all, of his consummate genius in neglecting mere models and players' rules, and deriving his formulae from the most clearly apprehended idea of this species of poetry. No attempt can be made here at the most brief comment on these wonderful works. To criticise them is to criticise humanity itself, in all its manifold developments, nay, in its creative idea. Yet it may be permitted to commend the study of these plays to those who, in the first consciousness of manly intelligence, feel the need of a knowledge of man uncoloured by prejudice or passion, of a cultivation of taste free from the pedantry of their age, and of a vivid picture of the divine height which, purified and chastened, the human mind is able to reach. It is with no unworthy pride that we remember that the poet who can teach this, the "gentle" Shakspeare,—crowned now through above two centuries, by the poets of the most cultivated people, as their joyfully acknowledged chief,—is the son of Saxon England.

SHALE, s. in Geology, the name for all deposits resembling slate. They are finely laminated clays, hardened to various degrees, by heat and pressure.

SHALL, v. defect. [Goth. secal, Sax.] in Grammar, an auxiliary verb of tense used in conjunction with will, to denote future time. See WILL.

SHALLOON, s. a light woollen stuff.

SHALLOP, s. [shaloupe, Fr.] a small boat; a small light vessel.

SHALLOW, (shallow) s. not deep, or at a small distance from the surface; not very knowing or wise, applied to the understanding; not deep, applied to sound.

SHALLOW, (shallow) s. a place wherein the water is not deep, or the bottom of a channel is not a great distance from the surface of the water; a shoal; a shelf; a sand-bank.

SHALLOWBRAINED, a. foolish; trifling; empty.

SHALLOWNESS, (shallowness) s. want of depth, thought, or understanding.

SHALOT. See ESCHALOT.

TO SHAM, v. n. [shammi, Brit.] to trick; to cheat; to delude by false pretences; to obtrude by fraud or folly.

SHAM, s. a fraud or trick; the act of putting on the appearance of what a person is not; an imposture.

SHAM, a. false; counterfeit; pretended.

SHAMBLE, (shamble) s. [schamael, Belg.] a place where cattle are killed, or meat is exposed to sale; a butchery.

SHAMBLING, a. moving in an awkward manner.

SHAME, s. [seam, Sax.] an uneasiness arising in the mind from the consciousness of having done something that may wound one's reputation or bring disgrace; the cause of shame; regard for one's reputation; reproach, ignominy, disgrace, dishonour; bashfulness; shamefacedness.

TO SHAME, v. a. to make a person ashamed by convincing him that he has done something which will forfeit him the esteem of others, or ruin his reputation; to disgrace; to dishonour.—v. n. to be ashamed.

SHAMEFACED, a. easily blushing; easily put out of countenance; bashful.

SHAMEFACEDLY, ad. modestly; bashfully.

SHAMEFACEDNESS, s. the quality of being too fearful of losing the esteem of others, or doing something that may give them a bad opinion; modesty, timidity, bashfulness.

SHAMEFUL, a. such as ought to make a person blush; infamous, disgraceful, ignominious, reproachful.

SHAMEFULLY, ad. ignominiously; infamously; reproachfully.

SHAMELESS, a. wanting shame, or blushing at nothing; regardless of the esteem or opinion of others; impudent, frontless, infamous, reproachful, ignominious, disgraceful.

SHAMELESSNESS, s. impudence; immodesty.

SHAMROCK, s. [Ir.] in Botany, either a kind of trefoil, or a species of oxalis with three leaves, worn as the national emblem by the Irish.

SHANGHAI, a seaport of China. It stands on the river Woosong, which affords a most commodious harbour, the largest ships finding depth enough. It is an extensive place, and is built and adorned after the common Chinese fashion. A very great trade is carried on here; and since the conclusion of the war, and the residence of a British consul here, it has greatly increased. It stands about 10 miles from the sea. Pop. about 500,000. Lat. 31. 10. N. Long. 121. 0. E.

SHANK, s. [seanca, Sax.] the middle joint of the leg; the bone of the leg; the long part of any instrument.

SHANNON, one of the largest rivers in Ireland. It rises in the mountains round Lough Allen, near Sligo, and serves first as a boundary between the shires of Sligo and Leitrim, afterwards between Connaught and Leinster and Munster, and finally it divides the county of Clare from those of Tipperary, Limerick, and Kerry. In its course of above 200 miles it flows through Loughs Allen, Ree, Deirgeart, and several smaller ones, and enters, by a noble estuary, 7 miles wide, the Atlantic Ocean.

TO SHAPE, v. a. preter. shaped, past part. shaped or shapen; [scyppan, Sax. scheppen, Belg.] to form or mould in a particular figure; to adjust; to image or conceive.

SHAPE, s. the form or figure of any thing; the make of the body; a form, or a being of a particular form; an idea or pattern.

SHAPELESS, a. wanting regularity or symmetry.

SHAPELINESS, s. beauty or proportion of form.

SHAPELY, a. well made or formed.

TO SHARE, v. a. [seccan, scyrn, Sax.] to divide or part among many; to partake with others; to cut r separate.—v. n. to have a part.

SHARE, s. a portion, part, or dividend; the blade of a plough that cuts the ground.

SHAREHOLDER, s. the member of a joint-stock company, entitled to dividends, (if there are any), and also subject, to the full amount of his property, to losses.

SHARER, s. a divider; one who participates any thing with others.

SHARK, s. in Ichthyology, a genus of large fishes, very frequent in the tropical seas, remarkable for having their mouths under their muzzles, a great many rows of very formidable teeth, and the most ferocious habits.

SHARP, a. [searp, Sax. scherpe, Belg.] having a keen edge, or an acute point; witty, ingenious, or inventive, applied to the mind; quick, applied to hearing, seeing, or understanding; sour, applied to taste; shrill, applied to sound; severe or cruel, applied to season or disposition; painful; fierce, applied to contest; attentive, or vigilant, followed by look out; subtle; hard; lean; keen, applied to appetite.

SHARP, s. in Music, a sign to show that a note is to be sung or played half a tone higher than it would be if that sign were not there. It is written ♯.

TO SHARP, v. a. to make keen.—v. n. to play thievish tricks.

SHARP, DR. JAMES, the notorious archbishop of St. Andrews, during the Episcopal persecutions under Charles II. He was first a Presbyterian, and a professor at St. Andrews. He was one of the schemers to bring back the king, and actually went to Holland to see him. When the restored and covenanting king began to impose Prelacy on Scotland, Sharp apostatized, and was made primate for his reward. He did nothing to mitigate the ferocities with which the Covenanters were treated, if he did not help in them. Popular opinion affirmed that he was the guilty source of most of their harm, and when he unexpectedly fell into the hands of some of the most resolute of the persecuted party, who were watching for one of his messengers, they regarded it as an interposition of Providence, and slew him, before the eyes of his daughter who accompanied him, in 1679, aged 61 years.

SHARP, GRANVILLE, one of the earliest opponents of slavery in England, and one of the first victors in the cause of emancipation. He held a place in the Ordnance Office, but relinquished it when the American war broke out, from conscientious feelings; and having studied for the law, he resided, without practising, for the rest of his life at the Temple, engaged in his studies, and in works of philanthropy. England owes to his courageous exertions the declaration that there could be no slaves on her soil. It was the first step to the great end reached in 1834. He died in 1813, aged 79 years. He wrote on a great variety of subjects; and one treatise, on the Greek

Article in the New Testament, may be regarded as the origin of Bishop Middleton's famous and conclusive treatise on that subject.

To SHA'RPEN, v. a. to make sharp or pointed; to make quick, applied to the understanding; to increase the appetite; to make shrill or sour.

SHA'RPER, s. a person who deprives others of their property by fraud.

SHA'RPLY, ad. smartly; keenly; acutely.

SHA'RPNESS, s. the quality of cutting or piercing easily; sourness, applied to taste; severity, applied to language or treatment; painfulness; quickness of apprehension, applied to the mind or senses.

SHA'RP-SET, s. hungry; eagerly or vehemently desirous.

SHA'RP-SIGHTED, s. having quick sight.

SHA'RP-VISAGED, s. having a thin or lank countenance.

To SHA'TTER, v. a. [schelteren, Belg.] to break into many pieces.—v. n. to be broken into fragments.

SHA'TTER, s. a fragment of a broken thing.

To SHA'VE, v. a. pret. shaved, past part. shaven or shaved; [scavan, Sax.] to cut hair with a razor; to cut close; to skim by passing lightly over; to cut in thin slices; to strip or oppress by extortion; to pillage.

SHA'VEGRASS, s. in Botany, a kind of horsetail, used by turners to smooth their work.

SHA'VEY, s. one that practises the art of shaving; one closely attentive to his own interest; a robber.

SHA'VING, s. any thin piece pared off from any body.

SHAW, [schooe, Belg.] a thicket or small wood.

SHAW, GEORGE, an eminent writer on natural history. He studied at Oxford and Edinburgh, and became a physician in London; and was finally one of the officers in the Natural History department of the British Museum. He died in 1813, aged 62 years. He edited the Naturalist's Miscellany, and published a work on General Zoology, as well as other books on the same subject.

SHAWFOWL, s. an artificial bird made for fowlers to shoot at. SHAWL, s. a part of the female dress, worn over the neck and shoulders.

SHAWM, SHALM, [schaume, Teut.] a hautboy, or cornet.

SHE, pron. [seo, Sax.] the pronoun demonstrative of the feminine gender, alluding to some woman mentioned before, and sometimes used absolutely for a female or woman. The female of any species.

SHEAF, (sheef) s. plural sheaves; [scæf, Sax. schoof, Belg.] corn tied in a bundle after reaping; any bundle or collection of things tied together.

To SHEAR, (sheer) v. a. preter. shore or sheared, past part. shorn; [scæran, scyren, Sax.] to cut by two blades moving on a rivet; to cut by interception.

SHEARS, (sheers) s. seldom used in the singular; [scædra, Sax.] a cutting instrument, consisting of two blades moving on a rivet, distinguished from scissors by its size. Also, a huge kind of crane, used in dockyards, for raising the masts of ships and inserting them in their places.

SHE'ARER, (sheerer) s. one that clips with shears, particularly one that shears sheep.

SHE'ARWATER, s. in Ornithology, a kind of sea bird, called also the puffin-petrel.

SHEATH, (sheeth) s. [scæthe, Sax.] the case of any thing; the scabbard of a weapon. In Botany, a species of empalement, exemplified in the daffodil, snowdrop, iris, &c.

To SHEATH, SHEATHE, (sheathe) v. a. [scæthan, Sax.] to put in a case or scabbard; to defend or preserve by an outward case or covering; to fit with a sheath.

SHEATHING, s. a covering of copper, or other metal, on a ship's bottom, to preserve the timber.

SHEATHWINGED, s. having hard cases which are folded over the wings, as in the beetle.

To SHED, v. a. [scadan, Sax.] to pour out, or spill; to scatter, or let fall.—v. n. to let fall its parts.

SHED, s. a light covering or pent-house.

SHE'DDER, s. a spiller; one who sheds.

SHEEN, s. brightness; splendour.

SHEEP, s. plural also sheep; [scæp, Sax.] in Zoology, a well-known animal, largely reared in all civilized countries, for its flesh, wool, &c. &c. There are very remarkable varieties of sheep, some having no horns, others having three, four, or five, and some enormous tails, laden with fat.

SHEE'PCOT, s. a small enclosure for sheep.

SHEE'PPOLD, s. [scæpfold, Sax.] an enclosure for sheep.

SHEE'PHOOK, s. a book fastened to a staff, used by shepherds.

SHEE'PISH, a. bashful; meanly diffident.

SHEE'PISHNESS, s. bashfulness; mean diffidence.

SHEE'PSHEARING, s. the act of shearing sheep, and the feast held after it.

SHEER, a. [scyr, Sax.] pure; clear; unmingled.

SHEER, ad. clean; quick; at once.

To SHEER, v. n. amongst seamen, used with off, to steal or slip away.

SHEE'RNNESS, Kent. It is seated on the Isle of Sheppey, where the river Medway falls into the Thames. Here are very extensive dockyards for the royal navy, and the whole town is strongly fortified. It is 46 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 8684.

SHEET, [sceath, Sax.] a broad or large piece of linen; the linen of a bed; any thing expanded; in a ship, the ropes bent to the clews of the sails. Figuratively, the canvass of the sail.

To SHEET, v. a. to supply or furnish with sheets; to cover as with a sheet.

SHEET-ANCHOR, (sheet-anchor) s. the largest anchor in a ship.

SHEFFIELD, Yorkshire, W. Riding. It is celebrated for its various hardware manufactories, which consist particularly of steel cutlery wares, plated goods, and various tools; it has been a staple for knives or whittles, and files, above 300 years. Lead works are also carried on. It stands on the rivers Don, Sheaf, &c., and is surrounded by hills. The rivers afford easy transit for the iron, &c. used in its manufactories. It has many fine buildings, but in the old parts of the town the streets are narrow; the new parts, however, are more commodious; and the surrounding country affords a rich and beautiful variety of landscape. Coal and alum are found in the vicinity. It is 162 miles from London. Market, Tuesday, particularly for corn. Fairs on Tuesday after Trinity Sunday and November 28th. Pop. 68,186.

SHEIK, [s. [Arab.] the name of the chief of a tribe amongst the Arabs.

SHE'KEL, [s. [Heb.] a Jewish coin valued at 2s. 6d. sterling.

SHELDON, DR. GILBERT, an eminent English prelate. He studied at Oxford, and obtained some notice before the Puritan Revolution. During the wars and negotiations he adhered firmly to the king, and was one of the ejected clergy under the Long Parliament. At the Restoration he was made a bishop, and soon afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury. He died in 1677, aged 79 years. He is chiefly known by the erection of the theatre at Oxford, which bears his name; and as the opponent of the Presbyterians and other dissidents.

SHE'LDRAKE, s. in Natural History, a handsome species of duck, found in several of our large rivers.

SHELF, [s. plur. shelves; [scylf, Sax.] a board placed edgewise against a wall on a supporter, so that any thing may be placed on it; a sand-bank, or shallow part of the sea; a rock under shallow water.

SHE'LFY, a. full of hidden rocks or banks; full of dangerous shallows.

SHELL, [s. [schelle, Belg.] the hard covering or external crust of any thing; the external part; the walls and roof of a house; a rough kind of coffin. In Zoology, the covering of an egg; the hard covering of such animals as crabs and lobsters, snails and oysters, and all the numberless kinds resembling them. In Botany, the seed vessel of such plants as the pea, vetch, &c. In Gunnery, a hollow iron ball, used as an explosive projectile. See Bomb.

To SHELL, v. a. to take out of the shell; to strip of the shell.—v. n. to fall off broken shells; to cast the shell.

SHE'LEY, PERCY BYSSHE, one of our most eminent recent poets. He was of a good family, and was educated at Eton and Oxford, from which last place he was expelled for avowing himself an atheist. Soon afterwards he married, most unfortunately, and a separation ensued. He next travelled on the continent, and resided for some time in N. Italy. After his unhappy wife's death, he applied to Chancery for the restoration of his children, unsuccessfully; and before long married the daughter of William Godwin, and the famous champion of women, Mary Wollstonecraft. He soon removed to Italy again, and spent the rest of his life there, being occupied with the production of some of his greatest poems. He was drowned by a sudden squall in the Gulf of Lerici, returning to his own house from Leghorn, in 1822, aged 30 years. His body was burnt, according to the common practice in that part of Italy, with respect to whatever is washed ashore. Lord Byron, Leigh Hunt, and some other attached friends superintended this last rite, and placed his ashes in the tomb of C. Cestius, at Rome. Shelley's character is one very difficult to pronounce upon. His physical weakness and highly-wrought enthusiasm, the disadvantages of his early life, and the needless cruelties inflicted on him for boyish recklessness, his gentleness and generosity, all combined in making him such as his poems every where represent him, a hater of kingcraft and priestcraft, and, most unhappily, one who too often included all religion under the latter designation. Respecting his poetic genius there can be no doubt. Almost all his writings are remarkable for the exquisite music of their versification; and all have a spirituality that makes their perusal resemble a sweet vision rather than a waking exercise of thought. Queen Mab is the embodiment of his hostility to the religion of priests; and the Revolt of Islam, a lofty prophecy of the ultimate emancipation of man from all political and ecclesiastical slavery. The Cenci is one of the grandest tragedies written in modern times; and Prometheus Unbound is such a drama a poet of Greece might have written had he revisited this world in our poet's days. His minor pieces bear the same imprint of the writer's peculiar genius and peculiar views, some of which he borrowed from his wife's parents. Now that the feelings that were raised against him are dying away, his poems are receiving their due praise, and the bard himself will ere long be more charitably, and so more justly, judged.

SHE/LEFISH, s. in Cookery, a fish invested with a hard covering; either testaceous, as oysters, or stustaceous, as lobsters.

SHE/LLY, a. abounding with, or consisting of, shells.

SHE/LLER, s. [scylla, Sax.] a cover from external injury or violence; a protector; defender; the state of being protected; security, defence.

To SHE/LLER, v. a. to cover, defend, or protect from external violence; to harbour; to betake to a cover, followed by under; to conceal.—v. n. to make use of a shelter; to give shelter.

SHE/LLIE, s. in Zoology, the name of a small but strong kind of horse, found in the Shetland Islands.

SHE/LVING, a. sloping; inclining; having declivity.

SHE/LVY, a. shallow; rocky; full of banks.

To SHEND, v. a. preter. and past part. shent; [scendan, Sax. schenden, Belg.] to ruin, spoil, disgrace, or blame; to overpower, surpass.

SHE/NSTONE, WILLIAM, one of the standard English poets, whose works are not much read now, though they contain many beautiful stanzas, being in the old school of pastoral and idyllic poetry, not much inspired by nature or reality. He was a country gentleman, and his estate, called the Leasowes, was deified to match his poetry, and had, and has, some admirers. He died in 1763, aged 49 years.

SHE/PHERD, s. [sheep, phyr, Sax.] one who tends sheep.

SHE/PHERDESS, s. a woman that tends sheep.

SHE/PHERD'S NEEDLE, s. in Botany, the name of some very common kinds of unbelliciferous plants.

SHE/PHERD'S POUCH, s. shepherd's Purse, s. in Botany, a common plant, known by its inversely heart-shaped seed vessels.

SHE/PHERD'S ROD, s. in Botany, a kind of reasel.

SHE/PEY, an island in the county of Kent, divided from the other part of it by a narrow channel. It lies at the mouth of the river Medway, and contains one town, called Queenborough. Pop. 10,741.

SHE/PTON MALLET, Somersetshire. It stands amongst well-watered hills, and the streets are very narrow, steep, and irregular. It has a flourishing manufacture of woollen cloths and stockings. It is 115 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 5265.

SHER/BET, s. [sharbat, Arab.] the juice of lemons or oranges mixed with water and sugar; lemonade.

SHERBORNE, Dorsetshire. It is very pleasantly situated on the Parrot, and has some fine old buildings and ruins. It has a considerable manufacture of silk-throwing, as also of buttons, bone-lace, and haberdashery wares, and had formerly a great trade in medley cloth. It is 116 miles from London. Markets, Thursday and Saturday. Pop. 4758.

SHE/RBURN, Yorkshire, W. Riding. Here is an old and famous free-school. It is situated at the conflux of the Wharfe and Ouse, with a harbour for barges, 181 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3757.

SHE/RARD, DR. WILLIAM, an English botanist, who, during the time of his consulate at Smyrna, collected very diligently plants from the surrounding country, and contributed greatly to the knowledge of the natural history of that part. He left his Herbarium to the university of Oxford, and endowed a botanical professorship. He was also united with several different botanists in their publications. He died in 1728, aged 69 years.

SHE/RIDAN, THOMAS, a teacher of elocution, and an actor, was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and managed a theatre in that city, and afterwards was manager of Drury Lane theatre. He wrote several works, and published a Pronouncing Dictionary, which laid the foundation of many most vicious fashions, not yet wholly eradicated. His lessons in the art of public speaking were not remarkably philosophical. He died in 1788, aged 67 years. His wife, Frances Sheridan, was the writer of an agreeable tale called Nourjahad, which is universally known, and died in 1766, aged 42 years.

SHE/RIDAN, RICHARD BRINSLEY, son of the foregoing, an orator and play-writer of great celebrity. He was educated at Harrow, and first came before the public through an elopement, and two ridiculous duels in consequence. He next appeared as a dramatist, and then as one of the proprietors of Drury Lane theatre. He was now enabled to enter parliament, where he soon attained the highest reputation as a public speaker, and rendered effectual service to Fox, in the conduct of the opposition, during the struggles that preceded and attended the convulsions in France and on the continent generally. He was also for a short time, after Pitt's death, in the ministry. His greatest exploit was his speech on the impeachment of Warren Hastings, which was regarded as one of the most splendid orations ever spoken. The burning of Drury Lane theatre utterly ruined him; and the changes which ensued shut him out of the theatre and the parliament together. A second marriage did not much assist him; and at last, ruined through intemperance and extravagance, he died in the most miserable condition, in 1816, aged 65 years. His character stands self-condemned: at best, he realized one of his own conceptions, Charles Surface. His plays, the Rivals, the School for Scandal, the Duenna, the Stranger, &c., not only kept their places on the stage, but are the source of countless illustrations of men and events on all occasions. The least successful, were only translations or adaptations from old or foreign play-wrights. His witticisms, though usually studied, will never be forgotten. He also wrote some poems, which rank above mediocrity. He was buried with great reverence in Westminster Abbey.

SHE/RIF, s. [Arab.] a title of honour conferred in the East on the members of the families who trace their origin to Mohammed.

SHE/RIFF, s. plur. shrieves; [sciregere, Sax.] an officer of a county, who is to see the king's orders executed, to impanel juries, bring causes and criminals to trial, &c.

SHE/RIFALTY, SHE/RIFDOM, SHE/RIFSHIP, or SHE/RIFFWICK, the office or jurisdiction of a sheriff.

SHE/RLOCK, DR. THOMAS, son of the author of a Practical Treatise on Death, an eminent English prelate. He studied at Cambridge, and was largely mixed up in the political and polemical contentions of the day. He held at last the bishopric of London, and died in 1761, aged 83 years. His numerous works consist of sermons, which yet find readers and admirers; some essays on Christian Evidences, of which his Trial of the Witnesses of the Resurrection is much praised by some, &c. &c.

SHE/RRIES, SHE/RRY, s. [from Xeres, a town of Andalusia in Spain.] a kind of Spanish wine.

SHE/RWOOD, the name of a once famous and extensive tract of forest in England, covering good part of Nottinghamshire. It is now almost all under the plough. It was the favourite haunt of Robin Hood and his merry men, according to the old ballads.

SHE/TLAND, the general name of about 40 islands, which lie about 100 miles N. N. E. of Caithness-shire, between 59.56 and 61.11. N. Lat. The names of the principal are Mainland, Yell, Unst, and Lule or Thule. The fisheries and fowling occupy most attention. Agriculture, &c. is necessarily very unimportant. Shetlands or Shetland ponies are reared for exportation. Lerwick is the capital. Shetland, with Orkney, forms one of the counties of Scotland. Pop. 30,558. See ORKNEY, MAINLAND, &c.

SHEW. See SHOE.

SHIDE, s. [seeidan, Sax.] a board; a cutting.

SHIELD, (sheeld) s. [scylde, Sax.] a buckler; a broad piece of defensive armour, held on the left arm to ward off darts or blows; defence or protection; a protector. In Heraldry, the scutcheon on which the bearings of an armoury are placed.

To SHIELD, (sheeld) v. a. [scyldean, Sax.] to cover with a shield. Figuratively, to defend; to secure.

SHIELDS, SOUTH, Durham. It is the chief place where ships take in their loading of coals, and where they make large quantities of salt. It stands at the mouth of the river Tyne, 282 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 9082.

To SHIFT, v. n. to change place; to change or give place to something else; to change clothes, especially linen; to find some expedient for subsistence or safety; to practice indirect methods.—v. a. to change or alter. Followed by away, to send a person away by some expedient. Used with off, to defer or put away by some expedient.

SHIFT, s. an expedient; a last resource; an evasion or artifice; a linen garment worn by women.

SHYFTER, s. a sly, artful fellow.

SHYFTLESS, a. wanting expedients; wanting means to act or live.

SHILLING, s. [scild, Sax.] a silver coin in value 12 pence, or the twentieth part of a pound sterling.

SHALL-I-SHALL-I, ad. [a corrupt reduplication of shall I?] in a hesitating manner; in suspense.

SHIN, s. [scina, Sax.] the forepart of the leg.

To SHINE, v. n. pret. shone or shined; [scinan, Sax.] to glisten; to emit light or brightness; to appear glossy; to be gay, beautiful, conspicuous, or eminent; to enlighten. Followed by upon, to show favour, or be propitious.

SHINE, s. splendour or brightness; fair weather.

SHINGLE, s. in Geology, the loose and completely water-worn gravel on the sea-shore.

SHINGLES, s. [schindel, Teut.] small pieces of wood in form like a wedge, used in covering roofs instead of tiles.

SHINY, a. bright; splendid; lustrous.

SHIP, s. [scip, scyp, Sax.] a termination used in composition, signifying office or employment.

SHIP, s. [scip, Sax. schippen, Belg.] a general name for all great vessels with sails, fit for navigation on the sea; but in sea language more particularly applied to a vessel furnished with three masts.

To SHIP, v. a. to put into, or transport in, a ship.

SHIPBOARD, ad. used with on, within or on board a ship.

SHIPBUILDING, s. the art of constructing ships, in which the most recondite mathematical investigations are applied to the determination of the forms and arrangement of all parts of ships, so as to secure strength, swiftness, lightness for manœuvring, &c.

SHIPMASTER, s. the master of a ship.

SHIPMONEY, s. an imposition which was anciently charged upon the ports, towns, cities, and counties, by writs commonly called ship-writs. It was revived by Charles I., but was afterwards declared to be contrary to the laws and statutes of the realm.

SHIPWRECK, s. the destruction of ships by rocks, shallows, shelves, &c.; the parts of a shattered ship; destruction or miscarriage.

To SHIPWRECK, v. a. to destroy by dashing on rocks or shelves; to reduce to a deplorable condition.

SHIPWRIGHT, (shiprit) s. a builder of ships.

SHIRE, s. [scir, from sciran, Sax.] a division of a kingdom; a county; a part of the kingdom under the sheriff.

SHIRLEY, JAMES, an English dramatist of the 17th century. He was educated at Oxford for the church; but afterwards he adopted the Roman faith, and resorted to dramatic writing as a means of support. He served on the king's side in the civil wars; and when fighting and play-writing were both hopeless trades for him, commenced school-keeping, till the sunny days of the Restoration; when he flourished in his proper sphere, until the fire of London destroyed his property and broke his heart. He died in 1666, aged 72 years. Some of his plays are said to have crept into the editions of Beaumont and Fletcher; which sufficiently, but perhaps too favourably, characterizes them.

SHIRT, s. [shiert, Dan.] a linen garment worn by men.

To SHIRT, v. a. to cover or clothe with a shirt.

SHIVE, s. [schyve, Belg.] a slice of bread; a thick splinter cut off from the main substance.

To SHIVER, v. n. [schaerren, Teut.] to quake or shudder as with cold or fear.—[schyve, Belg.] to fall at once into many parts.—v. a. to break by one act into many pieces; to shatter.

SHIVER, s. a fragment of a thing broken into many pieces.

SHOAL, (shöl) s. [scöle, Sax.] a great number of fishes swimming together; a sand-bank, or shallow place.

To SHOAL, (shöl) v. n. to throng or crowd together; to be shallow; to become shallow.

SHOALY, (shöl) a. shallow; obstructed with banks.

SHOALY, (shöl) a. full of shoals.

SHOCK, s. [schoc, Fr. from schocken, Belg.] the force with which two bodies moving in contrary directions meet; external violence or concussion; the sudden convulsion experienced on receiving a charge of electricity; the conflict of armies; an offence, or impression of disgust.—[schocke, old Belg.] a pile of six sheaves of corn.—[from shag,] a rough dog; a short head of hair.

To SHOCK, v. a. [schocken, Belg.] to shake by violence; to offend or disgust.—v. n. to be offensive; to build up piles of sheaves.

SHOD, for shoed, the preter, and past part. of To SHOE.

SHOE, s. plural shoes, formerly shoon; [seco, Sax. schoe, Belg.]

a cover for the foot.

To SHOE, v. a. preter. and past part. shod; to fit with, or put on, a shoe; to cover at the bottom.

SHOE/MAKER, s. one whose business is to make shoes.

SHONE, the preter. and past part. of To SHINE.

SHOOK, the preter. of To SHAKE.

To SHOOT, v. a. preter. shot, past part. shot or shotten; [seeotan, Sax.] to discharge any thing so as to make it fly with speed and violence; to discharge from a bow or gun; to let off; to hit with any thing discharged from a bow or gun; to sprout or grow, applied to vegetables; to emit or dart; to fit to each other; to push forward; to pass through with speed.—v. n. to be emitted; to germinate; to protuberate, or stick out, followed by out; to become any thing suddenly, used with up; to move along swiftly; to be affected with a quick and intermitting pain.

SHOOT, s. the act or impression of any thing discharged from a bow, &c.; the act of hitting or endeavouring to hit with something discharged from a bow or gun.—[schuten, Belg.] a branch issuing from the main stock.

SHOOTER, s. an archer; a gunner.

SHOOTING STARS, called also FALLING STARS, in Meteorology, are a very common kind of small aerolites. See AEROLITES.

SHOP, s. [secep, Sax.] a place where any thing is sold; a room in which manufactures are carried on.

SHOP/KEEPER, s. a trader who sells in a shop; a retail dealer.

SHOP/LIFTER, s. one who upon pretence of buying goods in a shop, takes an opportunity to steal them.

SHOP/MAN, s. a petty trader; one who serves in a shop.

SHORE, s. [score, Sax.] the coast or land which borders on the sea; a drain [see SEWER].—[schoreen, Belg.] the support of a building; a buttress.

To SHORE, v. a. to prop, or support from falling; followed by up.

SHOREHAM, NEW, Sussex. It stands at the mouth of the river Adur, over which are two bridges. The harbour's mouth being often enclosed with a bar of sand, large vessels cannot enter, but it carries on a brisk trade by small craft. It is 56 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 1998.

SHORLING, s. the felt or skin of a sheep shorn.

SHORN, past part. of To SHEAR.

SHORT, a. [seort, Sax.] measuring little, opposed to long; not long in space or extent; of small continuance; repeated by quick returns; not equal to a person's merits and excellences; defective; scanty; wanting; not able to attain an end, after fall; not long distant, or coming soon; quick or unexpected; not going so far as was intended; narrow; brittle.

SHORT, s. a concise or summary account.

To SHORTEN, v. a. to deprive of length, applied to space or time; to contract or abbreviate; to hinder from going on; to cut off; to defeat; to lop.

SHORTHAND, s. a method of writing so as to save time and paper, commonly called Stenography.

SHORTLIVED, a. not living or lasting long.

SHORTLY, ad. quickly; briefly.

SHORTNESS, s. the quality of being short, either in time or space; brevity; conciseness; deficiency; imperfection.

SHORTRIBS, s. in Anatomy, the ribs below the sternum.

SHORTSIGHTED, (shortsighted) a. unable to see far.

SHORTSIGHTEDNESS, s. in Ophthalmic Surgery, defect of sight, occasioned by the convexity of the crystalline humour. See EYE. Figuratively, intellectual darkness.

SHORTWINDED, a. asthmatic.

SHOT, the preter. and past part. of To SHOOT.

SHOT, s. [shot, Belg.] the act of shooting; any thing discharged from a gun; a globe of lead used in charging fire-arms.—[escot, Fr.] a sum charged, or a reckoning.

SHOTTEN, a. without rest; having ejected its spawn.

To SHOVE, v. a. [scuyren, Belg. scufan, Sax.] to push by main strength; to drive a vessel by means of a pole thrust hard against the bottom of the water; to push or rush against.—v. n. to push before one; to row in a boat by means of a pole thrust against the bottom of a river.

SHOVE, s. the act of shoving; a. push.

SHOVEL, s. [scoff, Sax. schoffel, Belg.] an instrument with a broad blade raised on the edges, and a long handle, used in throwing coals on a fire, &c.

To SHOVEL, v. a. to throw or heap with a shovel; to gather in great quantities.

SHOVEL, SIR CLOUDESLEY, an eminent British admiral, who rose wholly by his own courage and skill in his profession. His first distinguished exploit was the burning of the shipping of the Dey of Tripoli: he afterwards shared in the glory of the victory of La Hogue. He perished in a fearful wreck on the Scilly Islands, in 1705, aged 55 years.

SHOVELLER, s. in Ornithology, a name of the spoonbill.

SHOULD, (shuld) v. n. [scude, Belg. sceodan, Sax.] an auxiliary verb, used in the conjunctive mood, and generally implies business or duty; as, "I should go," i. e. it is my business or duty to go. When preceded by if, it implies chance; as, "If I should go," i. e. if it happen that I go.

SHOULDER, s. [scholder, Belg.] in Anatomy, the joint which connects the arm to the body. In Cookery, the upper part of the fore leg. A rising part or prominence.

To SHOULDER, v. a. to push with violence and insolence; to put upon the shoulder.

SHOULDERBLADE, s. in Anatomy, the blade-bone to which the arm is connected; the scapula.

To SHOUT, v. n. to cry aloud in triumph, joy, or exultation.

SHOUT, s. a loud and vehement cry of joy, triumph, or exultation.

SHOUTER, s. he who shouts.

To SHOW, (shō) v. a. preter. showed and shown, past part. shown; [scowen, Belg.] to produce to the sight or view; to prove, or give a proof; to publish or proclaim, followed by forth; to make known; to offer; to afford; to direct, or point out the way; to explain, teach, or tell.—v. n. to appear; to have the appearance; to be in appearance.

SHOW, (shō) s. a spectacle, or any thing remarkable, exposed to view for money; a superficial or mere external appearance; an ostentatious display; an object attracting attention or notice; a splendid appearance; likeness; speciousness.

SHOWBREAD, SHEWBREAD, s. amongst the Jews, the twelve loaves of bread that the priest of the week placed every sabbath day on the golden table, in the holy place of the temple.

SHOWER, (the one in this word and the two following is pronounced as in now.) s. [scheure, Belg.] a moderate or violent fall of rain; any thing descending thick; any profusion, or liberal distribution.

To SHOW-ER, v. a. to wet with rain; to pour down; to distribute liberally or profusely.—v. n. to be rainy.

SHOWERY, a. rainy.

SHOWISH, (shish) a. gaudy; splendid; ostentatious.

SHOWN, preter. and past part. of To SHOW.

SHOWY, a. ostentatious.

SHRANK, preter. of To SHRINK.

To SHRED, v. a. preter. shred; [screadan, Sax.] to cut into small or thin pieces, commonly used of cloth or herbs.

SHRED, s. a small piece cut off; a fragment.

SHREW, s. [schreyen, Teut.] a turbulent, clamorous woman; a scold.

SHREWD, a. [contracted from shreved] having the qualities of a shrew; malicious; mischievous; troublesome; cunning; arch; subtle; maliciously sly; bad; painful, pinching.

SHREWDLY, ad. mischievously; vexatiously; with strong suspicion.

SHREWDNESS, s. sly cunning; archness; petulance.

SHREWSHIRE, s. possessing the qualities of a shrew.

SHREWMOUSE, s. [sericena, Sax.] in Zoology, a small animal with a long nose, allied to the water-rat.

SHREWSBURY, Shropshire, the capital of the county, so called from the Saxon word Scrobesberie, which signifies a town built on a woody hill. It is well built, well lighted, and well paved, and is the chief mart for a coarse kind of woollen cloth made in Montgomeryshire, called Welch webs, which are bought up in all parts of the country, and dressed here. Much of the Welch flannel is also bought at Welchpool by the drapers of this place, which is indeed a common mart for all sorts of Welch commodities. One great ornament of this town is the Quarry, one of the finest promenades in England. It is beautifully situated in a sort of horseshoe, formed by the river Severn, 154 miles from London. Markets, for corn, cattle, and provisions, Wednesday and Saturday; and Thursday, for Welch cottons, friezes, and flannels. Fairs, Saturday after March 15, Wednesday after Easter week, Wednesday before Holy Thursday, July 3, August 12, October 2, and December 12. Pop. 21,517.

To SHRIEK, (shreek) v. n. [skrieger, Dan.] to cry out with anguish or terror; to scream.

SHRIEK, s. [skrieg, Dan. sericicio, Ital.] a loud cry caused by anguish or terror.

SHRIFF, s. [scrift, Sax.] confession made to a priest.

SHRIKE, s. in Ornithology, the name of a small kind of bird of prey, some species of which are found in England, and are known by the names of butcher-bird and nine-killer.

SHRILL, a. [probably formed from the sound,] sounding with a piercing and tremulous noise.

To SHRILL, v. n. to sound sharp and quick.

SHRILLENSS, s. the quality of being shrill.

SHRIMP, s. [serympe, Dan.] in Natural History, a small crustaceous marine animal, reckoned very delicate eating.

SHRINE, s. [scrin, Sax. from serinium, Lat.] a case in which something sacred is reposed; an altar.

To SHRINK, v. n. preter. shrank or shrank, participle shrank or shrunken; [serincan, Sax.] to contract into less room; to shrivel from loss of moisture; to withdraw or fall back, in order to avoid danger.—v. a. to lessen the measure of a thing by contracting it.

SHRINK, s. corrugation; contraction of the body into less compass, from fear or horror.

SHRINKER, s. one that shrinks.

To SHRIVE, v. a. pret. shrove; [scrifan, Sax.] to hear at confession; to confess a person.

To SHRIVEL, v. n. [schrankpelen, Belg.] to contract itself into wrinkles.—v. a. to make a thing contract into wrinkles, used with up.

SHROPSHIRE, an English county, 44 miles in length, and 28 in breadth; bounded by Cheshire, Denbighshire, Montgomeryshire, Herefordshire, and Staffordshire. It contains 170 parishes, and 16 market towns. The principal rivers are, the Severn, which runs through the midst of the county, the Teme, the Clun, and the Rea, with several other small streams. The W. and S. parts are mountainous, some points being nearly 2000 feet high, and several surpassing 1000; but the E. and N. more plain and level; however, the soil is pretty fertile every where, yielding corn and pastures, besides coal, iron, and other commodities. The air is sharp on the tops of the hills and mountains, but in the lower parts temperate enough. The great branches of manufacturing industry carried on here, are all kinds of iron-works, woollens, and china, earthenware, &c. Shrewsbury is the capital. Pop. 239,048. It sends 11 members to parliament.

SHROPSHIRE

REFERENCE TO
 1. Shropshire North
 2. Shropshire South
 3. Shropshire West
 4. Shropshire East
 5. Shropshire South West
 6. Shropshire South East
 7. Shropshire North West
 8. Shropshire North East

THE HUNDREDS

1. Ewebury
2. Ewebury
3. Ewebury
4. Ewebury
5. Ewebury
6. Ewebury
7. Ewebury
8. Ewebury
9. Ewebury
10. Ewebury
11. Ewebury
12. Ewebury
13. Ewebury
14. Ewebury
15. Ewebury
16. Ewebury

PART OF FLINT

LUDLOW CASTLE

BRIDGE NORTH OF

GRAMMAR SCHOOL SHREWSBURY

Scale of Miles

SHROUD, s. [serud, Sax.] a cover or shelter; a winding-sheet or dress of a dead person; ropes turned as ladders, from the sides of the ship to the topmasts.

To SHROUD, v. a. to dress in a shroud; to shelter from danger; to cover, hide, or conceal; to defend or protect.—v. n. to harbour or take shelter.

SHROVE, preter. of To SHRIVE.

SHROVETIDE, SHROVETUSDAY, s. [from shrove and tide or Tuesday.] in the Church Calendar, the time of confession; the day before Ash Wednesday, or Lent, on which anciently persons went to confession.

SHRUB, s. [scribbe, Sax.] in Botany, a bush or small tree. A liquor made of orange-juice, spirits, and sugar.

SHRUBBY, a. full of shrubs; bushy.

To SHRUG, v. n. [shricken, Belg.] to express horror or dissatisfaction by moving the shoulders towards the head.—v. a. to contract or draw upwards, followed by shoulders.

SHRUG, s. a motion of the shoulders upwards to express horror or dissatisfaction.

SHRUNK, the pret. and past part. of To SHRINK.

To SHUDDER, v. n. [schudder, Belg.] to quake with fear or aversion.

To SHUFFLE, (shuff) v. a. [syfeling, Sax.] to throw into disorder, so that one thing may take place of another; to remove or put by with some artifice; to change the position of cards with respect to each other; to shake or get rid of by struggling, used with off; to form in a confused and clandestine manner, used with up.—v. n. to put a pack of cards into new order; to practise mean tricks, frauds, or evasions; to struggle; to shift; to move with an awkward gait, or with the feet drawn along the ground.

SHUFFLE, (shuff) s. the act of disordering things, or moving them so as to make them take place of each other; a trick or artifice.

SHUFFLER, s. he who plays tricks, or shuffles.

SHUFFLINGLY, ad. with irregular gait.

To SHUN, v. a. [ascunian, Sax.] to avoid; to endeavour to escape; to decline; to eschew.

To SHUT, v. a. preter. and past part. shut; [schutten, Belg. scitten, Sax.] to put together so that nothing can get in or out, opposed to open; to enclose or confine; to bar or exclude; to draw the eyelid close over the eye; to contract, applied to the hand. Used with out, to exclude or deny admission; with up, to confine; to conclude.—v. n. to be closed; to close itself.

SHUT, part. a. rid; clear; free.

SHUT, s. the act of closing; a small door or cover.

SHUTTER, s. one that closes any thing that stood open; a door or board by which windows are secured in the night.

SHUTTLE, (shüttl) s. [skutl, Isl.] the instrument with which a weaver shoots the cross threads of his work.

SHUTTLECOCK, s. a cork stuck with feathers, and used as a toy with a battledore.

SHY, a. [schone, Belg. schif, Ital.] reserved; coy; not willing to be acquainted or familiar; cautious; chary; keeping at a distance, and unwilling to approach; suspicious; jealous.

SIAM, a country of Asia, beyond the Ganges, lying on the Chinese Sea, and bounded by British India, Birman, China, and Cochinchina. It is 550 miles in length, and in breadth varies from 50 to 250 miles. It is very mountainous, and is watered by several large rivers, with great numbers of tributary streams. It yields gold, iron, copper, lead, tin, and other metals, with some precious stones. The soil produces plenty of rice, cotton, fruits, &c. &c. It abounds in wild animals, such as elephants, rhinoceroses, tigers, &c. &c. And many of the birds that are indigenous to this country are very remarkable. The chief trade of the country is with China. The people are yet very rude in their condition, and are a branch of the great Malay family. The form of government is absolute despotism, but the king is elective; and this, with several other features of their political state, shows how little raised above barbarism the Siamese are. Bangkok is its capital. Pop. about 3,000,000.

SIBBALD, s. [sibaldia, Lat.] in Botany, a plant with yellow blossoms, called also bastard cinquefoil, found on Benlomon, in Scotland. It flowers in July and August.

SIBERIA, a large country of Asia, comprehending the whole of the Russian dominions in Asia. It stretches from the Uralian mountains to the N. Pacific Ocean; and from the mountain ranges, deserts, and seas, which divide it from Tataria, to the Arctic Ocean. It is about 2000 miles in length, and 750 in breadth. It is in general remarkably level, the only very lofty mountains being on its borders. It is watered by a great number of rivers, of which the Lena, the Yenisei, and the Obi are the chief. It yields metals of all kinds abundantly, gold, silver, iron, copper, platinum, &c. &c.; and it has also other valuable mineral treasures. The intense cold is unfavourable to agriculture, but some corn is grown, and sheep, oxen, &c. reared. It is inhabited by a great variety of rude tribes, some of which have not emerged from the most primitive barbarism. It is the country to which state prisoners are sent by the jealous despotism of the emperor. Not only the Greek Church, but some kinds of rude idolatry prevail here. Tobolsk and Irkutsk are its chief places. Pop. about 2,500,000.

SIBILANT, a. [sibilo, Lat.] hissing.

SIBILATION, s. a hissing sound.

SIBYL, the name given to some prophetesses celebrated in the old Greek and Roman ballads, the last of whom was the Cumean sibyl, who offered the mystic volumes for sale to Tarquin; and after burning six of them, demanded the original price for the three that were left.

SICARD, ROCH AMBROSE CUCURRON, a French abbé, who devoted himself to the philanthropic task of teaching the deaf and dumb, in the establishment of the Abbé L'Epee, at Paris. He narrowly escaped being massacred in the frightful slaughter of September, at the prisons, being hardly saved by one Moton, a watchmaker. After a few more difficulties of a comparatively trifling character, he was left to the uninterrupted pursuit of the task he had devoted himself to, and died in 1822, aged 80 years. He wrote some works on educational subjects.

To SICCATE, (sikkate) v. a. [sicc, Lat.] to dry.

SICCATION, (sikkashon) s. the act of drying.

SICCIFIC, (sikkifik) a. [siccus and facio, Lat.] arid; causing dryness.

SICCITY, (siksity) s. [siccitas, Lat.] dryness; aridity; want of moisture.

SICE, s. [siz, Fr.] the number six at dice.

SICILIES, THE TWO, the name borne hitherto by the united kingdoms of Naples and Sicily, in Italy. At present the island of Sicily has revolted, and declared itself independent of Naples, and in all probability will ultimately establish its claim to freedom. See NAPLES, SICILY, &c.

SICILY, an island in the Mediterranean Sea, almost in the form of a triangle, separated from Italy by a narrow strait, called the Faro di Messina. It is about 160 miles long, and 110 broad at its greatest width. It is very mountainous, and several peaks range at about 3000 or 4000 feet high. But the loftiest mountain here is the celebrated volcano Etna, which is almost 11,000 feet in height. The rivers are all small. Corn, wine, silk, fruits, &c. &c. are abundantly produced, and it has valuable fisheries in the surrounding seas. Palermo is the chief city. Pop. about 2,500,000.

SICK, a. [sieck, Belg. seoc, Sax.] deprived of health; afflicted with disease; disordered in the stomach, or squeamish; corrupted; disgusted.

To SICKEN, v. a. to destroy health; to make sick; to impair; to weaken.—v. n. to grow sick; to be diseased; to be filled to disgust; or loathing; to decay; to languish.

SICKLE, (sikl) s. [sichel, Belg. sico, Sax.] the instrument with which corn is cut; a reaping-hook.

SICKLEWORT, s. in Botany, a name of the mountain bugle.

SICKLINESS, s. disposition to sickness; habitual sickness or disease.

SICKLY, a. diseased, infirm, not healthy; faint, somewhat disordered, languid, weak.

SICKNESS, s. [scoenness, Sax.] the state of being infirm in health; disease; malady; squeamishness, or disorder in the stomach.

SICYONIA, in Ancient Greece, a small state of the Peloponnese, lying on the Corinthian Gulf, between Corinth and Achaia. It was only 16 miles long, and 8 broad, and had in its borders only the towns of Sicyon and Phlius, of any importance.

SIDDONS, MRS. SARAH, a celebrated tragic actress of the last age, was one of the Kemble family by birth, and was from her infancy accustomed to take part in theatrical representations. When she was about twenty, she appeared in London, but without success: about seven years afterwards she again appeared, and was the unquestioned queen of the boards for thirty years. Her great character was Lady Macbeth, but it is more than questionable if she rightly interpreted that wonderful creation. She died in 1831, aged 76 years. For rare intellectual power, for consummate skill in all the minor arts of her calling, for lofty and dignified conduct during all her public career, she received, as was justly due, the admiration of all.

SIDE, s. (Sax. side, Belg.) the part of animals formed by the ribs; any part of a body opposed to another part; the right or left; a margin, verge, or edge; situation; half of any thing; party; interest; sect; faction.

SIDE, a. oblique, opposed to direct; lateral.

To SIDE, v. a. to join with any party; followed by with.

SIDEBORD, (sidebord) s. a table on which plate and other conveniences are placed by the side of that at which the guests sit.

SIDEBOX, s. a box on one side of the theatre.

SIDELONG, a. lateral; oblique; not in front; not direct.

SIDELIBLY, adv. obliquely; on the side; not in opposition.

SIDEREAL, a. (sidus, Lat.) stary; astral; measured by the stars.

SIDERATION, s. [Fr. sideror, Lat.] sudden mortification; a blast; or a sudden deprivation of sense.

SIDESADDLE, s. a woman's seat on horseback.

SIDESMAN, s. an assistant to a churchwarden.

SIDEWAYS, adv. sidewise, adv. on one side; obliquely; indirectly; laterally.

SIDMOUTH, HENRY ADDINGTON, VISCOUNT, a statesman of George III.'s reign. He studied at Oxford and Lincoln's Inn; but laid aside the practice of law for that of legislation, entering parliament, and was soon made speaker. His next step was to the head of the government which concocted the peace of Amiens, but he was not long afterwards removed, on Pitt's return to power; and was raised to the peerage, with an office under Pitt. He held office also under Lord Grenville, Mr. Perceval, and Lord Liverpool; and in the last cabinet distinguished himself by arranging and defending the Manchester massacre, and all the espionage and prosecutions that preceded and followed that affair. He died in 1844, aged 87 years. His attempt upon religious liberty in 1812, and the measures that mainly characterized his official career, will not easily be forgotten; and Canning's soubriquet, by the aid of Hone's pamphlets, will hand him down to everlasting remembrance as the "Doctor."

SIDNEY, SIR PHILIP, the hero and the poet, studied at Oxford, and afterwards travelled on the continent, narrowly escaping in the St. Bartholomew at Paris. On his return he entered the service of the queen, and was employed on various embassies, rising ever in general esteem by his gallantry and literary ability. He was subsequently made governor of Flushing, and fell in an engagement at Zutphen, where his small body of troops was victorious, in 1586, aged 32 years. He was the ideal of a knight of those days, and might have served as a model to the poet of the Faery Queen. The absolute queen would not allow him to be elected king of Poland; not choosing, as she said in Sir Peter Reade's case, that her sheep should bear the mark of another master. His Arcadia, his Sonnets and Poems, and his Defence of Poen, have maintained his name amongst our English bards right worthily.

SIDNEY, ALGERNON, a patriot and martyr, of the times of Charles II. He first served during the Irish rebellion, and afterwards joined the Parliament's army, and distinguished himself under Manchester and Fairfax, and under his brother, Lord Lisle, in Ireland. He was one of the High Court at the trial of Charles, and consistently with his aristocratic spirit and republican theories, retired from all public service under the Protectorate. On the abdication of Richard Cromwell he reappeared, and accepted a mission to Denmark. After the Restoration he visited Holland and France; till, after 17 years' exile, he received a pardon from Charles, and returned to England. On the discovery of the Rye-house Plot, he was arrested, and although there was no evidence to connect him with it, (his and Lord Russell's views being of a very different kind,) he was convicted by the infamous Jeffries of high treason, and beheaded in 1683, aged 62 years. In political opinions he resembled the Girondins of France, but Platonic philosophy and religious feeling gave a hue to his expression of them, widely different from that resulting from their materialism and in-delity. Yet both looked fondly back to Greece and Rome for the model of a republic;—both sought the ideal of liberty in the abodes of slavery. His writings maintain his reputation for lofty views and aspirations, and for spotless integrity and courage.

SIDNEY-SUSSEX COLLEGE, Cambridge, was founded at the end of the 16th century. It is not a very important institution, as to wealth, &c., but it was the school of Oliver Cromwell.

SIDON, in Ancient Geography, a city of Phœnicia, standing on the sea-coast, and well situated for commerce, which it monopolized till eclipsed by the superior wealth of Tyre. It is often alluded to in the Old Testament. The modern town of Saida stands on its ruins.

SIEGE, (see see) s. [siege, Fr.] the act of besetting a fortified place; any continued endeavour to gain possession.

SIENNA, a celebrated city of Tuscany, in Italy, the see of an archbishop, and the seat of a university. It stands on one of the W. branches of the Apennines; and is very rich in palaces and churches, which are adorned with noble monuments of art. It has a few manufactures, but these do not constitute its wealth. It is about 25 miles from Florence. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 43. 22. N. Long. 11. 10. E.

SIERRA LEONE, the name given to a country on the coast of W. Africa, lying between Senegambia and the Grain Coast of Guinea. It is a level tract, with lofty mountains bounding it inland, and watered with numerous rivers. It yields gold and iron, and all tropical fruits and different kinds of grain and vegetables are cultivated. It has also its share of the wild animals of that part of the continent. It is inhabited chiefly by negroes, the unhealthiness of the climate for Europeans making it too dangerous to tempt many to seek a settlement in it. Free-town is the principal place. Pop. 44,935. It is one of the colonies of the British empire, and was the first of those injudicious but benevolent endeavours to better the lot of the African by the introduction of a system of free labour instead of slavery. The headland of the colony, and one of the chief rivers, are also called Sierra Leone.

SIEVE, (see) s. an instrument used in separating small particles from grosser, consisting of a piece of lawn, hair, &c. &c., strained and fastened to a hoop; a searce; a bolter.

SIEYES, EMMANUEL JOSEPH, a French abbé, who played a most conspicuous part in the French Revolution, by virtue of his having, as he said, "brought the science of government to perfection." He studied at Paris, was so fortunate as to speak the mind of the whole nation on the question of the part the Tiers Etat (or Commons) should take in the assembly of the States-General, and was of course one of the deputies. In it he proposed that it should declare itself the National Assembly; he proposed the famous Tennis Court oath, but he resisted, fruitlessly, the spoliation of the church. In the framing of the constitution (as indeed in the framing of all the constitutions France was vexed with, excepting those of Buonaparte and of the Bourbons) he took a very prominent part. He voted for the death of the king. During the despotism of the Convention, and the Reign of Terror, he either busied himself with diplomacy, or remained in retirement. He emerged again on the fall of Robespierre, and at last was one of the three consuls, having secured what was to be a lasting constitution. But it did not last, and Sieyes was made a count, and retired from public life. The restored Bourbons banished him, and he did not see France again till the three days of July had swept away the whole dynasty. He died in 1836, aged 88 years. His numerous works are not of a kind to do mankind much service now; his perfected science of polity being only an accumulation of schemes and expedients, about as serviceable to states, as experience has amply proved, as the garments made by the mathematical tailor of Laputa were to Gulliver.

To SIFT, v. a. [siftan, Sax. sifan, Belg.] to separate by a sieve; to pass through a sieve; to separate or part. Figuratively, to try; to examine; to scrutinize; to scan.

SIFTER, s. he who sifts.

SIG, [Sax.] used in compounds, implies victorious.

To SIGH, (see) v. n. [sican or sieetan, Sax.] to breathe so as to be heard, when oppressed with sorrow; to sigh.

SIGHI, (see) s. a violent breathing, which may be heard, when oppressed with grief; suspiration.

SIGHT, (sit) s. [sicht, Belg.] the perception of objects by the eye; the act of seeing or beholding; vision; open view, or a situation in which nothing obstructs the eye; notice or knowledge; the eye; an aperture to look through; a show, spectacle, or something remarkable to be seen.

SIGHTLESS, (siltess) a. blind; offensive to the eye; unpleasant to look at.

SIGHTLY, (sithly) a. pleasing to the eye; striking to the view.

SIGIL, s. [sigillum, Lat.] a seal; signature.

SIGN, (sin) s. [signe, Fr. signum, Lat.] a token of any thing; that by which any thing is shown; indication; a wonder or miracle; a displayed board on the outside of a tradesman's house; a memorial; one of the twelve constellations of the zodiac; a mark; a symbol, or type. Sign-manual, the subscription of a person's name.

To SIGN, (sin) v. a. [signo, Lat.] to mark; to ratify by subscribing one's name; to betoken, or represent typically.

SIGNAL, s. [Fr.] notice given by some token; a sign that gives notice.

SIGNAL, a. remarkable; eminent; conspicuous.

To SIGNALIZE, v. a. [signaler, Fr.] to make eminent or remarkable; to celebrate; to render illustrious.

SIGNALLY, ad. remarkably; memorably; eminently.

SIGNATURE, s. [Fr. signature, from signo, Lat.] a sign or mark impressed on a thing; a stamp; a proof or evidence; subscription, or the signing of a person's name. Among printers, some letter placed at the bottom of the first page of a sheet, to distinguish it from the other sheets in the same book; they are usually placed in alphabetical order. In Music, the characters placed at the opening of a piece, to notify the key it is written in to the performer.

SIGNER, s. one that signs.

SIGNET, s. [signette, Fr.] a seal, peculiarly applied to the seal manual of a king.

SIGNIFICANCE, SIGNIFICANCY, s. the power of signifying; meaning; force; energy; importance; moment; consequence.

SIGNIFICANT, a. [Fr. signum and facio, Lat.] expressive of something else; standing as a sign of something; forcible in conveying the meaning intended; important.

SIGNIFICANTLY, ad. with force of expression.

SIGNIFICATION, s. [Fr.] the act of making known, or conveying ideas, by signs; a meaning expressed by a sign or word.

SIGNIFICATIVE, a. [significatif, Fr.] betokening by an external sign; forcible; emphatic; strongly expressive.

SIGNIFICATORY, a. that signifies or betokens.

To SIGNIFY, v. a. [signifier, Fr.] to declare by some token or sign; to mean; to express; to import, or weigh, when used interrogatively; to make known; to ratify.—v. n. to express a meaning with force.

SIGNIORY, s. See SEIGNIORY.

SIGNPOST, s. that upon which a sign hangs.

SIKHS, a people of N. Hindustan, inhabiting the country called the Punjab, Cashmere, &c. The river Sutlej divides their territories from the provinces subject to and protected by Great Britain, and Afghanistan and the Himalah mountains are their other boundaries. The country is a rich and beautiful plain, extending to the foot of the mountains, and these are the loftiest in the world. The Indus and its tributaries water it. Grain of all kinds, but especially rice, fruits, wine, sugar, &c. &c. are cultivated here; and wide and excellent pastures serve for the raising of great numbers of horses, cattle, &c. For some kinds of manufactures the people of this country are quite notorious. The Sikhs are properly a sect of religionists, which sprang up naturally out of the collision of Mohammedism with Brahminism. Their creed is their God and their sword, and they have, under several wise leaders, especially under Runjeet Singh, adopted all they could gain from European discipline and tactics. A late attempt made by them against the British power completely failed; they were driven back into their own territories with frightful slaughter. Umbrisair and Lahore are the two principal places. Pop. about 6,000,000.

SILENCE, s. [Fr. from silens, Lat.] a state wherein no sound is perceived by the ear; the act or state of refraining from speaking; stillness; taciturnity; quietness; secrecy.

To SILENCE, v. a. to still; to oblige to refrain from speaking.

SILENCE, interj. an authoritative restraint of speech.

SILENT, a. mute; not speaking; not talkative; still, or without noise; not mentioning.

SILENTLY, ad. without speech or noise; without mention; mutely.

SILENSIA, a province of Prussia, lying next to Austria and Russia, and bounded by Brandenburg and Posen. It is about 200 miles long, and about 70 broad. In one part it is mountainous, and has heights approaching 5000 feet in elevation, but the greater part of it is a mere plain, watered by the Oder and its tributaries. Iron, copper, lead, and other metals, but especially zinc, are found here; it also yields coal and other valuable minerals. It produces corn, fruit, timber, and many other useful vegetables. Cattle, horses, sheep, &c. are reared plentifully. In manufactures it is very eminent; and thus it is one of the most important provinces of the kingdom. Breslau is its chief place. Pop. about 3,000,000.

SILEX, s. in Mineralogy, flint, or the earth of which siliceous is the metallic base. See SILICON.

SILHOUETTE, s. [Fr.] a miniature outline of a person's profile in some dark colour.

SILICIOUS, (silichious) a. flinty; made of flint.

SILICON, SIL'CIUM, s. [siler, Lat.] in Chemistry, a non-metallic base, of a dark unt-brown colour, without the least metallic lustre. It is the base of all the varied forms of flint, quartz, &c. &c.

SILICULOSE, a. [silicula, Lat.] husky; full of husks; bearing small pods, applied to flowers.

SILIGINOSE, a. [siliginosus, from stiplo, Lat.] made of fine wheat.

SIL'LIQUA, s. [Lat.] among gold refiners, a carat, of which six make a scruple. In Botany, the seed vessels, pod, husk, or shell of plants that are of the pulse kind.

SIL'LIQUOSE, SIL'IGUOUS, a. [siliquosus, Lat.] having a pod like the pea.

SILVIUS ITALICUS, a Roman poet of the 1st century A. D. He was an advocate, and had some reputation as an orator; he rose even to the rank of consul, under Nero, and was proconsul of Asia. He died in about 100 A. D., aged 75 years. A poem by him on the Punic wars is yet extant.

SILK, s. [seole, Sax.] the fine thread spun by the caterpillar of several kinds of moths, when about to change into the pupa state, and especially of that one called the silk-worm. In Commerce, this product spun into skeins; and also the textile fabric composed of it.

SILKEN, a. made of silk; dressed in silk. Figuratively, soft or tender.

SILKMERCEER, s. a dealer in silk.

SILK'WORM, s. in Natural History, the caterpillar of a dull-coloured kind of moth, that feeds on the mulberry, and spins for its pupa state a beautiful silken cocoon of the most brilliant golden yellow. It is reared in great numbers in Italy, France, Spain, Persia, India, China, &c.; and the silk is unwound and spun into the silk of commerce. It is often kept here on a small scale in houses, but the climate of England is too inclement to admit of its general introduction.

SILKY, a. made of silk; soft; plant.

SILL, s. [syl, Sax. sveit, Fr. salle, Belg.] the timber or stone at the foot of a door; a threshold.

SILLABUB, SY'LLABUS, s. words made with milk and wine, &c.

SILLINESS, s. foolishness; simplicity; harmless folly.

SIL'LY, a. [seely, Teut.] harmless; inoffensive; innocent; plain; artless; weak; helpless; simple; foolish; witless.

SILT, s. mud; slime.

SILVAN, a. [silva, Lat.] full of woods; woody.

SILVER, s. [Belg. seolfer, Sax.] in Chemistry, the well-known metal, recognised by its soapy feeling, and by its weight, which is next to that of gold. It is found in all parts of the world, but no where so abundantly as in the Cordilleras of S. America, and in particular at Potosi. Its great ductility and malleability make it very serviceable, whilst its comparative rarity makes it also an article of luxury, especially for articles of domestic and culinary use. Any thing of a soft or whitish splendour; coin or money made of silver.

SILVER, a. white like silver; having a pale lustre; made of silver; soft of voice.

To SILVER, v. a. to cover the surface with silver; to adorn with a whitish or mild lustre; to cover with something white and shining.

SILVERLING, s. a silver coin.

SILVERSMITH, s. one that works in silver.

SILVERWEED, s. in Botany, a kind of potentil, very troublesome to farmers from its creeping roots.

SILVERY, a. besprinkled with silver.

SILURIAN SYSTEM, s. in Geology, a name recently given to a large group of early strata, which are finely developed in that part of Wales formerly inhabited by the Silures. It consists of the Llandoil flagstones, the Caradoc sandstones, the Wenlock slates and limestones, the Ludlow and the Aymestry limestones and sandstones. They abound with fossils of very singular characters, being the relics of almost the earliest known inhabitants of this globe.

SMAR, s. [smarra, Fr.] a woman's robe.

SIMEON, SYLITES, one of the enthusiasts of the 5th century, who improved on the asceticism of the hermitage in a most remarkable manner. He erected a column, or pillar, and passed his days and nights of solitude and prayer on the summit. With the growth of his fervour he increased the height of his column, and at last exercised his soul with fasting, &c. on the summit of one 40 cubits high. The top was 3 feet in diameter, and protected by a balustrade; and from it he preached, and maintained a brisk intercourse with the devout world below him. He spent 37 years of his life in this way, elevated above the common herd of men; and died in about 460, aged 69 years. His new device was rapidly imitated, and till the 12th century Syria was infested with these Stylites, or Pillar Saints; when common sense put an end to such stupid and farcical exhibitions. It is remarkable that amongst the austerities and self-inflicted torments of the Fakirs of Hindustan, this exposure of oneself on the top of a column has a place of some eminence.

SIMEON OF DURHAM, an early English historian, was a Benedictine monk, and precentor in Durham cathedral. Here he wrote several works, amongst which was a History of the English and Danish Kings. He flourished in about 1130.

SIMEON, CHARLES, a distinguished clergyman of the Evangelical party in the English Church. He studied at Cambridge, and became rector of Trinity church in that town, in which office he exerted a great influence on the students, and was the founder of a school, or party, amongst the members of the university, which however by his death, and by the revival of Church principles, has been quite forgotten. He devoted his wealth to the spread of evangelical doctrine, and purchased livings for the purpose of securing an evangelical ministry. He was a good man, and zealous for what he believed to be the truth; but not a great man, and the impression he made was neither deep nor lasting. He died in 1836, aged 75 years. His great work is a long series of volumes of sermons and outlines of sermons, for the use of preachers and teachers, who cannot teach and preach without such aid.

SIMILAR, a. [similaire, Fr. similis, Lat.] homogeneous; having one part like another; resembling; like.

SIMILARITY, s. likeness; resemblance.

SIMILE, s. [Lat.] in Rhetoric, a comparison by which any thing is explained or illustrated.

SIMILITUDE, s. [Fr. similitudo, Lat.] likeness; resemblance; a comparison or simile.

To SIMMER, v. n. [formed from the sound,] to boil gently; to boil with a gentle hissing.

SIMNEL, s. [simnellus, low Lat.] a kind of cake made of sugar, flour, plums, saffron, &c.

SIMON, one of the Maccabees, high priest and prince of the Jews, at the death of Jonathan. He was supported both by Demetrius II. and Antiochus Sidetes against Tryphon, but after his defeat was attacked by Antiochus without success, and murdered by his son-in-law Ptolemaeus, in 135 B. C.

SIMON MAGUS, a charlatan of Samaria, who is first noticed in the Acts of the Apostles, as a pretended convert to Christianity, who desired to buy the power of conferring the Holy Ghost, that he might recover the influence he had lost through the miracles worked by the apostles. Afterwards he appeared amongst the opponents of the gospel, as a Gnostic teacher, and claimed to be one of the emanations of the Deity, and taught that a woman who accompanied his travels was another. Justin Martyr says that an altar was erected to him at Rome. It is remarkable that on the spot he indicates an altar was found, dedicated, however, to Semo, an old Sabine divinity, and not to Simon.

SIMON, RICHARD, a French theological writer of the 17th century. He was learned in Oriental languages, as well as in theology, and was once philosophical professor at Juilly. He died in 1712, aged 74 years. His works are numerous, and not characterized by that fidelity to the Roman creed, &c. which ought to mark them, which makes them somewhat more valuable for a general student, if the honesty and earnestness of the author could be guaranteed.

SIMONIAC, s. [simoniague, Fr. from Simon Magus,] in the Churches of Rome and England, one that buys or sells livings contrary to the law.

SIMONICAL, a. guilty of simony, or of buying and selling livings illegally.

SIMONIDES, a Greek poet of the island of Ceos. He lived partly at Athens, and partly at the court of Hiero of Syracuse, where he died in 467 B. C., aged about 90 years. Some of his poems remain, and tradition ascribes to him the invention of some of the Greek letters, in a rather improbable way.

SIMONY, s. [simonie, Fr. simonia, Lat.] in English Law, the crime of buying and selling livings in the Church in a particular manner. Lately this law has been altered so as to bring it more into harmony with the general practice, maintaining the evil of the deed by express statutory declaration, but allowing the practice by means of accommodating definitions.

SIMOOM, s. [Arab.] a hot wind that occurs in tropical countries, and often destroys great multitudes of men, camels, &c. &c.

To SIMPER, v. n. to smile in a silly, unmeaning way.

SIMPER, s. a foolish smile.

SIMPLE, (simpl) a. [simplex, Lat.] plain; sincere; without design or artifice; unskilled; harmless; uncompounded; not complicated; single; only one; silly.

SIMPLE, (simpl) s. [Fr.] a single ingredient; a drug; an herb, used for medicine.

To SIMPLE, (simpl) v. n. to gather herbs.

SIMPLENESS, (simpless) s. the quality of being without art, experience, or composition.

SIMPLER, SIMPLIST, s. an herbalist.

SIMPLETON, (simplton) s. a silly, harmless, and inexperienced person.

SIMPLICITY, s. [simplicité, Fr. simplicitas, Lat.] freedom from art, artifice, cunning, fraud; plainness; singleness; weakness; silliness.

To SIMPLIFY, v. a. to unravel what is complicated; to reduce to simple and few principles; to retrench what is superfluous in a book, speech, or case.

SIMPLY, adv. artlessly; without addition; merely; foolishly. SIMPSON, THOMAS, an eminent English mathematician, who rose by his own unremitting application and skill, from the lowest rank in life, to be professor at the military college, Woolwich. The details of his life are extremely interesting, and full of encouragement to all who, without the means of obtaining it, are yet enamoured of knowledge. He died in 1761, aged 51 years. He wrote several mathematical works, which are not wholly disused even now. Some of his researches in astronomy were abundantly ingenious, and aided in the progress of that most perfect of all the physical sciences.

SIMSON, DR. ROBERT, a Scottish mathematician, known to all students of Euclid, as the critic to whose labours we are indebted for the best editions of that invaluable and beautiful work. He studied medicine at Glasgow, but renounced the healing art for the more congenial study of the sciences of number, quantity, space, &c., and became mathematical professor at that university. He died in 1768, aged 81 years. He published other works beside his Euclid, which are in some cases yet used.

SIMULAR, s. [simulo, Lat.] a counterfeiter.

To SIMULATE, v. a. [similis, Lat.] to dissimble or feign.

SIMULATION, s. [Fr.] the act of pretending to be what one is not.

SIMULTANEOUS, a. [simul, Lat.] acting together; existing at the same time; co-existent.

SIN, s. [syn, Sax.] the transgression of the laws of God; the inward principle of selfishness, or worldliness, &c. that leads to transgression.

To SIN, v. n. [singan, Sax.] to violate the law of God; to do that which is evil; to cherish the principle of evil-doing in the heart.

SINAI, a mountain of Arabia Petrea, in Asia. It stands between the arms at the N. extremity of the Red Sea, adjoining to Horeb. It is not certainly known on which peak the events related in the Book of Exodus took place; but one is yet called Gebel Mousa, or the hill of Moses. Lat. 29. 2. N. Long. 34. 15. E.

SINAPISM, s. [sinape, Gr.] in Medicine, an application of mustard to raise blisters, &c.

SINCE, ad. [sille, Sax.] it being true; because that; from the time that; ago; before this.—prep. after that time.

SINCE/RE, a. [sincere, Fr. sincerus, Lat.] unhurt; faithful; pure; uncorrupted; honest; ingenious.

SINCE/RELY, ad. honestly; without hypocrisy; with uprightness of heart.

SINCERITY, SINCER/ENESS, s. [sincerité, Fr. sinceritas, Lat.] freedom from hypocrisy or dissimulation; faithfulness; integrity; honesty; ingenuousness.

SIN/CIPUT, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, is the forepart of the head, reaching from the forehead to the coronal suture.

SIN/DE, or SC/NDE, a province of Hindustan, lying at the mouth of the river Indus. It is bounded by Beloochistan, Afghanistan, the Punjab, Ajmeer, and Cutch. It is mountainous towards the W. side, but the rest is very flat, and the Roon, a most remarkable and extensive kind of marsh, and the Thurr, a tolerably wide and sandy desert, occur on the E. side. The soil is very fertile in general, owing to the periodical inundations of the river; it produces grain, fruits, and vegetables of all kinds, cotton, &c. &c. Horses, cattle, camels, with many kinds of wild beasts, abound. It has excellent fisheries. It has some good manufactures, and a tolerably extensive trade. Hyderabad and Shikarpoor are its chief places. Pop. about 1,000,000. It now belongs to the British empire.

SIN/DIAH, or SC/NDIA, a Mahratta prince of Hindustan, who, at the end of the last century, acquired an extensive territory in N. India. It was afterwards increased by his nephew; but the greater part passed into the hands of the British, after the battle of Assaye.

SIN/DON, s. [Lat.] in Surgery, is a little round piece of silk, linen, or lard, used in dressing a wound after trepanning.

SINE, s. [sinus, Lat.] in Geometry, a line drawn from one end of an arch perpendicularly on the diameter drawn from the other end; or it is half the chord of twice the arch.

SINE, [Lat.] a word used in composition, signifying without.
SIN/ECURE, s. [sine cura, Lat.] an office where a person receives pay but does nothing.

SIN/EW, s. [senec, Sax.] in Anatomy, a tendon or ligament by which a muscle is attached to the bone. Figuratively, that which gives strength or support.

SIN/ESH/SHRUNK, a. in Farriery, applied to a horse when he has been over-ridden, and so fatigued that he suffers a stiffness and contraction of the muscles of the belly.

SIN/EWY, a. consisting of sinews or nerves. Figuratively, atrog, nervous, forcible.

SIN/FUL, a. [sinfulle, Sax.] contrary to Divine command; wicked; impious; unsanctified; ungodly; irreligious.

SIN/FULLY, ad. impiously; wickedly.

SIN/FULNESS, s. wickedness; impiety.

To SING, v. n. preter. sang or sung, past part. sung; [singen, Sax. singia, Isl. singen, Belg.] to utter in a melodious or musical manner. Figuratively, to relate poetically.—v. a. to mention or relate in poetry; to celebrate or praise; to pronounce in a musical manner.

SINGA/PORE, an island at the S. extremity of the peninsula of Malacca, Asia, about 25 miles in length, by 15 broad. It is generally level, having no hills of any considerable elevation. It produces the usual tropical fruits, trees, &c. &c., but is not remarkable for its fertility. Together with several surrounding islands, and a tract on the mainland opposite, it forms the British settlement of Singapore, the chief advantage of which is the protection and extension of the trade with China and the Indian Archipelago, to which objects its situation renders it of great importance. Its chief town is of the same name. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 1. 16. N. Long. 103. 53. E.

To SINGE, (sinje) v. a. [sengan, Sax. senghen, Belg.] to scorch or burn in a slight or superficial manner.

SINGER, s. one whose profession is to sing.

SINGINGMASTER, s. one who teaches to sing.

SINGLE, (singl) a. [singulus, Lat.] not more than one; only one; particular or individual; not compounded; alone, or without any companion; unmarried; not double, applied to flowers; pure or uncorrupt; not double-minded; simple; that in which one alone is opposed to one.

To SINGLE, (singl) v. a. to choose out from among others, used with out; to take alone; to separate; to withdraw.

SINGLE/NESS, (singlness) s. simplicity; sincerity.

SING/LY, ad. individually; only; by himself.

SING/LAR, a. [singulier, Fr. singularis, Lat.] representing only one determinate thing or person; particular; unexampled; different from others. In Grammar, denoting only one; not plural.

SING/LAR/ITY, s. [singularité, Fr.] some character or quality by which a person is, or affects to be, distinguished from others; an oddity; a curiosity.

To SING/LARIZE, v. a. [singulariser, Fr.] to make particular or singular.

SING/LAR/LY, ad. particularly; in a manner not common to others.

SIN/ISTER, a. [sinister, Lat.] left; being on the left hand. Figuratively, bad; unlucky; perverse; inauspicious; unfair.

To SINK, v. n. preter. sunk or sank, past part. sunk or sunken; [sencan, Sax. senken, Teut.] to descend in any fluid; to fall gradually; to enter or penetrate into any thing; to grow less, with respect to height or depth. Figuratively, to be overwhelmed, used with beneath or under; to decline; to tend to ruin; to be received or impressed deeply, used with down; to fall into a state of rest or indolence.—v. a. to force under water, and render incapable of floating or swimming; to make deep by digging; to depress; to degrade; to diminish in quantity or value; to crush or overbear; to make to decline; to suppress, conceal, or convert to one's use by fraud, applied to money.

SINK, s. [sinc, Sax.] a drain or cesspool.

SIN/KING FUND, s. a plan for the redemption of the national debt, proposed by Mr. Pitt, by devoting the surplus revenue to the purchase of stock; which like many other schemes was rendered of no avail, because it was deemed necessary to go on purchasing when there was actually no surplus revenue to buy with.

SIN/LESS, a. free from sin.

SIN/LESSNESS, s. exemption from sin.

SIN/NER, s. one at enmity with God; one not truly or religiously good. An offender; a criminal.

SIN/OFFERING, s. amongst the Jews, an expiation or sacrifice for sin.

SIN/OPER, SIN/OPLE, s. a species of earth; ruddle.

To SIN/UATE, v. a. [sinuo, from sinus, Lat.] to bend in and out.

SINUATION, s. a bending in and out.

SIN/UOUS, a. [sinueux, Fr.] bending in and out.

SIN/US, s. [Lat.] a bay of the sea. In Surgery, a hollow passage through any organ. A fold or opening.

SION. See ZION.

SIOU/X, the name of one of the tribes of N. American Indians. They are located now in the Indian territory of the United States. E. of the Rocky Mountains, to the number of 21,600.

To SIP, v. a. [sippan, Sax. sippen, Belg.] to drink with the lips but just touching the vessel; to drink in small quantities.—v. n. to sup or drink a very small quantity.

SIP, s. a small draught or mouthful.

SIP/PER, s. one that sips.

SIP/PLET, s. a little sop.

SIP/HON, (sifon) s. [Gr.] a bent tube or pipe, having one leg longer than the other, used in drawing liquors out of vessels.

SIR, s. [syrr, Brit. sire, Fr.] a title of respect, used now without discrimination of ranks; the title of a knight or baronet.

SIRE, s. [Fr.] in Poetry, a father; and also in that sense applied to beasts. A complimentary address to a great personage.

SIREN, SY/REN, in Ancient Mythology, a fabulous being, resembling a mermaid in form, which was said to sit on a particular rock in the Mediterranean, and sing so sweetly as to allure mariners to destruction.

SIR/HIND, a very ancient city of Hindustan Proper, in the province of Delhi. Condamine says, that the art of weaving silk was brought back to Constantinople, in the 16th century, by the monks who returned from Sirhind (or Serinde, according to him); for, although the art was brought into Europe under the Roman emperors, it had again been lost during the confusions that attended the subversion of the western empire. Procopius, also, takes notice, that in the time of Justinian (the 6th century) silk was brought from Serinda, a country in India. Sirhind is 195 miles N. W. of Delhi. Lat. 30. 40. N. Long. 75. 55. E.

SIRIASIS, s. [Gr.] in Medicine, an inflammation of the brain and its membrane, through the heat of the sun.

SIRIUS, s. [Lat.] in Astronomy, the dog-star.

SIROCCO, s. [Arab.] a name of the simoon, or hot east wind which often occurs in tropical countries of the E. hemisphere, and in the countries of the temperate regions bordering on them. It is exceedingly deadly in its effects.

SIRRAP, s. a word conveying reproach and insult.

SIRUP, Syrup, s. [Arab.] any vegetable juice boiled to a consistence with sugar.

SIRUPY, a. resembling sirup.

SISMONDI, JEAN C. L. SIMONDE DE, an eminent historian and political economist of Geneva, of the last generation. He studied at his native place, and was first merely a clerk in a mercantile house at Lyons. When the effects of the French Revolution reached Geneva, his family removed to England, and he accompanied them; and afterwards to Italy, where they settled at Valchiusa, in the neighbourhood of Florence. Here he commenced his literary career, and won his first laurels. When events allowed it they all returned to Geneva, and he subsequently travelled in Italy with Madame de Staël. Paris he visited more than once, and attracted the notice of Napoleon during the Hundred Days. Afterwards he was a member of the legislative council at Geneva; but throughout all his travels, and senatorial labours, and in spite of the severest sufferings in the latter part of his life, from cancer in the stomach, he never remitted his literary toils. He died in 1842, aged 69 years. His Histories of France and of the Italian Republics are his greatest productions; and of these he published abridgments also. He also published a compendious view of the Fall of the Roman Empire, a series of Lectures on the Literature of the South of Europe, a volume of Miscellaneous Essays on Politics and Political Economy, an historical novel, called Judith Severa, &c. &c.

SISTER, s. [æsther, Sax.] a woman born of the same parents with another person. Figuratively, a woman of the same kind, manners, sentiments, persuasion, or employment. Sister-in-law, is a husband's or wife's sister.

SISTERHOOD, s. the office or duty of a sister; a number of women of the same order.

SISTERLY, a. like or becoming a sister.

To SIT, v. n. preter. sat; [sittan, Sax. sitan, Goth. setten, Belg.] to occupy a seat; to be in a state of rest; to rest or press as a burden; to settle or abide; to be adjusted, or to suit; to brood, or incubate, applied to birds; to be placed at a table; to be as a member in any solemn assembly; to be placed in order to be painted. To sit down, to rest; to settle; to begin a siege. To sit up, to change a lying posture for a sitting one; to watch, or refrain from going to bed.—v. a. to keep the seat upon.

SITE, s. [situs, Lat.] situation; local position.

SITFAST, s. in Farriery, a hard knob growing under the saddle.

SITH, ad. [sithe, Sax.] since; seeing that. Obsolete.

SITHE, s. [Sax.] See SCYTHE.

SITTER, s. one that sits; a bird that broods.

SITTING, s. the act or posture of sitting on a seat; a time at which one exhibits himself to a painter; a meeting of an assembly; a time during which one sits without rising; incubation.

SITTING, part. of TO SIT; in Botany, applied to the leaves of plants, when they have no leaf-stalks, as in the spear-mint and hound's-tongue; to flowers, when they have no fruit-stalks, as in the mezerion.

SITUATE, SITUATED, a. [situs, Lat.] placed with respect to any thing else; placed.

SITUATION, s. [Fr.] position or place with respect to something else; condition or state.

SIVA, SEVA, or SIVA, in Hindu Mythology, one of the principal triad of divinities, who represented the principle of death or destruction; the other two were Brahma and Vishnu (which see).

SIX, a. [Sax. and Fr.] twice three; the next in order after five. To be sixes and sevens, is to be in a state of disorder, confusion, and danger.

SIXPENCE, s. a silver coin valued at half a shilling, or as many pence as its name expresses.

SIXSCORE, a. six times twenty, or 120.

SIXTEEN, a. [sixteen, Sax.] six and ten.

SIXTEENTH, a. [sixteenth, Sax.] the ordinal of sixteen, or the sixth after the tenth.

SIXTH, c. [sixta, Sax.] the ordinal of six, or the next in order after the fifth. In Music, the interval between a note and another separated from it by 4 others.

SIXTHLY, ad. in the sixth place.

SIXTIETH, a. [sixtieth, Sax.] the ordinal of sixty, the sixth ten times repeated.

SIXTY, a. [sixtig, Sax.] six times ten.

SIVZAR, s. an inferior scholar in Cambridge, synonymous to a servitor at Oxford.

SIZE, s. [assise, Fr.] the bulk of a body considered as compared with that of another; proportion; bigness; a settled quantity or allowance.—[sisia, Ital.] any viscous or glutinous substance.

To SIZE, v. a. to arrange or place according to bulk; to settle, or adjust; to besmear with any viscous or glutinous substance.

SIZY, a. viscous or glutinous.

SKEIN, s. [escaigne, Fr.] a knot of thread or silk.

To SKATE, v. n. to slide on the ice with skates.

SKATE, s. [schallda, Sax.] in Natural History, a flat sea-fish. A kind of wooden shoe, armed with iron, used in sliding on the ice.

SKEAN, SKEEN, s. [Ir. and Erse.] a short sword or knife; a dagger.

SKELETON, s. [scheletos, Gr.] in Anatomy, an assemblage of all the bones of an animal cleared from their flesh, and disposed in their natural situation. An assemblage or abstract of the principal parts of a discourse, &c.

SKELTON, JOHN, an English poet of the 16th century. He was a parish priest, and apparently not remarkable for the canonical or moral regularity of his life, though of some eminence for learning, &c. He satirized Wolsey and the priests and mendicant orders; and was preserved from the Cardinal's vengeance only by taking refuge in the sanctuary of Westminster, where he died in 1529. We cannot judge of the effect of such poems as his, in these days, having become used to a style of composition that is at least refined and smooth, and having the writings of so many possessors of true genius.

SKEP, s. [scaphen, Sax.] a sort of basket, narrow at the bottom, and wide at the top, to fetch corn in; a bee-hive made of rushes or straw.

SKEPTICK. See SCPTIC.

SKETCH, a. [schedula, Lat.] an outline or rough draught; a first plan.

To SKETCH, v. a. to trace the outlines of a picture; to lay down a rough draught or plan.

SKEWER, s. [skere, Dan.] a wooden or iron pin, used to keep meat in form.

To SKEWER, v. a. to sustain with skewers.

SKIDDAW, a mountain of Cumberland, England, belonging to the range that traverses that county, above 3000 feet in height.

SKILE, or SKYE, one of the largest of the Western Islands, Scotland. It is 54 miles in length, and 20 in breadth, and divided from the counties of Ross and Inverness by a channel of the sea 10 in breadth. It is cut into a great number of gulfs and promontories, and there are seven high mountains near each other in the middle of the island. The valleys are fruitful in pastures, and produce plenty of barley and oats. The sea abounds with fish, and supplies occupation and made of living to great part of the people. Pop. 23,082.

SKIFF, s. [esquife, Fr. scapha, Lat.] a small light boat.

SKILLFUL, a. knowing; possessing any art; dexterous; able; experienced.

SKILLFULLY, ad. with skill; dexterously.

SKILL, s. [skil, Isl.] knowledge, readiness, or practice in any art; dexterity; artfulness; any particular art.

SKILLED, a. knowing; dexterous; acquainted with.

SKILLET, s. [escuelette, Fr.] a small kettle or boiler.

To SKIM, v. a. See TO SCUM.

SKIMBLE-SCAMBLE, a. wild; wandering.

SKIN, s. [skind, Dan.] in Anatomy, the natural covering of the flesh. It consists of two separate integuments, the under one called the Cutis, and the outer one, the Epidermis, the inner surface of which is the rete mucosum, or seat of the coloring matter that distinguishes the various races of mankind.

To SKIN, v. a. to flay or strip the skin off; to cover with skin; to cover the surface, used with over.

SKINK, s. [scene, Sax.] any thing potable; pottage.

SKINNER, DR. STEPHEN, a learned English philologist of the 17th century. He studied in Holland and at Oxford, and travelled on the continent during the civil wars, by which he is greatly added to his medical knowledge; and also gathered materials for the great work on English Etymology, by which he is best known. He died in 1667, aged 44 years. His work is still of some value, although the progress of the science of Grammar has so far exceeded the point it had reached in his day; and so much more correct knowledge of the sources and history of the English language prevails.

SKINNY, a. consisting only of skin; thin; lean.

To SKIP, v. n. [equitare, Ital.] to fetch quick bounds or leaps; to leap up or pass by quick leaps; to leap for joy; to pass without notice.—v. a. to miss or pass.

SKIP, s. a light leap or bound.

SKIPJACK, s. an upstart.

SKIPPER, s. [schipper, Belg.] the master of a Dutch ship.

SKIRMISH, s. a slight engagement, less than a pitched battle; a contest; contention.

To SKIRMISH, v. n. [escarmoucher, Fr.] to fight in small parties, without coming to a general engagement.

To SKIRRE, (skir) v. a. [perhaps from scir, Sax.] to scour; to traverse or ramble in order to clear.—v. n. to scud; to scour; to run in haste.

SKIRT, s. [skjorte, Swed.] that part of a garment which hangs loose below the waist; the edge of a garment; an edge, border, margin, extreme part.

To SKIRT, v. a. to border, or run along the edge.

SKITTISS, a. [skye, Dan. schene, Belg.] shy; easily frightened; wanton; volatile; changeable; fickle; hasty; precipitate.

SKUE, ASKEW, a. sidelong; oblique.

SKULL, s. [skiola, Isl.] See SCULL.

SKUNK, s. in Natural History, an animal of the weasel kind, found in N. America, which has the power of emitting a most fetid fluid on being disturbed, and so is treated with much greater respect than it deserves.

SKY, s. [sky, Dan.] the region of the clouds; the heavens; the weather; the climate.

SKYLARK, s. in Ornithology, a well-known species of lark, which sings as it flies, and is one of the most beautiful of our song birds. Bird-fanciers are guilty of the cruelty of keeping it in small cages, for the sake of its song, which in its natural state it never utters except when mounting and soaring in the air.

SKYLIGHT, (skylit) s. a window which lets light in through the ceiling.

SKYROS, an island of the Ægean Sea, lying off the middle of the island of Negropont. It is about 12 miles long, and is divided by a deep bay almost into 2 parts. It is very mountainous, especially in the S. part, where is one height of about 2500 feet. It produces corn, wine, fruits, &c. &c. St. George is the chief place. There are many interesting traces of its earlier history and inhabitants. Pop. about 3000. It belongs to Turkey.

SLAB, s. a puddle; a plane of stone; an outside sappy plank.

To SLABBER, v. n. [slabbern, Belg.] to drivel; to let the spittle fall out of the mouth; to shed or spill.

SLABBY, a. viscons; thick; wet; floody; plashy.

SLACK, a. [slace, Sax. slaken, Isl.] loose, or not drawn tight; remiss, careless, or not diligent; slow, applied to motion; weak, or not holding fast.

To SLACK, SLACKEN, v. n. to be remiss or negligent; to fall to pieces, or crumble into particles; to grow loose; to languish; to fail; to abate.—v. a. to loosen; to remit; to ease; to mitigate; to relieve or subvert, applied to the mind; to reduce to particles; to withhold; to repress; to neglect.

SLACK, s. a coal broken into small parts; small coal.

SLACKLY, ad. loosely; negligently; not closely.

SLACKNESS, s. want of tightness, attention, tendency, or force; slowness.

SLAG, s. the dross of metal.

SLAIN, past part. of To SLAY.

To SLAKE, v. a. [sloek, Isl.] to quench or extinguish; to temper with water; to allay.—v. n. to grow less tight; to be extinguished.

To SLAM, v. a. [schlagen, Belg.] to slaughter or crush; to fling a door to with violence.

To SLANDER, v. a. [esclaundrie, Fr.] to speak ill of another falsely; to belie.

SLANDER, s. a false invective, reproach; a disgrace; disreputation; ill name.

SLANDEROUS, a. calumnious; uttering reproachful falsehoods.

SLANDEROUSLY, ad. calumniously; with false reproach.

SLANG, preter. of To SLING.

SLANT, SLANTING, a. oblique; not perpendicular; not direct; skew.

SLAP, s. [schlap, Teut.] a blow with the hand open or something flat.

To SLAP, v. a. to strike with a slap.

To SLASH, v. a. [slasa, Isl.] to cut; to wound with long cuts; to lash; to whip.—v. n. to strike at random with a sword.

SLASH, s. a cut or wound; a cut in cloth.

SLATE, s. [perhaps from escalat, Fr.] in Geology, a gray, or greenish, and variegated kind of laminated rock, which easily splits into thin slices in a direction opposite to the plane of stratification, and is used to cover houses, for school-boys to write on, and various other purposes.

To SLATE, v. a. to cover a roof with slate.

SLATER, s. one who covers with slates or tiles.

SLATTER, s. [slætti, Swed.] a woman who is negligent and slovenly in her dress.

SLAVE, s. [esclave, Fr. from the Slavi or Solavonians,] one taken prisoner in war, or bought and obliged to serve a person during life; a bondman; a bondwoman.

To SLAVE, v. n. to drudge; to toil; to toil.

SLAVER, s. [slæfja, Isl. saliva, Lat.] spittle running from the mouth; drivel.

To SLAVER, v. n. to be smeared with spittle; to let spittle drop from the mouth; to drivel.—v. a. to smear with spittle.

SLAVER, s. a vessel employed in the transport of slaves.

SLAVERY, s. the condition of a person who has been deprived of his liberty; servitude; bondage. In the early history of nations this institution played a prominent part in the progress of mankind, inasmuch as it was a decided advance in a state that was human, to recognise a labourer, or only a creature of burden, in a prisoner, instead of eating his flesh, or torturing him to death. It prevailed in most various forms in different countries, and originated through traffic, as well as through war, as commerce took the place of warfare in the mutual relations of nations. Its mildest and most generous form may be found developed in the laws in the Old Testament. It prevailed throughout the whole of Christendom, as a part of the feudal system, and was the real cause of the Jaquerie in France, and the revolt of Wat Tyler in England, in the 14th century. But it was gradually abolished in most countries in which the Church of Rome had power, by the exertions of the priests, by the 16th century. In Russia, Poland, and parts of Austria, however, it remains to this day. In the European colonies it was the natural offspring of the lust of empire and of gold; and it met, in its very beginning, with a noble opponent, the revered Las Casas. The recent opposition to slavery begun with the labours of Granville Sharp, in England, and the result was, that it was decided that there could be no slaves on English soil. The first emancipation of slaves took place in the French colonies, through the exertions of the Girondins, in the heat of the French Revolution. In England, the labours of Clarkson, Wilberforce, and a noble band allied with them, in spite of the clamorous opposition of those who owned slaves or plantations, and of those who feared all changes, even that from such monstrous wrong to the merest right, succeeded, first, in the doing away with the slave trade in connexion with the British colonies, and at length, in 1834, in effecting the entire abolition of slavery itself, not, however, without the absurd interposition of a period of probationary freedom, called apprenticeship, and the unjust payment of £20,000,000 to the former owners of the bodies and souls of their fellow creatures. In the United States, in the N. States slavery has gradually died out, and its return has been prevented by legislative enactment; but in no State can a fugitive slave be protected from recapture. In the S. States slavery prevails in its most revolting and abhorrent forms; all parties and all religious denominations are alike guilty, and there are no words in our language by which its almost universal features could be portrayed, without making even indecency blush, and cruelly shudder. The annexation of Texas, the Mexican war, are the fruits of this prodigious anomaly in that republic. Whilst some of the most eminent of the divines of the free States are so far from being emancipated from the cruel prejudice of colour, that they apologize for the slavery of the Carolinas, and denounce the earnestness of the abolitionists; and even in Christian temples, a pew, called the black pew, is set apart for the coloured free-men. England has lately, by treaty, by armed cruisers, by protective duties on W. Indian products, by Cooly immigration, &c., been avowedly endeavouring to complete its work. The matter is even now in agitation, and men are beginning to discover that such means may foster the spirit that encouraged slavery, but can never propagate freedom throughout the world. Of Mohammedan and pagan nations we have made no mention, since amongst them slavery is to be expected as one of their most characteristic social features. That the New Testament should not enjoin emancipation, cannot afford the shadow of a defence to slavery. It teaches how the heart, the inner man, may be made right before God; and it directs that inward rightness and holiness should be manifested by an outward life of holiness and rectitude in all the relations man stands in to man. The strictest apologist for slavery never yet deemed it possible for the Great Example, given to man in the New Testament, to have been the owner of a slave.

SLAUGHTER, (the gh is mute in this word and its derivatives,) s. [conslought, Sax.] destruction by the sword, including the idea of multitude; massacre; butchery; carnage.

TO SLAUGHTER, v. a. to massacre; to kill; to slay.

SLAUGHTERHOUSE, s. the house in which beasts are killed for the butcher.

SLAUGHTEROUS, a. destructive; murderous.

SLAUGHTER, a. mean; base; servile; dependent.

SLAVONIC, SLAVONIC, SLAVIC, the name of the various tribes and races composing great part of the Russian empire, and the parts of Turkey, Austria, and Prussia which border on Russia. With a few rare (and one brilliant) exceptions, they have always been the last to participate in the advancement of knowledge and liberty amongst the European nations. It is hard to believe that John Huss, his accomplished brother in martyrdom, and the bands who maintained their doctrines after their death, could have been of genuine Bohemian origin. The various dialects spoken by the Slavonic races, are allied, closely, to the great Indo-Germanic family of languages; and some of them are tolerably rich in various departments of literature.

TO SLAY, v. a. preter. slawe, past part. slain; [slean, Sax. slahan, Goth.] to kill; to put to death; to butcher.

SLEAZY, (sleazy) a. [slith, Sax.] weak, or wanting substance.

SLED, SLEDGE, s. [sled, Dan. sledd, Belg.] a carriage drawn without wheels.

SLEDGE, s. [sleep, Sax. sleggia, Isl.] a large heavy hammer.

SLEEK, a. [sleech, Belg.] smooth; glossy; nitid; polished.

TO SLEEK, v. a. to comb smooth and even; to render soft, smooth, or glossy.

SLEEKLY, ad. smoothly; glossily.

TO SLEEP, v. n. preter. and past part. slept; [sleepan, Sax. sleepen, Goth. sleepen, Belg.] to take one's rest by a suspension of all the active and voluntary powers; to rest or be motionless; to live without care or thought, followed by over; to be inattentive. Figuratively, to be dead.

SLEEP, s. [sleep, Sax.] in Physiology, the suspension of the voluntary active powers of both body and mind, in periodical rest. The particular period, and the interval of its recurrence, differs in different species, and in different individuals, according to their habits. Some species of animals, &c. are subject to a long and remarkable sleep during winter, called hybernation. In the absence of the stimulating action of light, plants also exhibit changes which are analogous to the sleep of the animal frame. See DREAMS, &c.

SLEEPINESS, s. drowsiness; disposition to sleep; inability to keep awake.

SLEEPLESS, a. without sleeping; wanting sleep.

SLEEP-WALKING, s. See SONNAMBULISM.

SLEEPY, a. drowsy, or disposed to sleep; not awake; causing sleeping; soporiferous; narcotic; somniferous.

SLEET, s. [sleet, Dan.] small hail or snow falling in single particles, intermixed with rain.

TO SLEET, v. n. to snow in small particles, intermixed with rain.

SLEEVE, s. [slif, Sax.] that part of a garment which covers the arms; a knot or skein. To laugh in one's sleeve, is to laugh at another unknown to him. To hang on one's sleeve, is to be dependent.

SLEEVELESS, a. wanting sleeves; without sleeves; wanting propriety; unreasonable; groundless; foolish.

SLEIGHT, (slit) s. [sleight, Isl.] an artful trick. Sleight of hand, the tricks or dexterity of a juggler.

SLENDER, s. [slinder, Belg.] thin, or small in circumference; small in the waist; slight; not bulky or strong; small, or sparing; less than enough.

SLENDERLY, ad. without bulk; slightly; meanly.

SLENDERNESS, s. thinness; slightness; want of bulk or strength; want of plenty.

SLEPT, the preter. of TO SLEEP.

SLESWICK, or SLEWSWIG, the Duchy of, or S. Jutland, lies between Jutland and Holstein, touching on the Baltic and the N. Sea. It is about 100 miles long, and 60 broad. It is generally level, and is marshy near the W. coast. The coasts have many deep but shallow bays, and there are islands on both sides belonging to it. Its rivers are small. Slate and building-stone are found here. Agriculture and grazing are carried on extensively and with success; corn, cattle, horses, and dairy produce being great articles of trade. It has also prosperous and extensive fisheries. Its chief town, of the same name, stands on the river Slel, near its entrance to the Baltic. It is a small place, with a few manufactures and an considerable trade. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 54. 32. N. Long. 9. 37. E. Pop. of duchy, about 350,000. At present it forms part of the kingdom of Denmark.

SLEW, preter. of TO SLAY.

TO SLEW, v. n. to part or twist into threads.

TO SLICE, v. n. [slitan, Sax.] to cut into flat pieces or parts; to cut or divide.

Slice, s. [slite, Sax.] a broad piece cut off; a broad head fixed in a handle; a peel; a spatula.

SLID, preter. of TO SLIDE.

TO SLIDE, v. n. preter. slid, past part. slidden; [slidan, Sax. sliden, Belg.] to pass along smoothly; to slip; to glide; to move without lifting up the feet; to pass unnoticed; to pass inadvertently, to pass insensibly from good to bad.—v. a. to put imperceptibly, used with in.

SLIDE, s. a smooth and easy passage; a smooth path worn on the ice by sliding; a slow even course.

SLIDDER, s. he that slides.

SLIGHT, (slit) a. [slicht, Belg.] small; incon siderable; worthless; weak; not cogent; not important; foolish; negligent; flimsy; thin.

SLIGHT, (slit) s. contempt; neglect; act of scorn; an artifice; slight.

TO SLIGHT, (slit) v. a. to neglect or contemn; to disregard; to treat or perform carelessly; to throw; to fling.—[sligheten, Belg.] to demolish; to overthrow.

SLIGHTLY, ad. negligently; scornfully; weakly.

SLIGHTNESS, (slitness) s. weakness; negligence.

SLIGO, a county of Connaught, Ireland. It is 39 miles in length, and 37 in its greatest breadth. It lies on the Atlantic, and is bounded by Leitrim, Roscommon, and Mayo. It contains 39 parishes, but the county town, Sligo, is the only one of consequence. There are, however, some considerable villages, in which the linen manufacture flourishes. The soil is in some parts good, in others coarse, and towards the coast boggy. It is mountainous, and yields good building-stone, and some metals. The rivers are all small; but the lakes Arrow, Gara, Gill, &c. supply water communication, &c. Pop. 180,886. It returns 3 members to the imperial parliament.

SLIGO, the capital of the above-named county, is seated on a river that runs into a bay of the same name, navigable for vessels of 1200 tons up to the quays. It has a considerable trade, and some valuable fisheries. It is 105 miles from Dublin. Pop. 12,272.

SLILY, ad. cunningly; with subtle covertness.

SLIM, a. slender; thin.

SLIME, s. [slim, Sax. sligm, Belg.] viscous mire; any glutinous substance.

SLIMINESS, s. viscosity; glutinous matter.

SLIMY, a. viscous; glutinous; overspread with slime.

SLING, s. [slingan, Sax. slingen, Belg.] an instrument, the commonest kind of which consists of a strap and two strings, by which a body is cast at a distance, by whirling it and loosing one of the strings; a bandage worn to support a broken limb; an instrument for carrying casks, &c.; a stroke or blow.

TO SLING, v. a. to throw by a sling; to hang loosely by a string; to move or raise by means of a rope and crane.

TO SLINK, v. n. preter. slink; [slingan, Sax.] to steal out of the way.—v. a. to miscarry of.

TO SLIP, v. n. [slipan, Sax. slippen, Belg.] to slide; not to tread firm; to move or fly unexpectedly out of its place; to slide; to glide; to move slyly or unperceived; to slink; to fall into a fault or error; to creep by oversight; to escape the memory.—v. a. to convey secretly; to lose by negligence; to escape from; to leave slyly; to separate twigs from a tree by tearing them off; to let loose; to throw off any restraint; to pass over negligently.

SLIP, s. the act of slipping; a false step; an error or mistake; a twig torn from the main stock; a leash or string in which a dog is held; an escape; a long narrow piece; a narrow gallery on the sides of the theatre. Among shipbuilders, a place lying with a gradual descent on the banks of a river, convenient for shipbuilding.

SLIPBOARD, s. a board sliding in grooves.

SLIPKNOT, s. a bow knot; a knot easily untied.

SLIPPER, s. a shoe, sometimes without a hind quarter.

SLIPPERINESS, s. the state or quality of being slippery.

SLIPPERY, a. [slipær, Sax. sliperig, Swed.] smooth, glib, not affording firm footing; hard to hold or keep; lubricious; uncertain; fickle; unchaste.

TO SLIT, v. a. preter. and past part. slit, and slitted: [slitan, Sax.] to cut lengthwise.

SLIT, s. [slit, Sax.] a long cut, or narrow opening.

TO SLIVE, Sax. sliver, (sliver v. a. [slifan, Sax.] to split; to divide lengthwise; to tear off lengthwise.

SLIVER, (sliver) s. a slit; a large piece cut off.

SLUBBER, s. See SLABBER.

TO SLOCK, v. n. [slochen, Swed.] to slack; to quench.

SLOANE, SIR HANS, a distinguished naturalist, of Irish family, who studied medicine at London, and afterwards travelled on the continent. He had already taken up with considerable ardour the study of natural history, and this tour, with a voyage to the W. Indies, under the auspices of the Duke of Albemarle, served to foster it, and afforded him abundant opportunities of collecting plants, &c. &c. On his return, without relinquishing his studies he carried on a considerable medical practice, and was even made royal physician by George I. He enjoyed the high esteem of scientific men both here and on the continent, and was made President of the Royal Society. He died in 1753, aged 93 years. His collections were, in accordance with his will, purchased by the government, and formed the nucleus of the present magnificent institution, the British Museum.

SLOBODÁS OF UKRAINE, THE, a government of Russia, surrounded by the governments of Koursk, Catharinoslav, and Pultowa, and the country of the Cossacks of the Don. It is about 240 miles long, by about 80 miles broad. It is a very level country, and has extensive forests. It grows corn in great abundance, and breeds abundance of cattle. The rivers are tributaries of the Dnieper and the Don. Charkov is the capital. Pop. about 1,400,000, a great number of whom are Cossacks.

SLOE, s. [sla, Sax. slane, Dan.] in Botany, the fruit of the blackthorn; a small and very sour kind of wild plum.

SLOVETREE, s. in Botany, a shrub, called also blackthorn. The wood is hard and tough, and is formed into teeth for rakes, and walking-sticks. The fruit is not ripe till October or November.

SLOOP, s. a small ship with one mast.

TO SLOP, v. a. to drink grossly and greedily; to spill or waste liquor idly.

SLOP, s. [Sax.] a pair of trowsers or open breeches; a kind of loose overdress, worn by working men, resembling a gown; mean and vile liquor of any kind.

SLOPE, a. [slap, Belg.] oblique; declivous; acclivous; applied to any rising surface, according to the angle it makes with the plane of the horizon.

SLOPE, s. an oblique direction, or declining surface.

TO SLOPE, v. a. to form or shape obliquely.—v. n. to decline, or tend to declivity.

SLOPENESS, s. obliquity; declivity.

SLOPPY, a. mury; wet; slabby.

TO SLOTT, v. a. [slaghen, Belg.] to strike or clash hard.

SLOT, s. [slod, Isl.] the track of a deer.

SLOTH, s. [slench, Sax.] slowness; tardiness; idleness; laziness. In Zoology, a South American animal, which moves very slowly and can hardly travel at all on the ground. It is furnished with large claws, with which it clings to the branches of trees, as it feeds.

SLOTHFUL, a. idle, lazy, sluggish, inactive, indolent, dull of motion.

SLOTHFULNESS, s. idleness; laziness; inactivity.

SLOUCH, s. [sluff, Dan.] a downcast look; a person who has an ungainly, heavy, clownish look.

TO SLOUCH, v. n. to have a downcast clownish look.

SLOVEN, s. [slöven, Brit. slöef, Belg.] a man who has no regard to neatness or cleanness of dress.

SLOVENLINESS, s. unbecoming negligence of dress; neglect of cleanliness.

SLOVENLY, a. negligent of dress, neatness, or cleanliness.

SLOVENLY, ad. in a coarse, inelegant manner.

SLOUGH, (sluff) s. [slög, Sax.] a deep miry place; a hole full of dirt; the skin which a serpent has cast off. In Surgery, that part of an ulcer which is dead, and separates itself from the rest.

SLOUGHY, a. miry; boggy; muddy.

SLOW, (slö) a. [slaw, or slawe, Sax.] wanting swiftness, applied to motion; late, applied to time; dull, or inactive; not easily provoked.

SLOWLY, ad. not speedily; not soon; sluggishly.

SLOWNESS, s. want of velocity; dulness to admit conviction; dilatoriness; deliberation.

SLOW-WORM, s. [slacymyr, Sax.] in Natural History, a name of the common English harmless snake.

TO SLUBBER, v. a. to do any thing in an imperfect or lazy manner, or with idle hurry; to stain or daub; to cover in a coarse manner.

SLUDGE, s. mire, or dirt mixed with water.

SLUG, s. [Dan.] an idle, heavy, sleepy, and lazy person; a drone; an obstruction; a piece of a bullet, used as a charge instead of shot, or ball, which inflicts very dangerous wounds. In Natural History, an animal resembling the snail, most species of which have only a rudimentary shell, concealed in the membranes of the back.

TO SLUG, v. n. to be lazy; to move slowly; to play the drone.

SLUGGARD, s. an idler; a person too much given to sleep and laziness; a drone.

SLUGGISH, a. dull; lazy; drowsy; slothful; slow; insipid; idle; inert; inactive.

SLUGGISHNESS, s. sloth; laziness; dulness; inertness; inactivity.

SLUICE, (sluice) s. [sluyse, Belg. selua, Ital.] a watergate; floodgate; vent for water that is pent up.

TO SLUICE, (sluice) v. a. to let out by floodgates; to wet with a large quantity of water.

SLUICY, a. falling in streams as from a sluice or floodgate.

TO SLUMBER, v. n. [sluimeren, Sax. slaymeren, Belg.] to sleep slightly or imperfectly. Figuratively, to be in a state of negligence.—v. a. to lay to sleep; to stun, to stupefy.

SLUMBER, a. light and imperfect sleep.

SLUNG, the preter. and past part. of TO SLING.

SLUNK, the preter. and past part. of TO SLINK.

TO SLUR, v. a. [sluurig, Belg.] to sully; to daub; to soil; to contaminate; to bespatter; to pass lightly; to baulk or miss; to cheat; to trick.

SLUR, s. a faint reproach; a disgrace; a slight. In Music, a bent mark drawn over notes intended to be sounded as one continuous note.

SLUT, s. [slodde, Belg.] a woman who regards neither cleanliness nor decency in dress or business; a slattern.

SLY, a. [slith, Sax.] secretly insidious or malicious; meanly artful; crafty; cunning; subtle.

SLYNESS, s. the quality of being designingly artful.

To SMACK, v. n. [smacken, Sax. smacken, Belg.] to have a taste; to make a noise by the sudden separation of the lips after having pressed them strongly together; to kiss so as to be heard.—v. a. to make to emit a quick and smart noise.

SMACK, s. [smack, Belg.] a taste or savour; a small quantity; a loud kiss; a smart and sharp noise.—[smacca, Sax. or smekra, Isl.] a small ship, or fishing vessel.

SMALL, (the a is pron. broad in this word and its following compounds, as small.) a. [Sax.] little in size, quantity, quality, importance, or value; slender, minute, petty; weak, not strong.

SMALLAGE, s. in Botany, a plant formerly of great reputation amongst simplers and country doctors.

SMALLCOAL, s. little wood coals used in lighting fires, &c.

SMALLCRAFT, s. a little vessel below the rank of a ship.

SMALLNESS, s. littleness; want of bulk or strength.

SMALLPOX, s. in Medicine, a dangerous contagious disease, consisting of a general eruption of pustules tending to suppuration, accompanied with a fever; leaving behind it deep and disfiguring scars wherever the pustules have been. It often causes blindness, and even death, when it occurs in its severest, the confluent, form.

SMALT, s. in the Useful Arts, the protoxide of cobalt, employed in giving a rich blue colour to glass, porcelain, &c. &c.

SMARAGDINE, a. [smaragdinus, Lat.] made of emerald.

SMART, s. [smert, Belg. smarta, Swed.] a quick, sharp, and pungent pain, applied both to the body and mind.

To SMART, v. n. [smerten, Belg. smoerten, Sax.] to feel a quick and lively pain, either of body or mind.

SMART, a. causing a sharp pain; pungent; quick; vivacious, vigorous, lively, active, sharp; brisk; witty; acute.

SMARTLY, ad. sharply; briskly; wittily.

SMARTNESS, s. the quality of being smart; quickness, vigour.

SMATCH, s. [corrupted from smack,] a taste, twang, tincture.

To SMATTER, v. n. to have a slight taste, or superficial knowledge: to talk ignorantly or superficially.

SMATTER, s. imperfect or superficial knowledge.

SMATTERER, s. one who has a slight or superficial knowledge.

To SMEAR, (smear) v. n. [smearan, Sax. smeeeren, Belg.] to spread with any thing viscous or adhesive; to soil; to besmear; to contaminate.

SMEATON, JOHN, an eminent engineer of the last century. He was destined for the law, but the mechanical bent of his genius was so strong, that he was permitted, after a long resistance, to devote himself to his favourite pursuit. He first distinguished himself as a mathematical instrument maker, and then as a constructor and improver of mill-work, and rose to the greatest celebrity in his profession. His fame and character led to his being intrusted with the re-erection of Eddystone light-house; and his triumphant success in this daring exploit introduced him to other great tasks, amongst which Ramsgate harbour, and the canal from the Clyde to the Forth, may be specially mentioned. He died in 1792, aged 68 years. His published works, and his MSS. which were afterwards published by the civil engineers, maintain the reputation which he enjoyed; and the Pharos of the English Channel remains (after the proof of nearly 100 years) his most glorious monument.

SMEGMATIC, a. [smegma, Gr.] soapy; detersive.

To SMELL, v. n. to affect the nostrils; to have a particular scent; to have a particular tincture of any quality; to practise the act of smelling; to exercise sagacity.—v. a. to deceive or discover by the nose; to find out by mental sagacity.

SMELL, s. the sense of which the nose is the organ; scent; power of affecting the nose.

SMELLER, s. one who smells.

SMELLT, the preter. and past part. of To SMELL.

SMELT, a. [corrupted from salmon-let, the diminutive of salmon,] in Ichthyology, a small fish, allied to the salmon, caught abundantly in our rivers when it ascends them in the breeding season, and esteemed a great delicacy.

To SMELT, v. a. [smelten, Belg. smalta, Isl.] to melt ore, so as to extract the metal.

SMEALTER, s. one who melts ore.

To SMILE, v. n. [smijlen, Belg.] to look pleasant; to express slight or disdain; to look with an eye of favour.

SMILE, s. a look of pleasure or kindness; a slight contraction of the face.

To SMIRCH, v. a. to cloud; to dusk; to soil.

To SMIRK, v. n. [smiercan, Sax.] to look affectedly soft or kind.

To SMITE, v. a. pret. smote, past part. smit or smitten: [smitan, Sax. smijten, Belg.] to strike; to kill; to afflict; to blast; to affect with any passion; to destroy; to chasten.—v. n. to strike.

SMITER, s. one who smites.

SMITH, ADAM, the great Scottish metaphysician and political economist. He studied at Glasgow and Oxford, and held the professorships of logic and moral philosophy, successively, at the former university. He afterwards travelled in France with the Duke of Buccleugh, and became acquainted with the great French economists of the first stage of the French Revolution. On his return, he lived a literary life for some time at his native place, Kirkcaldy, with occasional visits to the Scotch and to the English metropolises, and finally was appointed a commissioner of customs, and died in 1790, aged 67 years. His great works are the Wealth of Nations, and The Theory of the Moral Sentiments. Of his ethical system it is impossible to speak, since, when examined, it proves to be a mere shadow, a set of words put at the head of a seeming argument. It derived a kind of importance, in some timid minds, from the friendship of the author with David Hume, for whose philosophical errors and scepticism he apologized in a narrative of his death, &c. His speculations in political economy have had a wider influence; and his work is, altogether, one of the best on that perplexed and perplexing science. It contains much that has not been overturned or improved by subsequent writers, but students need to take to the study of it some better and nobler opinions of man and society than the author has been able to form in the course of his travels and intimacies.

SMITH, SIR JAMES EDWARD, an English botanist, whose name is connected with the impulse given to natural science, during the latter part of the last century, by the acquisition of the collections of the great Swedish naturalist, Linnaeus, and the foundation of the Linnaean Society. He studied medicine at Edinburgh, with some distinction, and purchased the above-named collections, whilst yet in early life. He afterwards travelled on the continent, published his works, became botanical tutor to the royal family, and spent all his time at last at his native city, Norwich, where he died in 1828, aged 60 years. His chief publication is the English Botany, two other works on the same subject, some elementary works, &c. &c. The plates of the first are the most valuable portion, and subsequent treatises have superseded his other writings.

SMITH, DR. WILLIAM, the "father of modern Geology," began life as a land surveyor, and in the course of his employment in Gloucestershire, Oxfordshire, and the neighbouring parts of England, had his attention necessarily drawn to the strata developed and displayed in the hills, &c., their order, fossils, &c. &c. He gradually laid aside his original profession, and devoted himself to lecturing and writing on geology, to the construction of geological maps, and the travelling needful to construct them. His collections were purchased for the British Museum; and he received the honours of a degree from Trinity College, Dublin, and the Wollaston medal, and of a small pension during the latter part of his life. He died in 1840, aged 71 years. In addition to the invaluable mass of facts which his maps, and sections, and collections recorded, he suggested that, however different in mineral character, a stratum might always be identified by its fossils; which has proved one of the momenta of the science of Geology.

SMITH, SIR SYDNEY, a distinguished British admiral, during the last great war. He first served under Lord Rodney, and next under the king of Sweden. At the evacuation of Toulon, he destroyed the French vessels that could not be carried off, and was, during a descent on the coast, taken prisoner; but escaped, (most probably by the connivance of the Directory,) after about 2 years' confinement. His next exploit was the climax of his services: having seized a French flotilla near Acre, he defended that fort against all the force of Buonaparte's army, and gave an effectual check to his designs on Russia and India by means of Egypt. He also aided Abercromby in driving the French out of that country. Almost all the rest of his life was routine service, varied by the circumstances of the stations he commanded. He had numerous rewards for his bravery and skill, and enjoyed a high reputation for chivalric honour. He died in Paris in 1840, aged 76 years.

SMITH, SYDNEY, a clergyman and dignitary of the English Church, more famed as a humourist and politician than as a divine. He studied at Oxford and Edinburgh; joined with the brilliant circle then inhabiting the modern Athens, in starting the Edinburgh Review; aided by his essays and pamphlets the proceedings of the Whigs; and received, after various steps of preferment, a canonry in St. Paul's. He died in 1845, aged 77 years. Peter Plymley's Letters, and some of his reprinted articles from the Edinburgh Review, will maintain his reputation as a pamphleteer. General fame will keep alive the remembrance of his sparkling wit. But he will never rank amongst the true humourists, beneath whose masks lies hidden a divinity. No great truth or principle can be sifted out of his writings. He made the jokes to please himself and his after-dinner friends; he was paid to skirmish for a party, and he did it.

SMITH, s. [Sax. smeth, Teut. smid, Belg.] one who forges with a hammer; one who works in metals; a person who makes or effects any thing.

SMITHERY, SMYTH, s. [smiththe, Sax.] the shop of a smith.

SMITTEN, past part. of To SMITE.

SMOCK, s. [smoc, Sax.] a petticoat.

SMOCKFACED, s. pale-faced; having an effeminate face.

SNOKE, SNOAK, s. [smooch, Belg. smes or smoc, Sax.] the sooty vapour which ascends from any thing burning.

To SMOKE, v. n. to emit a dark cloud, exhalation, or vapour by heat. Figuratively, to burn or be kindled; to move with such rapidity as to raise dust or smoke; to use tobacco in a pipe; to suffer; to be punished.—v. a. to scent by, or dry in, smoke; to smell or find out; to sneer or ridicule to one's face.

SMOXY, s. emitting or having the appearance of smoke.

SMOLENSKO, a government of European Russia, surrounded by the governments of Moscow, Kaluga, Orel, Czernigow, Mohilev, Vitepsk, Pskov, and Tver. It is generally level, and is watered by several tributaries of the Volga, the Dnieper, &c. It yields copper, and some other minerals, but its chief wealth arises from its agriculture, which is very flourishing. Its capital, of the same name, is situated on the banks of the Dnieper, and extends over two mountains and the valley between them. A part is surrounded by walls 30 feet high and 15 thick; the lower part of them is built of stone, the upper of brick; their circumference is one mile and three quarters, and in the plain they are surrounded by a deep ditch. The houses are mostly of wood, and little better than cottages, but some are more substantially built. The city is divided through its whole length by one straight, paved street; the others are circular, and floored with planks. The cathedral stands on an eminence, and there are many fine public edifices. It has no manufactures, but carries on a pretty considerable traffic in linen, hemp, honey, wax, leather, furs, &c. It is about 400 miles from St. Petersburg. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 54. 50. N. Long. 31. 56. E. Pop. of government, about 1,250,000.

SMOLLETT, TOBIAS, one of our classical novelists. He was intended for the medical profession, but only at the outset of his career, and once when he had gained some name as an author, did he attempt to practise, and neither times with success. His first effort, however, being on board a war ship on foreign service, brought him large knowledge of men, and if it did not display the worst features of character, surely familiarized him with the most disgusting. During his literary life, he attempted almost every kind of composition. He edited a review, but it was not equal to its rival; he wrote plays, but they did not take; he became a satirist, and was imprisoned for libel; he tried his hand as political pamphleteer, but he was not rewarded; he translated Don Quixote, but Cervantes would certainly disown his knight in Smollett's dress; he published an account of his travels, but few read the book; he even dared to write a History of England, and it has been his misfortune to be yoked with Hume, who was somewhat qualified for the task, to gratify the idealty of the booksellers. His novels, however, the coarseness which exceeds even that which was characteristic of his times) always excepted, will continue to command attention. Humphrey Clinker, Percegrine Pickle, and Roderick Random, have always been ranked amongst the English classics, and the first has been the favourite of all readers. Smollett died whilst travelling in Italy a second time, in 1771, aged 50 years.

SMOOTH, a. [smoeth, Sax.] even on the surface; level; flowing; soft; sleek; glossy; equal; without any bounds or jerks, applied to motion; mild, courteous, adulatory, affable, soothing.

To SMOOTH, v. a. to level, or make even on the surface; to free from obstructions; to free from harshness, applied to sound; to work into a soft uniform mass; to palliate or soften, applied to excuse; to calm or mollify; to ease; to flatter; to soften with blandishments.

SMOOTHLY, ad. evenly; not roughly; readily.

SMOOTHNESS, s. evenness on the surface; softness of speech.

SMOTE, preter. of To SMITE.

To SMOTHER, v. a. [smoran, Sax.] to suffocate by smoke, by the exclusion of air, or by the oppression of something which hinders a person from breathing. Figuratively, to suppress.—v. n. to smoke without vent; to be suppressed or kept close.

SMOTHER, s. a great vapour, smoke, or thick dust.

SNOULDERING, s. [smool, Belg.] burning and smoking for want of vent.

SMUG, a. [smuch, Belg.] nice; spruce; dressed with affected niceness, but without elegance.

To SMUGGLE, (smig) v. a. [smockelen, Belg.] to import or export goods without paying the customs.

SMUGGLER, s. one who imports or exports goods without paying the customs.

SMUT, s. [smitta, Sax. smette, Belg.] a spot made with soot or coal; blackness gathered on corn; mildew.

To SMUT, v. a. to stain or mark with soot or coal; to taint with mildew.—v. n. to gather smut.

To SMUTCH, v. a. to blacken with smoke.

SMUTTINESS, s. soil from smoke.

SMUTTY, a. black with smoke or coal; tainted with mildew.

SMYRNA, a sea-port town of Natolia, in Asiatic Turkey, and one of the largest and richest places of the Levant. It stands beside the sea, on a fine gulf, or bay, which is deep enough to admit large ships, and forms a splendid harbour. It is not a handsome place, except from the sea, but it is a place of great trade. The commodities brought here for exportation are, thread made of goats' hair, silk, cotton yarn, cotton in bags, various kinds of drugs, and all sorts of carpets. It is of great antiquity, and was one of the places to which the letters to the seven churches of Asia, in the beginning of the Apocalypse, are addressed. Pop. about 150,000. Lat. 38. 29. N. Long. 27. 4. E.

SNACK, s. [from snatch,] a share; a portion.

SNATTLE, (snuff) s. [snavel, Belg.] a bridle which crosses the nose.

SNAG, s. a jag, or sharp protuberance; a tooth left by itself, or standing out beyond the rest.

SNAIL, s. [smoegl, Sax. snegel, Belg.] in Natural History, the general name for the common shelled animals, which are such destructive pests in gardens. Some species are very beautifully marked; and, occasionally, reversed shells are found.

SNAILSHELL, s. in Botany, a kind of vetch, or pea, which derives its name from the curious construction of its seed vessel.

Snake, s. [Belg. snaca, Sax.] in Natural History, any kind of serpent; the blind-worm, or slow-worm.

Snake-weed, s. in Botany, the name of a large genus of British plants, which chiefly grow in marshy situations, and have clusters, or spikes, of small pinkish flowers. The water-pepper and bistort belong to it.

Snakey, s. serpentine; having serpents.

To SNAP, v. a. to break at once, or to break short; to strike with a sharp sound; to bite; to catch suddenly and unexpectedly; to treat with sharp language.—v. n. to be brittle, to break short, or fall asunder; to make an effort to bite with eagerness.

SNAP, s. the act of breaking short; a greedy person; a quick, eager bite; a morsel or bite; a catch; a theft.

SNAPDRAGON, s. in Botany, the common name for a well-known flower, the blossoms of which somewhat resemble the usual pictures of the mouth of the fabulous monster, the dragon. In Cookery and Christmas Sports, a dish of raisins covered with spirits, which are lighted, and the fruit dexterously taken out and eaten blazing.

SNAPPISH, a. peevish; sharp in reply; eager to bite.

SNARE, s. [snare, Dan. snara, Swed. and Isl. smoor, Belg.] any thing set to catch an animal; any thing by which a person is entrapped, or brought unwarily into danger; a trap; a net; a gin.

To SNARE, v. a. to entrap; to entangle.

To SNARE, v. n. [snaren, Belg.] to growl, applied to the noise made by an angry animal; to gnarl or gnarl. Figuratively, to speak roughly or in sharp language.

To SNATCH, v. a. [snacken, Belg.] to seize any thing hastily; to transport or carry suddenly.—v. n. to bite or catch at something eagerly.

SNATCH, s. a hasty and eager catch or seizure; a short fit of vigorous action; a small or broken part; a short fit of action; a sniffling answer.

SNATCHER, s. one that snatches.

To SNEAK, (sneek) v. n. [snican, Sax. snige, Dan.] to creep slyly; to come or go as if afraid to be seen; to behave in a mean and servile manner; to crouch; to truckle.

SNEAKER, (sneeker) s. a small vessel of drink.

SNEAKING, (sneeking) part. a. servile; mean; covetous; niggardly.

To SNEAP, (sneep) v. a. [a corruption of snip, or snapp] to reprimand or check; to nip.

SNEAP, (sneep) s. a check or reprimand.

To SNEER, v. n. to show contempt by an oblique look; to insinuate contempt by covert expressions; to praise in a jeering manner; to show awkward mirth.

SNEER, s. an expression of ludicrous scorn; a look of contemptuous ridicule.

To SNEEZE, v. a. [niesen, Sax. niesen, Belg.] to expel any thing by an involuntary and convulsive effort from the nostrils.

SNEEZEWOORT, s. in Botany, a common plant, called also goose-tongue, and bastard pellitory.

SNELL, WILLEBRORD, an eminent mathematician and natural philosopher of Holland, in the 17th century. He succeeded his father as mathematical professor in his native place, Leyden; and was engaged in the measurement of an arc of the meridian in Holland. But his fame is based on his discovery of the law according to which light is refracted; which was, in the existing state of mathematical science, no common triumph of skill. He died in 1626, aged 35 years.

SNET, s. among hunters, the fat of a deer.

To SNIB, v. a. [snibbe, Dan.] to check, nip, or reprimand.

SNICK AND SNEE, SNICKERSEE, s. a combat with knives; also a long-bladed knife, with a catch-spring to keep it from closing, as well as from opening.

To SNICKER, SNICKER, v. n. to laugh slyly or contemptuously; to laugh in one's sleeve.

To SNIFF, SNIFFLE, v. n. [sniffa, Swed.] to draw the breath audibly up the nose; to sniff up.

To SNIFFLE, (sniffle) v. a. to catch eels in their holes by means of a hook baited and tied to a cord.

To SNIP, v. a. [snippen, Belg.] to cut at once with scissors.

SNIP, s. a cut made with scissors; a small shred; a share.

SNIPSE, (snippe, Teut. snite, Sax.) in Ornithology, a common small wading bird, with a long bill, accounted a delicacy, but not easy to shoot.

To SNIVEL, v. n. to run at the nose. Figuratively, to cry like a child.

To SNORE, v. n. [snorcken, Belg.] to breathe stertorously in sleep.

SNORE, s. [snora, Sax.] a hard and stertorous breathing in sleep.

To SNORT, v. n. [snorcken, Belg.] to breathe short and audibly through the nose, like a high-mettled horse.

SNOUT, s. [snuyt, Belg.] the nose of a hog, &c.; the nozzle or end of any open pipe.

SNOW, (snø) s. [snau, Sax. snæ, Belg.] in Meteorology, watery vapour frozen in the upper regions of the air, before forming into drops, and falling in light fleecy flakes. The crystalline structure of these flakes is very beautifully displayed by microscopes. Red Snow, in the arctic regions, is produced by a microscopic fungus, nearly allied to the kinds which produce the smut in wheat, &c.

To SNOW, (snø) v. n. [snævan, Sax.] to fall in white flakes.

SNOWBALL, s. a round lump of snow.

SNOWDON, a famous mountain in Caernarvonshire, in N. Wales, which occupies the centre of the county. On the top there are bogs, and two lakes that abound with fish, particularly the char and the guinard. Its height is 3508 feet.

SNOWDROP, s. in Botany, the well-known and elegant bulbous plant, which is one of the earliest spring flowers in our gardens and meadows.

SNOWY, (snø-y) a. abounding with snow; white as snow.

SNUB, s. [snobbe, Belg.] a jag or knot in wood; a check or reprimand.

To SNUDGE, v. n. [sniger, Dan.] to lie idle, close, or snug.

SNUFF, s. [snuff, Belg.] the burnt part of the wick of a candle; a candle almost burnt out; resentment expressed by snuffing; the powder of highly dried tobacco-leaf, scented, and usually mixed with other stimulating powders, and taken into the nostrils.

To SNUFF, v. a. [snuffen, Belg.] to draw up the nose together with the breath; to scent; to crop the wick of a candle.—v. n. to snort, or draw the breath by the nose.

SNUFFBOX, s. a box in which snuff is carried.

SNUFFER, s. one who snuffs.

SNUFFERS, s. an instrument with which the wick of a burning candle is clipped.

To SNUFFLE, v. n. [snuffelen, Belg.] to speak through the nose; to breathe hard through the nose.

SNUFFLER, s. one who speaks through the nose.

To SNUG, v. n. [sniger, Belg.] to lie close; to snudge.

SNUG, a. close, or free from inconvenience or notice; slyly or insidiously close.

To SNUGGLE, (snugle) v. n. to lie close together; to lie warm.

SNYDERS, or SNEYDERS, FRANCIS, a celebrated Flemish painter. He studied under Henry Van Balen, and afterwards travelled in Italy. At Antwerp and Brussels, where he resided after his return, he enjoyed the highest consideration. The Spanish viceroy afforded him his patronage. He is particularly famous for his representations of animals, in hunting-scenes and battle-pieces. He died in 1657, aged 78 years.

SO, ad. [Teut.] when answering to as, in like manner; in such a degree or manner; thus; for this cause or reason; when answered by as, on these terms, or on this condition; provided that; when used as an abrupt beginning of a sentence, it implies well; So much as, implies how much soever. So so, implies indifferently; also an exclamation after something done or omitted. So then, implies therefore.

To SOAK, (søk) v. n. [socian, Sax.] to lay some time steeped in moisture; to enter by degrees into the pores; to drink intemperately.—v. a. to steep; to keep in water till the moisture penetrates; to drench; to macerate.

SOANE, SIR JOHN, an eminent architect. He rose by his own skill and industry from a very lowly station, being first admitted as an inferior clerk into the offices of Dance and Holland, where he displayed such ingenuity that he was allowed to learn the profession. He afterwards travelled in Italy, and, on his return, executed a great number of important public buildings, and obtained many lucrative offices. He also amassed a considerable collection of works of art, which afterwards became public property. The latter part of his life was troubled with a quarrel with his eldest son, in which both parties seem to have been equally at fault; and he died in 1837, aged 84 years. His taste and genius find few admirers now, and some of his works have been altered to suit the advanced tastes of the age.

SOAP, (söp) s. [sapp, Sax. sapo, Lat.] a compound of any unctuous or fat substance with soda, used in washing. The different kinds, which are well known to all readers, result principally from the different oleaginous matters employed, and the different mode of preparing it for use. In soft soap, potash is employed in the place of soda. Some kinds of soap are used as drugs; Naples soap, for instance. Most of the elegantly coloured soaps are inferior in utility to the plain and more simply made kinds.

SOAP-BOILER, s. one who makes soap.

SOAPSTONE, s. in Mineralogy, the common name of a class of earths, of which French chalk and steatite are the best known.

SOAPWORT, s. in Botany, a plant called also bruise-wort.

To SOAR, (sör) v. n. [sorare, Lat.] to fly or mount aloft without any visible motion of the wings; to mount or rise high; to mount intellectually; to be ambitious; to write or speak in a sublime style.

SOAR, s. a towering flight.

To SOB, v. n. [sob, Sax.] to fetch a convulsive sigh; to heave audibly with convulsive sorrow.

SOB, s. a convulsive sigh caused by sorrow obstructing the respiration.

SOBER, a. [sobre, Fr. sobrius, Lat.] temperate, or not intoxicated with liquors; not overpowered by drink; free from any inordinate passion; serious or grave.

To SOBER, v. to cure or free from drunkenness.

SOBERLY, ad. temperately; moderately; calmly.

SOBERNESS, SOBRİTÛ, s. [sobriété, Fr.] temperance in drink; freedom from any inordinate passion; coolness; seriousness; gravity.

SOBIESKI, JOHN, a king of Poland, surnamed the Great. He was a Pole by birth, but was educated and trained in France. He rose to distinction in the wars waged against the Russians and Turks in the latter part of the 17th century, and attained the highest pitch of renown by the splendid campaign in which he raised the siege of Vienna, defeating a vastly superior army of Turks, and in effect imposing a final check on the progress of the Mussulman arms in E. Europe. Subsequently, he endeavoured in vain to introduce order into the political state of Poland, but the pride and strength of the aristocracy was too great for him, and he could only bewail the end, which he clearly foresaw must come to a kingdom so distracted and ungoverned. He died in 1696, aged 67 years.

SOCAGE, (sokaje) s. [soc, Fr.] in Law, an ancient tenure, by which lands were held on condition of ploughing the lord's lands, and doing the operations of husbandry, at their own charges.

SOCIABLE, (soshiable) a. [Fr. sociabilité, from socius, Lat.] fit to be joined together; friendly; conversible; inclined to and fit for company.

SOCIABLENESS, (soshiableness) s. the quality of being affable; freedom of conversation; good fellowship.

SOCIABLY, ad. conversibly; as a companion.

SOCIAL, (soshial) a. [socialis, Lat.] relating to society; fit for company or conversation. The Social War, in Roman History, arose from the attempt of the various states of Italy, that were dependent on Rome, to be free from the tyranny of the city, or to share its privileges. The Marsi being the first to raise this complaint, it has also been called the Marsic War. Marius, himself an Italian, feared that Rome should be too victorious, and gave the allies every encouragement, whilst he commanded the armies sent against them. But Pompeius and Sulla had no such scruples; yet, in the end, the Italians gained their object, and Rome, augmented in power, overcame the world, whilst in its bosom were already lodged the seeds of decay and death. It broke out in 91 B. C., and was not suppressed till 88 B. C.

SOCIALISM, s. a name given in the present day to certain schemes for the organization of society, proposed by Fourier, Owen, and others, characterized by the wildest impracticability, and disproved by every attempt that has been made to realize them. Invariably proceeding on the suppositions that all evil in man arises from education and example, and that enlightened selfishness will enable men to attain the highest moral excellence, without the thought of God, they ought to be impracticable. Whilst promising to every man, what no state of society can give, (unless it be an oriental despotism, to the one tyrant at its head,) they have kindled expectations that have necessarily led to the most disastrous discord, and to the ruin of those that have embarked their capital in the undertaking. The only question ever raised by these schemes that has been worthy of discussion or solution is this,—whether the principle of co-operation in labour could not be introduced, so as to supersede that of competition, on which all labour proceeds now.

SOCIETY, s. [société, Fr. societas, Lat.] several persons united together by rules in one common interest; community; company; converse; partnership; union on equal terms; an association for the prosecution of scientific, historical, or any other inquiries, or to carry out the diffusion of religious or scientific knowledge, &c. In Philosophy, the association or combination of men according to the necessity of their inward nature, on the principle of each one devoting to all his peculiar gifts and capabilities, and receiving back all the good he can receive, that results from the concentration of the efforts and labours of all.

SOCIETY ISLANDS, a cluster of islands in the S. Pacific Ocean, about 15 in number, exclusive of the very small ones, usually distinguished on seamen's charts into two groups, the Windward and the Leeward Islands, the former being also named the Georgian Islands. Tahiti is the largest, and will be described separately; the others of some size are Huahine, Raiatea, Rarotonga, Eimeo, &c. They are all of the kind designated coral islands, and are most usually surrounded by a dangerous reef of coral, which presents a very few openings for the ingress of vessels into the smooth water. Several kinds of birds are peculiar to them; and the flora is that peculiar to the Pacific Islands, the bread-fruit tree being one of its most valuable members. The people were generally of a gentle and voluptuous disposition; but all the cruelties of the darkest heathenism were perpetrated amongst them. This group was one of the first scenes of the labours of the English Missionary Society; and after long years of toil some good was undoubtedly accomplished. But the acquisition of political influence by the missionaries, which followed from their successful preaching, ended most disastrously; some provocation was thoughtlessly given to France, by the uncalculated expulsion of two Romanist priests, and the result was the taking possession of the islands by the French, and the overthrow of the missions, accompanied by all the evils that war could bring amongst the people. The population cannot now be estimated.

SOCIANUS, or SOZZI'NT, the name of two theological writers of the 16th century, who are looked upon as the founders of the Unitarian denomination. Leilus Socinus, the son of a famous lawyer of Sienna, left his native country from religious considerations, during the height of the fervour of the Reformation, and after travelling through the countries in which it was proceeding most vigorously, settled at Zürich, in Switzerland, and adopted the Helvetic Confession; yet in his letters and private papers he left on record his own opinions, which differed most widely from his professed creed, and which furnished his nephew, Faustus, with the chief materials which he used afterwards. He died in 1602, aged 37 years. Faustus Socinus, his nephew, learned from his uncle's papers his opinions; and after residing at Florence for some time, in some office connected with the court there, he travelled in Europe, and settled amongst the Polish Unitarians, where his wealth and learning gradually gained him such influence, that he became the leader of the denomination, and imposed on it both his creed and his name. He died in 1604, aged 65 years.

SOCI'NIANISM. See UNITARIANISM.

SOCK, s. [soc, Sax. socius, Lat. socke, Belg.] something put in a shoe between the sole and the foot; the shoe worn by the ancient comedians. Poetically, comedy.

SOCKET, s. [souichette, Fr.] any hollow pipe, generally applied to the hollow part of a candlestick; is the hollow that contains the eye; a cavity in which any thing is inserted.

SOCKETHISEL, s. a stronger sort of chisel.

SO'CLE, ZO'CLE, s. in Architecture, is a flat square member under the bases of pedestals of statues, vases, &c., which serves as a foot or stand.

SO'COLA, a populous fruitful island in the Arabian Sea, lying off Cape Guardafui. It is about 50 miles in length, and 20 in breadth. It is very mountainous, but has also many fertile plains and valleys. Its produce consists in fine aloes, frankincense, ambergrace, dragon's blood, rice, dates, and coral. Tamarind is the principal place. Pop. about 5000. Lat. 12. 30. N. Long. 54. 0. E.

SO'CRATES, the great Athenian sage and martyr, was the son of a sculptor, named Sophroniscus, and was himself engaged at first in that profession. His mother was a midwife, and he used jocularly to claim for himself that office, since by his interrogative mode of conducting an argument he helped in the delivery of thoughts and opinions. Like the rest of the Athenians, he served in the wars his country was engaged in, and was distinguished for his cool and unconquerable valour, and he was nobly eminent in the resistance he repeatedly offered to the wrong doings of the mob-government of Athens. When advanced in manhood he commenced his great work as a teacher of truth and wisdom. He had been admirably taught. The best teachers of philosophy had yielded him all their discoveries. He had frequented the brilliant réunions of Aspasia. But his own solitary meditations had fitted him for loftier work than the common run of teachers, the Sophists, had ever proposed. He did not lecture; he conversed. He had consummate skill in conducting his arguments. With the air of a most un instructed learner, he inveigled his antagonist into some confident but absurd statement, and then by a series of seemingly artless questions, by some apposite example, by some touch of irony, he made his opponent demolish his own argument, and leave the field in his hands. He loved the crowds of the city, and was delighted to talk with men of all professions and trades, and to lead them by his humorous and skillful conversation to look at their own pursuits from some new point of view, to exercise their minds on what they had been used to do mechanically, and to make them something more than the slaves of their tools. Such a teacher, not capable of bribery, for he took no fees, so keen-sighted, so courageous, was not agreeable to those in Athens who wished to pursue their plans out of the reach of truth-loving eyes. He was satirized on the stage; Aristophanes devoted his Clouds to the ridicule of "the wisest of men." He was denounced as a corrupter of youth, and a denier of the gods. His defence at his trial was too noble for the court; he was condemned to drink hemlock, and so, in 400 B. C., he died, aged 72 years. Socrates left no written record of his philosophy, but we have in Plato, and in Xenophon, a tolerably full account of his labours, whilst Aristotle adds some further details. The representations of these writers are not harmonious in appearance, yet it is evident, on studying them, that they are taken from one man, and that such a one as we have been led by history to regard Socrates as being. In Philosophy, his great engine was correct definition;—a matter not overvalued in these days;—yet not capable of doing all the service to truth which he deemed. He was, however, rather an ethical than a physical philosopher, and devoted his inquiries to wisdom, truth, virtue, immortality. That he should succeed in his effort was impossible, his method being so imperfect. The method of his great disciple, Plato, failed; and so, also, did that of Aristotle. Yet he opened the question, and gave a new turn to the efforts of inquirers, began a new era in human thought. Respecting the dæmon of Socrates, it can only be said that what he said of it is exactly analogous to what has been said by men in later days in an exalted state of religious enthusiasm. It resembles a purification of Divine Providence, made by one who profoundly believed in such guidance and protection. Few heroic thinkers amongst men have produced so deep and so beneficial an impression on the world. Such a one in any age were a blessing no thanks were too warm for. Yet it is hardly to be doubted, that the Socrates of every other age would have met with a like requital to that which was given to the sage of Athens.

SOCRATES, surnamed Scholasticus, an ecclesiastical historian of the 5th century. He was lawyer or advocate at Constantinople, and his History extends from the times of Constantine to 439 A. D. It is reckoned a very valuable work, although not free from errors, both of fact and opinion.

SOD, s. [soed, Belg.] a turf or clod.

SOD, preter. of TO SEETHE.

SOD'A, s. [Lat.] in Chemistry, the common name of the protoxide of sodium.

SODALITY, s. [sodalitas, Lat.] a fellowship; a fraternity.

SOD'DEN, past part. of TO SEETHE.

SOD'ER. See SO'DLER.

SODIUM, s. in Chemistry, a silvery-coloured metal, chiefly known in its combination with oxygen, as soda. It burns very vividly on contact with hot water, and less vividly on cold, on the surface of which it floats.

SODOM, the chief of those ancient cities of Palestine, over whose site the Dead Sea now rolls. Its history is only known from the Old Testament.

SODOMY, s. a sin of the flesh against nature.

SODOR, a little village in Columbkilly, one of the Western Isles of Scotland, near that of Mull. It was formerly a bishop's see, which comprehended all the islands, together with the Isle of Man, for which reason the bishop is still called the bishop of Sodor and Man.

SOEVER, ad. at all; any; generally used in composition with some pronoun or adverb.

SOFA, s. [Arab.] a narrow couch, forming, in this country, one of the chief articles of furniture in a drawing-room.

SOFALA, or CEFALA, a kingdom of Africa, lying on the coast of Mosambique, near Zanguebar. Its boundaries are not clearly defined. It is level near the sea, and watered by several rivers.

It contains mines of gold and iron, and a great number of elephants. The chief exports are its ivory, gold, and the produce of its innumerable bees. The Portuguese claim it, by virtue of a small settlement bearing the same name, seated on an island, near the mouth of one of its rivers. Lat. 20. 10. S. Long. 34. 46. E.

SOFT, a. [Sax. soft, Belg.] easily yielding to the touch, opposed to hard; sumptuous or delicate, applied to dress; ductile; yielding; facile; mild; meek; tender; placid; kind; timorous; easy or gentle, applied to motion; effeminately nice; delicate; weak; simple; smooth; flowing; gentle; low; not loud; complaisant.

SOFT, interj. stop! hold! not so fast!

TO SOFTEN, v. a. to make soft; to make less hard; to mollify, compose, or make less angry, or fierce; to affect with pity; to make less harsh;—v. n. to grow less hard, less cruel, or less obstinate; to yield to any impression.

SOFTGRASS, s. in Botany, a kind of grass, the ears of which are very drassy.

SOFTLY, ad. without hardness; not forcibly; not loudly; gently; tenderly; mildly.

SOFTNER, s. that which makes soft; one who palliates. SOFTNESS, s. the quality of being soft; mildness; civility; gentleness; pusillanimity; easiness to be affected.

SOHO, interj. a form of calling at a distance.

TO SOIL, v. a. [silian, Sax. soelen, old Tent. soiiller, Fr.] to make dirty; to stain; to pollute; to sully; to foul; to manure.

SOIL, s. dirt or foulness; ground or earth, considered with respect to its qualities for growth; a country or land; compost; manure.

SOISSONS, an ancient, large, and considerable city in the department of Aisne, France. It is a bishop's see. The environs are beautiful, but the streets are narrow and the houses ill-built. It is seated in a very pleasant and fertile valley, on the Aisne, 60 miles from Paris. Pop. 8500. Lat. 48. 23. N. Long. 3. 24. E.

TO SOJOURN, (sojourn) v. n. [sojourn, Fr.] to dwell in a foreign country for a time.

SOJOURNER, s. a temporary dweller.

SOL, Sou, s. a French coin, equal in value to about a half-penny.

TO SOLACE, v. a. [solatus, Lat.] to comfort, or make a person less sensible of calamity.

SOLACE, s. comfort; succour; relief; consolation; anything which renders a person less sensible of calamity.

SOLAN GOOSE, s. in Ornithology, a very large species of marine fowl, frequently measuring 13 feet in stretch of wing, which is found abundantly round the rocky islands of the coast of Scotland, and is now the only inhabitant of the famous Bass Rock.

SOLANDER, s. [souländres, Fr.] in Veterinary Surgery, a disease in horses.

SOLANDER, DR. DANIEL CHARLES, a famous naturalist, who was born in Sweden, and studied at Upsal under Linnæus. He subsequently went to England, where he was engaged in the British Museum, and made the circumnavigation of the world with Captain Cook as an associate of Banks. He died in 1782, aged 40 years. His works are yet of value in botanical and zoological science.

SOLAR, SO'LARY, a. [solaire, Fr. solaris, from sol, Lat.] being of, or belonging to, the sun; measured by the sun. Solar Cycle. See CYCLE.

SOLAR SYSTEM, s. in Astronomy, a collective term for the sun with the planets and comets which revolve round him. The following table will be found useful for reference.

Name and Sign.	Diameter.	Diurnal Rotation.	Annual Rotation.	Distance from Sun.	Number of Satellites.
Sun ☉	882,000 miles	25 days
Mercury ☿	3,200	23 hours	88 days	36,791,000 miles
Venus ♀	7,800	23 "	225 "	68,748,000 "
Earth ☁	7,900	1 day	1 year	93,044,000 "	1 (sign ♀)
Mars ♂	4,100	24 ½ ho.	1 yr. 322d.	144,018,000 "
Asteroids—Juno, no ♀, Vesta ♀, Ceres ♀, Pallas ♀, Iris, Hebe, Astræa, Flora.	various, but all very small.		(average) 4y. 90d.	(average) 250,000,000 "
Jupiter ♃	87,000	10 hours	11y. 318d.	494,494,000 "	4
Saturn ♄	79,000	10 ½ "	29y. 174d.	906,867,000 "	7
Uranus ♅	34,400		84y. 27d.	1,825,178,000 "	6
Neptune ♆			about 169y.	2,851,320,000 "	1

* And somewhat diminished.

† Seen by Herschel.

‡ Already known.

Beside these bodies are innumerable comets, a few of which, as Encke's, Biela's, Halley's, &c., revolve in ascertained periods; but of far the greater number the elements of their orbits are unknown.

SOLD, preter. of To SELL.

SOLDER, s. [solder, Fr.] a fusible metallic cement for metals.

To SOLDER, v. a. to join metals by a metallic cement.

SOLDIER, s. [soldarius, low Lat.] a person whose trade is war; a warrior.

SOLDIERY, s. the body of soldiers.

SOLE, s. [solum, Lat.] the bottom of the foot. Figuratively, the foot; that part of the shoe which rests on the ground. In Ichthyology, a common flat-fish in the British seas, which is very delicate eating.

To SOLE, v. a. to put a new sole on a shoe.

SOLE, a. [solus, Lat.] single; only. In Law, not married.

SOLECISM, s. [solecismos, Gr.] in Rhetoric, an impropriety in language by the misapplication of words.

SOLELY, ad. singly; only.

SOLEMY, (solém) a. [solémnis, Lat.] grave; awful; performed with reverence and gravity.

SOLENNITY, s. [sollemnité, Fr.] a religious, grave, or awful ceremony or procession; gravity; awful grandeur; affected gravity.

SOLENNIZATION, s. the act of celebrating.

To SOLENNIZE, v. a. [sollemniser, Fr.] to perform the ceremonies of any particular rite; to celebrate.

SOLENNLY, ad. with formal gravity; with religious seriousness.

SOLETHUR, or SOLOTHURN, a canton of Switzerland, bordering on France, and bounded by the cantons of Basle, Bern, and Aargau. It is 35 miles in length, and 25 in breadth, and contains 12 bailiwicks. It lies amidst the Jurassic chain of mountains, some heights of which exceed 4000 feet. It yields iron, building-stone, &c. It is chiefly pastoral; silk also is cultivated. Its chief city, of the same name, stands on the Aar, and has a splendid cathedral and other public buildings, a college, and a good library. Pop. about 5000. Lat. 47. 13. N. Long. 7. 33. E. Pop. of canton, about 70,000.

SOL-FA-ING, SOLMIZATION, in Music, a method of teaching singing by means of certain syllables appropriated either to the various notes constantly, or else to the notes in each key, they are Do, Re, Mi, Fa, Sol, La, Si. It is not approved by the best teachers, because it causes additional perplexity, with no corresponding advantage to the learner.

To SOLICIT, v. a. [solicito, Lat.] to ask with great importunity; to excite; to attempt or try to obtain; to implore; to disturb, or disquiet.

SOLICITATION, s. importunity; invitation; excitement.

SOLICITOR, s. a petitioner for another. In Law, a person who does in Chancery the business which is done by attorney in other courts. Solicitor-General is a great officer of the law, next to the Attorney-General, and holds his office by patent; has the management of the king's affairs, and has fees for pleading, besides others arising by patents, &c.

SOLICITOUS, a. [solicitus, Lat.] anxious, careful, or concerned; used with about, and sometimes with for or of.

SOLICITOUSLY, ad. anxiously; carefully.

SOLICITUDE, s. [solicitudo, from solicito, Lat.] anxiety; trouble.

SOLID, a. [solide, Fr. solidus, Lat.] firm; having its parts so closely connected, as not to slip or give way on pressure, opposed to fluid; compact, or full of matter, opposed to hollow; strong, opposed to weak; real or true, opposed to fallacious; gross, opposed to light.

SOLID, s. a thing whose parts will not give way to any slight impression. In Geometry, the third species of magnitude, containing length, breadth, and depth.

SOLIDITY, SOLIDNESS, s. [soliditas, Fr. soliditas, Lat.] firmness; density; hardness; compactness. Figuratively; truth; certainty.

SOLILOQUY, s. [solus and logor, Lat.] a discourse held in solitude, or by a person who utters his thoughts in words, though no one is present.

SOLITÁIRE, s. [Fr.] a recluse or hermit; an ornament for the neck.

SOLITARILY, ad. with loneliness; without company.

SOLITARY, a. [solitaire, Fr. solitarius, from solus, Lat.] living alone; remote from company; retired; single; gloomy; dismal.

SOLITUDE, s. [Fr. solitude, Lat.] the state of a person who is at a distance from company; a place remote from company, or any populous city.

SOLLAR, s. [solarium, low Lat.] a garret.

SOLLO, s. [Ital.] a tune sung by a single person, or played by a single instrument.

SOLOMON, the king of Israel, renowned for his wisdom, and for the splendour of his peaceful reign. He was the son of David, and succeeded him on the throne. His great work was the erection of the Temple at Jerusalem, which was built with the greatest magnificence. He largely encouraged commerce; and the territories subject to him stretched to the river Euphrates. He was held in universal esteem in the East for his wisdom, and the queen of the Sabeans visited him for the purpose of benefiting by his famed knowledge. He was allied by marriage to the kings of Egypt, and in the latter part of his reign was seduced by his voluptuousness into the worship of idols. He died in 973 B. C., aged 92 years, and having reigned 40. The Books of Ecclesiastes and the Song of Songs, with portions of the Book of Proverbs, and some of the Psalms, are ascribed to him. Respecting the second of these, it needs only to be remarked that it is a most beautiful poem, or series of poems, but written altogether in the glowing language of the East, and quite out of harmony with our colder notions of propriety; and that its scope and purpose is to praise the true married state, in contrast with the nursing sensuality of the harem, and not to exhibit any profound spiritual truths under the veil of allegory, although, as is very common, lines and stanzas may have been quoted with a forced application to such a subject. The apocryphal book called the Wisdom of Solomon, is evidently the production of a later age.

SOLOMON'S SEAL, s. in Botany, an English plant, allied to the lily of the valley, and having alternate leaves with white hanging bell-flowers, on a slender arching stem.

SOLON, the great Athenian legislator, and one of the seven sages of Greece. He was first a merchant, and having, by travel and study, gained a considerable renown, he enhanced it by recovering Salamis for the Athenian state; and when made archon, devoted himself to the task of framing a constitution for the city, and a code of laws. Having completed his work, he left Athens, and travelled in Asia Minor, Egypt, and other countries; and returning after 10 years, (when, according to the bond of the citizens, the constitution was to be revised,) he found his laws as good as overturned, and Peisistratus plotting to obtain the tyranny. He soon left his native place again, and died in Cyprus, in 559 B. C., aged about 80 years.

SOLSTICE, s. [solstice, Fr. solstitium, from sol and sto, Lat.] in Astronomy, is that time when the sun is at his greatest distance from the equator; thus called because he then appears to stand still, and not to change his distance from the equator for some time. The summer Solstice is when the sun enters Cancer, on June 21, the longest day; the winter Solstice is when he enters the first degree of Capricorn, on December 21, the shortest day.

SOLSTICIAL, (solstitial) a. [solsticial, Fr.] belonging to the solstice; happening at the solstice.

SOLUBLE, a. [solubilis, from solvo, Lat.] capable of having its parts separated or dissolved.

SOLUBILITY, s. capability of being separated or dissolved.

To SOLVE, v. a. [solvo, Lat.] to clear or explain any thing difficult.

SOLVENCY, s. ability to pay.

SOLVENT, a. having the power to cause dissolution; able to pay debts contracted.

SOLVENT, s. in Chemistry, a menstruum; that which has the power of dissolving.

SOLUTION, (solushon) s. [Fr. solutio, Lat.] the act of explaining any thing difficult; the act of separating or dissolving; any thing whose parts are separated or dissolved. In Mathematics, the performance of what is required to be done in a problem.

SOLWAY, the name of a large bay or frith, lying between the counties of Cumberland, in England, and Kircudbright and Dumfries, in Scotland. It is about 20 miles in length, and in breadth varies from 2 to 15 miles. The Esk and the Eden are the principal rivers discharging themselves into it. It is famous for its salmon fisheries. Solway Moss lies near the mouth of the Esk.

SOMATOLOGY, s. [soma and logos, Gr.] the doctrine of bodies.

SOME, (the o in this word and its derivatives is pron. short,) a. [saum, Belg.] used in composition after adjectives, implies quality or property of any thing.

SOME, a. [soom, Sax. and Dan. sum, Teut. sumo, Goth.] more or less, used indifferently; certain persons; one, or any.

SOMEBODY, s. a person; a person of dignity.

SOMEBOW, ad. one way or another; I know not how.

SOMERS, JOHN, LORD, a great lawyer and statesman of the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th centuries. He studied at Oxford, and prepared for the bar in the Temple; and acquired, both in his profession and in the walks of literature, an early renown. He first obtained the attention which led him to fame, at the trial of the seven bishops, on whose side he was engaged. The Revolution of 1688, which he earnestly promoted, opened to him the road to preferment, and he rapidly rose to the chancellorship; which eminence led to his impeachment by the Commons, which was not prosecuted. In the union of Scotland with England, he took a leading part; and held office for a short time under Anne. He died in 1716, aged 66 years. His character has usually been drawn from the panegyrics of his party; but there seems to be no doubt that there was good ground for the charges made by his opponents against him. He was regarded as a steady patron by the brilliant men of letters who illustrated the reign of Anne.

SOMERSAULT, So'MERSET, s. [sommer and sault, Fr.] a leap by which a person flings himself from or over a beam, and turns over his head at the same time.

SOMERSETSHIRE, a county of England, lying on the Bristol Channel, and bounded by Gloucestershire, Wiltshire, Dorsetshire, and Devonshire. Its length is about 65 miles, and its breadth between 30 and 40. It is divided into 40 hundreds, which contain 3 cities, 33 market towns, and 482 parishes. The air, in the lower grounds, is universally mild, and generally wholesome. It is hilly, and the Mendip chain has heights of about 1000 feet. The principal rivers are the Parret, Ivel, Chew, Axe, Thone, Brent, Exe, Frome, and Avon. Coal, and various metals, with good building and other kinds of stone, are found here. Corn, &c. are raised here; but cattle, sheep, cheese, &c. are more abundantly produced. Manufactures of several kinds are carried on in its towns, and some places have a great trade. Taunton is the county town. Pop. 435,982. It sends 13 members to parliament.

SOMERTON, Somersetshire. It was formerly a considerable place, from which the county took its name, and is at present pretty large, and has a considerable trade in agricultural produce. It is 123 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 1981.

SOMERVILLE, WILLIAM, one of the minor poets of England. He studied at Oxford, lived as a reputable country gentleman on his paternal estate, and died in 1742, aged 50 years. His chief poem, entitled the Chase, is yet read and admired.

SOMETHING, s. [sumthing, Sax.] more than nothing; a part; more or less.—ad. in some degree.

SOMETIMES, ad. formerly; once; at some period.

SOMETIMES, ad. now and then; at particular times.

SOMEWHAT, ad. in some degree.—s. something; a part greater or less.

SOMEWHERE, ad. in some place or other.

SOMME, a department of France, lying on the English Channel, and bounded by the departments of Pas de Calais, Nord, Aisne, Oise, and Seine Inférieure. It is 80 miles in length, and 45 in breadth. It is a flat district, and its rivers are the Somme, (after which it is named,) and some of less note. Building-stone is its only mineral product. Corn, fruits, and cattle are tolerably abundant. Various manufactures of small account are carried on in the towns. Amiens is its capital. Pop. about 600,000.

SOMNAMBULISM, s. [somnus and ambulo, Lat.] in Physiology, the unconscious exercise of the active powers during sleep. It is frequent in persons of a particular temperament, and attends some diseases. It also signifies the particular state of unconscious and preternatural activity of the mental powers, which is one of the most remarkable features of Mesmerism; which see.

SOMNIFEROUS, a. [somnus and fero, Lat.] causing sleep; soporific; narcotic.

SOMNOLENCY, s. [somnus, Lat.] sleepiness.

SON, (sein) s. [sunna, Sax. sohn, Teut.] a male child; a native.

SON-IN-LAW, s. a man married to one's daughter.

SONATA, s. [Ital.] in Music, a composition for instruments only; in which, as in the cantata, the composer does not confine himself to the general rules of counterpoint, but gives free scope to his genius.

SONG, s. [gesungnen, Sax.] any words set to music; a short lyric poem, containing one principal thought, with various illustrations, &c., and especially subjective in its character; the notes of birds; poetry. An old song, is proverbial for a trifle. Song of Solomon. See SOLOMON.

SONGSTER, s. a singer.

SONNET, s. [Fr.] a poem contained in fourteen lines, with but five different rhymes, arranged in various ways by various poets, complete in itself, and usually devoted to the expression of the affections, or nobler passions. Also, generally, a small poem.

SONNI'NI, CHARLES NICOLAS SIGISBERT, DE MANOUCOURT, an eminent French naturalist. He studied law, at first, and afterwards embraced the military profession. He travelled in Cayenne, Africa, the countries round the Levant, &c., and aided Buffon with the results of his observations and researches. At the Revolution he suffered greatly in his circumstances, and was afterwards, for a short time, in the college of Vienna. He travelled at last in N. Turkey, and died in 1811, aged 60 years. His works, recording his travels, have yet some interest for general, as well as scientific, readers.

SONORIFIC, a. [sonorus and facio, Lat.] giving or producing sound.

SONOROUS, a. [sonore, Fr. sonorus, Lat.] loud sounding; roaring; noisy; magnificent of sound.

SONOROUSNESS, s. the quality of giving sound.

SOOLOO ISLANDS, a group, or chain, lying between the island of Borneo and Mindanao in the Philippine Islands. The larger islands are mountainous, and they are abundantly fertile. Rice and other grain, drugs and dye-stuffs, timber, spices, and fruits, are produced in plenty. Palawan is the largest, but the island which gives its name to the group has the capital, which is also called Sooloo. The trade is considerable. Pop. about 150,000.

SOON, ad. [sona, Sax. sunns, Goth.] shortly after any assigned time; early, opposed to late; readily. As soon as, at the very time or instant.

SOOT, (sift) s. [soot, Sax.] carbonaceous particles, driven off by the heat of combustion, and accumulated in chimneys, &c., along which they are carried by the current of ascending air from the fire. Common soot is used as a manure. See LAMPBLACK.

SOOTH, s. [soth, Sax.] truth; reality.

To SOOTH, SOOTHE, v. a. [gesoethian, Sax.] to flatter; to please with blandishments; to soften; to mollify; to calm; to assuage; to alleviate; to gratify; to please.

To SOOTHISAY, v. n. to foretell; to predict.

SOOTHISAYER, s. one who foretells future events; a predictor; a prognosticator.

SOOTINESS, s. the quality of being sooty.

SOOTY, a. consisting of, or daubed with, soot; producing soot; black; dark; dusky.

SOP, s. [Sax. sopa, Span. soppe, Belg.] bread steeped in liquor, &c.

SOPH, (sif) s. a young student who has been two years at the university.

SOPH, (sif) s. [Pers.] a title of the emperor of Persia, implying wisdom, sage; a philosopher.

SOPHISM, (sophism) s. [sophisma, Lat. from sophia, Gr.] in Logic, a proposition or argument, in appearance correct or conclusive, but in reality not so.

SOPHIST, s. [sophistes, Gr.] one who uses sophisms. In the History of Philosophy, a teacher of rhetoric; but also, and chiefly, a class of rhetorical teachers at Athens, and elsewhere, who taught word-wisdom, and corrupted and perverted the profession and study of philosophy. It was against these men that Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle contended. And it was the keen wit of the first of those true philosophers, that, making the wounds inflicted on the credit of the Sophists more painful,

GLOUCESTERSHIRE

REFERENCE TO THE HINDU'S & BUDDHIST'S

[illegible]

The County returns 4 Members.

CLAYTON B. KUZMA

roused them against him, and perhaps helped, in great part, to destroy him. The charges against Socrates in the Clouds of Aristophanes, and on his trial, apply truly to the Sophists.

SOPHISTICAL, (sɒfɪstɪkəl) a. partaking of the nature of sophism; fallaciously subtle; logically deceitful.

To SOPHISTICATE, (sɒfɪstɪkət) v. a. [sophistiquer, Fr.] to corrupt or adulterate.

SOPHISTRY, (sɒfɪstri) s. fallacious ratiocination.

SOPHOCLES, one of the most eminent dramatic writers of Ancient Greece, who ranks next to Æschylus in genius, and surpasses him as a theatrical poet. In his youth he led the chorus who celebrated the victories at Salamis; in his manhood he was the colleague of Pericles and Thucydides in the war against Samos; and in old age was elected to the priesthood of a native hero. These are almost the whole record of his life as a citizen. Of his artist life it is recorded that he wrote above a hundred plays; with the first of which he bore away the prize from his greater predecessor. Seven of his pieces are preserved; four of which were esteemed amongst the ancients as his greatest works. In his Œdipus Rex we have an example of an almost modern plot. The Œdipus Coloneus is a piece of peculiar sweetness and beauty. His Electra tells the tale of the murder of Clytemnestra by Orestes, in a way that, for dramatic art, may be well accounted superior to that of Æschylus in his Choephore; and which makes Euripides, in his Electra, appear the Kotzebue of the Greek theatre. He died in 406 B. C., aged 90 years.

SOPORIFIC, SOPORIFEROUS, a. [sopor and facio, or fero, Lat.] in Medicine, capable of procuring sleep.

SOPRANO, s. [Ital.] in Music, the name by which the highest range of the human voice is distinguished. See TREBLE.

SORBOINNE, the name of the celebrated theological college which flourished at Paris, and gave laws to the world of divinity, for so many ages. It was founded by Robert de Sorbonne in 1252, and fell at the Revolution.

SORCERER, s. [sorcier, Fr.] a conjurer; a magician; an enchantment.

SORCERESS, s. a female magician; an enchantress.

SORCELY, s. magic; enchantment; witchcraft; conjuration; charms.

SORD, s. [from sordus,] turf; grassy ground.

SORDES, s. [Lat.] foulness; drags.

SORDET, s. [sordine, v. n. [sordina, Fr. sordina, Ital.] a small pipe put into the mouth of a trumpet, to change the key.

SORDID, a. [sordidus, Lat.] foul; gross; filthy; dirty; mean; base; vile; covetous; niggardly.

SORDIDNESS, s. meanness; nastiness.

SORE, s. [sax, Sax. saur, Dan.] the popular name for any cutaneous disease, or ulcer, extending over a small space. In Hunting, a fallow-deer, 4 years old.

SORE, a. painful when touched; easily vexed; afflictively vehement.

SORE, ad. [soer, Belg.] with painful vehemence; with great reluctance or afflictive violence.

SORELY, ad. with a great degree of pain or distress; with vehemence dangerous or afflictive.

SORENESS, s. tenderness of a hurt.

SORITES, s. [Gr.] in Logic, a species of reasoning, in which a great number of propositions are linked together; a series of enthymemes.

SORRAGE, s. the blades of green wheat or barley.

SORRANCE, s. among farmers, any disease in horses.

SORREL, s. [sorel, Fr.] in Botany, a genus of plants, allied to the dock, which are remarkable for their agreeable acid taste. In Hunting, a fallow-deer, 3 years old. Also, a colour among horses.

SORRILY, ad. meanly; wretchedly; despicably.

SORROW, (sɒrɒ) s. [sory, Dan.] uneasiness or grief arising from some good lost; sadness.

To SORROW, (sɒrɒ) v. n. [sorgian, Sax. saurgan, Goth.] to grieve or be afflicted for the loss of some good.

SORROWFUL, (sɒrɒfʊl) a. grieving for some good past; mournful; sad.

SORRY, ad. [sarig, Sax.] grieved for something past.—[saur, Isl.] vile, mean, paltry, worthless, vexatious.

SORT, s. [sorte, Fr.] a kind, species, or class; a rank or degree; a degree of any quality.

To SORT, v. a. [sortior, Lat.] to separate into distinct species, classes, ranks, or orders; to conjoin or put together, followed by with; to reduce to order from a state of confusion; to choose; to cull; to select.—v. n. to be joined with others of the same species, followed by with.—[sortir, Fr.] to terminate.

SORTILEGE, s. [Fr. from sors and lego, Lat.] a species of divination performed by lots.

SORTMENT, s. the act of separating into distinct kinds; a parcel sorted or distributed.

SORTIGENES, an Egyptian astronomer, of whom nothing more is known, that that he aided Julius Cesar in the correction of the calendar. He proposed to regard the year as consisting of 365½ days, and to keep the average year accurate by the intercalation of one day in 4 years. See CALENDAR, &c.

To SOSS, v. n. to sit lazily, or fall at once in a chair.

SOT, s. [Sax. Fr. and Belg.] a stupid person; a blockhead; a dolt; a person stupefied by drinking.

SOTHEYBY, WILLIAM, a poetical writer of the last generation. Early in life he entered the army, and travelled on the continent, chiefly for improvement in his profession, which he soon, however, renounced for the more peaceful and beneficial pursuit of literature. The chief events of his life for many years were now the publication of his various poems. He afterwards resumed his travels, and visited Italy. After a life of great activity and industry, he died in 1832, aged 75 years. Almost the only one of his numerous works that keeps its place in the world of letters, is his translation of Wieland's Oberon.

SOTTISH, a. dull; stupid; senseless.

SOVEREIGN, (səvərən) a. [souverain, Fr.] supreme, or having no superior in power; supremely efficacious.

SOVEREIGN, (səvərən) s. a supreme ruler. Also the name of an English coin.

SOVEREIGNTY, (səvərən) s. [souveraineté, Fr.] supremacy; highest place, power, or excellence.

SOUFFLOT, JACQUES GERMAIN, an eminent French architect. He studied at Rome, and afterwards travelled to increase his acquaintance with the great works of art in Italy, and other countries. On his return, he settled at Lyons, and acquired such renown as to be engaged in rebuilding the church of St. Genevieve, at Paris, which is his greatest work. He died in 1780, aged 67 years.

SOUGH, (sɒf) s. [sous, Fr.] a drain under ground.

SOUGHT, (saut) the preter. and past part. of TO SEEK.

SOUL, (səʊl) s. [savel, Sax. sael, Dan. saul, Isl. síel, Belg.] popularly, the mind of man, the human spirit; but sometimes, in the New Testament, and older divines, the inferior powers of man's mind, the sensual understanding. See MIND, UNDERSTANDING, REASON, SPRIT, &c. Generally, also, a vital and active principle; spirit or essence; inward power; a person; spirit; fire; grandeur of mind.

SOUND, a. [sund, Sax.] healthy; not morbid; not hurt; hearty; right, applied to knowledge; stout, strong; fast or profound, applied to sleep.

SOUND, s. [son, Fr. sonus, Lat.] in Acoustics, a peculiar vibratory motion in the particles of the atmosphere, perceived by the mind through the organ of hearing. A noise; a musical note.—[sund, Sax.] in Surgery, a probe used to examine wounds, &c., which are too small for the admission of the finger. A shallow sea which may be sounded. It is especially used to designate the narrow Strait at the entrance to the Baltic, between Sweden and the island of Zealand, commanded by the strong fort called Elsinore, where foreign trading-ships pay a toll to the Danes.

To SOUND, v. a. to search with a plummet; to try or examine; to cause to make a noise; to play on; to betoken or direct by a sound; to celebrate by sound.—v. n. to make a noise; to excite an idea by likeness of sound; to try with the sounding line.

SOUNDING, s. in Marine Surveying, &c., the depth of the water over banks, in channels and roadsteads, in rivers, &c. &c., ascertained by the lead and line, and laid down for the assistance of pilots and sea-captains.

SOUNDING-BOARD, an apparatus formerly placed over pulpits, to reflect the sound downwards, now disused, generally, from greater attention being paid to the construction of buildings for public speaking, &c.

SOUNDLY, ad. healthily; rightly; fast, applied to sleep.

SOUNDNESS, s. health; truth; solidity; strength.

SOUP, (soup) s. [soupe, Fr.] in Cookery, rich broth of beef, veal, turtle, &c. &c., delicately flavoured with spices, herbs, &c.

SOUR, a. [sur, Brit. and Sax.] acid; sharp to the taste; austere; pungent; peevish, or crabbed of temper; morose; severe; painful or disagreeable; expressive of dislike, applied to the countenance.—s. an acid substance.

To SOUR, v. a. to make sharp to the taste; to make harsh; to make uneasy, or less pleasing.—v. n. to turn so as to taste sharp; to grow peevish.

SOURCE, (source) s. [Fr.] a spring; an original; first cause; a first producer.

SOURNESS, s. acidity; austerity of taste or temper.

SOUSE, a. [soute, Belg.] pickle made of salt; any thing parboiled and kept in salt; pickle.

To SOUSE, v. a. to parboil and preserve in salt pickle; to throw into the water; to strike with sudden violence.—v. n. to dart like a bird on its prey.

SOUTH, a. meridional; southern.

SOUTH, s. [south, Sax. sud, Belg. sud, Fr.] that point of the heavens diametrically opposite to the north; the wind which blows from the south.—ad. towards or from the south. South-east is the point between the E. and S.

SOUTH, ROBERT, the famous preacher of the latter part of the 17th century. He studied at Westminster and Oxford, and maintained his royalism and episcopalianism during the Protectorate, albeit that he congratulated Oliver on his victories over the Dutch. He made himself a name at the Restoration, and took his ground in almost his first public sermon. Clarendon made him his chaplain, and his son took him in the same capacity with him on an embassy to Poland. With the inevitable Revolution of 1688 he did not contend; but he engaged in a controversy on the ever-vexed question of the Trinity, with Dr. Sherlock, in conducting which he used all his redoubtable wit, which had made him so terrible in his criticisms on Jeremy Taylor's style, and his implacable opposition to the Nonconformists. He died in 1716, aged 83 years. He wrote other pieces beside his Sermons, but it is on these that his enduring fame rests. He is not above his age in many points; but in solid sense, vigorous and compact expression, vivacious fancy, and wit that seems strangely out of place in such compositions, yet stamps them as honestly his own, he stands pre-eminent. His ceaseless attacks on the beaten and persecuted Puritans had not much magnanimity, nor do they display the least apprehension of the question at issue with them, or the least intention to be guilty of the weakness of argument. Instead of attempting the slow and sure method of sapping and mining the defences of his opponents, he dashes against them under cover of a pitiless fire of Hudibrastic wit. It was very annoying at the time, and it seemed to sweep all before it; but it wrought no injury; and now the descendants and followers of the Puritans are amongst the heartiest admirers of the intellectual powers of their untiring foe.

SOUTHAMPTON, Hampshire. It is pleasantly situated on a fine inlet of the sea, called Trissanton Bay, or Southampton Water, which is navigable almost to the head for vessels of considerable burden; and the two principal rivers that flow into it (the Itchen and the Test or Tese) admit small crafts some way up the country. The town is situated between these two rivers. It is a handsome place, with some fine public buildings, and a considerable trade. Ship-building, and the manufacture of sails, cordage, &c. are also carried on. It is a place of some resort for sea-bathing. It is 75 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Pop. 27,744.

SOUTHCOTT, JOANNA, an ignorant and self-deluded woman, who succeeded in inspiring great numbers of people, more ignorant than herself, that she was the woman spoken of in the 12th chapter of the Book of Revelation; and in her dropsical condition, believed herself, and made others believe her, about to be the mother of the long-expected Shiloh. She was unwise enough to fix the time for the birth; but even the failure of that did not undeviate her followers. And her death, which occurred not long after that disappointment, made for a time but little impression on their numbers. It happened in 1814, when she was about 64 years of age. For more than 30 years, some of her disciples have waited in confident hope of her resurrection, and yet being the Virgin Mother of Blessing for the World.

SOUTHERLY, a. lying towards the south; not absolutely southern.

SOUTHERN, a. lying towards the south; coming from the south; belonging to the south.

SOUTHERNWOOD, s. in Botany, a well-known kind of plants, of which the common wormwood is a species.

SOUTHEY, DR. ROBERT, the late poet-laureate, and one of the most indefatigable students and writers that has in modern times adorned the world of letters. He studied at Oxford, and embracing with all the untiring ardour of youth the hopes awakened at the outburst of the French Revolution, joined with Coleridge and a friend named Lovell, he projected the often-ridiculed scheme of a Pantisocracy. Want of money, and marriage, recalled him to the real world, and he went to Portugal with his uncle, who was English chaplain at Lisbon. He returned there after a visit to England; and when he finally left Lisbon, engaged himself as secretary to a member of government at Dublin. Finally, he settled near Keswick in Cumberland, in the neighbourhood of Wordsworth and Coleridge, and there he resided till his death. In the latter part of his life he fell into a state of imbecility, and died in 1843, aged 69 years. His writings are exceedingly numerous, and embrace a vast diversity of subjects. His poetry, though it does not place him amongst the first ranks of the choir of the Muses, is rich in imagination, and characterized by a chaste splendour of diction, that will not let it die. Beside his own poetry, he edited the works of other bards, of earlier and of later date; and Kirke White's poems, and the pieces of an interesting young lady of America, Lucretia Davidson, owe no small share of attention to his efforts. In biography he excelled, and few productions of this kind are more deeply interesting than his Lives of Cooper, Bunyan, Wesley, Nelson, &c. His History of Brazil, and that of the Peninsular War, display all the research and discrimination that become an historian. As an essayist, he holds a prominent station. His contributions to the Quarterly Review are amongst the best of that accumulation of works of scholarship and genius. And his Colloquies on Society, and especially the Doctor, deserve to be particularly mentioned. In addition to all this literary industry, he was a most prolific letter-writer; and such as have been published in various memoirs, show the ease and gracefulness that render such compositions peculiarly charming. It becomes readers to observe, however, in all his works, that whether from profound conviction, or from a desire to show that he had thoroughly forsaken his early speculations in religion and politics, he always insists with too much eagerness on his own view of our "Constitution in Church and State;" and, in his biographies especially, laid himself open to the kindly severe criticism of his old friend and admirer Coleridge, whose MS. notes, as far as published, afford a full counterpoise to the laureate's mistaken enthusiasm.

SOUTHING, s. in Astronomy, applied to the moon, stars, or planets, when they are in the meridian, or due south.

SOUTH SEA, the name by which the S. Pacific Ocean is commonly designated. The S. Sea Bubble was a financial scheme of the Earl of Oxford in Anne's reign, which, in the face of every obstacle of treaty, war, delay, failure, nevertheless, like Law's Mississippi scheme, threw so that it rose at last in price to 1000 per cent., and then suddenly and irretrievably fell. The history of the ten first years of its existence is an infamy. There was a feeble affair communicated to it subsequently, but the whole affair is now swept away.

SOUTHWARD, ad. towards the south.

SOUTHWARK, Surrey. It now forms part of the metropolis, being seated on the opposite side of the Thames, and connected with it by three bridges. Amongst the fine buildings which adorn it may be enumerated St. Saviour's church, and several of the other churches, the S. E. railway terminus, the hospitals, schools, &c. &c. It is characterized by the same diversity and extent of manufacturing industry as London is, and shares its universal trade. Pop. (of the original six parishes) 98,648. Southwark Holy Trinity, or Newington, pop. 19,064.

SOUTHWELL, ROBERT, a Jesuit priest and poet of the latter part of the 16th century. He studied at Rome, and was sent, with others, to England, to attempt the recovery of the country to the Roman Church in Elizabeth's reign. He was a victim to his zeal, being executed, under the severe laws then in force, in 1595, aged 35 years. His hymns have not lacked admirers, although not marked by any particular excellence. He wrote other works also, but they are not much known now.

SOUTHWEST, s. the point between the S. and W.

SOUTHWOLD, Suffolk. It is seated on a pleasant cliff overlooking Solebay, and has a harbour to the S., with the river Blythe, which is, however, accessible only by very small vessels. Its only manufacture is salt, and it is supported chiefly by visitors in the bathing season, and by the usual fisheries of the coast. It is 104 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 2186.

SOW, (the o is pron. as in note.) s. a female pig or hog. An oblong mass, applied to metals. See Pig.

To SOW, (sō) v. a. past part. sown. [sæwen, Sax.] to scatter seed on the ground for growth. Figuratively, to spread or propagate; to besprinkle.

SOWER, s. a scatterer of seed; a promoter; a breeder.

To SOWL, v. a. to pull by the ears.

SOWN, (sōn) participle of To SOW.

SOWTHISTLE, s. in Botany, a common well-known English plant, whose succulent leaves and stem make it greedily sought for by most herbivorous animals.

SOY, s. in Cookery, a kind of Indian sauce, made from a kind of bean. That sold in England is, of course, only an imitation of it.

SOZOMENUS, HERMIAS, an ecclesiastical historian of the 5th century. He was a barrister of Constantinople, and his work is less valuable than that of Socrates, yet it supplies some deficiencies. His history extends from the year 324 to 439 A. D.

SPA, a town of Liege, in Belgium. It stands in a beautiful valley, on a small stream; and is famous throughout Europe for its mineral springs, to all which it has given its own name. Pop. about 3500. Lat. 50. 32 N. Long. 5. 50 E.

SPACE, s. [spatium, Lat.] the distance between any two bodies or points; quantity, applied to time; the interval between any two lines of the musical staff. Space and Time, in Philosophy, are the two universal forms of the understanding, under which it regards all perceptions derived from the senses. The understanding does not contradict, but it cannot conceive, the infinity of space and time. It is, however, by considering them as fundamental laws of perception, that our great perplexity respecting eternity (which is commonly represented as infinite duration) is averted.

SPACIOUS, (spacious) a. [spacieuus, Fr. spatiosus, Lat.] wide; containing a great deal of room or space.

SPACIOUSNESS, s. roominess; wide extension.

SPADE, s. [spad, Sax.] a broad shovel used in digging. In Hunting, a deer three years old. In Gaming, one of the four suits in a pack of cards; originally representing lance-heads, or swords.

SPADILLE, s. [Fr.] in Gaming, the ace of spades.

SPAGYRIST, s. [spaher, Teut.] a chemist, or rather alchemist, in old works on science.

SPAIN, a large kingdom of Europe, occupying all the peninsula that forms the most westerly part of that continent, excepting the small strip lying on the Atlantic, called Portugal. It is divided from France by the Pyrenees. In its general form it is almost square, being about 550 miles in each direction. It is traversed by several mountain ranges, the chief of which runs parallel to its N. coast, and attains its greatest elevation with the name of Pyrenees, many of its heights exceeding 10,000 feet. In the centre are two chains, with table land between them, the most frequent height of the mountains being about 4500 feet, (though several peaks exceed this, and one reaches even 10,000 feet in elevation,) and of the plains intervening, 2500 feet. In the S. part are the three ranges, or Sierras Nevada, Morena, and de Toledo, whose usual height is about 5000 feet, but in which some points exceed 11,000 feet. The direction of all these chains is N. E. and S. W. There is a fine range of sea coast, diversified by Capes Finisterre, Ortegal, de Gata, Palos, Martin, and Gibraltar. Its rivers are the Ebro, the Douro, the Tagus, the Guadiana, and the Guadalquivir. Silver, copper, iron, lead, quicksilver, and other metals are found here, with every variety of stone used in building, &c. The general fertility of the soil and excellence of the climate are shown by the variety of its products; which are grain and fruits of all kinds, excellent wine, timber, &c. &c., whilst its pastures afford food to superior breeds of horses, mules, cattle, sheep, &c. &c. But agriculture is very far from flourishing here. Its manufactures and trade are in the same state of decay and depression as its agriculture. And it is a remarkable fact, and deserving of the close attention of philosophers and historians, that this country, whose people have ever possessed the same general characters as now, should have fallen to its present abject state, from having been one of the foremost states of Europe in learning and ingenuity, and the very foremost in commercial enterprise. Its whole history, from the very earliest mention of it, is full of lessons of highest import to all nations and to all men. Madrid is its capital. Pop. about 12,250,000. Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippine Islands are almost its only colonial possessions at this time.

SPALDLING, Lincolnshire. From its neatness and the canals in the streets it resembles a Dutch town; and vessels of 50 or 60 tons, carrying coals, corn, &c., come up here with the tide. It is surrounded by gardens, and much hemp and flax is grown in the neighbourhood. It is seated on the river Welland, 100 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 7778.

SPALLANZANI, LAZARUS, an eminent Italian naturalist of the last century. He studied at Reggio and Bologna; and obtained such reputation for learning that he soon received the appointment of Greek professor at the former college. Hereafterwards accepted a chair at Modena; and when his studies in natural history had rendered his name illustrious in that branch of science, he became professor of natural history at Pavia. In addition to the duties of his professorship and the care of the museum, he travelled in Switzerland, and the countries and islands of the Levant, &c., and published many works respecting his studies and his travels. He died in 1790, aged 70 years. His numerous works contain much that is valuable to the students of his favourite science.

SPALT, SPELT, s. a flux used with metals.

SPAN, s. [Sax. and Belg. spanna, Ital.] the space measured from the end of the thumb to that of the little finger extended; nine inches; any short duration.

To SPAN, v. a. to measure by the hand extended.

SPAN, preter. of To SPIN.

SPANG, s. [espange, Teut.] a cluster of shining bodies.

SPANGLE, (spangle) s. a small thin plate or boss of shining metal; any thing sparkling or shining.

To SPANGLE, (spangle) v. a. to besprinkle with spangles.

SPANGHEIM, EZKEIEL, a jurist and statesman of the latter part of the 17th century. He early acquired considerable renown for his learning, and entered the service of the Elector Palatine, first as tutor to his son, and afterwards as diplomatist. In this latter vocation he visited, at various times, most of the states of Italy, several German congresses, and England. He was next engaged by the elector of Brandenburg, as ambassador at Paris, at the treaty of Ryswick, and at the English court. He died in 1710, aged 81 years. His works are numerous, and the most valuable are on numismatics.

SPANIEL, s. [espagneul, Fr.] in Zoology, a kind of dog used for sport in the field or in water, remarkable for its sagacity and tractableness. Figuratively, a servile person.

SPANISH FLIES, s. See CANTHARIDES.

SPAR, s. in Mineralogy, the popular name for a cluster of crystals of any kind, and especially for the crystals of carbonate of lime. A small beam, or bar of a gate.

To SPAR, v. a. [sparran, Sax.] to shut close or bar.—v. n. to fight so as to ward off blows.

SPARABLES, s. [sparran, Sax.] small nails.

To SPARE, v. a. [sparan, Sax. sparen, Belg.] to use in a frugal manner, so as to avoid waste and profusion; to save from any particular use; to do without; to omit; to forbear; to remit a degree of punishment; to show mercy; to grant or allow; to forbear to impose on.—v. n. to live frugally; to forbear; to forgive.

SPARE, a. scanty; superfluous; thin of flesh.

SPARGEFACTION, s. [spargo, Lat.] the act of sprinkling.

SPARING, a. scarce; parsimonious; not liberal.

SPARK, s. [spearca, Sax. sparka, Belg.] a small particle of fire. Figuratively, a lively, showy, and gay person; a lover.

SPARKISH, a. airy; showy; fine.

SPARKLE, (sparkle) s. a small particle of fire; a scintillation.

To SPARKLE, (sparkle) v. n. to emit sparks of light or fire; to shine or glitter.

SPARRMANN, ANDREW, an eminent naturalist of Sweden, who, after a voyage to China, studied under Linnaeus at Upsal, and then renewed his travels. At the Cape of Good Hope he joined Captain Cook, and after his circumnavigation, returned to the Cape. He attempted a journey into the interior of W. Africa later in his life, and died in 1820, aged 73 years. His chief works are the records of his manifold and interesting travels.

SPEARROW, s. [sparacus, Fr.] in Ornithology, a familiar bird, which seems to be found chiefly near the abodes of civilized man. It has undeservedly among agriculturists obtained a bad name, as destructive to corn, and fruit, and all things; but the number of insects that it destroys far more than compensates for any occasional damage done to crops.

SPEARROWHAWK, s. in Ornithology, a small bluish kind of hawk.

SPARTA, in Ancient Greece, the chief city of the country of Laconia, standing on the Eurotas, the seat of the Lacedæmonian or Spartan state. A few relics of its ancient buildings yet remain.

SPARTACUS, a Thracian captive, who was kept as a gladiator at Rome. He headed (with two others) a revolt of numbers of men, placed in the same degraded position; and after defeating the Roman forces sent against them, gathering together a numerous army from amongst the rural population, which was discontented with the state of affairs, performed prodigies of valour, but was at length routed and slain, in 71 B. C.

SPARTANS, the most conspicuous and celebrated branch of the Dorian race, in ancient Greece. In the Lacedæmonian state they were the only free citizens, (the Periæci having personal, but not political, freedom, and the Helots having neither,) and they formed, in fact, a close aristocracy. The constitution of Sparta was traditionally ascribed to Lycurgus, and was maintained with the most rigid conservatism. Its tendency was to inspire every member of the oligarchy with the most undaunted and unscrupulous spirit of military hardihood and subordination. The women were partakers of this feeling:—"Return with it, or upon it!"—the Spartan mother's farewell to her son, before the wars, embodies the spirit of the entire state. Literature, and effeminate luxury, they alike eschewed. Breviloquence they affected to a proverb. As in Venice in the middle ages, and in England now, the royal office was almost nominal; the ephors (a sort of council of state) wielded the sovereign power. The public morals were formed by the laws; and they, too, were all subordinate to the idea of the state: female purity itself was trained so as to become a merely political virtue. The relation of the Spartans to the Periæci and Helots has been well illustrated by the state of this country after the Norman invasion, when the conquering race formed a wide and closely-guarded aristocracy, and the old inhabitants were either serfs, or else prisoners on parole, as hostages to the security of the conquerors.

SPASM, s. [spasma, from spao, Gr. spasme, Fr.] in Medicine, a convulsive and painful contraction of any part.

SPASMODIC, a. [spasmodique, Fr.] convulsive.

SPAT, preter. of To SPIT.

TO SPATTER, v. a. [spattan, Sax.] to besprinkle with dirt or any thing offensive; to defame.—v. n. to make a noise in spitting.

SPATTERDASHES, s. coverings for the legs to keep out wet, and buttoned at the sides.

SPATULA, s. [spathula, Lat.] an instrument used by apothecaries in spreading plaisters and stirring medicines.

SPAVIN, s. [spicavino, Ital.] in Farriery, a bony excrescence growing on the inside of a horse's hough, not far from the elbow, which is first as tender as gristle, but grows hard by degrees.

TO SPAWL, v. n. [spathan, Sax.] to throw moisture out of the mouth; to spit.

SPAWL, s. [spall, Sax.] spittle or moisture thrown out of the mouth.

SPAWN, s. [spene, or spenne, Belg.] the eggs of fish or frogs; the seed of mushrooms. Figuratively and contemptuously, any offspring.

TO SPAWN, v. a. to produce as fishes do their eggs; to bring forth.

TO SPAY, v. a. [spado, Lat.] to render a female beast unfit for procreation.

TO SPEAK, (speak) v. n. preter. spake or spoke, past part. spoken; [speacan, Sax.] to utter or express one's thoughts by articulate sounds or words; to defend or accuse, used with for or against; to harangue; to give sound, applied to wind instruments; to address, or converse with, followed by with.—v. a. to utter by the voice; to pronounce; to proclaim or celebrate; to address or accost.

SPEAKER, (speak) s. one who speaks. Speaker of the House of Commons, is a member chosen by the House, and approved by the king; and who is the chairman or moderator of the assembly. Speaker of the House of Peers, is usually the lord chancellor, or lord keeper of the great seal of England.

SPEAKING-TRUMPET, s. an instrument, shaped somewhat like a trumpet, used on board ships, to make the voice heard at a greater distance than it could be unaided by art.

SPEAR, (speer) s. [spre, Sax. and Belg.] a military weapon, consisting of a long, light, but strong pole, armed with a sharp point of metal; a lance; a lance with prongs to kill fish.

SPEARMINT, s. in Botany, a species of mint.

SPEARWORT, s. in Botany, the name of two species of crowfoot.

SPECIAL, (speshial) a. [Fr. specialis, from species, Lat.] noting a sort or species; particular; peculiar; extraordinary; uncommon; designed for a particular purpose; chief in excellence. In Law, it denotes that matter in evidence which is alleged specially, or does not come into the general issue.

SPECIALITY, SPECIALTY, (speshialty, speshialty) s. [spécialité, Fr.] particularity. It is also used in Law, for a bond, bill, or other deed or instrument, executed under the band and seal of the parties thereto.

SPECIES, (speshies) s. [Lat.] a sort; a subdivision of a genus; a class or single order of beings; common nature belonging to many individuals, thus, man includes Cæsar, Shakespeare, Luther, &c. In Natural History, a collection of individual animals or plants, agreeing in all essential peculiarities, and capable of transmitting those peculiarities and no others to their offspring. See HYBRID.

SPECIFIC, SPECIFICALLY, a. [spécifique, Fr.] in Philosophy, is that which is peculiar to any thing, and distinguishes it from all others. In Medicine, applied to any article of the Materia Medica, which acts invariably as a remedy for any particular disease. Specific Gravity, is the weight of any substance compared with the weight of any other, in quantities of the same bulk or solid dimensions.

SPECIFICALLY, ad. in such a manner as to constitute a species; according to the nature of the species.

TO SPECIFY, v. a. to distinguish by the properties which make a thing to be of a particular species, or adapted to a particular purpose.

SPECIFICATION, s. [Fr.] distinct notation; determination by a peculiar mark; a particular mention.

TO SPECIFY, v. a. [spécifier, Fr.] to mention; to distinguish by some particular mark or difference.

SPECIMEN, s. [Lat.] a sample; a pattern; model; essay; trial; proof.

SPECIOUS, (speshious) a. [speciosus, from specio, Lat.] showy, or pleasing to the view; plausible, but not strictly right.

SPECK, s. [speece, Sax.] a stain, spot, or discoloration.

TO SPECK, v. a. to spot; to stain; to blot.

SPECKLE, (speckle) s. a little spot; a small speck.

TO SPECKLE, (speckle) v. a. to mark with small spots.

TO SPECTACLE, s. [specto, Lat.] any thing that attracts the sight by its being remarkable; a show; a gazing-stock; an object of sight.

SPECTACLES, s. concave or convex lenses, so fitted up as to be worn by persons needing the aid of such glasses to remedy defective vision.

SPECTATOR, s. [Lat.] a looker-on; a beholder.

SPECTRE, (spekter) s. [Fr. spectrum, Lat.] an apparition; phantasm; ghost; vision.

SPECTRUM, s. [Lat.] in Optics, the prismatic appearance produced by the refraction of a beam of light through a triangular prism. When the beam is admitted into a dark room through a round hole in a shutter, the spectrum assumes an elongated form, and the various colours are well exhibited. Sir Isaac Newton first showed that the spectrum was an analysis of white solar light. See LIGHT, COLOURS, OPTICS, &c.

SPECTULAR, (spectularis, Lat.) having the qualities of a mirror or looking-glass.

TO SPECTULATE, v. n. [spectulo, Lat.] to meditate; to contemplate; to gamble on an extensive scale, in trade, funds, railways, building, &c.; to consider attentively; to revolve or contrive in the mind.

SPECULATION, s. [Fr.] the act of contemplating any thing in the mind; contemplation; meditation; a respectable kind of gambling, largely practised in the stock and share markets, &c.

SPECULATIVE, a. [speculativ, Fr.] contemplative; theoretical; ideal; not practical; notional.

SPE/CULUM, s. [Lat.] a looking-glass; a mirror for a telescope.

SPED, past part. of To SPEED.

SPEECH, s. [space, Sax.] the power of expressing our thoughts or ideas by audible words; words, or language; talk; harangue, or oration.

SPEECHLESS, a. mute; dumb; deprived of the power of speech.

To SPEED, v. n. pret. and past part. sped and speeded; [spoeden, Belg.] to make haste; to move quick or fast; to succeed; to grow rich; to fare well or ill.—v. a. to despatch or finish in haste; to hasten; to promote, quicken, or assist; to make prosperous.

SPEED, s. [spoed, Belg.] quickness; haste; celerity; despatch; the course or pace of a horse; success.

SPEED, JOHN, a renowned chronicler of English history, of the end of the 16th and beginning of the 17th centuries. He was a London tradesman, and amused himself with collecting historical, antiquarian, and topographical facts; which in later life he published under the titles of The Theatre of the Empire of Great Britain, The History of Great Britain, &c. He died in 1629, aged 74 years.

SPEEDILY, ad. with haste; quickly.

SPEED/DWELL, s. in Botany, a large genus of English wild flowers, of which the germander speedwell, or bird's-eye, is well known.

SPEEDY, a. quick; nimble; swift.

SPELL, s. [spel, Sax.] a charm consisting of some peculiar words of occult power; a turn of work.

To SPELL, v. a. preter. and past part. spelled or spelt; [spellen, Sax.] to write words with their proper letters; to name the several letters of which a word is composed, and utter every syllable separately; to charm; to hint one's wish for any thing, with for; to form words of letters; to read; to pronounce the syllables of a word separately, by naming the letters which compose them, without pronouncing the whole word at once.

SPE/LMAN, SIR HENRY, an eminent antiquary, of the reigns of Elizabeth and the first Stuart kings. He studied at Cambridge and Lincoln's Inn; but instead of practising law, led the life of a country gentleman and scholar, engaging in but few public matters. He was knighted by Charles I., and died in 1641, aged 79 years. His works relate chiefly to ecclesiastical antiquities, and Norfolk topography, excepting his Glossary, which is yet of some value.

SPE/LTER, s. See ZINC.

SPENCE, JOSEPH, a critic of the last century, was educated at Oxford, and became a clergyman, being made eventually a prebendary at Durham. He travelled twice on the Continent, with young noblemen; and held a professor's chair at Oxford. He died in 1768, aged 70 years. His chief work is entitled Polymetis, in which he attempted to illustrate the works of the Roman poets by the remains of ancient artists.

SPEN/CE, s. an over-dress, in form resembling a short jacket, worn lately by both sexes.

To SPEND, v. a. [spendan, Sax. spendere, Ital.] to consume or layout; to squander; to expend; to bestow as expense; to waste, wear out, or exhaust; to pass; to employ; to fatigue.—v. n. to make expense; to be lost or wasted; to be employed in any use.

SPENDTHRIFT, s. one that is profuse in his expenses; a lavish; a prodigal; a waster.

SPEN/SE, EDMUND, one of our great English poets, who adorned Elizabeth's reign. He studied at Cambridge, and resided first with some relations in the N. of England. Subsequently he went to Ireland, as secretary to Lord Grey, and settled there. On the outbreak of Tyrone's rebellion, he was obliged to fly, and his infant child was burnt with his house by the rebels, which so preyed on his mind as, together with the loss of his property, to cause his death. He died in 1599, aged 46 years. His great poem is the Fairy Queen, (of which only six books and some fragments remain,) which details the adventures of various knights belonging to the court of Gloriana of fairy land, who impersonate various virtues. The first book, the Legend of the Red Cross Knight, or Holiness, is incomparably the best, as it is a perfect poem; the rest of the stories are interwoven, and by no means so lucid as allegories, without rising higher than allegory. In sweetness and harmony of versification, in beauty of description, and splendour of imagination, it stands almost without a rival. His other pieces are characterized more or less by the same excellences, and his Prothalamion is peculiarly exquisite. He intentionally adapted antique dress, and sometimes because of it, he continues to be one of the favourite poets of England.

SPERM, s. in the Useful Arts, &c., the name of the oil from which spermaceti is precipitated.

SPERMAGETI, s. [Lat. from sperma and ketos, Gr.] in Commerce, &c., an oily substance extracted from the head of a particular species of whale, (called cachalot), and well purified.

SPERMATIC, SPERMATICAL, a. [spermatique, Fr. sperma, Gr.] relating to the seed; seminal.

To SPET, v. a. [Scot.] to bring or pour abundantly.

SPEUSIPPUS, in Greek Philosophy, one of the earliest teachers in the Academy, after Plato, to whom he was related, and whose philosophy he modified in various ways. Neither ancients nor moderns esteem him very highly. He flourished in about 350 B. C.

To SPEW, v. a. [spewan, Sax.] to vomit. Figuratively, to eject or cast forth.—v. n. to void at the mouth.

SPEY, one of the largest Scottish rivers, which rises in a loch of the same name, in the county of Inverness, and serves as the boundary between the shires of Banff and Moray, falls into the North Sea, midway between Elgin and Cullen.

To SPHACULATE, (sphaculate) v. a. to affect with a gangrene.—v. n. to mortify.

SPHA/CELUS, (sphaelus) s. [sphakelos, Gr.] a gangrene; a mortification.

SPHERE, (sphere) s. [Fr. sphera, Lat.] in Geometry, is a solid such as would be formed by the revolution of a circle on its diameter as an axis. See ARMILLARY. Figuratively, an orbit or circuit of motion or action; province; the extent or compass of a person's knowledge.

SPHE/RIC, SPHERICAL, (spherik, sferikal) a. round; globular; relating to the sphere.

SPHE/RICS, (spheriks) s. in Geometry, that part which treats of the position, &c. of arcs of circles, described on the surfaces of a sphere.

SPHE/ROID, s. [sphaira and eidos, Gr.] a solid resembling the sphere, but having its polar diameter shorter than its equatorial, in which case it is called oblate; or vice versa, when it is called prolate.

SPHERO/DICAL, a. having the form of a spheroid.

SPHE/RULE, (spherule) s. [spharula, Lat.] a small globe.

SPH/NCETER, s. [Gr.] in Anatomy, the general name for a circular muscle closing an orifice of the body, as the mouth, &c.

SPH/INX, s. [Gr.] in Heathen Mythology, a monster with the head and breasts of a woman, the wings of a bird, and the claws and body of a lion. The forms of sphinxes in ancient statuary differ widely in various nations. The sphinx of Egypt, whose head alone remains above the surface, is the hugest attempt to represent this monster. There is an ancient riddle, said to have been proposed by a sphinx to the city of Thebes,—What animal is that which goes in the morning on four feet, at noon on two, and in the evening on three?—and the penalty of not discovering the answer was the gradual destruction of the people: it was answered by Oedipus,—who declared that the animal was man,—and the sphinx is said to have destroyed herself. One of the plays of Sophocles, Oedipus Rex, alludes to this fable.

SPI/CE, s. [spices, Fr.] in Commerce and Cookery, a vegetable product, fragrant to the smell, and pungent to the taste, used in seasoning or sauces. A small quantity.

To SPICE, v. a. to season with spices.

SPI/CERY, s. commodity of spices; repository of spices.

SPI/CEWORT, s. in Botany, the sweet-smelling flag, or calamus.

SPI/CK AND SPAN, a. [from spiccata de la spanna, Ital. or else from spannan, Sax.] quite new; just made; never used.

SPICOSITY, s. [spica, Lat.] the quality of being spiked like ears of corn.

SPICY, a. producing spice; aromatic.

SPIDER, s. in Zoology, the name of one of the orders nearly related to the insects. Their general appearance and habits are too well known to need description. A few facts may, however, be worthy of record. They do not pass through a series of different forms in their development as insects do. Most of them occasionally use the long loosely-floating threads as a kind of balloon to transport themselves from place to place. The habits of the hunting-spider, which seizes its prey by springing upon it, like a cat, are very amusing, and it preserves itself from falling to the ground in its leaps, by a thread which, like all the others, it emits from its abdomen. The tales of W. Indian spiders catching birds is proved to be a fable.

SPIGNEL, s. in Botany, a kind of umbelliferous plant.

SPIGOT, s. [spijker, Belg.] a wooden tap, constructed with a screw.

SPIKE, s. [spica, Lat.] an ear of corn; a long nail, or sharp piece of iron or wood. In Botany, an arrangement of flowers, such as is found in the agrimony, great mullein, &c.

TO SPIKE, v. a. to fasten with long nails; to set with spikes. In Military art, to drive a spike into the touch-hole of a cannon so as to render it useless.

SPICKENARD, s. [spica nardi, Lat.] in Botany, a kind of sweet-smelling plant.

SPICESTALK, s. in Botany, the stalk upon which the flowers composing a spike are placed.

SPILL, s. [spillen, Belg.] a small shiver of wood, or thin bar of iron; a small quantity of money.

TO SPILL, v. a. [spillan, Sax. spillen, Belg. spilla, Isl.] to shed or scatter; to destroy or damage; to corrupt; to throw away; to pour on the ground.—v. n. to be lavish; to be shed, or lost by being shed.

TO SPIN, v. a. preter. spun or span, part. spun; [spinnan, Sax. spinnen, Belg.] to form yarn into threads by drawing it out and twisting it. Figuratively, to protract or draw out; to draw out into a tedious length; to put into a turning motion.—v. n. to exercise the art of spinning; to stream out into a small thread or current; to move round like a spindle.

SPINACH, SPINAGE, s. [spinachia, Lat.] in Botany and Cookery, a well-known edible plant.

SPINAL, a. [spina, Lat.] belonging to the back-bone.

SPINDLE, (spindl) s. [spindl or spindel, Sax.] the pin by which flax is formed or twisted into a thread, and on which it is wound; any thing slender, in contempt. In Botany, a shrub, called also gutteridge-tree.

SPINDLESHANKED, a. having very slender legs.

SPINE, a. [spina, Lat.] in Anatomy, the back-bone.

SPINET, s. [espinette, Fr.] an ancient kind of musical instrument with keys, resembling a harpsichord.

SPINIFEROUS, a. [spina and fero, Lat.] bearing thorns.

SPINNER, s. one skilled in spinning.

SPINNING-JENNY, s. the common name for the machine for spinning, which is now driven by steam power in the great mills; the invention of which has been of such great consequence to the progress of our manufacturing interests.

SPINOZA, AMBROSE, MARQUIS OF, a celebrated Spanish general of the end of the 16th and beginning of the 17th centuries. The great theatre of his glory was the Netherlands, where he gained great fame for his skill in conducting sieges, during the wars against Maurice of Nassau, under Philip III. of Spain. In the war in Italy, owing to the orders of the court, he was unable to gain any advantage against the French, and died of vexation, in 1630, aged 61 years.

SPINOUS, SPINUS, a. [spina, Lat.] thorny; prickly; briery; difficult; troublesome; perplexed.

SPINOZA, BENEDICT, (originally Baruch), one of the great philosophers of the 17th century. His father was a Jew, one of the rich merchants of Amsterdam; and he, a sickly boy, was trained in all the rabbinical lore that was deemed an essential part of a complete education. His inquiring disposition made him no agreeable pupil; his questions were not always easy to answer. As he grew up his inquiry ripened into scepticism respecting all that was held among the Jews; and after a threat of public censure, and an attempt to remove him by assassination, he was excommunicated. He was received by a friend, who instructed him in Latin, and aided him in other ways to acquire learning; and he soon afterwards, falling in with Descartes' writings, devoted himself to philosophy. He supported himself by polishing lenses for telescopes, &c., and continued with a noble independence to study. After changing his abode several times, he settled at the Hague; and enjoyed not only the esteem of all the great scholars in his own science, but also the reverence of monarchs, who found in him a spirit they could not induce to bow to their greatness. He died in 1677, aged 45 years. His works are not such as any but a philosophical or theological inquirer could read with advantage. His system, called Spinozism, has met with more than the usual share of execration from theologians: it will be needful to add a few words respecting it. It was, in one word, Pantheism. He regarded God as the only real existence; and he looked on nature as the manifestation of God,—not less God than his invisible efficient cause. His ethical maxims are exceedingly fine. The great error of the system lay in its construction. It was deduced by most rigid logic from a few simple axioms; and commentators have vainly tried to break the chain, or dispute the axioms. But it is not by such a method that the truth can ever be discovered respecting matters beyond the grasp of man's understanding. The persuasions of the heart are wiser than the convictions of the head; and Spinoza knew nothing but the latter. The affirmation of reason, embodied in the general thought of man respecting nature,—that it is the production of God, and mirrors his glories,—is more trustworthy than the most rigidly reasoned scheme that philosopher ever devised. In controverting this Pantheism theologians have done no more than attempt to brand it as atheism;—a foolish attempt, and as bad as foolish. Spinoza was (as Novalis calls him) “a God-intoxicated man.” He was completely imbued with the conviction of the vital presence of the Deity, he saw nothing but God; his ethics are not those of an atheist;—and if an inquirer who arrives at a different conclusion from the authorities, by pursuing the method they authorize, is put hors la loi by the denunciation of atheism, thinking men will revolt against the authorities, whilst unthinking men will be driven to malign the truth, which is compromised by their untruthful defence.

SPINSTER, s. a woman who spins. In Law, a maid or virgin, or a young woman unmarried.

SPTRACLE, (spirakl) s. [spiraculum, from spiro, Lat.] a breathing hole or vent; a small aperture.

SPTRAL, a. [spirale, Fr. from spira, Lat.] winding; circularly involved.

SPTRALLY, ad. in a spiral form.

SPIRE, s. [spira, Lat. Ital. and Swed.] a curve line; a curl or twist; a wreath; a round pyramid; a steeple; the top or summit; to any thing growing more and more taper from the bottom to the top.

SPIRE, or SPIRES, a city of Bavaria, in Germany. It stands on the Rhine, and is fortified. Its most interesting buildings are those connected with the striking events that have occurred here under the empire. It has a good trade. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 49. 20. N. Long. 8. 27. E.

SPIRIT, s. [spiritus, from spiro, Lat.] breath; wind in motion; an apparition; an habitual disposition of mind; genius; vigour of mind; the mind or imagination; an eager desire; that which gives vigour and cheerfulness; likeness or essential qualities. In Trade, &c., any variety of alcohol used for drinking. See ALCOHOL. In Metaphysics, the immaterial and immortal part of man; that in man which declares him not made for this scene of life alone; also, as distinguished from soul, the higher and nobler faculties of the mind.

TO SPIRIT, v. a. to actuate, animate, or excite; to draw or entice, used with away.

SPIRITED, a. lively; full of fire or vigour; vivacious; sprightly; animated.

SPIRITLESS, a. dejected; wanting vigour or fire; depressed; lifeless.

SPIRIT-LEVEL, s. in Surveying, &c., an instrument for determining an exactly horizontal line; it is composed of a glass tube, hermetically sealed, so nearly filled with tinted spirit of wine, that only a small air-bubble is left: when placed horizontally, this bubble stands exactly in the centre of the upper side. Great accuracy is required in those made for trigonometrical surveys, and various kinds of apparatus are attached to them,

SPIRITUAL, a. [spirituel, Fr.] belonging to spirit as distinguished from matter; immaterial; belonging to the mind or understanding; mental; intellectual; refined; relating only to heavenly things, opposed to temporal. Spiritual Courts, in Law, are such as have jurisdiction in matrimonial causes, probate of wills, granting administration, and in cases of defamation, &c.

SPIRITUALITY, s. incorporeity; intellectual nature; that which belongs to any one as an ecclesiastic.

To SPIRITUALIZE, v. a. [spiritualiser, Fr.] to allegorize, or distort Scripture from its proper meaning.

SPIRITUALLY, ad. without corporeal grossness; with attention to things purely intellectual.

SPIRITUOUS, a. refined; defecated; approaching to spirit; fierce; ardent; fine; lively; gay; airy.

To SPIRT, v. n. to spring out by intervals; to spring out in a sudden stream.—v. a. to throw out in a jet.

SPIRY, a. pyramidal; wreathen; curled; spiral.

SPISSITUDE, s. [spissitudo, Lat.] grossness; thickness.

SPIT, s. [Belg.] a long piece of iron on which meat is roasted; a depth of earth which may be pierced at once by a spade.

To SPIT, v. a. preter. spat, past part. spit or spitted; to put on a spit, or to pierce with a spit.—v. n. [spætan, Sax. spytter, Dan.] to eject spittle from the mouth.

SPI TAL, s. [corrupted from hospital,] an hospital or charitable foundation.

To SPIT/CHCOCK, v. a. to roast an eel previously cut in pieces.

SPITE, s. [spijt, Belg.] malice; rancour; malignity; hate; malevolence; ill-will; an habitual desire and endeavour to do ill to another. Spite of, or in spite of, notwithstanding; in defiance of.

To SPITE, v. a. to thwart malignantly; to vex; to treat maliciously; to mischief; to enrage or fill with spite.

SPITEFUL, a. malicious; malignant.

SPITEFULNESS, s. malice; malignity.

SPITEHEAD, a spacious road for shipping, between Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight.

SPITTER, s. one who puts meat on the spit; one who spits.

SPITTLE, (spitl) s. [spethian, Sax.] the moisture of the mouth.

SPITZBERGEN, or EAST GREENLAND, an island, or islands, lying very near the N. pole. The coast is partly mountainous, but there are level tracts both near the shore and inland. It is totally uninhabited. In the valleys are large white bears, white foxes, and some curious birds and plants. It is only frequented for the purpose of catching whales. Lat. 76. 46. to 80. 30. N. Long. 9. to 20. E.

SP LANCHNOLOGY, (splanchnology) s. [splanchna and logos, Gr.] in Anatomy, a treatise or description of the bowels.

To SPLASH, v. a. [plaska, Swed.] to daub with mud or dirt in great quantities.

SPLA YFOOT, a. having the foot turned inwards.

SPLEEN, s. [spelen, Lat.] in Anatomy, an organ lying between the ribs and the stomach, the use of which is not correctly known; ill humour; a fit of anger; melancholy; hypochondriacal vapours; spite.

SPLEENWORT, s. in Botany, a kind of fern.

SPLENDID, a. [splendendus, from splendo, Lat.] bright; shining; showy; pompous; magnificent; sumptuous; splendid; glossy.

SPLENDOR, s. [splendor, Lat.] lustre; the quality or power of shining; magnificence; pomp.

SPLENETIC, a. [splénétique, Fr.] troubled with spleen; peevish; fretful; hypochondriac.

To SPLICE, v. a. [splicsen, Belg.] to join the two ends of a rope together without a knot.

SPLINTER, SPLINT, s. among farriers, is a callous excrescence on the shank-bone of horses.

SPLINTER, SPLINT, s. [Belg.] a fragment of any thing broken with violence; a thin piece of wood. In Surgery, a thin piece of wood, or other partially rigid substance, used to keep the parts of a fractured bone together when it is set.

To SPLIT, v. a. pret. and past part. split; [splitten, Belg.] to divide lengthwise; to rive; to cleave; to part in two; to dash or break against a rock; to break into discord.—v. n. to crack or burst asunder; to burst with laughter; to be broken against rocks.

SPLITTER, s. bustle; tumult.

SPOFFORTH, REGINALD, an English composer, now chiefly known by some beautiful glees. He never held any situation such as his musical talent qualified him to fill; and he died in 1826, aged 58 years.

To SPOIL, v. a. [spolio, Lat.] to rob or take away by force; to plunder; to corrupt or render useless.—v. n. to be guilty of plundering; to grow corrupt or useless.

SPOIL, s. [spolium, Lat.] any thing taken by violence; plunder; pillage; booty; robbery; waste; corruption; cause of corruption.

SPOKE, s. [spaca, Sax. speiche, Teut.] the bar of a wheel which passes from the nave to the felly. In Botany, the fruit-stalk of flowers collected into rundles.

SPOKE, preter. of To SPEAK.

SPOKEN, past part. of To SPEAK.

SPOKESMAN, s. one who speaks for another.

SPOLETO, an ancient and handsome town of the Papal States, Italy, capital of a district of the same name. It has a fine cathedral, and several other noble buildings. There are the ruins of an amphitheatre, a triumphal arch, and an aqueduct. It has a brisk trade, and some small manufactures. It is seated partly on the side of a hill, and partly in a plain, in a country noted for good wine, near the river Tessino, 55 miles from Rome. Pop. about 8000. Lat. 42. 46. N. Long. 12. 43. E.

To SPO LIATE, v. a. [spolio, Lat.] to rob; to plunder.

SPO LIATION, s. [Fr. from spolio, Lat.] the act of robbery or privation.

SPO NDEE, s. [Fr. spondens, Lat.] in Prosody, a foot of two long syllables, as máxim, Lat.

SPO NDYLE, s. [spondulus, Gr.] in Anatomy, a joint in the spine.

SPONGE, (spünj) s. [spongia, Lat.] in Natural History, the name of a large and remarkable class of zoophytes, whose silicious skeletons form the sponge of commerce. Their bodies are gelatinous; and some of them grow to an enormous size.

To SPONGE, (spünj) v. n. to suck up as a sponge; to gain by mean arts.—v. a. to wet with a sponge; to clean a cannon when discharged, before it is charged anew.

SPO NGER, (spünjer) s. one that meanly depends upon others for subsistence.

SPO NGINESS, s. softness, and fulness of cavities, like a sponge.

SPO NGY, a. soft, resembling a sponge; soaked or full, like a sponge.

SPO NSAL, a. [sponsalis, from sponsa, Lat.] relating to marriage; hymeneal; connubial; nuptial; matrimonial; bridal.

SPO NSOR, s. [Lat.] one who makes a promise or gives security for another; a surety. In the Churches of Rome and England, a godfather or godmother.

SPO NTANEITY, SPO NTANEOUSNESS, s. [spontanéité, Fr.] the quality of doing or acting free from any impulse or necessity; voluntariness.

SPO NTANEOUS, a. [sponde, Lat.] acting of itself, without compulsion or restraint; voluntary.

SPO NTANEOUSLY, ad. voluntarily; of its own accord.

SPOOL, s. [spohl, Belg. spuhl, Teut.] a small piece of cane or reed with a knot at each end to wind yarn upon; a quill.

SPOON, s. [spoen, Belg. spone, Dan. spoon, Isl.] an instrument, consisting of a shallow bowl of an oval form, with a handle, used in taking up and eating liquids.

SPOONBILL, s. in Zoology, a bird, called also shoveller.

SPOONFEAT, s. as much as a spoon will contain.

SPOONMEAT, s. a liquid food, or such as is eaten with a spoon.

SPOONWORT, s. in Botany, the plant called scurvy-grass.

SPORA DIC DISEASES, s. [sporadikos, Gr.] in Medicine, are such as seize particular persons at any time or season, and in any place; in which sense they are distinguished from epidemic and endemic diseases.

SPORT, s. [spott, Isl.] play; game; diversion; frolic; a mock; mockery; field diversions, as shooting, hunting.

To SPORT, v. a. to play; to divert; to represent in play.—v. n. to play; to frolic; to wanton; to trifle.

SPORTSMAN, s. one who delights in field diversions.

SPORTULE, s. [sportula, from sporta, Lat.] an alms; a dole.

SPOT, s. [spotte, Flem. spette, Dan.] a blot; a stain, either on the skin or other substance; blemish; disgrace; reproach; a small extent of ground; any particular place. Upon the spot, implies immediately, or without changing place.

To SPOT, v. a. to stain; to maculate; to blot; to work so as to resemble spots; to corrupt, disgrace, or taint.

SPOTLESS, a. free from spots or vice; pure; untainted; immaculate.

SPOTSWOOD, or SPOTISWOODE, JOHN, a Scottish prelate and ecclesiastical historian. He was educated at Glasgow, and was first a Presbyterian. He attended the Duke of Lennox, as chaplain, when he went as ambassador to France; and accompanied king James to England, when he succeeded to the English throne. He was at the same time made Archbishop of Glasgow, and devoted himself to the organization of Episcopacy in North Britain, according to his sovereign's will. He was rewarded with the see of St. Andrews, and held in great honour by Charles I., whom he crowned at Holyrood. On the outbreak of the Revolution he fled to England, and died there in 1639, aged 74 years. His chief work is a History of the Church of Scotland.

SPOTTY, a. full of spots.

SPOUSAL, (sposzal) s. nuptial, or belonging to a wedding.

SPOUSAL, (sposzal) s. (sposailles, Fr.) marriage; nuptials; matrimony.

SPOUSE, (sponse) s. (esponse, Fr. sponsus or sponsa, Lat.) one joined to another in marriage; a husband or wife.

SPOUT, s. (sput, Belg.) a pipe or mouth of a vessel out of which any thing is poured. Water-spout, is a column of water raised, at sea, by a violent whirlwind, beneath a heavy cloud, which sends down a conical mass to meet it. Such clouds are often seen over the land also, and produce great devastation by the torrents of water they discharge, and the whirlwind that attends them. They are equally fatal at sea to any vessel that comes within the range of their influence. Seamen often attempt to break the column of water by cannon shot.

TO SPOUT, v. n. [sputen, Belg.] to spring out in a sudden stream; to issue as from a spout.—v. a. to throw out water in a stream or jet; to pour with violence, or in a collected body, as from a spout.

TO SPRAIN, v. a. [corrupted from strain] in Surgery, to injure the fibres of a muscle, near a joint, by a sudden and violent strain.

SPRAIN, a. violent contortion or straining of a muscle near a joint, without dislocation.

SPRANG, preter. of TO SPRING.

SPRAT, s. [sprat, Belg.] in Ichthyology, a small and well-known sea-fish.

SPRAT, DR. THOMAS, an English prelate of the 17th century. He was educated at Oxford, and made a bishop by Charles II. He did not resist the Revolution of 1688, though some attempted to represent him as one of the non-contents; and he died in 1713, aged 77 years. He wrote some poems of little value and genius; and a History of the Rye-House Plot, so as to suit the king's palate. He also wrote a History of the Royal Society, in the foundation of which he shared.

TO SPRAWL, v. n. [spradde, Dan. spartelen, Belg.] to struggle as in the convulsions of death; to tumble about with odd contortions of the limbs.

SPRAY, s. the extremity of a branch; the foam of the sea.

TO SPREAD, (spreid) v. a. [spreaden, Sax. spreyden, Belg.] to extend, to stretch, to expand, or make a thing take up a large space; to cover or smear over; to publish or divulge, followed by abroad; to diffuse.—v. n. to extend or expand itself.

SPREADER, s. he that spreads.

SPRIG, s. [spring, Brit.] a small branch; a spray; a twig.

SPRIGIT, s. (sprig) [a contraction of spirit] a spectre, ghost, apparition, spirit.

SPRIGHTLINESS, (sprittliness) s. liveliness; vivacity; gaiety; briskness.

SPRIGITLY, (sprittly) a. full of spirit; gay; brisk; lively; vivacious; spirited; animated.

TO SPRING, v. n. preter. sprang or spring, past part. sprung; [springan, Sax. springen, Belg.] to arise or grow out of the ground, followed by up; to proceed from ancestors; to issue or proceed, as from seed; to issue forth; to appear; to leap or bound; to force one's way; to fly with elastic force; to proceed as from a ground, cause, or reason; to raise from a covert; to issue from a fountain or source; to shoot or move with speed.—v. a. to start or rouse game; to discharge, applied to a mine; to contrive as a sudden expedient; to make by starting a plank.

SPRING, s. the first of the four seasons of the year; a piece of tempered steel, useful in machines to put them in motion; any elastic force; any active power; a leap; a fountain or source, whence waters issue; a rise; beginning; a gin; a noose, which being fastened to an elastic wire, catches any thing.

SPRINGGER, s. in Zoology, an animal of the antelope kind, inhabiting the neighbourhood of the Cape of Good Hope.

SPRINGINESS, s. the qualities of bodies returning to their former shape or dimensions, which they had lost by violence or compression; elasticity.

SPRINGING OF A MAST, s. in Sea Language, is when it cracks, but is not quite broken in any part of it.

SPRINGTIDE, s. the name given to the tide which happens either at the new or the full moon, when the forces of both the sun and moon are exercised in the same direction, and the tidal wave is raised highest; just as in the neap-tides the tidal wave is lowest, because, happening at the quadratures of the moon, the forces of the sun and moon are exerted in opposition to each other.

TO SPRINKLE, (sprinkl) v. a. [sprinkelen, Belg.] to scatter in drops or small masses; to wet by sprinkling; to besprinkle.—v. n. to let fall or scatter in drops.

SPRINKLING, s. the act of throwing water upon any thing in drops.

SPRITSAIL, s. the sail of the boltsprit mast.

TO SPROUT, v. n. [spruyten, Belg. sprytan, Sax.] to grow or shoot; to germinate; to spring.

SROUT, s. a shoot of a vegetable. In Cookery, sprouts are young celerisks.

SPRUCE, s. in Botany, Commerce, &c., a kind of fir, of which there are two sorts, the white and black. Spruce-beer, beer made from the branches of fir, and molasses.

SPRUCE, a. nice, trim, neat without elegance.

TO SPRUCE, v. n. to dress with affected neatness.

SPRU/CENESS, s. neatness in dress without elegance.

SPRUNG, preter. and past part. of TO SPRING.

SPRUNT, s. any thing that is short, and will not easily bend.

SPUD, s. a short knife; a small straight hoe, used in weeding.

TO SPUME, v. n. [spruno, Lat.] to froth or foam.

SPUME, s. [spruno, Lat.] froth; foam; scum of gold or silver.

SPUN, preter. and past part. of TO SPIN.

SPUNGINGHOUSE, s. a house or place that bailiffs take persons to after an arrest, where they are kept till they agree with the creditor, or are removed to a closer confinement.

SPUNK, s. rotten wood; touchwood.

SPUR, s. [spura, Sax. spore, Dan. Isl. and Belg.] a sharp-pointed instrument worn by a rider on his heel, whereby he pricks his horse to quicken his pace; the sharp points growing on the legs of a fowl. Figuratively, an incitement, instigation, or any thing that quickens; a weapon for a fighting-cock; a snag, or any thing standing out.

TO SPUR, v. a. to prick or quicken by a spur; to instigate; to excite, hasten, incite, compel, or push forward.

SPURGE, s. in Botany, a large genus of plants, remarkable for the abundance of acrid milky juice they contain, and for the arrangement of the parts of their flowers.

SPURIOUS, a. [spurius, Lat.] counterfeit; not genuine or authentic; illegitimate, or not lawfully begotten.

SPURIOUSNESS, s. the quality of being false or counterfeit.

TO SPURN, v. a. [spornen, Sax.] to kick, drive, or strike with the foot; to reject with contempt or scorn.

SPURN, s. a kick; insolent and contemptuous treatment.

SPURN HEAD, the name of the long, sickle-shaped shingle-bank that forms the N. bank of the mouth of the Humber.

SPURREY, s. in Botany, a kind of small white wild flower, common in this country.

SPURRIER, s. one who makes spurs.

SPURZHEIM, JOHN GASPARD, the celebrated phrenologist. He studied at Vienna, where he learned the new science of the mind from Dr. Gall, the founder, and joined him in his researches, and in his journeys to promulgate it, visiting and residing for a time in France and England. He finally went to the United States, where he died in 1832, aged 56 years. He had not the originality of Gall, but he possessed the ability to carry out and apply Gall's doctrines, which he could not have done himself. It may reasonably be doubted whether the world has been much benefited by the theology and morals which Spurzheim based on phrenology, and which may be studied, by those who desire to know them, in the works of George Combe, who has pretty faithfully copied them in his Moral Philosophy and Constitution of Man. Spurzheim's own work on the subject was not published, although it has been pretty widely circulated.

SPUTATION, s. [sputum, Lat.] the act of spitting.

To SPUTTER, v. n. [spufo, Lat.] to emit or cast out moisture by small flying drops; to speak in a hurry and indistinctly; to fly out in small particles with some noise; to throw out spittle by hasty speech.—v. a. to throw out with noise and hesitation.

SPY, s. [spie, Belg.] one set to watch the conduct or motions of another, especially what passes in an enemy's army or camp.

To SPY, v. a. to discover at a distance by the eye; to discover by nice examination or artifice.—v. n. to look into or examine nicely.

SQUAB, a. unfeathered; fat, thick, and stout; awkwardly bulky.

SQUAB, s. a kind of sofa or couch; a stuffed cushion. In Cookery, a chicken, &c. so young as to be scarcely fit to be eaten.

To SQUAB, v. n. to fall down plump or flat.

To SQUABBLE, (squabb) v. n. [kiabla, Swed.] to quarrel, wrangle, or fight.

SQUABBLE, (squabb) s. a low quarrel, or brawl.

SQUABBLER, s. a quarrelsome fellow, a brawler.

SQUABPIE, s. a pie made of several ingredients.

SQUADRON, s. [Squadron, Ital.] in the Military Art, a body of horse whose number of men is not fixed, but is usually from one to two hundred. In the Navy, a division or part of a fleet, commanded by a vice-admiral or commodore.

SQUALID, a. [squalidus, Lat.] foul; nasty; filthy.

To SQUALL, (squall) v. n. [squala, Swed.] to scream like a woman or child affrighted.

SQUALL, (squall) s. a loud scream; a sudden gust or storm of wind or rain.

SQUALOR, s. [Lat.] nastiness; grossness; coarseness.

SQUAMEOUS, SQUAMOUS, a. [squameus, from squama, Lat.] scaly; having the resemblance of scales; covered with scales.

To SQUANDER, v. a. [verschoenden, Teut.] to scatter lavishly; to throw away in idle prodigality; to spend profusely; to scatter; to dissipate; to disperse.

SQUANDERER, s. a spendthrift; a waster.

SQUARE, a. [quadrat, Brit.] in Geometry, having four equal sides at right angles. Cornered; having angles of whatever content, as three-square, five-square, &c.; parallel; strong, or well set; exact, equal, honest. Square dealing, is honest, just, and equal dealing. Square root, in Arithmetic, is that number which multiplied by itself produces the square, as 2 is the square root of 4, because twice 2 is 4; and likewise 4 is the square root of 16, because 4 times 4 is 16.

SQUARE, s. [squadra, Lat.] a figure having four equal sides and angles; an area, or place of four sides surrounded with buildings; regularity, rule, justness of workmanship; level; equality; the contents of an angle. In Arithmetic, the product of a number multiplied into itself.

To SQUARE, v. a. to form with four sides and right angles; to reduce to a square; to measure, adjust, regulate, or shape; to accommodate or fit.—v. n. to suit or agree with, used with to or with.

To SQUAT, v. n. [quattare, Ital.] to sit cowering, or close to the ground.

SQUAT, a. close to the ground; sitting on the ground with the legs doubled under the body; short and thick.

To SQUEAK, (squeak) v. n. [sqwaka, Swed.] to set up a sudden dolorous cry; to cry out with pain; to cry out or speak with a shrill voice; to discover any thing through fear or pain.

SQUEAK, (squeak) s. a shrill quick cry; a cry of pain.

SQUEAKER, (squeaker) s. a person or instrument that makes a shrill or grating noise.

To SQUEAL, (squeal) v. n. [squala, Swed.] to cry with a shrill sharp noise; to cry with pain.

SQUEAMISH, (squeemish) a. [for qualtish, from qualm] easily disgusted; having the stomach easily turned; nice; fastidious. SQUEAMISHNESS, (squeemishness) s. the quality of having a nice, delicate, and weak stomach.

To SQUEEZE, v. a. [crisian, Sax.] to press hard, or crush between two substances; to crush, to oppress, to harass by extortion.—v. n. to pass by compression; to force way through close bodies.

SQUEEZE, s. the act of pressing hard; compression; pressure.

SQUIB, s. [schieben, Teut.] a small firework; a political jeu d'esprit; a falsehood.

SQUILL, s. in Botany and Materia Medica, a name of the wild harebell hyacinth, and the allied plants.

SQUINANCY, s. [squincie, Fr. squinantia, Ital.] See QUINSEY. SQUINANCYWORT, s. in Botany, a kind of woodroof.

SQUINT, a. [squinte, Belg.] looking with the eyes directed different ways; looking obliquely, awry, suspiciously.

To SQUINT, v. a. to turn the eye obliquely.—v. n. to look obliquely, or with the eyes turned different ways.

SQUIRE, s. See ESQUIRE.

SQUIRREL, s. [scuruiel, Fr. sciurus, Lat.] in Natural History, a small animal living in woods, very graceful and agile, and hibernating in the winter. They are very numerous in N. America.

To SQUIRT, v. a. to throw out through a pipe in a quick stream.

SQUIRT, s. a syringe; a small quick stream.

To STAB, v. a. [stacen, old Belg.] to pierce with a pointed instrument; to wound mischievously, or mortally.

STAB, s. a wound given with a pointed instrument; a sly mischief, a dark injury; a stroke, a blow.

STABILITY, s. [stabilité, Fr. stabilitas, from sto, Lat.] strength; firmness; steadiness; fixedness; firmness of resolution.

STABLE, a. [stabilis, Lat.] fixed; steady; strong.

STABLE, (stábl) s. [stabilum, Lat.] a house for beasts, especially horses.

STABLESTAND, s. in Law, is one of the four evidences or presumptions, whereby a man is convicted to intend the stealing of the king's deer in the forest; and this is when a man is found at his standing in the forest, with a cross-bow bent, ready to shoot at any deer; or with a long bow; or else standing close by a tree with greyhounds in a leash ready to slip.

STACK, s. [stacca, Ital.] a large quantity of hay, corn, or wood, heaped together; several chimneys standing together.

To STACK, v. a. to pile up wood, hay, &c.

STACKHOUSE, THOMAS, an English clergyman, author of the universally known History of the Bible and various other works, only known by his writings. He died in 1752, aged 70 years.

STACTE, s. [Gr.] in Materia Medica, an aromatic gum that distils from the tree that produces myrrh.

STADJUM, s. [Lat.] anciently, in Greece and Rome, a place where foot-races were run; also a measure of length, which varied at different times.

STADTHOLDER, s. [stad and houden, Belg.] formerly the title of the chief magistrate of the united provinces of Holland.

STAËL-HOLSTEIN, ANNA LOUISE GERMAINE DE, a celebrated literary woman of France, daughter of Necker, the finance minister before the Revolution, and married just before that period to the Baron de Staël-Holstein, ambassador from Sweden. She took the liveliest interest in that movement, till the commencement of the Terror, but after the revolution of Thermidor, she again engaged in political intrigues, till she was exiled by Buonaparte. Travels in Italy, Germany, and Switzerland, together with literary undertakings, occupied her, and her chief residence was at Coppet, in the last country. Some fresh offence given to Napoleon, made it necessary for her to take refuge in Russia and in England, and she returned to France on Buonaparte's abdication. She soon, however, retired to Coppet again, and died there, in 1817, aged 49 years. She was privately married some years before her death to a M. de Rocca of Switzerland, who served in the French army. Her ambition and love of fame was insatiable; and thus she was one of the chief schemers in Parisian politics, so long as any fragment of the old noblesse remained for her use; and she returned to her occupation as soon as she was free to enter Paris again. Her literary labours are much more honourable to her, and her Corinne, and her Remarks on the French Revolution, although the first is no more than a series of brilliantly written descriptions, and the second a panegyric on her father, the queen, the Count de Narbonne, and every one else that was a favourite with her, yet maintain their reputation, and will long preserve hers. Her works are somewhat numerous, and others beside these are deserving of the attention of the student.

STAFF, s. plur. staves; [staf, Sax.] a stick which supports a person in walking, or which is used as a weapon; a club; a support, a prop; a stick used as a badge of authority; a stick to which a flag or colours are fastened; the chief officers of any army. In Music, the five lines on which the notes are written.

STAFFA, a small island on the W. of Mull, Scotland. It consists of one mass of basalt, which is chiefly columnar; and it contains that very fine specimen of that kind of plutonic rock, the romantic cavern, named Fingal's Cave. There are also other caverns, and the phenomena of basaltic rocks can be seen where best studied to such advantage as here.

STAFFORD, Staffordshire. It has a free-school, and a fine square market-place, in which is a handsome county-hall, and under it the market-house. The streets are large, and many of the houses are handsomely built. It has manufactures of cloth and shoes. It is situated in a plain on the river Sow, near a navigable canal, 135 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 10,370.

STAFFORDSHIRE, a county of England, bounded by Shropshire, Cheshire, Derbyshire, Warwickshire, and Worcestershire. It is in length about 54 miles, and varies in breadth from 18 to 36. It is divided into 5 hundreds, which contain 1 city, 21 towns, 181 parishes, and 670 villages. The principal rivers are the Trent, Dove, Sow, Churnet, Stour, Penk, and Manifold. The air is reckoned pleasant, mild, and wholesome. The middle and southern parts are level and plain, and the soil is good and rich; the N. are hilly, and full of heaths and moors. Staffordshire is famous for its potteries, its inland navigations, and its foundries, blast furnaces, slitting mills, and various other branches of the iron trade. The mines of coals, copper, lead, and iron ore are rich and extensive; and there are also numerous quarries of stone, alabaster, and limestone. Stafford is the county town. Pop. 510,504. It sends 17 members to parliament.

STAG, s. in Zoology, the male red deer; the male of the hind. STAGE, s. [estage, Fr.] a floor raised on which any show is exhibited; a place where any thing is transacted; a part of a journey by a stagecoach.

STAGECOACH, (stajecoch) s. a coach which plies regularly along the road.

STAGEPLAY, s. a theatrical entertainment.

STAGEPLAYER, s. a dramatic actor.

STAGER, s. a player; one who has long acted on the stage of life; an old practitioner.

STAGGARD, (staj-ard) s. in Hunting, a stag four years old.

TO STAGGER, (staj-er) v. n. [staggeren, Belg.] to reel, or be unable to walk or stand steadily; to faint or give way; to hesitate or be in doubt.—v. a. to make a person reel; to shock; to make less confident or steady.

STAGGERS, (staj-ers) s. in Farriery, the colic or apoplexy in horses.

STAGNANT, a. [stagnum, Lat.] motionless; still; not running; not agitated.

TO STAGNATE, v. n. to stop its course; to be without motion.

STAGNATION, s. stoppage of course; cessation of motion or fluency.

STAHL, GEORGE ERNEST, an eminent chemist and physician of Germany. He studied medicine at Jena, and was professor of medicine and chemistry at Halle. He was physician to the duke of Saxe-Weimar at the same time, and afterwards was appointed physician to the king of Prussia, and removed to Berlin, where he died in 1734, aged 74 years. In his medical practice he adopted Van Helmont's theory; but in chemistry he made a great advance, by adopting a hint of Beccher's, and inventing the phlogistic theory. This theory, although unable to endure a complete examination by experiments, was apparently supported by a considerable series of investigations, and led the way to many remarkable discoveries. It is one of the most instructive errors that a student of inductive philosophy can analyze.

STAIID, part. a. sober; sedate; grave; regular; composed.

STAIIDNESS, s. freedom from levity; soberness; composedness; gravity; prudence; sedateness; regularity.

TO STAIN, v. a. [ystaenio, Brit.] to blot, spot, or spoil colour; to disgrace.

STAIN, s. a spot or discoloration; a disgrace; a reproach; shame; ignominy; blot.

STAINER, s. one that stains or blots; a dyer.

STAINES, Middlesex. It is seated on the river Thames, over which is an elegant stone bridge of three elliptic arches. At Coln-Ditch, is what is called the London-Mark-Stone, which is the ancient boundary to the jurisdiction of the city of London on the Thames, and bears the date of 1280. Staines is 17 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 2487.

STAINING, a. spotting or discolouring.

STAIR, s. [steger, Sax.] steps by which we ascend to the upper part of any building; a flight of steps.

STAIR/CASE, that part of a building which contains the stairs.

STAKE, s. [stacek, Belg. staca, Sax.] a post or strong stick fastened in the ground; any thing placed as a palisade; any thing pledged or wagered; the state of being pledged or hazarded; a small anvil.

TO STAKE, v. a. to fasten or support with pieces of timber set upright; to wager, pledge, or hazard.

STALACTITE, STALAGMITE, s. [stalasso, Gr.] in Mineralogy, the name given to the sparry incrustations on the roofs and floors of the caverns which abound in the mountain limestone, and other similar formations. They consist of crystallized carbonate of lime, and assume the most grotesque, and occasionally the most fantastically beautiful forms. Those pendent from the roof, like icicles, are called stalactites; those accumulated under them, on the floor, stalagmites. They are formed by the water that filters through the crevices, and dissolves part of the lime, which is deposited when it is exposed to the action of the air of the cavern.

STALE, a. [stelle, Belg.] old; kept long; impaired by time.

STALENESS, s. the quality of being of an old date, or of not being fresh.

TO STALK, (stauk) v. n. [stealcen, Sax.] to walk in a proud manner; to walk loftily; to walk behind a stalking-horse or cover.

STALK, (stauk) s. a proud and lofty step; the stem of a plant, corn, a quill, &c.

STALKINGHORSE, (staukinghorse) s. a screen or cover, made use of by fowlers to shelter themselves from the sight of the game; a person employed as a tool; a pretence; a mask.

STALKY, a. hard like a stalk.

STALL, (stauld) s. [stal, Belg. steal, Sax. stalla, Ital.] a crib in which an ox is fed; a bench, &c. where any thing is exposed to sale; a small house or shed, in which certain trades are carried on; the seat of a church dignitary in a cathedral.

TO STALL, (stauld) v. a. to keep in a stall or stable; to invest, used for instal.—v. n. to kennel; to dwell.

STALLAGE, (staillage) s. money paid for keeping a stall in a fair or market.

STALLION, s. [ysaladrym, old Brit.] an entire horse.

STAMFORD, Lincolnshire. It has some fine churches, and several relics of its ancient splendour. Over the river is a fine old stone bridge. Its trade is chiefly in malt, sea-coals, and freestone. The custom of Borough English prevails here. It is seated on the river Welland, which is navigable here for barges, 85 miles from London. Markets, Monday and Friday. Pop. 3855.

STAMINA, s. [Lat.] the first principles of any thing; the solids of a human body. In Botany, the fertilizing organs of flowers.

STAMINEOUS, a. [stamen, Lat.] thready; filiculous; appearing as full of threads.

TO STAMMER, v. n. [stammeren, Belg.] to speak with great difficulty and hesitation; to have an impediment in the speech; to stutter.

STAMMERER, s. one who falters in speaking.

TO STAMP, v. a. [stampen, Belg. stamper, Dan.] to strike by forcing the foot hastily downwards; to beat as in a mortar; to impress with some mark or figure; to coin.—v. n. to strike the foot suddenly downward.

STAMP, s. [estampe, Fr. stampa, Ital.] any instrument by which an impression is made; a mark or impression made by stamping; a picture cut in wood, &c. for marking; authority; make, cast, form. In Commerce, a sort of seal made by a die on paper, which is, for financial purposes, made necessary to the validity of promissory notes, receipts, inland bills of exchange, bonds, &c. &c. Stamp Acts, in Law, are the statutes enforcing the employment of these stamps.

TO STANCH, v. a. [stancher, Fr.] to stop blood, or hinder from running.—v. a. to stop.

STANCH, a. sound, or not letting out, applied to vessels;

STAFFORDSHIRE

STAFFORD CASTLE

REFERENCE to the HUNDREDS

- 1 Cuttlen
- 2 Offlow
- 3 Pirehill
- 4 Seidon
- 5 Tomnatow

LICHFIELD CATHEDRAL

firm, trusty, determined, hearty, sound of principle; strong; not to be broken.

STANCHION, s. [estanchon, Fr.] in Building, a stay; a support; an iron bar in a window.

STANCHNESS, s. firmness; the quality of being trusty, or of sound principle.

To STAND, v. n. preter. I stood, or have stood; [standan, Goth. and Sax.] to be upon the feet; to be placed; to remain in a place; to remain in the present state; to remain undemolished, or not thrown down; to become or remain erect; to stop, halt, or cease; to offer as a candidate; to be without action; to stop. To stand against, to resist or oppose. To stand by, to support or defend; to be present only as a spectator; to repose on, or confide in. To stand for, to propose oneself as a candidate; to profess to support. To stand off, to keep at a distance; to refuse compliance; to decline intimacy or friendship. To stand out, to continue firm in a resolution; to deny compliance; to be prominent. To stand to, to ply; to persevere, or continue any action; to remain fixed in a purpose; to abide by a contract or assertion. To stand up, to rise from sitting; to rise up in order to gain notice, or make a party. To stand upon, to concern; to interest; to value; to insist.—v. a. to sustain without yielding; to abide; to keep or maintain; used with ground.

STAND, s. a station or place where one waits standing; rank or post; a stop or halt; an interruption or intermission; the highest mark or degree, beyond which a thing cannot proceed; difficulty, perplexity; a frame or table on which vessels are placed.

STANDARD, s. [estendart, Fr.] an ensign, particularly that of the cavalry; that which is of undoubted authority, and the test of other things of the same kind; something tried by the proper test; a standing stem or tree; a settled rate. In Botany, the upright petal of a butterfly-shaped blossom.

STANDARDBEARER, s. one who bears a standard or ensign.

STANDER, s. one who stands. A stander-by, a mere spectator; one present.

STANDING, a. settled or long-established; lasting; motionless; stagnant; placed on feet.

STANDING, s. continuance in any post, place, or station; power to stand; rank; condition; candidship.

STANDISH, s. a case for pens and ink.

STANHOPE, JAMES, EARL OF, a distinguished soldier, who at an early age served in the continental wars, with so much bravery, that at the siege of Namur King William III. made him a colonel. He afterwards gallantly sustained his reputation at Barcelona, Almazan, Saragossa, &c. But at Briheiga, was compelled to surrender to the Duke de Vendôme. After his release from imprisonment, he entered on a different career, and was one of the ministers of George I. He died somewhat suddenly, in 1721, aged 48 years. Charles, E. Stanhope, his grandson, made himself notorious at the outbreak of the French Revolution, by attempting to abdicate the titles and insignia of his rank. He is more favourably known for his scientific studies and inventions, amongst which is a printing press. He died in 1816, aged 63 years. Lady Hester Stanhope, daughter of the foregoing, and niece of William Pitt, made herself famous by an eccentricity that bordered on insanity. She was highly esteemed by the great minister, and admitted much to his confidence. After his death she went to Syria, assumed a male dress, and resided in a strange mixture of pomp and beggary, by means of a pension from the British government, in Mount Lebanon; where she studied astrology, and talked rhapsodically of all the great affairs of the world with all travellers who visited her. She not seldom hazarded a prophecy. Her romantic adventures, and her more than masculine bravery, have been often recorded. She died in the most forlorn condition, in 1839, aged 73 years.

STANLEY, THOMAS, an English writer of the 17th century. He studied at Cambridge, and afterwards resided chiefly in the Middle Temple. He died in 1678, aged 53 years. His principal works are a History of Philosophy, and an edition of Æschylus, with commentaries, &c.

STANNARY, a. [stannum, Lat.] relating to tin-works, and mines.

STANZA, s. [Ital.] a verse in a poem consisting of more than two lines.

STARPLE, (stápl) s. [stapal, Belg.] primarily signifies a public place or market, whither merchants are obliged to bring their goods to be bought by the people.

STARPLE, (stápl) a. settled; established in commerce; according to the laws of commerce; also, figuratively, regular, principal, chief.

STARPLE, (stápl) s. [stapal, Sax.] a loop of iron, &c. driven into wood at both ends.

STAR, s. [stearra, Sax. sterre, Belg.] a general name for all heavenly bodies, excepting the sun, moon, and comets. See FIXED STARS, NEBULA, &c. Falling Stars. See METEORS, &c. In Heraldry, it is a charge frequently borne on the shield, and the honourable ordinaries, in figure of a star. It is also a badge of honour worn by the knights of the Garter, Bath, and Hestie.

STARAPPLE, s. in Botany, a globular or olive-shaped soft fleshy fruit, enclosing a stone of the same shape, which grows in the warmest parts of America, where the fruit is eaten by way of dessert. It grows to the height of thirty or forty feet.

STAR OF BETHLEHEM, s. in Botany, a simple and beautiful kind of English flower, with a white or yellow star-formed blossom, found in meadows, and flowering in May.

STARBOARD, (stárboard) s. [stearbord, Sax.] the right-hand side of a ship.

STARCH, s. [stare, Teut.] in Vegetable Physiology and Organic Chemistry, one of the substances found universally in plants, and which occurs in great abundance in the seeds of corn, the roots of the potato, arrow-root, &c., the pith of the palm tribe, &c. &c. It is found in microscopic, rounded, brilliant grains. In Domestic Economy, a kind of paste made from wheat starch, used in stiffening linen, &c.

STARCH, a. stiff; formal; precise.

To STARCH, v. a. to stiffen with starch.

STARCHAMBER, s. one of the royal courts of judicature, which was abolished in the reign of Charles I., when its abominable tyranny could no longer be endured.

STARCHED, a. stiffened with starch; stiff; precise, or formal.

To STARCH, v. n. [starian, Sax. sterren, Belg.] to look with fixed eyes; to look steadily with wonder, impudence, confidence, stupidity, or horror. To stare in the face, signifies to be undeniably evident; to stand out prominent.

STARRE, s. a fixed or impudent look.

STARFISH, s. in Natural History, a kind of marine animal, in form resembling a star.

STARGAZER, s. an astronomer or astrologer.

STARGRASS, s. in Botany, a common kind of water-plant.

STARK, a. [stere, or stare, Sax. sterck, Belg.] stiff; strong; rugged; mere; plain; simple; gross; ample.—ad. used to augment the signification of a word; as, stark mad, mad in the highest degree.

STARLIGHT, (stárlit) s. the light or lustre of the stars.

STARLING, s. [stearling, Sax.] in Ornithology, a bird about the size of the common blackbird, remarkably docile, which may be taught to imitate the human voice.

STARRY, a. decorated with stars; resembling stars; consisting of stars.

To START, v. n. [startzen, Teut.] to feel or give an involuntary shrink, twitch, or motion, on the apprehension of danger; to go out of the way; to deviate; to shrink; to rise suddenly, used generally with up; to set out in any course or pursuit.—v. a. to alarm or disturb suddenly; to make fly; to discover; to put suddenly out of its place.

START, s. a sudden twitch or motion of terror; a sudden excitement to action; a Sally or unexpected flight; a quick spring or motion; a sudden fit, or intermitted action. To get the start, is to begin before another.

STARTING, s. among jockeys, the setting out of the horses at the beginning of a heat. Among brewers, the putting new beer or ale to that which is decayed, in order to revive it; or the filling empty butts with beer.

To STARTLE, (stártl) v. n. to shrink; to move on a sudden apprehension of danger.—v. a. to frighten; to shock or impress with sudden apprehension of danger; to make to deviate; to deter.

STARTLE, (stártl) s. a sudden shock; alarm; sudden impression of terror.

To STARVE, v. n. [stearfarn, Sax.] to perish with hunger or cold; to suffer extreme poverty.—v. a. to kill with hunger or cold; to deprive of force or vigour; to subdue by famine.

STARVELING, s. any animal that is both thin and weak for want of food.—a. hungry; lean; pining.

STARWORT, s. in Botany, a pretty kind of composite flower, growing near the sea.

STATE, s. [status, Lat.] condition; circumstances of nature or fortune; the settled meaning or tenor; the community or public; a government; rank or quality; solemn pomp or grandeur; a seat of dignity; a canopy; the chief persons in an administration. Compounded with other words, it signifies public, or relating to government.

To STATE, v. a. [constat, Fr.] to settle or regulate; to represent with all its circumstances.

STATELINESS, s. grandeur of appearance or mien; proud behaviour; affected dignity.

STATELY, a. pompous; majestic; grand; august; lofty; elevated; magnificent; elated in mien or sentiment.

STATEN ISLAND, an island of New York, United States. It is about 14 miles long, and 8 broad. The surface to the N. is hilly, and Richmond Hill is about 300 feet high, affording a most beautiful prospect. It has beds of iron ore and other minerals. There are 4 townships on it. Pop. 10,965.

STATES-GENERAL, s. an assembly of the deputies of the several United Provinces. Formerly, the assembled representatives of all the estates in France.

STATESMAN, s. one versed or concerned in the arts of government; a pedantic politician.

STATIC, STATICAL, a. relating to the science of weighing.

STATICS, s. [statike, from histemi, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, the science which considers the laws of equilibrium.

STATION, (stāshōn) s. [Fr. statio, from sto, Lat.] the act of standing; a state of rest; a place or post; situation; character; employment; rank or condition of life; an intermediate point on a railroad, where trains stop for passengers, &c.

To STATION, (stāshōn) v. a. to set in a certain rank, post, or place.

STATIONARY, (stāshōnary) a. fixed; not progressive. Applied to the planets, when they have no apparent motion.

STATIONER, (stāshōner) s. one who sells paper; formerly applied to booksellers on account of the stands or stations in which they exposed their books.

STATIONERY, s. in trade, all kinds of paper, regarded as a ware.

STATISTICAL, a. [from state,] relating to the condition, resources, wealth, &c., of a state.

STATISTICS, s. the science of Political Geography, relating to the population, wealth, trade, revenue, currency, resources, &c. &c. of nations. It is usually, however, treated not as a science, but simply as the preparatory process to a science, being busied only with the accumulation and tabulation of facts. It was formerly confounded with geography, but in all modern treatises is separated from it.

STATIUS, P. PAPINIUS, a Roman poet, of the 1st century A. D. He enjoyed considerable reputation during his life, and died in 96 A. D., aged 35 years. His chief poems are the Thebais, the Achilleis, and a collection of minor poems called Sylva.

STATUARY, s. [statuaire, Fr.] the art of carving images; a carver of images.

STATUE, s. [Fr. statua, from sto, Lat.] a carved or cast image.

STATURE, s. [Fr. statura, from sto, Lat.] the height of an animal.

STATUTE, s. [statut, Fr. from statuo, Lat.] an edict of a legislator; a law; an act of parliament.

To STAVE, v. a. [from staff, in the plural staves] to break barrels in pieces; to push off as with a staff; to pour out by breaking the case.—v. n. to fight with staves.

STAVES, the plural of STAFF.

STAVESACRE, s. in Botany, a plant called larkspur.

STAUNTON, SIR GEORGE LEONARD, a diplomatist of the last century. He studied medicine at Montpellier, and practised in the island of Grenada; where he was introduced to Lord Macartney, who made him his secretary. He accompanied his Lordship to Madras, and afterwards to China, on a special mission; and on both occasions had considerable trust reposed in him by the government, and distinguished himself by the mode of discharging it. He died in 1801, aged 64 years. He wrote an account of his mission to China, which was read with great interest, as little was known then of the Celestial Empire.

To STAY, v. n. [stacen, Belg.] to continue in a place, or in the same state; to wait; to stop or stand still. Used with on or upon, to rest or confide in.—v. a. to stop, to repress; to delay, to obstruct; to keep from departing; to prop.

STAY, s. continuance in the same place; a stand or stop; a fixed state; a prop or support. Among mariners, ropes which support the masts, and keep them from falling. In the plural, an article of dress, used by females and effeminate men to give them an unnaturally slender appearance.

STAYLACE, s. a lace with which stays are drawn tight.

STAYMAKER, s. a maker of women's stays.

STEAD, (stēd) s. [sted, Sax.] a place, room, or post, occupied by another. After stand, use; help, or service. Stand or sted, [styd, or stathe, Sax.] in the names of places, a place; but if they be situated on a river, a shore or station for ships.

STEADILY, (stēdily) ad. without tottering, shaking, or altering; without irregularity or variation.

STEADINESS, (stēdiness) s. the quality of not being easily moved or disconcerted; consistent, unvaried conduct; constancy, firmness.

STEADY, (stēdy) a. [stēdyg, Sax.] firm; constant; regular. Among sailors, keeping the ship constant in her course.

STEAK, (stāk) s. [steyck, Isl. Sax. and Erse,] a piece of meat to be fried or grilled.

To STEAL, (stēel) v. a. preter. stole, past part. stolen; [stelan, Sax. stelen, Belg.] to take away what is another's privately; to gain or effect in a secret or imperceptible manner; to thieve; to purloin.—v. n. to withdraw secretly; to be guilty of taking what is another's without his knowledge or notice.

STEALER, s. one who steals; a thief.

STEALTH, (stēlth) s. the act of taking what belongs to another without his knowledge or notice; theft; the thing stolen. By stealth, signifies secretly, and is sometimes used in a good sense.

STEAM, (stēem) s. [steme, Sax.] in Chemistry, the form assumed by fluids subjected to the action of heat; vaporized water.

To STEAM, (stēem) v. n. [steman, Sax.] to smoke or vapour; to send up vapours, applied to hot liquors.

STEAM-CARRIAGE, s. a carriage for the conveyance of goods, passengers, &c. moved by an application of steam-power. The great objection to the use of them on common roads is the number of sudden bendings in them; they frighten horses employed in other carriages, also, and so interfere with common traffic. See LOCOMOTIVE, RAILWAY, &c.

STEAM-ENGINE, s. an engine, by means of which the expansive force of steam is applied to the working of all kinds of machinery. The earlier forms of this engine were very rude and unsatisfactory; it was not till James Watt applied his powerful mind to the consideration of this subject, that it was any thing more than a self-acting pump for raising water from mines. It has received many improvements, in minor points, since the time of Watt, and has been applied to many purposes that he did not contemplate, which has necessitated various modifications in form and arrangement, but the principal parts remain the same in all engines. These are, the boiler, in which the steam is generated; the cylinder, in which a piston works by means of steam admitted alternately above and below it, which communicates, by a crank, a rotatory motion to a fly-wheel. In the simplest engines, such as are used in locomotives, steam-packets, &c., the crank is attached to the upper end of the piston-rod, and the fly-wheel is thus set in motion directly; but, most usually, the piston is attached to one end of a beam, to the other end of which is attached an arm, with a crank which moves the fly-wheel; while on each side of the centre of it are the piston-rods of various pumps for supplying the boiler with fresh water, for effecting the condensation of the steam that has been used, &c. One of the most beautiful contrivances connected with this part of the machinery, is that for securing the exact perpendicularity of the piston-rods of the cylinder, and of the pump next to it, when in action, or, as it is called, parallel motion. It is not possible here to describe the ingenious means employed in making the piston of the cylinder work with the least friction in the cylinder, and at the same time so as to be almost airtight; minute diagrams, or models, alone can explain this. In disposing of the steam after it has been used in the cylinder, two plans are adopted; in one it is condensed, by the aid of a jet of cold water, kept up in a chamber to which it is admitted; in the other it is, as in locomotives, not condensed, but blown off into the open air; and it will be seen that circumstances alone can determine which plan is the best in any case. Engines constructed on the last plan are called high-pressure engines. In admitting the steam into the cylinder, a very simple contrivance is used; the steam-pipe coming from the boiler, branches off to the top and to the bottom of the cylinder, and a frame, with valves, is so connected with both branches that one branch is open when the other is closed, and the alternate supply of steam above and below the piston is easily effected by an eccentric fixed on the axis of the fly-wheel, which by an arm raises and depresses the frame with the valves alternately, and in exactly the same rate of velocity as is needful. The use of the fly-wheel, as is well known, is to regulate as well as to accumulate the force of the engine; a further means of regulating the motion of the engine is called the governor, which is a rotary vertical spindle, having dependent on opposite sides from the top two movable arms, to which are attached heavy metallic balls. Motion is communicated to the spindle from the axis of the fly-wheel; and as the balls swing in a wider circle when the motion is more rapid, they move a lever which works a valve in the steam-pipe, called a throttle-valve, that regulates the supply of steam to the cylinder, so that if the motion could be increased till the balls of the governor should revolve horizontally on their arms, the steam-pipe would be quite closed, and all supply cut off. The boiler is made in various forms, according to circumstances, each being intended to generate the greatest quantity of steam, in the shortest time, and with the greatest safety. The best form of all, is that which is made of a number of tubes, like gun-barrels, amongst which the flame of the furnace ascends, since, if one were to burst, only the steam in it would escape, and so, comparatively, little damage be done. To prevent accidents, a gauge is attached to the side of the boiler, in sight of the engineer, or stoker, which is a strong glass tube, connected with the upper and with the lower parts of the boiler, and showing, necessarily, at a glance the exact proportion of the water and steam in the boiler to each other. Another safeguard is the safety-valve, in the upper surface of the boiler, closed by a weight suspended from one end of a kind of steelyard, along the longer arm of which a smaller weight can be moved, and thus the amount of force within the boiler needful to lift the valve, and allow the steam to escape, can be most accurately fixed. It will be seen at once, that all the motion communicated to machinery by the steam-engine is rotary, and is conveyed by the axis of the fly-wheel. The various plans for employing and modifying this motion do not belong to the description of the engine which produces it.

STEAMER, s. a steam-vessel. In Cookery, an apparatus for cooking vegetables, &c. by steam.

STEAMINESS, (stéminéss) s. emission of vapour.

STEAM-TUG, s. a small steamer employed in towing vessels in and out of harbour, &c.

STEAM-VESSEL, STEAM-PACKET, STEAM-SHIP, s. a vessel employed on rivers or at sea, impelled by paddles, or by a screw, worked by steam-power.

STEAM-WHISTLE, s. part of the apparatus of a locomotive, or steam-vessel engine, in which a small current of steam is let out of the boiler against a sharp edge, which produces a most horrid scream, and can be heard to a great distance. Its use on railways as a signal will be easily perceived.

STEARATES, s. in Chemistry, the compounds of stearic acid with alkalies, earths, and the oxides of metals.

STEARIC, s. in Chemistry, connected with stearine. Stearic acid, in the solid state, is used in making candles, as being cheaper than wax.

STEARINE, s. [stear, Gr.] in Chemistry, the solid part of some fats and oils. It is a soft pearly substance, which, when pure, is not at all greasy, insoluble in water, with weak acid properties.

STEATITE, s. [stear, Gr.] in Mineralogy, the general name of a species of earth, of which the soap-stone of Cornwall, French chalk, and Meerschaum are varieties. It is a kind of magnesia, and is greasy to the touch.

STEDFAST, a. fast in a place; firm in resolution; constant.

STEDFASTLY, ad. firmly; resolutely.

STEDFASTNESS, a. constancy; firmness; resolution.

STEED, s. [stedia, Sax.] a horse for state or war.

STEEL, s. [stael, Belg. etal, Sax.] in Chemistry and the Useful Arts, a compound of iron and carbon, differing from iron, not in the presence of carbon, but in the mode of its combination. It is of a gray colour, and of a much closer and finer grain than iron, and may be made, by tempering, of every degree of elasticity and hardness. Its various uses are too well known to need description. Cast steel is made by fusion, and is more brittle than ordinary steel, and has also a closer grain, and more equable structure. Steel-engraving, is a print taken off by a rolling-press from an engraving on a steel plate, which is now much used instead of copper-plate, from being more durable, &c. See COPPER-PLATE, &c. Figuratively, weapons or armour. In Medicine, chalybeate remedies. Proverbially, any thing hard.

STEEL, a. made of steel.

To STEEL, v. a. to point or edge with steel; to make hard, firm, or insensible.

STEELE, SIR RICHARD, one of the writers of the "Augustan age of English Literature." He studied at Oxford, and entered the army, but he forsook that profession for the more peaceful walk of authorship. His first writings were plays, which attracted some attention. But afterwards, in the Tattler, Spectator, and Guardian, in conjunction with Addison and others, he obtained a place amongst the first ranks of English essayists. He was, later in life, a member of parliament, and was once expelled for libel. He held also the post of governor to the Royal Company of Comedians. Great pecuniary losses, the result of his want of business habits, reduced him to great distress, and he died in Wales, in 1729, aged 58 years.

STEELLY, a. made of steel; hard; firm.

STEELYARD, s. in Mechanics and Trade, a species of balance, consisting of a graduated rod, suspended very near to one end, having a scale for the commodities on the shorter arm, and a small weight movable at pleasure on the other. In use, the weight is shifted along the longer arm, till there is equilibrium, and the degree against which it stands shows the weight of the things in the scale.

STEEN, JAN, an eminent painter of Leyden. He studied under Van Goyen, and married his daughter. He was a very dissipated character, but his paintings show considerable skill, and are highly valued. He died in 1689, aged 53 years.

STEEP, a. [steep, Sax.] difficult and dangerous to ascend or descend, because with very little slant.

STEEP, s. a precipice; an ascent almost perpendicular.

To STEEP, v. a. [stippen, Belg.] to soak long in liquor; to macerate; to dip; to imbue.

STEEPLE, (steepl) s. [steepel, or stijpel, Sax.] the tower of a church, in which the bells are hung.

STEEPNESS, s. declivity; great descent.

STEER, s. [styre, steor, or stior, Sax.] a young bullock.

To STEER, v. a. [stieren, Belg. steoran, or styrar, Sax.] to direct or guide in its passage.—v. n. to direct a course at sea.

STEERAGE, s. the act of guiding a vessel in its course; that which guides any thing in its course; the stern or hinder part of a ship.

STEERSMAN, STEERSMATE, s. one that steers or guides a vessel in its course; a pilot; one who chiefly conducts the affairs of a state.

STEEVENS, GEORGE, one of the principal English commentators on Shakspeare. He studied at Cambridge; and first appeared before the literary world with an edition of 20 of Shakspeare's plays. He was afterwards connected with Dr. Johnson in his edition; and, later still, he edited the great bard's works with (as he thought) improvements in the rhythm, &c. He was engaged in other lesser literary works; and died in 1800, aged 64 years. The services of such a critic as Steevens are not of a kind to confer immortality; and he seems to live yet simply from his association with Johnson, and because England has produced few greater critics, who are widely known.

STEGANOGRAPHIST, s. [steganos and grapho, Gr.] he who practises the art of secret writing.

STEGANOGRAPHY, (steganography) s. the art of secret writing in cipher.

STEGNOSIS, s. [stegno, Gr.] a stopping up the pores of the body.

STEGNOTICS, s. medicines which produce costiveness.

STELLAR, a. [stella, Lat.] relating to the stars; full of stars; astral; starry.

STELLATE, a. [stellatus, Lat.] marked with spots like stars. In Botany, plants having their leaves growing on the stalks at certain distances, in the form of a star.

STELLIONATE, s. [stellionat, Fr. from stellus, Lat.] in Law, a kind of crime which is committed by a deceitful selling a thing for other than it really is; as if a man should sell that for his own estate which is the property of another.

STEM, s. [stemma, Lat.] a stalk or twig; a family; generation; pedigree; genealogy; race.—[stammen, Swed.] the prow or forepart of a ship.

To STEP, v. a. [stemma, Isl.] to oppose a current; to check; to keep back.

STENCH, s. [stenean, Sax.] a stink; a bad smell.

To STENCH, v. a. to scent with a bad smell.

STENCILLING, s. the art of ornamenting the plastered wall of a room in the same way as paper-hangings are printed. It has some advantages over paper-hanging; but is far from generally in use.

STENOGRAPHY, (stenography) s. [stenos and grapho, Gr.] the art of writing in secret characters; short-hand writing.

STENTOROPHONIC, a. [Stentor and phone, Gr.] loudly speaking or sounding.

To STEP, v. n. [stappen, Belg. stoppan, Sax.] to move by a single change or motion of the foot; to advance suddenly; to trace backwards or forwards in the mind; to take a short walk; to walk gravely, slowly, or resolutely.

STEP, s. [step, Belg. step, Sax.] motion by moving one foot before another; a stair; round of a ladder; the space passed by a single remove of the foot; progression; act of advancing; a small space; the print of a foot; gait, manner of walking; action, or instance of conduct.

STEP, (step, Sax.) in Composition, one who is related to another only by marriage.

STEPHANUS BYZANTINUS, a Greek grammarian of the 6th century. He wrote a dictionary of geography, or topography. Nothing but his work is known of him, and this only by an epitome, made by a later writer.

STEPHEN, the protomartyr, or first who testified his trust in the Saviour by his death. Nothing is known of his life but what is recorded in the Acts of the Apostles, where he is first mentioned as one of the Hellenist deacons, and as an ardent preacher. Having been taken before the Sanhedrim, he addressed to them a noble historical defence of the gospel; but before he had concluded it, he was seized by the enraged Jews, and stoned to death, in about 33 A. D.

STEPHEN, successor to Henry I. on the throne of England, and nephew to that king; being grandson to the Conqueror by his daughter Adela, who was married to the Count of Blois. He was not the eldest son, but the two who preceded him in age did not interfere with his aspirations. On Henry's death, he was proclaimed by his partisans, accepted by almost the whole nation, and confirmed by the pope. But attempts in behalf of Henry's daughter, Matilda, formerly the Empress, and now Countess of Anjou, soon commenced in Normandy, in the N. of England by the Scottish king, in Wales, and gradually in all parts of England. One of these arose as fast as another was quelled, and the Scots twice invaded England, the second time being defeated at the "Battle of the Standard." Stephen had been compelled, in securing the kingdom, to seem to concede greatly to the clergy, but attempting at his first moment of leisure to curb them, he raised the whole ecclesiastical power of the country against him. Before his efforts to compromise this were carried through, Matilda invaded England, and after four months' war, Stephen was taken prisoner, and confined in Bristol Castle. A short time only elapsed before Stephen's queen found an opportunity of attacking the victorious party, and in the end Stephen was released, and the war with various fortunes carried on, till Matilda was compelled to leave England. But peace was not Stephen's lot. This struggle over, others rose into importance; and ere he had succeeded in reducing his rebellious vassals, and teaching the church militant humility, the son of his old enemy invaded England, and war was once more preparing. But arbitration was resorted to instead of the sword, and Henry was declared Stephen's successor. For about a year longer Stephen held his unpeaceful crown; and died in 1154, aged 50 years, and having reigned nearly 19. England was nearly destroyed during this disastrous period of insane civil war.

STEPHENS, the name of a French family of printers, distinguished for the great scholars it produced; the most eminent of whom were,—Robert Stephens, famous for his critical knowledge of Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, and for the editions of the Scriptures which he printed. He was appointed royal printer by Francis I., and experienced no little persecution from the Sorbonne, who felt that the Bible was "all against them;" and was at last compelled to take refuge in Geneva. He died in 1559, aged 56 years. Beside his editions of the Vulgate Version, the Greek Testament, &c., he edited several classical works, and Church Fathers; and added to correct and beautiful typography, critical emendations and learned comment. He also made the division of the chapters of the Bible into verses, for which not many thanks are due. His great work is a Dictionary of the Latin Language, which was the first work of real value and learning of that kind. Henry Stephens, his son, exceeded him in learning and fame. He travelled in England, Holland, and Italy, for the purpose of studying the classics, &c. in the best MSS., and conferring with the great scholars of the age; and at last settled at Geneva with his father. But when, after his father's death, the whole business was in his hands, he suffered his affairs to become inextricably involved, and then, instead of labouring to set them right, resumed his learned pilgrimages through France and Germany; and finally died at Lyons, in a public hospital, in 1598, aged 70 years. He edited a great number of classical authors, and wrote many learned treatises; and added to the editions of the New Testament which he printed with his father, others of his own. But the lasting basis of his fame is his Lexicon of the Greek Language, which continues to this day to be one of the chief fountains of accurate knowledge of that tongue for scholars.

STEPPE, s. [Slav.] the name of the vast plains of European Russia; and now often used to designate such plains wherever they occur, especially in Europe and Asia.

STERCORACEOUS, a. [stercus, Lat.] belonging to dung; partaking of the nature of dung.

STEREORATION, s. the act of manuring with dung.

STEREOGRAPHY, (stereography) s. [stereos and grapho, Gr.] the art of representing solids on a plane.

STEREOMETRY, s. [stereos and metreo, Gr.] a science teaching to measure solid bodies, or to find their solid contents.

STEREOTOMY, s. [stereos and temno, Gr.] the art or act of cutting solids, or making sections thereof, as walls or other members in the profiles of architecture.

STEREOTYPE PRINTING, s. [stereos and typos, Gr.] the art of printing books from pages cast in solid plates, instead of being composed of single movable letters; chiefly applicable to works of great and constant sale, as Bibles, Dictionaries, classic authors, &c.

STERILE, a. [stérile, Fr. sterilis, Lat.] barren, or producing neither fruit nor children.

STERILITY, s. [stérilité, Fr. from sterilis, Lat.] barrenness; or want of power to produce fruit or offspring.

STERLING, a. [from Easterlings, the people originally employed in the mint:] an epithet by which genuine English money is discriminated, having twenty shillings English to the pound. Genuine; having passed the test.

STERLING, s. English coin; standard money or rate.

STERN, a. [stern, Sax.] severe in look or manners; truculent; harsh; cruel; unrelenting; afflictive; severe; sour; morose.

STERN, s. [stern, Sax.] the hind part of a ship; the hinder part of any thing; direction.

STERNE, LAURENCE, an English clergyman, and one of the chief of English humourists. He was the son of a lieutenant of a "marching regiment;" and after his father's death studied at Cambridge, and entering the Church, obtained, at various intervals, such preferment as a man of genius could expect. His life was varied by the publication of his works, the literary lionism they introduced him to, and a tour on the continent for his health, which he has described in his own way in his Sentimental Journey. He died in 1768, aged 55 years. His principal work is the inimitable Tristram Shandy; and upon that his claim to his high place in English literature is founded: it abounds with instances of the finest humour and genuine pathos. Beside this and the Journey, he published some Sermons. But the praise accorded to Sterne must be qualified by the declaration that few writers of his class display such a relish for gratuitous licentiousness; and the pathos of his Sentimental Journey is, in notorious instances, so purely empty, that it affects the mind with involuntary disgust.

Stephen.

STERNHOLD, THOMAS, one of the versifiers of the Old Version of the Psalms; an Oxford man, who held courtly office under Henry VIII. and his son; and died in 1549. He is immortalized by his Psalter, in which he was helped by Hopkins, Norton, and others; and which was blamed for lack of poetic fire by old Rous, who did the Scottish Psalter. But however uncomfortable to modern taste the poetry may be, he has undoubtedly preserved more of the simplicity and spirit of the original than almost all others who have attempted that task.

STERNLY, ad. severely; morosely.

STERNNESS, s. severity in look or manners.

STERNON, STERNUM, s. [Gr. Lat.] in Anatomy, the breast-bone.

STERNUTATION, s. [sternuto, Lat.] the act of sneezing.

STERNUTATIVE, STERNUTATORY, a. provoking sneezing.

STESICHORUS, a Greek lyric poet, who flourished in Sicily about 600 B. C., of whose writings only a few fragments remain.

STETHOSCOPE, s. [stethos and skopeo, Gr.] in Medicine, an instrument made of cedar wood, by the application of which to the chest, the sounds of the lungs and heart can be very plainly discerned. The introduction of it has changed the whole aspect of some parts of medical science.

STETTIN, a sea-port town of Pomerania, Prussia. It stands on the Oder, and has several fine bridges of wood across it and two other streams. It has some very handsome buildings, and is very strongly fortified. Here, too, is a good library. It has several manufactures, and ship-building is carried on with some activity. Its trade is extensive, but not so great as it might be. Pop. about 35,000. Lat. 53. 23. N. Long. 14. 26. E.

STEVENSON, GEORGE ALEXANDER, a miscellaneous writer of the last century. He was originally a strolling player, and lived a desultory, uncreditable life. His pieces are very various, and of them all, a song, The Storm, and a droll monodrama, entitled A Lecture on Heads, (or at least some parts of it,) alone are known now. He died in 1784.

STEVENSON, SIR JOHN, an eminent musical composer of Ireland, of whose numerous and admired works, the most celebrated are the Irish Melodies, to which Moore's exquisite words were written. He died in 1833, aged 72 years.

TO STEW, v. a. [stewer, Fr.] to seethe any thing with a slow heat, and a small quantity of liquor.—v. n. to be seethed in a small moist heat.

STEW, s. [estuve, Fr. stufa, Ital. estufa, Span.] a bagnio; a hot-house; a brothel; a storepound or fishpond.

STEWARD, s. [steward, Sax.] one who manages the affairs of another, particularly with respect to money.

STEWARDSHIP, s. the office of a steward.

STEWART, DUGALD, one of the most eminent of the Scottish metaphysicians. He studied at Glasgow, and at an early age received the chair of mathematics at Edinburgh. His next appointment was that of professor of moral philosophy, which he held for 25 years. The rest of his life was spent in literary retirement, and he died in 1828, aged 75 years. In the Scottish school he holds a conspicuous place; but in the school of philosophy he does not take a very high rank. He was not a discoverer; but he succeeded by the graces of his style and his happy elucation in conciliating general favour to a shallow system, and in concealing its shallowness from all but the few who attempted to navigate the stream with vessels of heavier burden. Perhaps his highest claim to mention in the history of philosophy, is the fact that he aided in recalling some of the most eminent of the modern French philosophers from the sensualism into which Condillac's perversion of Locke's system had led almost all thinkers of that nation. His chief works are, Outlines of Moral Philosophy, Elements of the Philosophy of the Human Mind, Philosophical Essays, and the Preliminary Essay to the Supplement of the Encyclopedia Britannica.

STIBBL, v. a. [stibbam, Lat.] antimonial.

STICK, s. [sticca, Sax. stecco, Ital. stecco, Belg.] a thin and longish piece of wood; a walking-staff.

TO STICK, v. a. pret. and past part. stuck; [stican and stician, Sax.] to fasten on so that it may remain or adhere without falling off; to stab or pierce with a pointed instrument.—v. n. to adhere to without falling off; to be inseparable; to remain in the memory; to stop in its passage; to be constant to; to hesitate, used with at: to be perplexed. To stick out, to be prominent with deformity; to refuse compliance.

TO STICKLE, (stikh) v. n. to take part with one side or another; to contend with obstinacy; to trim; to play fast and loose between opposites.

STICKLEBACK, s. in Ichthyology, a small fish, well-known to all school-boys, having sharp spines projecting from its dorsal fin, and called by a variety of names in different parts of England.

STICKLER, s. one that is busy in public affairs; one who is zealous in the cause he espouses; a sidesman to a fencer; a second to a duellist; a judge of a combat.

STICKY, a. fastening itself to any thing it touches; adhesive; viscous; glutinous.

STIFF, a. [Dan. stíf, Sax. stíf, Swed. stíf, Belg.] not easy to be bent or put out of form by the touch; rigid; inflexible; not easily subdued; obstinate; formal; hardy; strong; stubborn; pertinacious; rigorous; harsh; constrained.

TO STIFFEN, v. a. [stifan, Sax.] to make stiff, or hard to be bent; to make obstinate, inflexible, rigid, unpliant, hard.—v. n. to grow stiff or rigid; to become unpliant; to grow hard; to grow obstinate.

STIFFLY, ad. in a stubborn, obstinate, inflexible manner.

STIFFNECKED, a. obstinate; stubborn; contumacious.

STIFFNESS, s. hardness; rigidity; tension; obstinacy; stubbornness.

TO STIFLE, (stiff) v. a. [estoufer, Fr.] to smother for want of air; to suffocate; to keep in; to extinguish; to suppress or conceal.

STIGMA, s. [Lat.] a brand with a hot iron; a mark of infamy. In Botany, the upper part of the pointal.

TO STIGMATIZE, v. a. [stigmatizer, Fr.] to mark with a brand; to disgrace; to mark with infamy or reproach.

STILE, s. [stigele, Sax.] a set of steps by which a person may pass from one enclosure to another.

STILETTO, s. [Ital.] a small dagger, of which the blade is not edged, but round, with a sharp point.

STILICHO, FLAVIUS, the famous general of Theodosius the Great. He was a soldier of fortune, and is believed to have been, by birth, a Vandal. His great skill made Theodosius leave him sole guardian to his son Honorius. Not without greatness of mind, and yet with a large mixture of personal ambition, he struggled against the numberless enemies of Rome. Again and again he defeated, by his superior generalship, Alaric, Radogast, and others of the barbaric leaders, who were yearly pressing nearer and nearer to the mistress of the world; and the cowardice and deceit of Honorius made his task one of no slight difficulty. At length he was murdered by the emperor's command, as the reward for services no other could or would have rendered to the empire, in 408 A. D. Claudian, the last great poet of Rome, has worthily commemorated his praise.

TO STILL, v. a. [stillan, Sax. stillen, Belg.] to silence; to make silent; to quiet or appease; to calm.

STILL, a. [stil, Belg.] silent, without noise, quiet, calm; motionless.

STILL, s. a state of calmness and silence; a vessel used in distilling; an alembic.

STILL, ad. [stille, Sax.] to this time inclusive; nevertheless; continually; after that.

STILLATORY, s. an alembic; a vessel in which distillation is performed; a distillery.

STILLBORN, a. born dead.

STILLICIDE, s. [stilla and cado, Lat.] a succession of drops.

STILLICIDIOUS, a. falling in drops.

STILLINGFLEET, DR. EDWARD, an English prelate of the 17th century, eminent for his learning and piety. He studied at Cambridge, and was one of the most distinguished of the "latitude men," yet somewhat more controversial in his habit than were the others. He was made a bishop at the Revolution of 1688, and died in 1699, aged 64 years. Of all his works that called Origines Sacre, a treatise of Christian evidences, is best known now.

STILLNESS, s. the state of being free from motion or noise; calmness; quiet; silence; taciturnity.

STILOPO, a Greek philosopher, of the school of Megara, and very celebrated in his day for his wisdom and virtue. He was not a rigid adherent to the doctrines of Euclid, but carried the Socratic element out to further development, and originated some of the doctrines of the Stoic school. He flourished in about 300 B. C.

STILTON, a name given to a rich kind of cheese, made abundantly in the E. counties of England, from a small place in Huntingdonshire, especially famous for it.

STILTS, s. [stiltor, Swed.] light poles, with foot-rests at some height from the ground, used for increasing the height in walking.

To STIMULATE, v. a. [stimulo, Lat.] to prick or goad; to incline to action by some forcible motive. In Medicine, preparations which increase the activity of any organ, or excite it to action when inactive.

STIMULATION, s. [stimulation, Lat.] the act of inciting to action; excitement; the act of inciting a quick sensation.

To STING, v. a. preter. stung, past part. stung and stung: [stingan, Sax.] to pierce or prick with a pointed dart infected with venom; to infuse venom into; to put to great pain or torture.

STING, s. in Physiology, a means of defence furnished to some plants and inferior animals, consisting of a gland which secretes an acrid or poisonous fluid, and a hollow, sharp-pointed, hair-like organ, which inflicts the wound. In animals it is retractile. Experience of the inconvenient effects of the stings of bees and wasps, and of nettles, loas, and other plants, makes us think such defences somewhat formidable. Any thing that gives pain; words conveying a pointed thought.

STINGINESS, (the g pron. like f) s. covetousness; niggardliness; avarice.

STINGO, s. [from the sharpness of its taste.] old strong beer. STINGY, (the g pron. like f) a. covetous; loth to give or lend.

To STINK, v. n. preter. stank or stunk; [stinken, Belg. stinian, Sax.] to cause a bad scent.

STINK, a. an offensive smell.

STINKARD, s. a stinking nasty fellow.

STINK-POT, a. an artificial composition offensive to the smell.

To STINT, v. a. [stynta, Swed. stunta, Isl.] to bound; to limit; to restrain; to stop; to give sparingly, or confine to short allowance.

STINT, s. limit; bound; restraint; a proportion assigned.

STINT, s. in Ornithology, a kind of snipe.

STIPEND, a. [stipendium, Lat.] wages or settled pay.

STIPENDIARY, s. [stipendiarie, Fr.] one who performs any service for a settled payment.

STIPENDIARY, a. [stipendium, Lat.] receiving salaries; performing any service for a stated price.

To STIPULATE, v. n. [stipulari, Lat.] to settle or make a bargain on certain terms; to contract; to covenant.

STIPULATION, s. [Fr. from stipulari, Lat.] an agreement; a covenant; a bargain.

To STIR, (usually pron. stür) v. a. [stirian, Sax.] to move or remove from its place; to incite; to instigate; to agitate, or put the parts of a fluid in motion, by keeping something continually moving between them. To stir up, to put in action; to incite or provoke.—v. n. to move oneself; to be in motion; to rise out of bed.

STIR, (stür) s. [stur, Run.] a tumult, bustle, or public commotion; agitation, conflicting passion.

STIRRIUS, a. [stirian, Lat.] hanging in drops like icicles.

STIRLING, Stirlingshire, Scotland. It is seated on the S. side of the Frith of Forth, on a hill, rising from the E., terminates abruptly in a steep rock. It has an ancient castle, which was often the residence of the kings of Scotland; the outside of which is richly and curiously adorned with grotesque figures. The church is a magnificent Gothic structure, which serves for two separate places of worship. In this town and its neighbourhood are flourishing manufactures of carpets, tartans, coarse shalloons, and cottons. It is commodiously seated for inland trade, but only small vessels can come up the river to the town. It is 35 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 8307.

STIRLINGSHIRE, a county of Scotland, lying on the Frith of Forth, and bounded by Perthshire, Clackmannanshire, the county of Linlithgow, Lanarkshire, and Dumbartonsire. It is about 35 miles in length, 14 or 15 in its general breadth, and not more than 17 in its greatest. The S. parts are mountainous, but the parts about the Forth are fertile, and abound in coals. The principal rivers are the Forth, (which receives a great number of smaller streams,) Carron, and Avon. Cattle, sheep, and horses are reared abundantly. There are also manufactures of cloth, &c. The principal towns are Stirling and Falkirk. Pop. 82,057. It returns one member and two moieties to the imperial parliament.

STIRREY, s. one who is in motion; one who puts in motion; an instigator; an inciter.

STIRRUPE, s. [stirap, or stigerap, Sax.] an iron strap, assisting a horseman in mounting his horse, and in sitting on the saddle.

To STITCH, v. a. [stiche, Dan. sticken, Belg.] to sew on with the needle; to join by sewing. To stitch up, to mend something rent.

—v. n. to perform needle-work.

STITCH, s. [stician, Sax.] a single pass of a needle and thread through any thing; a sharp pin.

STITCHWORT, s. in Botany, the name of several common English plants, one of the most elegant of which is a kind of chickweed.

STITHY, s. [stith, Sax.] an anvil.

To STIVE, v. a. to stuff up close; to make hot and sultry for want of vent.

STIVER, s. [Belg.] a Dutch coin about the value of a half-penny.

STOAT, s. in Natural History, a kind of weasel.

STOCCADO, (stokádo) s. [stocco, Ital.] a thrust with the rapier.

STOCK, s. [Belg. stoc, Sax.] the trunk or body of a plant or tree; a log; a person remarkably stupid; the handle of any thing; the frame on which a ship is supported while building; a close neckcloth; a race, lineage, family, ancestry; the fund with which a person carries on trade; goods employed in trade; quantity, store. Stocks. See FUNDS.

STOCK, STOCKGILYFLOWER, s. in Floriculture, a common kind of garden plants, cultivated chiefly for their delicious scent, and for the splendid size of the long spikes of flowers.

To STOCK, v. a. to store; to lay in stock; to put in the stocks.

STOCKADE, s. in Military Art, a fortification or wall, made of rough-hewn timber.

STOCKDOVE, s. in Ornithology, the ring-dove.

STOCKFISH, s. dried cod, so called from its hardness.

STOCKHOLM, the capital of Sweden. It is very long and irregular, being built on seven small rocky islands, (from one of which the city takes its name,) between the Baltic and the Maellar lake; besides which, it contains two peninsulas. Between these several parts of the city a communication is formed by means of bridges. The scenery of its neighbourhood is remarkably romantic. The harbour is an inlet of the Baltic, and is of such depth, that ships of the largest burden can approach the quay. At the extremity of the harbour, several streets rise one above another, in the form of an amphitheatre; and the palace, a magnificent building, crowns the summit. Except in the suburbs, where some houses are of wood, painted red, the buildings are mostly of stone, or brick stuccoed white, and built on piles. There are many fine buildings and institutions, as the palace, the theatres, the arsenal, the academies of science and art, &c. &c. In Stockholm are manufactures of glass, china, woollen, silk, linen, &c. It has a considerable trade with all parts of the world. Pop. about 100,000. Lat. 59. 20. N. Long. 18. 3. E.

STOCKING, s. the covering of the leg.

STOCKJOBBER, s. a low mercenary wretch, who gets money by buying and selling in the funds.

STOCKLOCK, s. a lock fixed in wood.

STOCKPORT, Cheshire. It is seated on the river Mersey, over which it has several bridges. Standing on uneven ground, it is generally ill built, but its recent buildings, and the church, are of a better order. Its manufactories are very considerable, and consist chiefly of cotton and printed goods, with silks, and hats. It is 179 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 84,282.

STOCKS, s. among ship-carpenters, a frame of timber to build ships upon; also, a wooden machine, to confine the legs of offenders, by way of punishment.

STOCKSTILL, ad. as motionless as a log.

STOCKTON, Durham. It is a well-built town, with a handsome town-hall, a spacious market-place, excellent enclosed shambles for butchers' meat; and has manufactures of sail-cloth, corduroys, thicksets, and other articles in cotton, and of linen damasks. The ships built at this place are admired for their beauty and strength; abundance of fine salmon is caught in the river, and carried to York, Leeds, &c. Stockton is a member port of Newcastle, and is seated on a point of land like an island, about 8 miles from the German Ocean, and on the river Tees, over which it has a fine stone bridge of 5 elliptical arches; 249 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 10,071.

STOICS, a school of ancient philosophers, named so from a portico, or stoa, in which the founder, Zeno, used to teach. (See ZENO.) Of all the systems of ancient philosophy, theirs approached most nearly to Christianity; but how widely it differed from it, will be seen at a glance. It was eminently a moral system, and virtue, or manhood, was the object it strove to realize. Science, pleasure, contemplation, action, were all prized as they aided the attainment of that object. But they never rose to the knowledge of a better criterion of truth than evidence; to a loftier psychology than that which taught that sensation is a modification of the soul; nor, in fact, to a nobler philosophy than common sense. They would make man all intellect; and thought that logic was the law of laws for all his being. Though taught in Athens, its brightest examples are to be found at Rome. It was eminently Roman. Any careful reader can see how far short of the Christian life is the ideal of the famous book said to be written by Thomas à Kempis; the Manual of Epictetus the Stoic falls as far below the Christian's pattern, as that does below the Gospels.

STOKE, [stocæ, Sax.] in the names of places, means the stock or body of a tree.

STOLE, s. [stola, Lat.] a long vest or robe. Groom of the stole, is the head officer belonging to the king's bedchamber.

STOLE, preter. of TO STEAL.

STOLEN, past part. of TO STEAL.

STOLIDITY, s. [stolidité, Fr. from stolidus, Lat.] foolishness; want of sense; stupidity; folly.

STOMACH, (stomach) s. [stomachus, Lat. estomach, Fr.] in Anatomy, the sac into which the food of animals is received, and which secretes the solvent by which it is digested. Figuratively, appetite, hunger or desire of food; inclination; anger; sullenness, or resentment; haughtiness, or pride.

TO STOMACH, (stomach) v. n. [stomachor, Lat.] to resent; to remember with anger and malignity.—v. n. to be angry.

STOMACHER, s. an ornamental covering worn by women in the front of their stays.

STOMA'CHIC, STOMA'CHICAL, (stomákiç, stomákiçal) a. relating to the stomach; good for the stomach.

STONE, s. [stan; Sax. staine, Goth. steen, Belg.] the general name for a fragment of any kind of rock or solid earth; a gem; a funeral monument; the seed of pulpy fruits like the plum, &c. In Medicine, an earthy concretion in the urinary organs, called also a calculus. In Trade, a weight; a stone of meat is 8 pounds; of wool, 14 pounds; horseman's weight, 14 pounds. To leave no stone unturned, is to do every thing that can be done towards the success of an undertaking. Stone is also used by way of exaggeration; as, "stone dead."

STONE, a. made of stone.

TO STONE, v. a. to hit or kill with stones; to harden.

STONE, EDMUND, a self-educated mathematician of the last century. With the slenderest means he advanced so far as to attract the attention of the Duke of Argyll, in whose service he was, who aided him considerably in pursuing his favourite study. He was not one of those who effectually triumphed over poverty; he was never raised above pecuniary anxieties, and in the latter part of his life he suffered great need. Yet his works show that he achieved the noblest part of the victory; and he may be advantageously pointed out for the encouragement of those who in humble life are conscious of aspirations after knowledge, which their lot seems to debar them from attaining. He died in 1768, aged about 70 years.

STONEBREAK, s. in Botany, the English saxifrage.

STONE-CHAT, s. in Ornithology, a small bird frequenting quarries, gravel-pits, &c. It is a migratory bird.

STONECRAV, s. a distemper in hawks.

STONECROP, s. in Botany, a kind of succulent plant, growing on walls and stones; the common yellow kind is often called ginger.

STONECUTTER, s. one whose trade is to hew stones.

STONEFRUIT, s. in Botany, fruit like the plum or cherry.

STONEHAWK, s. in Ornithology, a sort of hawk.

STONEHENGE, the name of the most remarkable Druidical ruin of Great Britain. It is situated on Salisbury Plain, about 6 miles from Salisbury. It stands on the summit of a gently rising hill, and consists of a vast circular entrenchment, above 100 yards in diameter, in the centre of which is a great accumulation of huge masses of rock, some standing upright, and having other pieces laid transversely across them, but mostly prostrate; yet showing, in spite of this disorder, very clearly, that they are the relics of a temple, which consisted of a double circle of upright stones, the outermost being by far the largest, and connected by the transverse pieces into one continuous circular enclosure. Within the smaller circle, were five pairs of upright stones, with transverse pieces connecting them in pairs, about 20 feet in height, and before the centre one was a flat stone which seems to have been the altar. Beside these, there are several others within the circles, or between them and the embankment, and the whole number of them is 97. Most of them are of the kind of stone called gray-weathers, and was evidently quarried in the neighbourhood. Legends in abundance remain respecting the use and the erection of these stones, and one is embodied in the common name it bears among the Welsh, the dance of the Giants. Antiquaries and mechanicians have vainly endeavoured to show how, with the rude engines of the ancient Britons, such enormous masses could be quarried, transported, and erected here.

STONEPIT, s. a quarry; a pit where stone is dug.

STONEWORT, s. in Botany, a genus of monœcious plants, of which 5 species are found in England.

STONY, a. made of full of stones; hard; unrelenting.

STOOD, the preter. of TO STAND.

STOOK, s. a shock of corn, containing twelve sheaves.

STOOL, s. [stol, Sax. stâl, Belg. stols, Goth.] a seat without a back; evacuation by purging medicines.

STOOMING or WINE, s. is the putting bags of herbs or other ingredients into it.

TO STOOP, v. n. [stuypen, Belg. stupian, Sax.] to bend downwards or forwards. Figuratively, to yield or submit; to descend; to descend.

STOOP, s. the act of stooping.—[stoepe, Belg.] a vessel of liquor.

TO STOP, v. a. [stoppen, Belg.] to hinder in moving or action; to regulate musical strings with the fingers; to put an end to motion or action; to close any aperture; to suppress; to impede; to put the points to several branches of a sentence in writing; to refuse.—v. n. to cease from motion or action; to refuse payment, or become a bankrupt.

STOP, s. a delay; a stay; a hindrance or obstruction of action or motion; interruption; obstacle; impediment; a point used in dividing sentences; regulation of musical chords or strings; a complete set of pipes, among organists.

STOPPAGE, s. the act of stopping; the state of being stopped.

STOPPER, STO'PPLE, (stôp) s. something by which the mouth of a bottle or vessel is stopped.

STORACE, STEPHEN, a celebrated composer and musician, of the last century. His father was an Italian, who had settled in London, and he studied his art in Italy. In London and in Bath he practised his art, in conjunction with his sister, with the greatest success. He died from excessive exertion in his profession, in 1796, aged 33 years. Many of the most admired songs, and pieces of music of higher grade, are by this eminent and too short-lived artist.

STORAX, s. [styrax, Lat.] in Materia Medica, a resinous and odoriferous gum, obtained from a plant, called styrax, growing in the countries round the Levant.

STORE, s. [stôr, Run.] plenty, or a large number or quantity; provisions; a stock laid by or reserved; magazine, a storehouse. In the United States, a large shop.

TO STORE, v. a. to supply or furnish in large quantities for a future time; to lay up or hoard.

STORK, s. [stôr, Sax.] in Ornithology, a bird of passage, whose beak and legs are long and red; it feeds upon serpents, frogs, and insects; its plumage is generally white, but the extremity of its wings, and also some part of its head and thighs, black; and it is very common in Holland.

STORM, s. [Sax. and Belg. storm, Brit. storma, Ital.] a tempest; a violent agitation of the wind; a commotion in the elements; a violent assault on a fortified place; violence of passion, misery, or distress; sedition, popular tumult; tumultuous force.

To STORM, v. a. to attack by open force.—v. n. to raise tempests; to rage; to fume; to be loudly angry.

STORMY, a. tempestuous; boisterous; violent; passionate.

STORY, s. [storie, Belg., storie, Sax., historia, Gr.] a history; an account of things past, generally applied to a relation of trifling and fictitious things.—[stor, Sax.] a floor, or flight of rooms.

To STORY, v. a. to relate any transaction either real or fictitious; to range one under another.

STORYTELLER, s. one who relates tales in conversation; an historian, in contempt.

STOTHARD, the name of two eminent English artists. Thomas Stothard began life as a pattern drawer in Spitalfields; and afterwards furnished designs to booksellers. He now studied his art by the best means this country furnishes, and rose to such distinction as to become a member of the Royal Academy. His works are chiefly to be found in illustrated editions of poets, &c. But his Pilch of Jacob, Pilgrimage to Canterbury, Wellington Shield, and some others, are familiar to all. He died in 1834, aged 70 years. Charles Alfred Stothard, his son, is chiefly distinguished in a totally different branch of art. Having had his attention directed to monumental effigies as genuine representations of costume in different ages, he undertook to sketch and publish these interesting relics. He became by this means associated with the Antiquarian Society, and was employed by them in making drawings of the Bayeux tapestry. In Normandy he discovered the monuments of several of our Plantagenet sovereigns, and several other highly interesting and remarkable works of art. He afterwards visited the Netherlands. And finally fell a victim to his zealous pursuit of antiquarian art, perishing by a fall from a ladder on a monument he was sketching, in 1821, aged 35 years.

STOVE, s. [stove, Belg., stovea, Sax.] a hot-house or room made warm by air; a place in which fire is made.

To STOUND, v. n. [stunde, Isl.] to be in pain or sorrow.

STOUND, s. sorrow; astonishment; hour; season.

STOURBRIDGE, Worcestershire. It is noted for its considerable glass and iron-works; it has also a manufactory of cloth, and especially fine frieze. It is 125 miles from London. Market. Friday. Pop. 7481.

STOUT, a. [Belg.] strong; brave; courageous; intrepid; lusty; firm, or able to bear a great weight; bold; pertinacious.—a. a strong kind of malt liquor.

STOUTLY, ad. lustily; boldly; obstinately.

STOUTNESS, s. bodily strength; bravery; intrepidity; boldness; fortitude; obstinacy; stubbornness.

To STOW, (sto) v. a. [stowen, Belg.] to lay up; to put in a proper place; to deposit in order.

STOW, JOHN, an English antiquary of the 16th century. He was a London tradesman, or tailor, but having a decided taste for antiquarian research, he gratified it in his leisure, till his knowledge brought him under the notice of Archbishop Parker, the Earl of Leicester, and other eminent persons. His chief works are Annals of English History, and a Survey of London. And as a reward for the latter, he received from gentle Jamie a patent as a street beggar. Such was the Stuart's patronage of learning. He died in 1605, aged about 80 years.

STOWAGE, (sto-aje) s. money paid for laying up goods; the place where goods are laid up or deposited.

STOWE, [stor, Sax.] in the names of places, signifies a place.

STOWELL, WILLIAM SCOTT, LORD, an eminent lawyer, brother to Lord Eldon. He studied at Oxford, and the Middle Temple, and rose rapidly, after having commenced practising, to be advocate-general, judge in the Consistory Court, judge of the High Court of Admiralty, and privy-councillor. He also sat in parliament, and was raised to the peerage at the coronation of George IV. He died in 1836, after two years of almost idiocy, aged 91 years. Lord Stowell's fame rests on the principles of law developed in his judgments: few authorities take precedence of law in his own department.

STOWMARKET, Suffolk. It is seated between the branches of the rivers Gipping and Orwell, 75 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 3136.

STRA'BISM, s. [strabisme, Fr. strabismus, Lat.] a squinting; a distortion of the eyes.

STRABO, a celebrated Greek geographer. He travelled in various countries, and his work shows evident signs of personal and accurate observation. He treats of political geography, or statistics, as well as physical geography. He flourished immediately before the Christian era.

To STRAD'DLE, (strádl) v. n. [from stride,] to stand or walk with the feet at a wide distance from each other.

STRA'FFORD, THOMAS WENTWORTH, EARL OF, one of the great statesmen of Charles I's reign. After his academical course, he travelled on the continent, and on his return at once entered parliament, where he was reckoned to belong to the anti-royalist party, and was made sheriff of Yorkshire once, to keep him from serving in the House of Commons. But, after a few years, he was won by the court, raised to the peerage, and made viceroy of Ireland. His unscrupulous attempts to increase the royal prerogative, and his haughty, imperious disposition, raised up a host of enemies, and made his friends very few. In his command against the Scots, he displayed little ability. One of the first acts of the Long Parliament was his impeachment on a charge of high-treason, and this was prosecuted so earnestly, that all the eloquence of the earl, and all the obligations of the king, could not save him. He was the Curtius of the royal cause, but the gulf was not to be filled up by such a sacrifice. He was beheaded in 1641, aged 48 years.

To STRA'GGLE, (strágl) v. n. [perhaps from straviare, Ital.] to wander without any direction, to ramble, to rove; to forsake company; to exuberate, to shoot too far.

STRAGGLER, s. a wanderer; a rover; one who rambles without any settled direction.

STRAIGHT, (gh) s. mute in this and the following words; when this word is opposed to crooked, it should be written straight; but when opposed to broad or wide, stráight, a. not crooked; narrow; close; tense; tight.

STRAIGHT, ad. [strack, Belg.] immediately; without delay; directly; straightways.

To STRAIGHTEN, v. a. to reduce from a crooked to a straight figure or shape.

STRAIGHTNESS, s. the quality of being not crooked; rectitude.

STRAIGHTWAY, STRAIGHTWAYS, ad. immediately.

To STRAIN, v. a. [estraindre, Fr.] to squeeze, or force liquor through by squeezing; to filter; to weaken by overstretching; to put to its utmost strength; to squeeze in an embrace; to pull or force tight; to constrain.—v. n. to make violent efforts; to be filtered by compression.

STRAIN, s. a weakness caused by stretching a ligament too much; style or manner of speaking; song or sound.—[stränge, Sax.] race, generation, descent; rank; turn; tendency; hereditary or natural disposition; manner of speech or action.

STRAINER, s. an instrument used in clearing liquors by filtration.

STRAIT, a. [estroit, Fr.] narrow, opposite to wide; close, intimate; rigorous; difficult; distressful.

STRAIT, s. a narrow passage of the sea, whereby two parts of the ocean are united; distress or difficulty.

To STRAIT, v. a. to reduce to difficulties.

To STRAITEN, v. a. to make narrow; to contract, to confine; to make tight; to stretch; to deprive of necessary room; to distress, or perplex.

STRAITLY, ad. narrowly; strictly; rigorously.

STRAITNESS, s. narrowness; difficulty; strictness; rigour; distress; scarcity; want.

STRA'LSUND, a sea-port town of Pomerania, Prussia. Its position is very strong, being so surrounded by the sea, and the lake Fransen, that it is only accessible by bridges, and it had besides good fortifications. The harbour is separated from the Isle of Rügen by a narrow strait. It is a place of some trade, and has also some useful manufactures. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 54. 19. N. Long. 13. 28. E.

STRAND, s. [Sax. strande, Belg. strend, Isl.] the land which borders on the sea or a river; a bank or shore; also the twist of a rope.

To STRAND, v. a. to drive or force upon the shallows or shore.

STRANGE, a. [estrange, Fr.] foreign; remote; not domestic;

unacquainted; wonderful; odd; irregular; uncommon; unknown; uncommonly good or bad; surprising.

STRANGE, interj. used as an expression of wonder or surprise.

STRANGELY, ad. with some relation to foreigners; wonderfully; with a degree of dislike.

STRANGENESS, s. foreignness; uncommunicativeness; shyness; uncothness; mutual dislike; wonderfulness.

STRANGER, s. [stranger, Fr.] a foreigner; one of another country; one with whom we have no acquaintance; a guest.

TO STRANGLE, (strangle) v. a. [strangula, Lat.] to choke; to suffocate; to throttle; to kill by hindering a person from breathing; to hinder from birth or appearance; to suppress.

STRANGLER, s. he that strangles.

STRANGULATION, s. suffocation; the act of strangling.

STRANGURY, STRANGURY, s. [stranz and ouron, Gr. strangurie, Fr.] in Medicine, a disease of the urinary organs.

STRAP, s. [stroppe, Belg. stroppa, Ital.] a narrow slip of cloth or leather. In Surgery, a kind of band to stretch out members in setting broken or disjointed bones. In a ship, a rope spliced about a block, with an eye to fasten it.

STRAPPADO, s. [ital.] a kind of rack, the criminal being drawn up on high, with his arms tied backwards; chastisement by blows.

STRAPPING, a. of a large bulk or size, applied to men or women; lusty; jolly; stately.

STRASBURG, the capital of the department of Bas Rhin, France. It is situated at the confluence of the rivers Ille and Bruche, over the former of which there are 8 bridges of communication. The bridge over the Rhine is of wood, and 3900 feet in length; and is supported in the middle by an island, on which is a strong fortification. Here are 6 gates, and 200 streets, which, in general, are narrow; but the great street, and two others, are regular and handsome; and the public buildings are elegant. In the cathedral is a clock, of admirable mechanism, which shows the motions of the constellations, the revolutions of the sun and moon, the days of the week, the hours, &c. Another curiosity in this cathedral is its pyramidal tower, which is 470 feet high, and is ascended by 635 steps. It is 255 miles from Paris. Pop. about 50,000. Lat. 48. 35. N. Long. 7. 45. E.

STRATA, s. [plural of stratum, Lat.] in Geology, beds or layers of different kinds of earth.

STRATAGEM, s. [stratos and ago, Gr.] an artifice or trick by which an enemy is deceived in war; a trick by which some advantage is gained.

STRATEGY, s. [strategia, Gr.] in Military affairs, the art of conducting a campaign; generalship.

STRAFORD-UPON-AVON, Warwickshire. It is seated on the river Avon, which is navigable to the town in barges, and over which it has a handsome stone bridge, with 13 great and 6 small arches, and a long causeway at the W. end of it, walled on both sides. It has a considerable trade in corn and malt, of which last it makes abundance, and is 94 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 3321. It is Shakspeare's birth and burial-place.

STRATIFICATION, s. in Geology, the mode of arrangement of the strata, or layers, of which a formation is composed.

TO STRATIFY, v. a. [stratum, Lat.] to range in beds or layers.

STRATOCRACY, s. [stratos and cratos, Gr.] military government; a state governed by the army.

STRAW, s. [strove, Sax.] the stalk of corn after it is thrashed; any thing proverbially worthless.

STRAWBERRY, s. in Botany and Horticulture, a well-known fruit. It is one of the most delicious summer fruits; and there are many fine varieties of it.

STRAWBERRY-TREE, s. in Botany, the arbutus, one species of which is common in our gardens on account of the beautiful appearance of its fruit.

STRAWCOLOURED, a. of a light yellow.

STRAWY, a. made of straw; consisting of straw.

STRAY, s. a beast that has strayed or wandered from its pasture or owner; act of wandering or going astray.

TO STRAY, v. n. [stroe, Dan.] to rove; to wander; to rove without any certain direction; to go out of the way beyond proper bounds; to go astray. Figuratively, to err; to deviate from the right.

STREAK, (streak) s. [streak, Belg. strie, Sax. strie, Ital.] a line of colour or hue different from that of the ground.

TO STREAK, (streak) v. a. to mark with a line of different colour from that of the ground; to variegate in colours; to stripe; to dapple.

STREAKINESS, (streakiness) s. the quality of being full of lines of different colours.

STREAKY, (streaky) a. abounding with streaks; striped; diversified by various colours.

STREAM, (stream) s. [Sax.] running water; a current; any thing issuing in a current from a head or source.

TO STREAM, (stream) v. n. [streyman, Isl.] to flow or run like water from a fountain or aperture; to be overflowed.

STREAMER, (streamer) s. an ensign; a flag; a pennon; any thing flowing loosely from a stock, as the pennon of a ship.

STREAMY, a. abounding with running water; flowing with a current.

STREET, s. [street, Sax. and Belg.] a paved way, or wide passage, between two rows of houses; a public way or place.

STRELITZ, the name of two towns, which are the capital of the duchy of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Germany. They stand at about a mile from each other, near the Zirkar lake, and have some handsome buildings, a capital library, a few manufactures, and a little trade. Pop. of both, about 50,000. Lat. 53. 26. N. Long. 13. 3. E.

STRENGTH, s. [Sax.] force, vigour, or power of body or mind; the quality of liquors which renders them intoxicating; support; an armament.

TO STRENGTHEN, v. a. to invigorate; to fortify; to make strong; to confirm or establish; to fix in resolution.—v. n. to grow strong; to increase in strength.

STRENGTHENER, s. that which gives strength; that which makes strong.

STRENUOUS, a. [strenuus, Lat.] brave, bold, valiant, active, vigorous; zealous or vehement in any cause.

STRENUOUSLY, ad. vigorously; actively; zealously.

STREPEROUS, a. [strepo, Lat.] hoarse; noisy; jarring.

STRESS, s. [stres, Sax.] importance; violence; force; dependence. To lay a stress upon, to rest or rely on; to lay an emphasis on any particular word or sentence.

TO STRETCH, v. a. [strecan, Sax. strecken, Belg.] to spread out lengthwise with force; to elongate; to strain to the utmost.—v. n. to be extended; to bear being extended without breaking; to go beyond the truth.

STRETCH, s. extension, reach, or the state of occupying more space; effort, struggle, the utmost extent or latitude of meaning; utmost reach of power.

STRETCHER, s. any thing used for extension; the timber against which the rower plants his feet; a sort of bier, on which a disabled person, or a dead body, may be borne.

TO STREW, v. a. preter. and past part. strown, strawn; [strecan, Goth.] to spread by scattering; to scatter loosely.

STRIBATED, a. formed into channels, or wrinkles.

STRIBATURE, s. disposition of striae, or wrinkles on shells, &c.

STRICKLE, STRICKLESS, STRICTHEL, s. a thing used to level corn, &c. in a measure.

STRICT, a. [strictus, Lat.] rigorously exact; nice; accurate; severe; confined; tight; tense.

STRICTLY, ad. severely; closely; exactly.

STRICTNESS, s. carefulness; exactness; severity; closeness; tightness.

STRICTURE, s. [strictura, Lat.] a spark from red-hot iron; a stroke; touch; contraction; critical remark.

STRIDE, s. [stræde, Sax.] a long step.

TO STRIDE, v. n. preter. strode, or strid, past part. stridden; to walk or pass with long steps; to stand or ride with one leg on each side of any thing.

STRIDENT, a. [stridens, Lat.] noisy; gnashing with the teeth.

STRIDULOUS, a. [stridulus, Lat.] cracking; screaming; making a small noise.

STRIFE, s. [from strice], a contest wherein persons mutually strive to hurt or get the better of each other; discord; contention; quarrel; opposition of nature.

TO STRIKE, v. a. preter. struck or strook, past part. struck or stricken; [astrican, Sax. strichen, Teut. striker, Dan.] to hit with violence; to stamp, or impress a resemblance; to affect; to alarm; to punish, or afflict; to lower, or let down, applied to sails, flags, &c.; to make, applied to bargains. Used with off, to erase from a reckoning or account; to separate by a blow, or any sudden action; with out, to produce by a sudden and violent stroke or action; to bring to light; to form by a quick effort; to blot or efface; with on, to dash; with up, to cause to sound, or to produce by music.—v. n. to make a blow; to collide; to clash; to act upon by a blow, or sound by the hammer, applied to clocks; to make an attack; to be stranded, or dashed upon a shallow; to force its way with a quick and sudden effort. To strike in with, to conform or comply.

STRIKE, s. a measure containing two bushels.

STRICKBLOCK, s. a plane shorter than the jointer, having its sole made exactly flat and straight, and is used for shooting a short joint.

STRIKING, part. a. affecting; surprising; remarkable.

STRING, s. [string, Sax. string, Teut. and Dan. stringhe, Belg.] a slender rope; thread; line; the chord of a musical instrument; a fibre; a nerve; a tendon; a set of things fixed on a line; a series of propositions or arguments. To have two strings to one's bow, is to have two views or expedients, or to have a double advantage or security.

TO STRING, v. a. preter. and past part. string; to furnish with strings; to file on a string, or pierce through with a string; to stretch or make tight; to put a stringed instrument in tune; to make tense.

STRINGED, a. having strings; produced by strings.

STRINGENT, (the g pron. soft.) a. contracting; binding.

STRINGHALT, s. [string and halt], in Farriery, is a sudden twitching and snatching up of the hinder leg of a horse by the involuntary or convulsive motion of the muscles of the hough.

STRINGINESS, (the g pron. hard.) s. the quality of being full of strings, threads, or fibres.

STRINGY, a. fibrous; consisting of small threads; filamentous.

TO STRIP, v. a. [bestriped, Sax.] to make naked; to deprive of dress or covering; to deprive; to pillage, to plunder, to rob; to peel, or decorticate.

STRIP, s. a narrow shred.

STRIPES, s. [strep, Belg.] a lineary variation of colour; a shred of a different colour; a weal, or mark made in the skin by a blow; a blow, a lash.

TO STRIPE, v. a. [strep, Belg.] to variegate with lines of different colours.

STRIPED, a. distinguished by lines of different colours.

STRIPING, s. a young person; a youth.

TO STRIVE, v. n. preter. strove, past part. striven; [streen, Belg.] to struggle, to labour, or to make a vigorous effort; to struggle or contend in opposition to another; to vie, to emulate, to be comparable to, or to contend in excellence.

STRIVER, s. one who labours or contends.

STRIX, s. [Lat.] the screech-owl; a hag; fairy; goblin.

STROKE, s. [from strok, preter. of strike], a blow, a knock; a sudden act of one body upon another; a sudden disease or affliction; the touch of a pencil; an effect suddenly produced; a sound of the clock; a masterly effort; power, efficacy; a gentle smoothing or rubbing of the hand.

TO STROKE, v. a. [stracan, Sax.] to rub gently one way with the hand by way of kindness; to soothe; to cajole; to flatter; to wheedle.

TO STROLL, (strôle) v. n. to rove; to wander; to ramble; to be a vagrant or vagabond.

STROLLER, s. a vagrant; a vagabond.

STROMBOLI, a volcanic island of the Mediterranean. It is the most northerly of the Lipari islands, lying immediately above Sicily. It consists of a single mountain, in circumference about 9 miles, and has been a constantly active volcano from a time beyond record. All volcanic phenomena may be constantly studied here. Lat. 38. 49. N. Long. 15. 13. E.

STRONG, a. [strang, Sax.] having great strength of body or mind; vigorous; fortified; valid; able to make a long and stout resistance; healthy; energetic; powerful; cogent; acting forcibly on the mind; eager, ardent, zealous; having any quality in a great degree. Intoxicating, applied to liquors. Deep, applied to colour. Hard of digestion, or high seasoned, applied to food. Not easily conquered, applied to habits; firm, or not easily broken.

STRONGLY, ad. lustily; stoutly; forcibly; powerfully; firmly; eagerly.

STRONSA, one of the Orkney Isles, Scotland. It is about 7 miles long, and almost as broad, so indented with bays, that there is no part of the island above one mile distant from the sea. The shores produce great quantities of tang, or sea-weed, fit for the kelp manufacture. Pop. 1255.

STRONTIA, s. in Chemistry, an earth, the base of which is the metal strontium.

STRONTIUM, s. [from Strontian, a place in Argyle, Scotland,] in Chemistry, a metal, similar in appearance to barium, heavy, and oxidizing quickly when exposed to the air.

STROPHIL, (strophée) s. [stropho, Gr.] the first of the three divisions of a Greek lyric poem; a stanza.

STROUD, Gloucestershire. It is seated on the Stroud, a small stream, the properties of which are said to be peculiarly adapted to the dyeing of scarlets. It has some good-looking buildings, and a handsome church. Its trade is chiefly supported by its facilities for dyeing. It is 102 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 8680.

STRUCTURE, s. [Fr. structure, Lat.] the act of building; the manner in which the parts of any building, fabric, edifice, or machine are joined together; a building; form, make, construction.

TO STRUGGLE, v. n. to labour; to strive hard; to make strong efforts to reform or obtain a thing; to contend, or make a strong opposition against; to be in agonies, distress, or difficulties.

STRUGGLE, s. a violent effort made to overcome any difficulty or resistance; an agony; contest; tumultuous distress or difficulty.

STRUMA, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, a glandular swelling; the king's evil, or scrofula.

STRUMOUS, a. having a swelling in the glands; or relating to a swelling in the glands.

STRUMPET, s. [stumpum, Lat.] a common prostitute.

TO STRUT, v. n. [strutsen, Teut.] to walk with an air of pride and dignity; to swell; to proterbate.

STRUT, s. a gait or walk of affected grandeur.

STRUTT, JOSEPH, an eminent English antiquarian artist, of the last century. His publications are the chief incidents of his life; and he died in 1802, aged 53 years. His Sports and Pastimes is, perhaps, the most generally interesting of his works, and certainly the most accessible, having been re-edited by William Hone, in a cheap form. His other works are on the Customs, Manners, &c. of England, and are full of interesting and authentic information. Some other works on History and Biography, with dramas, &c., have less interest.

STRUVE, GEORGE ADAM, an eminent jurist of Saxony, in the 17th century. He studied at Jena and other universities, and held offices in Jena, and under the Duke of Weimar. His works are numerous, and valuable to the law student. He died in 1692, aged 73 years.

STRUVE, BURCKHARDT GOTTFELD, son of the foregoing, a distinguished bibliographer. He was educated at Jena, and held various official stations in Germany. His works relate to jurisprudence, as well as to his own favourite pursuit, and are of considerable worth to scholars. He died in 1738, aged 67 years.

STRYPE, JOHN, an English clergyman, and ecclesiastical historian, of the 17th and 18th centuries. He studied at Cambridge, but never obtained any high preferment; and died in 1737, aged 94. His great works are his Histories of the English Reformation, called Annals and Monuments. He also wrote the lives of several church dignitaries and reformers.

STUART, the name of a royal Scottish family, who held the throne of that kingdom from 1371 to 1603; and then the throne of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, in the persons of the two Jameses, the two Charleses, Mary II., and Anne. See these names, and PRETENDER.

STUART, ARABELLA, a lady of royal birth, whose misfortunes form part of the dynastic history of Great Britain. She was a cousin of James I., and had as good a claim to the English throne as himself, by birth. She also married, to the complete disarrangement of his plans, one of the Seymours, by which her hereditary title to the throne was made better. She was imprisoned by James, and her husband also; but they escaped, she only to be recaptured and confined in the Tower, where she died at last, in extremest misery and insanity, in 1615, aged about 40, guiltless of all, save her birth, which alarmed the ungaily possessor of the crown.

STUART, DR. GILBERT, a Scottish historian of the last century. He was educated at Edinburgh, and after carrying on his authorship there for some years, removed to London, where he died in 1786, aged 44 years. His works are, a History of Scotland, a History of the Scottish Reformation, &c. &c.

STUART, JAMES, (ATHENIAN STUART,) an eminent antiquarian architectural artist, who rose to distinction solely by his talent and perseverance. He was first a mere painter of designs on fans, but used the opportunities he possessed to make himself acquainted with higher art, travelled in Italy and Greece, and, in conjunction with Nicholas Revett, published his beautiful plates of the Antiquities of Athens. He practised as an architect after his return to England with some success, and published other works. He died in 1788, aged 75 years.

STUB, s. [stubby, Dan, steb, Sax. stob, Belg.] a thick short stock of a tree when the rest is cut off; a block, a log.

TO STUB, v. a. to root up; to extirpate; to force up.

STUBBLE, (stübl) s. [estouble, Fr.] the short straw left after the corn is reaped.

STUBBORN, a. obstinate, or not to be moved by threats or persuasions; harsh; perverse; inflexible; contumacious; rough; rugged; stiff; generally including the idea of something bad.

STUBBORNLY, ad. obstinately; inflexibly.

STUBBORNNESS, s. obstinateness; perverseness; inflexibility; contumacy.

STUBNAIL, s. a nail broken off; a short thick nail.

STUCCO, s. [Ital.] a kind of fine plaster used for ceilings, &c.

STUD, s. [stude, Sax.] a post or stake; a large-headed nail used for ornament; a knob, or other ornamental protuberance; an ornamental fastening worn in the wristband of a shirt.—[stod, Isl.] a collection of breeding horses and mares.

TO STUD, v. a. to adorn with studs or shining knobs.

STUDENT, s. [studens, Lat.] a person given to books; a scholar; a bookish man. In the university of Oxford, an exhibitor, or scholar on the foundation of Christ-church.

STUDIED, a. learned; produced by meditation or deep thinking.

STUDIOUS, a. [studicus, Fr. studium, Lat.] much given to study; contemplative; earnest for; regardful; attentive; diligent; busy.

STUDIOUSLY, ad. diligently; carefully.

STUDIOUSNESS, s. the quality of being much addicted to study.

STUDY, s. [studium, Lat.] an intense application of the mind to books or learning; meditation; deep cogitation; attention; contrivance; an apartment set apart for reading and meditating.

TO STUDY, v. n. [studeo, Lat.] to think upon with intense application, or to endeavour diligently; to meditate; to muse.—v. a. to apply the mind to with intense thought, or consider with attention; to learn by application.

STUFF, s. [stoffs, Belg.] any matter or body; materials of which any thing is composed; essence, or elemental part; furniture; goods; any mixture or medicine; cloth or texture of any kind, especially that of the woollen sort; a matter or thing, generally used in contempt.

TO STUFF, v. a. to fill or cram very full with any thing; to fill so as to occasion uneasiness; to fill or cram meat with seasoning; to form by stuffing.—v. n. to feed gluttonously.

STUFFING, s. that by which any thing is filled; high-seasoned ingredients which are put into meat.

STUKE, STUCK, s. [stue, Fr.] See STUCCO.

STUKELEY, DR. WILLIAM, the clergyman, physician, and antiquary, studied at Cambridge, practised medicine in Lincolnshire, entered the church, and obtained a living in London, where he died in 1765, aged 78 years. His fame rests on his works on British Antiquities, Stonehenge, &c., and on Antiquities elucidating Sacred History.

STULTILOQUENCE, s. [stultus and loquens, Lat.] idle and foolish talk; chit-chat.

STUM, s. [Swed.] wine not fermented; new wine; wine received by a new fermentation.

TO STUMBLE, (stümb) v. n. [perhaps from tumble] to trip in walking. Figuratively, to slip or err. To strike against, or light on by chance, used with on or upon.—v. a. to obstruct, or offend.

STUMBLE, s. a trip in walking; a blunder; error; failure.

STUMBLER, s. one who stumbles.

STUMBLINGBLOCK, s. a cause of stumbling, or error; offence.

STUMP, s. [stump, Dan. stompe, Belg.] a small part of a tree remaining in the ground after the trunk and branches are lopped away; a part of a tooth remaining in the gums after the other part is broken off; the part of any body remaining after the rest is taken away.

TO STUN, v. a. [stunan, Sax.] to confound or impair hearing with an exceeding loud noise; to make a person senseless or dizzy by a blow on the head.

STUNG, the preter, and past part. of TO STING.

STUNK, the preter, of TO STINK.

TO STUNT, v. a. [stunda, Isl.] to hinder from growth.

STUPE, s. [stupa, Lat.] cloth, linen, or flax, dipped in warm medicated liquors, and applied to a hurt or wound.

TO STUPE, v. a. to foment or apply warm flannels dipped in medicated liquors to a hurt.

STUPEFACTION, s. [Fr. from stupeo and facio, Lat.] a state of mind wherein a person is insensible to threats or persuasions, and seems to have lost every sign of contrivance or attention; insensibility; stupidity; dulness; sluggishness of mind; heaviness; folly.

STUPEFACTIVE, a. causing insensibility; dulling; obstructing the senses; opiate; narcotic.

STUPENDOUS, a. [stupendus, Lat.] prodigious; wonderful; astonishing; amazing.

STUPID, a. [stupid, Fr. stupidus, Lat.] wanting sensibility, apprehension, or understanding; dull; insensible; senseless; torpid; heavy; blockish.

STUPIDITY, s. [stupidité, Fr.] dulness; senselessness; want of comprehension.

STUPIDLY, ad. dully; without apprehension.

STUPIDRY, s. that which causes stupidity.

TO STUPIFY, v. a. [stupo and facio, Lat.] to deprive of sensibility, sagacity, or activity; to make stupid; to dull.

STUPOR, (stüpor) [stupa, Lat.] a deprivation or suspension of the senses; heaviness; numbness; torpitude.

STUPRATION, s. [stupratio, Lat.] a rape; violation.

STURDILY, ad. stoutly; obstinately; resolutely.

STURDINESS, s. brutal strength; stoutness; obstinacy; hardness.

STURDY, a. [estourdi, Fr.] hardy; stout; strong; able to bear great toil, and to make a vigorous resistance; obstinate; brutal; bold.

STURGEON, s. in Ichthyology, a fish of a large size and fine taste.

STURK, s. [styre, Sax.] a young ox or heifer.

STURLESON, SNORRO, or SNORRI STURLEASON, the last of the Scandinavian bards, or Skalds. He was an Icelander, and was well-educated, so that he held the highest office in the island. But he raised up enemies against himself, and was defeated. After a mad attempt on the kingdom of Norway, he returned to his foreign home again, and at last was assassinated in 1241, aged 63 years. His writings are numerous, and the chief is a collection of Bardic poems.

STURM, CHRISTOPHER CHRISTIAN, a German divine of the last century. His principal post was at Hamburg, where he died in 1780, aged 46 years. He is known in this country by translations of his Reflections on the Works of God; which has been superseded by Duncan's Sacred Philosophy of the Seasons, a book of the same delightful spirit, and compiled on the same plan.

STURM, JOHN CHRISTOPHER, an eminent natural philosopher and mathematician of Germany, in the 17th century. He studied at Jena and Leyden, and became a professor at Altdorf, where he died in 1703, aged 68 years. He was not the author of that theorem, in the theory of equations, which is called Sturm's theorem, that being one of the present century.

TO STUT, STUTTER, v. n. [stuten, Belg.] to speak with hesitation, difficulty, or frequent repetition of the same syllable or letter of a word; to stammer.

STUTTER, STUTTERER, s. a stammerer.

STUTGARD, the capital of the kingdom of Wurtemberg,

Germany. The streets are narrow in the town, and the houses generally of wood; but there are fine houses, and wide straight streets, in one of the suburbs. Here are the king's palace; an orphan house, with rich cabinets of curiosities, and handsome gardens; an academy of painting, sculpture, and architecture; and a noble library; with manufactures of stuffs, silk stockings, and ribands. It is seated on the Nisselbach, near the river Neckar. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 48. 46. N. Long. 9. 12. E.

STY, s. [stige, Sax.] a small enclosure in which hogs are kept.

TO STY, v. a. to shut up in a sty.—v. n. to soar; to ascend.

STYE, STYHE, s. in Medicine, a small tumour, that occurs on the edge of the eyelids.

STY'GIAN, (the g pron. soft) a. [stygius, Lat.] belonging to the river Styx; infernal.

STYLE, s. [stulos, Gr.] in Dialing, the gnomon of a dial. In Botany, that part of the pistil of plants, called also the shaft. In Literature, it is a particular manner of writing, arising from taste, education, &c. In Jurisprudence, it is the particular form or manner of proceeding in each court of judicature, agreeable to the rules and orders established therein. In Music, it denotes a peculiar expression in playing, singing, or composing. In Painting, it also signifies the individual expression in a picture. In Architecture, it denotes the class to which a building or design is to be referred, chiefly from its affecting peculiarities of certain nations or ages. Old Style, and New Style, in Chronology, are used to distinguish between reckoning by the reformed calendar of Pope Gregory, or the old, incorrect calendar. See CALENDAR.

TO STYLE, v. a. to call, term, or name.

STYPTIC, a. [stapho, Gr.] astringent; peculiarly applied to such medicines as stop bleeding.

STYRIA, a duchy of Austria, bounded by Austria proper, Hungary, Croatia, and Illyria. It is crossed by the continuation of the Alps, and has mountains of 7000 and 8000 feet in height. The Drave, the Saave, and other tributaries of the Danube, water it; and it has numerous lakes, but none of great extent. Iron, limestone, and other metals and minerals are found here. It produces, corn, fruits, wine, timber, cattle, &c. &c. Its manufactures are not numerous, nor of very great value, excepting in iron. Grätz is its capital. Pop. about 1,000,000.

STYX, s. the name of a river of Arcadia in Ancient Greece, whence was taken the name of the first river in the infernal region, across which souls were ferried in Charon's boat.

SUA'SIVE, (suadeo) a. [suadeo, Lat.] having the power to persuade.

SUASORY, (suasory) a. having a tendency to persuade.

SUA'VITY, (suavitas) s. [suavité, Fr. from suavis, Lat.] sweetness, pleasantness, either to the corporeal or mental taste.

SUB, [Lat.] in Composition, implies a subordinate or inferior degree.

SUBA'CID, a. [sub and acidus, Lat.] sour in a small degree.

SUBA'CRID, a. sharp and pungent in a small degree.

SUBA'CTION, s. [subigo, Lat.] the act of subduing or reducing to any state.

SUBA'LPINE, a. [sub and Alpes, Lat.] living or growing near the mountains called the Alps.

SUBA'LTERN, s. [subalterne, Fr.] an inferior; a subordinate; a non-commissioned officer in the army, as a sergeant, a corporal, &c.

SUBALTERNATE, a. placed under another; succeeding by turns; successive; alternate.

SUBAQU'NEOUS, a. [sub and aqua, Lat.] living under the water.

SUBCHAN'TER, s. an under-chanter; an officer who officiates for a chanter in his absence.

SUBCLAVIAN, a. [sub and clavus, Lat.] in Anatomy, applied to any thing under the armpit or shoulder, whether artery, nerve, vein, or muscle.

SUBCONSTELLATION, s. in Astronomy, a lesser constellation forming a part of a greater.

SUBCUT'NEOUS, a. lying under the skin.

SUBDE'ACON, s. [sub and diaconus, Lat.] in the Romish Church, the deacon's servant.

SUBDE'AN, s. [sub and decanus, Lat.] a dignified clergyman, next to the dean.

SUBDE'UPLE, a. [sub and decuplus, Lat.] containing one part in ten.

TO SUBDE'LEGATE, v. a. to substitute or appoint.

SUBDITI'TIOUS, (subditi'tious) a. [subdo, Lat.] foisted; forged. To SUBDIVIDE, v. a. [sub and divido, Lat.] to divide a part into still lesser parts.

SUBDIVISION, s. the act of subdividing.

SUB'DOLOUS, a. [subdolos, from dolus, Lat.] subtle; crafty; deceitful; cunning; sly.

TO SUBDU'CE, v. a. [sub and duco, Lat.] to subtract; to deduce.

TO SUBDU'CT, v. a. to withdraw or take away. In Arithmetical, to subtract.

SUBDU'CTION, s. arithmetical subtraction; the act of taking away.

TO SUBDU'E, v. a. [sub and do, Lat.] to overpower; to conquer; to crush; to oppress; to bring under; to tame.

SUBDU'ER, s. a conqueror; one that reduces or brings under; a tamer.

SUBDU'PLICATE, a. containing one part of two.

SUBERATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with suberic acid.

SUBERIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to cork.

SUBUMIGATION, s. [sub and umigo, Lat.] a ceremony used by sorcerers to drive away evil spirits by burning incense.

SUBJA'CENT, a. [sub and jaceo, Lat.] lying under.

TO SUBJEC'T, v. a. [sub and jacio, Lat.] to put under; to reduce to submission; to enslave; to make liable or obnoxious; to make subservient.

SUBJECT, a. placed, situated, living, or serving under; liable or obnoxious; on which any action or thought is exercised.

SUBJECT, s. [subject, Fr.] one who lives under the dominion of another; that on which any action or thought is employed; that in which any thing inheres. In Philosophy, Logic, and Grammar, that of which any thing is correctly predicated or affirmed; the mind, which alone is self-conscious, and can contemplate itself and all other things as objects.

SUBJEC'TION, s. obedience to a superior; dependence; slavery.

SUBJEC'TIVE, a. relating not to the object, but to the subject. In Grammar, the relation in which a notion stands to the notion of the predicate in a sentence, most frequently expressed by a noun or pronoun in the nominative case. Subjective and Objective, in Philosophy, are two correlative terms, by which are expressed, with the greatest accuracy, the distinction between what relates or belongs to the mind, which contemplates, and that which relates to the mind, or to any thing else, which is contemplated.

SUBINGRE'SSION, s. [sub and gre'dior, Lat.] secret entrance.

TO SUBJOIN, v. a. [sub and jungo, Lat.] to add at the end; to annex.

SUBITA'NEOUS, a. [subitanus, from subitus, Lat.] sudden; hasty.

TO SUBJUGATE, v. a. [sub and jugum, Lat.] to bring under the yoke; to subdue; to enslave.

SUBJUGATION, s. the act of subduing, or a state of slavery.

SUBJUN'CTION, s. [sub and jungo, Lat.] the state of being subjoined; the act of subjoining.

SUBJUNCTIVE, a. subjoined, or added to something else. In Grammar, a mood.

SUBLA'PSARY, SUBLAPS'RIAN, a. [sub and lapsus, Lat.] done after the fall of man.

SUBLATION, s. [sublatio, Lat.] the act of taking away.

SUBLAXATION, s. in Anatomy, an imperfect dislocation.

TO SUBLEVATE, v. a. [sub and levo, Lat.] to raise, succour, or ease.

SUBLEVATION, s. the act of assisting, easing, or lifting up.

TO SUB'BLIMATE, v. a. [sublimis, Lat.] in Chemistry, to raise by the force of fire. Figuratively, to exalt, elevate, heighten.

SUB'BLIMATE, s. any thing raised by fire in a retort.

SUBLIMATION, s. in Chemistry, is the condensing and collecting in a solid form, by means of vessels constructed for the purpose, the vapours thrown off by solids by the application of heat. Elevation; exaltation; the act of heightening or improving.

SUBLIME, a. [sublimis, Lat.] high in place, excellence, or nature; elevated in thought or style; lofty, haughty, proud.

SUBLIME, s. [Fr.] a grand or lofty style, arising from nobleness of thought.

To SUBLIME, v. a. [sublimar, Fr.] to raise by a chemical fire; to raise on high; to exalt, heighten, or improve.—v. n. to rise in a chemical vessel by the force of fire.

SUBLIMELY, ad. loftily; grandly.

SUBLIMITY, s. [sublimité, Fr.] height of place, thought, or style; height of nature; excellence.

SUBLINGUAL, a. [sub and lingua, Lat.] placed under the tongue.

SUBLUNAR, SUBLUNARY, a. [sub and luna, Lat.] situate beneath the moon; terrestrial; earthly; mundane.

SUBMARINE, a. [sub and mare, Lat.] lying or acting under the sea.

To SUBMERGE, v. a. [submerger, Fr. from sub and mergo, Lat.] to put or plunge under water; to drown.

SUBMERSION, (submersión) s. [Fr.] the act of plunging or dipping under water; sinking; drowning.

SUBMISS, a. [submissus, Lat.] humble, or confessing inferiority; submissive; obsequious.

SUBMISSION, (submisión) s. [sub and mitto, Lat.] surrender; acknowledgment of inferiority; guiltiness, error, or power to command; obedience; obsequiousness.

SUBMISSIVE, a. humble; meek; respectful; obsequious.

SUBMISSIVELY, ad. humbly; with confession of inferiority.

SUBMISSIVENESS, s. humility; confession of fault or inferiority.

To SUBMIT, v. a. to let down or sink; to acknowledge, subject, resign, or yield any thing to the authority, commands, direction, or judgment of another.—v. n. to be subject to as an inferior; to yield.

SUBMULTIPLE, s. in Arithmetic, that number or quantity which is contained in another number a certain number of times exactly; thus 3 is the submultiple of 21, as being contained in it seven times exactly.

To SUBNERVATE, v. a. to cut the sinews of the leg, to hamstring.

SUBORDINATE, a. [sub and ordino, Lat.] inferior in order, nature, dignity, or power; descending in a regular series of gradation.

To SUBORDINATE, v. a. to range or place under another.

SUBORDINATELY, ad. in a series regularly descending.

SUBORDINATION, s. [Fr.] dependence of persons with respect to each other; a series regularly descending.

To SUBORN, v. a. [suborno, Lat.] to procure privately, by secret fraud, or by silent and indirect means; generally applied to procuring or instructing false evidence.

SUBORNATION, s. [Fr.] the act of procuring or instructing a person to give false evidence, or do a bad action.

SUBORNER, s. one that procures a bad action to be done.

SUBPENA, (subpéna) s. [sub and pæna, Lat.] a writ commanding a person's appearance in a court under a penalty; a summons.

To SUBPENA, (subpéna) v. a. in Law, to summon a person to appear before a court.

SUBRECTOR, s. the rector's vicegerent.

SUBRIGUOUS, a. [sub and rijo, Lat.] wet; moist; watery underneath.

To SUBROGATE, v. a. [subrogo, Lat.] to substitute or put in the place of another.

SUBSALTS, s. in Chemistry, salts with less acid than is sufficient to neutralize their radicals.

To SUBSCRIBE, v. a. [sub and scribo, Lat.] to give consent to or attest by writing one's name.—v. n. to give consent; to promote an undertaking, by paying in a certain sum of money.

SUBSCRIBER, s. one that subscribes or contributes.

SUBSCRIPTION, s. the act of attesting a writing by signing one's name; the undertaking to advance the government money upon certain conditions, or giving money to charitable uses.

SUBSEQUENT, a. [Fr. sub and sequor, Lat.] following in order of time; future.

To SUBSERVE, v. a. [sub and servio, Lat.] to serve in a subordinate or instrumental manner.

SUBSERVIENCY, SUBSERVIENCE, s. subjection to the control or command of another; instrumental fitness or use.

SUBSERVIENT, a. assisting to the accomplishment of a purpose or design; subordinate.

To SUBSIDE, v. a. [subsido, Lat.] to sink; to tend towards the bottom or downwards.

SUBSIDARY, a. [subsidius, Lat.] helping; aiding; assisting; brought in aid.

SUBSIDY, s. [subsidium, Lat.] an aid given in money towards carrying on the public affairs of a nation.

To SUBSIGN, v. a. [sub and signo, Lat.] to sign under.

To SUBSIST, v. n. [subsisto, Lat.] to continue or retain the present state, nature, or properties; to have means of living or maintenance; to inhere; to have existence.

SUBSISTENCE, s. [Fr.] real being; competency, or sufficiency to support life.

SUBSTANT, s. [Fr.] being real being; inherent.

SUBSTANCE, s. [Fr.] being; something which has existence, and supports accidents; the essential part; something real, opposed to imaginary; body; bodily nature; wealth; means of life.

SUBSTANTIAL, (substānsial) a. [substāntiel, Fr. substāntialis, Lat.] real; true; solid; bulky, corporeal, material; stout; strong; moderately wealthy; responsible.

SUBSTANTIALITY, s. the state of existence; corporeity.

SUBSTANTIALS, s. (without singular), essential parts.

SUBSTANTIVE, s. [substantif, Fr. substantivum, from substo, Lat.] in Grammar, a word which expresses the notion of any existence, abstract, or concrete, &c. &c. It is commonly called a noun.

SUBSTANTIVE, a. betokening existence.

To SUBSTITUTE, v. a. [sub and statuo, Lat.] to put instead, or in the place of another.

SUBSTITUTE, s. [substitut, Fr.] one placed and acting instead of another.

SUBSTRUCTION, s. [substructio, from sub and struo, Lat.] the lower part of the foundation of a house; underbuilding.

SUBSTYLAR, a. [sub and stylus, Lat.] in Dialing, an epithet given to a right line, whereon the gnomon or stile of a dial is erected at right angles with the plane.

SUBSULTIVE, SUBSULTORY, a. [subsultus, from salio, Lat.] leaping; bounding; moving by starts.

To SUBTEND, v. a. [sub and tendo, Lat.] to extend under; to be opposite to, in Geometry.

SUBTILER, [Lat.] signifies, in Composition, under.

SUBTERFLUENT, SUBTERFLUOUS, a. [subter and fluo, Lat.] running or flowing under.

SUBTERFUGE, s. [Fr. from subter and fugio, Lat.] a shift, evasion, or trick, by which a person endeavours to extricate himself from a difficulty.

SUBTERRANEAN, SUBTERRANEOUS, a. [sub and terra, Lat.] placed under ground; lying under the surface of the earth.

SUBTILE, a. sometimes written subtle, and pronounced sūtl; [Fr. subtilis, Lat.] thin; nice, delicate, fine; piercing, acute; cunning, subdulous, deceitful; refined, or so acute as hardly to be comprehended. When it signifies cunning or crafty, it is generally spelt subtle.

SUBTILELY, ad. finely, not grossly; craftily; cunningly.

SUBTILIZATION, s. [subtilisation, Fr.] the act of rarefying, or making any thing so volatile as to rise in steam or vapours; refinement, superfluous acuteness.

To SUBTILIZE, v. a. [subtiliser, Fr.] to rarefy, or make thin; to refine, or spin into useless niceties.—v. n. to talk or treat with too much refinement.

SUBTILITY, s. [subtilité, Fr.] thinness, fineness; the quality of being much rarefied, or consisting of very small and penetrating particles; nicety; refinement; too much acuteness; cunning artifice, sliness.

SUBTLE, (sūtl) a. [see SUBTILE.] sly; artful or cunning.

SUBTLY, (sūtl) ad. cunningly; artfully; slyly; nicely; delicately.

To SUBTRACT, v. a. [soustraire, Fr. from subtraho, Lat.] to take away a part from the whole. In Arithmetic, the art of finding the difference between two numbers, by taking away the less from the greater, and setting down what remains.

SUBTRACTION, s. [soustraction, Fr.] the act of taking away a part from the whole.

SUBTRAHEND, s. [subtraho, Lat.] in Arithmetic, the lesser number which is to be taken out of the greater.

SUBTRIPLE, a. [Fr. sub and triplex, Lat.] containing a third, or one part in three.

SUBVENTANEUS, a. [subventaneus, from ventus, Lat.] adde; windy.

To SUBVE/RSE, v. a. [subverto, Lat.] to overturn, demolish, destroy, subvert.

SUBVERSION, (subvērshn) s. [Fr.] the act of overthrowing; destruction; ruin; demolition; overthrow.

SUBVERSIVE, a. having tendency to overturn, used with of.

To SUBVERT, v. a. [subverto, Lat.] to overthrow, overturn, destroy, or turn upside down; to corrupt or confound.

SUBVERTER, s. an overthrower; a destroyer.

SUBURB, s. [sub and urbs, Lat.] a collection of buildings without the walls of a city; the confines; the outpart; the environs.

SUBURBAN, s. one that lives in the suburbs.

SUBURBAN, a. belonging to the suburbs.

SUBURBANITY, s. the neighbourhood of them that dwell without a city.

SUCCEDA/NEOUS, a. [succedo, Lat.] supplying the place of something else.

SUCCEDA/NEUM, s. [Lat.] that which is put to serve in place of something else.

SUCCEED/ENT, a. succeeding; following after.

To SUCCEED, v. n. [sub and cedo, Lat. succedo, Fr.] to follow after or in order; to come into the place of one who is dead, or has quitted; to fall out or terminate according to one's wish; to obtain one's wish; to go under cover.—v. a. to follow after; to prosper, to make a thing terminate according to a person's wish.

SUCCEED/ER, s. one that succeeds; one that comes into the place of another.

SUCCESS, s. [succes, Fr. successus, from succedo, Lat.] a prosperous event, when used without an epithet; the termination of an affair whether happily or unhappily.

SUCCESSFUL, a. fortunate; prosperous; lucky.

SUCCESSFULLY, ad. fortunately; luckily; prosperously.

SUCCESSFULNESS, s. the quality of being fortunate or prosperous in an undertaking; series of good fortune; desired event; happy conclusion.

SUCCESSION, (sukshshn) s. [Fr. successio, from succedo, Lat.] a series or order in which one person or thing follows another; consecution; a lineage.

SUCCESSIVE, a. [successif, Fr.] following in order immediately after another person or thing; consecutive.

SUCCESSIVELY, ad. in uninterrupted order; one after another.

SUCCESSOR, s. [successor, Fr. from succedo, Lat.] one that immediately follows another in any possession or post.

SUCCE/NTATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with the succinic acid.

SUCCE/NTIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to amber.

SUCCE/NTIC, a. [Fr. succinctus, Lat.] short, concise, brief, comprehensive.

SUCCE/NTLY, ad. briefly; concisely.

SUCCE/NTNESS, s. brevity; conciseness.

SUC/CORY, s. [eichorium, Lat.] in Botany, a plant with compound flowers, one kind of which is common in England, and is remarkable for its large blue flower.

To SU/COUR, v. a. [sub and curro, Lat.] to help, relieve, or assist in danger, difficulty, or distress.

SU/COUR, s. [secours, Fr.] aid or relief afforded in difficulty or distress; the person who aids or relieves another in distress.

SU/COURER, s. a helper; an assistant; a reliever.

SU/CULENT, a. [Fr. succulentus, Lat.] moist; abounding in juice; juicy.

To SU/CUMB, v. a. [sub and cubo, Lat. succumbo, Fr.] to fall down, sink, or fall under; to yield.

SUCCU/SSATION, s. [succutio, Lat.] a trot of a horse, &c., made by lifting one foot before, and the cross foot behind.

SUCCU/SSION, (sukshshn) s. the act of shaking or jolting; a jolt or shake given by a carriage. In Medicine, a shaking of the nerves procured by strong, stimulating, and stercoratory medicines.

SUCH, pron. [swile, Sax. sulk, Belg. sulleiks, Goth.] when answered by as, like, or of the same kind. When used without as, of the same nature with that which is mentioned in the sentence before; particular or certain.

To SUCK, v. a. [sucan, Sax. succen, Fr.] to draw by rarefying the air; to draw in by the mouth; to draw milk from the breast by the mouth; to draw with the lips; to empty; to drain.—v. n. to draw by rarefying the air; to draw the breast; to draw, to imbibe.

SUCK, s. the act of sucking; milk given by females from the breast.

SU/CCKER, s. [suceur, Fr.] any thing that draws by rarefying the air; the piston of a pump; a young twig shooting from the stock, so called from the supposition of its depriving the trunk of its moisture; a pipe through which any thing is sucked.

To SUCKLE, (sukl) v. a. to bring up a child by milk sucked from the breast.

SUCKLING, s. an infant at the breast.

SUCTION, (sukshn) s. [suction, Fr.] the act of sucking.

SUDATORY, s. [sudo, Lat.] a hot-house or sweating bath.

SUDBURY, Suffolk. It contains 3 large handsome churches, with other good buildings. It is seated on the N. side of the river Stour, (which is navigable for barges,) by which it is almost surrounded, and over which it has a handsome bridge leading into Essex, 56 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 5085.

SUDDEN, a. [soudain, Fr. soden, Sax.] happening without any expectation or notice given beforehand. On or of a sudden, is sooner than we expected, without any notice beforehand.

SUDDENLY, ad. unexpectedly; hastily; quickly.

SUDDENNESS, s. quickness; hastiness; unexpected presence.

SUDORIFIC, a. [sudorifique, Fr. from sudor and facio, Lat.] provoking or causing sweat.

SUDORIFICS, s. medicines that cause sweating.

SUDS, s. it has no singular; [sooden, Sax.] water in which soap is dissolved. To be in the suds, is to be involved in some difficulty.

To SUE, v. a. [sueir, Fr.] to prosecute by law; to gain by legal procedure. In Falconry, to clean the hawk, as a hawk.—v. n. to beg, entreat, or petition, with humility and earnestness.

SUET, s. [old Fr.] hard fat, particularly that about the kidneys. SUTONIUS, C. TRANQUILLUS, a Roman historian, the friend of Pliny the younger, who had various offices under Trajan and Hadrian. His works which we yet possess are, the Lives of the twelve Caesars, and Lives of distinguished Poets, Orators, &c. He flourished in the 1st and 2nd centuries A. D.

SUETY, a. consisting of suet; resembling suet.

SUEUR, EUSTACHE LE, a famous French painter, of the 17th century. He studied under Vouet, and other great artists of the day, but he surpassed them all, and obtained the title of the French Raphael. He died in 1655, aged 38 years.

SUEZ, anciently BAZEXE, a town of Egypt, seated at the N. end of the W. arm of the Red Sea, called the Gulf of Suez, with a harbour. This gulf is separated from the Mediterranean by an isthmus, 120 miles over, which joins Asia to Africa, called the Isthmus of Suez. The town is without water, which comes from the other side of the gulf, and almost without the necessities of life. Fish is the only article of provisions plentiful here. It is very much crowded at times, but at others it is very thinly inhabited; and the harbour is too shallow to admit ships of great burden.

The commerce of Suez with Cairo is carried on only by means of caravans, but several vessels sail annually between this port and Jidda. It is situated in a sandy country, the ground around being all one bed of rock, slightly covered with sand, (plants, trees, gardens, and fields, being entirely unknown,) 60 miles from Cairo. Lat. 30. 2. N. Long. 32. 28. E.

To SUFFER, v. a. [suffero, Lat. suffrir, Fr.] to bear or undergo with a sense of pain; to endure or support without resistance or sinking under; to allow or permit without refusal or resistance; to pass through, or be affected by.—v. n. to undergo pain, punishment, injury, or inconvenience.

SUFFERABLE, a. such as may be endured or permitted; tolerable.

SUFFERABLY, ad. tolerably; so as to be endured.

SUFFERANCE, s. [souffrance, Fr.] pain, inconvenience, misery; patience or moderation; permission; allowance.

SUFFERER, s. one who endures pain or inconvenience; one who allows or permits.

SUFFERING, s. pain endured.

To SUFFICE, v. n. [sufficio, Lat.] to be enough or equal to the end or purpose.—v. a. to afford, to supply enough; to satisfy.

SUFFICIENCY, (sufficiency) s. [sufficio, Lat.] the state of being equal or adequate to the end proposed; a qualification; supply equal to want; competence.

SUFFICIENT, (sufficiens) a. [sufficiens, Lat.] enough; able; capable.

SUFFICIENTLY, (sufficiently) ad. fully; satisfactorily.

To SUFFLATE, v. a. [sufflo, Lat.] to puff or blow up.

SUFFLATION, s. the act of blowing up with wind; swelling.

To SUFFOCATE, v. a. [suffocare, Fr. suffoco, Lat.] to choke by exclusion or interception of air.

SUFFOCATION, s. [Fr. suffoco, Lat.] stoppage of the breath; the state of smothering or choking for want of air.

SUFFOLK, a county of England, lying on the German Ocean, and bounded by Cambridgeshire, Norfolk, and Essex. It is nearly 50 miles long, and about 30 broad. It contains 575 parishes, and 28 market towns. The air is generally wholesome, but the soil is various; on the sea-coast it is sandy, and there are several small hills, which yield hemp, pease, and rye. The inland parts are clayey, and more full of trees. The borders towards Essex are fit for pastures, and the N. W. produce corn of all sorts. There are manufactures of broad-cloth, stuffs, and coarse linen, but not to any extent now. The principal rivers are, the Little Ouse, the Waveney, the Stour, the Breton, the Orwell or Gippe, the Deben, the Ore, and the Blyth. Ipswich and Bury St. Edmunds are the principal towns. Pop. 315,073. It sends 11 members to parliament.

SUFFRAGAN, s. [suffragor, Lat.] a bishop considered as subject to an archbishop.

SUFFRAGE, s. [Fr.] a vote or voice given to determine a controversy, or matter in dispute.

SUFFRAGINOUS, a. [suffrago, Lat.] belonging to the kneecap of beasts.

To SUFFUMIGATE, v. a. [sub and fumigo, Lat.] to smoke underneath.

SUFFUMIGATION, s. [Fr.] a smoking or fuming underneath; operation of fumes or smoke raised by heat.

To SUFFUSE, (suffuse) v. a. [suffundo, Lat.] to spread over with some fluid or expansive body, such as vapour or tincture.

SUFFUSION, (suffuzhon) s. the act of pouring or spreading upon.

SUGAR, (shágar) s. [sucra, Fr.] in Chemistry and Trade, a crystallization of the saccharine matter of vegetables in which it abounds, and particularly from the sugar cane, a species of maple, and a kind of beet-root; extensively imported from the W. Indian islands and S. America, and largely used for various domestic purposes. In Chemistry, the various kinds of sugar are classed under two heads, cane sugar, and grape sugar. In Commerce, it is classified according to the plant it is derived from, the country it is made by, the degree of refinement, &c. &c. Any thing proverbially sweet; a chemical dry crystallization.

To SUGAR, (shágar) v. a. to sweeten or impregnate with sugar.

SUGAR-CANDY, s. sugar candied or crystallized.

SUGAR-CANE, s. in Botany, a species of grasslike plant, cultivated in tropical countries for the purpose of making sugar from its juice.

SUGAR-MAPLE, s. in Botany, a kind of maple from the sap of which sugar is made in the United States.

SUGARY, (shágary) a. tasting of sugar; sweet.

To SUGGEST, (sug-jest) v. a. [suggere, Lat.] to hint, insinuate, or intimate; to tell privately.

SUGGESTER, s. one that suggests; one that reminds another.

SUGGESTION, (sug-jestion) s. [Fr.] a secret hint, information, insinuation, intimation, or notification.

SUGILLATION, (sugillashon) s. [sigillo, Lat.] in Medicine, the extravasation of blood in the coats of the eye.

SUICIDE, s. [Fr. from sui and cido, Lat.] the crime of destroying oneself; self-murder; one who destroys himself; a self-murderer; a felo de se.

SUPDAS, a Greek lexicographer, of about the 10th century, whose work is of great value in showing the various meanings of Greek words, in preserving passages of various lost writings, &c.

SUIT, (süt) s. [suite, Fr.] a set or number of things corresponding to each other; clothes consisting of coat, waistcoat, and breeches; a regular order or series; consecution; a retinue, or number of attendants; a petition; a courtship. In Law, the instance of a cause or action, whether real or personal; or the cause itself deduced in judgment. Suit of court, or suit-service, is an attendance the tenant owes to his lord's court; suit-covenant, agreement by a person to do service in the court of the lord; suit-custom is, where one and his ancestors or predecessors have owed suit time out of mind.

To SUIT, (süt) v. a. to fit or adapt to something else; to dress or clothe.—v. n. to agree, to accord, used with to or with.

SUITABLE, (suitable) a. agreeable to; matching; fitting; becoming.

SUITABLENESS, s. fitness; agreeableness.

SUITABLY, ad. agreeably to; according to.

SUITOR, (sütör) s. one that makes a petition, or courts another; a suppliant; a wooer.

SUKOTYRO, s. in Zoology, a large animal bearing a slight resemblance to the elephant, said to inhabit the island of Java.

SULCATED, a. [suleus, Lat.] furrowed.

SULLEN, a. gloomily aegry; discontented; malignant; mischievous; heavy; dull; sorrowful; gloomy; dark; dismal; cloudy; obstinate; perverse; intractable.

SULLENLY, ad. discontentedly; morosely; gloomily; intractably; mischievously; malignantly.

SULLENNESS, s. gloominess; moroseness; stubbornness; intractability; malignity.

To SULLY, (souiller, Fr.) to soil or spoil the colour with any thing dirty.

SULLY, MAXIMILIEN DE BETHUNE, DUKE OF, the great minister of the great Henry IV. of France. He owed his eminence to his own genius, for having entered at an early age on the service of the king of Navarre, he had no complete education. He distinguished himself greatly in the various battles that were fought before Henry obtained possession of the crown of France; and Henry's profession of Romanism is ascribed to his persuasions. In various diplomatic engagements he was as eminent as in military service, but both have been cast into the shade by his talent for finance. In this department, the measures he adopted were as beneficial to the country as to the king. He was ambassador to England on the accession of James I. The numerous offices he held, the duties of most of which he laboriously performed, enabled him to acquire an immense fortune; but the assassination of Henry threw him out of most of them, and he spent his leisure in the composition of his Memoirs. He died in 1641, aged 82 years.

SULPHATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with the sulphuric acid.

SULPHITES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with the sulphurous acid.

SULPHUR, (sülfur) s. [Lat.] in Chemistry, an elementary substance, not metallic, the appearance and general properties of which are familiar to every one. It is extensively used in medicine.

SULPHUREOUS, SuLPHUROUS, (sulfáreus, sülfurus) a. containing brimstone; having the qualities of brimstone; made of brimstone.

SULPHURETS, s. in Chemistry, combinations of alkalies, or metals with sulphur.

SULPHURETTED, a. in Chemistry, applied to a substance which is combined with sulphur.

SULPHURIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to sulphur.

SULPHURWORT, s. in Botany, a plant, the same with the fennel-leaved harsenong or pencedanum.

SULPICIUS SEVERUS, an ecclesiastical writer of the 4th century. He was a Gaul, and of noble extraction, and practised first as an advocate, but afterwards became a monk, and enjoyed a considerable reputation for his literary skill. He died in about 420, at an advanced age. He wrote a Church History, a Life of St. Martin, &c.

SULTAN, s. [Arab.] the Turkish emperor.

SULTANA, SULTANESS, the queen of an eastern emperor.

SULTANIN, s. a Turkish gold coin, worth about eight shillings English.

SULTANRY, s. an eastern empire.

SULTRINESS, s. excessive heat.

SULTRY, a. hot and close; hot without any current of wind; hot and cloudy; suffocating with heat; sweltry.

SULZER, JOHN GEORGE, a Swiss writer of the last century. His reputation acquired him a professorship at Berlin; and, in the latter part of his life, he travelled in France and Italy. He died in 1779, aged 59 years. His great work is a Universal Theory, or Dictionary of the Fine Arts.

SUM, s. [summa, Lat.] the whole of any thing; a quantity of money; an abridgment, compendium, summary, or abstract of the whole; the amount or result of any reasoning or calculation; the height, completion.

To SUM, v. a. [sommer, Fr.] to compute or collect particulars into a total, used with up; to comprise or collect in a narrow compass. In Falconry, to have feathers full grown.

SUMMACH, s. in Botany, is a rank-smelling shrub, that bears a black berry; used by curriers in dressing of leather.

SUMATRA, a large island of the Indian Ocean, having Malacca on the N. and N. E., from which it is divided by the Straits of Malacca, Borneo on the E., and Java on the S. E. It is 1050 miles long, and 165 broad. Its interior has been but partially explored, but there are several ranges of mountains, some of which are nearly 2000 feet in height, and it has some large rivers. Rice, tropical fruits and spices, with fine timber, are abundantly produced. It abounds also with wild animals, some of which are peculiar to it. Iron, gold, and other minerals are found. The greatest part of the island is in the possession of native tribes, but the Dutch have extensive settlements here, of which Bencool is the chief town. It lies directly under the equator.

SUMLESS, a. not to be computed.

SUMMARILY, ad. briefly; concisely.

SUMMARY, a. [sommaire, Fr.] short, brief, concise, or compendious.

SUMMARY, s. [sommaire, Fr.] an abridgment which contains the substance of the whole in a small compass.

SUMMER, s. [summer, Sax. sommer, Belg.] popularly, the season of the year when the sun is about the tropic of Cancer, and its heat is greatest. With astronomers, the season commencing, with those that live in the north temperate zone, when the sun enters Cancer, and ending when he quits Virgo; but with those that live in the south temperate zone, beginning when the sun enters Capricorn, and ending when he leaves Pisces.

To SUMMER, v. n. to pass the summer.—v. a. to keep warm.

SUMMIT, s. [summus, Lat.] the top or utmost height; the apex. In Botany, the upper part of the pistil in flowers, which receives the pollen from the anthers of the stamens, to fertilize the seed-bud.

To SUMMON, v. a. [sub and monere, Lat.] to call, admonish, or cite with authority, to appear. Figuratively, to excite, raise, call, or rouse, used with up.

SUMMONER, s. a person who cites or calls to appear before a court, or at a particular place.

SUMMONS, s. a call, admonition, or citation from authority to appear.

SUMMUM BONUM, s. [Lat.] the chiefest good; that enjoyment which a person most desires as the greatest felicity.

SUMPTER, s. [sommier, Fr.] a horse that carries clothes or furniture.

SUMPTUARY, a. [sumptus, Lat.] relating to expense, especially that of dress. Sumptuary laws, are laws made to restrain excess in diet, apparel, or furniture.

SUMPTUOUS, a. costly; expensive; splendid.

SUMPTUOUSLY, ad. splendidly; magnificently; expensively. SUMPTUOUSNESS, s. splendence; splendence; costliness; magnificence; expensiveness.

SUN, s. [sol, Goth. sunna, or sunne, Sax. son, Belg.] in Astronomy, the central body of our system, and the source of light and warmth to our earth and the rest of the planets. It is not, strictly speaking, at rest; but the actual centre of the system is never without its mass. It revolves on its axis in about 25½ days. Its diameter is about 880,000 miles; so that its bulk exceeds that of our globe more than 1,000,000 times. Viewed through a telescope, its surface displays irregularly-formed dark spots, uncertain in number, place, and continuance; but which show, nevertheless, the rotation of the sun on its axis. A variety of theories have been proposed to account for these spots; of which Sir W. Herschel's was, that they were openings through an intensely luminous envelope, through which the opaque mass of the sun could be seen.

SUNBEAM, s. a ray of the sun.

SUNBURNT, a. tanned by the sun.

SUNCLAD, part. a. clothed in radiance; bright; shining.

SUNDA ISLES, a group of islands in the Indian Ocean; the chief of which are Borneo, Sumatra, Java, &c. See these names.

SUNDA STRAIT OF, the narrow sea dividing the islands of Sumatra and Java, in the Indian Ocean.

SUNDAY, s. the first day of the week, deriving its name from our Saxon ancestors, who dedicated it to the sun. It is set apart amongst Christians for the weekly commemoration of our Lord's resurrection.

To SUNDER, v. a. [syndrian, Sax.] to part, separate, or divide. In sunder, is, in two.

SUNDERLAND, Durham. It is seated at the mouth of the river Wear, and is a populous, thriving, well-built town. Coal is the staple commodity; glass bottles, lime, salt, grindstones, coppers, and pottery ware are also exported. It has a handsome church, and many other fine buildings. The harbour is made fit for vessels of considerable draught, by piers, &c. Across the Wear is a beautiful one-arched iron bridge; which is nearly 100 feet above the water in the centre of the arch, and 236 feet in its span. It is 204 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 17,022.

SUNDEW, s. in Botany, a beautiful marsh plant, of which there are three English species. The leaves are thickly set with short glandular hairs, the extremities of which secrete a viscid fluid, which glitters in the sun like dew. When an insect alights on one of these leaves, it is not only entrapped by this viscid dew, but the leaf also curls round it, and totally prevents escape.

SUNDIAL, s. an instrument which shows the hour of the day, when the sun is unclouded, by the shadow of a stile or gnomon, erected in the midst of an hour-circle. They are of several kinds, and particular rules are given in works on dialing for the construction of them. Those who use them to regulate their clocks or watches by, should not only have them accurately adjusted, but also allow for the equation of time.

SUNDRY, a. [sunder, Sax.] several; various; more than one.

SUNFLOWER, s. in Botany, a common kind of garden flower, brought originally from America, the largest sort of which is the tall annual, whose splendid broad disks, fringed with bright yellow petals, make them great favourites with cottagers. The seeds are fed on by goldfinches, &c., and are very oily.

SUNG, the preter, and past part. of To SING.

SUNK, preter, and past part. of To SINK.

SUNNY, a. bright; resembling the sun; exposed to the sun; coloured by the sun.

SUNRISE, SUNRISING, s. the morning; the first appearance of the sun; the east.

SUNSET, s. the evening; the close of the day; the west.

SUNSHINE, SUNSHINY, a. bright with the sun; bright like the sun.

SUNSHINE, s. action of the sun; place where the lustre or heat of the sun is powerful.

To SUP, v. a. [supan, Sax. soepen, Belg. super, Norm.] to sip; to drink by mouthfuls; to drink by a little at a time; to take with a spoon.—v. n. [souper, Fr.] to eat the evening meal or supper.

SUP, s. a small draught; a mouthful of liquor.

SUPER, [Lat.] in Composition, signifies more than another; more than enough; on or flowing over the top.

SUPERABLE, (superabilis) a. [supero, Lat.] that may be overcome or surpassed; conquerable.

To SUPERABOUND, v. n. to be superfluous; to be overmuch; to be exuberant.

SUPERABUNDANCE, s. excess; superfluity; great plenty. SUPERABUNDANT, a. being more than enough.

To SUPERAADD, v. a. [super and addo, Lat.] to add over and above; to join to any thing, so as to make it more.

To SUPERAANNUATE, v. a. [super and annus, Lat.] to impair or disqualify by age or length of time.

SUPERAANNUATED, a. worn out with age; grown out of date.

SUPERB, a. [superbe, Fr. superbus, Lat.] grand; pompous; lofty; proud; august; magnificent; stately.

SUPERBLY, ad. in a superb manner.

SUPERCARGO, s. an officer in a ship who has the management of its traffic.

SUPERCELESTIAL, a. placed above the firmament.

SUPERCILIOUS, a. [supercilium, Lat.] haughty; dictatorial; despotic; overbearing; disdainful; contemptuous; dogmatical; arbitrary; arrogant.

SUPERCILIOUSLY, ad. haughtily; dogmatically; contemptuously.

SUPEREMINENCE, SUPEREMINENCY, s. [super and eminere,

Lat.] the quality of exceeding in eminence above others though eminent; uncommon degree of eminence or excellence.

SUPEREMINENT, a. greatly excelling; eminent in a high degree.

To SUPERE/ROGATE, v. n. [super and erogo, Lat.] to do more than a person is by duty obliged.

SUPEREROGATION, s. the performance of more than one is obliged to do by duty.

SUPEREROGATORY, a. performed beyond the strict demands of duty.

SUPEREXCELLENT, a. excellent beyond common.

SUPERFICIAL, (superficial) a. [superficies, Fr.] lying on, or not reaching below the surface; shallow; contrived to cover something else; not profound; smattering; not deeply learned.

SUPERFICIALLY, (superficially) ad. slightly; imperfectly.

SUPERFICIALNESS, (superficialness) s. position on the surface; imperfectness; slightness; shallowness; slight knowledge; show without substance.

SUPERFICIES, (superficies) s. [Lat.] the outside, or surface.

SUPERFINE, a. eminently or extraordinarily fine.

SUPERFLUITY, s. (superfluité, Fr.) more than enough; plenty beyond use or necessity; excess.

SUPERFLUOUS, a. [super and fluo, Lat.] overmuch; more than enough; needless; unnecessary; exuberant; supervacaneous.

SUPERFLUOUSLY, ad. unnecessarily; needlessly; in an extravagant manner.

SUPERFLUOUSNESS, s. the state of being superfluous.

To SUPERINDUCE, v. a. [super and induco, Lat.] to bring in as an addition to something else; to bring in as not originally belonging to that on which it was brought; to lay upon; to cover; to draw over.

To SUPERINTEND, v. a. to oversee, overlook; to supervise or take care of others that are inferior; to have the chief management or direction of any thing.

SUPERINTENDENCE, SUPERINTENDENCY, s. the act of taking care of the interests and concerns of others.

SUPERINTENDENT, SUPERINTENDANT, s. [super and intendo, Lat.] one who rules, governs, or manages.

SUPERIOR, a. the more excellent or dignified than another.

SUPERIOR, s. [Lat.] higher above another in excellence, dignity, or any other quality; free from emotion or concern; unconquered; upper, applied to situation. In Astronomy, applied to the planets of our system which are farther from the sun than our earth is, and to that conjunction of an inferior planet which is made when the planet is on the opposite side of the sun to that on which the earth is. In Botany, applied to the blossom, when it is situated above the seed-bud, as in the honeysuckle, apple, rose, &c.

SUPERIOR, LAKE, the name of the largest lake of N. America, which is supposed to be the most extensive body of freshwaters in the world. It is about 380 miles long, and 130 wide. Its shores are rocky and uneven; and it contains several considerable islands. More than 30 rivers discharge themselves into it; and through Lakes Huron, &c. and the St. Lawrence river it empties itself into the Atlantic. It is very subject to storms. Fish are abundant and excellent. The boundary line of the United States and British N. America passes through the middle of it.

SUPERIORITY, s. [superiorité, Fr.] pre-eminence; the quality of being greater or higher than another in any respect.

SUPERLATIVE, a. [superlativ, Fr. from superfero, Lat.] implying or expressing the highest degree. In Grammar, that form of an adjective which expresses the quality or attribute in the highest or intensest degree; and is made in some instances by using most before the simple form, as most excellent, and in others, by the affix est, as tallest. Some words have very irregular superlatives.

SUPERLATIVELY, ad. most excellently; most eminently; in the highest degree, either good or bad.

SUPERLATIVENESS, s. the quality of being most eminent or excellent, or in the highest degree.

SUPERLUNAR, a. [super and luna, Lat.] not sublunary; not of this world; placed above the moon.

SUPERNAL, a. [superminus, Lat.] placed above; relating to heavenly things; celestial.

SUPERNATANT, a. [super and no, Lat.] swimming above.

SUPERNATURAL, a. [super and natura, Lat.] beyond or above the powers of nature.

SUPERNATURALLY, ad. in a manner above the course or power of nature.

SUPERNUMERARY, a. [supernuméraire, Fr.] above a settled, necessary, usual, or a round number.

SUPERREFLECTION, s. reflection of an image reflected.

SUPER-SALTS, s. salts with an excess of acid, as the super-tartrate of potash.

To SUPERSCRIBE, v. a. [super and scribo, Lat.] to write upon the top or outside.

SUPERScription, s. the act of writing, or any thing written, on the top or outside.

To SUPERSEDE, v. a. [superseado, Lat.] to make void, or set aside by superior force or authority.

SUPERSEDEAS, s. [Lat.] in Law, a writ to stay the doing of that which otherwise might be done.

SUPERSTITION, (superstition) s. [Fr. superstitio, Lat.] the observance of unnecessary rites and formalities, under the supposition that they are religion; reverence of objects that are not fit for worship; too great nicety, fears, or scrupulousness; extravagant or wrongly directed or conducted devotion.

SUPERSTITIOUS, (superstitious) a. [superstitieux, Fr. superstitiosus, Lat.] addicted to superstition; scrupulous, or too exact.

SUPERSTITIOUSLY, (superstitiously) ad. bigotedly; scrupulously; in a superstitious manner.

To SUPERSTRUCT, v. a. [super and struo, Lat.] to build upon any thing.

SUPERSTRUCTURE, s. that which is raised or built upon something else.

SUPER-SULPHURETTED, part. in Chemistry, combined with a large portion of sulphur.

SUPERVACANEOUS, a. [super and vacuus, Lat.] superfluous; unnecessary; needless; serving to no purpose.

To SUPERVENE, v. n. [super and venio, Lat.] to come in as a foreign addition, used with to.

SUPERVENEIENT, a. added; additional.

SUPERVENTION, s. the act of supervening.

To SUPERVISE, (superseer) v. a. [super and video, Lat.] to overlook; to oversee; to superintend.

SUPERVISOR, (superseer) s. an overseer; an inspector; a surveyor; a superintendent; one that has the care of others under him.

To SUPERVIVE, v. a. [super and vivo, Lat.] to live longer; to outlive; to overlive.

SUPINE, a. [supinus, Lat.] lying with the face upward, opposed to prone. Figuratively, negligent; careless; inattentive; indolent; thoughtless; drowsy; idle.

SUPINE, s. [supin, Fr. supinum, Lat.] in Grammar, that form of the verb which is used in particular instances as the object to another verb. In the Latin there were two forms, amatum, amatus, specially so used. Our own, to love, to be loved, are used as the infinitive mood also, though at first supine forms.

SUPINELY, ad. with the face upward; drowsily; thoughtlessly; indolently.

SUPINENESS, s. posture with the face upward; negligence; carelessness; inattention; sloth; indolence.

To SUPPE/DITATE, v. a. [suppedito, Lat.] to find supply; to furnish.

SUPPER, s. [supper, Fr.] the last meal at night.

SUPPERLESS, a. going without supper; fasting at night.

To SUPPLANT, v. a. [supplanter, Fr. from sub and planta, Lat.] to trip up the heels; to displace or turn out by stratagem; to overpower, force away, or displace.

SUPPLANTER, s. one who supplants or displaces.

SUPPLE, (suppl) a. [supple, Fr.] easy to be bent; pliant, flexible; bending without breaking; yielding, opposed to obstinate; flattering or fawning.

To SUPPLE, (suppl) v. a. to make pliant, soft, flexible, compliant.—v. n. to grow soft or pliant.

SUPPLEMENT, s. [Fr. from suppleo, Lat.] an addition or appendage made to any thing to supply its defects or omissions.

SUPPLENESS, (suppleness) s. plianthood; flexibility; the quality of easily yielding; flattery; readiness in compliance; facility.

SUPPLETORY, a. [suppleo, Lat.] serving to supply some imperfection or deficiency.—s. that which is to fill up deficiencies.

SUPPLIANT, a. [Fr.] supplicating, beseeching, requesting in a humble manner.—s. a humble petitioner; a submissive beggar.

SUPPLICANT, s. one that entreats with great submission; a humble petitioner.

SUPPLICATE, v. a. [supplico, Lat.] to petition; to entreat in a very humble and submissive manner; to implore.

SUPPLICATION, s. [Fr.] a petition delivered in a humble manner; entreaty; a prayer.

SUPPLIER, s. one that provides or furnishes.

TO SUPPLY, v. a. [supply, Lat. supplere, Fr.] to fill up any deficiency; to give or afford something wanted; to relieve any want; to fill any vacancy, or serve instead of; to give or furnish; to accommodate.

SUPPLY, s. relief of want; cure of deficiencies; aid. To grant the supplies, is to provide the necessary money for the support of government. In War, furnishing an army with recruits of men, provisions, &c.

TO SUPPORT, v. a. [supporter, Fr.] to sustain, bear, or prop up; to bear any thing painful without being overcome; to endure; to prevent from fainting or swooning.

SUPPORT, s. [Fr.] the act or power of sustaining or keeping from falling; a prop, or sustaining power; the necessities of life; maintenance; supply.

SUPPORTABLE, a. [Fr.] tolerable; that may be endured or suffered.

SUPPORTABLY, ad. so as may be borne; tolerably.

SUPPORTER, s. one that maintains, supports, or assists another; maintainer, comforter, defender, sustainer. In Architecture, a post or pillar, that supports part of a building. In Heraldry, a beast, bird, &c. drawn standing on each side of the escutcheon, and seems to support it.

SUPPOSABLE, (supposable) a. capable of being laid down without proof, or advanced by way of argument; that may be supposed or imagined.

SUPPOSAL, (supposal) s. [from suppose,] position without proof; imagination; supposition.

TO SUPPOSE, (suppose) v. a. [supposer, Fr. suppono, Lat.] to lay down without proof; to advance by way of argument without proving; to admit without proof; to imagine or believe without examination; to require or imply as previous to itself.

SUPPOSITION, (supposition) s. [Fr.] an hypothesis, position, or supposal, laid down, but not proved.

SUPPOSITIOUS, (supposititious) a. [suppositivus, Lat.] not genuine; artfully or fraudulently substituted in the room or character of something genuine and authentic.

SUPPOSITIOUSLY, (supposititiously) ad. counterfeitedly; spuriously.

SUPPOSITORY, s. [suppositoire, Fr.] in Medicine, a kind of solid clyster.

TO SUPPRESS, v. a. [sub and primo, Lat.] to crush, overpower, subdue, overwhelm, or reduce from a state of activity or commotion; to conceal; to keep private; to hinder publication.

SUPPRESSION, (suppression) s. [Fr.] the act of putting a stop to; concealment; obstruction; a stoppage, difficulty, or hindrance.

TO SUPPURATE, v. a. [suppurare, Fr.] in Medicine, to generate pus. Figuratively, to ripen; to digest.

SUPURATION, s. in Medicine, the discharge of pus from a fully formed tumour.

SUPPURATION, s. the too frequent use of purging medicines.

SUPPUTATION, s. [supputatio, from puto, Lat.] a reckoning, calculation, account, computation.

TO SUPPUTE, v. a. to calculate; to reckon; to compute.

SUPRA, (Lat.) in Composition, signifies above or before.

SUPRALAPSARIAN, s. [supra and lapsus, Lat.] in Theology, a believer in the eternal decrees.

SUPREMACY, s. highest place; highest authority; the state of being superior in ecclesiastical as well as civil matters.

SUPREME, a. [supremus, Lat.] highest in dignity, authority, or excellence.

SUPREMELY, ad. most excellently; most eminently; in the highest degree.

SUR, [Fr.] in Composition, signifies upon, or over and above.

SURA, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the lesser bone of the calf of the leg.

SURAL, a. [sura, Lat.] being in the calf of the leg.

SURANCE, s. warrant; security; assurance.

SURAT, a large sea-port of Gujerat, Hindustan. It stands on the river Tappee, about 20 miles from its mouth; and has but few structures of note or beauty. It has a considerable trade carried on by means of boats, the river not admitting vessels of larger size to be navigated. The country near it, away from the sea, is fertile, but towards the sea, sandy and barren. People of all the religious creeds of Asia are met with here, drawn together by commerce. It is about 200 miles from Bombay. Pop. about 750,000. Lat. 21. 10. N. Long. 73. 0. E.

TO SURBATE, v. a. [soltati, Fr.] to bruise the feet with travelling; to fatigue; to harass.

TO SURCEASE, (surcease) v. n. [sur and cessare, Fr.] to be at an end; to stop; to cease; to be no longer in being, use, or in motion; to leave off; to refrain.

SURCHARGE, s. [Fr.] too heavy a burden; an overload; charge upon charge; more than can be well borne.

TO SURCHARGE, v. a. [surcharger, Fr.] to overload, or load with more than a person or thing can bear; to overcharge; to overburden.

SURCHARGER, s. one that overburdens.

SURCINGLE, s. [sur, Fr. and cingulum, Lat.] a girth with which a burden is bound on a horse; the girdle or band of a cassock.

SURCLE, (sürkl) s. [surculus, Lat.] a shoot or twig; a sucker.

SURCOAT, (sürköt) s. a coat to be worn over the other clothes; a great coat; an outward garment.

SURCULATION, s. the act of pruning or lopping trees.

SURCULOUS, a. full of shoots or sprigs.

SURD, a. [surdus, Lat.] deaf; void of understanding; not perceived by the ear; unheard; not expressed by any term. In Mathematics, an irrational quantity, such as any root that is not exactly to be expressed, but has an interminable fractional part.

SURDITY, s. [surdité, Fr.] deafness; dulness; stupidity.

SURE, a. [seure, Fr.] certain, or not subject either to fail or deceive; confident beyond doubt; safe from doubt or danger; firm, stable, not liable to decay or failure. To be sure, is used adverbially for certainly.

TO SURFOOTED, a. treading firmly; not subject to stumbling.

SURELY, ad. certainly; undoubtedly; without doubt; firmly; without hazard.

SURENESS, s. certainty; firmness; faithfulness.

SURETISHIP, s. [from surety,] the state or office of one that is bound for another.

SURETY, s. [sureté, Fr.] certainty or freedom from failure, doubt, or mistake; support; evidence; confirmation; security against loss or damage; one that gives security or is bound for another; bondsman, bail, hostage.

SURF, s. the foam of the breakers on rocks, or on the shore.

SURFACE, s. [sur and face, Fr.] the outside, superficies, superice.

TO SURFEIT, (sürfüt) v. a. [sur and faire, Fr.] to feed with excessive meat or drink, so as to cause sickness; to cram overmuch.—v. n. to be fed to sickness or satiety.

SURFEIT, (sürfüt) s. sickness arising from feeding or drinking to excess.

SURFEITER, s. one who riots; a glutton.

SURGE, s. [surgo, Lat.] a swelling sea; a wave rolling above the general surface of the water; a billow.

TO SURGE, v. n. to swell or roll in waves.

SURGEON, s. one who practises surgery professionally. Royal College of Surgeons, an incorporated society of London, who examine candidates, and grant licences for the practice of surgery. The museum of the college was begun by John Hunter, and is particularly rich.

SURGERY, s. [chirurgia, Lat. from cheir and ergon, Gr.] in Medicine, that branch which relates to manual operations of all kinds, and not to the mere administration of medicines. Also, the room in which a surgeon keeps his instruments, &c. and practises his art.

SURGICAL, a. relating to surgery; requiring treatment according to the principles, &c. of surgery.

SURGY, a. rising in billows.

SURINAM, or DUTCH GUIANA, a country of S. America, lying on the Atlantic Ocean, and bounded by British and French Guiana, and by Brazil. It is about 150 miles long, and 60 broad.

SURREY

DUNDEE COLLEGE

- REFERENCE TO THE NUMBERS
- |              |               |
|--------------|---------------|
| 1. Guildford | 11. Farnham   |
| 2. Dorking   | 12. Guildford |
| 3. Epsom     | 13. Guildford |
| 4. Epsom     | 14. Guildford |
| 5. Epsom     | 15. Guildford |
| 6. Epsom     | 16. Guildford |
| 7. Epsom     | 17. Guildford |
| 8. Epsom     | 18. Guildford |
| 9. Epsom     | 19. Guildford |
| 10. Epsom    | 20. Guildford |

County returns & Numbers
Scale of Miles
Railway Stations

The inland parts are rather mountainous, and the chief rivers are, the Corentyn, the Surinam, and the Marony. It abounds with all the animals and plants peculiar to this part of the continent, and produces sugar, coffees, spices, dyewoods, drugs, &c. &c. &c. Paramaribo is the capital. Pop. about 100,000.

SURLILY, ad. morosely; crabbedly; angrily; in a surly manner.

SURLINESS, s. sourness of disposition; moroseness.

SURLY, a. [sur, Sax.] sour, morose, or silently angry; rough; uncivil.

TO SURMISE, (surmise) v. a. [surmise, Fr.] to suspect, or imagine without certain knowledge or sufficient grounds.

SURMISE, (surmise) s. [Fr.] an imperfect notion; suspicion; imagination not supported by knowledge.

TO SURMOUNT, v. a. [surmonter, Fr.] to rise above; to conquer; to overcome; to surpass or exceed.

SURMOUNTER, s. one that rises above another.

SURNAM, s. [surnom, Fr.] the name which a person takes from his family.

TO SURNAM, v. a. [surnommer, Fr.] to name by an appellation added to the original one.

TO SURPASS, v. a. [surpasser, Fr.] to excel, exceed, or go beyond another in excellence.

SURPASSING, part. excellent in a high degree.

SURPLICE, s. [surpelis, or surplus, Fr.] the white garment which the clergy of the English Church wear when they read prayers or administer the sacraments.

SURPLUS, SURPLUSAGE, s. [sur and plus, Fr.] what is more, or remains after use and necessity is satisfied; supernumerary part; overplus; remainder.

SURPRISAL, SURPRISE, (surprizal, surprize) s. [surprise, Fr.] the act of taking, or the state of being taken, unawares; a sudden confusion or perplexity.

TO SURPRISE, (surprise) v. a. [surpris, Fr.] to take or fall upon unawares or unexpectedly; to astonish, perplex, or confuse by something wonderful or unexpected; to lead into an error.

SURPRISING, (surprizing) part. a. wonderful; strange; raising wonder or concern.

SURPRISINGLY, ad. to a degree that raises wonder; in a manner that raises wonder.

TO SURRENDER, v. a. [surrendre, old Fr.] to yield or deliver up to an enemy; to resign or quit.—v. n. to yield or give up to the power of an adversary.

SURRENDER, SURRENDRY, s. the act of yielding or resigning to another.

SURREPTION, (surreptishon) s. [surreptus, Lat.] the act of taking unawares; a surprise.

SURREPTITIOUS, (surreptitious) a. [surreptitius, Lat.] done, acquired, or produced by stealth, fraud, or artifice.

SURREPTITIOUSLY, (surreptitiously) ad. fraudulently; falsely.

SURREY, a county of England, bounded by Middlesex, Buckinghamshire, Kent, Sussex, Hampshire, and Berkshire. Its greatest length is about 39 miles, and its breadth 26. It is divided into 13 hundreds, which contain 11 market towns, (including Southwark,) 140 parishes, and 650 villages and hamlets. It is crossed by the chalk hills, which are from 400 to 900 feet high; and the rest of the surface is low and fertile. The Thames, the Mole, the Wey, &c. water it. It produces all sorts of agricultural produce; and the wolds feed sheep, rabbits, &c. &c. As part of the metropolis is included in it, it may be said to have manufactories also, and trade. Guildford, Croydon, and Kingston are its chief places. Pop. 582,678. It sends 11 representatives to parliament.

TO SURROGATE, v. a. [surrogo, Lat.] to put into the place of another; to depute.

SURROGATE, s. a deputy, or one that officiates for another; a delegate; a substitute.

TO SURROUND, v. a. [surronder, Fr.] to enclose or encompass on all sides; to environ.

SUR-solid, s. in Algebra, the fourth multiplication or power of any number. Sur-solid problem, in Mathematics, that which cannot be resolved but by curves of a higher nature than a conic section.

SURTOU, (surtoft) s. [Fr.] a large coat worn over all the other clothing; a frock-coat.

TO SURVEY, v. a. [surveoir, old Fr.] to overlook, or view as from a higher place; to oversee; to view as examining; to look into the strength or condition of buildings; to measure land.

SURVEYING, s. in Practical Geometry, the art of measuring the superficial contents of lands, grounds, fields, &c. by the help of instruments and calculations.

SURVEYOR, s. one who measures land, buildings, or work done by a builder, &c., in order to ascertain the value; an overseer; one that oversees or superintends any large undertaking; an officer of the excise.

SURVEYORSHIP, s. the office of a surveyor.

SURVIVANCE, s. an outliving another.

TO SURVIVE, v. n. [survivre, Fr. from super and vivo, Lat.] to live longer than another; to remain alive.—v. a. to outlive.

SURVIVER, SURVIVOR, s. one that outlives, or lives longer than another.

SURVIVORSHIP, s. the state, condition, or circumstances of a survivor.

SUSCEPTIBLE, a. [Fr.] capable of admitting or receiving any impression.

SUSCEPTIBLENESS, SUSCEPTIBILITY, s. the quality of being capable to admit or receive any impression or form.

SUSCEPTION, (susception) s. [suscepio, Lat.] the act of taking.

SUSCIPIENCY, s. reception; admission.

TO SUSCITATE, v. a. [suscito, Lat.] to quicken; to rouse; to excite; to provoke; to stir up; to incite.

SUSCITATION, s. [Fr.] the act of quickening or exciting.

SUSIANA, in Ancient Geography, a country of Asia, lying E. of the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, at the head of the Persian Gulf. It was a perfect level of the richest soil, and produced wheat and other grain, &c. &c., but is now a barren wilderness. Its chief city was Susa, on the river Choaspes, very famous in ancient history.

TO SUSPECT, v. a. [suspicio, Lat.] to imagine something unknown with a degree of fear and jealousy; to imagine or think guilty or bad without proof; to hold as uncertain.—v. n. to imagine a person guilty of some crime without proof.

SUSPECTFUL, a. ready to mistrust; suspicious.

TO SUSPEND, v. a. [suspendere, Fr. suspendo, Lat.] to hang; to make to hang by any thing; to make dependent upon; to interrupt or stop; to delay; to debar from the execution of an office for a certain time.

SUSPENDER, part. a. hung by any thing; debarred from exercising an office, or receiving the salary, for a certain time, or during pleasure.

SUSPENSE, s. [suspens, Fr.] uncertainty; irresolution; the act of withholding the determination of the judgment; deprivation for a time; a stop in the midst of two opposites.

SUSPENSION, (suspension) s. [Fr.] the act of making to hang or depend on any thing; the act of delaying; interruption; the act of withholding the determination of the judgment; the state of a person who is deprived of an exercise of an office for a time.

SUSPICION, (suspishon) s. [Fr. suspicio, Lat.] the act of imagining ill without proof; jealousy; distrust; diffidence.

SUSPICIOUS, (suspishous) a. [suspicious, from suspicio, Lat.] inclined to imagine ill without proof; liable to suspicion, or giving reason to imagine ill.

SUSPICIOUSLY, (suspishously) ad. distrustfully; jealously.

SUSPICIOUSNESS, (suspishousness) s. jealousy; distrust.

SUSPIRAL, s. [soupirail, Fr.] a conveyance of water under ground; a vent or breathing-hole; an air-hole.

SUSPIRATION, s. [suspiratio, from sub and spiro, Lat.] sigh; act of fetching the breath deep.

TO SUSPIRE, v. n. [suspiro, Lat.] to sigh, or fetch the breath deep.

SUSQUEHANNA, one of the largest rivers in the United States, N. America. It rises in New York, crosses Pennsylvania, and flows into the Atlantic by Chesapeake Bay, after a course of about 450 miles, in Maryland. It receives the waters of many considerable rivers in its course, and is a mile and a quarter in width at its mouth, but its course is obstructed by falls and rapids, so that but a small part of it is navigable.

SUSSEX, an English county, 76 miles in length, and 20 in breadth; lying on the British Channel, and bounded by Hampshire, Surrey, and Kent. It contains 312 parishes, and 17 market towns. It is hilly, being crossed by the S. line of chalk wolds; and is watered by the Arun, the Rother, and other streams. It yields good building-stone, and produces all kinds of agricultural produce. There are fine sheep-walks on the hills, and game is abundant. It has few manufacturers, and not much trade. Its chief city is Chichester. Pop. 230,753. It sends 18 members to parliament.

To SUSTA'IN, v. a. [soutenir, Fr. sustineo, from sub and teneo, Lat.] to bear, prop, or hold up; to support or keep from sinking under evil; to help, relieve, or assist; to maintain or keep; to bear without yielding; to endure; to suffer.

SUSTENANCE, s. [soutenance, Fr.] nourishment; maintenance; food; any thing that supports nature.

SUSTENTATION, s. [Fr. from sustento, Lat.] support from falling; maintenance.

To SUSURRATE, v. n. [susurro, Lat.] to whisper, or speak low.

SUSURRATION, s. the act of whispering, or speaking low; a whisper.

SUTHERLAND, a county of Scotland, occupying the whole width of the country, from the Atlantic to the N. Sea. It is bounded by Caithness and Ross. It is on the average about 50 miles in each direction. It is very mountainous, having many points of above 3000 feet in height. Its streams and lakes are small. The coast is rocky, and indented with many bays and creeks. Some part of the lower grounds is cultivated. Sheep and red-deer abound. The fisheries are excellent. Dornoch is its chief place. Pop. 24,782. It sends a member and a moiety to the imperial parliament.

SUTLER, s. [sutler, Teut. soeteler, Belg.] one who sells liquors and provisions in a camp, barracks, or garrison.

SUTTEE, s. [Hind.] the ceremony of burning a widow with the dead body of her husband, which used to be practised in Hindustan, but is now forbidden by the British authorities.

SUTURE, s. [Fr. from suo, Lat.] in Surgery, a particular manner of closing wounds by sewing. In Anatomy, a particular articulation of bones, wherein they lock into each other, like the teeth of two saws, as in the skull.

SUWABROW, or SUWABROW, ALEXANDER, COUNT, the famous Russian general of the last century. His life was a continued battle and march. In Poland, Turkey, Germany, &c. he fought through the wars by which Russia was aggrandized at the expense of her neighbours, and barely protected herself from the torrent of French conquerors. His great achievement was the taking of Ismail, and his most famous despatch respecting it ranks next to Caesar's Veni, vidi, vici.—"Glory to God and the Empress, Ismail is ours!" He introduced the iron discipline which has ever since characterized the Russian army, and made it as good as a fighting machine can be. He died in 1800, aged 70 years.

SWAB, (a is pron. broad in this word and its two following derivatives,) s. [swabb, Swed.] a kind of mop used in washing floors.

To SWAB, v. a. [seebban, Sax.] to clean with a mop.
SWABBER, s. a person who cleans or washes the deck of a ship.

To SWADDLE, (swaddl) v. a. [suedan, Sax.] to swathe, or bind in cloths, generally used for the dress of new-born infants. Figuratively, to beat or cudgel.

SWADDLINGBAND, SWADDLINGCLOTH, SWADDLINGCLOUT, s. cloth wrapped round a new-born child.

To SWAG, v. n. [seeigja, Isl.] to sink, or hang down by its weight; to waddle, or shake from side to side.

To SWAGE, v. a. [from assuage,] to ease; to mitigate; to soften; to appease; to assuage.

To SWAGGER, (swagger) v. n. [seeagan, Sax.] to bluster, or be noisily proud and insolent; to bully; to boast; to Hector; to domineer.

SWAGGERER, (swaggerer) s. a blusterer; a noisy, proud, and insolent person.

SWAIN, s. [swain, Sax. and Run.] a young man; a country person or shepherd; a hind; a peasant.

SWAINMOTE, s. [swainmote, law Lat.] a court of freeholders within a fence touching matters pertaining to it, kept by charter thrice in the year.

To SWALE, SWEAL, (sweel) v. a. [swelan, Sax.] to waste, or blaze away; to melt.

To SWALLOW, (a pron. broad, as in alt;) v. a. [swelgan, Sax. swelgen, Belg.] to take down the throat; to receive without examination; to absorb or suck in; to engulf; to devour; to be lost in any thing; to engross, used with up.

SWALLOW, (a pron. broad,) s. the throat; a whirlpool. In Natural History, the general name for those long-winged migratory birds, so well known and so much admired by all people and all ages. It is properly the name of the one which builds a clay nest, open at top, and has a long forked tail, and a dusky red patch on its breast.

SWALLOWWORT, s. in Botany, a plant, called asclepias. SWAMP, preter. of To SWIR.

SWAMMERDAM, DR. JOHN, a famous naturalist of Holland, in the 17th century. He studied medicine at Leyden, and devoted himself to anatomy and natural history, and particularly to the study of insects. In the latter part of his life he was remarkable as a Quietist in religion; and he died in 1681, aged 44 years. He published works on his favourite subjects, but his name is better known than his works now.

SWAMP, (a pron. broad,) s. [Swed. swamms, Goth. swam, Sax. swamm, Isl.] a bog, or marshy place, so called in America; a fen. SWAMPY, a. abounding with swamps or bogs.

SWAN, (a pron. broad,) s. [Sax. swaen, Belg. swan, Dan.] in Ornithology, a genus of large water-fowls, the most common of which is kept by gentlemen on ornamental waters, because of its peculiar elegance, and its dazzling whiteness. A black swan was once a proverb for rarity, but it is not so now. There was a tradition respecting their having the gift of song just before they died, but it is not any more correct than many other legendary tales, which once were thought to be natural history. One species has considerable power but no sweetness of voice. The feathers and down of these birds are largely used in upholstery, &c.

SWAN RIVER, the name given to a settlement on the W. coast of New Holland, which seems to be well suited to the purposes of colonization, having mountains, arable plains, large rivers, bays, and estuaries, &c. &c., with a fine climate, and abundance of natural productions, mineral, animal, and vegetable, that are serviceable to man. The present capital of the settlement is Perth. Pop. about 5000.

SWANSDOWN, s. the name of a closely woven, thick cotton fabric.

SWANSEA, or ABERTAW, Glamorganshire. It is a well-built town, with an old castle, two churches, and broad paved streets. It exports great quantities of coals to Ireland and the southern coast of England. Here are potteries, and considerable works for the smelting of copper and lead ore. Many ships have been built here, and it is resorted to for sea-bathing. It is situated on a bay of the Bristol Channel, to which it gives name, at the mouth of the Tawy, which here forms a good harbour; 205 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 16,787.

SWARD, (a pron. broad) s. [Swed.] the skin of bacon; the surface of the ground.

SWARM, (a pron. broad) s. [swearm, Sax. swerm, Belg.] a great body or number of bees, or other animals; a crowd; a multitude.

To SWARM, v. n. [swearman, Sax. swermen, Belg.] to rise in a body, to quit the hive, applied to bees; to appear in multitudes; to be thronged; to be over-crowded, or over-run.

SWART, SWARTH, (a pron. broad in this word and its two following derivatives,) s. [swcart, Sax.] blackish; dusky; darkly brown; tawny; gloomy, or malignant.

SWARTHINESS, s. blackishness; tawiness; gloominess. SWARTHY, a. dark of complexion; black; tawny.

SWATH, s. [swade, Belg.] a line of grass cut down by a mower; a continued quantity.—[suedan, Sax.] a band or fillet.

To SWATHE, v. a. [sweedan, Sax.] to bind round and round with bands or rollers.

To SWAY, v. a. [swelben, Teut.] to move in the hand; to wield or manage by the hand with ease; to bias, or force more to one side than the other; to govern; to rule; to overpower; to influence.—v. n. to hang heavy; to be drawn by weight; to have weight or influence; to govern.

SWAY, s. the swing or sweep of a weapon; any thing moving with bulk and power; power, rule, or dominion; influence or direction.

To SWEAR, (swere) v. n. preter. swore or sware, past part. sworn; [swaran, Goth. swerian, Sax. sweren, Belg.] to call some superior power to witness the truth of what a person says; to

REFERENCE to the MAPS
1. Green
2. Brown
3. Orange
4. Blue

Railway Stations, &c.
Scale of 30 Miles
The County returns a Member.

SUSSEX

declare, promise, or give in evidence on oath; to curse and use oaths profanely.—v. a. to put to an oath; to declare on oath; to obtest by an oath.

SWEAFER, (sweäfer) s. one who curses and makes use of oaths profanely.

SWEAT, (sweät) s. [Sax. sweät, Belg.] labour; toil; drudgery; evaporation of moisture; exudation.

To SWEAT, (sweät) v. n. preter. sweat or sweated, past part. sweaten: to have the skin covered with moisture by heat, labour, or medicines. Figuratively, to toil or labour hard; to emit moisture.—v. a. to emit as sweat.

SWEATER, s. one that sweats, or makes to sweat.

SWEATINESS, (sweätiness) s. the quality of abounding with sweat.

SWEATY, (sweätly) a. covered with sweat; wet with sweat; consisting of sweat; toilsome; laborious.

SWEDEN, a large kingdom of N. Europe, lying on the Baltic and the Frozen Ocean, and bounded by Norway and Russia. It is about 900 miles long, and 150 miles level. The inland region is exceedingly mountainous, some heights reaching to 8000 feet; but near the sea the country is more level. It abounds in rivers and lakes. Iron, copper, silver, gold, &c. are found here, the former in greatest abundance; and it is not deficient in mineral treasures of other kinds. Its forests, particularly the pine forests, are also a source of considerable wealth, both for timber, and for pitch, tar, &c. Agriculture is attended to with considerable success in the S. parts; and all kinds of grain, fruit, &c. common to Europe, are grown. Cattle of all kinds, deer, rein-deer, and smaller animals, whose skins are an article of trade, and larger animals, as wolves, &c., are numerous. Its manufactures are chiefly in iron; other branches are however advancing in importance; and its trade is very considerable, and embraces the whole world. In the N. parts the inhabitants are very rude, and the climate is unfavourable to the advances of civilization. The capital is Stockholm. Pop. about 3,250,000.

SWEDENBORG, EMMANUEL, an eminent philosopher and religious teacher of the last century. He was a native of Sweden, and his father was the distinguished bishop Jesper Swedenborg. He studied at Upsal; and at home, and during his travels in Germany, France, England, &c. early acquired a considerable reputation for his mathematical and scientific knowledge. In the service of Charles XII. he performed some surprising feats as an engineer. He was appointed assessor to the college of mines; and ennobled by Queen Ulrica, when he changed his name to that by which he is now known. His scientific writings at this time were very numerous, and had spread his fame through Europe. His attention was gradually drawn to philosophy and theology; and his first writings that gave indications of it were on natural history and anatomy. At last he avowed himself a teacher of religion, empowered to do so by special command and instruction of God. In Sweden and in London he taught and wrote in explication of his revelation. And his works on this subject are not less numerous than his scientific treatises. He was once attacked by the Swedish clergy as a heretic, but the attempt failed; and he died in 1772, aged 85 years. It is impossible to give the titles of all his works. All who are desirous of knowing what he actually taught will find it most clearly unfolded in his True Christian Religion. His doctrines are remarkably free from the usual features of self-deluded mysticism; and are indeed in most respects only the universally received doctrines of Christianity stated in the terms of the philosophy which was the basis of his system. The allegorical way in which he has treated some parts of his scheme; the assumption of his name as the designation of his followers; with, perhaps, something less of his learning and piety in the teachers who have promulgated the doctrines of the New Jerusalem Church; have caused most to condemn him without a hearing. Such as can study the works of great and original teachers of truth, without feeling bound to form a school, or a party, in favour of them; as though there could be no other teachers, and no other representations of truth; may find rich mines of thought and wisdom in Swedenborg's works. And they will not reject what is self-evidently true, because near it may be found what was a personal notion or feeling of the writer's, and was mistaken by him for truth. The Swedenborgians, as they are sometimes called, (or the New Jerusalem Church), are numerous both in this country and in America; but in general they are not such as to commend their master's doctrines to the attention of those who could best appreciate their spirituality and truth.

To SWEEP, v. a. preter. and past part. swept: [sweapan, Sax.] to clean or drive away with a broom or besom; to trail along the ground; to carry with pomp; to pass over with quickness; to rub over; to strike with a long stroke.—v. n. to pass with violence or swiftness; to pass with pomp, or a flowing train; to pass with an equal motion; to move with a long stroke or reach.

SWEEP, s. the act of cleaning with a broom or besom; the compass of any violent or continued motion; violent destruction; the direction of any motion not rectilinear.

SWEEPER, s. one who sweeps.

SWEEPINGS, s. that which is swept away.

SWEET, a. [sweäde, Sax.] pleasing to any of the senses; of an agreeable taste, as sugar, &c.; fragrant to the smell. Figuratively, charming, grateful, or pleasing; soft; mild; gentle; not salt; not sour; not stale. Kind, or good, applied to temper. To be sweet upon, to be amorously fond of.

SWEETBREAD, (sweätbrääd) s. the pancreas of the calf.

SWEETBRIER, s. in Botany, a kind of wild rose, with fragrant leaves.

SWEETICELY, s. in Botany, a plant called also myrrhus.

To SWEETEN, v. a. to make sweet, mild, kind, less painful, more grateful, or more delicate; to palliate; to reconcile; to edulcorate.—v. n. to grow sweet.

SWEETENER, s. one that palliates; that which contemperate acrimonies.

SWEETHEART, (sweätheart) s. a suitor, lover, or mistress.

SWEETISH, a. somewhat sweet.

SWEETLY, ad. in a sweet manner; with sweetness.

SWEETMEAT, (sweätmeät) s. fruit preserved in sugar.

SWEETNESS, s. the quality of being sweet in any of its senses.

SWEETWILLIAM, s. in Botany, a garden plant, allied to the pink.

SWEETWILLOW, s. in Botany, the Dutch myrtle, or gale.

To SWELL, v. n. past part. swollen: [swellian, Sax. swellen, Belg.] to grow bigger by extension of parts; to grow turgid; to tumefy; to protuberate; to look big; to be elated, or rise into arrogance; to be exasperated.—v. a. to cause to rise, or to make tumid; to aggravate or heighten; to raise to arrogance.

SWELL, s. an increase of bulk; the name of part of the machinery of an organ.

SWELLING, s. a tumour; any thing grown bigger by extension.

To SWELTER, v. n. to be pained, or made uneasy, by heat.—v. a. to parch, or dry up with heat.

SWELTRY, a. sultry; suffocating with heat.

SWEPT, participle and preter. of To SWEEP.

To SWERVE, v. n. [swercen, Sax. and Belg.] to wander, to rove; to deviate or depart from rule, custom, reason, or duty; to ply or bend.

SWIFT, a. [Sax.] moving far in a short time; speedy; quick; nimble; ready; rapid.

SWIFT, s. in Ornithology, a kind of swallow, with short legs and very long wings, which builds a nest almost like a sparrow's, in steeples, &c.

SWIFT, DR. JONATHAN, the celebrated writer of the early part of the last century. He studied at Trinity College, Dublin, and at Oxford, and enjoyed the patronage of Sir W. Temple. He afterwards entered the Church of Ireland, but he never acquired a richer prize than a deanery, although various attempts were made to gain him a mitre. In the war of pamphlets, which was sufficiently brisk in those days, he took an active part, with no little effect, and not without attempts to prosecute him as a libeller. These writings, with the purely literary and humorous works which he wrote, competing not unsuccessfully with the brilliant writers of the age; his occasional migrations from England to Ireland, and from Ireland to England; and his love-stories, in which none of the romance was on his side; make up the main incidents of his life; the close of which was darkened by madness and idiocy. He died in 1745, aged 77 years. His immortal work is Gulliver's Travels, full of keen political satire, and ending with the disgusting satire or libel on humanity in the Yahoos of Houhnhnmland. The Tale of a Tub ranks next to it, full of humour, sarcasm, satire, grossness; a mere common-sense worldly man's notions of religion, in which the true is condemned with the false; and with such broad hints of what he could see amiss in his own Church, that the highest prize which the Churchman could aspire after was sternly refused to him. His other writings abound with playful wit, and the most splendid irony, and are amusing now that the circumstances on which they were founded have ceased to interest any. But they do not lack coarseness, which often sinks into obscenity. Of Varina, and Stella, and Vanessa, who loved the unloving dean with rarely found ardour and constancy, we can only say that it is believed that he was married to the second, and that a reproof too trenchant broke the heart of the third, whilst the first abated her pursuit of him on being told his ideal of a wife. For one rare excellence, rare especially in his own times, he was pre-eminently distinguished,—manful independence; and perhaps to this, as much as to his picture of Martin's foibles, it is owing that he lives in the history of party and of literature as the Dean of St. Patrick's.

SWIFTLY, ad. quickly; speedily; nimbly; rapidly; fleetly; with celerity; with velocity; with despatch.

SWIFTNESS, s. velocity; nimbleness; quickness; despatch; celerity; rapidity; speed.

To SWIG, v. n. [swiga, Isl.], to drink by large draughts.

To SWILL, v. a. [swilgan, Sax.], to drink in a luxurious and gross manner; to wash or drench; to inebriate.

SWILL, s. fluid food prepared for pigs.

SWILLER, s. a luxurious drinker.

To SWIM, v. n. preter. swam, swom, or swum; [swimman, Sax. swemmen, Belg.], to float or move on the water without sinking; to be conveyed by the stream; to move on or in the water by the action of the limbs; to be floated; to flow in any thing, or to have abundance; to be dizzy, or have a sensation of a swimming or vertigo in the head; to glide or flow with an easy or smooth motion.—v. a. to pass by swimming.

SWIMMER, s. one who swims. In Fariery, the swimmer is situated in the fore-legs of a horse, above the knees, and upon the inside, and almost upon the back parts of the hind-legs, a little below the hams: this part is without hair, and resembles a piece of hard dry horn.

SWIMMINGLY, ad. smoothly; prosperously.

SWINE, s. [swina, Sax. swijn, Belg.], a hog or pig; a number of hogs, either sows or boars.

SWINEHERD, s. a keeper or feeder of swine.

SWINESTONE, s. in Mineralogy, a sort of lime-stone, which emits a fetid odour when rubbed violently.

To SWING, v. a. preter. swang, swung; [swingan, Sax.], to make a thing that is suspended move backwards and forwards; to whirl round in the air; to wave loosely.—v. n. to wave to and fro, hanging loosely; to vibrate.

SWING, s. the motion of any thing hanging loosely; a line on which any thing hangs loose; the influence or force of a body put into motion; a course, or unrestrained liberty, or tendency.

To SWINGE, (g soft), v. a. [swingan, Sax.], to whip; to punish; to bastinado.

To SWINGLE, (swingl) v. n. to dangle; to wave hanging; to swing in pleasure.

SWINISH, a. like a swine; filthy; stupid; gross; brutish.

SWINK, s. [swine, Sax.], labour; drudgery. Obsolete.

SWITCH, s. a small flexible twig.

To SWITCH, v. a. to lash with a switch; to jerk.

SWITZERLAND, or SWISSERLAND, a large country of Europe, lying between Germany, Austria, Sardinia, and France. It is about 200 miles long, and of various breadth, from 80 to 180 miles. It is wholly a region of mountains, being crossed by the various chains of the Alps. Its rivers are chiefly the beginnings of those which in other countries are noted streams, such as the Rhine, Rhone, &c. Its lakes are numerous, and of surpassing beauty. Its productions are almost wholly of a pastoral kind, except that some of its larger towns abound with most ingenious manufactures. Its people, in the history of Europe, are proverbial for their love of liberty, and at the same time for being ever ready to fight as mercenaries in the cause of others. It is a confederation of small states or cantons, the names of which are Berne, Basle, Zurich, Schaffhausen, Neuchâtel, Glarus, Appenzell, Uri, Zug, Schwitz, Unterwald, Friburg, and Soleure. Under which heads, see further topographical and statistical particulars. Pop. about 2,400,000.

SWIVEL, s. something fixed in another body so as to turn round in it; a small cannon mounted on ships so as to point any way.

SWOLLEN, SWOLN, past part. of To SWELL.

To SWOON, v. n. [ascuman, Sax.], to suffer a suspension of thought and sensation; to faint or fall into a fit.

SWOON, s. [swong, Sax.], a fainting fit; a lipothymy; a syncope.

To SWOOP, v. a. to fall or dart at once on its prey; to prey upon; to catch up.

SWOOP, s. a fall of a bird of prey upon his quarry.

To SWOP, v. a. to give one thing in exchange for another; to truck; to barter.

SWORD, (sôrd) s. [sweord, Sax. sweerd, Belg.], a weapon with a sharp point, worn by the side, and used in combats hand to hand; destruction by war; vengeance or justice; an emblem of authority.

SWORDBEARER, (sôrdberer) s. an officer who carries a sword of state before a prince or magistrate.

SWORDFISH, (sôrdfish) s. in Ichthyology, a remarkable fish, found in the Mediterranean, of considerable size, which is armed with a bony sword-like projection from its upper jaw, with which it is said to combat much larger fish successfully. It has been known to strike a vessel so violently as to bury its sword in the timber.

SWORDGRASS, s. in Botany, a kind of sedge.

SWARE, the preter. of To SWEAR.

SWUM, the preter. of To SWIM.

SYCAMORE, s. in Botany, a large and handsome tree, allied to the maple and plane, common in England.

SYCOPHANT, (sykofant) s. [sykos and phaino, Gr. sykophanta, Lat.], an appellation given by the ancient Athenians to those who gave information of the exportation of figs, contrary to law; and hence it is still used in general for all informers, parasites, flatterers, cheats, &c.

SYCOPHANTIC, (sykofantik) a. parasitical; flattering.

To SYCOPHANTISE, (sykofantise) v. n. to play the flatterer.

SYDENHAM, DR. THOMAS, an eminent English physician of the 17th century. He studied at Oxford, and at Montpellier, and afterwards practised in London. It was in fevers that he was particularly successful; and his treatment of these diseases was a great step in the progress of medical practice. His works on this subject are very valuable. He died in 1689, aged 65 years.

SYDENHAM, FLOYER, an excellent Greek scholar of the last century, educated at Oxford, who translated in a generally faithful manner several of Plato's greatest dialogues; and whose name is associated with a manful battle with poverty and hunger, ending in a painful defeat; and with the Literary Fund, which sprung from the sympathy awakened by his melancholy end. He died in 1787, in prison, aged 77 years.

SYDEROSE, a. [syderosis, Lat.], planet-struck.

SYDNEY, the principal city of New South Wales, stands on the E. coast of New Holland, on Sydney Cove, and is a tolerably well built place, with several substantial public buildings, as churches, barracks, hospitals, government buildings, &c. It is the chief place of the penal settlement, and has, in consequence, a population of a somewhat peculiar character, yet the majority of its inhabitants are voluntary emigrants. It has some rising manufactures, and a considerable trade. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 33. 50. S. Long. 151. 30. E.

SYLLA, L. CORNELIUS, one of the great generals and party leaders of Rome, near the close of its republican epoch. After a youth of profligacy, he suddenly turned his attention to public life; and in the course of serving in the usual offices, distinguished himself under Marius in Africa, Germany, &c., and in Asia Minor, as propætor. In the Social War he tried his strength against Marius, defeated him, and then went to Asia against Mithridates, overrunning Greece and taking Athens by the way. After a career of victory there, hearing of the renewal of the troubles at home, he returned, and found that Marius had exacted a cruel vengeance for his former defeat. It was not long before his veteran legions placed the city at his mercy, and he at once repaid cruelly the injuries done during his absence to his party. He was made dictator by the obedient senate, and his reign was one of direct terror. Having by this course cleared the way for the exercise of his statesmanship, he reformed the constitution, and hoped to repair all the tarnished lustre of the Roman name by his statutes and laws. Finally, he abandoned his high post, and gave up the close of his life to the same profligacy that had polluted the beginning, and died a victim to his vices in 78 A. C., aged 60 years.

SYLLABIC, SYLLABICAL, a. [syllabique, Fr. syllabicus, Lat.] relating to, or consisting of, syllables.

SYLLABLE, s. [syllabe, Gr.] a part of a word, consisting of one or more letters pronounced together; any thing proverbially concise.

SYLLABUB, s. a drink, made of white or red wine and sugar, into which milk is poured, or milked from the real cow.

SYLLABUS, s. [Lat. sullabos, Gr.] an abstract; a compendium containing the heads of a discourse.

SYLLEPSIS, s. [Gr.] in Grammar, the connexion of two nominative cases singular, of different persons, with a verb plural.

SYLLOGISM, (s soft) s. [sun and logos, Gr. sylogismus, Lat. sylogisme, Fr.] in Logic, an argument consisting of three propositions, the conclusion of which necessarily follows from the two premises.

SYLLOGISTICAL, a. belonging to syllogisms; consisting of syllogisms.

SYLLOGISTICALLY, ad. in the form of a syllogism.

TO SYLLOGIZE, v. a. to reason by syllogism.

SYLPHS, (syf/s) s. a sort of fairy nymphs.

SYLVAN, a. [sylvanus, Lat.] woody; shady; belonging to woods or forests.

SYMBOL, s. [symbolon, Gr. symbolum, Lat. symbole, Fr.] an abstract or compendium; a comprehensive form; a type, or that which comprehends, in its figure, a representation of something else. In Mathematics, a letter or mark which signifies a particular result or operation.

SYMBOLICAL, a. belonging to, or of the nature of, a symbol; mystical; representative.

SYMBOLICALLY, ad. typically; by representation.

SYMBOLIZATION, s. representation; resemblance.

TO SYMBOLIZE, v. a. [symboliser, Fr.] to make representative of something.—v. n. to have something in common with another by representative qualities.

SYMMETRICAL, a. proportionate.

SYMMETRY, s. [sym and metron, Gr. symétrie, Fr. symmetria, Lat.] proportion; harmony of parts.

SYMPATHETIC, SYMPATHETICAL, a. affected with what happens to another; having mutual sensation.

TO SYMPATHIZE, v. n. [sympathiser, Fr.] to feel with another; to feel mutually, followed by with.

SYMPATHY, s. [sun and pathos, Gr. sympathie, Fr. sympathia, Lat.] the quality of being affected with the calamities, pains, joys, or affections of another; fellow-feeling; mutual sensibility.

SYMPHONIOUS, (symfionious) a. harmonious; agreeing in sound.

SYMPHONY, (sy'mfony) s. [symphonie, Fr. from sun and phone, Gr. symphonie, Fr.] a consonance, or concert of several sounds together on the ear; harmony. In Music, an instrumental composition, of a particular construction; also the instrumental introduction to a piece of vocal music.

SYMPLYSIS, (sy'mplysis) s. [Gr.] in Anatomy, one of the kind of junctures, or articulation of the bones; particularly of those bones which in young children are distinct, but after some years unite and consolidate into one bone.

SYMPOSIAC, a. [symposion, Gr.] relating to merry-making; happening where company is drinking together.

SYMPTOM, s. [symptomata, from sun and pypto, Gr. symptome, Fr.] something happening together with something else; a sign or token; an appearance in a disease which shows its quality or nature.

SYMPTOMATIC, a. tending to discover, or belonging to, symptoms; happening concurrently, or occasionally.

SYNERESIS, s. [Gr.] in Grammar, the contraction of two syllables or vowels into one.

SYNAGOGUE, (sy'nagogy) s. [synago, Gr. synagoga, Lat.] an assembly of Jews to worship; the place where the Jews use to assemble to read, and to hear the holy books read.

SYNALEPHTA, (synalefta) s. [Lat.] in Prosody, a contraction of a syllable by joining together two vowels in the scanning, or cutting off the ending vowel; as ill' ego, for ille ego.

SYNARTHROSIS, s. [sun and arthron, Gr.] in Medicine, a close conjunction of two bones.

SYNAXIS, s. [synago, Gr.] a congregation; the sacrament of the Lord's supper.

SYNCHRONAL, (synkrínal) a. [sun and chronos, Gr.] happening together at the same time; contemporary.

SYNCHRONISM, (synkronizm) s. [synchronisme, Fr.] concurrence of several remarkable transactions happening at the same time.

SYNCHRONOUS, a. happening at the same time.

TO SYNCPATE, v. a. to cut or take away; to shorten.—v. n. to swoon.

SYNCOPATION, s. in Music, the repetition of a note which occurs in the last place in a bar, in the first place in the next, both being united by a tie, and sounded as one note.

SYNCOPE, (synkópe) s. [sun and kopto, Gr.] in Grammar, the taking of one or more letters out of a word. In Physic, a sudden fainting or swooning.

SYNDIC, s. an officer of great power and authority in foreign cities and universities; he is a censor, a comptroller, a Burgess, a recorder, and in some cities the chief magistrate.

TO SYNDICATE, v. n. [sun and díke, Gr.] to judge; to pass judgment on; to censure.

SYNDROME, (syndrómee) s. [sun and dromos, Gr.] concurrence of symptoms indicating a disease; concurrent action.

SYNECDOCHE, (synékdóche) s. [Lat. from synekdechomai, Gr. synecdoque, Fr.] in Rhetoric, the taking of the whole for a part, or a part for the whole.

SYNECDOCHICAL, a. expressed by a synecdoche; implying a synecdoche.

SYNESIUS, an African prelate of the 5th century, who figures as a philosopher, statesman, and poet, in ecclesiastical history. He studied under the famous Hypatia, and resided for some time at Constantinople as an ambassador from Cyrene. As bishop of Ptolemais, and as a writer, he displayed more of the philosopher than the theologian. He died in about 425 A. D.

SYNNEUROSIS, s. [sun and neuron, Gr.] in Anatomy, the connexion made by a ligament.

SYNOD, s. [sun and odos, Gr. synodos, Lat. synode, Fr.] in Ecclesiastical matters, an assembly of bishops, priests, presbyters, or any other official clergy, for the determination of questions of doctrine and discipline. These assemblies are a prominent feature in Presbyterianism, and they are held in other denominations, under other names, such as Conference, Yearly Meeting, &c. In Astronomy, the conjunction of the heavenly bodies.

SYNO'DIC, SYNO'DICAL, a. [synodique, Fr.] relating to a synod; transacted in a synod. In Astronomy, applied to the time betwixt one conjunction of any planet with the sun to the next, as, ex. gr. 29d. 12h. 44m. 3s. is called a synodical month, because it takes that time to bring the sun and moon to a conjunction; also applied to the time that any two celestial bodies take in coming to the same relative position as seen from the earth.

SYNONYME, s. [sun and onoma, Gr.] a word which signifies the same thing as another word.

SYNONYMOUS, a. expressing the same thing by different words.

SYNONYMY, s. the quality of expressing by different words the same thing.

SYNOPTIS, s. [sun and optomai, Gr.] a general view; all the parts brought under one view; a syllabus, a compendium.

SYNOPTICAL, a. affording a view of many parts at once.

SYNTACTICAL, a. conjoined; fitted to each other; relating to the construction of speech.

SYNTAX, SYNTAXIS, s. [Lat. from sun and tasso, Gr. syntaze, Fr.] a system; a number of things joined together; that part of Grammar which teaches the laws of the construction of sentences, &c.

SYNTHESIS, s. [sun and tithemi, Gr.] the act of joining, opposed to analysis. In Mathematics and the Sciences, synthesis expresses a process the exact reverse of analysis: in the latter, the investigation is conducted from a known or assumed fact, to the simplest principles by which it can be established; in the former, the argument is conducted from the simplest principles to the desired result. In Newton's Principia, synthesis is employed to teach what had been discovered by analysis. The higher mathematics are commonly employed in the process of analysis, while the process used by Euclid, which is synthesis, is generally employed in works for wider circulation.

SYNTHETIC, a. joining together; compounding; connective; conjoining; uniting.

SYRA, an island of the Egean Sea, near Andro. In the late changes in that part of Europe, this island has been of some importance, partly because of its excellent harbour. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 37. 30. N. Long. 21. 57. E.

SYRACUSE, a city of Sicily, formerly of great extent and magnificence, but now so much reduced as to occupy but an island which defends the harbour. Its trade was very great, but is of no account now. The ruins of its former buildings remain in many parts, and many antiquities are discovered. It is 110 miles from Palermo. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 37. 3. N. Long. 15. 16. E.

SYRIA, a province of Asiatic Turkey, lying at the E. extremity of the Mediterranean Sea, and bounded by Egypt, Arabia, El Jezira, whilst Mount Taurus divides it from the Turkish provinces on the N. It is about 500 miles long, by about 200 broad. The W. part is mountainous, especially from the ranges of Libanus and Antilibanus northward. There are other hills also near the sea, and the peninsula of Sinai is a mass of mountains. The ancient Palestine has many fine plains, but the Egyptian frontier, and the whole E. part, are mere levels, in many places passing into sandy deserts. It has few rivers, except such as are dried up in the hot season; and there are some lakes, two of which are renowned in sacred story. It produces corn, oil, fruits, pulse, cotton, dye-weeds, tobacco, silk, wine, &c. &c. But it is not so fertile as it was in former times, and the whole region wears a melancholy air of desolation. The population is of a very mixed character, Arabs and Turks constituting the greater number. The Druses have of late appeared somewhat prominently, and there is a tribe living amongst the mountains, of which little is known, called the Anzarey. Jews, as a matter of course, abound, in spite of all kinds of oppression and tyranny. In the large towns there is a growing regard to manufactures and trade, and some branches are in a thriving condition; but most of the trade is carried on by land. It is divided into 4 pashaliks, those of Acre, Tripolis, Aleppo, and Damascus. Pop. about 3,000,000. The ancient Syria was more extensive northerly than the modern.

SYRIAC, the name of the language spoken in the countries W. of Assyria, which was the vernacular of Palestine in the time of our Lord. There are two translations of the Scriptures, which are esteemed ancient, and the value of one of them, called the Peshito, in biblical criticism, is considerable.

SYRINGE, s. [surinz, Gr. and Lat.] an instrument which with any fluid is squirted.

To SYRINGE, v. a. to wash by a syringe.

SYRINGOTOMY, s. [surinz and temno, Gr.] in Surgery, the operation of cutting fistulas or hollow sores.

SYRUP, s. [syrrupus, Lat.] in Medicine, a composition made of the juice of herbs, flowers, or fruits, boiled with sugar to a thick consistence.

SYSTEM, s. [sun and istemi, Gr. systema, Lat. systeme, Fr.] a combination of many things in regular dependence or co-operation; the whole of any doctrine, whose several parts are bound together, follow, or depend on each other.

SYSTEMATIC, SYSTEMATICAL, a. regular; methodical; being according to some system.

SYSTEMATICALLY, ad. in the form of a system.

SYSTOLE, (systolee) s. [Gr.] the contraction of the heart. In Grammar, the shortening of a long syllable.

SYZYGY, s. [sun and zygnao, Gr.] in Astronomy, is a term equally used for the conjunction and opposition of a planet with the sun. In Grammar, it is the coupling of different feet together in a verse. In Anatomy, it is a pair of nerves that convey sense from the brain to the rest of the body.

T IS the nineteenth letter of our alphabet; it is a consonant, and is uttered by a strong expulsion of the breath through the mouth, upon a sudden drawing back of the tongue from the forepart of the palate, with the lips at the same time open. Its proper sound is that in tin, let, rot, put. It is sounded like sh, as in nation, motion, &c., and like ch in Christian, question, &c. It expresses two sounds, one dental merely, as in thin, thief, &c., the other guttural also, as in then, those, there, &c. Among the ancients, T, as a numeral, stood for 160; and with a dash over it, thus, T̄, for 160,000. In Music, T stands for tutti, all together. TABARD, s. [Fr.] a gown reaching no further than the middle of the leg; a kind of jacket, or sleeveless coat; a herald's coat.

TABBY, s. [tabis, Fr. tabi, Ital.] a kind of rich silk, which, having passed under the calender, is made to reflect the rays of light differently and wavily thereon.

TABBY, a. brindled or varied with different colours.

To TABBY, v. a. to pass silk, &c. under the calender, to give it a representation of waves, like that of tabby.

TABEFACATION, s. [tabeo and facio, Lat.] a consuming or wasting away; decay; consumption.

To TABEFY, v. n. to waste away; to pine, or consume.

TABELLIO, s. [tabellion, Fr.] a scrivener; a notary public.

TABERDER, s. one who wears a short gown; applied at Oxford to a servitor of Queen's College.

TABERNACLE, s. [Fr. tabernaculum, from taberna, Lat.] a temporary habitation, or a casual dwelling; a sacred place, or place of worship. In the Romish Church, a little vessel in which the sacrament is put on the altar. In Jewish History, the sacred tent in which the presence of God was manifested, and around which the national service was maintained, during the journeys in the wilderness, and before the erection of the Temple. The Feast of Tabernacles, was one of the three annual solemnities of the Jews, in which all the people dwelt for a week in tents or booths constructed on or near their houses, in commemoration of the time of the wandering in the desert, when they lived in that manner. It occurred in the autumn; and was thus a celebration of national thanksgiving for the fruitfulness of the year, as well.

To TABERNACLE, v. n. to house; to enshrine.

TABID, s. [tabide, Fr. from tabes, Lat.] wasted by disease; consumptive.

TABLATURE, s. painting on walls or ceilings. In Anatomy, a division or parting of the skull bones.

TABLE, s. [Fr. tabula, Lat.] any flat or level surface; a board supported by feet, and used for meals; persons sitting and partaking of an entertainment; fare, or entertainment; a tablet, or surface on which any thing is written or engraved.—(tableau, Fr.) a picture; the palm of the hand; draughts; an index; synopsis; catalogue; syllabus. To turn the tables, signifies to change the condition or fortune of two contending parties; a metaphor taken from the vicissitudes of fortune at gaming-tables.

To TABLE, v. n. to board; to live at another's table.—v. a. to make a catalogue, or set down.

TABLE BAY and MOUNTAIN, the name of a remarkable mountain near the Cape of Good Hope, Africa, the top of which appears at sea to be quite flat; and of the bay which it overlooks, on the N. side of the Cape. Cape Town stands on this bay.

TABLEBEER, s. beer used at meals; small-beer.

TABLECLOTH, s. a cloth spread on the table.

TABLER, s. one who boards.

TABLET, s. a small level surface; a small piece of very thin ivory, used for memorandums.

TABOR, a solitary mountain of Palestine, not far from Nazareth, in the midst of the plain of Esdraelon. It is thickly beset with trees; and on the summit of it our Lord is supposed by some writers to have been transfigured.

TABOUR, TABRET, s. [tabour, old Fr.] a small drum beaten with one stick to accompany a pipe.

To TABOUR, v. n. [taborer, old Fr.] to strike lightly and frequently.

TABOURINE, TABOURET, s. [tabourite, Fr.] a tabour; a small drum.

TABRIZ, (Tabreez) a city of Persia. It stands in a very fertile plain, in the high land, between the Caspian Sea and the Tigris. Its appearance is not at all striking, as its buildings are very mean. But it is the seat of a very considerable trade, being the emporium for Persia, and all countries to the N. W. of it. Pop. about 70,000. Lat. 38. 3. N. Long. 46. 11. E.

TABULAR, a. [tabula, Lat.] set down in the form of tables; formed in laminae; set in squares.

To TABULATE, v. a. to reduce to a table or synopsis; to shape with a flat surface.

TACHE, s. [from tack,] any thing taken hold of; a catch; a loop; a button.

TACHYGRAPHY, (tachygraphy) s. [tachus and grapho, Gr.] the art of swift writing.

TACIT, a. [tacite, Fr. tacitus, from taceo, Lat.] silent; implied, though not expressed.

TACITLY, ad. silently.

TACITURNITY, s. [taciturnité, Fr. taciturnitas, from taceo, Lat.] habitual silence; secrecy; a silent humour.

TACITUS, C. CORNELIUS, one of the most celebrated Roman historians, of whose life little is known beyond the fact that he married the daughter of Julius Agricola, and enjoyed the friendship of the most distinguished men of Rome. The dates of both his birth and his death are uncertain; but he is supposed to have died in about 135 A. D., aged about 80 years. His historical works are of great value, and abound with the most profound thoughts, connected with or arising from the subjects he treats of. His Account of the Germans is equally valuable; and few pieces of biography surpass the Life of Agricola. The most remarkable feature of his style is its extreme condensation, amounting often to positive obscurity; yet in general so rich, as to charm the reader beyond all that verbose eloquence could do. His works are a study of greatest price to politicians, as far as relates to experience and expediency; but he was only a Roman philosopher, and the light he sheds on his subjects is not such as to illuminate them interiorly. His eye did not detect the inward truth or the inward falsehood in the matters he relates.

TACITUS, M. CLAUDIUS, one of the later emperors of Rome. He succeeded Aurelian, after an interregnum of six months, being chosen by the senate and accepted by the army. He perished in an expedition against the Goths, in 276, after a reign of 6 months, aged 76 years.

To TACK, v. a. [tacher, Fr.] to fasten to any thing; to sew slightly; to join or stitch together.—v. n. to turn a ship.

TACK, s. a small nail. Tack aboard, in sea language, is the act of turning ships at sea. To hold tack, i. e. to last or hold out.

TACKLE, s. [tacel, Brit.] an arrow; weapons, or instruments of action.—[tackel, Belg.] the ropes of a ship.

TACKLING, s. ropes, or furniture of a mast; furniture for sport or action.

TACTIC, TACTICAL, a. [taktikos, from tasso, Gr.] relating to the art of war, or marshalling an army.

TACTICS, s. the art of ranging troops or ships for battle.

TACTILE, a. [Fr. tactilis, from tango, Lat.] capable of being touched or felt; tangible.

TACTION, (tákshón) s. [Fr. tactio, from tango, Lat.] the act of touching, seldom used by philosophical writers.

TADPOLE, s. [tad and pola, Sax.] in Natural History, the young of toads and frogs, which have a tail, breathe by gills, and at first have no legs nor feet.

TÆN, a. contraction of TAKEN.

TÆNIA, a. See TAPE-WORM.

TAFFETA, s. [taffetas, Fr. taffetas, Span.] a kind of smooth silken manufacture, having a remarkably glossy surface.

TAG, s. [Isl.] a point of metal fastened to the end of a string; any thing paltry and mean.

To TAG, v. a. to fix metal to the end of a lace; to hang one thing to another. To join, followed by together.

TÁGRAG, s. a mob of the lowest sort.

TÁGUS, a great river of Spain and Portugal, rising in the Sierra Molina of the former country, and flowing to the S. W. through it; crossing Portugal; and emptying itself into the Atlantic near Lisbon, after a course of between 500 and 600 miles, through an estuary varying from 6 to above 20 miles in width.

TAIL, s. [legl, Sax.] the prolongation of the vertebrae of animals; the long feathers growing from the rump of a bird; the fins at the extremity of the bodies of fishes; the lower part; any thing hanging long; a catkin; the hinder part; the train of seeming vapour that attends comets, and is always on the opposite side of the nucleus to the sun. In Law, a limited fee, opposed to a fee-simple. Horse-tail, among the Turks, is the ensign or flag under which they make war. To turn tail, is to fly or run away.

TAYLED, a. furnished with a tail.

TAYLAGE, s. [tailer, Fr.] a piece cut out of the whole; a share of a man's substance paid as tribute. In Law, a toll or tax.

TAILORE, s. [tailleur, Fr.] one who makes clothes.

To TAINT, v. n. [teindre, Fr.] to imbue or impregnate with any thing; to stain; to infect or corrupt.—v. n. to be infected.

TAINT, s. [teinte, Fr.] a tincture, stain, or corruption.

To TAKE, v. a. preter. took, past part. taken, sometimes took; [taka, Isl.] to receive what is offered; to seize what is not given; to catch by surprise or artifice; to seize or make prisoner; to understand in any particular sense or manner; to exact; to get, have, or appropriate; to practise; to use or employ; to blast or infect; to judge in favour of; to close or to comply with; to receive into the mind; to convey, carry, or transport; to endure to bear; to leap or jump over; to seize with a transitory impulse; to produce; to seize as a disease; to swallow as a medicine; to captivate, delight, or engage with pleasure; to receive with good or ill will; to use as an oath or expression; to allow or admit; to comprise or comprehend. Used with away, to deprive of; to set aside or remove; with down, to suppress, reduce, or swallow; with from, to derogate or detract; to deprive of; with in, to comprise, comprehend, admit, win, receive, or impose upon; with off, to invalidate, destroy, withhold, withdraw, swallow, purchase, copy, find place for, or remove; with up, to borrow upon credit or interest, applied to money; to engage with; to assume; to begin; to engross; to have final recourse to; to seize or arrest; to admit; to reprimand; to lift; to occupy; with upon, to appropriate to; to admit to be imputed to; to claim authority. To take a house, to hire one. To take care, or heed, to be cautious; to watch; to superintend. To take heed to, to attend. To take in hand, to undertake. To take place, to happen, to have effect. To take notice, to observe. To take part in, to share or participate.—v. n. to please, or be approved of; to have its intended or natural effect; to catch. Used with after, to learn of, resemble, or imitate; with on, to be violently affected with sorrow or sickness; to claim a character; with to, to apply to, or be fond of; to betake or have recourse to; with up, to stop; with up with, to be contented or satisfied with; to lodge or dwell; with with, to please.

TAKEN, past part. of TO TAKE.

TAKING, a. seizure or distress.

TALBOT, s. in Hunting, a hound, formerly much used.

TALAPOIN, s. [Hind.] a priest of Buddha, in India beyond the Ganges.

TALC, s. in Mineralogy, a substance that is sometimes found in crystals, which can split into laminae which are transparent and flexible, and are used to confine small objects for microscopical investigation.

TALE, s. [Sax.] a story, generally applied to a short narrative of some trifling and fabulous circumstance; a narrative delivered by words.—[atalan, Sax.] a number reckoned; a reckoning.

TALBEARER, s. one who gives intelligence officiously.

TALBEARING, s. the act of informing; officious or malignant intelligence.

TALENT, s. [talentum, Lat.] a weight, or sum of money, differing in different nations and ages (see COINS); a faculty, a power or gift of nature; quality or nature. SYNON. Talent and genius are natural endowments, of which genius is rather internal, and signifies power of invention; talent, rather external, and signifies power of execution. Both relate to art, but genius does so in the highest sense of that word; talent, in the lower sense of practical or mechanical art. N. B. Talented is a word quite inadmissible in our language.

TALES, s. in Law, is a word used for a supply of men impaneled on the jury; or, upon appearance, being challenged for the plaintiff or defendant as not sufficient; in which case the judge grants a supply to be made, by the sheriff, of some persons present.

TALIACIOTUS, or TAGLIACOTZI, GASPARE, an eminent surgeon of Bologna, where he was professor of anatomy. He attended especially to wounds and injuries to the ears, lips, and nose, and used a method similar to one which had been long practised in India, for supplying the loss of the last member, which is satirically and incorrectly referred to in Iludibras. He died in 1599, aged 53 years.

TALIONIS REX, s. [Lat.] the retaliatory punishment of wrong, embodied in the well-known maxim, "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth."

TALIPOT, s. [Hind.] in Botany, a species of palm, growing in the island of Ceylon, to the height of above 60 feet occasionally, the pith of which is very nutritious, and whose leaves, which are often nearly 20 feet long, are used for writing, instead of paper, for thatching houses, &c. &c.

TALISMAN, s. a magical character.

TALISMANIC, a. magical.

TO TALK, (a broad in this word and its derivatives; as, tauld) v. n. [taelen, Belg.] to converse; to speak impertinently; to give account; to reason or confer with another.

TALK, s. familiar speech; rumour; the subject of conversation.

TALKATIVE, a. full of prate; much given to talk.

TALKATIVENESS, s. the quality of being forward to speak, or much given to talking; loquacity; garrulity.

TALKER, s. one who talks; a loquacious person.

TALL, (o pron. broad; as, tauld), a. [tall, Brit.] long, or high in stature; lofty.

TALLAGE, s. [tailage, Fr.] impost; excise.

TALLEYRAND-PERIGORD, CHARLES MAURICE DE, a French ecclesiastic and statesman, who was one of the most conspicuous persons in French History, from the Revolution of 1789 till after that of 1830. He received his education in the best theological schools, and was, as most of the dignitaries of the church at the time were, an infidel in principles and a profligate in morals. His great talents led to his rapid advancement, and he was one of the Assembly of Notables, summoned by Calonne, and soon after made bishop of Autun. In the National Assembly he held a high standing, and was especially prominent in questions of science and finance. One of his most conspicuous performances was at the Feast of Pikes, when he headed the body of clergy who, on the great father-land's altar, in the Champ de Mars, gave a quasi-religious character to the proceedings of that remarkable day. Soon after he secularized himself, and took no part afterwards in the ecclesiastical character. He was attached to the embassy to England; and, proscribed by his monarchical principles in France, on the dethronement of Louis, and by his revolutionary achievements in England, he fled to the United States, whence he did not return till the overthrow of the Reign of Terror. He was engaged in various ways under the Directory, and was most serviceable to Buonaparte during the Consulate, and the early part of the Empire, holding offices of considerable trust in the various ministries. By the emperor he was made Prince of Beneventum; but he finally deserted the imperial cause, when he saw clearly that it must be overthrown. In the restoration of the Bourbons and the congress of Vienna he took a very active part, but he soon sided with those who distrusted the restored dynasty; and was the soul and leader of the party which on the revolution of 1830 imposed a republican monarchy on France, instead of the simple republic it desired. He continued to act on embassies, and in treaties, till nearly the end of his life; and he died in 1838, aged 84 years. His essays and pamphlets are not worthy of much consideration, and the only steadfast principle he seems to have possessed is that of a limited monarchy, somewhat after the English theory, as the best form of government.

TALLIS, THOMAS, the great English composer of sacred music, who flourished in the 16th century. He was connected with the choir of the Chapel Royal, during the reigns of Henry VIII., Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth. Much of his music is still constantly used in the cathedral services, and one of his best-known pieces is the melody of the Evening Hymn. He died in 1585, aged 59 years.

TALLNESS, (a broad) s. height of stature; loftiness.

TALLOW, (till) s. [talge, Dan.] in Commerce and Trade, animal fat of all kinds, used in making candles, &c. &c.

TALLOWHANDLER, s. one who makes candles of tallow.

TALLY, s. [tailer, Fr.] a stick notched or cut along with another, and used formerly to keep accounts by; any thing made to suit another.

TO TALLY, v. a. to fit, suit, or cut out for any thing; to mark upon a tally.—v. n. to be fitted; to conform.

TALLYMAN, s. one who sells clothes to be paid for by the week or month.

TALMA, FRANÇOIS JOSEPH, the great French tragic actor. He was the son of a dentist, and spent the early part of his life in the Netherlands and England. In the latter country he commenced the profession by which he obtained his fame; and returning to Paris before the Revolution, rapidly gained the position which he continued to the end of his public life to occupy. He innovated considerably on the conventional rules of the French stage, but did so with great taste and judgment. His zeal and skill were so abundantly rewarded, that he acquired considerable property; and he died in 1826, aged 63 years.

TALMUD, s. [Heb.] a collection of Jewish laws, containing a digest of doctrines, and religious and moral precepts. It consists of two parts;—the Misna, which is a compilation of traditions and expositions of passages of the law, and consists of six books;—and the Gemaras, or Commentaries, of which there are two, the Gemara of Jerusalem, commonly called the Jerusalem Talmud, and the Gemara of Babylon, or Babylonish Talmud. The latter is most esteemed amongst the Jews, but the most foolish and preposterous legends of the dark ages are sober and sensible compared with what is to be found in this book, which they so strangely denominate perfection. Both Misna and Gemara were composed after the Christian era.

TALON, s. [Fr.] the claw of a bird of prey. In Architecture, a kind of moulding, which consists of a cymatium, crowned with a square fillet.

TALUS, TALUT, s. in Architecture, is the inclination or slope of a work.

TAMARIND, s. [tamarindus, Lat. tamarin, Fr.] in Botany, &c., a kind of leguminous plant, growing in both E. and W. Indies, the fruit of which, removed from the shell, form a sort of conserve, whose agreeable acid taste makes it valuable in cases of fever, &c. It possesses medical properties also, which adds to its utility.

TAMARISK, s. [tîmarîce, Lat.] in Botany, a shrub with a red bark, and leaves like heath. It grows in the S. of England.

TAMBOV, or TAMBOFF, a government of Russia, surrounded by the governments of Vladimir, Nischnoi-Novgorod, Penza, Saratov, Voronezh, Orel, Tula, and Riasan. It is above 200 miles long, and varies in its width from less than 50 to above 150 miles. It is very level, and is watered by the Oka and the Don. The greater part of it has a very fertile soil, and produces abundance of corn, grain of all kinds, fruits, &c. &c. Its timber is also valuable, and cattle, horses, sheep, &c. are reared in great numbers. It has but few minerals, or manufactures, but its trade is very considerable. Tamboff is the capital, which stands on a small stream, but is not a wealthy or important place. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 52. 47. N. Long. 41. 33. E. Pop. of government, about 1,750,000.

TAMBOUR, s. a species of embroidery, made by a machine of that name.

TAMBOURIN, s. [Fr.] an instrument of music; also the name of a lively dance, performed on the French stage.

TAME, a. [Sax. taem, Belg. tam, Dan.] gentle of disposition; domestic, opposed to wild; crushed, subdued, dejected; spiritless or heartless.

TO TAME, v. a. [tamean, Sax. tammen, Belg.] to reduce from wildness; to subdue or conquer.

TAMEABLE, a. susceptible of taming.

TAMELY, ad. gently; meantly; dejectedly.

TAMENESS, s. the opposite to wildness; gentleness of disposition; dejectedness; want of spirit or courage.

TAMER, s. a conqueror; a subduer.

TAMINY, s. a woollen stuff.

TAMKIN, TAMPRION, s. the stopple of a great gun.

TO TAMPER, v. a. [tempera, Lat.] to be officious in the use of medicines; to meddle, or have to do with, without knowledge or necessity; to practise with, or endeavour to seduce.

TAMUL, one of the dialects of Hindustan, spoken throughout the S. E. part of the country, from Madras to Cape Comorin. The whole of the Scriptures have been translated into this language.

TAMWORTH, Staffordshire and Warwickshire. It stands on the rivers Tame and Anker, over which it has bridges.—It has a considerable trade in narrow cloths and other manufactures, and is noted for good ale. It is a very ancient town, and was once a royal seat. It is 116 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 7746.

TO TAN, v. a. [tannen, Belg. tanner, Fr.] to impregnate leather with bark; to make brown by heat, applied to the sun.

TAN, s. the bark of the oak tree, beaten small and used to tan leather.

TANG, s. [tanghe, Belg.] a strong taste left in the mouth; residual or taste.

To TANG, v. n. [from twang,] to ring with.

TANGENT, (g soft) s. [Fr. tangens, Lat.] in Trigonometry, is a right line perpendicularly raised on the extremity of a radius, and which touches a circle so as not to cut it; another line, called a secant, that is drawn from the centre, and which cuts it, defines the arc to which it is a tangent.

TANGIBILITY, (g soft) s. the quality of being perceived by the touch, or of being felt.

TANGIBLE, (g soft) a. [tango, Lat.] perceptible by the touch.

To TANGLE, v. a. See ENTANGLE.

TANGLE, s. a knot of things interwoven in one another.

TANISTRY, s. an ancient custom in Ireland, which ordains that an adult is to be preferred to a minor; as an uncle to a nephew. Likewise, a custom whereby a chieftain, or tanist, has lands only for life, as being only elected thereto.

TANJORE, a city of the Carnatic, Hindustan. It is fortified, and stands near the Caavery. It is about 150 miles from Madras. Pop. about 75,000. Lat. 10. 49. N. Long. 79. 11. E.

TANK, s. [tanque, Fr.] a large cistern or basin; a little pool or pond.

TANKARD, s. [tancard, Ir. tanquaerd, Fr. tankaerd, Belg.] a drinking vessel with a cover moving on a hinge.

TANNER, s. one that tans and prepares hides for use.

TANNER, THOMAS, an English prelate, eminent for his antiquarian knowledge. He studied at Oxford, and commenced his literary career early. His promotion was rapid, and he at last was made Bishop of St. Asaph; and died in 1735, aged 61 years. His great work is on the Bibliography of Great Britain and Ireland; he also wrote an Account of the Monasteries of England and Wales, and edited Wood's Athenae.

TANNIN, s. in Organic Chemistry, an acid found in the bark and galls of the oak tribe; of a pale yellow colour, very soluble in water, with a purely astringent taste of singular intensity. It combines with the skins of animals, and forms the insoluble compound, called leather, which does not putrefy. The salts resulting from it are called tannates.

TANPIT, s. a pit where leather is impregnated with bark.

TANQUAM, s. a university word for one that is fit company for a fellow.

TANSEY, s. [tanacetum, Lat.] in Botany, a plant with double-winged, jagged, serrated leaves, and yellow blossoms. It is found in flower on high pastures in August. It is used to give a flavour to puddings, &c.

TANTALUM, s. See COLUMBIUM.

To TANTALIZE, v. a. [from Tantalus,] to torment by the prospect of pleasures which cannot be reached.

TANTALUS, in Heathen Mythology, one of the Titans, who was punished for the part he took in the rebellion against Zeus, or Jupiter, by being placed in Hades amongst streams that dried up when he attempted to drink of them, and fruit trees whose boughs he could not grasp.

TANTAMOUNT, s. [Fr.] of equal value; an equivalent.

To TAP, v. a. [tappen, Belg. tapper, Fr.] to touch or strike gently; to pierce or breach a vessel.

TAP, s. a gentle blow; a pipe through which liquor is drawn from a vessel; and also the liquor let out; the common room in a small inn.

TAPE, s. [teppan, Sax.] linen woven in narrow slips.

TAPER, s. [taper, Sax.] a wax candle; a light.

TAPER, a. growing gradually narrower from the bottom to the top; conical; pyramidal.

To TAPEER, v. n. to grow smaller towards the bottom or top.

TAPEWORM, s. in Natural History, a kind of worm found in the intestines of man and other animals.

TAPESTRY, s. [tapestrie, Fr.] cloth woven with forms of human creatures, beasts, &c., used for hangings, and sometimes for carpets.

TAPETIA, s. [tapetia, Lat.] worked or figured stuff.

TAPIOCA, s. in Commerce, &c., a kind of fecula, or starch, obtained from the manihot roots, in S. America; which is very nutritious, and is much used by invalids and others.

TAPIR, s. in Zoology, an amphibious animal shaped somewhat like a hog, and having a short proboscis. It inhabits the solitary woods, marshes, rivers, and lakes of South America, and has been called the elephant of the new world. Other species are found in the E. Indies.

TAPPING, s. in general, is the act of piercing a hole in a vessel in order to draw off the liquor. In Agriculture, it is the making an incision in the bark of a tree, and letting out the juice. In Surgery, it is an operation for discharging the water in a dropsy.

TAPROOT, s. the principal stem of the root.

TAPSTER, s. one who draws beer at a public-house.

TAR, s. [tarre, Belg. tare, Sax. tiere, Dan.] liquid pitch, obtained from the wood of fir trees, by a process of slow combustion, or distillation. It is extensively made in the N. parts of Europe, Canada, &c. Figuratively, a sailor.

To TAR, v. a. to smear with tar; to tease or provoke.

TARANTO, a town of the S. of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples. It stands on the bay which divides the extremity of Italy into two promontories, and was a place of great celebrity and importance in ancient history. Its harbour is good, and so it has some trade; its fisheries, also, are of considerable value. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 40. 27. N. Long. 17. 13. E.

TARANTULA, s. [Ital.] in Natural History, a large kind of spider found in Italy; about whose bite strange things were believed by earlier naturalists, which subsequent observation has disproved.

TARDIGRADOUS, a. [tardus and gradus, Lat.] moving slowly.

TARDILY, ad. slowly; lazily; slothfully; sluggishly.

TARDINESS, s. sluggishness; slowness; laziness.

TARDITY, s. [tarditas, from tardus, Lat.] slowness.

TARDY, a. [tardus, Lat. tardif, Fr.] slow, applied to motion; sluggish, or unwilling to act or move; dilatory.

TARE, s. in Botany and Agriculture, a species of vetch largely grown by farmers, as green food for stock. In the New Testament, a rank kind of grass, somewhat resembling wheat before it comes into ear.

TARE, s. [Fr.] in Commerce, the weight of any thing containing a commodity; an allowance made for the weight of the box, chest, &c. in which any commodity is contained.

TARE, preter. of To TAR.

TARGE, TARGET, (g soft) s. [targett, Erse. targa, Sax. terpe, Fr.] a kind of buckler less than a shield, worn for defence on the left arm. In Botany, the name of the covering of the seed-cases in some ferns and lichens.

TARGETIER, a. one armed with a target.

TARGUM, s. [Chald.] the name given to several paraphrastic Chaldee translations of the Old Testament, made after the captivity at Babylon. They are ten in number;—three of which contain the Pentateuch,—the Targum of Onkelos, (which is the most literal, and in the purest Chaldee,) that of the Pseudo-Jonathan, (which is pure in language, but interpolated with absurd legends, beside being far from literal,) and the Jerusalem Targum (which is the worst in every respect);—one contains the Prophets, that of Jonathan Ben Uzziel;—one, that of Rabbi Joseph, the Hagiographa;—one, the Books of Ruth, Esther, Ecclesiastes, Solomon's Song, and the Lamentations;—three, the Book of Esther alone;—and one, the 2 Books of Chronicles. They are of some value in the study of the Hebrew Scriptures, but are of more use in displaying the manners, superstitions, &c. of the Jews, of the age in which they were made.

TARIFF, s. [tarif, Fr.] a table of customs; a table of rates agreed on between princes or states, ascertaining the duties to be laid upon their respective merchandises when imported into their dominions.

TARLETON, RICHARD, a famous jester and comedian of Elizabeth's reign. He wrote a play called The Seven Deadly Sins; and died in 1559. His jests are familiar to all readers of jest books.

TARN, s. [tiorn, Isl.] a bog; a fen; a marsh; a pool; a quagmire.

TARN, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Aveyron, Hérault, Aude, Haute Garonne, and Tarn et Garonne. It is about 65 miles in length, and about 45 in breadth. In one part it is crossed by the Cevennes, and has heights of nearly 2000 feet. The Tarn is its chief river. It yields iron and coal, with valuable kinds of stone and earth. Grain of all kinds, wine, fruits, timber, cattle, &c. &c. are produced in abundance. It has also great numbers of wild animals and game. Manufact-tures of various kinds are carried on in its chief towns. Alby is its capital. Pop. about 400,000.

TARN ET GARONNE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Tarn, Aveyron, Lot et Garonne, Gers, and Haute Garonne. It is above 60 miles long, and about 40 broad. Its surface is level, and its chief rivers are the Garonne, the Tarn, and other streams flowing into the Garonne. Iron, with various kinds of building-stone, &c. are found here, but it is chiefly agricultural, yielding corn and all sorts of farm produce in abundance, with wine, fruits, cattle, &c. &c. Its trade and manufactures are in a tolerably flourishing state. Montauban is its principal town. Pop. about 250,000.

To TARNISH, v. a. [ternir, Fr.] to sully; to soil; to diminish brightness.—v. n. to lose brightness.

TARPAULING, s. a hempen cloth smeared with tar; a sailor, in contempt.

TAREPIAN ROCK, in Roman History, the steep cliff at the end of the Capitoli Mount, next the river, down which criminals were buried. It was named after Tarpia, a girl who was said, in an old legend, to have been a traitor to Rome.

TARQUINIUS, the name of two of the kings of Rome, according to the old legendary ballads. L. Tarquinius Priscus was the successor of Ancus Marcius, and was said to have come from Etruria, with his wife Tanaquil, a famous augress; to have gained the confidence of the king, so far as to be made the guardian of his sons, whom he set aside, and usurped the throne in their stead. He made several successful wars on the surrounding tribes, but was chiefly celebrated for his public buildings, amongst which was the great circus, and the enormous subterranean sewers, which yet remain. He was murdered by the contrivance of the dispossessed sons of the former king, after having reigned 38 years. L. Tarquinius Superbus was his son, and gained the crown by the murder of Servius Tullius, whom Tanaquil had made king. It was he also, who, being married to one of the daughters of Servius, contrived, with the other daughter, who was married to his brother, the murder of his wife and his brother, after which the murderers accomplished an incestuous marriage. His works in the city, and his wars, were all calculated to gain him fame; but his tyranny and treachery raised the whole spirit of the people against him, till at last, the rape of Lucretia by one of his sons, and her suicide, caused a revolution through the exertions of Brutus, who had pretended to be an idiot to escape murder, and who now shone forth as a stern and terrible patriot. He was the last king of Rome in those early days, and he reigned 24 years. The first of these kings was a great promoter of augury; and many strange tales are told tending to confirm the power of the College of Augurs. The whole of the narrative of these reigns bears indisputable signs of mythic origin; and it is now regarded as having no greater foundation in fact, than the History of Prince Arthur and the Knights of his Round Table. Niebuhr and other historians have endeavoured to show what may have been the germs of these ballad histories, or, at least, how they came to be formed and arranged as we have received them.

TARRACE, s. a coarse sort of plaster, or mortar, durable in the wet, and chiefly used to line basins, cisterns, wells, and other reservoirs of water.

TARRAGON, s. in Botany, a plant called also herb-dragon.

TARRAGONA, an ancient sea-port of a province so called in Spain. It was built by the Phœnicians, and was very powerful in the time of the Romans, of whom many monuments remain. There are also relics of the dominion of the Moors here. It carries on a great trade, and is seated on a hill, on the Mediterranean, in a country abounding in corn, wine, oil, and flax. It is 220 miles from Madrid. Lat. 41. 5. N. Long. 1. 13. E.

To TARRIER, s. one who tarries or stays.

To TARRY, v. n. to stay; to continue in a place; to delay, or be long in coming.—v. a. to wait for.

TARSEL, s. in Falconry, a kind of hawk.

TARSHISH, a place often mentioned in the Old Testament, in connexion with maritime trade; supposed to be the name of a region in Spain, in which was a colony from Phœnicia, called Tartessus.

TARTIER, s. in Zoology, an animal of the Lemur kind, with the hind legs very long.

TARBUS, s. [tarso, Gr. tarse, Fr.] in Anatomy, the bones composing the instep and heel in man, to which the bones of the foot are united, and supporting the bones of the leg.

TARBUS, a city of considerable note in Cilicia, Asia Minor. It stood on the Cydnus, was famous for its schools, and was rewarded, during the struggles of the triumvirate of Rome, with the privilege of the freedom of the city. It derives no little of its celebrity from its having been the birth-place of the apostle Paul, in whose life and writings the facts above-mentioned are often alluded to.

TART, s. [tarle, Fr. tarta, Ital. taart, Dan.] a small fruit pie.

TARTAN, s. the plaid worn by Highlanders of Scotland; also, the colours and arrangement of the checked stripes of a plaid.

TARTANE, s. [Fr. tartana, Ital.] a vessel with one mast, and a three-cornered sail, used in the Mediterranean.

TARTAR, s. [tartr, Fr.] in Chemistry, the usual name for the tartare of potash, also called cream of tartar. It is much used in dyeing and makes a pleasant acidulous drink in febrile diseases.

TARTAR EMETIC, in Chemistry and Materia Medica, a compound of tartare of potash and sesquioxide of antimony, much used as an emetic, purgative, sedative, febrifuge, &c.

TARTAREAN, a. [tartarus, Lat.] hellish.

TARTAREOUS, a. consisting of or containing tartar; hellish.

TARTARIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to tartar. Tartaric acid is found in greatest abundance in the juice of the grape, but also occurs in other fruits and vegetables. It is largely used in calico-printing, and in making effervescent draughts for antacid and tonic purposes.

To TARTARIZE, v. a. to impregnate with tartar.

TARTARUS, s. [tartaros, Gr.] in Heathen Mythology, that part of Hades in which the souls of such as were not admitted to the Elysian fields were confined.

TARTARY. See TATARY.

TARTLY, ad. sourly; sharply.

TARTNESS, s. the quality of being sour to the taste; sharpness or poignancy in speech.

TARTRATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with tartaric acid.

TASK, s. [tasche, Fr.] something which is ordered to be done by another; an employment or business. To take to task, is to reprove, examine rigidly, or reprimand.

To TASK, v. a. [tasco, Brit.] to order or command something to be done.

TASKER, s. a one who imposes tasks.

TASMAN, ABEL JANSEN, a Dutch navigator and discoverer, of the 17th century. He was employed by the governor-general of the Dutch colonies in the East, and discovered the island called sometimes after the governor-general, Van Diemen's Land, but now, Tasmania. He made other discoveries in the same regions, but such was the notice taken of this intrepid man, that neither the date of his birth nor of his death have been preserved.

TASMANIA, or VAN DIEMEN'S LAND, a large island, lying immediately S. of the E. extremity of New Holland, and separated from it by Bass's Strait, between the Pacific and Indian Oceans. It is nearly 250 miles long, and in its widest part nearly 200 miles broad. The surface is varied by lofty mountains, some of which exceed 4000 feet in height, hills, tableland, wide plains, and fertile valleys, and is watered by many large rivers. Most of the valuable metals are found here, and building-stone of various kinds, slate, &c. &c. It produces corn, fruits, vegetables, &c., in great abundance, where they have been cultivated by the colonists. Sheep are reared in great numbers, and other kinds of stock thrive admirably. The natural fauna and flora are peculiar, animals of the opossum tribe being numerous, and the ornithorynchus being found here. The surrounding seas are frequented for the whale fishery. Its trade is of course in its infancy, yet the exports increase in value yearly, and the imports keep pace with the increase of the settlers. Hobart Town is the chief town of the colony. It belongs to England, and is partly used as a penal settlement. Pop. about 50,000. The number of the natives, who are closely allied to the natives of New Holland in their race, is yearly decreasing, but it has never been accurately ascertained.

TASSEL, s. [tasce, Fr.] an ornamental bunch of silk, &c. hanging at the end of a string.

T'ASSES, s. armour for the thighs.

TASSIE, JAMES, an ingenious imitator of ancient gems and cameos in enamel, who was a stone mason originally, and studied to become a sculptor, but learning the art by which he afterwards gained both fame and wealth, in Dublin, he came to London, where he pursued his labours with increasing success, till he died in 1799, aged about 65 years.

TASSO, the name of two great poets of Italy. Bernardo Tasso was of good family in Bergamo, but he lived the greater part of his life in other climes, and was at various times in the service of the Prince of Salerno, and the Dukes of Urbino and Mantua. He also visited Africa, Spain, and France, and died in 1569, aged 76 years. His chief poem was on the adventures of Amadis of Gaul. His fame is quite eclipsed by that of his son, Torquato Tasso, who was first put to the study of law at Padua, but soon renounced it for the exercise of his hereditary genius, which early acquired for him considerable reputation. The Cardinal D'Este took him into his service, and by this means he became acquainted with the Princess Leonora, for whom he entertained a passion, which led to his being imprisoned by the Duke of Ferrara, under the pretence of his being insane, and which inspired him in the production of much of the most touching and exquisite parts of his poems. Later authors have showed that Tasso was unbecomingly indiscreet in the manifestation of his regard, that he did act in a very excited and intemperate manner, and that the conduct of the duke was not so entirely cruel to the hapless poet as has been represented; still the stain of having revenged himself for the assumed insult to his pride by the unnecessary exercise of his power, cannot be wholly removed. His great poem had however made him many friends, and acquired for him universal renown: he was released, and honour after honour heaped on him in various towns of Italy, till at last he was invited to be crowned with the laurel wreath in the capitol at Rome. But death intervened; he reached the city, but he never received the crown. He died in 1595, aged 51 years. His immortal poem is entitled Jerusalem Delivered. He wrote many other works.

To TASTE, v. a. [taster, Fr.] to perceive or distinguish by the palate; to try by the mouth; to eat in small quantities; to relish or approve; to feel or have a perception of.—v. n. to try by the palate; to distinguish by the mind; to try the relish of any thing; to have perception of; to enjoy sparingly; to convey to the organs of taste; to affect the organs of taste.

TASTE, s. the act of trying by the mouth; the sense by which the flavour of any thing is received on the palate. Figuratively, an essay or trial; a small portion given as a specimen. In Mental Philosophy, the realization of the idea of beauty, in the fine arts, in literature, in general intercourse with men, dress, &c. &c.; the perception of agreement or disagreement with that idea; perceptive emotion at the perception of elegance, appropriateness, beauty, &c. Diversities of taste, which are sufficiently striking, and universally known, arise from the different degrees of clearness with which the idea of the beautiful has been apprehended; and from the different degrees of cultivation of the faculty of comparison or criticism in the application of it.

T'ASTEFUL, a. high-relished; savoury; with grace or elegance.

T'ASTELESS, a. causing no sensation on the palate; insipid; having no perception of symmetry, elegance, or decorum.

TASTER, s. one who takes the first essay of food.

TATARY, usually spelt Tartary, after the writers of the middle ages, who were shocked at the aspect and barbarity of the Tatars, and condemned them by suggesting some kindred between them and the tenants of the miserable regions of Hades. This name is applied to the vast tracts of Asia which stretch from the Caspian Sea to the Pacific Ocean, and from Asiatic Russia to Persia, India, and China; it is sometimes extended also to that part of European Russia which lies between the Caspian and the Black Seas. Its proper signification would be, that country which is inhabited by an independent Tatar nation. But as ethnographical and geographical knowledge has extended, specific names have been given to the different races, and to the countries they inhabit, which has, properly, caused the vague and incorrect general term to fall into disuse. Little Tatory was that which lay around the N. part of the Black Sea; Great Tatory, that immediately E. of the Caspian; and Chinese Tatory, that on the shores of the Pacific. The whole of this vast region was called Sarmatia and Scythia; and the people have played no inconsiderable part in the world's history; for not only have all the S. countries of Asia, from China to Syria, been conquered repeatedly by Tatar tribes; but the Roman empire was overthrown, and all Europe revolutionized, by the desolating invasion of the innumerable hordes which overran our continent during the 3rd and following centuries of the Christian era. See MANDUCHUS, MONGULS, &c. &c.

TATE, NAHUM, the poet laureate at the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th centuries. He would not have lived in the memories of men, had not the New Version of the Psalms, which he effected in conjunction with Nicholas Brady, been authorized for the use of the Established Church, in the room of Sternhold and Hopkins' quainter and truer version. He died in the Mint, in 1715, aged 63 years. He wrote some other poems beside his Psalter.

T'ATIAN, an ecclesiastical and apologetic writer of the 2nd century. He was a rhetorician, and a disciple of Justin Martyr; but after his master's death, became what was called an heresiarch, and founded the sect of Encratites. He wrote an Apology for Christianity, a Harmony of the Gospels, and some other works; and flourished in about 170 A. D.

To TATTER, v. a. [tolaran, Sax.] to tear; to rend; to make ragged.

TATTER, s. a rag; a fragment of any thing torn.

TATTERDEMA'LION, s. a ragged fellow.

To TATTLE, v. n. [tateren, Sax.] to use many words with little meaning; to talk without moderation or discretion.

TATTLE, s. prate; trifling talk; idle chat.

TATTLEER, s. an idle talker; a prater.

TATTOO, s. the beat of a drum by which soldiers are called to their quarters.

TATTOOING, s. the custom of tracing permanent designs and figures on the skin of various parts of the body, which has prevailed amongst all nations in the barbarous state. It is still found amongst the islanders of the Pacific Ocean, &c.

TAVERN, s. [taverne, Fr.] a house where wine is sold.

TAVERNIER, JEAN BAPTISTE, a celebrated French traveller, in the 17th century. Having made journeys throughout most of Europe, his love of travel led him to visit the East, by Turkey, Persia, &c., no fewer than six times. In the course of his wanderings he met with manifold adventures, which it is impossible to relate here; his own work being alone sufficient for it. He died at Moscow in 1689, aged 84 years; and his account of his journeyings is voluminous and interesting.

TAUGHT, (taut) preter. and past part. of TEACH.

TA'VISTOCK, Devonshire. It was once a flourishing place, famous for its abbey; and is now a stannary town, and has a chalybeate mineral water. It is situated on the river Tavy, or Tave, 199 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 6272.

TAULER, JOHANN, a celebrated divine of Germany, in the 14th century. He was a Dominican, and a popular preacher at Cologne and Strasburg, at the latter of which places he died in 1360, aged 66 years. His works consist of Sermons; and various treatises, entitled, Imitation of Christ, the Noble Little Book, the Soul-enlightening Mirror, &c. Luther and Melancthon, by their frequent reference to his writings, and fervent admiration of his piety, have contributed not a little to his fame.

To TAUNT, v. a. [tanden, Belg.] to reproach, insult, or treat with insolent contumely and upbraiding; to exprobrate.

TAUNT, s. an insult; scold; ridicule; sarcasm; reproach. Among mariners, a ship is said to be taunt musted when her masts are too tall for her.

TAUNTER, s. a reproacher; an insulter.

TAUNTING, a. reviling; scornful; railing; contumelious; scoffing.

TAUNTINGLY, ad. scornfully; in an imperious and proud manner; scoffingly; contumeliously.

TAUNTON, Somersetshire. It has long been the principal seat of the manufacture of coarse woollen goods, such as serges, corduroys, sagathies, druggets, shalloons, &c., though somewhat decayed of late years. It is seated on the river Thone, which is navigable hence to the Parret, and so to Bridgewater; 144 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 12,066.

TAURICORNOUS, a. [taurus and cornu, Lat.] having horns resembling a bull's.

TAURIDA, a government of Russia, lying on the Black Sea, and bounded by the government of Cherson, and the country of the Don Cossacks. It consists of the peninsula of the Crimea, and the plains around its isthmus. (See CRIMEA.) It is almost wholly agricultural. Pop. about 550,000.

TAUIFORM, a. [tauriformis, Lat.] having the shape of a hump.

TAURIS. See TABRIZ.

TAURUS, the great chain of mountains in Asia Minor, extending from the coast of the Ægean Sea to the N. of Persia, and evidently connected with the Himalayan range.

TAURUS, s. in Astronomy, the Bull; the second sign of the zodiac, which the sun enters on the 20th day of April. The Pleiades are in this constellation.

TAUTOLOGICAL, a. [tautologique, Fr.] repeating the same thing.

TAUTOLOGIST, s. [from to, autos, and lego, Gr.] a tedious repeater.

TAUTOLOGY, s. the repetition of the same word often; the repetition of the same sense in different words.

TO TAW, v. a. [tawian, Sax.] to dress white or alum leather.

TAW, s. a marble, used by boys in play.

TAWDRINESS, s. tinsel finery.

TAWDRY, a. meanly showy; fine without grace or elegance. — s. a slight ornament.

TAWNINESS, s. a brown or yellowish colour, caused by the heat of the sun.

TAWNY, a. [tané or tanné, Fr.] yellow like things tanned; sunburnt; swarthy-coloured.

TAX, s. [taxe, Belg. and Fr.] in Political Economy, money raised in various ways to defray the expenses of government. Direct taxes are those raised on realized property. Indirect taxes are such as come at last to be paid, for the most part, by the labouring classes. Assessed taxes are seemingly direct, but all the objections to indirect taxes apply to them.—[tazo, Lat.] a charge or censure.

TO TAX, v. a. [taxer, Fr.] to load with excise or imposts.—[tazo, Lat.] to charge or accuse of some fault, used with of or with before the fault.

TAXATION, s. [taxation, Fr. taxatio, Lat.] the act of loading with taxes; accusation; scandal. In England, the chief part of the revenue arises from excise and customs; which are charged most heavily on the necessities of life, and not only seriously interfere with trade and manufactures, but also impose the heaviest part of the burden on those who are least able to pay.

The land tax, property tax, and legacy duty are almost the only charges on realized property; and when the property tax is compared with the income tax, and the scale of legacy duties is examined only cursorily, it will be seen that it is only in the gentlest way that property has been called upon to pay for that protection, which, according to its possessors, is one of the first ends of government. The effects of the reduction of the rates of postage, and of the late alterations in the tariff, and in the excise laws, have satisfactorily proved the expediency (when the common good of the nation is regarded) of removing all indirect taxes; whilst a glance will show that as a matter of right, property which is, and not property which is becoming, or labour and skill, which are in merely individual qualities, should be charged for the support of government. Of the purposes to which revenue, however raised, ought to be applied it is impossible to speak here. Though it must be seen that it is not right to make the nation pay for that which is of no service to it, nor yet to throw upon coming ages a burden of taxation, which the present age would wisely refuse to bear.

TAXER, s. he who taxes.

TAYLOR, BROOK, an eminent English mathematician, son of one of the stoutest of the Puritans of the 17th century. He studied at Cambridge, and forsook the path in which his father had so sternly walked, for the sequestered shade of the Muse Urania. His friendships and pursuits were not productive of a good family understanding, nor do they show on his part any appreciation of better than mathematical truth; yet there are indications of the Puritan leaven even in him, such as might make him of no small interest to a Puritan historian. He died in 1731, aged 46 years. His works are on the abstruser parts of mathematical science, and in spite of temporary neglect, his name stands eminent amongst the great mathematicians, in connexion with a theorem, which is of the greatest service, but which, unhappily, cannot be made popular.

TAYLOR, JANE, one of the Ongar family, distinguished for the part they have taken in the best service to their kind. It belongs to but few, to be able to utter the thoughts of children so that children should themselves recognise them, and yet be helped on to higher thoughts. The Nursery Rhymes, Original Poems, and Hymns for Infant Minds, in good part written by this lady, have evinced this rare gift. Her other writings are miscellaneous essays of a somewhat higher scope. She died in 1823, aged 40 years.

TAYLOR, DR. JEREMY, the great preacher of the 17th century, a prelate of the Irish Church, and an eminent theological writer. He was of humble birth, though one of his forefathers was Rowland Taylor, the martyr of Hadeleigh; and he studied at Cambridge as a sizar. Laud was attracted by the early dawn of his splendid and devout oratory; and by him he was brought forward, so that he appears during the civil wars as one of the king's chaplains. On the defeat of his cause, Taylor had to endure his share of trial, and he seems to have borne it manfully. The Restoration raised him at one step to the see of Down and Connor, and other honours attended it, but he did not long enjoy them. He died in 1607, aged 55 years. His writings are very numerous, but his celebrity rests mainly on his sermons, which are ranked by his admirers amongst the most wonderful efforts of oratorical power. In his theological works, he shows most plainly that he belonged to the school of Laud; devout, yet formal; an Arminian, or more; fond of assuming the direction of conscience and conduct, and able to do it, yet not without enfeebling the soul he guided. In all his works his wonderful poetry shines forth, and gives an unspeakable charm even to that which reason rejects: even in his inconsistency, for he was placed at one time in the position of a dissident, and had to plead for liberty of conscience, he is charming. But his logic is less powerful than his poetry; he would persuade, if he could but convince. South's fierce attacks on his style are well known, but have not availed to reverse the judgment passed on him in his own day. His Holy Living and Dying are, perhaps, of all his writings, the best known and most practically useful, although marked by all the peculiarities of his school.

TAYLOR, JOHN, the scater poet, a waterman of the Thames, of staunch loyalty during the Puritan revolution, who was afterwards a tavern-keeper; whose poems and quaint jests made him famous in his day, and have kept his name alive to this time though themselves are forgotten. He died in 1654, aged 74 years.

TAYLOR, JOHN, a learned Unitarian divine of the last century, who was educated at Whitehaven, and became minister at Norwich, but afterwards took the office of divinity tutor at the Academy at Warrington, and died in 1761, aged 67 years. His writings were chiefly in defence of the dogmas of his denomination, but his Hebrew Concordance remained, till lately, the only book of the kind, and was proportionately valuable.

TAYLOR, DR. JOHN, an eminent scholar and civilian, of the last century, who rose from the humblest circumstances, studied at Cambridge, and afterwards became a member of Doctors' Commons, and chancellor of Lincoln. He published editions of Greek orators, and several works on legal science. At length he entered the Church of England as a clergyman, and held valuable preferments. He died in 1766, aged 63 years. His learning was almost wholly of a legal cast, and his writings are valuable in that respect.

TAYLOR, THOMAS, the English Platonist, received only an ordinary school education, and was at first a banker's clerk; but he gained attention and friends subsequently by his earnest zeal for the study of the Platonic philosophy, and by his lectures, his writings, a secretaryship to the Society of Arts, and a pension from an admirer, he was enabled to live in undivided attention to his favourite subject. He died in 1835, aged 77 years. His translations from the Greek are very numerous, and all betray the entireness of his devotion to his study; but recent scholars have not found his learning of sufficient width or depth for the work of expounding Plato, whilst it was most evident that his whole genius was alien to the spirit of academic philosophy. Students may find much that is useful in the Essays and Notes of Taylor, who gathered from all sources what he deemed illustrative of his author, or his theme.

TAYLOR, DR. ROWLAND, one of the martyrs of the Marian persecution, in the 16th century. He was the pious and learned rector of Hadleigh, Suffolk, and was put to death near that town by Bonner's orders, in 1555. A tasteless monument stands on the spot where he was burnt; at the foot of which a small stone, rudely carved, in a quaint rhyme, tells of his death, and why he suffered. His simple piety, which all accounts of his martyrdom testify to, will well account for the deep impression he seems to have produced in his ministry, and his death.

TAYLOR, WILLIAM, one of the first thorough German scholars of England, was a merchant of Norwich, who afterwards devoted himself to literature, edited an unsuccessful newspaper, wrote reviews for the predecessors of our own literary journals, translated German poems with great grace and spirit, and wrote poems of his own, some of which are not mean. His correspondents included Southey, and many of our first writers. His latter life was a falling off from that which has gained him a name, and he died in 1836, aged 71 years. His taste must not be judged by the large proportion of space which he has devoted to the admiration of Kotzebue, nor must his judgment be measured by the astounding conjectures in biblical criticism and theology which he hazarded in his reviews. The recklessness, however, with which he cast forth every vagabond surmise respecting the age and the author of the books of Scripture, (which seem to have been wafted into the too ready soil of Germany, and to have been the ground of much of the theological nonsense that has been learnedly discussed there,) will afford us a somewhat unfavourable, yet faithful measure of the man.

TCHAD, LAKE, a large lake in the interior of Africa, from which a river flows which joins the Quorra, at a great distance from the ocean.

TCHERNIGOV, or CZERNIGOV, a government of Russia, surrounded by Moghilev, Novgorod Sieversk, Charkov, Putawa, Kiev, and Minsk. Its chief river is the Desna. Tchernigov, its capital, stands on that river. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 51. 25. N. Long. 31. 20. E. Pop. of government, about 1,250,000.

TEA, (tee) s. [Chin. thé, Fr.] in Botany and Commerce, a genus of plants growing in India beyond the Ganges, from the dried leaves of which a very pleasant infusion is made, that is used almost universally as a beverage for the evening meal, called from that circumstance, tea. The real difference between black and green teas is unknown. Tea is largely adulterated in China, and the common sorts, sold in England, hardly deserve the name of tea at all. Any infusion or decoction of any herb is commonly called tea.

To TEACH, (teach) v. a. pret. and past part. taught; [teacan, Sax.] to instruct or inform; to deliver any thing to be learned; to tell, or give intelligence.—v. n. to perform the office of an instructor.

TEACHABLE, (teachable) a. capable of being taught or instructed; docile.

TEACHABLENESS, s. docility; capacity to learn.

TEACHER, s. an instructor; a preceptor; one who delivers doctrines to the people; a preacher.

TEAGUE, (Tig) s. a contemptuous name for an Irishman.

TEAK, v. in Botany, a large kind of tree, found in India, whose timber is used extensively in shipbuilding, and is almost as good as our oak timber for that purpose.

TEAL, (teal) s. [teeling, Belg.] in Zoology, a small wild fowl of the duck kind.

TEAM, (team) s. [temo, Lat. tyme, Sax.] a number of horses, oxen, or other beasts, drawing the same carriage at once; any number passing in a line.

TEAR, (tear) s. [Sax. taere, Dan.] the water which flows from the eyes; any moisture trickling in drops.

TEAR, (tere) s. [from the verb,] a rent or fissure.

To TEAR, (tere) v. a. preter. tore, formerly tare, past part. torn; [teran, Sax. tara, Swed.] to pull into pieces or tatters; to wound with the nail, or any sharp-pointed instrument drawn along; to break, divide, or shatter, by violence; to pluck violently; to take away by sudden force.—v. n. [tieren, Belg.] to fume, rave, or rant, like a madman.

To TEASE, (teeze) v. a. [tesan, Sax.] to comb or unravel wool or flax; to scratch cloth to level the nap; to torment or vex with assiduous impertinence.

TEASER, s. any person or thing that torments by incessant importunity.

TEAT, (teet) s. [telon, Fr. teth, Brit. til, Sax. tette, Belg.] in Anatomy, the organ in female animals in which their milk is secreted.

TE/AZEL, TE/ASEL, s. in Botany, a plant cultivated particularly in the W. of England, the heads of which are used in raising the nap upon woollen cloth. The leaves dried and given in infusion are used in cases of flatulency.

TE/CHINICAL, (tékhnikal) a. [teckne, Gr.] belonging to the arts; peculiar to any art.

TECHNOLOGY, (teknology) s. [teckne and logos, Gr.] a description of the mechanic arts.

TECTONIC, a. [tektonikos, Gr.] belonging to building.

To TED, v. a. [teadan, Sax.] to lay grass newly mown into rows.

TE/DDR, TE/ETHER, s. [tudder, Belg.] a rope by which a horse is tied in the field to prevent his pasturing too widely. Figuratively, any thing by which a person is restrained.

TE DEUM, s. [Lat.] an ancient hymn, attributed to St. Augustine and to St. Ambrose, used in the daily service of the Churches of Rome and England.

TE/DIOUS, a. [tedium, Lat.] occasioning weariness and trouble by continuance or length; slow, dilatory.

TE/DIOUSLY, ad. in a slow and irksome manner.

TE/DIOUSNESS, s. that which renders any thing disagreeable by the too long time spent in performing it.

To TEEM, v. n. [team, Sax.] to bring young; to be pregnant. Figuratively, to be full or charged with, like an animal that is pregnant.—v. a. to bring forth or produce.

TEEMER, s. one that brings young.

TEEMING, part. a. fruitful; pregnant.

TEEN, s. sorrow; grief.

TEENS, s. [syn. Sax.] the years which are reckoned by the termination of teen; as thirteen, fourteen, &c.

TETH, the plural of TOOTH.

To TEETH, v. n. to breed teeth.

TEFLIS, or TIFLIS, the capital of Georgia, in Asiatic Russia. It stands on the river Kur, at the foot of a mountain; and is built of stone, with very narrow streets. It has several churches, and some fine buildings for government purposes, with a citadel and other fortifications. It is a place of considerable trade, being an emporium between Asia and Europe. Near it are some celebrated warm springs, whence the original name of the city is derived. Many branches of textile manufactures are carried on here. Pop. about 50,000. Lat. 41. 40. N. Long. 45. 18. E.

TE/GUMENT, s. [tegumentum, Lat.] a cover or outward part.

To TEH-HE, v. n. [from the sound,] to laugh; to titter.

TE/GNMOUTH, Devonshire, reckoned part of the port of Exeter. Its coasting trade is considerable. It has a tide harbour, and is seated at the mouth of the Teign, 181 miles from London. It has a fair on September 29th. Pop. 4459.

TEIL-TREE, s. in Botany, a name of the lime or linden tree.

TEINT, (teint) s. [teinte, Fr.] colour; touch of the pencil.

TE/LAMON, or A/TLAS, s. in Architecture, a name of figures or half figures of men, used instead of columns or pilasters.

TE/LARY, a. [tele, Lat.] spinning webs.

TE/LEGRAPH, s. [tele and grapho, Gr.] a machine used for conveying information, by means of concerted signals, to a distance, with greater rapidity than is otherwise possible. Various forms and codes of signals were employed, and the machines were erected on the loftiest eminences along the directest line between the two extremities. All these contrivances, which were useless in foggy weather, have been superseded by the Electric Telegraph, which is now brought into use along all the principal railway lines, and is reckoned one of the greatest inventions of late years. Galvanic batteries are employed in generating a current of electricity, which is conveyed along wires carried on posts or through tubes to the station to which information is to be sent, the earth itself completing the circuit. The means by which the intelligence is communicated, is a set of magnetic needles, so fitted up, that by their deflexions they point to letters ranged in circles round them, or else signify various letters by the extent, direction, and frequency of the deflexion. These needles are fitted up in a frame at each principal station, and when the batteries are in action, after calling attention to the message by an apparatus which rings a small bell, the telegraphic clerk spells each word of it distinctly at his own frame, and the needles at the other end move in exact agreement with those which he works. The inconceivable rapidity of the electric current, makes the delivery of the message along any extent of railroad, that is yet supplied with it, almost instantaneous. And numberless cases have occurred already, showing the variety of valuable purposes to which this rapid communication of intelligence is applicable. In London, all the lines of telegraph communicate with a central office, from which messages are sent to all parts of the kingdom. One of the most important recent improvements on the electric telegraph, is an apparatus which prints off the message as it is forwarded, thus insuring the entire absence of mistakes in receiving it. In Great Britain and Ireland, there are above 2000 miles of railroad furnished with telegraphic wires, and in the United States about 4000.

To TELEGRAPH, v. a. to communicate by a telegraph.
TELEGRAPHIC, a. communicated by, or belonging to, a telegraph.

TELESCOPE, s. [Fr. from tele and skopeo, Gr.] in Optics, an instrument by which distant objects are so magnified, that they appear to be brought nearer to the observer, or to be made more distinct. Refracting Telescopes are composed of lenses alone, which are fitted in tubes so arranged that the focus can be altered according to the distance of the object. Reflecting Telescopes are furnished with one or more mirrors, and are chiefly used for astronomical observations. In the Gregorian reflector, the rays are caught first by a concave mirror, and by it reflected to a smaller concave mirror, placed near the object end of the tube; by which they are again reflected to the observer, who looks by an eye-piece, having two plano-convex lenses, through a circular aperture in the centre of the principal mirror. It is adjusted by a screw which moves the smaller mirror nearer to or further from the larger one. But as in these complicated instruments the chances of distortion, &c. are much increased, astronomers have lately devoted themselves to the perfection of instruments having but one mirror, the eye-glass to which is placed at the end of the tube next the object, so the observer is placed with his back to the object. It was on this plan that Sir W. Herschel constructed his great tubes, by which those astonishing discoveries were made that have immortalized his name. And it is on this plan, also, that Lord Rosse has constructed the immense instrument, which he has lately set up at his seat near Parson's Town, Ireland, the mirror of which is six feet in diameter; by which, already, discoveries have been made that are far more brilliant than any preceding telescopic discoveries, respecting the nature of nebulae;—the power of which may be imagined from the fact, that any object of 100 yards in length on the surface of the moon would be made distinctly visible by it.

TELESCOPICAL, a. belonging to a telescope; seeing at a distance.

TELFORD, THOMAS, an eminent civil engineer, who rose from the humble position of a shepherd lad in Eskdale to the summit of his profession. He was always studious; and when a youth, was bound to a country mason, under whom he seems to have acquired a good knowledge of all the rudiments of building. When he commenced business in London, when he was only 25 years old, he commanded the attention of such as were able to appreciate original genius, and rapidly rose to the eminent rank he ever after held. In bridge-building he was particularly skilful, and the suspension-bridge across the Menai Straits may be regarded as the triumph of his art. His canals are distinguished by the same signs of daring ability; and the Caledonian and Ellesmere canals are studies for such as cultivate this department of applied science. He was not a man of one pursuit, but with the greatest diligence studied and acquired almost all branches of liberal education; and he died in 1834, aged 77 years. He amused himself at various periods of his life with light compositions; but his drawings, and the great works they were constructed for, are the foundations of his lasting fame.

TELL, WILLIAM, the great Swiss patriot, of the beginning of the 14th century. He was a cottager of the neighbourhood of Altorf, who, roused to indignation by the cruelties practised by the Austrian governor, joined with several other patriots of the forest cantons in planning the overthrow of the imperial rule. His refusing to do homage to the emperor's hat, which the governor had set up on a pole, caused him to be seized, and sentenced (as a fitting punishment to so famous an archer as he was) to shoot at an apple placed on the head of his son, who happened to be with him. Tell shot successfully, but was not released; he soon, however, (being unfettered during a storm on the lake they were carrying him over, to aid by his well-known boat-craft), obtained his freedom, and slew the governor with another arrow from his redoubtable bow. This led to the outbreak of the war of liberation, in which he took part, and died in about 1350.

To TELL, v. a. preter. and past part. told; [tellan, Sax. tellen, Belg. talen, Dan.] to utter or express by words; to relate or speak; to teach or inform; to discover; to count or number; to make excuses.—u. n. to give an account; to make report. To tell on, is to inform of.

TELLER, s. an officer in the Exchequer employed in receiving and paying all the monies on the king's account; a later; a numberer.

TELL-TALE, s. one who gives information of what another says or does, either through officiousness or malice.

TELLURIUM, s. in Chemistry, a metal of a silvery white colour, brittle, and inflammable in the atmosphere on the application of intense heat.

TEMERARIOUS, a. [ténéraire, Fr. temerarius, Lat.] rash; heady; careless; heedless.

TEMERITY, s. [témérité, Fr. temeritas, Lat.] unreasonable contempt of danger; rashness.

TEMESVÁR, a. city of Hungary, Austria, standing on the rivers Temes and Bega, and strongly fortified. It has some fine public buildings, and private houses of rich and noble inhabitants; and its fortifications are constructed in the most scientific manner. It has a few manufactures, and a considerable trade. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 45. 44. N. Long. 21. 2. E.

To TEMPER, v. a. [tempérer, Fr. tempero, Lat.] to mix so as one part may qualify or set the other out to advantage; to mix or mingle; to accommodate; to soften, soothe, or assuage; to form or reduce metals to a proper degree of hardness.

TEMPER, s. a due and just mixture of contrary qualities; the middle course; disposition of mind; constitution of body; calmness; the state of hardness to which any metal is reduced.

TEMPERAMENT, s. [Fr. temperamentum, Lat.] state with respect to the predominance of any quality; due mixture of opposites; the habitude or natural constitution of the body, especially in reference to the predominance of the nervous, the alimentary, the sanguineous, or the lymphatic system. In Music, the distribution, through the various scales of an instrument, of those variations from the musical standard, which are inseparable from its peculiar construction; so that the greatest defects in tune may occur in those keys which are least frequently employed.

TEMPERAMENTAL, a. constitutional.

TEMPERANCE, s. [Fr. temperantia, Lat.] moderation in eating and drinking; restraint of affections or passions; patience.

TEMPERATE, a. [temperatus, Lat.] abstaining from excess in eating or drinking; moderate in degree of any quality or passion.

TEMPERATELY, ad. moderately; calmly; without gluttony or luxury.

TEMPERATENESS, s. freedom from excesses; calmness; coolness; moderateness.

TEMPERATURE, s. [Fr. from temperatura, Lat.] constitution of nature; degree of any qualities; due balance of contraries; freedom from any predominant passion; the degree of heat diffused through the atmosphere, &c. &c.

TEMPEST, s. [tempestas, Lat.] very great violence of wind; a continual storm at sea; any violent commotion.

To TEMPEST, v. a. to disturb as by a tempest.

TEMPESTIVITY, s. [tempestivitas, from tempus, Lat.] seasonableness.

TEMPESTUOUS, a. [tempestuosus, Fr.] stormy; disturbed by furious blasts of wind, or violent rage of passions; turbulent.

TEMPESTUOUSLY, ad. furiously; outrageously; boisterously.

TEMPESTUOUSNESS, s. storminess; outrageousness; boisterousness.

TEMPPLAR, s. a student in the law. Also, in Ecclesiastical History, an order of knights, instituted at Jerusalem about the year 1118; who took the name of Knights Templars, because their first house stood near the temple at Jerusalem. After having performed many great exploits in the East, they became rich and powerful all over Europe; but abusing their wealth and credit, fell into such disorders and irregularities, that they were prosecuted in France, Italy, and Spain; and at last, in 1312, suppressed by the papal authority.

TEMPLE, s. [Fr. temple, Lat.] in Architecture, a building erected especially for the purposes of public worship. It is applied to buildings for Christian worship only in a figurative way. The Temple at Jerusalem differed from the temples of other nations, not only in its plan and architecture, but also in its use; it being, in fact, the palace of Jehovah, the King of the Israelitish people. The remains of many Grecian and Roman temples have enabled architects to reconstruct or restore the ideal building; and it is evident that it was peculiarly adapted to the character of the worship and to the dogmas of the religion; and that it is as completely unsuited to be erected for Christian worship, or to form part of a Christian church or cathedral, as the Gothic church or cathedral, with its aisles and transepts, choir and nave, porches and spire, is unfitted for the purposes of a congregational house of prayer and public Christian instruction.

TEMPLE, SIR WILLIAM, an eminent English statesman of the 17th century. He studied at Cambridge, and travelled on the continent during the troubles of the Puritan revolution. At the Restoration he entered parliament, and was soon employed by Lord Arlington in secret diplomatic missions. His first great achievement in this department of statecraft was the triple alliance of England, Sweden, and Holland, which had so considerable an effect on the movements of the times. He was ambassador in France and Holland for some time afterwards, and was then dismissed. In private life, he occupied himself with his writings, which we undoubtedly owe to his enforced retirement. He was again, however, called into the foreign service of the king; and from that he returned to aid him by his advice, without holding any specific office in the government; the chief fruit of which was one of those schemes of a council which was a step towards the present system of a privy council, a ministry, and a cabinet. After another period of literary privacy, he died in 1699, aged 71 years. The business on which Temple was engaged in most of his missions was not of a kind to call forth the exercise of the greatest diplomatic talent; nor was the necessity of any of the courts of his times, the highest kind of statesmanship; so that we cannot conclude that Sir William was truly eminent, because eminent in the affairs and amongst the men of his age. But we owe him a literary service of greater value than all he did in the more ambitious part of statesman. His writings are amongst the first that exhibit a truly polished prose style, and undoubtedly brought in the "Augustan age" of English literature which immediately followed.

TEMPLES, s. [tempora, Lat.] in Anatomy, that part of the head lying between the forehead and the ear.

TEMPLET, s. a piece of timber placed under the girders of a building.

TEMPORAL, a. [Fr. temporalis, from tempus, Lat.] measured by time, opposed to eternal; secular, opposed to ecclesiastical; confined to our present existence in this world, opposed to spiritual; placed at the temples, or upper part of the head.

TEMPORALITY, TEMPORALS, s. in the Churches of Rome, England, &c., the laity, opposed to the clergy; secular possessions, opposed to those belonging to the church.

TEMPORALLY, ad. with respect to this life.

TEMPORARILY, a. [tempus, Lat.] lasting only a limited time.

To TEMPORIZE, v. n. [temporiser, Fr.] to delay, or put off to another time.

TEMPORIZER, s. one that complies with times and occasions; a trimmer.

To TEMPT, v. a. [tento, Lat. tenter, Fr.] to endeavour to seduce or draw a person to do ill, by presenting some pleasure to the mind; to provoke; to solicit; to try.

TEMPTATION, s. [tentation, Fr.] the act of endeavouring to draw to the commission of ill, by offering some seeming advantage; an enticement; the state of a person solicited by the appearance of present pleasures or advantages to the commission of some crime or fault.

TEMPTER, s. one who seduces or entices to the commission of any ill.

TEMULENCY, s. [temulentia, Lat.] inebriation; drunkenness.

TEN, a. [tyñ, Sax. tiē, Belg.] twice five, or nine and one.

TENABLE, a. [Fr.] such as may be maintained or held against oppositions or attacks.

TENACIOUS, (tendashious) a. [tenax, from teneo, Lat.] grasping hard; unwilling to part with; retentive, or not forgetful, applied to the memory; cohesive; adhesive; close-fisted; meanly parsimonious.

TENACIOUSLY, (tendashiously) ad. closely; obstinately; nigardly.

TENACIOUSNESS, (tendashiousness) s. unwillingness to quit, let go, or part with.

TENACITY, s. [tenacité, Fr. tenacitas, Lat.] stiffness of opinion; nigardliness; viscosity.

TENAILLE, s. [Fr.] in Fortification, is a kind of outwork resembling a horn-work, but generally somewhat different.

TENANCY, s. the state of being a tenant, either of houses or land.

TENANT, s. [Fr.] one that holds of another; one that hires a house or land of another; one who resides.

TENANTABLE, a. fit to be dwelt in.

TENANT-AT-WILL, s. is one who holds his land from year to year at the will of the landlord, and who is liable to be ejected, at half a year's notice, if he ever makes himself disagreeable to the landlord.

TENANT-RIGHT, s. the claim which an agricultural tenant has to be unmolested in the exercise of his political privileges, to be unfettered in the employment of his farming skill, to be secured in the investment of his capital; and which can be secured by leases and open covenants. It is also employed to signify the reimbursement of an outgoing tenant for capital expended in judicious improvements, according to an agreed valuation.

TENASSERIM, a country of ultra-Gangetic India, lying on the Gulf of Martaban, and bounded by the Birman empire and Siam. In the interior is a range of lofty mountains, some peaks of which exceed 5000 feet; and it is watered by many considerable streams, the chief of which gives its name to the whole tract. It is rich in metals and all sorts of mineral wealth; and its vegetable products, which include all those customary in tropical Asia, are abundant, from the fertility of the soil, and the favourable character of the climate. It belongs to the British, and is included in the government of Penang. Pop. about 125,000. Tenasserim, one of its chief towns, stands in Lat. 12. 0. N. Long. 90. 0. E.

TENCH, s. [tince, Sax. tinca, Lat.] in Ichthyology, a freshwater fish, reckoned delicate eating.

To TEND, v. a. [contracted from tendē,] to watch; to accompany, guard, attend; to be attentive to.—n. to wait or expect; to move towards a certain point or place; to contribute; to be directed to any end or purpose.—[tendre, Fr.] to aim at; to attend as something inseparable.

TENDENCY, s. direction or course towards any place or object; drift or aim towards any inference or result.

TENDER, a. [tendre, Fr.] easily impressed, injured, or pained; delicate or effeminate; exciting benevolence or sympathy; compassionate; susceptible of soft passions; amorous; expressive of love; young; careful not to hurt.

To TENDER, v. a. [tendre, Fr.] to offer, or present for acceptance; to hold or esteem.

TENDER, s. an offer or presentation of anything for acceptance; regard, or kind concern; a small ship attending on a larger.

TENDER-HEARTED, a. easily affected with the distress of others.

TENDERLY, ad. gently; softly; kindly; in an affectionate and delicate manner.

TENDERNESS, s. [tendresse, Fr.] susceptibility of impressions; softness; delicacy; indulgence; kindness; scrupulousness of conscience; susceptibility of the softer passions; easiness of being hurt; soreness.

TENDINOUS, a. [tendineux, Fr.] full of tendons; sinewy.

TENDON, s. [tendo, Lat.] in Anatomy, a sinew; a ligature by which the muscles are attached.

TENDRIL, s. [tendrillon, Fr.] in Botany, an organ by which some kinds of climbing plants attach themselves to the plants, &c. they grow upon: those of the vine are known to all.

TENEBRE, TENEBRES, a. a service in the Romish Church, on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday before Easter, in commemoration of Christ's agony in the garden.

TENEBROSITY, s. [tenebrosus, from tenebræ, Lat.] obscurity; darkness; gloom.

TENEBOUS, a. dark ; obscure ; gloomy.

TENEDOS, a small island of the Ægean Sea, near the Dardanelles. It is often mentioned in ancient history, but is now of little importance. It has a good harbour and a fortified town, and corn and wine are its chief products. Pop. about 4000. Lat. 39. 50. N. Long. 26. 8. E.

TENEMENT, s. [Fr.] properly signifies a house ; but in a larger sense it is taken for any house, lands, rent, or other thing which a person holds of another.

TENERIFE, one of the Canary Islands, in Africa, about 45 miles long, and 20 broad. It is a volcanic island, with several craters, which are occasionally active ; and abounds in wine, different sorts of fruits, cattle, and game. The air and climate are healthful. The loftiest point is called the Peak of Tenerife, or of Teide, which is the summit of the principal volcano of the island, and is about 12,000 feet above the level of the sea. The trade of the place is considerable, and is chiefly carried on with England, although it belongs to Spain. The principal town is Laguna. Pop. above 100,000.

TENET, s. [Lat.] an opinion, position, principle, dogma, doctrine.

TENFOLD, a. ten times increased.

TENIERS, DAVID, the name of two celebrated Flemish painters. The elder studied under Rubens, and afterwards visited Rome. He excelled in his pictures of country fairs, sports, and revels, although the grossness of the original scenes is usually only too faithfully represented. The chief beauties of his pieces, which are small in size, are the composition and the colouring. He died in 1649, aged 67 years. His son, the younger Teniers, studied under his father, and enjoyed the patronage of some of the most eminent sovereigns and princes of the day. He followed in his father's steps, but was also famous as a copier and imitator of other artists of celebrity. He died in 1694, aged 84 years.

TENISON, DR. THOMAS, an eminent prelate of the English Church, in the 17th century, who studied at Cambridge, and maintained his episcopacy during the ascendancy of the Puritans, and was patronized by Charles II. and by William III., who advanced him to the see of Canterbury. He died in 1715, aged 79 years. His name is not preserved by his writings, or by his partisanship, but by his zeal in his profession, and by the care with which he sought to advance learning, and aid study, by founding schools and libraries.

TENNANT, SMITHSON, an eminent English chemist, who studied at Edinburgh and Cambridge, and afterwards travelled in N. Europe and France, to advance his skill in his favourite science. He was at length chosen chemical professor at Cambridge ; and, in 1815, was killed by falling, with his horse, into the ditch of a fort, near Boulogne, aged 44 years. He discovered two new metals, ascertained the nature of emery, and in various other ways contributed to the advance of science. His writings were all contributed to the Transactions of scientific societies.

TENNESSEE, one of the United States, N. America, bounded by Kentucky, N. Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, and Missouri. It is about 400 miles long, and in mean breadth 114 miles. The E. part is mountainous, but few heights exceed 1000 feet ; the W. part is level. Its rivers are the Tennessee, which flows into the Ohio, the Mississippi, Cumberland river, &c. &c. Lead and silver are found here, and limestone and gypsum are abundant. Grain of all kinds, fruits, medicinal plants, and especially cotton and tobacco, are cultivated, and timber of the most valuable kinds is produced. The manufactures of this State are constantly increasing in importance, and its trade is considerable. It is divided into 72 counties, and has one bank, and six colleges. Nashville is the seat of government, and is also the most commercial place in the State. Pop. 829,210, of whom 183,059 are slaves.

TENNIS, s. [Fr.] a play in which a ball is struck by a racket.

TENON, s. [Fr.] the end of one piece of timber cut to be fitted in another.

TENOR, s. [Lat. tenuor, Fr.] continuity of state ; general currency ; sense contained, or the general course and drift of a discourse. In Music, the mean or middle part, between the treble and the bass. In Law, the substance, or true intent and meaning, of a writing.

TENSE, a. [tensus, Lat.] stretched ; not lax.

TENSE, (TIME) s. [tempus, Fr. tempus, Lat.] in Grammar, is an inflexion of verbs whereby they express the time at which an action took place. There are three primary divisions of time under which an action may happen, present, past, and future ; and each of these admits of three subdivisions, according as the action is spoken of indefinitely in respect of the time, or as in process of being performed, or as being completed ; so that the following may be given as the natural arrangement of the simple tenses of all languages :

	PAST.	PRESENT.	FUTURE.
Indefinite,	I said,	I say,	I shall say,
Incomplete,	I was saying,	I am saying,	I shall be saying.
Complete,	I had said,	I have said,	I shall have said.

TENSENESS, s. contraction ; tension ; the opposite to laxity.

TENSIBLE, TENSILE, a. [tensus, from tendo, Lat.] capable of being extended.

TENSION, (tension) s. [Fr.] the act of stretching, or state of being stretched.

TENSURE, s. the act of stretching, or state of being stretched. TENT, s. [tente, Fr.] a temporary lodging-place for a soldier, formed of canvass stretched upon poles ; a pavilion ; a roll of lint put to a sore.—[crino tinto, Span.] a species of wine of a deep red, imported from Galicia in Spain.

To TENT, v. a. to put a roll of lint into a sore. Figuratively, to search to the quick.

TENTATION, s. [Fr. tentatio, Lat.] trial ; temptation.

TENTATIVE, a. attempting ; essaying ; trying.

TENTER, s. [tentus, from tendo, Lat.] a book on which any thing is stretched. To be on the tenters, is to be on the stretch ; to be in suspense, or in difficulties.

TENTH, a. [tenth, Sax.] the next after the ninth ; the ordinal of ten.—s. the tenth part ; tithes. The Tenth is that yearly portion which all ecclesiastical livings pay to the king.

TENTHLY, ad. in the tenth place.

TENTIGINOUS, a. [tentigo, Lat.] stiff ; stretched.

TENUITY, s. [tenuis, Fr. tenuitas, Lat.] thinness ; slenderness ; exility ; minuteness.

TENUOUS, a. [tenuis, Lat.] thin ; small ; minute ; slender ; exile.

TENURE, s. [Fr. from teneo, Lat.] the manner whereby tenants are holden of their lords ; the service by which a tenant discharges his obligation to his lord.

TEOS, an Ionian town of Asia Minor, on the coast of the Ægean Sea, not far from Smyrna. It was a place of some note as a trading port, and as the birth-place of illustrious men ; and its remains testify its extent and beauty.

TEPEFACTION, s. [tepeo and facio, Lat.] the act of heating or making warm.

TEPID, a. [tepidus, Lat.] lukewarm.

TEPIDITY, s. lukewarmness.

TEPOR, s. [Lat.] gentle heat ; lukewarmness.

TERATOLOGY, s. [terata and logos, Gr.] bombast ; affectation of sublimity.

TERCE, s. [terces, Fr.] a vessel containing the third part of a butt or pipe, or forty-two wine gallons.

TERCEIRA, one of the Azores ; about 20 miles in length, by 10 broad. It is rocky, with heights of more than 2500 feet, and bears unequivocal signs of volcanic agency in all parts of it. Grain of different kinds, medicinal plants, wine, &c. &c., are produced abundantly ; and it has some common manufactures. Angra is the chief place in the island, and is the seat of government. Pop. above 60,000.

TEREBENTHINATE, TEREBENTHINE, a. [terebenthine, Fr. terebenthinus, Lat.] consisting of turpentine ; mixed with turpentine.

To TEREBRATE, v. a. [terebro, Lat.] to bore ; to perforate ; to pierce.

TEREBRATION, s. the act of boring or piercing.

TEREDO, a. [Lat.] in Natural History, the scientific name of a genus of marine animals, which are furnished with two-valved shells ; and which live by eating their way into wood, and line the hole they have bored in it with a shelly substance. One kind is especially destructive to ships, piles of piers, &c. &c.

TERENCE, or P. TERENTIUS AFR., a Roman dramatic poet, the particulars of whose life are almost wholly unknown. It is however clear that he was a native of Africa, and was a slave ; but received his freedom from his master, and attained to considerable reputation through his various writings. He seems also to have visited Greece, and not to have returned to Italy again. He flourished in the 2nd century B. C. His plays, which are partly adaptations or translations from the later Greek comedians, yet are not without evident signs of original dramatic genius. Some of his plays are also by some critics ascribed to other writers. The study of his language, and the structure of his verses, is most instructive to students of the Latin tongue, since the common pronunciation and usage are very plainly preserved.

TERGIVERSATE, v. a. [tergum and verso, Lat.] to shuffle; to quibble, or evade.

TERGIVERSATION, s. the act of shuffling or quibbling in an argument; shift; subterfuge; evasion; fickleness.

TERM, s. [terminus, Fr. terminus, Lat.] a limit or boundary; a word by which any thing is expressed; a condition; a limited time, or the time for which any thing lasts. In Law, the time in which the courts are open; the rest of the year is called vacation. There are four in every year; Hilary term, which begins the twenty-third of January, or, if that be Sunday, the next day following, and ends the twenty-first of February; Easter term, which begins eighteen days after Easter, and ends the Monday next after Ascension-day; Trinity term, beginning the Friday next after Trinity Sunday, and ending the Wednesday fortnight after; and Michaelmas term, beginning the sixth of November, or, if that be Sunday, the next day after, and ending the twenty-eighth of November. In Universities, that space of time when studies are carried on; the intervals between which are called vacations.

To TERM, v. a. to call or name.

TERMAGANT, a. [tyr and magan, Sax.] turbulent; tumultuous; scolding; quarrelsome; furious.

TERMAGANT, s. a scold; a bawling, turbulent woman.

TERMINABLE, a. limitable; that admits of bounds.

To TERMINATE, v. a. [terminer, Fr. termino, from terminus, Lat.] to bound, limit, or put an end to.—v. n. to be limited, or end; to attain its end, used with in.

TERMINATION, s. [terminatio, Lat.] the act of limiting or bounding; a bound or limit; an end or conclusion.

TERMINUS, s. [Lat.] the offices, &c. at either end of a line of railroad.

TERN, s. in Ornithology, the name of a genus of small long-winged sea-birds, commonly called sea-swallows.

TERPANDER, a Greek poet of the 7th century B. C. He was a native of Lesbos; but all, except a few fragments of his poems, that is known of him is, that he added a seventh chord to the cithara, or lyre.

TERPSICHOIRE, (terpsicorde) s. [Gr.] in Heathen Mythology, one of the nine Muses, to whom is attributed the invention of dancing.

TERRA, s. [Lat.] in Astronomy, the learned name for our earth, which is the third planet from the sun, and is about 95,000 miles distant from that luminary. Its diameter is nearly 8000 miles; its period of rotation on its axis about 24 hours, and that of revolution in its orbit, 365½ days nearly. It is attended by one satellite. Other details are of a geographical or geological character, and will be found under the proper heads. Terra Firma, in Geography, is sometimes used for a continent, in contradistinction to islands. Terra mortua, or damnata, among chemists, is that earthy part, or drossy matter, that remains after the distillation of a mineral substance.

TERRACE, s. [Fr. terracia, Ital.] bank or walk of elevated earth covered with gravel or grass; the flat roof of a house.

TERRACINA, a town of the Papal States, Italy. The country round is very fruitful, but most unhealthy during the hot season. It stands on a rock, and once had a harbour, which is now choked up. Remains of its former splendour are numerous. It is 47 miles from Rome. Pop. about 5000. Lat. 41. 19. N. Long. 13. 15. E.

TERRÆFILII, (son of the earth,) s. a student of the university of Oxford, appointed, in public acts, to make jesting and satirical speeches against the members thereof.

TERRA DEL FUEGO, the large island lying at the S. extremity of S. America, separated from it by the Straits of Magelhaen. It is very hilly, and almost entirely barren and desolate. Its inhabitants are allied to those of the continent, and are very degraded and savage. Cape Horn is the most southerly point of this island.

TERRAQUEOUS, a. [terra and aqua, Lat.] consisting of land and water.

TERRRE-BLUE, s. [terre and bleu, Fr.] a slight, loose, friable kind of lapis armenius.

TERRRENE, a. [terra, Lat.] earthy.

TERRRESTRIAL, a. [terrestris, Lat.] earthly; belonging to the earth; earthy.

TERRRE-VERTE, s. [Fr.] a sort of earth.

TERRIBLE, a. [Fr. terribilis, from terreo, Lat.] dreadful; frightful; formidable; violent or great as to offend.

TERRIBLENESS, s. frightfulness; dreadfulness; formidableness.

TERRIBLY, ad. dreadfully; frightfully; formidably; violently.

TERRIER, s. [Fr.] in Natural History, a small variety of dog, noted for its sagacity and its power of scent, used in hunting small game. A survey or register of land.—[terebro, Lat.] an auger or borer.

TERRIFIC, a. [terror and facio, Lat.] causing terror; dreadful.

To TERRIFY, v. a. to affect with terror; to make afraid; to frighten.

TERRITORY, s. [territoire, Fr.] in Statistics, an extent or compass of land, within the bounds, or belonging to the jurisdiction, of any state, city, or other division of a country.

TERROR, s. [Lat. terreur, Fr.] fear caused by the sight or apprehension of some dangerous object; the cause of fear.

TERSE, a. [tersus, from tero, Lat.] smooth, applied to surface; elegant without pompousness, applied to style.

TERTIAN, (dérshian) s. [tertiana, from tertius, Lat.] in Medicine, an ague intermitting two days and having one fit on the third.

TERTIARY, a. in Geology, the name commonly given to all strata lying above the chalk and its contemporaneous deposits, and beneath those deposits whose causes are still in action. They are mostly gravels, clays, sands, and such light strata; yet in the vicinity of Paris, strata of limestone occur, and we have beds of a tolerably solid sandstone. They occupy, with us, the S. E. side of the island, and consist of the London clay, which is found at intervals from the Isle of Wight to the coast of Suffolk, and stretches as far inland as Bagshot Heath; the crag, which overlies the London clay in Suffolk, and rests immediately on the chalk in Norfolk, and of which some traces have been found in Holderness; with other beds of a local character, such as the Mammoth bed on the Norfolk coasts, &c.

TERTULLIAN, (QUINTUS SEPTIMIUS FLORENTIUS TERTULLIANUS,) one of the earliest of the Latin Fathers, and by birth an African. He was an advocate by profession, but on his conversion became a minister. Afterwards he joined the Montanists, but this did not lessen the influence he exerted by his writings. He is said to have died in about 245, aged almost 90 years. By his numerous writings he stands somewhat eminent amongst the Fathers; the best of them being his Apology, and his writings against Marcion. His other works abound in sad puerilities, and show that the corruption of the truth of the gospel, which is looked upon as a characteristic of the Church of Rome, was almost completed before that Church attained any eminence in Europe.

TESSELLATED, a. [tessella, Lat.] variegated by squares. Tessellated pavements are made of curious square marble, bricks, or tiles, called tesselle, from their resembling dice.

TEST, s. [testa, Ital.] the cupel by which refiners try their metals. Figuratively, trial or examination; the means of trial; that with which any thing is compared as a standard; judgment or distinction. Test Act was a statute passed in Charles II.'s reign, requiring all officers, civil and military, to take the oaths and test, viz. the sacrament according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England, under a penalty of £500: it is now repealed.

TESTACEOUS, a. [testa, Lat.] consisting of made of shell; having continuous shells, opposed to crustaceous.

TESTAMENT, s. [Fr. testamentum, from testor, Lat.] the last will of a person, whereby he disposes of his estate, &c. The titles Old and New Testament have been given to the Sacred Scriptures by a mistranslation of the Greek word, signifying Covenant, bestowed on the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures respectively, as the records of the Jewish national covenant, and of the wider and more blessed covenant of the gospel.

TESTAMENTARY, a. [testamentaire, Fr. testamentarius, Lat.]

belonging to a will or testament; being in the manner of a testament; given by, or contained in, a will.

TESTATE, a. [testor, Lat.] having made a will.

TESTATOR, s. [testateur, Fr.] a man who makes or leaves a will.

TESTATRIX, s. a woman who leaves a will.

TESTER, s. [teste, or teste, Fr.] a silver coin valued at sixpence; the head or cover of a bed.

TESTICLE, s. [testiculus, Lat.] in Anatomy, a double part in male animals, serving for generation.

TESTICULAR, a. belonging to the testicles.

TO TESTIFY, v. n. [testis and facio, Lat.] to witness, prove, or give evidence.—v. a. to witness or give evidence of any point.

TESTILY, ad. peevishly; fretfully; morosely.

TESTIMONIAL, s. [Fr. testimonium, from testor, Lat.] a writing wherein a person's character is supported by those who subscribe it, and which is produced by a person in his own favour.

TESTIMONY, s. [testimonium, Lat.] evidence or proof; an open attestation or profession.

TESTINESS, s. peevishness; fretfulness; moroseness.

TESTY, a. [testis, Fr.] fretful; inclined to anger; peevish.

TETANUS, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, the disease commonly called locked-jaw.

TETCHY, a. [a corruption of testy or touchy,] irritable.

TETE A TETE, s. [Fr.] face to face; close and familiar converse or correspondence.

TETHER, s. See TEDDER.

TETRAGON, s. [tetra and gonia, Gr.] in Geometry, a general name for any four-sided figure—as, a square, parallelogram, rhombus, or trapezium.

TETRAGONAL, a. having four angles.

TETRAPE TALOUS, a. [tetra and petalon, Gr.] in Botany, consisting of four petals or flower-leaves.

TETRARCH, (tetrark) s. [tetra and arche, Gr. tetrarcha, Lat. tetrarque, Fr.] a person governing the fourth part of a province.

TETRARCHY, (tetrarchy) s. the jurisdiction of a tetrarch.

TETRASTICK, s. [tetra and stichos, Gr.] an epigram composed of four verses.

TETRASTYLE, s. [tetra and stulos, Gr.] in Architecture, a building with four columns both in front and rear.

TETRICIOUS, a. [tetricus, Lat.] froward; perverse; sour.

TETRICITY, s. [tetricitas, from tetricus, Lat.] surliness of countenance; severity; harshness.

TETUAN, a town of Morocco, Africa. It stands near the river Busega, and has a harbour that is frequented by vessels trading with the Levant, for victuals and water, when the wind does not allow them to make Tangiers. The neighbourhood produces excellent fruits and spirits. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 25. 28. N. Long. 5. 20. W.

TETZEL, JOHN, the Dominican monk who was employed by Leo X. to sell indulgences in Germany, and who performed this office in such a manner as to excite the wrath of Luther, who was already inquiring respecting the grounds of the authority claimed by the pope of Rome, and thus was the immediate occasion of the Reformation. His private character and conduct were as infamous as his official conduct, and he died, before the open rupture with the pope had taken place, in 1519.

TEUTONIC, a. applied to one of the most important branches of the great Indo-Germanic family of races; divided into the Scandinavian race, including the inhabitants of Iceland and the Danes;—the Saxon race, of which the English and the Hollanders are the living types;—and the German race, which has never distinguished itself by maritime exploits, as the other Teuton races have done. In general physical features, and in language, these races greatly resemble each other, and stand in marked contrast with the Celtic or Kelic races of Scotland, Ireland, &c.; and with the Slavonic races which bound them towards the E.; and with the races of Italy, Switzerland, and France, which lie next them on the S. and W. In the abiding advancement of the human race they have played a most prominent part, combining, as they do in a most remarkable manner, the principles of permanence and progress. Whilst the universal spread of the English throughout the E. part of the old, and the N. part of the new continents, promises that in the future development of the lot of mankind, they will not have a less distinguished part assigned them.

TEWKESBURY, Gloucestershire. It was long celebrated for its mustard, but at present its principal manufacture is that of cotton stockings. It is pleasantly seated at the confluence of the Severn and Avon, 103 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 5862.

TEXAS, one of the United States of N. America, lying next the Mexican States, on the Gulf of Mexico, and bounded by the States of Louisiana and Arkansas, and by the W. territory. It is nearly 1000 miles in length, by about 700 miles in breadth. Its general aspect is that of a vast inclined plane, sloping eastward from the Rocky Mountains to the sea, intersected by numerous large rivers, and divided into three distinct regions, that next the sea being level; and remarkably rich, with fine woodlands and wide pastures; the second, a broad expanse of prairie; and the third, the mountain region, and high table-land. Neither its natural nor its artificial products are fully ascertained yet, but the enterprise of the recent settlers is rapidly developing the capabilities of its luxuriant soil, in producing grain of all sorts, fruits, cotton, &c. &c., whilst iron, coal, gold, copper, lead, and silver have been already discovered. The rivers are navigable, but large vessels cannot ascend them from the sea, and the coast is almost destitute of harbours, although lagoons stretch along it through almost its whole length. The Colorado, or Texas river, is the principal stream. The State is divided into 36 counties, and has several colleges; Austin is the seat of government, and Galveston is the most commercial place. Pop. about 250,000.

TEXEL, a town of the Netherlands, at the mouth of the Zuyder-Zee, with a good harbour. It is seated in an island, about 12 miles long and 6 broad, which is separated from the continent by a narrow channel, through which most of the ships pass that are bound to Amsterdam. Pop. about 6000. Lat. 53. S. N. Long. 4. 51. E.

TEXT, s. [texte, Fr. textus, Lat.] that on which a comment is made or written; a sentence of Scripture, so called because written in ancient manuscripts in text, or a larger hand than the notes, which were written in small characters.

TEXTILE, a. [Fr. textilis, from texo, Lat.] woven; capable of being wove.

TEXTURINE, a. [textrina, from texo, Lat.] relating to weaving.

TEXTUARIST, TEXTUARY, s. [textuarius, Fr.] a divine well skilled in the original language of Scripture.

TEXTURE, s. [textura, from texo, Lat.] the act of weaving with respect to form, matter, or stuff; disposition or combination of parts.

THALER, s. [German] the name of the six-dollar in the different states of Germany in which it is used.

THALES, an early Greek philosopher, born at Miletus, who is usually reckoned one of the Seven Sages of Greece. He was not a philosopher in the more correct sense of the word which afterwards prevailed, but was a man of considerable experience, who took an active part in Milesian politics, and perhaps helped to maintain the Ionian cities independent for the time during which they preserved their freedom. He was also well versed in the science of his age, and was successful in predicting an eclipse. Many of his aphorisms or maxims have been preserved. He died in about 545 B. C., aged more than 90 years.

THALIA, s. in Heathen Mythology, one of the nine Muses, to whom the poets ascribe the protection of comedy and pastoral poetry.

THAMES, (Tems) the largest river of England, which rises in the Cotswold Hills, Gloucestershire; and, receiving the waters of many smaller streams, flows, after a course of 215 miles, into the German Ocean between Kent and Essex.

THAMMUZ, s. [Phoen.] in Mythology, the name under which the Syrians worshipped Adonis, or Osiris.

THAN, ad. [thanne, Sax.] a participle used after a comparative adjective, and placed before the thing compared.

THANE, s. [thegn, Sax.] amongst the Saxons, the title of the lesser nobles, who seem to have been equal to the inferior barons and the knights of the Norman times.

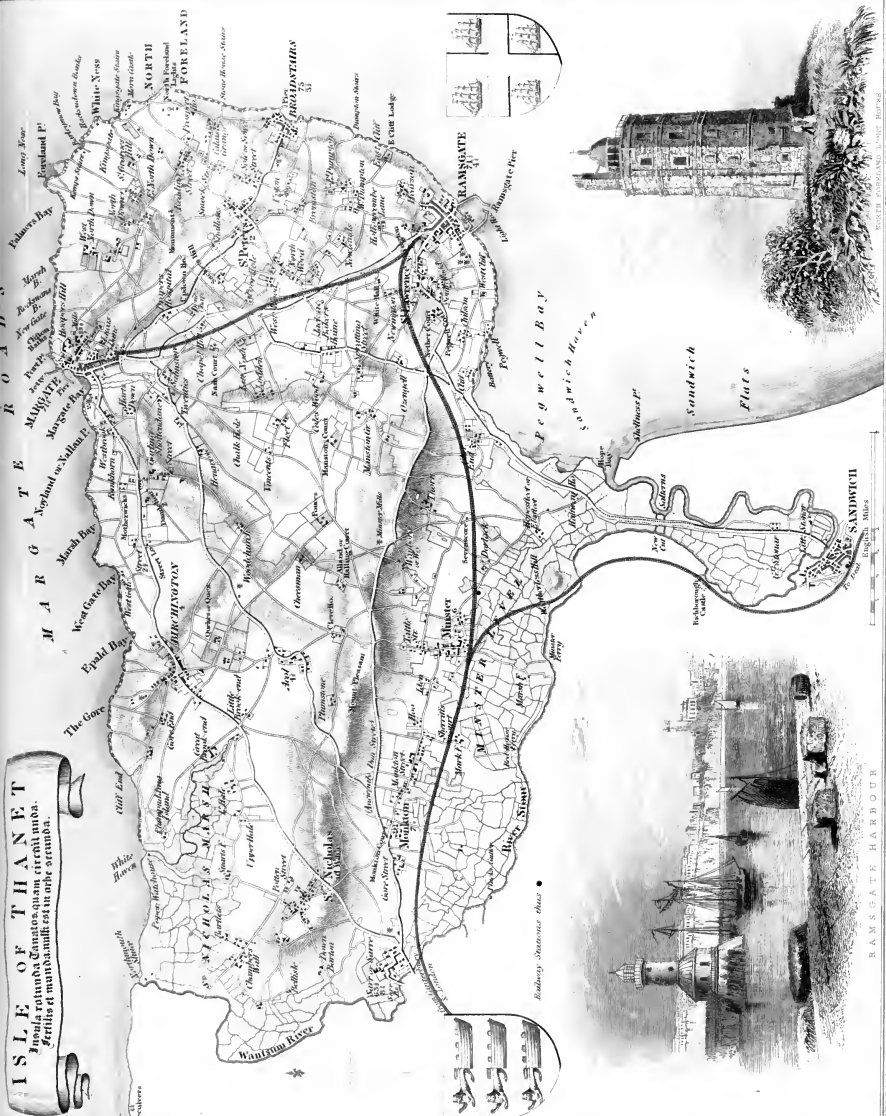

THANET, an island of the county of Kent, surrounded by the sea, except on the N. E. side, where it is bounded by the branches of the river Stour, now inconsiderable to what they were formerly. It contains several villages, and the sea-port towns of Margate and Ramsgate. Pop. 31,466.

TO THANK, v. a. [thanken, Teut. thancian, Sax.] to acknowledge and express obligations for favours received.

ISLE OF THANET

Angli rotunditas. Totius enim circuli una.
Græci et barbari manifestum est in circulo.

THANKFUL, a. [thankful, Sax.] grateful; ready to acknowledge a favour or obligation.

THANKFULLY, ad. gratefully; in a manner that acknowledges a favour received.

THANKFULNESS, s. acknowledgment of a favour received; gratitude.

THANKLESS, a. unthankful; ungrateful; not deserving, or not likely to give thanks.

THANKLESSNESS, s. failure to acknowledge good received; ingratitude.

THANKOFFERING, s. offering paid in acknowledgment of mercy.

THANKS, s. seldom used in the singular; [thanks, Sax.] a verbal acknowledgment of a favour received; the expression of gratitude.

THANKSGIVING, s. that part of Divine worship wherein we acknowledge benefits received.

THANKWORTHY, a. deserving gratitude; meritorious.

THASOS, an island of the Egean Sea, lying near the coast of ancient Thrace, which was of some note in former time from its gold mines. It is now an agricultural island, producing also fine timber and some wine. Pop. about 7000.

THAT, pron. [thata, Goth. thæt, Sax.] the other, opposed to this; who, or which, applied to some person or thing mentioned before. Sometimes it is used instead of a whole sentence going before, to save a repetition of the same words; and sometimes to denote eminence or distinction. When this and that relate to foregoing words, this is referred to the latter, and that to the former. In that, is an adverbial expression for—as being.

THAT, conj. because. Sometimes it is used to express a consequence, indication, or final end.

THATCH, s. [thace, Sax.] straw, &c. laid as a covering on the top of a house.

THATCH, v. a. [thaccian, Sax.] to cover a roof with straw, reeds, &c.

THATCHER, s. one whose trade is to cover houses with straw.

THAW, v. n. [thawan, Sax.] to melt after being frozen. — a. to melt any thing frozen.

THAW, s. liquefaction of any thing congealed.

THE, article, [de, Belg.] the article denoting a particular thing. Before a participle or adjective, it shows that they are used as substantives; it also denotes, before some adjectives, that they refer to more subjects than one, as the good, the bad. It is used before nouns in both numbers.

THEATINES, is a religious order in the Romish Church, so called from their principal founder, John Peter Caraffa, then bishop of Theate, or Chieti, in the kingdom of Naples, and afterwards pope, under the name of Paul IV. They did not differ in any important particular from the other monastic orders.

THEATRE, (théâtre) s. [thiâtre, Fr. theatrum, Lat.] a building constructed and used for the purpose of dramatic representation; a play-house; a place rising by steps like a stage; dramatic literature and art.

THEATRICAL, a. becoming a playhouse; belonging to the stage.

THEBES, (now Thiva, or Stibes), an ancient and celebrated town of Boeotia, in Greece. It was formerly very large, and is yet three miles in circumference, but full of ruins. It is 30 miles from Athens. Pop. about 6000. Lat. 38. 17. N. Long. 23. 25. E.

THEE, the objective case singular of THOU.

THEFT, s. the act of feloniously and unlawfully taking away another person's goods; stealing; the thing stolen.

THEFT-BOTE, s. in Law, the abetting a thief, by receiving the goods that he steals.

THEIR, (thère) pron. [theora, Sax.] of them; in their possession; belonging to them. Theirs is used when any thing comes between the possessive and the substantive.

THEM, the objective case of THEY.

THEME, s. [Fr. thema, Gr.] a subject on which a person speaks or writes; a short essay on any subject; the original word whence others are derived.

THEMISTOCLES, one of the great statesmen and generals of Athens, during its brightest days. The anecdotes of his boyhood are evidences of his deeply-rooted ambition; but it was not till Aristides was ostracised for being just, that Themistocles appeared very prominently in public affairs. His whole care now was to raise Athens to the position of the leading state in Greece; and his intention respecting himself was to be the leading man in Athens. He had secured the possession of a considerable fleet before the invasion of Xerxes; and in the conduct of the war against him, he showed his consummate skill both in strategy and diplomacy. He had proved the excellence of the fleet by one engagement, before the city was threatened by the Persian host; then he secured from the Delphic oracle a response counselling them to trust to their ships; and he induced the people to abandon Athens, and fight in the narrow sea near Salamis. He precipitated the attack of the great king, by a false message; which gave the Athenian fleet the advantage, and ended in the victory that sent the invaders back to Asia. Themistocles now secured the alliance of other states; with consummate skill defeated the plans of Sparta, to keep Athens dismantled; even built up new walls joining the Piræus to the city; and stood on the pinnacle of his power. Discontent, which might well arise against so unscrupulous and selfish a leader, did spring up, and attained such a height that he was banished; and after various adventures in Greece, sought and found safety in the dominions of the Persian monarch, who, with greater magnanimity than Athens or than all Greece had showed, conferred on him a princely revenue. It is said that he poisoned himself, in 449 b. c., aged 65 years.

THEMSELVES, pron. [the plural of him and self,] these very persons.

THEN, ad. [then, Goth. and Sax. dan, Belg.] at that time; afterwards, or immediately after any action mentioned; therefore, or for this reason; in that case. Now and then, at one time and another.

THENCE, ad. from that place or time; for that reason.

THENCEFORTH, ad. from that time. It should not be used with from.

THENCEFORTHWARD, ad. on from that time.

THEOBALD, LOUIS, a dramatic critic, and one of the long list of Shakspearian commentators. He had the temerity to attack Pope for his attempt to improve Shakspeare; and was piloried in the Dunciad in return: but in a later edition, Cibber was put in the place of Theobald, who had acquired a name too widely respected to make such a satire safe. Yet perhaps it is to this attack that he owes it that he is remembered to this day; so obtuse and pedantic were his criticisms on the great poet. He even ventured to include a play written by some other old dramatist, with interpolations of his own, amongst Shakspeare's genuine works. He died in 1744, aged about 55 years.

THEOCRACY, s. [théocratie, Fr. from Theos and kratia, Gr.] government immediately superintended by God.

THEOCRITICAL, a. [théocratique, Fr.] relating to a government administered by God.

THEOCRITUS, an ancient Greek poet, who was born at Syracuse, and spent most of his life in Sicily. He is known to have travelled to Alexandria in Egypt; but beyond that his works are his only record. He flourished in about 270 b. c. His poems are all of the class called bucolic; and are remarkable for their elegance and truthfulness to nature.

THEODOLITE, s. an instrument used in surveying land, and in measuring horizontal angular distances.

THEODORETUS, an ecclesiastical historian of the 5th century. He became bishop of Cyrus, in Syria, and was very successful in opposing the Gnostic errors that were largely received in those parts. He was also engaged in the Nestorian controversy, and for the part he took was deposed by Cyril; but was afterwards restored, and died in about 458, aged about 70 years. His Ecclesiastical History is his chief book; that and a History of Heresies are of some value.

THEODORIC, surnamed the Great, a king of the Ostrogoths. He was educated at Constantinople, where he was detained as a hostage to the emperor Leo. During his youth he also distinguished himself for his courage; and soon after obtaining his crown, by his father's death, he aided Zeno in gaining the empire; and besieged him in his capital, when he found him playing him false. He next determined to conquer Italy; which, with the consent of Zeno, he soon accomplished; and assumed the title of king of Italy, holding it as a kind of fief of the emperor. He extended his power over the greater part of Gaulais; and was engaged in the theological controversies respecting Arianism, which distracted those times. He died in 526, aged 72, and having reigned 51 years. The title of Great has been deservedly given him for the eminence of character and intellect which distinguishes him, not only from the other Gothic kings, but from the very emperors of that age.

THEODOSIUS, surnamed the Great, one of the latest Roman emperors. He was of Spanish extraction, and had as excellent a training in all branches of knowledge as the times could afford, being especially instructed in the military art. His first distinction was his appointment as Augustus by Gratian, when he displayed his courage and generalship by driving out the Goths from the borders of the empire, and his orthodoxy and zeal by the ferocious persecution of the Arians. He next encountered a long and tedious succession of wars and treaties, to secure the throne to himself and to Gratian and his son, from Maximus, who was at last subdued and put to death. Insurrections at Antioch and Thessalonica were also subdued, not without a frightful vengeance at the latter place, for the cruelties of the insurgents, for which Ambrose, the famous archbishop of Milan, imposed on the emperor a tedious penance, which was obediently submitted to. Valentinian, Gratian's son, having been assassinated at Rome, Theodosius, defeating the usurper Eugenius, found himself the sole head of both parts of the empire, and divided it between his sons Honorius and Arcadius. He died in 395, aged 50, and having reigned 16 years. His grandson, Theodosius II., emperor of the East, commanded the formation of the code of laws, called the Theodosian Code.

THEODOTIUM, one of the Greek translators of the Old Testament. He was an Ebionite, and desiring a version more exact than that of the Seventy, undertook to make a new one from the Hebrew. It is of some value for critical purposes, being in fact a revision of the Septuagint, but it has also, as a drawback from its utility, too plainly the traces of a polemical purpose. He flourished during the 2nd century A. D.

THEOGNIS, a Greek poet of Megara, who flourished during the latter part of the 6th century B. C. Fragments of his compositions yet remain, from which it appears that he was exiled from his native land, by one of those revolutions that so frequently occurred during the party strifes in the small free states of Greece.

THEOLOGY, s. [theos and gone, Gr.] in Heathen Mythology, the genealogical history of the gods.

THEOLOGIAN, THEOLOGIST, s. [theologien, Fr.] a professor or student of divinity.

THEOLOGICAL, a. [theologicus, Lat.] belonging to the science of divinity.

THEOLOGICALLY, ad. according to the principles of theology.

THEOLOGY, s. [theologie, Fr.] the science of religion. Natural Theology is the development of the evidences of the existence and operations of God, from the works of nature; Dogmatic Theology, or Systematic Theology, the systematic arrangement of the doctrines of the Scriptures; Exegetical Theology, the laws of Biblical criticism and interpretation; Historical Theology, the philosophy of ecclesiastical and church history; Asiatics and Casuistry, the practical parts of religion; and Pastoral Theology, the principles of ministerial or pastoral labour.

THEOMANCY, s. [Theos and mantia, Gr.] a kind of divination by calling on the name of God.

THEOPHRASTUS, a Greek philosopher, who studied under Plato at first, and afterwards under Aristotle, whose successor he also was. He was subjected to many persecutions, and was once even banished, but he was highly popular, owing both to his character and to his eloquence. He died in about 285 B. C., aged about 85 years. His works are numerous, but only a few have reached us, of those chiefly in fragments, of which his Characters is most celebrated.

THEOPHYLACT, archbishop of Acris in Bulgaria, in the 11th century, whose Commentaries on various books of Scripture render him one of the most eminent and useful ecclesiastical writers of the age. He wrote also Letters, and a treatise on Kingly Education.

THEOPNEUSTY, s. [Theos and pneusia, Gr.] inspiration from God.

THEORBO, s. [tiórba, Ital. tuorbe, Fr.] a large lute used in playing a thorough bass.

THEOREM, s. [théorème, Fr. from theoreo, Gr.] a proposition which can be demonstrated to be a truth.

THEORETICAL, THEORETIC, THEORICAL, a. [théorétique, or théorique, Fr. from theoreo, Gr.] belonging to theory; speculative. THEORIST, s. one who forms or maintains a particular theory; one skilled in speculation.

THEORY, s. [théorie, Fr. theoria, Lat.] speculation, opposed to practice; system, plan, scheme. In Philosophy, a principle of arrangement adopted for the facts of any science, by which their mutual dependence and relations are exhibited, and other facts, as yet undiscovered, announced. It is an established or demonstrated hypothesis, and differs from law in this only, that the perception of the latter requires a grasp of mind more than human; the former being the human aspect of the Divine laws.

THEOSOPHISTS, s. [Theos and sophistes, Gr.] the name of philosophers or mystics, who profess to derive their systems directly from Divine inspiration. Such were Behmen, Fludd, Van Helmont, the Rosicrucians, &c. It is customary to denounce these men as mere visionaries; but it is coming to be generally believed, that though they, by subordinating the study of science to laws not applicable to it, failed of attaining the noble end they proposed to themselves,—the modern men of science, recognising only what can be counted, weighed, and measured, in the subject-matter of their different studies, have far more grievously and dangerously erred. It being far more visionary to treat of this universe as if there were no God, than, as the Theosophists have done, to seek to derive all our knowledge of it directly from God.

THEIRA, an island of the Ægean Sea, called Santorini now. It is decidedly of volcanic origin, and has the appearance of a partially disclosed volcanic crater. It has not a very fertile soil, but it produces excellent wine. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 36. 23. N. Long. 25. 26. E.

THERAMENES, one of the thirty tyrants of Athens, who first appears prominently in the trial of the generals after the victory of Arginusæ. He was a decided oligarch, and aided in the subjugation of Athens by Lysander; but when the tyranny of the thirty rulers had reached an insupportable height, he made a feeble attempt to check it, but was overborne by his colleagues, and condemned to death. He was insulted by the mockery of a trial, and died by the hemlock-cup in 404 B. C.

THERAPEUTIC, a. [thérapeutique, Fr. from therapuo, Gr.] curative; sanative; teaching the cure of diseases.

THERE, ad. [thar, Sax. thar, Goth. dar, Dan.] in that place, opposed to here; an exclamation directing something at a distance. In Composition, it means that.

THEREABOUT, THEREABOUTS, ad. near that place, number, quantity, or state; concerning that matter.

THEREAFTER, ad. after that; according to that; accordingly.

THEREAT, ad. at that; on that account; at that place.

THEREBY, ad. by means of that; in consequence of that.

THEREFORE, ad. for that; for this; for this reason; consequently; in return for this.

THEREFROM, ad. from that; from this.

THEREIN, ad. in that; in this.

THEREINTO, ad. into that.

THEREOF, ad. of that; of this.

THEREON, THEREONTO, ad. on that.

THEREUPON, ad. upon that; in consequence of that.

THEREWITH, ad. with that; immediately.

THEREWITHAL, ad. over and above; with that; at the same time.

THERIAÇA, s. in Medicine, treacle; any medicine against poison, or the bites of venomous animals.

THERMOMETER, s. [thermometrie, Fr. from thermos and metron, Gr.] in Natural Philosophy, an instrument for ascertaining the temperature of the air, and of any other body. It consists of a glass tube, the aperture of which is very small, with a bulb at the lower part, hermetically sealed, having in it a quantity of spirits of wine or mercury. The tube is usually fastened to a plate on which a scale is marked, by which the amount of expansion of the spirit or mercury may be noted. There are two scales, one by Fahrenheit, commonly used in this country; the other by Reaumur. (See those names.) Common thermometers, like common barometers, are of no use for accurate observations. The inequality of the bore of the tube, the incorrect graduation of the scale, the want of adjustment of the quantity of mercury to the tube and to the scale, with other things, render them mere toys; and not philosophical instruments.

THERMOMETRICAL, a. relating to the measure of heat.

THESE, (thee) pron. the plural of this.

THESEUS, in old Athenian legends, one of the most illustrious of the national heroes. His birth and whole life were characterized by extraordinary circumstances. Amongst his heroic labours were these: he slew the Minotaur; helped in the battles of the Athenians with the Amazons and with the Centaurs; joined in the hunt of the great boar of Calydon; carried off Helen; and even invaded the gloomy realm of Dis, and attempted to carry off Persephone his queen. His father was Ægeus, king of Athens, and he reigned there for many years. How he perished is not clearly stated. But a magnificent temple, erected to him, still stands at Athens; and annual national festivals kept alive the memory of the mythic king amongst the people, who of all others most hated the name of monarchy.

THE/SIS, s. [Gr.] a position; a subject to dispute upon; a proposition advanced to be decided by logical argumentation.

THE/SPIS, the inventor of Greek tragedy, according to generally received tradition. He seems to have given a semidramatic turn to the Dionysiac choruses, and added an actor who was to impersonate the hero whose tale was the subject of the piece. The first use of masks is also assigned to him; but all that is said of him is rendered uncertain by the evident disposition to ascribe to him all, the history and origin of which are doubtful. He flourished in about 540 B. C.

THESSA/LIA, or THE/SSALY, a country of Ancient Greece, lying on the Ægean Sea, and bounded by Macedonia, Epirus, Bœotia, &c. It had on its borders the famous mountains Olympus, Pindus, Pelion, Ossa, and Elia; and was watered by the Peneus, the Sperchius, and other streams. In the course of the Peneus was a beautiful vale, celebrated by the poets for its scenery, climate, &c., called Tempe. Pheræ, Larissa, Pharsalus, Paganæ, &c. were its chief cities. It was not all under one government, and with it were connected almost all the old legends of the early origin of the Grecian races. From one of its districts, Magnesia, some scientific terms sufficiently familiar amongst us are borrowed.

THESSALON/NIANS, the EPISTLES OF PAUL TO THE; two letters written by the apostle to the Christians of Thessalonica, during his stay in Corinth, soon after his first introduction of the gospel to that city. The circumstances elucidating the history of the letters are fully recorded in the Acts of the Apostles. They are the earliest of all Paul's writings; and the object of them is plainly, in general, to exhort to steadfastness in adhering to the gospel, and to a life of practical godliness. But having, in the first letter, spoken of the appearance of Christ, and the day of judgment, the Thessalonians mistook his meaning, and regarded the opposition that they witnessed to the gospel, as a sign of what they thought Paul told them to be prepared for,—the sudden and rapid coming of that day. The second letter was therefore written mainly to correct this error, and to show them that it was a gross delusion to suppose that the exact times of the events he spoke of could be determined by man.

THESSALONICA, an important city of Macedonia, in Ancient Greece, seated on one of those deep inlets of the sea, that vary the N. coast of the Ægean. It was a place of great trade, being well situated for commerce both by land and water. In the later days of the empire it was of even more note. It is now called Saloniki, and has a tolerable trade. Lat. 40. 38. N. Long. 22. 57. E.

THE/TFORD, Norfolk and Suffolk. It is seated on the Little Ouse, which is navigable from Lynn-Regis; and a good trade is carried on here. It is full of antiquities; and is 80 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 3934.

THE/VENOT, the name of two celebrated French travellers. Melchisedec, the eldest, travelled in Europe, and paid particular attention to the literature and learning of the different countries he visited. He took part in the establishment of the French Academy, and contributed greatly to the formation of the Royal Library. He was a man of considerable learning, and died in 1692, aged 71 years. John Thevenot, his nephew, studied with distinction at the College of Navarre, and being wealthy, and attracted by tales of travel, he visited many European countries, and afterwards extended his journeys into Asia and Africa, and at last died near Tabriz in Persia, in 1667, aged 34 years. The Travels of both are published.

THE/URGY, (y soft) s. [Theos and ergao, Gr.] the power of doing supernatural things by lawful means, as by prayer to God.

THEY, acc. them: the plural of he or she.

THI/BET, or TY/BET, a great country of Asia, bounded by China, Birman, Assam, Hindustan, and Tataria. It is a region of table-land, some parts of which are 10,000 feet above the sea; and it has ranges of mountains, many parts of which are 15,000 feet above the sea. The rivers which water it are almost all the heads of the great rivers which flow into the Indian and Pacific Oceans, from the Indus to China; it has also several large lakes, some of which yield salt. It produces gold, silver, and other metals; grain, fruits, timber, &c. &c. And from its goats, a fine hair is procured, of which shawls, &c. are woven. The government of this country is ecclesiastical, the chief ruler being the Dalai-Lama, who is fabled never to die, but the emperor of China exercises an unchecked control over the whole country, by means of his officers. The whole of the outward forms of Lamaism so nearly agree with those of Romanism, that the Jesuit missionaries thought some enemy had anticipated them in their labours. Lassa is the chief city. Pop. under 1,000,000.

THICK, a. [thice, Sax. thickur, Isl.] the opposite of thin; gross or dense; great in circumference, opposed to slender; muddy, or not transparent, applied to liquors; frequent, or in quick succession; close, or crowded; coarse; without articulateness, applied to speech.

THICK, s. that part or time when a thing is thickest. Thick and thin, notwithstanding any obstacles or inconveniences. Thick and threefold, many.

To THI/CKEN, v. a. to make thick or close; to condense; to strengthen; to make close or numerous.—v. n. to grow thick, dense, muddy, close, or numerous.

THI/CKET, s. [thickett, Sax.] a close knot or tuft of trees; a close wood or coppice.

THI/CKLY, ad. closely; deeply; in great quantity.

THI/CKNESS, s. the opposite of thinness; closeness; largeness in circumference; coarseness; density.

THI/CKSET, a. close planted.

THIEF, (theef) s. plural thieves; [thief, Sax.] one who privately takes away the property of another.

To THIE/VE, (theeve) v. n. to take away the property of another unlawfully.

THIE/VERY, (theevry) s. the practice of stealing; the thing stolen.

THIE/VISH, (theevish) a. given to stealing; practising theft; sly; secret.

THIE/VISHLY, (theevishly) ad. in a thieving manner; like a thief.

THIE/VISHNESS, (theevishness) s. a disposition or inclination to stealing; habit of stealing.

THIGH, (thi) s. [thech, Sax.] in Anatomy, that part of the leg between the hip and the knee.

THILL, s. [thille, Sax.] the shafts of a waggon; hence thill or thiller-horse, the horse that goes between the shafts.

THI/MBLE, s. a metal cover placed on the tip of the mid-finger, to preserve it from the needle when sewing.

THIN, a. [thinn, Sax.] the contrary to thick; rare, opposed to dense; not close; separated by large interstices; small, applied to sound; lean or slim; not coarse; not abounding.—ad. not thickly.

To THIN, v. a. to make thin or rare; to make less close or numerous; to attenuate.

THINE, pron. (thein, Goth. thin, Sax.) belonging to or relating to thee. It is used for thy, when the substantive is divided from it; and before a word beginning with a vowel.

THING, s. [Sax. ding, Belg.] whatever it. Opposed to a person, it signifies an inanimate substance. When applied to persons, it implies contempt and pity.

To THI/NK, v. n. preter. thought: [thencean, Sax. thanigan, Goth.] to consider any thing in the mind; to reason; to judge or conclude; to intend; to meditate; to recollect or observe, used with upon.—v. a. to entertain in the mind, conceive, or imagine. To think much of, is to grudge. To think scornfully of, is to disdain.

THI/NKER, s. one who thinks deeply.

THINKING, s. imagination; cogitation; judgment.
THINLY, ad. not thickly; poorly, leanly, applied to the appearance of a person.

THINNESS, s. the quality of not being gross; the quality of not being of a good substance, applied to cloth, &c.; tenuity; paucity; scarceness.

THIONVILLE, a considerable town in the department of Moselle, France. It is advantageously seated on the river Moselle, over which it has a bridge, defended by a horn-work; and is strongly fortified. It is 195 miles from Paris. Pop. about 6000. Lat. 49. 19. N. Long. 6. 10. E.

THIRD, a. [third, Sax.] the next after the second.—s. the third part. In measures of time, &c., the sixth part of a second. In Music, the interval between any note in the diatonic scale, and the next note but one from it.

THIRDBOROUGH, s. an under-constable.

THIRDLY, ad. in the third place.

THIRST, s. [thirst, Sax.] the pain suffered for want of drink. Figuratively, an eager or vehement desire.

TO THIRST, v. n. [thirstan, Sax.] to be uneasy for want of drink. Figuratively, to have a vehement desire, followed by after.

THIRSTILY, ad. wanting moisture.

THIRSTINESS, s. a strong desire to drink; want of moisture; dryness.

THIRSTY, a. [thurstig, Sax.] dry; troubled with drought; vehemently desirous.

THIRTEEN, n. [threotene, Sax.] the number immediately following twelve; ten and three.

THIRTEENTH, a. the ordinal of thirteen.

THIRTIETH, a. the ordinal of thirty.

THIRTY, a. thrice ten.

THIRTY YEARS' WAR, the name of the great religious contest which raged in Germany from 1618 to 1648; commencing with the rebellion at Prague against the imperial commissioners, in May of the former year, and was concluded by the peace of Westphalia, which was concluded in October of the latter year. During the course of it, the boundaries and relations of the continental states were materially altered, and some of the most important precedents in the European state system established. It was illustrated by the genius of the great military leaders, Tilly, Wallenstein, Gustavus Adolphus, Torstenson, Turenne, Bernhard of Weimar, &c. And rendered frightful and infamous, by a most reckless expenditure of human life, and by such deeds as the sack of Magdeburg. (See the names mentioned above, and others.)

THIS, pron. [this, Sax.] that which is now present, or mentioned. Afterward, the next and no more. Followed by a word denoting time, the last past. See THAT.

THISTLE, s. [thistel, Sax.] in Botany, a large genus of well-known composite plants, the blossoms of some of which are very fine. The cotton thistle grows to a very great height, and the leaves of the milk thistle are beautifully variegated. Order of the Thistle, or of St. Andrew, a military order of knighthood in Scotland, the rise and institution whereof is variously related. The chief and principal ensign is a gold collar composed of thistles and sprigs of rue, interlinked with amulets of gold, having pendant thereunto the image of St. Andrew, with his cross, and the motto, Nemo me impune lacessit.

THISTLY, a. overgrown with thistles.

THITHER, ad. [Sax.] to that place; to that end or point.

THITHERWARD, ad. toward that place.

THLIPSIS, s. [thlipsis, Gr.] in Medicine, is a compression of a vessel from any kind of repletion.

THOMAS, Sr. an island of Africa, lying in the Gulf of Guinea. It is almost round, and is about 30 miles in length. It is tolerably fertile, producing grain, fruits, cotton, &c. It belongs to the Portuguese. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 0. 2. N. Long. 6. 30. E.

THOMAS, Sr. an island of the West Indies, the principal of the Virgin Islands, about 18 miles in circumference. It abounds with millet, manioc, potatoes, and most sorts of fruits and herbage, especially sugar and tobacco. It belongs to the Danes. Lat. 18. 22. N. Long. 64. 52. W.

THOMAS, one of our Lord's first disciples, and appointed by him an apostle. He is occasionally mentioned in the sacred narrative, particularly as having entertained doubts concerning the actual resurrection of Jesus. His after life is said to have been spent in preaching the gospel amongst the nations of S. Asia, but the tradition is very vague.

THOMAS, CHRISTIAN, a German philosopher of the eclectic school, in the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th centuries. He studied at Leipsic, and practised law at Frankfurt (on the Oder) and Leipsic. He was also made a professor at Leipsic, but gave offence to all parties and left the country.

Afterwards he was professor at Berlin, and still later at Halle, where he died in 1728, aged 73 years. His published writings are numerous, but his services to philosophy cannot well be understood from them. He seems to have made a resolute stand against authority, and to have endeavoured to do away with the pedantic plans that prevailed, and which kept so many from the path of learning, and prevented those who entered from any effective progress in it.

THOMSON, JAMES, one of our classic poets, by birth a Scotsman, and educated at Edinburgh, where having cultivated the Muses instead of theology, he resolved on trying his fortune in the British capital and went to London. His necessities compelled him to sell one of his poems, which gained him both friends and reputation, and led to his travelling on the continent as companion to a young nobleman. After his return his life, with a brief exception, was that of a literary man; and he died in 1748, aged 48 years. The Seasons is his greatest poem, and next to that the Castle of Indolence; his other poems and his plays are remarkably inferior on the whole to these, and even in these much inequality may be observed.

THONG, s. [thwang, Sax.] a strap or string of leather.

THOR, in Teutonic Mythology, the son of Odin, who was the cause of thunder, and genial summer heat. He was specially worshipped on Thursdays.

THORAX, s. [Gr. Lat.] in Anatomy, the chest; or that part of an animal body beginning at the neck-bone, and ending at the diaphragm.

THORACIC, a. [thorax, Lat.] belonging to the breast. Thoracic duct, in Anatomy, the great vessel by which the fluids collected by the absorbents and the chyle are transferred to the sanguineous system.

THORAL, a. [thorus, Lat.] relating to the bed.

THORESBY, RALPH, an eminent antiquary, who was educated at his native place, Leeds, and at Rotterdam, for a commercial life, but always manifested a great disposition and taste for the study of antiquities, which he was afterwards able to gratify when he became the head of the establishment. He died in 1725, aged 67 years. His chief work is on the Topography, &c. of Leeds.

THORN, s. [Sax.] in Botany, the common name of the hawthorn or white-thorn bush. Also, a prickle growing on the thorn-bush; any thing troublesome.

THORN, a city of Prussia. It is strongly fortified, and has a pretty good trade. It is seated on the river Vistula, over which is a very long bridge; and it has some handsome buildings. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 53. 0. N. Long. 18. 32. E.

THORNAPPLE, s. in Botany, the common name of a plant with a white, trumpet-shaped flower, and a spiny seed-vessel, which was used as a remedy for asthma and similar diseases.

THORNBACK, s. in Ichthyology, a species of the ray-fish, prickly on the back, which frequents the sandy shores of this country, and is very voracious, feeding upon all sorts of fish, particularly herrings and sand-eels.

THORNHILL, SIR JAMES, an eminent English painter, of the beginning of the last century. After he had practised with some success at home, he made a tour on the continent, for further study in his art; and on his return, was much engaged in decorating palaces and public buildings, as St. Paul's, Greenwich Hospital, Hampton-Court, &c. He was not exclusively engaged in this branch of painting; and his portraits, and architectural designs, are of considerable excellence. He died in 1734, aged 60 years.

THORNTON, BONNELL, a humorous English writer of the last century. He studied at Oxford, but gave up the medical for the literary profession, and joined with Colman, and other wits of the times, in various satirical and jocose caricatural pieces. He died in 1768, aged 44 years. A translation of Plautus is his chief work.

THORNY, a. full of thorns or prickles. Figuratively, perplexed; vexatious.

THOROUGH, (thórô) prep. See THROUGH.
 THOROUGH, (thórô) ad. complete; passing in at one side, and beyond the other.

THOROUGH-BASS, s. in Music, the art of playing from a figured bass part. See BASS.

THOROUGHFARE, (thórôfare) s. a passage without any stop or let.

THOROUGHLY, ad. completely; fully.
 THOROUGHWAX, s. in Botany, an umbelliferous plant, of which there are two British species.

THORP, THORP, THREP, THROP, [thorp, Sax.] in the names of places, a village.

THORVALDSEN, ALBERT, the great Danish sculptor. He was first a wood-carver, assisting his father, who was of that trade, but he studied at the Academy of Arts, and aspired to greater things. He was so diligent as to obtain the customary government assistance to artists, to travel in Italy; and he proceeded to Rome, where he studied under Zoega, who was also a Dane, and began his career of fame. He did not leave Rome for twenty-two years, continuing to be necessarily occupied in his art; and during that time finished, or planned, some of his master-pieces. During the remainder of his life, he visited, and dwelt for various periods, at Copenhagen, Rome, Berlin, &c. &c.; and died suddenly in 1844, aged 74 years. His bas-reliefs of Day and Night are well known, and many others of his finest sculptures are familiar to all in plaster copies. The famous Lion of Lucerne, the monument of the Swiss guards of Louis XVI., was executed by him.

THOSE, pron. See THESE.
 THOU, pron. [thu, Sax. du, Belg.] the personal pronoun employed in addressing any one. It is employed with strict accuracy only in devotional addresses and prayers; in all common addresses you being employed to single persons.

THOU, JACQUES AUGUSTE DE, or THUANUS, the celebrated French historian of the latter part of the 16th century. He studied at first for the church, and afterwards for the legal profession, and obtained employment in the parlement at Paris. From this he rose gradually to be a counsellor of state. He was involved in many of the troubles of that unsettled period; he began life at the time of the St. Bartholomew; and had at last the satisfaction of seeing Henry of Navarre securely seated on the throne, who rewarded his services with various marks of his confidence. After Henry's assassination, De Thou lost the favour of the court; and the condemnation of his History by the Church of Rome had already deprived him of all satisfaction in continuing his historical labours. He died in 1617, aged 64 years. His History of His own Times is a very valuable source of information respecting that interesting and confused period.

THOUGH, (thô) conj. [thauh, Goth. teah, Sax.] notwithstanding; although. As though, implies, as if. At the end of a sentence, it denotes however, or yet.

THOUGHT, (thaut) s. the act of thinking; an image formed in the mind; sentiment; reflection; opinion; design; serious consideration; solicitude, care.

THOUGHT, the preter. and past part. of TO THINK.
 THOUGHTFUL, (thautful) a. pensive, full of thought; given to meditation; anxious, solicitous.

THOUGHTFULLY, (thautfully) ad. in a pensive and thoughtful manner; with solicitude.

THOUGHTFULNESS, (thautfulness) s. deep meditation; fullness of reflection; solicitude, anxiety.

THOUGHTLESS, a. airy; negligent; stupid.
 THOUSAND, a. [thused, Sax.] consisting of ten hundred.—a. the number ten hundred. Proverbially, a great number.

THOUSANDTH, s. the ordinal of a thousand.

THRACIA, or THRACE, in Ancient Greece, the country lying on the Euxine Sea, the Propontis, and the Ægean Sea, and bounded inland by the natural bulwarks of rivers and mountains. It was celebrated for its wealth in minerals, grain, &c. &c., and for the barbarity and valour of the people. The rising power of Macedonia deprived them of their savage independence, and they were undistinguished soon in the general character of the Grecian and the Roman empires.

THRALL, THRALDOM, s. [thral, Sax.] bondage, or a state of slavery or confinement. Thrall also signifies a bondsman.

To THRASH, v. a. sometimes written thresh; [tharscan, Sax.]

to beat corn out of the chaff; to beat or drub.—v. n. to labour, or drudge.

THRASHER, s. one who thrashes corn.

THRASYBULUS, a famous Athenian patriot, who had gained some reputation before the establishment of the Thirty Tyrants by Lysander; and who, while in exile at Thebes, planned the delivery of his country, which he, after many obstinate contests, at length effected, mainly through the aid of the Spartan party that was opposed to Lysander. He then exerted himself to restore the military glory of Athens, which her defeats had tarnished, and to recover her dependencies; and was assassinated whilst carrying out this generous purpose, in 389 B.C.

THRAVE, THREAVE, of CORN, s. [thraf, Sax.] 24 sheaves, or 4 shocks, each containing 6 sheaves. In some countries they reckon 2 shocks to the thrave, and 12 sheaves to each shock.

THREAD, (thréd) s. [thred, Sax.] a small line of flax, or cotton, twisted; any thing contrived in a course, or uniform tenor; the main drift or design of a discourse. In Botany, is a part of a stamen which supports the anther.

To THREAD, (thréd) v. a. to pass through with a thread; to pierce; to slip through a difficult passage, or a crowd. In the last sense often spelt thrid.

THREADBARE, (thrédbare) a. worn to the naked threads; having no nap; worn out.

THREADMOSS, s. in Botany, a very numerous genus of mosses, having the seed-vessel of a long and slender stem.

THREAT, (thréat) s. the act of denouncing ill; a menace.

To THREAT, THREATEN, (thréat or thréten) v. a. threat is used only in poetry; [threatan, Sax.] to assure a person of, or denounce, future evil; to endeavour to terrify by denouncing ill; to menace.

THREATENER, s. a menacer, one that threatens.

THREATENING, s. a menace; a denunciation of evil.

THREE, a. [thrie, Sax.] two and one. Rule of Three. See Rule.

THREETFOLD, a. [threesfeald, Sax.] thrice repeated; consisting of three.

THREESCORE, a. sixty; three times twenty.

To THRESH, v. a. See To THRASH.

THRESH, s. one that threshes corn.

THRESHOLD, s. [threswold, Sax.] the ground or step under a door; entrance; gate; door.

THREW, preter. of To THROW.

THRICE, ad. [thrig, Sax.] three times. Sometimes set before an adjective to express the superlative degree, or amplification.

THRIFT, s. [from thrive.] profit; state of prospering; the state of acquiring more; frugality. In Botany, a pretty kind of plant, three species of which are found in England; one of which is much cultivated in cottage gardens.

THRIFTILY, ad. sparingly; frugally.

THRIFTINESS, s. frugality; managing with economy; sparingness.

THRIFTY, a. frugal; managing with prudence; sparing; well husbanded.

To THRILL, v. a. [thyrian, Sax.] to pierce or bore; to penetrate; to drill; to affect with a piercing sensation.—v. a. to have the quality of piercing; to pierce or wound the ear with a sharp sound; to feel or pass with a sharp tingling sensation.

To THRIVE, v. n. preter. throve, past part. thriven; [throa, Isl.] to prosper; to increase; to advance in any thing desired.

THRIVEN, s. one that prospers; one that grows rich.

THRIVING, a. prosperous.

THRIVINGLY, ad. prosperously.

THRO' a contraction of THROUGH.

THROAT, (thréat) s. [throte or throta, Sax.] in Anatomy, the fore part of the neck, or passage for food and breath. The main road of any place.

THROATWORT, s. in Botany, a plant used as a medicine for the throat.

To THROB, v. n. to heave at the breast with sorrow; to beat or palpitate.

THROB, s. a heave, or beat of palpitation.

THROE, s. [throvian, Sax.] the pain and anguish attending the bringing of a child into the world; any great agony; the final and mortal struggle.

THRONE, s. [thronos Gr. thronus, Lat.] a chair of state, richly adorned, and covered with a canopy, for emperors, kings, princes, &c. to sit on at all times of public ceremonies.

THRONG, s. [thrang, from thringan, Sax.] a crowd; a multitude pressing against each other.

To THRONG, v. n. to crowd; to swarm.—v. a. to incommode with crowds.

THRONING, a. crowding; gathering together in great numbers.

THROSTLE, s. [Sax.] in Natural History, a name of the thrush.

THROTTLE, s. [from throat,] the wind-pipe.

To THROTTLE, v. a. to choke; to suffocate; to kill by stopping the breath; to strangle; to stifle.

THROVE, preter. of To THRIVE.

THROUGH, (throo) prep. [thurh, Sax.] from one end or extremity to the other; by means of.

THROUGH, (throo) ad. from one end or side to the other.

THROUGHLY, ad. See THOROUGHLY.

THROUGHOUT, (throo-out) prep. quite through; entirely.

THROUGHOUT, ad. in every part; every where.

To THROW, (thru) v. a. pret. threw, past part. thrown; [thraueon, Sax.] to fling or cast to a distance; to toss or put away with violence, haste, or negligence; to lay down carelessly, or in haste; to cast; to emit; to venture at dice; to spread in haste; to reject. Used with away, to lose or spend profusely; to reject; with by, to reject, or lay aside as useless; with down, to overturn; with off, to expel, reject, or renounce; with out, to exert; to distance or leave behind; to eject; to emit; with up, to resign angrily; to emit or bring up.—v. n. to perform the act of casting; to cast dice. Used with about, to try expedients.

THROW, (thru) s. a cast; a cast of dice; the space to which any thing is thrown; an effort or violent sally; stroke; blow; throw.

THROWER, s. one that throws.

THROWSTER, (thruister) s. a twister of silk or thread.

THRUM, s. [thraum, Isl.] the ends of weavers' threads; any coars. yarn.

To THRUM, v. a. to grate, to play coarsely.

THRUSH, s. [thrise, Sax.] in Natural History, a well-known British singing bird. In Medicine, small round ulcerations, which appear in the mouth, and by degrees affect almost every part of the alimentary duct.

To THRUST, v. a. [trusito, Lat.] to push any thing into matter, or between close bodies; to push or drive with violence; to stab; to obtrude; to compress, used with together.—v. n. to attack with a pointed weapon; to squeeze into; to throng.

THRUST, s. a push; assault; hostile attack with a pointed weapon.

THUCYDIDES, the great historian of the Peloponnesian war, was an Athenian by birth; and is said, when a boy, to have heard Herodotus read some part of his History at the Olympic games, and thus to have been incited to the work which has made his name imperishable. He was educated as citizens of wealth and birth usually were; and had the command of a fleet at one period of the war whose history he has told. It was for some apparent defalcation in duty in this command that he was banished, and did not return to Athens till the Thirty Tyrants had fallen, and the old constitution and glory of the city were being revived by Thrasybulus. The remainder of his life, and the time of his death, are unknown. He flourished during the latter part of the 5th century b. c. His History consists of 8 books, and leaves about 7 years of the war unrecorded. It is written in a condensed and energetic style; but in many parts, and particularly in the speeches, is very obscure. He has justified the title—"a possession for ever"—which he has given at the outset to his work; both by the care in accumulating and in arranging his materials; by his accuracy and fidelity; and by the care with which he has pointed out the lessons which the different events he has narrated ought to teach. It is a valuable contribution to genuine history; and one which English readers can profitably study, by means of recent translations.

THUG, s. in Hindustan, a devotee of the goddess Káli, who commits murders in her honour. These treacherous fanatics were formerly very numerous, and were associated in troops, who travelled for the express purpose of strangling all whom they could in secrecy and safety. They are almost extinct now, through the exertions of the British authorities.

THUMB, (thum) s. [thuma, Sax.] in Anatomy, the shortest finger of the hand, which is in man, and some kinds of animals, placed opposite to the other fingers, so that the hand is more strongly prehensile than otherwise it could be.

To THUMB, v. n. to handle awkwardly.

THUMP, s. [thombo, Ital.] a hard heavy blow given with something blunt.

To THUMP, v. a. to beat with dull heavy blows.—v. n. to fall or strike with a dull heavy blow.

THUMPING, a. beating; great, huge, big.

THUNBERG, CHARLES PETER, a Swedish naturalist and traveller. He studied at Upsal, under Linnaeus; and first visited France and Holland, for botanical purposes. His next journey was to the Cape of Good Hope, and thence to Japan and the Dutch E. Indies; and he was absent for 8 years. He was made botanical professor at Upsal, after his return; and he published an account of his travels, with large and valuable works on the plants of Japan, and of the Cape; and many other treatises, &c. on his favourite study. He died in 1828, aged 85 years.

THUNDER, s. [Sax. donder, Swed.] the loud noise attending lightning, caused by the rushing together of the air displaced by the flash; any loud noise, or tumultuous violence.

To THUNDER, v. n. to make that loud and terrible noise attending lightning.—v. a. to emit with noise and terror; to publish any denunciation or threat.

THUNDERBOLT, s. lightning; ecclesiastical fulmination.

THUNDERCLAP, s. an explosion of thunder.

THUNDER, s. the power that thunders.

THUNDER-ROD, s. a lightning conductor; or long pointed wire, fixed to a building, or to a ship, so that its point is higher than any other part, and receiving the electrical fluid from the clouds, can convey it safely to the earth. This invention is of special importance to ships, and has been the means of saving great numbers of them from being set on fire by lightning.

THUNDERSHOWER, s. rain accompanied with thunder.

THUNDERSTORM, s. a storm or tempest accompanied by thunder and lightning.

To THUNDERSTRIKE, v. a. past part. thunderstruck; to blast or hurt with lightning; to terrify or amaze by some unexpected event.

THURGAU, s. one of the cantons of Switzerland, bounded by the cantons of Zürich, St. Gall, and Schaffhausen. It is surrounded by mountains, and is watered by the river Thur, and the streams which flow into it. It borders also on the lake of Constance. It produces corn, fruits, flax, &c.; and great numbers of cattle, sheep, &c. are reared. There is a great deal of manufacturing industry displayed throughout the whole district, and it has a good trade. Frauenfeld is its chief town. Pop. about 100,000.

THURIFICATION, s. [thus and facio, Lat.] the act of fuming with incense; the act of burning incense.

THURLOE, JOHN, a person who held various situations of great trust and eminence during the latter part of the reign of the Long Parliament, and under Oliver Cromwell and his son Richard; whose letters, &c. have added considerably to our knowledge of the affairs of those periods. He was a lawyer, and was first employed on the parliament's side at the treaty of Uxbridge. More settled situations were successively bestowed on him, and at last he was made secretary of state by Cromwell. He was of course in the Protector's parliaments, and received many honours because of his high office. He continued in office under Richard, till the deposition of the feeble Protector, and the reinstallation of the Rump Parliament. It seems tolerably certain that he offered to help in the Restoration of Charles II. It is quite certain that he was unmolested, except in respect of estates, which he had to give up to prior royalist owners, by the king. He died in 1668, aged 52 years. He was very good as a secretary under such a monarch as Cromwell, but his papers, useful as they are to the historian, do not inspire a high opinion of the writer.

THURLOW, EDWARD, LORD, one of the great lawyers and politicians of the last century. He studied at Cambridge, and the Inner Temple; and entering parliament, gained the royal favour by his support of the American policy of Lord North. He soon was seated on the woolsack, and was not displaced till the Coalition ministry; but his return to office was very speedy, and he lost it only because the king's need of Mr. Pitt was greater than his need or admiration of Thurlow. He was, however, long after his retirement from all public life, consulted on matters of importance, both by George III. and the Prince of Wales. He died in 1806, aged 71 years.

THU/NEISSER, LEONARD, a noted quack of the 16th century, who gained such reputation as a goldsmith at Constance, that he was employed in the mines of Tyrol, and enjoyed the favour of the archduke to such a degree, that he travelled, at his desire, in most of the countries of Europe, and to Africa and Asia also. His next exploit was the cure of the margravine of Brandenburg, which led to his establishment in the electorate, and raised him to the highest pitch of fame. However, a sudden reverse came;—his wife died, and he lost his most effective coadjutor in all his schemes; he was discovered and exposed as an ignorant pretender to science; and the correspondent and consultee of emperors and kings, was forced to pick up a precarious living, by vending his false wares in less conspicuous markets. He died at last at Cologne, in 1596, aged 66 years. His books are numerous, but utterly worthless.

THURSDAY, s. the fifth day of the week, so called from Thor, who was worshipped by the Teutons on this day.

THUS, ad. [Sax.] in this manner; to this degree or quantity.

TO THWACK, v. a. [thaccin, Sax.] to strike with something blunt and heavy; to beat heartily; to belabour; to bang; to thrash.

THWACK, s. a blow given with something blunt and heavy. THWART, (a pron. broad, a [thwer, Sax.] cross; transverse; perverse; inconvenient; mischievous.

TO THWART, v. a. to cross; to do any thing in opposition to another.—v. n. to be in opposition to.

THY, pron. [thin, Sax.] of, belonging, or relating to thee. It is used before a word beginning with a consonant. See THINE.

THYME, (time) s. [thym, Fr. thymus, Lat.] in Botany, a genus of well-known sweet-scented plants.

THYRSUS, s. [Gr.] in Architectural Decorations, a lance or spear, wrapt in vine leaves. In Botany, a cluster of flowers, like those of the horse chestnut.

TIAR, TIARA, s. [tiara, Lat. tiara, Fr.] a diadem, or dress for the head; the pope's triple crown.

TIBER, the river on which Rome stands. It rises in the Apennines, and receiving the waters of other streams from the same mountains, after a course of about 150 miles, falls into the Mediterranean Sea.

TIBERIUS, CLAUDIUS NERO, the successor of Augustus Caesar in the Roman empire. He was son-in-law to Augustus, and greatly distinguished himself both as a statesman and as a general before he attained the throne. His character seemed so fair, that his accession was hailed with unaffected joy; but his reign was one course of tyranny and crime. It was the first that Rome had seen of that description, and was the example of the long series that have made the annals of the empire unique in the history of the world. He perished at length by the hands of one of his attendants, in 37 A. D., aged 78, and having reigned 23 years. See SEJANUS.

TIBERIUS II., one of the Byzantine emperors, successor to Justin II. He was captain of the imperial guard, and on the recommendation of the empress Sophia, when Justin found himself incapacitated by disease, was raised to the throne. His reign was distinguished by success in war against the Persians, and by such domestic policy as made him highly popular. He died in 582, having reigned but 4 years.

TIBIA, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the name given to the larger of the two bones of the leg.

TIBULLUS, A. ALBIUS, a Roman poet of the Augustan age. He was not a court dependant, but he was one of the friends of Horace; and he died during a journey to the E. with V. Messalla, his patron, in about 18 or 19 B. C. His poems are of the class called by the ancients elegies, and are principally love-songs, containing many passages of exquisite beauty.

TIC DOLOUREUX, s. [Fr.] in Medicine, the violent species of neuralgia that affects the face and head.

TO TICE, v. a. contracted from TO ENTICE.

TIC/NO, or TESSIN, a canton of Switzerland, bordering on the Sardinian states and Austrian Italy, and bounded by the cautious Valais, Uri, and the Grisons. It is about 60 miles in length, and 25 miles in mean breadth. It lies on the S. side of the great ridge of the Alps, and Mount St. Gothard is on its N.

boundary. It has other heights of above 9000 feet. It is watered by the river Ticino, or Tessin, and by other mountain streams; and parts of Lakes Lugano and Maggiore are included in its borders. Fruits, wine, timber, cattle, silk, &c. are produced, and some marble is found. It is a busy region, both by its small manufactures and by its trade. Bellinzona is its chief place. Pop. about 125,000.

TICK, s. [perhaps contracted from ticket,] score or trust.—[tigue, Fr. or teque, Belg.] parasitical insects infesting sheep, &c. The linen case which holds the feathers or flocks of a bed.

TO TICK, v. n. to take on credit, or on trust; to run in debt; to trust, or give credit.

TICKELL, THOMAS, an English verse-maker, who was esteemed a poet in his day, and was the friend of Addison, whose works he edited, and the other great writers of that period. The loyalty of his Muse won him a comfortable situation in Ireland. He died in 1740, aged 54 years.

TICKEN, TUCKING, s. a kind of strong linen used for bedding. TICKET, s. a token of any right or claim, at the delivery of which admission is granted, or the claim acknowledged.

TO TICKLE, v. a. [tillio, Lat.] to create a titillation by slight touches; to please by slight gratifications.—v. n. to feel a titillation, or a sensation which causes laughter.

TICKLISH, a. sensible to titillation; easily tickled; tottering; difficult, or nice; uncertain; unfixed.

TID, a. [tydler, Sax.] tender; soft; nice.

TIDE-MILL, s. in Practical Mechanics, a water-mill moved by tide-water, frequently used in clearing fen-lands from the water spread over them by high tides.

TIDES, s. [tyd, Sax. tyd, Belg. and Isl.] in Astronomy, &c., one of the most remarkable effects of the action of gravitation observable on the surface of the globe. This force, exerted both by the sun and by the moon, raises a vast wave or swell in the ocean, which follows each of those luminaries, as swiftly as the configuration of the shores admits; by a law of Hydrostatics, another similar wave is raised, directly opposite to that which is the immediate effect of solar or lunar attraction. It follows, necessarily, that at new and full moon, when the attraction of these bodies is exerted in the same line, the tides should be highest; and at the quadratures, when it is exerted in lines at right angles with each other, they should be lowest;—these are spring and neap tides. The wind exercises a considerable influence on the tides; and as yet, no formula has been devised, by which the occurrence of the tides may be calculated with precision and certainty; all the tables that are in use, are constructed from observation of the times of high water for many years.

TIDESMAN, s. a tidewater, or custom-house officer, put on board ships to prevent smuggling, or defrauding the king of his duties.

TIDEWAITER, s. an officer who watches the landing of goods at the custom-house.

TIDILY, ad. neatly; readily.

TIDINESS, s. neatness; readiness.

TIDINGS, s. [tidan, Sax.] news; account of something that has happened.

TIDY, a. [tidt, Isl.] seasonable; neat; ready.

TO TIE, v. a. [tiin, Sax.] to bind; to fasten with a knot; used with up, to confound or obstruct; to oblige or constrain.

TIE, s. a fastening made by a knot; a bond or obligation.

TIEDEMAN, DIETRICH, a philosophic writer of Germany of the latter part of the last century. He studied at Göttingen, having already formed his taste for philosophical speculation; and after changing his aim from theology to law, he gave that up, for the more precarious path of literature. His first regular employments were tutorships, but he eventually became a professor at Marburg; and died in 1803, aged 55 years. His works are numerous, and are useful and popular; but his philosophical system was not such as to rank along with those of the critical school.

TIEDGE, CHRISTOPHER AUGUSTUS, a classic poet of Germany, who was educated for the legal profession at Halle, and afterwards relinquished it for poetry. He was, however, more happy than many, or most who so devote themselves to literary life; for he enjoyed the friendship of a distinguished and wealthy lady, whose bounty preserved him from the squalid struggle with poverty; and enabled him, by travel, and study, and society, and the absence of care, through a long life, to la-hour with his heart and his pen. He died in 1841, aged 89 years. His Urania is his chief poem.

TIERCE, s. See TEACE.

TIGE, s. in Architecture, the shaft of a column from the astragal to the capital.

TIGER, (g hard) s. [tigre, Fr. tigris, Lat.] in Zoology, a large, very fierce, and very beautiful animal of the cat kind, which abounds in the East Indies. Its appearance and habits are known to all.

TIGER-CAT, s. in Natural History, the general name of those feline animals, which are larger than the cat, and less than the lion, tiger, leopard, panther, puma, &c.

TIGHT, (tî) a. (dicht, Belg.) close, or stretched hard, opposed to loose; cleanly dressed; something less than neat; not leaky, applied to casks or vessels.

To TIGHTEN, v. a. to straiten; to make close.

TIGHTLY, ad. closely; not loosely; neatly.

TIGHTNESS, (titness) s. closeness; neatness.

TIGRESS, s. the female of the tiger.

TIGRIS, one of the great rivers of Asia; which, rising in Mount Taurus, flows through the great Assyrian plain; and falls into the Euphrates, not far from its mouth, after a course of about 1000 miles.

TIKE, s. a cur, or small dog.

TILBURY FORT, a fortification on the Essex side of the Thames, opposite Gravesend, with barracks, &c. &c., 28 miles from London.

TILE, s. [tile, Sax. tegel, Belg.] thin plates of baked clay, used in covering houses.

To TILE, v. a. to cover with tiles; to cover as tiles.

TILED, a. in Botany, one leaf or scale partly covering another like the tiles on a house, exemplified in the empalement of the dandelion and burdock.

TILER, s. one whose trade is to cover houses with tiles.

TILGATE BEDS, in Geology, the name given to the beds of grit, sandstone, &c. forming part of the Great Wealden group of rocks, and found most fully developed in Tilgate Forest, Sussex. They are the deposits of an estuary, and abound with Saurian and other fossils, in a fine state of preservation.

TILING, s. the roof covered with tiles.

TILL, s. a money-box or drawer.

TILL, prep. (tîl, Sax.) to the time of. Till now, is to the present time; till then, to that time.

TILL, conj. to the time that; to the degree that.

To TILL, v. a. [tyllan, Sax.] to plough or manure the ground.

TILLAGE, s. the act of ploughing and manuring land, to make it produce corn; husbandry; agriculture.

TILLEMONT, SEBASTIAN LE NAIN DE, a French historical and critical writer, of the 17th century. He studied at Port Royal; and afterwards, entering the priesthood, became director of the Port Royal nunnery. He once visited the Netherlands; and he died in 1698, aged 61 years. His works are the History of the Emperors, and an Ecclesiastical History, which are in fact but one work, and have the same object, the historical elucidation of Christianity. He had some trouble from the censor of the press, in respect of the publication of it; and the authorities had to interfere, before it could appear.

TILLER, s. a strong piece of timber fastened to a ship's rudder, by which it is moved; a young tree left to grow till it is fit to fell; a husbandman; a ploughman; a till; a small drawer.

TILLOCH, DR. ALEXANDER, a distinguished cultivator of practical science, was first a tobaccoist, afterwards a printer, and for the greater part of the rest of his life a newspaper editor. He experimented on the art of stereotyping, and invented a bank note plate which he thought incapable of imitation. In other departments of science he was equally diligent, and he founded the Philosophical Magazine. Later in life he attended to theological questions, and occasionally preached. His Dissertation on the Apocalypse, and Mechanic's Oracle, were written at this period of his life; and he received from Glasgow, his native place, his honorary title. He died in 1825, aged 66 years.

TILLOTSON, DR. JOHN, an eminent English prelate. He was of Puritan origin, and at first a Puritan himself; but during his studies at Cambridge, imbibed Episcopal views, and was ordained before the Restoration. He received valuable preferment during Charles II.'s reign; but his star was in the ascendant at the Revolution of 1688, being raised at once to the see of Canterbury. He died in 1694, aged 64 years. His sermons are not so highly thought of as they were, but they are yet regarded as good specimens of pulpit oratory.

TILLS, s. in Farming, a sort of pulse.

TILLY, JOHN TZERKAS, COUNT OF, one of the great generals of the Thirty Years' war. He was a Netherlander by birth; and was at first a Jesuit by profession, and through his whole life retained the habits of mind and feelings he then acquired. He studied war under the ferocious Alva; and rose rapidly, then to that of the League; and at last to that of the Imperial troops. It is in this last command that he has made his name famous for his skill as a general, and infamous for his ferocity, in permitting the sack of Magdeburg. At Leipzig he was defeated by Gustavus Adolphus; and again at the passage of the Lech, when he fell, in 1632, aged 73 years.

TILSIT, a large, rich, and commercial town of Lithuania, Prussia. It consists chiefly of two long streets, of a proportionable breadth, and a contiguous suburb called the Liberty. It is seated on the river Memel, over which is a bridge of boats. It has some fine buildings, and its trade and manufactures are considerable. It was here that the notorious treaty between Russia, Prussia, and France was made. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 55. 0. N. Long. 21. 50. E.

TILT, s. [tyld, Sax.] a tent; any covering over the head; the covering of a boat or carriage; a military game, in which the combatants thrust at each other with lances; a thrust.

To TILT, v. n. to fall or lean on one side; to run in tilts; to fight with rapiers; to rush as in a combat.—v. a. to stoop, hold, or force on one side; to turn so as to run out; to cover like the tilt of a boat; to carry, or point, as in tilts.

TILTH, s. husbandry; manure; culture.

TILT-HAMMER, s. in iron-works and forges, is a huge hammer worked by water or steam power.

TIMBER, s. [ymbrian, Sax.] wood fit for building; main trunk of a tree. Ironically, the materials of any thing.

TIMBER-L, s. [tympenon, Lat.] a musical instrument.

TIMÆUS, the name of the writer of a Glossary to Plato, which is often published with the writings of that author: the time in which he lived is unknown. Also, the name of a Pythagorean philosopher, who lived in the time of Plato, and was highly esteemed by him; one of his Dialogues being called after him. Also, the name of a Sicilian historian, a few fragments of whose writings remain. He flourished in the 4th and 3rd centuries B. C., and was banished by Agathocles of Syracuse, and lived afterwards at Athens.

TIMANTHES, a celebrated painter of ancient Greece, who flourished in the 5th and 4th centuries B. C.

TIMBUCTOO, a great city of central Africa, standing not far from the river Quorra. It is very rudely built, and has no fortifications. Its chief wealth and celebrity arises from its being the principal place on the great caravan route from the Guinea coast to the Mediterranean coast. Very few European travellers have ever penetrated so far into the interior. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 17. 9. N. Long. 0. 58. W.

TIME, s. [tym, Erse, tyma, Sax.] duration considered as set out by certain periods, and measured by certain epochs; measure of duration; interval, season, or proper time; life; early season; the hour of child-birth; the repetition of any thing; musical measure.

To TIME, v. a. to bring or do at a proper season; to allot a certain space for the accomplishing a thing; to measure harmonically.

TIMELY, ad. seasonably; opportunely; early; soon.

TIMID, a. [timide, Fr. timidis, from timeo, Lat.] fearful; wanting courage; timorous; cowardly.

TIMIDITY, s. [timiditè, Fr. timiditas, Lat.] want of courage; fearfulness; cowardliness.

TIMO-LEON, a famous Greek statesman and general. He was a Corinthian by birth, and his first service in the cause of freedom was the overthrow of the tyranny of his own brother. He next proceeded to Syracuse, where he drove out two pretenders to the tyranny, re-established order and law, defeated a vastly superior Carthaginian army which had been sent to obtain possession of the city, and died in 337 B. C., leaving behind him a reputation of almost unsullied heroism.

TIMON, the Athenian misanthrope, whose history, drama-tized by Shakspeare, has become a proverb for foolish hatred of one's kind. Both the facts that are known respecting him, and the time when he lived, are correctly given by our great poet.

TIMOROUS, a. [timeo, Lat.] too much affected with fear; fearful.

TIMOROUSLY, ad. fearfully; with much fear.

TIMOROUSNESS, s. See TIMIDITY.

TIMOTHEUS, a Greek poet and musician of the beginning of the 4th century. A few fragments of his verses yet remain. He is said to have added four strings to the cithara.

TIMOTHEUS, or TI'MOTHY, a young man of Lystra, whose mother was a Hebrew, who became a disciple of the apostle Paul, and accompanied him on some of his evangelical tours, and fulfilled the office of the ministry at Ephesus under Paul's directions. He is reputed to have perished at Ephesus, before 100 A. D., by sudden popular violence. Paul's Epistles to Timothy were written to aid and direct him in the work which was intrusted to him at Ephesus. They are admirable compendiums of Christian truth and practice, and show in the most amiable light the character of the great apostle of the Gentiles. The first was written from Nicopolis, in Macedonia, and the second from Rome, but during which imprisonment is not satisfactorily ascertained.

TI'MOTHY-GRASS, s. in Farming, a name of a common species of cat's tail grass, derived from a cultivator of it in N. Carolina, United States.

TIMOUR, or TAMERLANE, the great Tatar conqueror of the 14th century. After a youth of hunting and freebooting, he entered the service of the emir of Khorassan; and on his death he ascended his throne, and fixed his residence at Samarcand. His reign was one unremitted campaign. Khorassan, Tatar, Persia, Algesiras, and its neighbouring provinces, Georgia, N. Hindustan, the E. parts of the Turkish empire, Anatolia, were successively overrun by the Tatar hordes, under their restless sultan. At last, Bayazet himself, with a vast Turkish army, yet wholly unequal in numbers to his invaders, met him, but only to be routed, and to be made himself a prisoner. The tale of the iron cage is a mere exaggeration. In two years Timour died, whilst advancing against China, in 1405, aged 70 years, and having reigned 36.

TIN, s. [ten, Belg.] in Chemistry, a whitish metal, softer, less elastic, and less sonorous, than any other metal, excepting lead. The principal mines of it are in Cornwall. The uses to which this metal are applied are very numerous, and are familiar to all. Great quantities are sent to all parts of the world, and the produce of other countries is exported through England. The tin-mines of Cornwall have been known from the earliest dawn of Phœnician commerce, and are supposed to have originated the name Britain, applied to our island.

To TIN, v. a. to coat or line with tin.

TINCAL, s. in Chemistry, the commercial name of crude borax.

TINCT, s. [tinct, Fr.] a colour, stain, or spot.

TINCTURE, s. [tinctura, from tingo, Lat.] colour, superadded by something; an imperfect smattering of an art or science. In Medicine, solutions containing the active principles of substances, which are obtained by the use of particular menstrua, and are called according to the menstruum employed. In Heraldry, the names of the colours, furs, and metals employed in blazoning coats of arms.

To TINCTURE, v. a. to imbue or impregnate with some colour or taste; to imbue the mind.

TINDAL, DR. MATTHEW, a political and controversial writer of the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th centuries. He studied at Oxford for the legal profession, and graduated there. During this time he embraced Romanism, but very soon returned to the communion of the English Church, in which he continued to the end of his life. He warmly espoused the Revolution of 1688, and wrote against the High Church party, and in vindication of some proposed alterations in the Liturgy and Creeds. He also wrote some good essays on the Law of Nations, the Rights of Subjects, &c. And he was for some time judge in the court of delegates, and enjoyed a pension from the crown. His book against the High Churchmen was burnt by the hangman; but he would not perhaps have been remembered at all, had he not in the latter part of his life resumed his polemical authorship, and produced a work which obtained him a place amongst the deistical writers, entitled Christianity as old as the Creation. It was vehemently attacked by numerous apologists, and as vehemently defended. He seems to have rejected the history of the gospel, and to have formed a very erroneous notion of its truth; and it is from the very point of view that he took, that the irrefragable proof of the truth of Christianity may be obtained. The historic evidence is of course of the same kind, as for all other ancient facts, and is perfectly independent of the proof of the truth. Tindal died in 1733, aged 76 years.

TINDAL, NICHOLAS, nephew of the foregoing, a clergyman of the English Church, who was chaplain to Greenwich Hospital, and translated and continued Rapin's History of England. He died in 1774, aged 87 years.

TINDER, s. [tyndre, or tender, Sax.] linen cloth burnt to ashes, formerly used in catching the spark made by striking a flint and steel together.

TINDERBOX, s. a box for holding tinder.

TINE, s. [tinne, Isl.] the tooth of a harrow; the spike of a fork; trouble, distress.

To TING, TINK, v. n. [tinno, Lat.] to make a sharp shrill noise.

To TINGE, v. a. [tingo, Lat.] to impregnate or imbue with a colour or taste; to stain.

TINGGLASS, s. See BISMUTH.

To TINGLE, v. n. [tingelen, Belg.] to perceive a continued sound in the ear; to feel a sharp quick pain, or pleasure.

TINIAN, one of the Ladrone Islands, N. Pacific Ocean, lying in about the middle of the chain. It is about 12 miles long, and 6 broad. It is an exceedingly agreeable country, well wooded, and supplied with all good fruit and timber trees; fertile, and abounding in wild cattle, &c.; whilst the surrounding sea has plenty of fine fish. It is known chiefly as a grateful place of refreshment to Anson, and some others of our voyagers. Lat. 15. 30. N. Long. 145. 58. E.

TINKER, s. a person who mends old copper and brazen vessels.

To TINKLE, v. n. [tinter, Fr.] to make a sharp quick noise; to clink.

TINMAN, s. one who manufactures and sells wares made of tin, or iron tinned over.

TINNING, s. the process of covering plates and sheets of iron, and the interior of vessels of iron and copper, with tin.

TINNINUS AURIUM, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, a tingling sound in the ears, frequent in some diseases, and often heard on atmospheric changes.

TINPLATE, s. small squares of sheet iron, covered with tin, and used by tin-workers in the manufacture of various culinary utensils, &c.

TINSEL, s. [etincelle, Fr.] a kind of shining cloth; any thing showy, but of small value.

TINT, s. [teinte, Fr. tinta, Ital.] a dye, or colour.

TINTORETTO, IL, whose real name was Giacom Robusti, a famous Venetian painter. He studied under Titian; and sought to combine with the exquisite colouring of his teacher, the grandeur of form and composition which distinguished Michael Angelo. He lacked the patience, the concentration, and the large ambition, that might have raised him to the very highest ranks of the followers of art; yet his pictures are characterized by great excellence, and many extraordinary anecdotes are recorded respecting them. They are very numerous in Venice; and some are known here by copies and engravings. He died in 1564, aged 82 years.

TINY, a. [tynd, Dan.] little; small; puny.

TIP, s. [tip, Belg.] the top, end, or point. In Botany, a name of the anther, which contains the fertilizing powder in flowers.

To TIP, v. a. to cover the head or extremity; to strike lightly, to tap.

TIPPERARY, a county of Munster, in Ireland. It is about 73 miles in length, and from 16 to 39 in breadth; and is bounded by King's County, Galway, Queen's County, Kilkenny, Waterford, Clare, and Limerick. It is generally fertile, and contains 147 parishes. It is mountainous; and copper, lead, silver, coal, building-stone, slate, &c. are found in greater or less abundance. The river Suir runs through all the length of it, beside which there are numbers of smaller rivers and brooks. Lough Deary and the Shannon form its N. boundary. The principal productions are cattle, sheep, butter, and flour. The most considerable places are Clonmel, which is the county town, Cashel, and Carrick. Pop. 435,553. It sends 4 members to the imperial parliament.

TIPPET, s. (teppet, Sax.) something worn about the neck.

TO TIPPLE, v. n. (tepel, old Teut.) to drink to excess.—v. a. to drink with luxury or excess.

TIPPLER, s. a sottish drunkard; an idle drunken fellow.

TIPPOO SAIB, son of Hyder Aly, sultan of Mysore, Hindustan; celebrated for the determination with which he endeavoured to effect the expulsion of the British from India. He fought in his father's wars; and after repeated defeats and treaties, he fell at the storming of Seringapatam, in 1799, aged 50 years. He was a man of considerable attainments, considering his opportunities; and was highly popular amongst his subjects.

TIPSTAFF, s. an officer with a staff tipped with metal, and who takes into custody such persons as are committed by the court, or by a judge; the staff itself so tipped.

TIPSY, a. drunk.

TIPTOE, s. the end of the toe.

TIRABOSCHI, GIROLAMO, an Italian critical writer, of the last century. He was educated by the Jesuits, and became professor of eloquence at Milan; and was afterwards appointed librarian to the duke of Modena. He was a regular ecclesiastic, an abbot; but was knighted by the duke, and ennobled by his native town Bergamo. His fame was truly European, during his life-time; and he died in 1794, aged 62 years. His great work is his History of Italian Literature, which both for its own merits, and as the first work of the kind in Europe, is greatly esteemed by the learned.

TIRE, s. (tyer, Belg.) rank or row; a head-dress; a wheel; apparatus; the hoop or rim of iron surrounding a wheel. In the sea language, it is a row of cannon placed upon a ship's side, either above, upon deck, or below, distinguished by the epithets of the upper or lower tier.

TO TIRE, v. a. (tirian, Sax.) to make weary, or to fatigue; to harass; to dress the head; to tease intolerably.

TIREDNES, s. weariness; state of being tired.

TIREDSOME, a. wearisome, tedious, fatiguing.

TIREWOMAN, s. a woman whose business is to make dresses for the head.

TISSUE, s. (Fr.) cloth interwoven with gold or silver, or figured colours. In Vegetable Physiology, the kind of substance of which the various organs of plants are composed, whether of cells, fibres, or vessels.

TITANIUM, s. in Chemistry, a metal of a reddish orange colour, crystallizing in cubes, very hard; found in various minerals, in iron slag, or cinder, and in the sand of a rivulet in Cornwall.

TITANS, in Grecian Mythology, the name bestowed on the earliest race of gods, the offspring of Heaven and Earth, who were dispossessed by Zeus, and the gods of his dynasty or family. Prometheus was one of the Titans, but most of them were of a very different character and disposition from him. The Cyclops, and the giants who piled Ossa on Pelion, and attempted to scale Olympus, were of their number.

TITHABLE, a. liable to pay tithes; chargeable to the tenths or tithes payable to the clergy.

TO TITHE, v. a. (teothan, Sax.) to tax with the payment of the tenth part; to pay the tenth part.

TITHER, s. one who gathers tithes.

TITHES, s. (teotha, Sax.) in Ecclesiastical affairs, the tenth part of agricultural produce of all kinds, and of some other industrial produce, which was assigned to the clergy of the Established Church, and which is now commuted into a rent-charge, regulated by the average price of corn. This revenue was argumentatively grounded on the tithes of the Jewish law, by which the Levites were supported; but a very little consideration will deprive it of the shadow of countenance from that institution; while the history of tithes, which shows that they originated in one case from royal grant or edict, in another, from personal gift or bequest, and in others, in other ways yet, completes the conviction of the entire difference in kind of the tithes of the Roman and Anglican Churches, and those of the Jewish state. Before the Reformation, also, in this country, the tithes were raised not exclusively for the priesthood, or clergy, but for the support of the poor, and for the repair of the churches and maintenance of worship, &c., also. This alteration in the intent and application, and still more, the Commutation Act, make the law of the land the only ground of the claim, depriving it of all pretext to be a Divine right. Lay-impropriation, which has prevailed to a great extent, has also altered the whole aspect of tithes as an ecclesiastical revenue, and made it clear that they now are a secular tax, which the legislature has the right, and the power, to use according to its will, as it can other taxes and imposts. The great tithes were gathered on wood, hay, wheat, &c.; and the small tithes, on garden-stuff, milk, eggs, the young of all kinds of stock and poultry, and such profits as arose from trade, &c.

TITHING, s. the number or company of ten men, with their families, knit together in a society, all of them being bound to the king for the peaceable and good behaviour of each of their society: of these companies there was one chief person, who, from his office, was called tithingman.

TITIAN, or TIZIANO VECELLI DA CADORE, the great Italian painter, who founded the Venetian school. He studied under Zuccati and Bellini, and was not a little aided by the taste of a fellow pupil, Giorgione. He spent the greater part of his life at Venice, but he did visit the other great places of Italy, and even went as far as Madrid, on the invitation of Charles V. He died of the plague in 1576, aged 96 years. His success seems to have arisen mainly from his consummate skill as a colourist, yet many of his great pictures are almost as remarkable for their composition. Engravings, &c. have made his most famous works in some degree familiar to us.

TITICACA, the name of a lake on the borders of Peru and Bolivia, S. America. It lies amongst the Cordilleras, and is about 80 miles in circuit. It contains several islands, and is fed by great numbers of mountain-streams. In fish and water-fowl it abounds. On one of the islands, which gave its name to the lake, was a very splendid temple to the Sun.

TITILLATION, s. a pleasing sensation from the gentle touch of some parts; a tickling.

TITLARK, s. in Ornithology, a bird allied to the lark.

TITLE, s. (titulus, Lat.) a general head comprising particulars; an appellation of honour; a name; the first page of a book, explaining its subject, likewise called title-page; a claim of right; an inscription.

TO TITLE, v. a. to name; to ennoble; to entitle.

TITMOUSE, or TIT, s. in Ornithology, a genus of well-known insectivorous birds, whose incessant bustle in clearing garden trees and bushes of the pupæ and larvæ of insects, has been repaid by the reputation of being very destructive to plants.

TO TITTER, v. n. to laugh with restraint, or softly; to giggle by fits.

TITTLE, s. (tit, Teut.) a point or dot; a particle.

TITTLE-TATTLE, s. idle talk; mere prate; gossiping; empty gabble.

TITULAR, a. (titulaire, Fr.) enjoying the title; nominal.

TITULARITY, s. the state of being titular.

TITUS FLAVIUS VESPASIANUS, an emperor of Rome, son and successor of Vespasian. He was early distinguished for the gentleness of his character, and for his military courage and skill, and took a leading part in detroning Vitellius and in making his father emperor. He was appointed to carry on the war in Judæa, and succeeded in taking Jerusalem; and thus in dispersing for ever the Jewish people, and destroying the Mosaic institutions. He was rewarded with a triumph; and the Arch of Titus now standing in Rome, though despoiled of its sculpture, commemorates it still. His reign was altogether excellent; but the Colosseum, built by him for gladiatorial exhibitions, will show us that it was not such excellence as is esteemed in these days. This island was fully subdued by his general, Agricola. And the great eruption of Vesuvius, which buried Pompeii, Herculaneum, and Stabie, and killed the elder Pliny, took place during his reign. He died in 81 A. D., aged 41 years, having reigned but 2 years.

TITUS, PAUL'S EPISTLE TO, one of the private letters of the great apostle, relating particularly to the duties laid on Titus, in his mission to Crete; of whose history there is no record, except a few incidental sentences in Paul's other letters. It belongs to the same class as the letters to Timothy, and may be profitably compared with them.

TIVERTON, Devonshire. It is seated on the river Ex, over which is a handsome stone bridge. It has been noted for its great woollen manufacture, and is 161 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 10,040.

TIVOLI, a town of the Papal States, Italy. It was anciently called Tibur, and stands near the Anio. It is a pretty and busy place, with a college, and a tolerable library. In its neighbourhood is found that species of tufa, called travertine, which is quarried and used as a building-stone. It is 16 miles from Rome. Pop. about 6000. Lat. 41. 50. N. Long. 12. 48. E.

TO, ad. [Sax. to, Belg.] when it comes before a verb, is a sign of the infinitive mood, and implies that it is used substantively. After an adjective, it denotes its object. To and again, or to and fro, implies backward and forward.

TO, prep. opposed to from, denotes motion towards. Sometimes it implies address, attention, addition, state, or place whither any one goes, opposition, amount, proportion, possession, perception, accord or fitting, the subject of affirmation, in comparison of; as far as. After an adjective, it denotes the object. Before face, presence. After a verb, it denotes its object. Sometimes it implies the degree. To-day, implies the present day; to-morrow, the day next after the present; to-night, the approaching or present night.

TOAD, (tōd) s. [Lade, Sax.] in Natural History, a well-known species of reptile, ignorantly thought venomous. The foreign species are numerous, and very remarkable.

TOADFLAX, s. in Botany, a name of the plants commonly called snapdragon.

TOADGRASS, s. in Botany, the bastard chickweed.

TOADSTOOL, s. in Botany, the common name for small kinds of fungi.

TOAST, (tōst) v. a. [to tostum, from torreo, Lat.] to dry, or make brown, by holding before a fire; to name a health to be drunk.

TOAST, (tōst) s. bread dried and made brown before the fire; a celebrated beauty whose health is often drunk.

TOASTER, s. one who toasts.

TOBACCO, s. in Botany and Commerce, a genus of plants, found in tropical America, and now largely cultivated in every part of the world; the leaves of which are used in smoking, betog dried in a peculiar manner, and made into cigars, and cut into fine strips. Snuff is also made of them.

TOBACCONIST, s. a manufacturer and seller of tobacco.

TOBAGO, or TABAGO, the most southward of the islands in the West India, and the most easterly except Barbadoes. It is about 25 miles long, and about 9 broad. The climate is far more temperate than could be expected from its situation so near the equator. It is fruitful and well watered, and the sea is stored with excellent fish, particularly turtle of every kind, and mullets of a most delicious taste, with other kinds unknown in England.

TOBIT, the name of one of the Apocryphal books, sometimes bound up with the Old Testament. It is a ridiculous tale, without any moral sufficiently clear to make its absurdity palatable; yet it is declared canonical by the Church of Rome, and is read publicly in the Church of England.

TOBOLSKI, a government of Asiatic Russia, lying on the Frozen Ocean, and bounded by the governments of Yeniseisk, Tomsk, Perm, Orenburg, and Archangel. The Uralian mountains are its W. boundary, and it is watered by the river Obi and its tributaries. It yields gold, platinum, copper, iron, &c.; its cultivated grounds produce fine grain, &c., and its pastures feed great numbers of cattle. Tobolsk is the capital. It stands on the Irish, and has a good trade. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 58. 12. N. Long. 68. 15. E. Pop. about 900,000.

TOCAT, a large and handsome city of Natolia, in Turkey in Asia. It is in the form of an amphitheatre, and there are two rugged perpendicular rocks of marble, with an old castle upon each. It is handsomely built, and has some profitable manufactures of silk, leather, &c. Tocat may be considered as the centre of trade in Natolia, for the caravans come hither from several parts. Its territory abounds in fruit and excellent wine, and it is 250 miles from Constantinople. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 39. 35. N. Long. 36. 30. E.

TOE, s. [tōte haar, Teut.] a bush or thick shade; the boughs of a tree. Applied to wool, twenty-eight pounds' weight.

TOE, s. [da Sax. teen, Belg.] in Anatomy, the divided extremities of the feet; the fingers of the feet.

TOGA, s. [Lat.] with the Romans, was a wide woollen gown, or mantle, which was of a semicircular form, without sleeves; and used only upon occasions of appearing in public.

TOGETHER, ad. [together, Sax.] in company; in the same place or time; without intermission; in concert, or continuity. Together with, in union or mixture with.

TO TOLL, v. n. [tiltan, Sax. tuglen, Belg.] to labour.—v. a. to work at; to weary or overlabour.

TOLL, s. labour; fatigue.—[tolle, Fr.] any net or snare woven or meshed.

TOLL'LET, s. [toilette, Fr.] a dressing-table.

TOLL'SOME, a. laborious; making weary.

TOISE, s. [Fr.] a French measure containing six feet in length, or a fathom.

TOKAY, a small town of Hungary, standing on the Theiss, at the foot of a high hill, on which are the vineyards which yield the wine called Tokay, which is abundantly drunk in the countries round, and is highly esteemed by connoisseurs. Pop. about 5000. Lat. 48. 10. N. Long. 10. 57. E.

TO'KEN, s. [teyken, Belg. taba, Sax. taikins, Goth.] a sign or mark; a memorial of friendship.

TO'LAND, JOHN, a controversial writer on many subjects in the end of the 17th century and beginning of the next. He was a Papist by prejudice of birth, and afterwards opposed it, and studied at Glasgow and Leyden. His first publication was called Christianity not Mystical, which, beside replies, was made of undeserved importance by being burnt by the hangman, while the writer was subjected to much annoyance. In other publications he afterwards declared his unbelief more plainly. His literary labours were unremitting, and amongst them was an edition of the Prose Works of Milton, with a Life of the great Puritan poet. He was also engaged in some secret negotiations on the continent; and contrived to gain the favour of Prince Eugene, and to flatter the ruling powers of England in a sufficiently fulsome manner. It is impossible to give any full intimation of the subjects or titles of his innumerable treatises, pamphlets, and essays, nor are they deserving of such notice. He gained a short-lived notoriety by means not the most worthy, and it is chiefly as a baffled opponent of the gospel that his name is remembered now. He died in 1722, aged 52 years.

TOLD, preter. and past part. of TO TELL.

TO TOLÉ, v. a. to draw by degrees; to train.

TOLEDO, an ancient town of a province called by the same name, in Spain. It has some very fine buildings, and the cathedral is especially grand. It stands on the Tagus, and has over it two bridges. It is the seat of an archbishop, the seat of a famous university, and has several manufactures of silk and wool. Toledo is 40 miles S. of Madrid. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 39. 50. N. Long. 3. 20. W.

TOL'ERABLE, a. [Fr. tolerabilis, Lat.] that may be endured or supported; passable, but not excellent.

TOL'ERABLENESS, s. the state of being tolerable.

TOL'ERABLY, ad. supportably; passably.

TOL'ERANCE, s. [Fr.] the power or act of enduring or suffering.

TO TOL'ERATE, v. a. [tolero, Lat. tolérer, Fr.] to suffer or allow without opposition; to suffer, without expressing approbation.

TOLERATION, s. [Fr.] in religious matters, the permission given to parties who do not conform to an established church, to hold their opinions, and exercise their worship, without being subjected to pains and penalties for so doing; also, in civil affairs, the removal of the disadvantages under which such seceders from the national church establishment are placed in respect of the exercise of their political rights and privileges. SYNON. Tolerance is that habit of mind, or of feeling, which will lead an individual to abstain from interfering with the opinions, &c. of another, and from condemning in others all in which they differ from himself;—Toleration is the beneficent exercise of a power, claimed by governments, over the consciences of nations; the malignant exercise of which is persecution.

TOLL, (tōl) s. [Brit. and Sax.] in Law, denotes a tax or custom paid for passage, or the liberty of selling goods in a market or fair.

TO TOLL, (o long) v. n. to pay or take money for the passage of goods, &c.—v. a. to ring a bell.

TOLL'BOOTH, s. a place where taxes are paid; a prison; townhouse.

TOLL'GATHERER, s. one who takes toll.

TOLLU, in Materia Medica, a balsam obtained from a tree found in S. America, which is used in pulmonary complaints.

TO'MAHAWK, s. the name of the war-batchets used by the Indians of N. America.

TOMATA, s. in Botany, &c., the name of a plant allied to the potato; and called, usually, the love-apple.

TOMB, (toon) s. [tombe or tombeau, Fr.] a monument in which the dead are enclosed.

TOMBAC, s. in the Arts, an artificial metal composed of copper with a slight mixture of zinc.

TOMBUCTOO. See TIMBUCTOO.

TOME, s. [Fr.] a volume or book.

TOMENTUM, s. in Botany, the downy matter which grows on the leaves of some plants.

TO'LINE, DR. GEORGE, (born Pretzman), an eminent English prelate, who was educated at the Bury St. Edmunds grammar school, and was first tutor, and afterwards secretary, to Mr. Pitt. He enjoyed a fair share of church preferment; and died in 1827, aged 77 years. His works which are yet read by some parties in the English Church, are the Refutation of Calvinism, and Elements of Christian Theology. He also wrote a Life of W. Pitt.

TONMITT, s. the titmouse.

TON, s. [tonne, Fr.] a weight of 2000lb; 40 solid feet of round, or 53 of squared timber; a cubic space in a ship, supposed to be capable of containing a ton.

TON, or TUN, [den, Sax.] in the names of places, signifies a town, because towns were formerly built on eminences.

TONE, s. [ton, Fr. tonus, Lat.] a note, sound, accent, or whine; elasticity.

TONE, THEOBALD WOLFE, one of the United Irishmen, of the close of the last century. He was trained for the bar; and being indignant at the conduct of the English government of his country, endeavoured to overthrow it. He founded the society of United Irishmen; and afterwards fled to America, to avoid prosecution for treasonable correspondence with France. Returning to Europe, he engaged the Directory of France to invade Ireland, and drive out the English; but a storm dispersed the armament in Bantry Bay. He endeavoured to effect the end he had so long kept in view, afterwards, by a small and altogether inefficient expedition; was captured, tried, and condemned; but killed himself in prison, in 1798, aged 35 years.

TONGA, the name of a cluster of islands in the S. Pacific Ocean, forming part of the group of Friendly Islands; so called after the chief island of the cluster, which is also called Tongatoo. It is a flat island, with coral rocks and reefs, about 60 miles round; and abounding with all the timber and fruit trees, and wild animals, birds, &c. that are found in that part of the world. Lat. 21. 9. S. Long. 175. 14. W.

TONGS, s. it has no singular, [tang, Sax. and Belg.] an instrument by which hold is taken of any thing.

TONGUE, (tung) s. [tonghe, Belg. tung, Sax.] in Anatomy and Physiology, the complicated muscular organ which aids so materially in the process of eating, being the chief seat of the sense of taste; and is also of the greatest importance to the capability of speech. The upper surface is thickly studded with highly sensitive papillæ. The tongues of feline and other animals are covered with horny points. Those of birds and reptiles are very remarkable for their adaptation to the necessities and habits of the different species. Figuratively, language; speech; fluency of words; a small point; the pin of a buckle or brooch. To hold one's tongue, is to be silent.

To TONGUE, (tung) v. n. to talk or prate.—v. a. to chide; to scold; to apply the tongue to any thing.

TO'NGUELESS, (tungless) a. having no tongue; unnamed; not spoken of.

TO'NGUETIED, a. having an impediment of speech; unable to speak freely, from whatever cause.

TONIC, TO'NICAL, a. [tonique, Fr.] giving tone or strength, applied to certain medicines; being extended or elastic.

TONNAGE, s. the contents of a ship measured by the ton; a tax laid on merchandise, reckoned by the burden of ships.

TONQUIN, a kingdom of Asia, lying on the Gulf of Tonquin, and bounded by China, Laos, and Cochinchina. It is a flat country, watered by a great number of rivers and canals, and is compared by some geographers to Holland. Its productions are the same as those of this part of Asia generally. It properly forms part of the Chinese empire, and in religion, language, manners, &c. resembles China. But it has not been accurately explored.

The population is said to be very numerous, and oppressed by the heavy tribute they have to pay to their superiors. The capital city is of the same name. Lat. 21. 4. N. Long. 105. 48. E.

TONSILS, s. [tonsille, Fr. tonsille, Lat.] in Anatomy, two glands situated on each side of the mouth, near the uvula, which secrete a kind of saliva.

TONSTALL, DR. CUTHBERT, an English prelate, who appears frequently in English history during the period of the Reformation. He studied at Oxford, and at Padua, in Italy; and on his return to England, began his career with a brilliant reputation for learning. He soon rose to the see of London, and distinguished himself in negotiations with Charles V. at Brussels, and in other diplomatic business. It was at this time that he bought up Tyndale's New Testament, and burnt the copies at St. Paul's Cross. When Henry began his reformation, Tonstall agreed with his proceedings, and actually revised a translation of the Bible. In the reign of Edward VI. he seems to have made some resistance to the progress of change, and he was in consequence deprived and imprisoned. Mary, of course, delivered him; but he is free from all stain of participation in the persecutions of that reign. He refused to take the oath of supremacy under Elizabeth, and so was committed, as an ecclesiastical prisoner, to the charge of Archbishop Parker; and he died in 1559, aged 85 years. He was a friend of Erasmus, and he seems to have resembled him in the half-hearted way in which he clung to Romanism whilst he professed to be a Protestant, and to Protestantism whilst openly a Romanist.

TONSURE, s. [Fr. tonsura, Lat.] the act of shaving or clipping the hair; the state of being shorn or shaven.

TO'NTINE, s. a loan raised on life-annuities with the benefit of survivorship.

TOO, ad. [to, Sax.] over and above; overmuch; more than enough, or excess; likewise; also.

TOOK, the preter. and past part. of To TAKE.

TOOKE, JOHN HORNE, a politician and philologist of the last century. He studied at Cambridge, and entered the church, but relinquished it for the bar, after he had officiated as a priest, when he had become thoroughly interested in political questions. He travelled in France during this period, and became acquainted with Wilkes, whose election he helped to secure; and in other ways he began to appear before the public, and to take part in the affairs of the nation. He opposed the American war, and was fined and imprisoned for his opposition. After having been refused admission to the bar, because of his clerical ordination, he continued his pamphleteering, and published also his philological work, called the Diversions of Purley. He was one of the "Constitutional Society" who was selected for trial on the charge of high treason, with Hardy, Thelwall, &c., and was acquitted through Erskine's splendid oratory. He also, in spite of great opposition, obtained a seat in the House of Commons, but was soon excluded by a bill by which clergymen were disqualified for sitting there. The latter part of his life was spent in retirement, and he died in 1812, aged 77 years. He was such a patriot as could appear then; and in private life, deserving much the same estimate as must be passed on his public life. His philology was too fanciful and unscholar-like to last, yet it was an advance upon Harris's Hermes. His name, Tooke, he assumed when made heir to his friend William Tooke of Purley.

TOOL, s. [tool, Sax.] any instrument used by the hand; a hiring, or one servilely at the command of another.

TOOTH, s. teeth, plur. [toth, Sax.] in Anatomy, the name of one of the instruments of mastication, which is composed of bone, coated partially with a hard enamel, and fixed in the jaw by one or more fangs. Milk-teeth, are the first set in the human subject, and are twenty in number. Wisdom-teeth, are the four last cut by the human subject. The perfect set in adults consists of eight incisors or cutting-teeth, four canine or pointed teeth, eight false molars, and twelve true molars. Figuratively, the cog of a wheel; the prong of a fork; in the serrations of a comb or saw—also, taste. Tooth and nail, implies with one's utmost violence. To the teeth, in open opposition, or to a person's face. In spite of the teeth, notwithstanding threats, or a person's utmost opposition. To east in the teeth, is to mention by way of reproach.

TOOTHACHE, (toothake) s. a pain in the teeth.

TOOTHDRAWER, s. one who extracts painful teeth.

TOOTHLESS, a. having no teeth.

TOOTH-PICK, Too'thpicker, s. an instrument to remove any thing from between the teeth.

TOOTH-SOME, a. pleasant; agreeable to the taste.

TOOTHWORT, s. in Botany, a plant whose roots somewhat resemble the fangs of the teeth.

TOP, s. [Sax. Belg. and Dan.] the apex, or highest part; the surface; the utmost degree or rank; the head of a plant; a plaything used by children.—a. it implies lying on the top.

To TOP, v. n. to rise or be eminent; to excel; to do one's best.—v. a. to cover on the top; to rise above; to surpass; to crop; to perform with excellence.

TOPAZ, s. [topase, Fr.] in Mineralogy, a precious stone of a gold colour.

To TOPE, v. n. [tope, Fr.] to drink hard, or to excess.

TOPE, s. one who drinks hard; a sot.

TOP-P-GALLANT, s. the highest sail in a ship.

TOPHACEOUS, (tofaisheous) a. [tophus, Lat.] stony, sandy, or gravelly.

TOPHEAVY, a. having the upper part of any thing heavier than the lower.

TOPHUS, (tofus) [Lat.] in Medicine, a calculus.

TOPIC, (topos, Gr.) a general head to which other things are referred; a subject; things generally applied externally to a particular part.

TOPICAL, a. relating to some general head; local, or confined to some particular place. In Medicine, applied to a particular part.

TOP-KNOT, s. a knot worn by women on the top of the head.

TOPLADY, AUGUSTUS MONTAGUE, a Calvinistic clergyman of the Church of England; who was the constant polemical opponent of John Wesley, and helped in no small degree to revive the high Calvinism which has prevailed in some districts of England, and in some denominations, ever since. He studied at Trinity College, Dublin; and died in 1778, aged 38 years.

TOPMAST, s. the second division of a mast, or that part which stands between the upper and lower pieces.

TOPOGRAPHER, (topographe) s. [topos and grapho, Gr.] one that describes a particular kingdom, country, or place.

TOPOGRAPHICAL, (topografikal) a. belonging to topography.

TOPOGRAPHY, (topografy) s. the description of a particular place, kingdom, or country.

To TOPPLE, v. n. to fall forward; to tumble down.

TOPSAIL, s. the second sail.

TOPSY-TURVY, ad. with the bottom upwards.

TOR, s. [Sax.] in the composition of some names, implies a rock or hill.

TORCH, s. (torche, Fr. torcia, Ital.) a wax-light bigger than a candle; a flambeau.

TORCHLIGHT, s. a light kindled to supply the want of the sun.

TORRE, preter. of TO TEAR.

TORRE, s. in Architecture, a large round moulding, used in the bases of columns.

To TORMENT, v. a. [tourmenter, Fr.] to put to pain; to excruciate; to tease; to vex with impotency; to agitate.

TORMENT, s. a lasting pain; misery, anguish, torture.

TORMENTIL, s. in Botany, a genus of plants of which there are two British species, the upright and creeping. The root of the first species, called also seppillo, is used in several countries to tan leather, and farmers find them very efficacious in the dysenteries of cattle.

TORMENTING, a. torturing; putting to great pain; teasing with great impotency; excruciating.

TORMENTOR, s. one that torments; any thing that causes pain.

TORN, past part. of TO TEAR.

TORNA-DO, s. [Span.] a hurricane; a whirlwind; a furious storm of rain, wind, and lightning.

TORONTO, a city of Canada, N. America. It stands on Lake Ontario, with a spacious and excellent harbour. It is regularly built, and has some fine public buildings, with several colleges, and other educational and charitable institutions. It is a place of growing trade, and was the capital of Upper Canada. It is about 500 miles from Quebec. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 43. 38. N. Long. 79. 28. W.

TORPEDO, s. [torpeo, Lat.] in Ichthyology, a kind of fish, found sometimes in the British seas, which is furnished with organs by means of which it is able to communicate a smart electric shock to any thing it touches. It is supposed to use this power for obtaining food. It is called by the fishermen the cramp fish.

TORPID, a. [torpidus, Lat.] numbed; deprived of motion or sensation; sluggish.

TORPID, s. [Lat.] dullness of sensation; inability to move.

TORQUEMADA, JUAN DE, the inquisitor-general of Spain, whose zeal against heretics was so burning, that he has made his name a proverb for furiously intolerant bigotry. He studied at Valladolid, became a monk of the order of St. Dominic, and exercised his fierce and cruel sway for 16 years. He enjoyed, as was due, the confidence of both king and pope; being a cardinal, and confessor to Isabella of Castile. He died in 1468, aged 80 years.

TORREFACTION, s. [torreo and facio, Lat.] the act of scorching or roasting any thing before the fire.

TORRENT, s. [Fr. torrens, Lat.] in Geography, a temporary stream of water falling suddenly from mountains whereon there have been great rains, or an extraordinary thaw of snow.

TORRES STRAIT, the narrow sea which divides Papua or New Guinea from the most northerly point of New Holland; which is very dangerous from the number of coral reefs which beset it. It is about 100 miles in breadth.

TORRICELLI, EVANGELISTA, a distinguished mathematician and natural philosopher of Italy, who held the professorship of mathematics at Florence, having attracted the notice of Galileo, by a treatise he had composed. His name is chiefly memorable as the discoverer of the principle of the barometer; but he was the inventor of several useful philosophical instruments, &c. He died in 1647, aged 39 years.

TORRID, (torride, Fr. from torreo, Lat.) burning-hot; parched or scorched. Torrid Zone, is that part of the earth which is included within the two lines called the tropics, which lie 23½ distant on each side from the equator. It is the hottest part of the globe; and the sun is always for one or two days in the year exactly vertical over every part of it.

TORRIGIANO PIETRO, an Italian sculptor, of whom it is recorded that, being exceedingly jealous of Michael Angelo, his fellow pupil, he attacked him, and struck him on the face so fiercely, that he broke his nose. Compelled to leave Florence, to avoid punishment, he led a rambling, changeable life, as soldier and as artist; travelling as far as England even, where he erected Henry VII.'s tomb; and at last, in Spain, being disappointed in the payment he expected for a beautifully executed statue of the Virgin, he broke it, and was imprisoned for sacrilege, by the Inquisition, and starved himself to avoid being burnt; in 1522.

TORRINGTON, a town of Devonshire, with a market on Saturday. There is a stone bridge of four arches over the river Torridge, and it is 194 miles from London. Pop. 3665.

TORSE, s. in Heraldry, a wreath.

TORSEL, s. any thing in a twisted form.

TORSION, (torshon) s. [torcio, from torqueo, Lat.] the act of writhing, twisting, turning, or winding. In Electricity, the force of torsion in a very slender thread, is employed to measure minute charges of electricity; and by the aid of a graduated circle, has aided considerably in bringing this branch of natural philosophy within the range of mathematical accuracy.

TORI, s. [Fr.] in Law, signifies wrong or injury.

TORTLE, a. [tortilis, Lat.] twisted; wreathed.

TORTOISE, s. [tortus, Fr.] in Zoology, a genus of reptiles, which are furnished with a horny shell covering both surfaces of their body, beyond which their heads, feet, and tails protrude. They live on land, and are often kept in gardens for the destruction of slugs and insects.

TORTOLA, the principal of the Virgin Islands, West Indies. It is about 18 miles long, and 7 in its greatest breadth. It produces excellent cotton, sugar, and rum. Pop. about 8000. Lat. 18. 27. N. Long. 64. 40. W. It belongs to the English.

TORTUGA, the name of two islands of the West Indies; one near the N. coast of the island of Hispaniola, which is about 60 miles in circumference, and has a very safe harbour, but difficult of access. Lat. 20. 10. N. Long. 75. 10. W. The other near the coast of Venezuela, S. America, about 35 miles in circumference, rocky, with only one safe anchorage; frequented for the purpose of catching turtles. Lat. 11. 7. N. Long. 64. 30. W.

TORTUOSITY, s. wreath; flexure.

TORTUOUS, a. [tortuosus, from torqueo, Lat. tortueux, Fr.] winding, turning in and out.

TORTURE, s. [Fr. tortura, Lat.] pain; anguish; a state of lasting torment, inflicted either as a punishment, or to extort confession.

To TORTURE, v. a. to punish with torture; to excruciate; to torment; to keep on the stretch.

TORTURER, s. a tormentor; one that tortures.

TORY, s. [Irish,] in English Politics, one who adheres to the ancient constitution of the state, and the hierarchy of the Church of England. See White.

To TOSS, v. a. pret. and past part. tost; [tassen, Belg.] to throw or cast with the hand; to impel or throw with violence; to lift with a sudden and violent motion; to agitate; to make restless; to tumble over.—v. n. to be in violent agitation. Used with up, to fling coin in the air in gaming.

TOSSER, s. one who throws; one who flings or writhes.

TOTAL, a. [Fr. totalis, from totus, Lat.] whole or complete; containing all the parts taken together, or undivided.

TOTALITY, s. [totalité, Fr.] any thing entire or undivided; the whole; a sum total.

TOTALLY, ad. wholly; entirely; completely; fully.

TOTALLY, contracted for the other.

TOTILA, the king of the Ostrogoths, who in the 6th century overran Italy, and took Rome. Here he established a mild, paternal government; but Narses, with a large army, was despatched by the emperor Justinian to recover the peninsula, and Totila, defeated near Agina, was slain in 552, having reigned 11 years.

To TOTTER, v. n. [tateren, Belg.] to shake so as to be in danger of falling; to stagger.

TOTTERING, a. ready to fall; feeble; weak.

TOUCAN, s. in Ornithology, a bird, furnished with a very large bill. In Astronomy, a constellation of the southern hemisphere.

To TOUCH, (tüch) v. a. [toucher, Fr.] to reach with any thing so that there be no space between the thing with which we reach and that which is reached; to come to, or attain; to affect, move, or melt; to mark out or delineate; to strike or sound, applied to music; to act upon or impel; to treat of in a slight manner; to infect in a slight degree; to try, applied to metals. To touch up, to repair or improve.—v. n. to cohere; to join close together. Used with at, to come to, or stay at, a place; with on, to mention in a slight manner; with on or upon, to arrive at, or stop a short time; to light upon in mental inquiries.

TOUCH, (tüch) s. contact; the sense of feeling; the act of touching; examination of metals by a stone; a test by which any thing is tried; proof; power of exciting the affections; the act of the hand on a musical instrument; affection; a hint; a slight essay; a stroke in painting; feature; a gentle tap; a wipe; a slight fit of a disease; exact performance.

TOUCHHOLE, (tüch-hole) s. the hole through which the fire is conveyed to the powder in a gun.

TOUCHING, (tüching) prep. concerning; with respect, relation, or regard to.

TOUCHING, (tüching) a. in contact; affecting; pathetic; moving.

TOUCH-ME-NOT, s. in Botany, a plant found in Wales, and the N. parts of England, with yellow flowers; the seed-vessel of which is so elastic, that on the least touch, when it is approaching ripeness, the valves curl up, and scatter the seeds with considerable force.

TOUCHSTONE, (tüchstone) s. in Mineralogy, a kind of slate by which gold and silver used to be tried. Figuratively, any test.

TOUCHWOOD, s. rotten wood used as tinder.

TOUCHY, a. See TETCHY.

TOUGH, (tüff) a. [toh, Sax.] not breaking when bent; stiff, or not easily bent; not easily bitten or chewed, applied to food; viscous; clammy; ropy.

TOUGHNESS, (tüffness) s. the quality of not being easily bent; hard to be bit or chewed; viscosity; tenacity; glutinousness.

TOULON, a celebrated city and sea-port of the department of Var, France. It stands on a bay of the Mediterranean Sea, and besides the cathedral, and other parish churches, contains convents, colleges, schools, museums, and other excellent benevolent and educational institutions. It is divided into the Old Quarter and the New Quarter. The harbour, respecting these two quarters, is distinguished likewise by the names of the Old Port or the Merchant Port, and the New Port. It is strongly fortified, and has a fine dockyard and arsenal for the national navy. It has some manufactures and trade, but not of any importance. Toulon is 388 miles from Paris. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 43. 7. N. Long. 5. 55. E.

TOULOUSE, a city in the department of Haute Garonne, France. It stands on the Garonne, over which it has a fine bridge; and it is walled, and has handsome quays, and public walks. The cathedral, the town-hall, the museum, and other public buildings, are fine structures; and there are many valuable charitable and educational institutions. Its trade and manufactures are very considerable, besides what is carried on at the arsenal and government-buildings. It is 350 miles from Paris. Pop. about 80,000. Lat. 43. 30. N. Long. 1. 27. E.

TOUPEE, (toopé) s. [Fr.] an artificial curl of hair; the hair which grows on the forehead turned back.

TOUR, s. [tour, Fr.] a ramble, or roving journey; a turn, or revolution.

TOURMALIN, s. in Mineralogy, a variously-coloured kind of gem, the better kinds of which are used as jewels. It easily discharges electrical action.

TOURNAMENT, s. [turnamentum, low Lat.] a tilt; jousting; a military diversion; a mock encounter.

TOURNAY, a handsome and considerable town of Hainault, Belgium; is a large trading place with several fine manufactures, and particularly famous for good stockings. The cathedral, and the abbey of St. Martin, are very magnificent. It is seated on the river Scheldt, which divides it into two parts, that are united by a bridge; 50 miles from Brussels. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 50. 33. N. Long. 3. 28. E.

TOURNEFORT, JOSEPH PITTON DE, a very distinguished French botanist, of the latter part of the 17th century. He was first intended for the church, but subsequently studied medicine at Montpellier, where he acquired his predilection for botanical studies. He commenced his studies by tours in France, Switzerland, and Spain; afterwards he visited Spain and Portugal, by the order of government; and spent some of the latter years of his life in the countries round the Levant, and the Black and Caspian Seas. He was assistant professor and lecturer at the Jardin du Roi, Paris, in the intervals of his travels; and published accounts of his travels, as well as works on Systematic Botany. He died in 1708, aged 52 years. Tournefort aided the progress of his favourite science, as greatly by the construction of his system, as by his travels. But that system is completely exploded now; having been built on uncertain forms and habits, rather than on invariable distinctions, such as physiology brings to light.

TOURNIQUET, s. [Fr.] in Surgery, an instrument used to compress the great artery of a limb during amputation, to check the hæmorrhage.

TOURS, an ancient and considerable city of the department of Indre et Loire, France. It is advantageously seated on the Loire, and near the Cher. Over the former is one of the finest bridges in Europe, consisting of 15 elliptical arches, each 75 feet in diameter; and 2 other bridges cross the Cher. The streets, quays, squares, and public buildings are in general very fine. Its manufactures are yet considerable; and the red wines made here are much esteemed. Tours is 145 miles from Paris. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 47. 24. N. Long. 0. 42. E.

TOUSSAINT L'OUVREURE, a celebrated and extraordinary negro, who, at the outbreak of the servile insurrection in St. Domingo, was a slave; but having had a kind master, and the opportunity and the disposition to cultivate his mind, he abstained from taking part at first. But after the proclamation of freedom to the slaves, by the Convention, he joined in the movement, and by his superior courage and skill rose in esteem, till he was the acknowledged chief of the new state. The English were expelled, the Spanish part of the island reduced, a regular government installed, and himself made president. The dealings of the commissioners of the Directory with this new government were not of a faithful kind. Being persuaded that there was in the island a great quantity of concealed riches, and needing money as they did for their wars, &c.; knowing, moreover, the former value of St. Domingo in a commercial point of view to France; they contrived to excite a quarrel, which was carried on till Buonaparte undertook to recover the lost colony. He did not succeed; but Toussaint was captured by a shameful act of treachery; brought to Europe; confined with needless and gratuitous cruelty in the castle of Joux; and there, as some believe, starved to death, in 1803, aged 60 years. Wordsworth's well-known sonnet may be referred to as embodying the universal sentiment respecting this remarkable and ill-fated man.

TOW, (tō), s. [tow, Sax.] flax or hemp beaten and combed into a filamentous substance.

TO TOW, (tō) v. a. [teon, teohan, Sax.] to draw by a rope in the water.

TO WAGE, (ōage) s. [touage, Fr.] money paid to the owner of ground near a river for the liberty of towing a vessel, or to the owner of the horses employed in towing.

TOWARD, TOWARDS, prep. [Sax.] in a direction, or near to; with respect to, or relating; with local or ideal tendency to; nearly, little less than.

TOWARD, TOWARDS, ad. near; in a state of preparation.

TOWARD, a. ready to do or learn; tractable.

TOWARDLY, ad. readily; orderly.

TOWARDLINESS, TO WARDNESS, s. docility; compliance.

TOW'EL, (one pron. as in now), s. [touaille, Fr. touaglio, Ital.] a cloth used for wiping the hands.

TOWER, (one in this and the following words pron. as in how), s. [tor, Sax. tour, Fr. torre, Ital.] a high building raised above the body of an edifice; a fortress or citadel. This name is given, par excellence, to the fortress which stands on the banks of the Thames, at the E. end of old London Wall. It was formerly a royal residence; afterwards a state prison; later still an assemblage of incongruous exhibitions, wild beasts and crown jewels, armour, arms, and war trophies; and is now a miscellaneous kind of storehouse, for arms and ordnance, gunpowder and state records, some parts of which are yet publicly exhibited.

TO TOWER, v. n. to soar; to fly or rise high.

TO WERING, a. soaring; rising or flying high.

TO WERY, a. adorned or guarded with towers.

TOWING-PATH, s. a road or path carried along the bank of a navigable river or canal, on which the horses or men who draw the vessels along can pass.

TOWN, s. [tun, Sax. tugn, Belg.] a collection of houses larger than a village, and less than a city; any number of houses to which belongs a regular market; the people of a capital; the fashionables of a metropolis. Town talk means the common prattle of a place.

TOWNCLERK, s. an officer who manages the public business of a corporate town.

TOWNLEY MARBLES, in the British Museum, the valuable collection of statues, busts, bas-reliefs, miscellaneous sculptures, terracottas, &c., made in the space of many years by Mr. Charles Townley, of Park Street, and, at his death, purchased by the government, and placed in this national and magnificent assemblage of works of art, &c.

TOWNSHIP, s. the extent of a town's jurisdiction.

TOXOPHOLITE, s. [taxon and phileo, Gr.] a modern name given to archers.

TOY, s. [toyen, Belg.] a thing of no value; a plaything; folly; play; or amorous dalliance; wild fancy.

TO TOY, v. n. to play; to sport or dally amorously.

TOY SHOP, s. a shop where toys and little nice manufactures are sold.

TO TOZE, v. a. to draw out; to pull asunder as is done in carding wool to make it softer and fit for spinning.

TRACE, s. [Fr. traccia, Ital.] a mark left by any thing passing; a footstep; remains.—[tirasser, Fr.] harness for beasts of draught.

TO TRACE, v. a. [tracer, Fr.] to follow by means of marks left, or footsteps; to mark out; to walk over.

TRACER, s. one who traces; an instrument for tracing outlines of drawings, maps, &c.

TRACERY, s. the general name for the arches, uprights, &c. &c., which form the stone-work in the upper compartment of a Gothic window; also, for the groining of a ceiling, &c.

TRACHEA, s. [Gr.] in Anatomy, the wind-pipe, a tube, or canal, extending from the larynx to the bronchi.

TRACHEOTOMY, s. [trachēa and temno, Gr.] in Surgery, the act of cutting open the trachea, which is the only means by which, sometimes, any substance that has fallen into it can be recovered; and is necessary in some diseases of the part.

TRACK, s. [trac, old Fr.] a mark left by the foot, the wheels of a carriage, or otherwise; a road or beaten path.

TO TRACK, v. a. to follow by the footsteps, or marks left in the way.

TRACKLESS, a. untrodden; marked with no footsteps.

TRACT, (s. [tractus, Lat.]) in Geography, is an extent of ground, or a portion of the earth's surface; a region. In Literature, a small treatise, or discourse upon any subject.

TRACTABLE, a. [tractabilis, from tracto, Lat.] capable of being governed or managed; docile; obsequious; compliant; such as may be handled.

TRACTABLENESS, s. gentleness of disposition; the quality of being easily managed or governed.

TRACTION, s. [traho, Lat.] the act of drawing a carriage along a road, a vessel along a stream, and in general any weight along any surface.

TRADE, (s. [tratta, Ital.]) the exchange of goods for money or other commodities; business or employ carried on in a shop, opposed to the liberal arts or learned professions; the instruments of any business; custom; habit. The Board of Trade is a committee of the privy-council of the English sovereign, before whom all matters relating to trade (and formerly all matters relating to the colonies also) pass for consideration. The president of this committee is always a member of the cabinet.

TO TRADE, v. n. to traffic or exchange goods for money or other commodities; to act merely for money.—v. a. to exchange or sell in commerce.

TRADEER, s. one engaged in merchandise or commerce; a small vessel that trades from port to port.

TRADESCANT, JOHN, the name of two eminent Dutch naturalists of the 17th and 18th centuries. The elder had travelled and botanized in the countries round the Mediterranean, and was gardener to Charles I. of England. He died in 1652. The younger, his son, visited Virginia, and considerably increased the collection of plants, &c. &c., made by his father, a catalogue of which he published. This museum, as he called it, was the germ of the Ashmolean Museum, now at Oxford. He died in 1662.

TRADESMAN, s. one who buys and sells by retail; a mechanic.

TRADE WIND, s. in Physical Geography, a name given to certain winds, which prevail on both sides of the equator about the tropics, and always blow from one point.

TRADITION, s. [Fr. traditio, from trado, Lat.] generally, historical facts, laws, customs, &c. &c., which have been handed down to us from foregoing generations. In Theology, articles of faith, ecclesiastical rites, customs, and formularies, interpretations of Scripture, &c., that have been handed down from former ages. The reverence paid to this uncertain and unauthorized teacher, which prevailed amongst the Jews, and is the foundation of Romanism and of the Oxford view of Anglicanism, is founded on a deeply implanted feeling of the human breast; and in these instances, and in all similar instances, is condemned by that majestic philosophy which Lord Bacon has expounded, and, in respect of this very feeling, has uttered in the memorable saying, Antiquitas seculi, juvenitas mundi.—"The more ancient the age, the more youthful the world."

TRADITIONAL, ad. delivered by tradition.

TRADITIONALLY, ad. by transmission from age to age.

TO TRADUCE, v. a. [traduco, Lat.] to represent as blamable; to calumniate; to decry; to defame; to propagate or increase by deriving one from another.

TRADUCIBLE, a. such as may be derived.

TRADUCING, a. calumniating; slandering; defaming.

TRADUCTION, s. [Fr. traduction, Lat.] the translating one language into another; derivation; transmission; conveyance; transition; defamation.

TRAFFIC, s. [trafic, Fr.] large trade, or exchange of commodities; the subject of trade.

TO TRAFFIC, v. n. [trafiguer, Fr.] to carry on trade.

TRAFFICKER, s. a trader; a merchant.

TRAGACANTH, s. [tragacanthum, Lat.] in Materia Medica, a gum exuding from the incision of the root or trunk of a plant so called, and commonly named gum-dragon.

TRAGEDIAN, s. [tragædus, Lat.] a writer or actor of tragedies.

TRAGEDY, s. [tragædia, Lat. tragédie, Fr.] in Poetry, a dramatic composition, the essence of which is the exhibition of the unavailing contest of the human will with the law of necessity, and the fatal catastrophes to which such contest infallibly conducts. Figuratively, any mournful or dreadful event.

TRAGIC, TRAGICAL, a. [tragique, Fr. tragicus, Lat.] relating to tragedy; mournful or dreadful.

TRAGI-COMEDY, s. [tragi-comédie, Fr.] a dramatic representation, partly tragedy and partly comedy.

TRAJANUS, MARCUS ULPIS NERVA, commonly called Trajan, a Roman emperor, by birth a Spaniard, who commanded with great distinction in Germany, and was adopted by the good emperor, Nerva, as his successor. His reign was one of the few that it is satisfactory to contemplate; in every department he made his personal influence felt; arts were encouraged, victory followed the armies, laws were perfected, burdens lessened, even commerce seemed somewhat to revive. But to mark the true nature of this goodness, we know that the gentle Pliny, with the express approbation of the good and merciful Trajan, pitilessly persecuted the Christians of Asia Minor, against whom he could allege nothing but their unwavering constancy of trust in their Redeemer, and their spotless lives. A lofty column yet records, in Rome, the deeds of Trajan. He died in 117 A. D., aged 59 years, after a reign of 19.

TO TRAIL, v. a. [trailer, Fr.] to hunt by the track; to draw along the ground; to draw or trace; to drag.—v. n. to be drawn out in length.

TRAIL, s. the scent left on the ground by an animal that is hunted; any thing drawn out in length, or dragging on the ground; any thing drawn behind in long undulations.

TRAILING, a. hanging or dragging on the ground.

TO TRAIN, v. a. [trainer, Fr.] to draw along; to draw or entice; to draw by artifice or stratagem. Used with on, to draw from one act to another by persuasion; with up, to breed, educate, or teach by degrees.

TRAIN, s. [Fr.] an artifice used to entice; the tail of a bird; the part of a gown that sweeps behind along the ground; a series, process, or method; a retinue, or number of followers; a procession; the line of powder which reaches to a mine. A train of artillery, is the cannon accompanying an army.

TRAINOIL, s. in Commerce, oil extracted from the fat of whales.

TRAIT, s. [Fr.] a stroke or touch.

TRAITOR, s. [traïtre, Fr.] one who betrays any trust.

TRAITOROUS, a. treacherous; perfidious; faithless.

TRAITOROUSLY, ad. perfidiously; treacherously.

TRALEEY, Kerry, in Munster, Ireland. It stands at the head of a bay, called by the same name, and has some handsome private and public buildings. It has a good trade, principally with England. It is 144 miles from Dublin. Pop. 11,363.

TRAMEL, TRA'MMEL, s. [trammil, Fr.] a net in which birds or fish are caught; a net of any kind; a kind of shackles in which horses are taught to pace. Trammels are a kind of compasses for drawing ellipses or ovals.

TO TRAMMEL, v. a. to catch or intercept, used with up.

TO TRAMPLE, v. a. [trampe, Dan.] to tread under foot with pride, insolence, or contempt.—v. n. to tread in contempt, used with on or upon.

TRAMPLER, s. one that tramples.

TRAM-ROAD, s. a kind of rail-road for general use, in which plates of iron with a flange at the outer edge are laid down loosely, or fixed to sleepers, &c., for the wheels to run on. Tram-roads are hardly ever used now, except in cases where they can be laid down hastily, and hastily removed, being superseded by rail-roads.

TRANCE, s. [trance, Fr. from transeo, Lat.] in Physiology, a morbid kind of sleep, in which the imagination is preternaturally active, whilst the body seems to be insensible.

TRANQUIL, a. [tranquille, Fr. tranquillus, Lat.] quiet; undisturbed; peaceful.

TRANQUILLITY, s. [tranquillité, Fr. tranquillitas, Lat.] calmness; stillness; an undisturbed state of mind.

TRANS, [Lat.] in Composition, signifies over, beyond, through, or change of state or place.

TO TRANSACT, v. a. [transactus, Lat.] to conduct or manage any treaty or affair; to perform or carry on.

TRANSACTION, s. [Fr.] negotiation; management; any business carried on.

TRANSANIMATION, s. [trans and anima, Lat.] conveyance of the soul from one body to another.

TO TRANSCEND, v. a. [trans and scando, Lat.] to pass; to overpass, excel, or surpass; to surmount, outdo.

TRANSCENDENCY, s. excellency; supereminence of others in any good, quality or perfection; exaggeration; elevation beyond truth.

TRANSCENDENT, a. excellent; supremely excellent; surpassing.

TRANSCENDENTAL, a. surpassing all conception; exceeding the capacity of the understanding to grasp, or of words to express. In Algebra, it is applied to theorems and problems which can be only approximately demonstrated or solved by the highest mathematics. In Metaphysics, it is used to designate that system of philosophy which does not teach that the senses and experience are the means and the source of all our knowledge.

TRANSCENDENTLY, ad. excellently; supereminently.

TO TRANSCRIBE, v. a. [trans and scribo, Lat.] to copy; to write from an example.

TRANSCRIBER, s. one who writes from a copy.

TRANSCRIPT, s. a copy; any thing written from an original.

TRANSCRIPTION, s. [Fr.] the act of transcribing or copying.

TRANSCURSION, (transkürsion) s. [trans and curro, Lat.] passing through; the act of running or passing from one place to another; ramble; extraordinary deviation.

TO TRANSFER, v. a. [transferer, Fr. from trans and fero, Lat.] to make over from one to another; to transport or remove.

TRANSFER, s. in Commerce, &c., is an act whereby a person surrenders his right, interest, or property in any thing, movable or immovable, to another. It is chiefly used for the signing and making over shares in the stocks, or public funds, to such as purchase them of the proprietors.

TRANSFIGURATION, s. [trans and figura, Lat.] change of form or appearance; the state of a person or thing whose appearance is remarkably altered; transfiguration.

TO TRANSFIGURE, v. a. to transform; to change form or appearance.

TRANSFIGURED, a. having the form or appearance changed.

TO TRANSFIX, v. a. [trans and figo, Lat.] to pierce through.

TO TRANSFORM, v. a. [transformer, Fr. from trans and forma, Lat.] to change the external form; to change into some other form.—v. n. to be metamorphosed, or changed into another form.

TRANSFORMATION, s. [Fr.] the act of changing from one form into another.

TO TRANSFUSE, (transfüze) v. a. [trans and fundo, Lat.] to pour out of one into another.

TRANSFUSION, (transfüzshon) s. [Fr.] the act of pouring out of one vessel into another. In Medicine, the art of conveying the blood of one animal into another.

TO TRANSGRESS, v. a. [transgressor, Fr. from trans and gradior, Lat.] to pass over or beyond; to violate or break.—v. n. to offend by violating a law.

TRANSGRESSION, (transgrêshon) s. [Fr.] a breach or violation of a law or commandment; offence, crime, fault.

TRANSGRESSOR, s. [Lat.] a lawbreaker; an offender.

TRANSIENT, a. [transiens, from trans and eo, Lat.] soon past or passing; of short continuance; momentary; not lasting.

TRANSIENTLY, ad. slightly; by the bye; in passage.

TRANSIT, s. [transitus, Lat.] in Astronomy, applied to an inferior planet, when in its inferior conjunction it passes over the sun's disk like a black round spot. See MERCURY, and VENUS. Transit Instrument, in Astronomy and Optics, is a telescope, peculiarly constructed, with very accurate mountings, and capable of being fixed so as to observe the exact moment when the sun, or moon, or any planet or star, passes the meridian of any place.

TRANSITION, s. [Fr. transitio, Lat.] removal, passage, change; the act of passing from one subject to another. Transition Series, in Geology, was formerly applied to the oldest rocks in which organic remains were found; which were supposed to have been deposited during the period when the earth was passing from its primary or uninhabited state, to its secondary or fully inhabited condition.

TRAN(S)ITIVE, a. [transitivus, Lat.] having the power of passing. In Grammar, applied to verbs which do not completely express an action without an immediate object.

TRANSITORY, a. [transitoire, Fr. transitorius, Lat.] continuing but for a short time.

TO TRANSLATE, v. n. [trans and latum, Lat.] to transport or remove from one place or post to another; to transfer or convey; to change; to interpret, or give the sense of any book or sentence in another language.

TRANSLATION, s. [Fr.] the act of transferring or removing a thing from one place to another; we say the translation of a bishop, a council, a seat of justice, &c. It is also used for the version of a book or writing out of one language into another. See VERSION.

TRANSLATOR, s. one that turns any thing into another language.

TRANSLUCID, TRANSLUCENT, a. [trans and lucco, Lat.] transparent; diaphanous; clear; giving passage to light.

TRANSMARINE, a. [trans and mare, Lat.] lying on the other side of the sea; coming from parts beyond the sea.

TO TRANSMIGRATE, v. n. [trans and migro, Lat.] to pass from one country or place to another.

TRANSMIGRATION, s. [Fr.] the removal or translation of a whole people from one country to another, by the power of a conqueror.

TRANSMISSABLE, a. capable of being conveyed.

TRANSMISSION, (transmission) s. [trans and mitto, Lat.] the act of conveying from one place to another, or delivering from one person to another.

TO TRANSMIT, v. a. to send or deliver down from one person, place, or age to another.

TRANSMITTER, s. one that transmits.

TRANSMUTABLE, a. [transmutio, Lat.] capable of being changed from one nature or substance to another.

TRANSMUTATION, s. the act of changing one nature or substance to another. In Alchemy, it denotes the art of changing inferior metals into gold or silver.

TO TRANSMUTE, v. n. to change one substance or matter into another.

TRAN(S)OM, s. [trans, Lat.] in Building, a beam going across or athwart. The vane of the cross-staff.

TRANSPARENCY, a. [transparence, Fr. from trans and pareo, Lat.] that quality of a body which renders it easy to be seen through; clearness; transluence; diaphaneity.

TRANSPARENT, a. [Fr.] that may be seen through; clear; pervious, or giving passage to light; translucent; pellucid; diaphanous.

TRANSPIRATION, s. [Fr. trans and spiro, Lat.] emission of vapours.

TO TRANSPIRE, v. a. [transpirer, Fr.] to emit in vapour.—v. n. to be emitted in vapours; to escape from secrecy; to notice.

TO TRANSPLENT, v. a. [transplanter, Fr. from trans and planto, Lat.] to remove and plant in a new place; to remove.

TRANSPLANTATION, s. [Fr.] the act of removing from one place to another; removal.

TRANSPALANTER, s. one that transplants.

TO TRANSPORT, v. a. [transporter, Fr. trans and porto, Lat.] to carry or convey by carriage from one place to another; to carry into banishment; to hurry by violence of passion; to put into to ecstasy.

TRANSPORT, s. [Fr.] a violent hurry of passion; ecstasy; a rapture; a Sally; a ship employed to carry soldiers, ammunition, &c., or convicts, from one place to another; carriage; conveyance.

TRANSPORTABLE, a. capable of being moved from one place to another.

TRANSPORTATION, s. carriage from one place to another; banishment to some determined place for crimes; ecstatic violence of passion.

TRANSPORTER, s. one who transports.

TO TRAN(S)POSE, (transposse) v. a. [transposuer, Fr. from trans and pono, Lat.] to put each in the place of the other; to put out of place. In Music, to write out a composition in another key.

TRANSPPOSITION, (transpozichon) s. [Fr.] the act of changing the order or place of things. In Music, the act of copying a composition in a different key from that in which it is originally written.

TO TRANSUBSTANTIATE, (transubstantiare) v. a. [transubstantiar, Fr. from trans and substantia, Lat.] to change to another.

TRANSUBSTANTIATION, (transubstantiashon) s. [Fr.] in Romanist Theology, the conversion or change of the substance of the bread and wine, in the eucharist, into the body and blood of Jesus Christ, by the consecration of the priest. See CONSUBSTANTIATION.

TRANSDUCTION, s. the act of passing in vapour through any integument.

TO TRANSDUDE, v. n. [trans and sudo, Lat.] to pass through in vapour or moisture; to perspire.

TRAN(S)VERSE, a. [transversus, Lat.] being in a cross direction.

TRAN(S)VERSELY, ad. in a cross direction.

TRAN(S)YLVANIA, a principality of the Austrian empire, forming the E. part of Hungary, bordering on the Turkish dominions. It is nearly 200 miles extreme length in each direction. It is enclosed by lofty mountains, belonging to the Carpathian system, many of the heights of which exceed 9000 feet. All its rivers are tributaries of the Danube; and it has some lakes of considerable extent. It yields gold, silver, iron, lead, copper, and quicksilver; with salt, and precious stones. Grain of all kinds is grown here; and wine, timber, fruits, &c. &c. abundantly produced. Cattle, sheep, horses, &c. are reared in great numbers. Its export trade consists in these things. Hermannstadt, Clausenburg, Neumarkt, &c. are its chief cities. Pop. about 2,250,000.

TRAP, s. (trappe, Sax. trape, Fr.) a snare set to catch thieves or vermin; an ambush; a stratagem to catch or betray unawares; a play with a ball and sticks.

TO TRAP, v. a. [trappan, Sax.] See TO ENTRAP.

TRAP, TRAPPEAN, a. [trappa, Swed.] in Geology, is applied to rocks of igneous origin, not connected with volcanoes, whose craters can be distinguished. They occur in all forms, and under all varieties of circumstances; but amongst them none is more remarkable than that called, from the mining term, a dyke; which is a wall of solid rock, interposing between strata, whose lines of deposition can be traced on each side of it; and bearing evident marks of having originated by the filling up of a crevice, formed by the upheaving of the rocks, with matter in a state of fusion from below. See GRANITE, SIENITE, PORPHYRY, SERPENTINE, &c. &c.

TRAPDOOR, a. a door in a floor, or horizontal surface.

TRAPEZIUM, s. (trapeza, Gr.) in Geometry, a plane quadrilateral figure, two only of whose sides are parallel.

TRAPEZOID, s. (trapezion and eidon, Gr.) in Geometry, an irregular quadrilateral figure whose sides are not parallel.

TRAPPE, LA, a famous abbey of France, of the Cistercian order; of which, in 1664, Armand de Rance, a profligate abbe, disgusted with life, became abbot, and instead introduced an asceticism, which exceeded in its severity that of the founder of the sect. Manual labour, canonical and private devotions, were to take up all the time; the worship never ceased day nor night; the monks spoke to each other but once a week, and then on devotional subjects; science, art, literature, were disowned; the very library consisted of books of devotion alone; and beside fasting, vegetables, bread, and water were the only diet allowed. This institution continued in almost unmitigated severity of discipline till the French Revolution of 1789.

TRAPPINGS, s. [drap, Fr.] ornaments belonging to a saddle; dress; embellishment; external and trifling decoration.

TRASH, s. (tros, Isl.) any thing worthless or unwholesome; dress; dregs; a worthless person.

TO TRASH, v. a. to lop, crop; to crush, or humble.

TO TRAVAIL, (travail) v. n. [travailler, Fr.] to labour hard; to be in labour or child-birth.

TRAVAIL, (travail) s. hard labour; the anguish of child-birth. TRAVANCORE, a province of the peninsula of Hindustan, extending along the coast of Malabar from Cape Comorin to 10. 15. N. lat., and bounded on the N. by Mysore, and on the E. by the Carnatic. It is subject to a rajah, who is an ally of the English East India Company.

TO TRAVEL, v. n. to make journeys, applied both to sea and land, though we sometimes use it in opposition to voyage, which is appropriated to the sea; to pass, go, move; to make journeys of curiosity.—v. a. to pass; to journey over.

TRAVEL, s. journey; act of passing from place to place. Used in the plural, for narratives of journeys into foreign parts.

TRA'VELLER, s. [travailleuse, Fr.] one who goes a journey; a wayfarer; one who visits foreign countries.

TRA'VELLER'S-JOY, s. in Botany, a British plant, called also virgin's-bower, and clematis.

TO TRA'VERSE, v. a. [traverser, Fr.] to cross or lay athwart; to thwart, or oppose; to oppose so as to annul; to cross or wander over; to survey.—v. n. to use a posture of opposition in fencing. In Law, to deny some matter of fact alleged in the pleading or declaration of the plaintiff or prosecutor. In Gunnery, to turn or point a piece of ordnance in any direction from a fortification.

TRA'VERSE, TRA'NSVERSE, s. [traverse, Fr. transversus, Lat.] in general, something that goes athwart another, or crosses and cuts it obliquely. In Navigation, it is a compound course where-in several different successive courses and distances are known. In Law, it denotes the denial of some matter of fact alleged to be done in a declaration or pleadings. In Fortification, a defence against shot from one side, for the gunners.

TRA'VERTIN, s. [Ital.] in Geology, &c., a solid tufaceous deposit, frequently found in great quantities in Italy, where it is used as a building-stone, and is very durable. See Tufa.

TRA'VESTY, s. [travestir, Fr.] the disguising of an author, or the translating him into a style and manner different from his own; or the turning a serious subject into burlesque.

TRAUMATIC, s. [trauma, Gr.] a medicine good for the cure of wounds.

TRAUMATIC, a. belonging to the cure of wounds; vulnerary.

TRAY, s. [Swed.] a shallow wooden trough in which meat or fish is carried.

TRE'ACHEROUS, (trecherous) a. guilty of deserting or betraying; perfidious; faithless.

TRE'ACHEROUSLY, (trecherously) ad. perfidiously; clandestinely; faithlessly.

TRE'ACHEROUSNESS, s. the quality of being treacherous; perfidiousness.

TRE'ACHERY, (trichery) s. [tricherie, Fr.] breach of faith; perfidy.

TRE'ACLE, (treckle) s. [trincle, Fr.] in Medicine, a compound of many ingredients. In Trade, the dregs of sugar; molasses.

TO TREAD, (tréd) v. n. pret. trod, past part. trodden; [tredan, Sax. treden, Belg.] to set the foot; to trample, in scorn or malice; to walk with pomp. To copulate, applied to birds.—v. a. to walk upon; to press under foot; to crush under foot; to trample in contempt or hatred.

TREAD, (tréd) s. step with the foot; way, track, or path.

TREADER, s. he who treads.

TREADLE, (trédle) s. a lever by which a wheel is turned, worked by the feet. In Physiology, the chalcæ of an egg, by which the yolk is suspended in the white or albumen.

TRE'ADWHEEL, s. a long hollow cylinder or wheel, constructed like a water-wheel, to be set in motion by persons stepping on the foot-boards; used in prisons, as a penal occupation, and usually communicating motion to the machinery of a mill.

TRE'ASON, (trezon) s. [trahison, Fr.] the act of betraying; but more particularly the act or crime of infidelity to one's lawful sovereign. High treason is an offence against the security of the king or kingdom, which is again divided into various branches. Petty treason is, where a servant kills his master, a wife her husband, or a secular or religious person kills his prelate or superior, to whom he owes faith and obedience; and aiders and abettors, as well as procurers, are within the act.

TRE'ASONABLE, (trezonable) a. traitorous; liable to be construed or interpreted treason.

TRE'ASURE, (trézure) s. [trésor, Fr.] wealth or riches hoarded up or accumulated.

TO TRE'ASURE, (trézure) v. a. to hoard, accumulate, or amass.

TRE'ASURER, (trézurer) s. [trésorier, Fr.] an officer to whom the money of a corporation is committed, to be kept and duly disposed of. Lord high treasurer is first commissioner of the Treasury, has under his charge and direction all the king's revenue, which is kept in the Exchequer. He holds his place during the king's pleasure, and is instituted by the delivery of a white staff to him; and has a check on all the officers employed in collecting the king's revenue. But this office is now in commission. Five commissioners are appointed, the first of which is called first lord of the Treasury, and, sometimes, is also chancellor of the Exchequer. There is likewise the treasurer of the king's household, of the king's navy, of the king's chamber, and of the wardrobe. Most corporations have treasurers, as has likewise every county.

TRE'ASURESHP, s. the office or dignity of a treasurer.

TRE'ASURE-TROVE, s. [trésor-trouvé, Fr.] in Law, any casually discovered treasure, which, if the rightful owner is not discovered, belongs to the sovereign.

TRE'ASURY, (trézury) s. [trésorerie, Fr.] a place in which riches or money are laid up or accumulated. In the English Constitution, that branch of government which is busied with the affairs of the revenue, &c.

TO TRE'AT, (treaf) v. a. [tracto, Lat. trahion, Sax. trailer, Fr.] to negotiate; to settle; to discourse on, used with on or upon; to use; to manage, handle, carry on; to entertain freely.—v. n. to discourse or discuss; to carry on a treaty or negotiation; to come to terms of accommodation; to entertain a person at a feast.

TRE'AT, (treaf) s. an entertainment given; something given at an entertainment.

TRE'ATISE, (trétise) s. a set discourse or written tract on any subject.

TRE'ATMENT, (trétment) s. [traitement, Fr.] usage; manner of usage, whether good or bad.

TRE'ATY, (trétly) s. [traité, Fr.] a covenant between two or more nations; or the several articles and conditions stipulated and agreed upon between sovereign powers.

TRE'BISOND, or TRAPEZOND, a strong town of Asiatic Turkey, seated on the S. E. shore of the Black Sea. It was a famous place in former times, but now is only distinguished as a place of commerce. It abounds with relics of buildings of all ages, and is the see of a Greek archbishop. It is 440 miles from Constantinople. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 23° N. Long. 39° 43' E.

TRE'BLE, a. [triple, Fr. triplez, from tres, Lat.] threefold; triple. In Music, the highest pitch of the human voice.

TO TRE'BLE, v. a. [tripler, Fr.] to multiply by three; to make thrice as much.—v. n. to become threefold.

TREE, s. [arbor, Lat. tre, Sax. tré, Isl.] in Botany, the general and popular name for all plants which send out an upright woody stem, before spreading into branches. It is also applied, in Horticulture, to garden plants, or shrubs, which are made by art to assume this form, as tree-rose, tree-fuchsia. Figuratively, any thing branched out.

TREE-MOSS, s. in Botany, a sort of lichen.

TRE'FOIL, or CLO'VEL, s. [trefoile, Fr.] in Botany and Farming, a genus of plants greatly esteemed for the great improvement it makes upon land, the goodness of its hay, and the value of its seed. The sour trefoil is what is also called cuckoo-bread.

TRE'LLIS, s. [Fr.] a structure of iron, wood, or osier, the parts crossing each other like a lattice.

TRE'LLISED, a. wrought in the manner of a lattice or grate.

TO TRE'MBLE, v. n. [trembler, Fr.] to shake or shiver with fear or cold; to quiver.

TREMBLING, s. shaking or shivering with fear or cold; tottering, quivering, quavering.

TREME'NDOUS, a. [tremendus, from tremo, Lat.] affecting with, or causing, fear or dread; horrible; astonishingly terrible.

TRE'MOR, s. [Lat.] a state of shaking or trembling; quivering or vibrating motion.

TRE'MULOUS, a. [tremulus, from tremo, Lat.] quavering; shaking; vibratory; trembling; quivering; fearful.

TREN, s. a fish-spear.

TO TRENCH, v. a. [trancher, Fr.] to cut; to cut or dig into pits or trenches.

TRENCH, s. [tranche, Fr.] a pit or ditch. In Fortification, earth thrown up to defend soldiers in attacking a fortress, or to guard a camp.

TREN'CHANT, a. [Fr.] cutting; sharp.

TREN'CHER, s. [tranchoir, Fr.] a piece of wood; an utensil; a table; food; a square cap worn by students at the universities.

TREN'CHERFULY, a. one that haunts tables; a parasite.

TRENCK, FREDÉRIC BARON VON DER, a remarkable person of the last century, whose adventures were more wonderful than those of most heroes of romances. He was a Prussian officer, and enjoyed the favour of Frederick the Great. It was his misfortune also to enjoy that of the Princess Amalie, and his folly to boast of it. He was entrapped into some offence against the royal dignity, and imprisoned at Glätz; but he escaped and went to Vienna. Subsequently he visited Russia, Sweden, and other countries, and returned at last to Vienna. During this period, his royal friend, his cousin, and others to whom his handsome person recommended him, supplied him bountifully with money, and he had beside several military commissions. Imprudently revisiting Prussia, he was seized and confined at Magdeburg, where he so repeatedly endeavoured to escape, that he was literally loaded with letters to secure him. After 15 years he was released, and banished for life. He then set up as a wine merchant at Aix-la-Chapelle, and was not more prosperous in that than in his former career. His next attempt was authorship, and a Life of his persecutor raised him to the summit of notoriety. At length, after attempting to be restored to his own country, he threw himself into the vortex of the French Revolution, and was guillotined in 1794, aged 68 years. His Memoirs, written by himself, tell the tale of his misfortunes, and are, like himself, throughout his whole life, not remarkable for calmness or moderation.

To TREND, v. n. to tend; to incline to any particular direction.

TRENDLE, s. [trendel, Sax.] any thing turned round.

TRENT, an ancient, handsome, and considerable city of Tyrol, in Austria, formerly a free imperial city. It is seated at the foot of the Alps, in a pleasant fertile valley, on the river Adige, and has valuable manufactures, and a considerable trade. Its public buildings are very fine. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 46. 8. N. Long. 11. 27. E.

TRENT, a large river in England, which rises in Staffordshire, issuing from three several springs between Congleton and Leek. Flowing through Staffordshire, it enters Derbyshire, crosses the southern angle of that county, and forms for a short space its separation from the counties of Lincoln and Nottingham; it then enters the latter county, and crossing it forms the boundary between that county and Lincolnshire, a corner of which it crosses, and then falls into the Humber below Gainsborough, after a course of about 200 miles, during which it receives the waters of several large streams. It is a large navigable river through the whole of Nottinghamshire, but has the inconvenience of being subject to great and frequent floods.

TRENT, COUNCIL OF, the last general council ever held; which was convoked in consequence of the spread of the Reformation, in 1542, and was opened in 1545. It was interrupted in 1547, and an attempt made to remove it to Bologna, which failed; and again summoned at Trent, in 1551; but in the next year dispersed again. In 1561, it was once more summoned, and reopened in the following year. The decrees of the council, which had been protracted to the length of 20 years, and had passed through the most remarkable vicissitudes that such an assembly could be subject to; having been sanctioned by the popes Paul III., Julius III., and Pius IV., and opposed by others; having been robbed by death of its most learned and earnest counsellors; having had its scope and spirit changed to meet the varying political gusts of that stormy period; and being, in its result, rather a statement of the comparative strength of the secular and of the ecclesiastical powers in Papal Christendom,—were at length, in 1564, confirmed by Pope Pius IV., and are now received by the whole Catholic world, with few and partial exceptions, as the authoritative standard of the true faith.

TRENTON, the capital of New Jersey, United States. It stands on the Delaware, opposite the falls, at the foot of which is a beautiful covered bridge, of above 1000 feet long, resting on 5 arches. It is regularly planned, and has some very fine public edifices; such as the state-house, and other government buildings, and the churches. It has a tolerably good trade, being at the head of the steamboat navigation; and some valuable manufactures. It is 166 miles from Washington. Pop. 4035.

TREPAN, s. [Fr.] in Surgery, an instrument by which round pieces are cut out of the skull.—from TREPANT, a part of Sicily, where our ships, being insidiously invited in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, were unjustly detained; a snare.

To TREPAN, v. a. [trépanner, Fr.] to perforate with the trepan; to catch; to insnare.

TREPHINE, s. in Surgery, a small trepan; a smaller instrument of perforation, managed by one hand.

TREPID, a. [trepido, Lat.] trembling; quaking for fear.

TREPIDATION, s. [Fr.] state of shaking or trembling; state of terror.

To TRE/SPASS, v. n. [trespasser, Fr.] to transgress or offend; used with on or against, to enter a person's ground unlawfully.

TRE/SPASS, s. [trespass, Fr.] transgression; offence; unlawful entrance on another's ground.

TRE/SPASSER, s. a transgressor; one that injures another; one who unlawfully enters on another's ground.

TRE/SSSED, a. [tressé, Fr.] knotted or curled.

TRESSES, s. it has no singular; locks or curls of hair hanging down loosely.

TRE/STLE, s. [treteau, Fr.] a movable frame that supports any thing; a three-legged stool.

TRET, s. [perhaps from tritus, Lat.] in Commerce, is an allowance made for the waste or dirt that may be mixed with any commodity, which is always four pounds in one hundred and four pounds' weight.

TREYES, or TRIERS, capital of a government of the same name, in Rhenish Prussia. It stands in a fertile and beautiful valley, on the Moselle; and has a great number of relics of Roman architecture, as well as many fine buildings of more recent date. Here is also a very valuable library. Its trade and manufactures are of considerable extent and value. Over the river it has a fine old stone bridge. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 49. 47. N. Long. 6. 41. E.

TRE/VET, s. [thrieffet, Sax.] any thing standing on three feet.

TREVISIO, or TREVIGLO, a large and ancient city of Italy, capital of Trevisano, in Austrian Lombardy. It had formerly a university, which was transferred to Padua. It contains a great number of handsome buildings, being the residence of many aristocratic families; is of pretty large extent, and seated on the river Sile, 20 miles from Venice. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 45. 44. N. Long. 12. 25. E.

TREY, s. [tres, Lat. trois, Fr.] three; the three odds at cards and dice.

TRIAD, s. [triade, Fr. trias, from tres, Lat.] three united.

TRIAL, s. [trial, from examination; experience; an experiment; a temptation or test of virtue; the state of being tried. In Law, it is the examination of a cause, civil or criminal, according to the laws of the land, before a proper judge.

TRIANGLE, s. [Fr. triangulum, from tres and angulum, Lat.] a figure with three sides and three corners. In Astronomy, two constellations, one in the northern and the other in the southern hemisphere.

TRIANGULAR, a. having three corners; having the form of a triangle.

TRIBE, s. [tribus, Lat.] in cities of antiquity, a certain number of persons; a division of a city or people. Generally, now, a clan, or collection of families, in nations only partially raised from barbarism; or a subdivision of a race, in Ethnography.

TRIBONIAN, the great Roman jurist, who compiled, under the orders of the emperor Justinian, the celebrated Pandects and Code, which have established a more lasting Roman empire than all the conquests of its numberless armies. He was not much more remarkable for personal rectitude and love of justice, however, than the emperor himself, who was a mere despot. He died in 547, or in 545, A. D.

TRIBUTATION, s. [Fr.] persecution, distress, vexation, affliction.

TRIBUNAL, s. [Lat. and Fr.] the seat of a judge; the seat where the tribune of the Roman people was placed to administer justice; a court of justice; the place from which speeches are customarily made in assemblies in France.

TRIBUNE, s. in Ancient Rome, a magistrate chosen out of the commons to protect them against the oppression of the great, and to defend the liberty of the people against the attempts of the senate and consuls.

TRIBUTARY, a. [tributaire, Fr. from tributo, Lat.] paying taxes or tribute; subject; subordinate; paid in tribute.

TRIBUTARY, s. one who pays a stated sum in acknowledgment of subjection; a river which discharges its waters into a larger stream.

TRIBUTE, s. [tribut, Fr.] a tax or impost which one prince or state is obliged to pay to another, as a token of dependence, or in virtue of a treaty, and as a purchase of peace; subjection.

TRICE, s. a short time, or an instant.

TRICE/NNIAL, a. [tricensi and annus, Lat.] belonging to the term of thirty years.

TRICHION/POLY, a city of the presidency of Madras, Hindustan. It stands near the Cauvery, on a hill which is strongly fortified. It has several fine buildings, but is not on the whole a handsome place. It is however healthy, and its position is of great importance to that part of British India. Pop. about 100,000. Lat. 10. 50. N. Long. 78. 50. E.

TRICHOTOMY, s. [treis and temno, Gr.] division into three parts.

TRICK, s. [treck, Belg.] a sly fraud or artifice; a juggie; a lift of cards; a vicious practice.

TO TRICK, v. a. [tricker, Fr.] to cheat, impose on, or defraud; to perform by sleight of hand; to juggle.—[trica, low Lat.] to dress or adorn the hair or person.—v. n. to live by fraud.

TRICKER, s. See TRICKER.

TRICKING, a. cheating; crafty; deceitful.

TRICKINGLY, ad. in a cheating, fraudulent, and deceitful manner.

TO TRICKLE, v. n. to run down in drops; to trill in a slender stream.

TRICKSTER, s. one who cheats or defrauds; a wily and deceitful person.

TRICKSY, a. pretty; engaging by means of innocent artifices.

TRIDENT, s. [Fr. tres and dens, Lat.] the sceptre of Neptune; a kind of spear or fork, with three teeth.

TRIDING, s. [trithinga, Sax.] the third part of a county. This division is only used in Yorkshire, where the term is corrupted into Riding.

TRIDING MOTE, s. a court leet; the court held for a triding.

TRIDUAN, a. [tres and dies, Lat.] lasting three days; happening every third day.

TRIE/NNIAL, a. [tres and annus, Lat.] lasting three years; happening every third year.

TRIER, s. one who tries experimentally; he that examines judicially; one who brings to the test.

TRIE/STE, a sea-port of Illyria, in Austria. It is situated on a hill, and extends to the shore of the Adriatic. The harbour is good and spacious, and is strongly fortified. The part next the sea is more handsomely and regularly built than the upper part, and there are some very fine public buildings. Its commerce is very considerable, and it carries on ship-building to a great extent. Pop. about 70,000. Lat. 45. 48. N. Long. 13. 40. E.

TRIFID, a. [trifidus, from tres and fido, Lat.] cut or separated into three parts.

TO TRIFLE, v. n. [trifelen, Belg.] to act or talk without any weight, dignity, or importance; to mock; to play the fool, followed by with; to be of no importance.

TRIFLE, s. a thing of no weight, value, or importance.

TRIFLER, s. [trifelaar, Belg.] one who acts with levity; one that talks with folly.

TRIFLING, a. wanting worth; unimportant.

TRIFOLIATE, a. [tres and folium, Lat.] having three leaves.

TRIFORM, a. [tres and forma, Lat.] having three shapes or forms.

TO TRIG, v. a. [tricker, Dan.] to stop a wheel; to set a mark to stand at in playing at nine-pins, &c.

TRI GAMY, s. [treis and gamos, Gr.] the crime of having three husbands or wives.

TRIGGER, (trig-er) s. [trigue, Fr.] a catch to hold the wheel of a carriage on steep ground; the catch by which a fire-arm is discharged.

TRIGLYPHS, (triglyphs) s. in Architecture, a sort of ornament repeated at equal intervals in the Doric frieze.

TRIGON, s. [treis and gonia, Gr.] a triangle. See TRINE.

TRIGONOMETRICAL, a. pertaining to trigonometry. Trigonometrical survey, the accurate measurement of a tract of the earth's surface, for the purpose of constructing a map, or plan, which shall be as topographically exact as possible, by means of trigonometry;—the principal points, being observed in groups of three, arranged as the angles of triangles, and only the smaller features of the country left to be surveyed in the ordinary manner.

TRIGONOMETRY, s. [trigonon and metreo, Gr.] in Mathematics, strictly, the art of measuring triangles; but practically, it is much more extensive.

TRILATERAL, a. [tres and latus, Lat.] having three sides.

TRILL, s. [trillo, Ital.] a quaver, or tremulousness of music. To TRILL, v. n. to quaver; to trickle, or fall down in drops.

TRIL/LION, s. ten hundred thousand billions, or the product of a million multiplied by a million, again multiplied by a million.

TRILLOBITE, s. in Palæontology, a remarkable family of extinct animals, whose remains are found in the oldest strata, in all parts of the globe where geology has been extensively studied. They are crustaceans, that is, covered with a shell, and they most resemble the various kinds of scor, or wood-louse, (as the common garden species is called,) but the head is very large in proportion to the rest of the body, and they are furnished with very large organs of vision, the reticulated appearance of which is very delicately preserved. They are often found rolled up, in the same manner as the common insect above-named is known to be, when it fears any harm.

TRIM, a. [gebrymneth, Sax.] nice; well-dressed; snug.

TO TRIM, v. a. [trimman, Sax.] to fit out, or adorn; to shave; to adjust; to balance a vessel.—v. n. to fluctuate between two parties; to balance.

TRIM, s. dress. Trim of a ship is her best posture, proportion of ballast, hanging of her masts, &c. for sailing.

TRIMMER, s. one who changes sides; a turn-coat; a piece of wood framed at a right angle to the joints, against the ways for chimneys, and well-holes of stairs.

TRIMMER, MRS. SARAH, a well-known and excellent writer of juvenile books, daughter of Mr. Joshua Kirby, of Ipswich, an eminent teacher of perspective. She was well educated, and informed much beyond the usual round of female education in her day. In middle life she devoted herself to the production of those excellent works for children and young persons, which are not yet wholly superseded. Her Histories of the Bible, &c. were almost the first attempt of the kind. Amongst her books, the History of the Robins, from the interest of the tale, and the kindness of the purpose, in spite of the unchildlikeness of the style, is yet a favourite. She died in 1810, aged 69 years.

TRIMMING, s. ornaments to set off clothes, &c.

TRIMNESS, s. neatness in dress; spruceness.

TRINOMALEE, a sea-port town of Ceylon, Asia. It stands on a large bay, on the E. side of the island, and is strongly fortified. A more excellent harbour than this bay can hardly be found, as, in addition to its extent and depth, it is sheltered on all sides. There is no great trade, however, carried on here, and the bay is chiefly used as a harbour of refuge. It is about 100 miles from Candy, the capital of Ceylon. Pop. about 8000. Lat. 8. 30. N. Long. 81. 25. E.

TRINE, s. [Fr. trinus, from tres, Lat.] in Astrology, the aspect or situation of a heavenly body in regard to another, when they are distant 120 degrees.

TO TRINE, v. a. to put in a trine aspect.

TRINIDAD, an island in the West Indies, of a quadrangular form, separated by the Gulf of Paria, a strait about 10 miles over, from S. America. It is upwards of 79 miles in length, and about 56 in breadth. It is in some parts mountainous, and has points exceeding 2000 feet in height. There are also some remarkable volcanic phenomena always to be observed here, amongst which the pitch lake is most extraordinary. The soil is generally fruitful, and all W. Indian produce is abundant here. Its fine harbours greatly aid its commerce. Pop. about 40,000. The English have possession of it.

TRINITARIANS, s. in Theology, those who hold the doctrine of the Trinity.

TRINITY, s. [trinité, Fr. trinitas, from tres, Lat.] in Theology, the term used to express the doctrine that there are in the God-head three distinct, but undivided persons. Few points of theology have been more productive of bitter and malignant strife than this; and the fundamental cause for this enduring controversy, is the bringing before the judgment of the understanding a question that lies beyond its province. All that pertains essentially to God must needs be quite above our comprehension, nor can any efforts make it clear and simple to our minds; they who have opposed this doctrine have, notwithstanding, insisted that all that relates to God must be intelligible, and such as we can comprehend. The representations of Scripture are on all points the farthest possible from strictly scientific statements, yet both parties in this controversy have insisted on regarding the various texts of Scripture that bear on the point as if they were scientific propositions. Logic in its general acceptation, the organon of the understanding, can never be applied to the development of spiritual and eternal truths, without bringing out irreconcilable contradictions, nay, without leading to a conclusion that contradicts some essential first truth; yet both parties (but especially that which upholds Trinitarianism) insist on the use of logic in inferring Scripture doctrine from Scripture texts; and we have in consequence such portentous creeds as that called the Athanasian, set forth for universal reception, under pain of perishing everlastingly if we reject it, or even hesitate to receive it. Bearing in mind that religion is life, not doctrine, and that the Scriptures, and particularly the revelation of God in the gospel, were specially given to foster the former, and not to inoculate the latter; let us study the original record, and we shall find that every possible form of representation is employed to make men see in Christ Jesus "God manifest in the flesh," and expect in the Holy Spirit an inward manifestation of both the Divine Father, and Jesus the Son of God; resulting from the evident incapacity of any words adequately to represent what transcends all thought. Nor shall we fail to see that, instead of resting on a basis of logical argumentation, the reception of Jesus as the Son of God stands upon no less sure a ground than the actual experience of a spiritual deliverance at his hands, so great that truly Divine power alone could accomplish it. Nor, lastly, will it be of little service to us to know, that the spiritual philosophy of the present day shows, beyond all controversy, that such manifestations of the Godhead, as the Son and the Spirit, are even necessary in the revelation of the Deity to the children of time and sense.

TRINITY COLLEGE, a college at Cambridge, founded in the 16th century, on the bases of two earlier colleges, which had lapsed to the king. It takes the lead in the university, and has very spacious buildings, and a library built by Wren. It is very wealthy, and has produced many great scholars. Also a college at Oxford, founded in the 13th century, and at first called Durham College. Some parts of its edifices are handsome.

TRINITY HALL, a college at Cambridge, founded in the 14th century, which is now particularly devoted to the study of jurisprudence. Its buildings are not remarkable for their extent or architecture.

TRINITY-HOUSE, s. a kind of college in Deptford, belonging to a company or corporation of seamen, who, by the king's charter, have power to take cognizance of those persons who destroy sea-marks, and to take care of other things belonging to navigation.

TRINITY-SUNDAY, s. in the Church Calendar, the Sunday after Whitsunday.

TRINKET, s. a toy; a gew-gaw; a plaything.

TRINOCTIAL, (trinokshial) s. [tres and nox, Lat.] consisting, or having the continuance, of three nights.

TRINOMIAL, s. [tres and nomen, Lat.] having three names, or terms.

TRIO, s. in Music, a composition consisting of three parts.

TRIOURS, s. in Law, are such persons as are chosen by the court to examine whether a challenge made to the whole panel of jurors, or any part of them, be just or not.

To TRIP, v. a. [trippen, Belg.] to supplant; to throw down by striking the feet from the ground with a sudden blow, used with up: to catch or detect.—v. n. to fall by slipping the feet; to fail, err, or be deficient; to tumble; to run on tip-toe, or lightly; to take a short voyage.

TRIP, s. a stroke by which a person's heels are kicked up; a stumble; a mistake or failure; a short voyage or journey; a jaunt.

TRIPA/RITTE, s. [Fr. from tres and pars, Lat.] something divided into three parts, or made by three parties.

TRIPARTITION, s. the act of dividing by three.

TRIPPE, s. [Fr. trippa, Ital. and Span.] the entrails of a bullock properly dressed.

TRIPLETAULOUS, s. [treis and petalon, Gr.] consisting of three flower-leaves.

TRIPHTHONG, (trifhthong) s. [treis and phthong, Gr.] in Grammar, three vowels making but one sound.

TRIPLE, s. [Fr. triple, from tres, Lat.] threefold.

To TRIPLE, v. a. [triplicare, Lat.] to make threefold; to treble; to make three as much or as many.

TRIPLET, s. three of a kind; three verses ending in the same rhyme.

TRIPPLICATE, a. [triplicatus, Lat.] three-fold, or thrice as much. TriPLICATE ratio, is the ratio which cubes bear to one another. See CUBE.

TRIPPLICATION, s. [triplicatio, Lat.] the act of making three-fold, or taking any quantity or number three times.

TRIPPLICITY, s. [triplicité, Fr.] the quality of being three-fold or treble.

TRIPPLY, ad. in a three-fold manner.

TRIPPOD, s. [tres and pes, Lat.] in Antiquity, a sacred seat or stool, supported by three feet, whereon the priests and sibyls were placed to render oracles. Also, any piece of furniture having three feet.

TRIPOLI, a country of Africa lying on the Mediterranean, bounded on all sides by the desert; and including, as a dependency, the inland territory of Fezzan. It is about 1000 miles in length, and it stretches into the interior above 500 miles in its greatest breadth. In some parts it is mountainous; but the parts farthest from the coast are but imperfectly explored. It has few rivers; and in many parts is rather a succession of oases than an expanse of habitable territory. In some districts it is fertile, and yields grain, fruits, &c. &c. Wild beasts are numerous, but the most formidable are not found here. What trade there is, is carried on principally by caravans, which periodically cross the deserts that divide it from Egypt, from the inland regions, and from Barbary. It has few harbours, and the navigation of the coast is both difficult and dangerous, which is an insuperable hindrance to commerce of a more extended kind. The people are chiefly Arabs in the open parts, and Berbers in the cities and towns. There are also many Jews. The pacha is held to be dependent on the grand sultan. Pop. about 2,000,000. Tripoli, the capital, is a fortified place, and stands next the sea. It is regularly built, but is not remarkable for its architecture or its public edifices. Its harbour is not good. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 32. 53. N. Long. 13. 11. E.

TRIPOLI, in Mineralogy, a soft kind of slaty earth, used much in polishing stones, metals, &c. &c. Ehrenberg has discovered that the greater part of it consists of the flinty cases of microscopic animalcula, such as abound in all but rain and pure spring water. See INFUSORIA.

TRIPPER, s. one who trips.

TRIPPING, a. quick; nimble; stumbling; faltering.

TRIPOTOTE, s. [tripoton, Lat. from treis and ptosis, Gr.] in old books of Grammar, a noun used in three cases.

TRIPUDIARY, a. performed by dancing.

TRIPUDIATION, s. [tripudium, Lat.] the act of dancing.

TRIEME, s. [tres and remus, Lat.] a galley having three rows of oars on each side.

TRISECTION, s. [tres and seco, Lat.] division into three equal parts.

TRISTAN DA CUNHA, an island of the S. Atlantic Ocean, almost S. of St. Helena, and lying about midway between the Cape of Good Hope and S. America. There are two other islands lying near it. The group was discovered by the celebrated Portuguese admiral, in the 16th century. It is about 6 miles in each direction; and consists of a mountain, of above 8000 feet high, with fertile land at its foot. It has good grazing grounds, and the sea round furnishes excellent fisheries. A small British settlement has been fixed here.

TRISYLLABLE, s. [tres and syllabus, Lat.] a word consisting of three syllables.

TRITE, a. [tritum, from tero, Lat.] worn out; stale; common; threadbare.

TRITENESS, s. commonness; staleness.

TRITHEISTS, s. [treis and Theos, Gr.] in Theology, the name by which those persons who divide, instead of distinguishing, the Father, Son, and Spirit, in the Godhead, are sometimes called.

TRITON, s. [Lat.] in Heathen Mythology, an inferior kind of sea-god, half man, half fish; who is represented as an attendant on Poseidon, or Neptune.

TRITORIUM, s. in Chemistry, a vessel used for the separation of two fluids which are of different densities. The same operation may be performed by a common funnel.

To TRITURATE, v. a. [triturer, Fr.] to pulverize; to reduce to a powder; to levigate.

TRITURATION, s. [Fr.] in Pharmacy, the act of reducing a solid body into powder; levigation; pulverization.

TRIVET, s. See TREVET.

TRIVIAL, a. [Fr. trivialis, Lat.] worthless; trifling; of no weight or importance; vulgar; common.

TRIVIALITY, ad. in a mean, worthless, or trifling manner; vulgarly; inconsiderably; lightly.

TRIVIALNESS, s. meanness; worthlessness; triflingness; unimportance.

TRIUMPH (triumph), s. [triumphus, Lat.] in Roman Antiquity, a public and solemn honour conferred on a victorious general, by allowing him a magnificent entry into the city. Victory; conquest.

To TRIUMPH, (triumf) v. n. (triumpho, Lat.) to celebrate a victory with pomp or joy; to obtain a victory. To triumph over, to insult on account of some advantage gained.

TRIUMPHAL, (triumfal) a. [triumphalis, Lat.] belonging to a triumph.

TRIUMPHANT, a. [triumphans, Lat.] celebrating a victory; victorious.

TRIUMPHANTLY, ad. in a triumphant manner; victoriously.

TRIUMVIR, s. [Lat.] one of the three persons who govern absolutely, and with equal authority, in a state.

TRIUMVIRATE, s. an absolute government administered by three persons, with equal authority.

TRUNE, a. [tres and umus, Lat.] in Theology, three and one at the same time.

TROCHÆIC, a. consisting of trochees, applied to lines of poetry.

TROCHANTERS, s. [trochanteres, from trecho, Gr.] in Anatomy, two processes of the thigh bone, called trochanter major and minor, in which the tendons of many muscles terminate.

TROCHE, s. See LOZENGE.

TROCHÉE, (trikee) s. [trocheus, Lat. trocheos, from trecho, Gr.] in Prosody, a dissyllabic foot, consisting of a long syllable and a short one; as féél, rûthér.

TROCHINGS, s. the branches on a deer's head.

TROCHLEA, (trókleea) s. [trochæa, Gr.] one of the mechanical powers, commonly called a pulley.

TROCHOÏDAL, a. in Geometry, applied to the various and elegant curves formed by the motion of one circle around another; as the cycloid is formed by the motion of a circle along a straight line.

TROCHUS, (trókús) s. [Lat. trochos, from trecho, Gr.] a wheel; any thing round.

TRODE, preter. of To TREAD.

TROGLÓDYTE, (tróglé and duo, Gr.) one who inhabits caves of the earth.

TROGUS POMPEIUS, a Roman historian of the first century after the Christian era, whose work we know only through the abridgment by Justin. He wrote other works, but none have come down to us.

To TROLL, (o pron. long.) v. a. [trollen, Belg.] to roll, or move circularly.—v. n. to move or run round; to fish for pike with a rod which has a pulley towards the bottom; to sing a catch or round.

TROMBONE, s. in Music, a kind of trumpet, the lower part of the long flexure of which slides in the upper part, and thus enables the performer to command a considerable compass of tones and semitones. That most commonly used is the bass trombone; but it is in good part superseded by the ophicleid. It was formerly called a sackbut.

TROMP, the name of two celebrated Dutch admirals of the 17th century. Martin Harpertsoon, the elder, after spending his youth in laborious obscurity, during which he was for some years a prisoner of war in England, entered the naval service of the United Provinces, and rose by his gallantry to be admiral. It was in the war between Holland and the English Commonwealth that he reached the zenith of his glory; and in several engagements with the English fleet, under Blake, maintained his high reputation, though he only once gained a decided superiority; after which he insultingly hoisted a broom at his mast-head, as if he had swept the British from the sea. He fell in an engagement with Monk, in 1653, aged 56 years. His son, Cornelius Van Tromp, after honourable service, was beaten by Earl Sandwich, and conquered Albemarle. He was in other engagements with England, France, and Sweden, and was enabled by the kings of Denmark and England. He died in 1691, aged 62 years.

TRONAGE, s. an ancient customary toll paid for weighing wool.

TRONCH'N, THEODORE, an eminent Swiss physician, who studied at Cambridge and Leyden, and practised at Amsterdam and Geneva; but afterwards settled at Paris on being appointed physician to the Duke of Orleans. He was very celebrated in his profession, and practised inoculation with great success. He died in 1781, aged 72 years.

TROOP, s. [troupe, Fr. troppa, Ital. troupe, Belg. trop, Swed.] a small body of horse or dragons; a company.

To TROOP, v. n. to flock or gather together; to march off or run away.

TROOPER, s. a dragoon; a soldier that fights on horseback.

TROPE, s. [Fr. tropus, Lat. tropos, from trepo, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a figure, whereby a word is removed from its first and natural signification, and applied with advantage to another thing which it does not originally mean; as, God is my rock.

TROPHY, (trífy) s. [trophæum, Lat. tropaion, from trepe, Gr.] among the ancients, was a pile or heap of arms of a vanquished enemy, raised by the conqueror on the most eminent part of the field of battle. Trophy-money denotes a duty paid annually by housekeepers, or their landlords, for defraying the expense of the military furniture of the militia.

TROPICAL, a. in Rhetoric, changed from its original meaning. In Geography, placed near, or belonging to, the tropic.

TROPIC-BIRD, s. in Ornithology, a long-winged marine bird, which has two remarkably long and slender feathers in its tail, and is found only in the vicinity of the tropics.

TROPICS, s. [tropikos, from trepo, Gr.] in Astronomy and Geography, two circles supposed to be drawn on each side of the equator, and parallel to it. That on the north side of the line is called the tropic of Cancer, and the southern tropic has the name of Capricorn, as passing through the beginning of those signs: they are distant from the equator 23° 28'.

TROPOLOGICAL, a. [tropos and logos, Gr.] belonging to tropology.

TROPOLOGY, s. a discourse delivered in tropes or figures.

To TROT, v. n. [trotter, Fr. trotten, Belg.] to move with a high jolting pace; to walk fast; to quiz or satirize to one's face.

TROT, s. [trot, Fr.] the jolting high pace of a horse.

TROTH, s. [trouth, old Eng.] truth; faith; fidelity.

TROTTER, s. one who trots; the foot of a sheep.

TROUBADOURS, or TROUVÈRES, the name by which the poets or minstrels of the 12th and 13th centuries, who wrote in the Romance languages, are known. The latter name being appropriated to those who wrote in the dialect of N. France; the former, to those who wrote in the Provençal dialect. They were in many cases celebrated as much for their chivalric valour, as for their songs; and the names of some were held in honour during their lives, not only in Christendom, but amongst the Moorish tribes of Spain also. Many of their compositions have come down to us.

To TROUBLE, (trûb) v. a. [troubler, Fr.] to disturb, perplex; to afflict, grieve, distress, or make uneasy.

TROUBLE, (trûb) s. [Fr.] perplexity; distress; affliction; uneasiness; molestation; vexation.

TROUBLER, s. a disturber; a confounder.

TROUBLESOME, (trâblsome) a. causing molestation; vexations; afflictive; uneasy; tiresome; burdensome; teasing.

TROUBLESOMENESS, s. vexatiousness; importunity; uneasiness; uneasiness.

TROUBLOUS, a. tumultuous; confused; disordered.

TROVER, s. [trouver, Fr.] in Law, is an action that lies against one, who, having found another's goods, refuses to deliver them upon demand.

TROUGH, (troff) s. [trog, troh, Sax. troch, Belg.] any vessel of greater length than breadth, having the upper side open. Trough of a sea, among mariners, the hollow between two waves.

To TROUL, v. n. [trollen, Belg.] to move or utter volubly.

To TROUNCE, v. a. to punish by an indictment or information.

TROUSERS, (trôizers) s. [trousse, Fr. truish, Erse.] long loose breeches or pantaloons.

TROUT, s. [trout, Sax.] in Ichthyology, the name of a very beautiful river fish, which is reckoned great delicacy. It is allied to the salmon. Several other species are sometimes called by this name.

To TROW, (trô) v. n. [troë, Dan.] to think or imagine; to conceive.

TROWBRIDGE, Wiltshire. It is seated on a hill, near the Were, and is a considerable place, with some handsome buildings. It is one of the most important towns in this part of the country, from its great cloth manufactures. It is 120 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 11,050.

TROWEL, (one pronounced as hoe), s. [travella, Fr.] a tool used by masons and bricklayers for spreading mortar.

TROY, in Ancient Geography, a famous city of Asia Minor, in the country called, after it, Troas. It stood near the Hellespont, not far from the mountain-range called Ida. Its great celebrity has arisen from the numerous poetical legends respecting it, the chief of which relate to its 10 years' siege by the Greeks, for the purpose of recovering and revenging the abduction of Helen. Homer's Iliad recites the adventures of part of this long war. Troy was also called Ilium. The region round it was afterwards known as Mysia, though the immediate vicinity long retained the name of Troas.

TROY, a city of New York, United States. It stands on the Hudson river, over which is a bridge to a suburb called W. Troy. It stands at the head of the tide-water of the river, and is thus possessed of great advantages for navigation. A dam across the river also gives it a great water-power for manufacturing purposes. It is very regularly built, and has some handsome public edifices. Amongst its various institutions, none is more deservedly celebrated than the Female Institute, or college. It is 376 miles from Washington. Pop. 24,334. There are in the States 21 other places similarly named.

TROYES, an ancient, large, rich, and handsome city in the department of Aube, France. It stands on the Seine, and is fortified, but not wholly in the modern fashion. It has some fine buildings, but its trade is not so flourishing as it was in former times. Its linen manufactures are, however, of some importance. It is 90 miles from Paris. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 48. 18. N. Long. 4. 5. E.

TROY-WEIGHT, s. a measure of weight used in weighing gold, silver, jewels, drugs, &c.

TRUANT, s. [treuant, Belg.] one who wanders about idly, and neglects his duty and business. To play the truant, is to be absent from school without leave.

TRUCE, s. [truga, low Lat.] denotes a suspension of arms, or a cessation of hostilities between two armies, in order to settle articles of peace, bury the dead, or the like.

TRUCIDATION, s. [trucidatio, from trucido, Lat.] carnage; butchery; slaughter.

TO TRUCK, v. n. [troquer, Fr.] to give one commodity or thing in exchange for another; to barter; to swap.

TRUCK, s. exchange; a small carriage used for the conveyance of baggage and goods. In Trade, it signifies the practice, formerly much adopted in manufactories, of paying the workmen in tickets, to be exchanged for groceries and other necessities of life at a shop kept by the employers, instead of in money. The evils of this system for the workmen may be easily perceived, and they did in fact become so great, that it was at last put down by act of parliament.

TRUCKLE, s. a little running wheel.

TO TRUCKLE, v. n. to submit or yield; to creep or buckle to.

TRUCULENT, a. [truculentus, Lat.] stern, fierce, or cruel.

TO TRUDGE, v. n. [truggiare, Ital.] to travel or jog on heavily.

TRUE, a. [truca, or trecca, Sax.] agreeing with fact, or the nature of things; genuine, opposed to counterfeit; faithful, exact, honest, veracious, rightful.

TRU'LOVE, s. in Botany, the herb Paris, called also one-berry.

TRU'NESS, s. sincerity; faithfulness.

TRU'EPENNY, s. a familiar expression for an honest fellow.

TRU'FFLE, s. [truffle, Fr.] in Botany, a kind of fungus, which grows under the surface of the ground, and is used as an article of food.

TRU'LY, ad. faithfully; sincerely; exactly; indeed.

TRU'MAN, JOSEPH, one of the ejected Nonconformist ministers of the English St. Bartholomew. He studied at Cambridge, and was a sufferer for conscience' sake in 1662. He wrote several theological works, one of which, the Great Propitiation, is yet read, and others of which are deserving attention. He was a good scholar, and hard thinker, but not so clear a writer. He died in 1671, aged 40 years.

TRU'MBULL, SIR WILLIAM, a statesman of the latter part of the 17th century. He studied law at Oxford, and became a London civilian, having such a reputation that he obtained some excellent posts under government. Afterwards he entered the diplomatic service, and went as ambassador to Paris, and to Constantinople. After the Revolution of 1688, he was one of the secretaries of state. He retired in a short time from public life, and was afterwards known as a patron of literature, and the friend of Dryden and Pope. He died in 1716, aged 80 years.

TRUMP, s. [troupe, Belg. and old Fr. trombe, Ital.] a trumpet. In Gaming, a card of the same sort of that which is turned up; which will win any card of another sort, and which used formerly to be written triumph. To put to the trumps, is, to reduce to great extremities, or to be put to the last expedient.

To TRUMP, v. a. to win with a trump card.—[tromper, Fr.] with up, to devise, forge, cheat.

TRUMPERY, s. useless and ostentatious show; paltry stuff; falsehood; empty talk; trifles.

TRUMPET, s. [troupette, Fr. and Belg.] in Music, a metallic instrument, consisting of a long, bell-mouthed tube, usually bent into a long oval form, and employed in giving signals to troops in battle, &c. Speaking-trumpet, a metallic tube, with a gradually widening aperture, and a mouth-piece at the narrowest end, by means of which words may be spoken so as to be distinctly heard at a considerable distance. They are used on board ship. Figuratively, one who sounds a trumpet.

TRUM'PETER, s. one who blows or sounds a trumpet; one who proclaims, publishes, or denounces.

TRUNCATED, a. [truncatus, from truncus, Lat.] cut short at the point; deprived of a limb; maimed.

TRUNCATION, s. the act of lopping or maiming.

TRUN'CHEON, s. [tronçon, Fr.] a short staff or cudgel; a staff borne by a general officer.

TRUN'CHEONEER, s. one armed with a truncheon.

TO TRUNDLE, v. n. [trendl, Sax.] to roll; to bowl along.

TRUNK, s. [truncus, Lat. trunc, Fr.] the stump or body of a tree, between its branches and the ground. In Botany, the main body of a tree or plant. In Anatomy, it is the human body, exclusive of the head and limbs; also, the main body of an artery or vein. Also, a chest covered with leather; a wooden pipe to convey water; the proboscis of an elephant.

TRUN'NIONS, s. [trognons, Fr.] the strong pivots on the sides of a cannon, by which it is supported on its carriage.

TRURO, Cornwall. It has regular streets, a large market-house, and a spacious old church. It has the benefit of the coinage of tin, and the lord warden of the stannaries holds his parliament here. Its chief business is in shipping tin and copper ore. It is seated at the head of the river Fale, with a large commodious wharf or quay, for vessels of about 200 tons burden; 250 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 3043.

TRU'SION, (trüzhon) s. [trudo, Lat.] the act of thrusting or pushing.

TRUSS, s. [trousse, Fr.] a bundle, or certain quantity, of hay or straw. In Building, a means of supporting a roof and of keeping the framework compactly together. In Botany, it signifies many flowers growing together on the head of a stalk. Also, the bandage or padded metallic spring, worn by those afflicted with hernia or rupture.

To TRUSS, v. a. [troussier, Fr.] to pack up close together; to fit a fowl for the spit.

TRUST, s. [trawd, Run.] confidence; reliance on another; confident opinion of any event; credit; something committed to a person's charge.

To TRUST, v. a. to place confidence in; to believe; to let a person have a commodity without present money; to commit to a person's care.—v. n. to be confident of something future; to rely upon; to expect, followed by to.

TRUSTEE, s. one to whom any thing is made over or bequeathed for the use and benefit of another; a guardian.

TRUSTER, s. one who trusts.

TRUSTINESS, s. faithfulness; fidelity; honesty.

TRUSTY, a. fit to be relied on, or confided in; honest; faithful; stout; strong.

TRUTH, s. [treowtha Sax.] that which agrees with one's inward belief or knowledge, or with the nature of things; a statement which does not mislead, and is not intended to do so; exactness; conformity to rule; reality. SYNON. Truth and fact are popularly used as convertible terms; but much confusion frequently arises from this. Correctly, truth relates to the realities of the mind; fact, to the realities of the actual world: truth refers to what may be demonstrated; fact, to what must be supported by evidence. This distinction is of the greatest moment in Apologetic Theology; many learned treatises, devoted to the establishment of the facts of the gospel alone, being often quoted in support of its truth, to the prejudice of the gospel in controversy; and vice versa.

TRUTINATION, s. [trutina, Lat.] the art of weighing; examination by the scale.

To TRY, v. a. [trier, Fr.] to examine or make an experiment of; to experience; to essay; to examine as a judge; to bring before a court of justice; to bring to a decision, followed by out; to bring to the test; to attempt.—v. n. to endeavour.

TRYPHODORUS, a Greek poet of the 5th or 6th century of the Christian era, called the Grammarian. He was a native of Egypt; and of his works, only one, on the Fall of Troy, is extant.

TSCHIRNHAUSEN, EHRENFRIED WALTHER VON, an eminent mathematician and natural philosopher of Germany, of the 17th century. He studied at Leyden, entered the military service, travelled in different parts of Europe, and finally devoted himself to science. Among the results of his investigations and experiments, were the manufacture of Saxon porcelain, improvements in glass-making, an enormous burning mirror, and the discovery of the nature of that remarkable reflection from the interior of a cylinder, called the caustic curve. He wrote some treatises on his favourite studies; and died in 1708, aged 57 years.

TUAM, Galway, in Connaught, Ireland; is now a small town. It is the see of a bishop, in connexion with Killala and Achourry. It is 93 miles from Dublin. Pop. 6034.

TUB, s. [tubbe, or tubbe, Belg.] a large open vessel made with staves of wood bound together by hoops. In Commerce, it is an indeterminate quantity of measure; thus, a tub of tea contains about 60 lbs., and a tub of camphor from 56 to 80 lbs.

TUBE, s. [Fr. tube, Lat.] in general denotes a pipe, conduit, or canal; a hollow cylinder of lead, iron, wood, glass, or other matter, for the air, or any other fluid, to have a free passage or conveyance through. It is sometimes used for the framework of a telescope.

TUBERCLE, s. [tubercule, Fr. from tuber, Lat.] a small swelling or excrescence on the body; a pimple. In Botany, it is a kind of round, turgid root, in form of a knob or turnip. The plants which produce such roots are hence denominated tuberosae or tuberosus plants.

TUBEROOT, s. in Botany, a name of the meadow saffron.

TUBEROSITY, s. [tuberosité, Fr.] knottiness; a protuberance of some parts of the body.

TUBEROUS, a. [tubereuse, Fr.] full of knots, bunches, or branches.

TUBULAR, a. [tubus, Lat.] long and hollow; resembling a pipe.

TUBULATED, a. in Chemistry, having a hole at the top, applied chiefly to retorts.

TUBULE, s. a small pipe, or fistular body.

TUCK, s. [taucea, Brit.] a long narrow sword; a kind of net with a narrow mesh.

To TUCK, v. n. [brucken, Teut.] used with up, to crush together, or hinder from spreading; to turn and fasten clothes up, to make them shorter; with in, to turn the bed-clothes under the bed for warmth's sake.

TUCKER, s. a border of lace on the bosom of a woman's dress; a fuller of cloth.

TUCKER, ABRAHAM, an English metaphysical writer of some eminence, who studied at Oxford and the Inner Temple. He spent his life in studious retirement on his estate; and the chief incidents were the publication of his writings, and the painful affliction of blindness which befell him about three years before his death. He died in 1774, aged 69 years. The Light of Nature pursued, and Man in Quest of Himself, both published under fictitious names, are his chief works, which are yet read.

TUCKER, DR. JOSIAH, commonly known as Dean Tucker, 876

a politician and divine of the last century. He studied at Oxford, rose through the favour of Bishop Butler to be dean of Gloucester, and died in 1799, aged 88 years. His works are chiefly on political economy, but during the American war he wrote several pamphlets recommending the relinquishment of the British colonies. He also wrote in defence of the Church of England.

TU'DOR, the name of the family of English sovereigns, which began with Henry VII. and ended with Elizabeth.

TVER, a government of Russia, bounded by the governments of Novogorod, Yaroslav, Vladimir, Moscow, Smolensk, and Pskov. It has some mountains, and is watered by the Volga, the Dwina, and other rivers. The country produces abundantly wheat, rye, barley, oats, buck-wheat, hemp, flax, and all kinds of vegetables; and its forests yield timber of all kinds. Its trade and manufactures are valuable, though not very extensive. Its capital, of the same name, stands on the Volga, over which is a bridge of boats. Its buildings are good, and it has some excellent educational institutions. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 56. 51. N. Long. 35. 57. E. Pop. of government, about 1,500,000.

TU'ESDAY, s. [tuesday, Sax.] the third day of the week. It has its name from Tuiscio, an idol of the Saxons, worshipped on this day.

TU'FA, s. in Geology, a porous rock, deposited by calcareous waters on their exposure to the air, and usually containing portions of plants, &c., incrustated with carbonate of lime. The more solid form is called travertin.

TUFF, s. in Geology, a volcanic rock of loose, earthy texture, composed of an agglutination of fragments of scoria, &c. ejected from a volcano.

TUFF, s. [tuffe, Fr.] a bunch of feathers; the crest of a bird; a thicket of trees, or the bushy part of them; a lock of hair.

TU'RTA'FETV, s. a villous kind of silk.

TU'FTED, a. growing in tufts or clusters.

To TUG, v. a. [teigen, or teogan, Sax.] to pull with continued violence or strength; to pluck.—v. n. to pull hard; to labour; to strangle.

TUG, s. the act of pulling with the utmost and continued effort.

TUGGER, s. one that tugs or pulls hard.

TUISCO, in Teutonic Mythology, the god to whom Tuesday was dedicated.

TUITION, [tushon, s. [tuilio, from tuor, Lat.] the care of a guardian or tutor.

TULIA, a government of Russia, bounded by the governments of Kaluga, Orel, Tambov, Riesen, and Moscow. It is very level, with very inconsiderable but numerous rivers. It is a fine corn country, and has a few manufactures. Tula, its capital, stands on the Upha, and is the Sheffield of Russia. It has also a fine trade. Pop. about 60,000. Lat. 54. 10. N. Long. 37. 26. E. Pop. of government, about 1,250,000.

TULIP, s. [tulipe, Fr. tulipa, Lat.] in Floriculture, a beautiful well-known flower of various colours.

TULIP-TREE, s. in Botany, &c., a fine American tree, which often grows to the height of above 100 feet, with a proportionateirth. Its flowers resemble the garden tulip, whence its name. Its wood is used for light and ornamental purposes, and is susceptible of a fine polish.

TULL, JETHRO, an agricultural writer of the last century, who invented the system of horse-hoeing husbandry, and wrote upon it, but without supposing that this important part of good farming was only a part. He died in about 1740, in prison, to which his inventions and his mistakes, and the worse mistakes of the farmers of the time, who did not see the value of his discovery, had brought him. He owes his present reputation in good part to William Cobbett, who republished his writings, and explained and recommended his system.

TULLUS HOSTILIUS, in Roman Legends, the third king, who, on Numa's death, was chosen by the people. His reign was almost wholly warlike, according to the lays. And the most remarkable part of his story, is the combat of the three brothers Horatii with the three Curatii, which decided the subjugation of the state of Alba, and the introduction of the Albans to Rome as a new element in the state, the plebeians. He is fabled to have perished through the rashness with which he endeavoured to use some of the formularies of the pious Numa, being struck dead by lightning, after reigning 32 years.

To TUMBLE, v. n. [tommelen, Belg. tombolare, Ital.] to fall suddenly on the ground; to fall down; to fall in great quantities tumultuously; to play tricks by putting the body into different postures; to roll about.—v. a. to turn over; to throw about by way of examination; to throw down by chance or violence; to throw down.

TUMBLE, a. a fall.

TUMBLER, s. one who puts his body into different postures, and performs feats of activity; a species of pigeon; a drinking vessel.

TUMBRIL, s. [tombereau, Fr.] a cart, which can be tilted up so as to shoot out what it contains by unfixing a pin that keeps the body level with the shafts. Also, a cart used in artillery regiments.

TUMEFAC'ION, s. [Fr. tumeo, Lat.] a swelling.

To TUMEFY, v. a. to swell; to make to swell.

TUMID, a. [tumidus, Lat.] swollen; puffed up; affectedly luffy, applied to style.

TUMOR, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, the general name for the morbid enlargement of any tissue, or organ of the body. There are many varieties, and a surgical operation is the only mode of cure known; but even that is not always safe. Figuratively, affected pomp or greatness.

TUMOROUS, a. swelling, protuberant; vainly pompous; falsely magnificent.

TUMULAT'ION, s. [tumulus, Lat.] the act of entombing, burying, or interring.

TUMULOSE, a. full of hills.

TUMULOSITY, s. hilliness.

TUMULT, s. [tumulte, Fr. tumulus, Lat.] a turbulent and clamorous concourse of people; a riot; a rabble; a confused hurry; uproar; bustle.

TUMULTUOUS, a. [tumultueux, Fr.] gathering in a confused and noisy manner; turbulent; disorderly; riotous; seditious.

TUMULTUOUSLY, ad. by act of the multitude; with confusion and violence.

TUN, s. [tunne, Sax. tonne, Belg. and Fr.] a large vessel or cask of an oblong form, and biggest in the middle. Also, a vessel for liquid measure, containing 252 gallons, or 2 hogsheds.

To TUN, v. a. to put into casks; to barrel.

TUNABLE, a. capable of being put in tune, or made harmonious; musical.

TUNBRIDGE, Kent. It is seated on the river Tun, one of the five little streams of the Medway, over each of which is a stone bridge. Here is a grammar-school of great wealth, and of little utility to the classes for whom it was originally endowed. It is 30 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 12,530.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, Kent. This watering-place has sprung up round a chalybeate spring, first discovered in the beginning of the 17th century. It is a well-built place, furnished with all the appliances of a resort of fashionable company; and the vicinity has some fine and romantic scenery. Small wooden toys, and boxes inlaid with mosaic-work of different coloured woods, are sold here, and called Tunbridge ware. It is 36 miles from London. Pop. 8302.

TUNDISH, s. a tinner.

TUNE, s. [toon, Belg. ton, Swed. tuono, Ital. tonus, Lat.] in Music, a melody; harmony of sound; concordance. Sound; harmony; concert of parts. To be in tune, is to be in a state proper for use, exercise, or any particular purpose.

To TUNE, v. a. to put in a state where concord may be sounded; to sing harmoniously.—v. n. to form one sound to another; to utter with the voice inarticulate harmony.

TUNEFUL, a. musical; harmonious.

TUNELESS, a. unharmonious; unmusical.

TUNER, s. one who tunes.

TUNGSTATES, s. in Chemistry, salts formed by the combination of any base with tungstic acid.

TUNGSTEN, s. in Chemistry, a metal of grayish colour, very hard, but easily broken, and of great specific gravity.

TUNGSTIC, a. in Chemistry, belonging to tungsten.

TUNHOOF, s. in Botany, a plant, called also ground ivy.

TUNIC, s. [tunique, Fr. tunica, Lat.] a kind of waistcoat, or under garment; a vest; a sort of sleeveless coat.

TUNICLE, s. [tunicula, Lat.] a thin membranous coat or skin covering any part of the body; a little coat; integument.

TUNIS, a state of N. Africa, lying on the Mediterranean Sea, bounded by Algiers, and by the inland deserts. It is about 300 miles long, and about 100 broad. It has some mountainous districts in the N. parts; but the rest is generally level. The most northerly parts of the coast are rocky, with bold capes and deeply indented bays. It has no rivers of any size or importance. Its productions do not differ from those of N. Africa generally; and grain, fruits, &c. &c. are cultivated abundantly. Its commerce is tolerably extensive; being carried on, by means of caravans, with all the interior of the country; and by its harbours, with Turkey, Italy, &c. &c. The country is held by a pacha, who is nominally dependent on the Ottoman Porte. Tunis, the capital, stands on a fine sheet of water, which communicates with the Gulf of Tunis. It is fortified, and is an irregularly and meanly built place. But it has some fine palaces and mosques. Its trade and manufactures are considerable; and would be more so, were the government more enlightened, and the access to the town for vessels of great draught more easy. Pop. about 150,000. Lat. 36. 45. N. Long. 10. 10. E. Pop. of state, about 3,000,000. This state occupies the territory of ancient Carthage, and abounds with relics of its former condition of wealth and prosperity under Carthage and Rome.

TUNNEL, s. the passage for smoke in a chimney; a pipe with a conical or globular mouth, by which liquor is poured into a cask or bottle; a net resembling a funnel to catch birds. In Engineering, an under-ground passage for a road or canal. One of the most remarkable tunnels is that under the bed of the river Thames, from Wapping to Rotherhithe, 1200 feet in length, for foot passengers, &c.

TUNNY, s. [tonnen, Ital. thynnus, Lat.] in Natural History, a large kind of sea-fish found in the Mediterranean Sea.

To TUP, v. n. in Farming, a ram.

To TUP, v. n. to butt like a ram.

TURBAN, s. [Turk.] the cover of linen, &c. worn on the head by the Turks. Also a species of cap worn by ladies.

TURBANED, a. wearing a turban.

TURBARY, s. in Law, ground where turf is digged. Common of turbary, is a right of digging turf on the lord's waste.

TURBID, a. [turbidus, from turbo, Lat.] thick or muddy.

TURBIDNESS, s. muddiness; thickness.

TURBINATED, a. [turbinatus, from turbo, Lat.] twisted, spiral. In Botany, of a conical figure.

TURBOT, s. [Fr.] in Ichthyology, a large, flat sea-fish, which is much esteemed by epicures.

TURBULENCE, s. [turbulency, s. [Fr. turbulentia, from turbo, Lat.] a tumult, or confusion; the fault of not being easily governed.

TURBULENT, a. [Fr. turbulentus, Lat.] boisterous; tumultuous; not to be governed.

TURBULENTLY, ad. tumultuously; violently.

TURRENE, HENRI DE LA TOUR D'AUVERGNE, VICOMTE DE, the great French commander of the 17th century. He studied the art of war under Maurice of Nassau; and his earliest exploits obtained him a marshalship, and an appointment in the wars in Germany. In that command, both in good fortune and under disaster, his great skill was apparent; and the favour of Richelieu was secured to him. He subsequently held a high command in Italy; and was thence ordered to Germany again, where he continued till the end of the 30 years' war. He next appeared in the civil struggles of the Fronde; and then more favourably and honourably in the wars in the Low Countries, where he contributed greatly to bring about the peace of the Pyrenees. He had been brought up a Calvinist; he now became a Catholic; religion being, in those days, a matter of policy rather than of conviction, amongst the classes to which Turenne belonged. The last campaign of this great general was the most brilliant, but it was stained with needless horrors. He was, after a career of victory, opposed by Montecuculi; and at Salsbach, in Baden, fell by a cannon-ball, in 1675, aged 64 years.

TURF, s. [tyrf, Sax. torf, Belg. and Swed.] the green surface of the ground, a blackish earth, used as fuel. Also, figuratively, all that belongs to race-courses.

TURFINNESS, s. the state of abounding in turf.

TURIFY, a. full of turf.

TURGES'ENCE, s. [turge'sency, s. the act of swelling, or the state of being swollen.

TURGID, s. [turgeo, Lat.] swelling; bloated; vainly pompous.

TURGOT, ANNE ROBERT JACQUES, one of the most eminent French ministers in the period immediately preceding the Revolution. He was the son of a public functionary, and at first studied for the ecclesiastical profession, but receiving the philosophy of the day in the place of his former creed, he renounced the church for the law, and became a councillor of parliament. A work on Toleration, and his ardent adoption of Quesnay's economical doctrines, led him at length to obtain the appointment of comptroller-general of finances. His conduct was such that Louis used to say in after years, "There was none but Turgot and I who loved the people." But Turgot greatly accelerated the catastrophe, by the introduction at once of the most sweeping reforms and changes, and by endeavouring to realize the political state that his philosophy dreamed of. Perhaps had he been permitted to carry out his plans he would have done better service to the state, but all who were interested in old abuses leagued against him, and he was driven from office, after having held it only about 2 years. After some time of literary leisure and study, he died in 1781, aged 54 years.

TURIN, an ancient and flourishing city, the capital of Piedmont, where the king of Sardinia resides. It is a very handsome place, and is very regularly built, both as regards the general plan, and the houses of each street. Turin is well fortified, and is charmingly seated at the foot of a mountain. It abounds in fine churches and public edifices, noble charitable institutions, &c. &c. It has also a very celebrated university, and an academy of sciences that ranks very high. Its manufactures are thriving, and its trade is considerable. Pop. about 175,000. Lat. 45. 4. N. Long. 7. 40. E.

TURKEY, s. in Natural History, a well-known fowl.

TURKEY BUZZARD, s. in Ornithology, a kind of vulture, which is indigenous to America, and is remarkable for the keenness of its senses of vision and smell.

TURKEY, the general name of the Ottoman empire, which includes Turkey in Europe, the S. W. part of Asia, and the N. part of Africa. The description of these different countries will be found under their proper names.

TURKEY IN EUROPE, that part of the Turkish empire which is included in the European boundaries. It stretches from the Adriatic Sea to the Ægean and the Black Seas, and is bounded by the Austrian empire and Russia, and by Greece. It is traversed by several great mountain chains, which are a prolongation of the Alps, and by some others not so immediately connected with that system. The Balkan range has heights of 10,000 feet, and the other mountains range from 1000 to 9000 feet in elevation above the sea. The Danube is its great river; other smaller streams fall into the Ægean Sea. It is not deficient in metallic and mineral wealth, and the country is sufficiently fertile, but the despotism of the government has hitherto prevented the development of its anciently celebrated powers. Moldavia, Wallachia, and Servia are subject states in Europe. Constantinople is its capital. Pop. about 12,000,000. The manufactures of Turkey are chiefly carpets and leather, and it has a considerably extensive and profitable commerce.

TURKISTAN, a country of Asia, included in the general denomination, Tatary. It lies E. of the Caspian Sea, between Asiatic Russia, and Persia, Afghanistan, Tibet, &c. Its extent is not clearly ascertained, but it seems to reach to the frontiers of the Chinese empire. It consists of high table-lands, intersected by mountain chains, with occasional tracts of complete desert; watered by the rivers which flow into the Caspian, and the beginnings of the great streams that make their way to the Indian and Pacific Oceans, and interspersed with lakes. The country is but little cultivated, but the rich pastures supply the means of life to the numerous nomadic tribes which live there. In some parts an active transit trade is carried on. Our information respecting this vast region is exceedingly scanty and incorrect. See BOOKHARA, TATARY, &c.

TURMERIC, s. in Commerce, an Indian root which makes a yellow dye.

TURMOIL, s. trouble; harassing uneasiness; affliction; tumult.

TURMOIL, v. a. to harass with tumult or commotion; to keep inquiet.

To TURN, v. a. [Turnan, Sax. turna, Lat.] to put into a circular motion, or move round; to change sides, or put that uppermost which was undermost; to change place, posture, fortune, or party; to bring the inside outwards; to form, or transform; to translate; to change with respect to affection, inclination, or regard. To turn the stomach, to cause nausea. To make giddy, followed by head; to direct to or from any point or purpose. To apply, or have recourse to, followed by to. To turn one's back, is to fly; to disregard. Followed by upon, to reverse or alter. Used with about, to revolve or consider; with away, to dismiss or discard; to avert; with back, to return to the person who gave, sent, or sold; to double the contrary way; with off, to dismiss; to resign; to deflect. To be turned off, to advance to an age beyond; to exceed. Used with over, to transfer; to throw off; to examine one leaf of a book after another; to refer.—v. n. to move round; to change the posture quickly, so as to face, used with upon; to be changed or altered; to grow sour, applied to liquors; to grow giddy. Used with away, to deviate from a proper course; to recoil; with off, to divert one's course.

TURN, s. the act of turning; the act of coming back to the same place; a winding path; a walk to and fro; change or alteration; occasion; an act of kindness or malice; time at which any thing is to be done, or wherein persons punctually succeed each other; convenience; form, cast, shape, or manner; bent; inclination; the manner in which the words of a sentence are expressed. By turns, signifies alternately, or one after another.

TURNOAT, (turnkot) s. one who forsakes his party or principles for those which are opposite; a renegade.

TURNEBUSH, ADRIAN, a great scholar of France, who was educated at Paris, and afterwards held the posts of professor of Greek, professor royal, in succession. He was acquainted with all the great scholars of his day, and contributed greatly to the spread of that profound and exact learning which characterized the period. His works and editions are yet of value. He died in 1565, aged 54 years.

TURNER, s. [turnear, Fr.] one who makes vessels, &c. in wood or metal with a lathe; one who sells turnery wares.

TURNER, WILLIAM, an English naturalist of the 16th century. He studied at Cambridge, and could not wholly escape the miseries of his time, being once a prisoner, and twice an exile. He was a clergyman, and became dean of Wells. He died in 1568, aged 48 years. He wrote works on polemical theology, and on natural history; and amongst them, his Herbal, or History of Plants, was of the greatest importance to science.

TURNER, SAMUEL, a traveller and diplomatist, who being in the E. India Company's service, was sent by Warren Hastings on an embassy to Tibet, and afterwards distinguished himself in the campaign against Tipoo Saib, and in other services. He died in 1802, aged 43 years. He published An Account of the Embassy to Tibet, and communicated several papers to the Asiatic Society.

TURNER, DR. EDWARD, an English chemist of high standing. He studied at Edinburgh and Göttingen, and was appointed professor of chemistry at University College, London. He died in 1837, aged 40 years. His Elements of Chemistry is a valuable work.

TURNING, s. a winding; a deviation to the right or left from a main road or street; flexure; meander; the art of working in wood, metal, &c. with a lathe.

TURNIP, s. in Botany and Agriculture, a well-known plant, with a white bulbous root, much used as a vegetable, but still more in feeding cattle. Sweet turnip is another kind of the same plant, the root of which is firmer, and of a yellow colour, and is still more extensively grown as a root-crop. The introduction of this root into regular cultivation effected a complete revolution in agriculture, since all the husbandry operations requisite for a good turnip crop are of direct benefit to the corn crop which follows, and the land is refreshed by this crop more than it used to be by lying fallow.

TURNIP-FLY, s. in Entomology, a small beetle which preys on the seed-leaves of the turnip, and often destroys great part of the plant. The only effectual remedies are manures which stimulate the plants to grow more rapidly than this destroyer can injure them, since all the danger is past when the regular leaves appear.

TURNKYE, s. the door-keeper of a gaol.

TURNPKE, s. a gate set up across a road where toll is taken of travellers, waggons, coaches, &c. for mending the roads.

TURNSOL, s. in Botany, the sunflower.

TURNSTILE, s. a gate in a foot-path.

TURPENTINE, s. [turpentina, Ital.] in Commerce, a transparent resin, flowing either naturally, or by incision, from several unctuous trees, as the larch, pine, &c. It is highly inflammable, and is largely used in various processes of the arts. Its medicinal properties, also, are valuable; but it is not largely used.

TURPITUDE, s. [Fr. turpitude, from turpis, Lat.] essential deformity of thoughts, words, or actions; inherent vileness; baseness; filthiness.

TURQUOISE, s. [Fr.] in Mineralogy, a blue kind of stone, found in small masses, like irregular clusters of grapes, much used in jewellery, as a contrast to pearls and other substances.

TURREL, s. a tool used by roopers.

TURRET, s. [turris, Lat.] a small eminence raised above the body of a building; a little tower.

TURRETED, a. formed like a tower; rising like a tower.

TURTLE, s. [Sax.] in Natural History, a kind of tortoise, found in warm climates. It is a marine animal, and is caught when it visits the sandy shores or banks. It is a great article of epicurean diet.

TURTLE-DOVE, TURTL, s. [turtur, Lat.] in Ornithology, a kind of pigeon, of a reddish gray colour, which visits this country in the summer months. It has always been spoken of by poets as an emblem of all conjugal virtues.

TUSCAN ORDER, s. in Architecture, so called because invented in Tuscany. It is the simplest and most massive of the five orders.

TUSCANY, a grand-duchy of Italy, lying on the Mediterranean Sea, and bounded by the Papal States, Modena, Parma, and the kingdom of Sardinia. It is about 150 miles long, and about 80 broad. It extends inland beyond the summit of the Apennines, but it does not include any of the highest points of that chain. It is traversed by off-shoots from it in every direction. The Arno is its principal river. The island of Elba belongs to this duchy. Lead, marble, &c. &c. are found here. Corn, wine, oil, fruits, cattle, silk, &c. &c. are produced in various degrees of abundance. Its manufactures are remarkably numerous and valuable; and it has thus a considerable trade. Florence is its capital. Pop. about 1,500,000.

TUSH! interj. a word used to express contempt.

TUSK, s. [tusken, old Frisick,] the fangs or long teeth of a boar, &c.

TUSKED, TUSKY, a. furnished with tusks.

TUSSER, THOMAS, GENT., the writer of the English Georgics, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry, was a chorister at St. Paul's, and then studied at Eton and Cambridge. He afterwards was in the retinue of Lord Paget, at court, and finally became a farmer in Suffolk, where he became practically acquainted with the subjects which he amused himself with illustrating in homely verse. He died after 1580, aged about 65 years.

TUSSUCK, s. [diminutive of tus,] a tuft of grass or twigs.

TUUSTLE, v. a. to bustle or strive; to tumble or ruffle.
TUT! interj. a word used to command silence and express contempt.

TUTELAGE, s. [tutela, from tutor, Lat.] protection; guardianship the time during which an infant is under guardians.

TUTELAR, TUTELARY, a. [tutelaris, Lat.] having the guardianship, or particular defence and protection, of any person or thing.

TUTOR, s. [tutor, Lat.] one who has the care of another's learning.

To TUTOR, v. a. to instruct; to teach.

TUTORAGE, s. the authority or government of a tutor.

TUTORESS, s. a female instructor; a governess.

TUTSAN, s. in Botany, the genus of plants called also St. John's wort.

TUZ, s. a lock or tuft of hair.

TWAIN, a. [tugen, Sax.] two.

To TWANG, v. n. to sound with a quick sharp noise.—v. a. to make to sound sharply.

TWANG, s. a disagreeable sound; an affected modulation of the voice.

TWAS, contracted from It was.

To TWATTLE, v. a. [schootzen, Teut.] to prate.

TWAYBLADE, s. in Botany, a kind of orchis with two large broad leaves.

To TWEAG, TWEAK, (twecg, twcek) v. a. [twacken, Teut.] to pinch or squeeze between the fingers.

TWEAGUE, TWEAK, (twecg, twcek) s. perplexity; ludicrous distress.

TWEED, a British river, which is the boundary between England and Scotland on the E. side. It rises in Peeblesshire, and flows through that county, and the counties of Selkirk and Roxburgh, between those of Berwick and Northumberland, into the North Sea, after a course of about 70 miles.

To TWEEDLE, v. a. to handle lightly.

TWEELZERS, s. [châti, Fr.] small nippers or pincers.

TWELETH, a. [twelfth, Sax.] the second after the tenth; the ordinal of twelve.

TWELETH-DAY, s. in the Church Calendar, the festival of Epiphany, or manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles, so called as being the twelfth day, exclusive, from Christmas-day.

TWELVE, a. [twelf, Sax.] two and ten.

TWELVEMONTH, s. the space of a year, according to the calendar months.

TWENTIETH, a. [twentegotha, Sax.] next to the nineteenth; the ordinal of twenty.

TWENTY, a. [twentig, Sax.] twice ten.

TWIBILL, s. [twey for two, and bill,] an iron tool used by pavers.

TWICE, ad. [twes, Belg.] two times; doubly.

TWIG, s. [twigga, Sax. twigg, Belg.] a small shoot of a branch.

TWILIGHT, (twelit) s. [twelicht, Belg.] in Astronomy and Optics, that imperfect light which proceeds from the sun, before sunrise and after sunset, in consequence of the refraction of his rays through the different strata of the atmosphere. It lasts all the night through in the summer-time in our latitude. An obscure light; an uncertain view.—a. seen or done by twilight; not clearly or brightly illuminated.

TWIN, s. [twinn, Sax.] a child born at the same time and birth with another.

To TWINE, v. a. [twinnan, Sax. twynen, Belg.] to wind thread round any substance; to encircle; to twist so as to unite or form into one body.—v. n. to wind, or form windings; to convolve; to unite by interposition of parts.

TWINE, a. a twisted thread; a twist; an embrace formed by twisting round any part; cord; string.

To TWINGE, v. a. [twingen, Teut.] to torment with a sudden and short pain; to pinch; to tweak.

TWINGE, s. a short, sudden, sharp pain; a pinch; a tweak.

TWINGEWORT, s. in Botany, a name of the cardine thistle.

To TWINKLE, v. n. [twincian, Sax.] to sparkle, or shine with intermitted light; to open and shut the eye alternately.

TWINKLE, TWINKLING, s. a sparkling intermitted light; a motion of the eye.

To TWIRL, v. a. [from whirl,] to turn or force round.—v. n. to revolve with a quick motion.

TWIRL, s. circular motion; rotation; twist; convolution.

To TWIST, v. a. [twisten, Belg.] to form by turning round; to form by complication; to wreath or encircle by something; to contort; to writh; to weave or form by turning round, so that the parts shall unite together; to insinuate; to unite.—v. n. to be contorted; to be convolved.

TWIST, s. the act of turning round several things so as to unite them; any thing made by winding two things together; a cord; a writh; contortion; a kind of fine cord or braid.

TWISTER, s. one who twists; a ropemaker; the instrument of twisting.

To TWIT, v. a. [schelten, Sax.] to reproach or mention to a person by way of sneer; to flout; to hit in the teeth.

To TWITCH, v. a. [twician, Sax.] to pull or pluck with a quick motion; to snatch.

TWITCH, s. a quick or sudden pull; a painful contraction of the fibres.

To TWITTER, v. n. to make a sharp, intermitting, and tremulous noise; to be affected with a strong or sudden inclination, followed by toward.

TWITTER, s. any motion or disorder of passion, as violent laughing, or fretting.

TWIXT, a contraction of BETWIXT.

TWO, (too) a. [zwei, Sax.] a number composed of one added to one.

TWOFOLD, (tofold) a. double the number, or twice the quantity.—ad. doubly.

TWOHANDED, (tohanded) a. large; bulky; enormous for magnitude.

TYCHO-NIC SYSTEM, in Astronomy, that view of the relations of the different bodies of our Solar System, which was propounded by Tycho Brahe; in which the earth was represented as immovable in the centre, round which revolved the moon and the sun, whilst round the sun revolved the other planets.

TYCHSEN, OLAUS GERHARD, an eminent oriental scholar of Germany, in the last century. He was born in humble circumstances, but received a good education, and studied at Göttingen. His first engagement was in an evangelical mission to the Jews of Germany; afterwards he held a professorship at Bützow, and was librarian at Rostock. He died in 1815, aged 81 years. His writings are of considerable value to scholars.

To TYE, r. a. See TYE.

TYE, DR. CHRISTOPHER, a celebrated musical composer of the 16th century. He was teacher of music to Edward VI., and organist at the Chapel Royal under Elizabeth. His music is yet admired.

TYKE, s. in Natural History, a kind of hunting dog.

TYMBAL, s. [Fr.] a kind of kettle-drum.

TYMBORE/LLA, s. a ducking-stool.

TYMPAN, s. [tympanum, Lat.] a tymbal or drum; that part of a printing-press to which the paper is fixed that is to receive the impression.

TYMPANUM, s. [Lat.] a drum. In Anatomy, the drum of the ear, a thin membrane stretched across a circular orifice, braced by 3 muscles; by the vibrations of which the sensation of hearing is effected. In Mechanics, a sort of wheel placed on an axis, on the top of which are levers, for the more easy turning the axis about to will the weight.

TYNDALE, WILLIAM, one of the most eminent of our English Reformers. He studied at Oxford first, and having there imbibed the opinions of Luther, removed to Cambridge to avoid persecution. He became a tutor in Sir John Welch's family; but having been summoned before the chancellor of Bristol, to give account of himself, he went to London, and thence to the continent. There he translated the New Testament into English, and printed it; and when that was bought up by Tunstall, printed a better edition. He afterwards joined Coverdale in translating the Old Testament; and finally, by means of the English king, was tried as a heretic, and burnt at Augsburg, in 1536, aged 59 years.

TYNEMOUTH, Northumberland. It stands, as its name implies, at the mouth of the river Tyne; and has a castle, now used as a lighthouse. It is fortified sufficiently to defend the entrance to the port; and is a place of some resort in the bathing season. It is 285 miles from London. Pop. 11,890.

TYPE, s. [Fr. typus, Lat.] a copy, model, image, or resemblance. In Theology, a symbol, sign, or figure of something to come. In Printing, the metallic letter; also the printed letter, in respect of its elegance, legibility, &c.

TYPE-FOUNDING, s. the art of casting the metallic types used for printing.

TYPHON, (tyfon) s. [Gr.] a hurricane; a violent whirlwind; a fiery meteor.

TYPIC, TYPCAL, a. [typique, Fr. typicus, Lat. typos, Gr.] represented by some symbol or hieroglyphic.

TYPICALLY, ad. in a typical manner.

To TYPIFY, v. a. to express by some symbol, action, or hieroglyphic.

TYPOGRAPHER, (typografer) s. [typos and grapho, Gr.] a printer.

TYPOGRAPHICAL, (typografical) a. belonging to typography, or the art of printing; emblematical; figurative.

TYPOGRAPHY, (typography) s. the art of printing.

TYRANNIC, TYRANNICAL, a. [tyrannicus, Fr. tyrannicus, Lat. tyrannos, Gr.] cruel; oppressive; imperious; acting like a tyrant; despotic.

TYRANNICALLY, ad. in the manner of a tyrant.

TYRANNICIDE, s. [tyrannus and cedo, Lat.] the act of killing a tyrant.

To TYRANNISE, v. a. [tyranniser, Fr.] to govern or act in an imperious and rigorous manner, like a tyrant.

TYRANNOUS, a. tyrannical; despotic; arbitrarily severe.

TYRANNY, s. the acting without regard to the laws, rights, or properties of the people; outrageous cruelty and oppression; rigorous command; severity; inclemency.

TYRANT, s. [tyran, Fr. tyrannus, Lat. tyrannos, Gr.] among the ancients, denoted simply a king or monarch, or an unconstitutional ruler; but now, an unjust and cruel prince.

TYRE, a famous city of Phœnicia, which gradually became the emporium of the world's commerce. It stood partly on an island, and partly on the mainland; and after various sieges by the kings of Assyria, was taken by Alexander the Great. It never recovered from this misfortune, but after sharing in the calamities which the wars of the successors of Alexander inflicted on those parts, and which the spread of Roman power inflicted on the world, it became a mere shadow of its former self. During the middle ages it was again the scene of many battles and sieges; and is now a mere desolation; an insignificant village near it has usurped its name. The denunciations of Tyre by Isaiah and Ezekiel are familiar to all readers.

TYRO, s. [tyro, Lat.] a novice; one in his rudiments; a young scholar.

TYROL, a part of Austria, lying next to Switzerland and Bavaria, and bounded by Austrian Lombardy and Venice, Illyria, and Austria Proper. It is about 150 miles in each direction. It is exceedingly mountainous, being traversed by the highest ridges of the Alps, and some of its peaks are more than 12,000 feet high. Its chief river is the Inn. It is rich in mineral wealth, having mines of gold, silver, copper, lead, and iron; coal, salt, and marble are also obtained abundantly. In the valleys and parts capable of cultivation, grain of various kinds, wine, fruits, silk, &c. &c. are produced. Its manufactures are almost all of the domestic kind. The people are exceedingly simple-hearted and loyal to the Austrian emperor, and are far removed from any beneficial influence of the progress of commerce and knowledge. Innsbruck is the capital. Pop. about 850,000.

TYRONE, a county of Ulster, in Ireland; bounded by Londonderry, Armagh, Monaghan, Fermanagh, and Donegal. It is 43 miles long, and 33 broad; and contains 35 parishes. It is very hilly, or rather mountainous, and has heights exceeding 2000 feet. The Blackwater and the Foyle are its chief streams. Lough Neagh lies on its E. border. In agriculture it is not distinguished, but its linen manufactory is of great value. Clough and Omagh are its chief places. Pop. 312,956. It sends three members to the imperial parliament.

TYRRELL, JAMES, an historian and political writer of the end of the 17th and the beginning of the 18th centuries. He studied at Oxford, and afterwards in the Inner Temple. But he never practised as a barrister; and he died in 1718, aged 76 years. His chief work is a History of England, of little value, now that the original sources of it are put within the reach of all readers; he wrote also various controversial tracts, which are forgotten now.

TYRTÆUS, an ancient poet of Greece, whose battle-songs, the Marseillaise of the Spartans, contributed not a little to their triumphs in the Messenian war. He was a native of Miletus, and was sent by the Athenians to Sparta, when the Delphic oracle bade the latter seek a leader against the Messenians from Athens. The jealousy of this city made them select what they thought a lame and stupid schoolmaster; he proved all that the oracle had foretold. His mission to Sparta was in about 670 B. C.

TYRWIT, THOMAS, an eminent scholar of the last century. He was educated at Oxford, and began to study for the bar. Afterwards he became clerk to the House of Commons, but in a few years resigned the office, and passed the remainder of his life in literary retirement. He died in 1768, aged 38 years. His critical essays and editions of classical authors are numerous; his edition of Chaucer is the standard one.

TYSON, EDWARD, an eminent physician, who studied at Oxford and Cambridge, and settled in London, where he held several conspicuous situations in his profession. His skill in comparative anatomy led him to many curious researches, the results of which he published. He died in 1708, aged 59 years.

TYSENS, PETER, a celebrated painter of the Flemish school. He became head of the academy of his native city, Antwerp, and was held to be little inferior to Rubens in his style of composition. He died in 1692, aged 65 years.

TYTLER, ALEXANDER FRASER, (LORD WOODHOUSELEE) a distinguished historical writer. He studied at Edinburgh, and became an advocate. He was made professor of history at Edinburgh, and in his own profession was successively deputy judge-advocate for Scotland, a judge in the Court of Session, and a lord of the Justiciary. He died in 1813, aged 66 years. He wrote several works on law, the Life of Petrarck, Memoirs of Lord Kames, and Elements of General History, which was, till lately, the best work of that comprehensive kind.

TZETZES, JOHN, a Greek poet and learned grammarian of the 12th century of our era. His writings are very numerous, but all are not printed. His Homeric Tales, Histories, Explanation of Homer, &c. &c., are known by scholars, but his critical writings are more useful.

U AND V

U IS the twentieth letter of the English alphabet. It is a vowel, and its sound is short in burst, curst, run, sun, cub. In some words it is rather acute than long, as in brute, flute, acute, &c. It is generally long in polysyllables, as in union, usage, secure, curious, &c.; but in some words it is obscure, as in nature, venture.

V, the twenty-first letter, is a consonant. It has a sound uniform, which is that of a guttural f, as may be seen by comparing the sounds of fine and vine. Though the letters u and v had always two sounds, they had only the form of v till the beginning of the fourth century, when the other form was introduced, it being inconvenient to express two sounds by the same letter. In numerals, V stands for five, and with a dash thus, v̄, for 5000.

VACANCY, s. an empty space; vacancy; a chasm; time of listlessness, or emptiness of thought; leisure or relaxation; state of a post or employment when it is unsupplied.

VACANT, a. [Fr. vacans, Lat.] empty; having nothing in it; free from crowds, obstacles, or encumbrance; having no possessor or incumbent; being at leisure, or disengaged; void of thought.

TO VACATE, v. n. [vacare, Lat.] to make void or vacant; to defeat; to annul.

VACATED, a. made void or vacant; defeated; annulled.

VACATION, s. [Fr.] in Common Law, the time which passes between term and term. Among civilians, the time from the death of the last incumbent till the benefice is supplied by another. Leisure or freedom from business, studies, legislation, &c.

VACCARY, (vaskary) s. [vacca, Lat.] a cow-house; a cow-pasture.

TO VACCINATE, v. a. to inoculate with the vaccine lymph, for the purpose of preventing the small-pox.

VACCINATION, s. [vacca, Lat.] in Medicine, the inoculation of the human subject with the lymph obtained from the pustules of a disease to which cows are subject, or from those of a person who has been inoculated with this lymph, as a preservative from the small-pox. See JENNER.

VACCINE, a. [vacca, Lat.] in Medicine, related to vaccination, caused by vaccination.

TO VACILLATE, v. n. [vacilla, Lat.] to reel; to shake; to totter; to stagger.

VACILLATION, s. [Fr. vacillation, Lat.] the act of staggering or shaking; irresolution; inconstancy; fluctuation.

VACUITY, s. [vacuitas, Fr. vacuitas, from vacuus, Lat.] the state of being unoccupied by body; space void of body; want of substance; inanity.

VACUOUS, a. [vacuus, Lat.] empty; void.

VACUUM, s. [Lat.] space not occupied by matter.

VAGABOND, a. [Fr.] wandering about, or having no settled habitation; vagrant.

VAGABOND, a. a person that wanders about, and has no settled habitation.

VAGARY, s. [vacuus, from vagor, Lat.] a wild freak or frolic; caprice.

VAGINOPENNOUS, a. [vagina and penna, Lat.] sheath-winged; having the wings covered with hard cases.

VAGRANCY, s. a state of wandering; unsettled course of life.

VAGRANT, a. [Fr.] wandering; vagabond; having no place of residence.

VAGRANT, s. one that has no settled place of abode; a stroller; a sturdy beggar; a vagabond.

VAGUE, (vag) a. [Fr. vagus, from vagor, Lat.] wandering; vagrant or vagabond; having no settled place; unfixed; unsettled; indefinite.

VAHL, MARTIN, a celebrated Norwegian botanist. He studied under Linnaeus, and was appointed botanical professor at Copenhagen. He travelled, at various times, in Norway, S. Europe, the Mediterranean coasts of Africa, &c., and published several works on plants. He died in 1804, aged 55 years.

VAIL, s. See VEIL. Vails are profits that accrue to officers and servants, exclusive of a salary and wages.

TO VAIL, v. a. [vailor, Fr.] to cover; to lower, let fall, or pull off, by way of compliment.—v. n. to show respect by yielding or submitting; to fall; to let sink for fear, &c. See TO VEIL.

VAILLANT, JEAN FOI, a celebrated French naturalist. He was a medical practitioner, but having become skilled in the value of ancient coins and medals, was employed by Colbert to travel for the purpose of enriching the royal cabinet. He made several voyages on this errand, and in one was captured by a corsair; and, after spending several months in slavery at Algiers, on his way home, being apprehensive of a second capture, and loss of his coins, he swallowed them, (happily,) without suffering any serious injury from his excessive devotion to his master. He visited Egypt and Persia in his researches, and thus made the collection of Louis XIV. one of the most complete in Europe. He published several works on his favourite study, but they are superseded now by more enlarged and accurate knowledge of the subject. He died in 1706, aged 74 years.

VAILLANT, SEBASTIEN, an eminent botanist. He rose by his own efforts entirely, having been born in comparatively humble circumstances. He was first a musical performer, but by his study and attention became a surgeon; and having been, after some years, made secretary to the king's physician, became connected with the Jardin du Roi, and lectured on his favourite science. He died in 1722, aged 53 years. His great work was published after his death, and is valuable for the correct descriptions and plates; but the study of botany has of late so greatly advanced, that his other treatises are only curious as matters of history.

VAILLANT, FRANÇOIS LE, a distinguished traveller. He was born in Dutch Guiana, and was early devoted to the study of natural history. When he went with his family to Europe, the great collections at Paris made him desire to travel, and he went to the Cape of Good Hope. Here he made many excursions into the interior; and on returning to Paris, wrote an account of his adventures, observations, and collections. He was one of the numbers who owed their lives to the fall of Robespierre, and he died in 1824, aged 71 years. His works on natural history are very amusing, as well as instructive, but are not scientific works.

VAIN, a. [Fr. vain, Lat.] without effect; having no substance or reality; proud of little things; ostentatious; idle or worthless; false. In vain, to no purpose or end; without effect.

VAINGLORY, s. [vana gloria, Lat.] pride above merit; empty pride.

VAINLY, ad. uselessly; to no purpose; proudly; arrogantly.

VAINNESS, s. emptiness; pride; falsehood.

VALAIS, a canton of Switzerland, lying next Piedmont and Lombardy, and bounded by Berne and Uri. It is about 100 miles long, and about 40 broad. It lies between two of the great ridges of the Alps, and has heights exceeding 3500 feet. The Rhone is the chief stream, and it flows along its entire length, to the lake of Geneva, which forms part of the W. boundary of the canton. It has some mines; iron, lead, copper, &c. being tolerably abundant. Grain of various kinds, fruits, wine, timber, &c. are produced plentifully; and many cattle, sheep, &c. are reared. Sion is the chief city. It is divided into Upper and Lower Valais. Pop. about 70,000.

VALANCE, s. [from VALENCIA, a town of Spain:] the fringes of drapery hanging round the tester and head of a bed.

VALCKENAER, the name of two eminent scholars of the Netherlands. Louis Caspar, the elder, was professor of Greek at Leyden, and published many erudite works. He died in 1785, aged 70 years. John, his son, studied at Leyden, and became professor of jurisprudence at Franeker, and subsequently at Utrecht. He took part in the revolutionary movement by which the Batavian republic was founded, and was repaid by a professorship at Leyden, and by an embassy to Spain. He was afterwards employed by Louis, king of Holland, as ambassador to Paris, and soon afterwards he retired to private life. He died in 1821, aged 62 years.

VALE, s. [val, Fr. vallis, Lat.] a low ground lying between two hills; a valley; a dale.

VALEDICTION, s. [vale and dico, Lat.] the speech made at parting; the bidding farewell.

VALENCE, an ancient, considerable, and populous city in the department of Drome, France; seated on the left bank of the Rhone. The greatest part of the public places, and many private houses, are adorned with fountains; and its public buildings are numerous and handsome. It has some manufactures, and a good trade with the surrounding country. Valence is 335 miles from Paris. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 44. 56. N. Long. 4. 52. E.

VALENCIA, a province of Spain, formerly a kingdom; lying on the Mediterranean, and bounded by Catalonia, Arragon, New Castile, and Murcia. It is about 250 miles in length, and 50 in breadth. It is watered by a great number of streams, which render it fertile in all the necessities of life, especially fruits and wine. There are very rugged mountains, in which are mines of gold, silver, and alum. It has a few manufactures; but its trade is considerable. Its capital, of the same name, is a large place, and is very handsome and pleasant, and adorned with very fine structures. The cathedral is a noble and splendidly ornamented building. The university is ancient and famous. It has several good manufactories of cloth and silk, but its trade is not very good. There are several remains of antiquity, and it is pleasantly seated on the river Guadalquivir, over which are five bridges. It is 2 miles from the sea, and 150 from Madrid. Pop. about 70,000. Lat. 39. 23. N. Long. 0. 10. E.

VALENCIENNES, a city of the department of Nord, France. It is situated on the river Scheldt, which divides it into two parts; and has some valuable manufactures, and a very brisk trade. There are here, also, some good educational establishments. It is 120 miles from Paris. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 50. 21. N. Long. 3. 32. E.

VALENS, FLAVIUS, joint emperor with Valentinian I. His capital was Constantinople, and he succeeded Jovian. Procopius raised an insurrection against him because of his Arianism; and he made war against Persia, but ended by a truce. The great event of his reign was the entrance of the Huns into Europe; and this led to the invasion of the empire by the Visigoths, in opposing whom Valens was defeated and slain, in 378 A. D., aged 52, having reigned 14 years.

VALENTINE, s. a sweetheart chosen on St. Valentine's day; an amatory, but anonymous letter, secretly sent on that day; a present, betokening affection, sent secretly on that day.

VALENTINIAN, the name of three Roman emperors. The first succeeded Jovian; being raised to the throne by the army at Nice, he took the W. empire to himself, and gave the E. part to his brother Valens. Nearly the whole of his reign was taken up with struggles against the Franks and Germans, who harassed the frontiers of the empire from the Rhine to the Danube. He allowed all creeds to be professed, but was a cruel and unpopular prince. He died in 375, aged 54, and having reigned 11 years. The second, his son, was raised to the throne of the W. empire by his brother Gratian, when he was a mere child. He was dethroned by Maximus, and restored by Theodosius, and at last was murdered by Arbogast, in 392, aged 21 years, after a nominal reign of 16. The third was made emperor of the West by Theodosius II., when he was but 6 years old, under the guardianship of his mother. Under him, all the W. empire was lost but Italy, and he died in 455, aged 36 years, after a reign of 30, in part nominal, and for the rest incapable.

VALENTINIANS, s. in Ecclesiastical History, a sect of Gnostics, of the 2nd century, originating with an Egyptian, named Valentinus, which rapidly spread through the whole Christian world. They held that God was not the Creator of the world; that our Lord had not a human body, &c. See Gnosticism.

VALERIAN, s. [valeriane, Fr.] in Botany, a genus of plants, of which the red valerian was cultivated by herbalists; cats are exceedingly fond of the smell of its roots.

VALERIANUS, P. LICINUS, an emperor of Rome, who succeeded Gallus, to the great joy of all parts of the empire, who hoped for the best results from his well-known character. He associated his son Gallianus with him on the throne, which was productive of the greatest unhappiness; and was himself taken prisoner by Sapor, the Persian king, in 260, and died of shame at his degradation. He was 67 years old, and had reigned 7 years.

VALERIUS MAXIMUS, a Roman historian. He was, as most Romans were, at first a soldier; and spent the latter part of his life in collecting anecdotes of illustrious men of Rome, and remarkable facts in history. His book was one of the earliest ever printed. He flourished soon after the Christian era, in the reign of Tiberius.

VALET, s. [Fr.] a waiting servant. Valet de chambre, one who waits on a nobleman or gentleman in his bedchamber, and dresses and undresses him.

VALETTA, s. a city of Malta, and the capital of that island. It has the happiest situation imaginable, and is wonderfully strong by nature and art. It has a fine harbour, and a good trade. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 35. 53. N. Long. 14. 30. E.

VALETUDINARIAN, s. a sickly person; one who fancies himself ill.

VALETUDINARIAN, VALETUDINARY, a. [valetudo, Lat.] sickly; weakly; infirm in health.

VALETUDINARY, s. an infirmary or hospital for the sick.

VALIANT, a. [valliant, Fr.] brave; stout; courageous; intrepid.

VALIANTLY, ad. bravely; courageously.

VALIANTNESS, s. bravery; courage; stoutness; intrepidity; valour.

VALID, a. [valide, Fr. validus, from valere, Lat.] strong, powerful, efficacious, prevalent, applied to things. Conclusive, weighty, having force, prevalent, applied to argument.

VALIDITY, s. [validité, Fr.] force; power; strength; certainty.

VALLA, LAURENTIUS, one of the great scholars during the revival of literature. He taught in several cities of Italy, held a canonry at Rome, and was successively secretary to the king of Naples and to the pope. He had to endure much opposition from the Church, and was once even condemned to the stake. He died in about 1460, aged about 50 years. His controversies with the celebrated Poggio are notorious, and a work of his on the Latin language is yet used by scholars.

VALLADOLID, a city of Spain, capital of a principality of the same name, with a university. It is embellished with handsome buildings, large public squares and fountains, and has fine long and broad streets. It is seated near the Douro, and has a good trade, 100 miles from Madrid. Pop. about 40,000. Lat. 41. 49. N. Long. 4. 43. W.

VALLANCY, s. a large wig that shades the face.

VALLE, PIETRO DELLA, a celebrated traveller, called from a whim of his own, the Pilgrim. He was first a soldier, but afterwards spent about eleven years in Egypt, Persia, India, &c., visiting other places and parts round the Levant. He married a beautiful girl of Kurdistan, who died before he returned to Europe; and he had her body enshrouded, and brought it with him to Rome for burial. He was favoured by the pope after his return, and died in 1652, aged 66 years. He published an Account of his Travels, Letters, and other works.

VALLEY, s. [vallee, Fr. vallis, Lat.] low ground lying between hills. See VALE. Geologists distinguish valleys according to their origin. Valleys of elevation, are such as have been formed by the upheaval of the strata, and their fracture, the space being cleared by the action of water, and the beds found to dip away from it. Valleys of excavation, are those which are formed by the action of running water alone, which is sufficient to scoop out a bed in the hardest lava. In these instances the beds lie in continuous lines on each side of the stream.

VALLISNERI, ANTONIO, an eminent naturalist of Italy, who studied at Modena and Bologna, and became a medical practitioner at Reggio. He was afterwards made a professor at Padua, and travelled in Italy to increase his acquaintance with plants, which he had deeply studied. He enjoyed a great reputation throughout the scientific world, and died in 1730, aged 69 years.

VALLISNERIA, s. in Botany, a plant found in S. France and Italy, which affords one of the most remarkable and beautiful proofs of contrivance to be seen in the vegetable world. It is a river plant, and the stamens and pistils grow on different flowers. The flowers containing the pistils are on long spiral stems, which adapt themselves to the depth of the water, so that the flowers always float on the surface. Those containing the stamens grow on short stems; but when the pollen in the anthers is mature, the stem breaks, and the flower rising to the surface opens, and floating amongst the flowers which bear the seed-vessels and pistilla, fertilize them with their pollen. The spiral stems of these flowers, after this is effected, coil up, and the seed is ripened and shed under water.

VALOROUS, a. brave; valiant; courageous; stout; intrepid.

VALOROUSLY, ad. in a valorous manner.

VALOROUSNESS, s. bravery; courage; intrepidity.

VALOUR, s. [valor, Lat. valor, Fr.] courage; bravery; strength; prowess; puissance; stoutness.

VALPARAISO, a sea-port of Chili, S. America. It stands on the shore, under the cliffs; but, excepting in the public and government buildings, is not very substantially built. It is well situated for trade, but has no harbour, but only a good road for anchoring in. It is a great place of trade, and every year increases its importance. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 33. 4 S. Long. 71. 23 W.

VALPY, the name of two eminent scholars, authors of many elementary classical works of wide use in England. Richard, the elder brother, studied at Oxford, and was head master of Reading grammar-school. His Latin and Greek grammars were a great advance on those generally in use at the time they were composed. His editions of the classics are of some value. He died in 1836. Edward, the younger, studied at Cambridge, and became head master of Norwich grammar-school. He held also some church-livings near Norwich. He published a Latin Exercise Book for advanced scholars, and superintended many publications of the Valpy press. He died in 1832.

VALUABLE, a. [Fr.] being of great price or worth; precious; deserving esteem or regard; estimable.

VALUABLENESS, s. price or worth; esteem.

VALUATION, s. price or value put upon a thing; appraisement.

VALUE, s. [Fr.] price; worth; price equal to the worth of a thing; esteem; rate. In Political Economy, the several quantities of all other things, which can be obtained in exchange for any particular thing, and which, therefore, must always be in a state of fluctuation.

To VALUE, v. a. [valor, Fr.] to rate at a certain price; to have in high esteem; to appraise or estimate; to be worth.

VALUER, s. one who values.

VALVE, s. [valve, Lat.] a folding door; any thing that opens and shuts over an orifice. In Botany, the different pieces that compose a capsule. In Practical Mechanics, Hydraulics, &c., valves are made in several forms, according to the nature of the orifice to be closed, and to the fluid which passes through it;—amongst the simplest, are the ball and the cone, which, fitting into cavities ground perfectly true, are almost air-tight. For completely air-tight valves some kind of oleaginous substance is employed in addition to the valve. See STEAM-ENGINE. In Anatomy, certain membranes which are found in the arteries, which admit the flow of the blood from the heart, but prevent its return.

VAMP, s. the upper leather of a shoe.

To VAMP, v. a. to piece an old thing with something new; to repair any thing old or decayed, in order to make it pass for new.

VAMPIRE, s. in Zoology, a large species of bat, inhabiting several of the African and South Sea islands. In Slavonic and other superstitions, the spirit of some dead person, which frequents the scenes of its former life, for the purpose of injuring and destroying persons.

VAN, s. [vanot, Fr.] the front or first line of an army.—[Fr. from vanus, Lat.] any thing spread wide, by which a wind is raised; a fan; a wing.

VANADIUM, s. in Chemistry, a metal of silvery lustre, and very brittle, which is not acted on by some acids. It burns when heated in a very moderate degree.

VANBRUGH, SIR JOHN, an English dramatist and architect, of the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th centuries. His first public appearance was in his profession, when he was engaged in completing Greenwich Hospital. He next brought out his dramatic works. Later in life, he built Blenheim House and Castle Howard. He was made Clarencieux king-at-arms, and was knighted. He died in 1726, aged 60 years. His buildings have received very different verdicts from the followers of different architectural heresies. If not master-pieces, they may yet afford much instruction to the students of that branch of the fine arts. His comedies are excellent in all but the morality, and the bad morality is made worse by the grossness of the language.

VANCOURIER, (vánkurrier) s. [avantcourier, Fr.] a harbinger; a precursor.

VANCOUVER, GEORGE, a British naval captain, and circumnavigator. He served under Captain Cook, and commanded an expedition of discovery in the N. Pacific Ocean. Amongst the new tracts visited by him was the large island now called by his name. He died in 1798, aged about 45 years. He published an account of his voyages, which is very interesting.

VANCOUVER'S ISLAND, a large island lying on the W. coast of N. America, opposite to the Oregon territory. It is about 200 miles long, and about 40 broad. It is very imperfectly explored, but coal is abundant, and the soil is fertile. It has also good havens, and the narrow sea between it and the mainland is one continuous harbour. It belongs to Great Britain, and is now included in the territory of the Hudson's Bay Company. It is doubtless destined to play an important part in the future history of the world, lying as it does so convenient for commerce with the E. Indies and China, and abounding with the appliances of civilized life. A few hunters and Moriamites are the only settlers here at present. Pop. about 5000.

VANDALS, a great branch of the Teutonic race, which took part in the overthrow of the Roman empire. They adopted the Arian creed, and established a kingdom in Spain, which continued for some years; and another far more extensive in N. Africa, which was overthrown by Belisarius.

VANDERVEDE, WILLIAM, (the old), a celebrated seapainter. He accompanied the Dutch fleet under De Ruyter, as Racine did the army of Louis XIV., and was afterwards engaged by Charles II. to secure a glory to his fleets which they could not always secure for themselves. He was at the Solebay fight, on behalf of the Duke of York; and died in 1693, aged 83 years. His son, the younger William Vandervelde, painted many of the sea-fights which he sketched on the spot.

VAN DIEMEN'S LAND. See TASMANIA.

VANDYCK, SIR ANTHONY, the great portrait painter of the 17th century. He was born at Antwerp, and studied under Rubens. After having distinguished himself in the studio of that great artist, he visited Italy, where he attained his first fame. He was attracted to England after his return by the fame of Charles I.'s liberality to artists, and experienced it completely in reward for the immortality he has conferred on the face and figure of that unhappy king. He was knighted by Charles, and lived in a style of great splendour. He died in 1641, aged 42 years. Although most celebrated for portraits, he painted historical pieces as well, some of which are of great excellence. The various collections in England have made most persons familiar with the style of this artist, and the numberless engravings of his pictures of his royal patron have made them at least familiar to all.

VANE, s. [vaene, Belg.] a plate hung on a pin so as to turn with the wind; a weathercock. Vanes, among mariners, are the sights of quadrants, &c.

VANE, SIR HENRY, one of the statesmen of the Puritan Revolution of the 17th century. His father was an officer of the household to Charles I., and a secretary of state. He studied at Oxford, and then visited Geneva, where he acquired the principles for which he was afterwards put to death. The opposition which he encountered made him leave England, and he went as governor to Massachusetts, then recently planted. On his return he was made a treasurer of the navy; he also entered parliament, and took a prominent part in all the movements of the patriot party, except the overawing of the House by the army, and the execution of Charles. He held prominent situations in the state, till Cromwell put an end to the Long Parliament, and reflected somewhat tauntingly upon the narrow pedantry of his character. He was so inordinate to the Protector, that he was confined in Carisbrooke castle, and when Richard Cromwell had abdicated, and he was raised to honour again, the parliament had to make him a prisoner on parole. At the Restoration he was one of those singled out to show how a king's word should be kept, and was tried (in mere mockery of the forms of justice) and beheaded in 1662, aged 50 years. Vane "called Milton friend," but seems by his whole doings, and by his book, (in which he shows himself a Fifth-monarchy man,) to have had little that corresponded with that honour, save his resolute adherence to the formula which he had assumed to be the right one.

VA'NGUARD, s. [avant garde, Fr.] the front or first line of an army; the van.

VAN'ILLA, s. [vanille, Fr.] in Botany, &c., a genus of plants found in the tropical regions of the New World, one species of which supplies the substance with which chocolate is so frequently flavoured.

To VA'NISH, v. n. [evanesco, Lat.] to disappear; to come to nought; to be lost.

VA'NITY, s. [vanité, Fr. vanitas, Lat.] emptiness; inanity; uncertainty; fruitless desire or endeavour; falsehood; vain pursuit; an object of petty pride; ostentation.

VAN LOO, two celebrated painters of France. Jean Baptiste, the elder brother, excelled in portraits, but also painted historical pictures. He was the fashionable painter of the court of Louis XV., but he enjoyed a considerable reputation in Italy also; and in England, which he visited when his losses by the Mississippi scheme made his life more laborious. He died in 1746, aged 62 years. Charles Andrew, the younger brother, painted historical pieces chiefly, and was made director of the Academy, and royal painter. He died in 1765, aged 60 years.

To VA'NQUISH, v. a. [vainere, Fr.] to conquer; to subdue, confute, overcome.

VA'NQUISHER, s. a conqueror; a subduer.

VAN'TAGE, s. [from advantage] gain; superiority, opportunity.

VA'NTBRASS, s. [avant bras, Fr.] armour for the arm.

VAPID, a. [capidus, Lat.] dead or flat, applied to liquors; palled; spiritless; mawkish.

VAPIDITY, VA'PIDNESS, s. deadness; flatness; mawkishness.

VAPORARY, s. [aporarium, from vapor, Lat.] a stove or hot-house; a stew or bagna. Among physicians, a decoction of herbs poured hot into a vessel, so that the patient sitting over it may receive the fumes.

VAPORATION, s. [aporatio, Lat.] the act of emitting fumes or vapours.

VAPORIFEROUS, a. [apor and fero, Lat.] producing or causing vapours.

VAPOROUS, a. [aporos, Fr.] full of vapours; fummy; full of vain imaginations; windy; flatulent.

VAPOUR, s. [vapor, Lat. vapeur, Fr.] in Natural Philosophy, that state of any body, fluid or solid, which is produced by the application of heat, in which its particles are mechanically, but not chemically, separated; steam; fume.

To VA'POUR, v. n. [vapor, Lat.] to fly off in fume. Figuratively, to bully or brag.—v. a. to effuse or scatter in fumes or vapour.

VAPOUR BATH, s. in Medicine, an apparatus by which the body, or any part of it, can be exposed to the action of the vapour of water, or any other fluid, at any desired temperature, for medicinal purposes.

VAR, a department of France, lying on the Mediterranean, next the kingdom of Sardinia, and bounded by the departments of Bouches du Rhône and Basses Alps. It is about 80 miles in length, by 45 in breadth. It is traversed by some of the offshoots of the Alps, and has heights exceeding 3000 feet. Great part of its coast is rocky, and is lined with small islands; the best known of which are the Hyères islands. The Var is its chief river, and separates it from the Sardinian States. Near the coast at some points are extensive lakes or lagoons. It yields building-stone, marble, and coal. Corn is scantily grown; but fruit, wine, cattle, timber, &c. &c. are abundant. It has also valuable fisheries. It has some manufactures, and a good trade at some points. Toulon is its chief port, and Draguignan is its capital. Pop. about 350,000.

VARIABLE, a. [Fr. variabilis, from vario, Lat.] changeable; not long the same; inconstant; fickle; mutable.

VARIABLENESS, s. changeableness; levity; inconstancy; mutability.

VAR'IABLY, ad. changeably; uncertainly.

VARIANCE, s. [from vary] difference; discord; dissension; disagreement. In Law, an alteration of something formerly laid in a plea.

VARIATION, s. [Fr. variatio, Lat.] change; difference; mutation. Variation of the compass, in Magnetism, that deviation of the direction of the magnetic needle from the true north, which has always to be allowed for in the use of it, in navigation. It is observed that this variation is itself variable, both daily, and in a progressive and constant manner. It is now about 23° to the W. of the true north at London. Lunar Variation, in Astronomy, an inequality in the moon's motion, by which it is sometimes before and sometimes behind its mean place, by about 32', arising from the attraction of the sun.

VARICOSE, a. [varicosus, Lat.] diseased with dilatation.

To VA'RIEGATE, v. a. [variegatus, school Lat.] to stain with different colours; to diversify.

VARIEGATED, a. streaked or diversified with different colours.

VARIEGATION, s. the quality of being beautified or diversified with several colours.

VAR'IEITY, s. [varieté, Fr. varietas, Lat.] change; intermixture of different things; difference; variation; diversity. In Natural Science, a subordinate and uncertain division of a species.

VARIFORM, a. [varius and forma, Lat.] being of divers shapes or forms.

VARIGNON, PIERRE, an eminent mathematician of France, who studied at Caen and Paris, contrary to the desire of his friends, who wished him to become an ecclesiastic. He became mathematical professor in the College Mazarin; and died in 1722, aged 68 years. His works are all of considerable interest to mathematicians, and aided greatly in advancing the science to its present perfection.

VARIOUS, a. [varius, Lat.] different; changeable; unlike each other; marked with different colours; numerous; manifold.

VARIOUSLY, ad. differently.

VARIOUSNESS, s. diversity; changeableness.

VAR'LET, s. [old Fr.] anciently a servant; but at present a worthless person; a rascal.

VA'RNISH, s. [vernis, Fr. vernix, Lat.] matter laid on wood, metal, &c. to make them shine, and preserve them from the action of the atmosphere and of water. Figuratively, a cover or palliation of a crime, &c.

To VA'RNISH, v. a. [vernis, Fr.] to cover with something shining; to conceal a defect with something ornamental or rhetorical; to palliate.

VA'RNISHER, s. one whose trade is to varnish; a dissembler; an adorning.

VARRO, M. TERENTIUS, a Roman writer, of great erudition; who was a partisan of Pompey in the wars between him and Julius Caesar, but afterwards became a friend of the conqueror's. He escaped, with the loss of his property, the proscriptions of the triumvirate of Octavius, Antonius, and Lepidus; and died in 27 B. C., aged about 90 years. One of his works has come down to us perfect, it is a treatise on Agricultural Affairs; another, on the Latin Tongue, we have in a very imperfect and unsatisfactory state; the rest are irrecoverably lost.

To VA'RY, v. a. [vario, Lat. varier, Fr.] to change; to make of different kinds; to diversify.—v. n. to be changeable; to appear in different forms; to be different from each other; to alter; to deviate; to be at variance.

VASARI, GEORGE, an architect and painter of Italy, who is known to us by his Lives of the most eminent Painters, Sculptors, and Architects, rather than by his works of art, albeit he appears to have had the best masters, and to have enjoyed some reputation during his life. He died in 1574, aged 62 years.

VAS'CLAR, a. [vasculum, Lat.] composed of vessels. It is applied to those tissues in plants which are so composed; and which distinguish the great class of phanerogamous, or flowering plants, from the cryptogamic plants, ferns, mosses, fungi, &c. &c., which are composed almost wholly of cellular tissue.

VASCULIFEROUS, a. [vasculum and fero, Lat.] in Botany, an epithet given to those plants which have, besides the common calyx, a peculiar vessel to contain the seed.

VASE, s. [Fr. vas, Lat.] a vessel; generally applied to one designed for show rather than use.

VAS'SAL, s. [Fr. vassallo, Ital.] one holding by the will of a superior; a subject or dependant, a servant subject to the will of another; a slave.

VAS'SALAGE, s. [vassalage, Fr.] the state of being subject to the will of another; dependence; subjection.

VAST, a. [vaste, Fr. vastus, Lat.] great or large; generally applied to any thing enormously great.

VASTLY, ad. largely; greatly.

VASTNESS, s. enormous greatness; immensity.

VAT, Fat, s. [vat, Belg., fat, Sax.] a vessel for holding wine, beer, &c. in the time of their preparation.

VATER, JOHN SEVERIN, an eminent scholar of Germany, during the last generation. He studied at Jena and Halle; and received his first appointment as theological professor in the former university. He subsequently held that post at Halle, in conjunction with the chair of oriental literature, and was for a short time in the same situation at Königsberg. He died in 1826, aged 55 years. His writings are very numerous, but are almost wholly out of the reach of English readers; they are of great value to scholars in languages.

VATICAN, the name of the principal palace of the popes, at Rome, where are the famous chapels adorned by the chefs d'œuvre of Buonarroti and Raphael; the museum, abounding with the most precious works of art; and the library, containing the stores of ages. It is named from the old name of the hill on which it stands. St. Peter's church is commonly reckoned part of the Vatican.

VATICIDE, s. [vates and cedo, Lat.] a murderer of prophets. To VATICINATE, v. n. [vaticinor, from vates, Lat.] to prophesy.

VATICINATION, s. [vaticinatio, Lat.] the act of prophesying, divining, and foretelling.

VATTEL, EMMERICH, the great writer on the Law of Nations. He was born at Neuchâtel, and studied at Basle and Geneva, for the purpose of being a clergyman. He turned aside from it to other pursuits, and entered the service of the elector of Saxony, as ambassador at Berne, from Poland. The greater part of his time was devoted to his favourite studies. He was afterwards made a councillor of state at Dresden; and died in 1767, aged 53 years. His works are somewhat numerous; but that on which his great reputation is founded is the Law of Nations; which, if preferable to the works of Grotius and Puffendorf, is certainly less learned in historical precedent and example.

VAVASOUR, s. [vavasour, Fr.] anciently a person next in rank to a baron; one subject to a superior lord, but has others holding under him.

VAUBAN, SEBASTIEN LE PRESTRE, SEIGNEUR DE, the great military engineer of France. He entered the army early in life, and partook of all the dangers of the wars of the 17th century. During this time he was continually studying his favourite subject, and he had but too many opportunities of testing the value of all his plans. The fortification of Dunkirk was the first work of national importance intrusted to him; and after that he was continually engaged in conducting sieges, or in erecting fortresses, or constructing military works. Few men whose eminence is chiefly of a scientific kind, have seen so much actual service, or done so much of a practical kind, having been in 140 actions, and had the management of 53 sieges, and either the erection or repair of about 340 fortresses. He was made a marshal of France, and died in 1707, aged 74 years. His works on the Attack and Defence of Besieged Places, and on Mines, are not all his writings, although they contain the result of his study and observation on the theme he particularly chose as his own.

VAUCHER, JEAN PETER, an eminent botanical writer of Geneva. He was theological professor there; and beside attending to the duties of his post with exemplary fidelity, studied the physiology of plants with great ardour and intelligence. He died in 1841, aged 75 years. His great work on the Physiology of Plants is very valuable and curious.

VAUCLUSE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Basses Alpes, Drôme, Ardèche, Gard, Durance, and Bouches du Rhône. It is about 65 miles long, by about 35 broad. It is in part mountainous, and has points of above 6000 feet in height; and the Rhône is its principal river. Its name is derived from the fountain-head of the Sorgues, in the valley called Vaucluse, immortalized by Petrarch. It yields coal of inferior quality, and excellent building-stone and lime-stone. Corn, wine, fruits, silk, honey, sheep, &c. &c. are in different degrees of abundance produced. It has some manufactures, and a brisk internal trade. Avignon is the capital. Pop. about 300,000.

VAUD, a canton of Switzerland, adjoining France, and bounded by Neuchâtel, Freyburg, Berne, and the Valais. It is of small extent, and is not very mountainous. Its streams are small, but the lake of Geneva on the S., and the lake of Neuchâtel on the N., belong in part to it. Corn, fruit, wine, cattle, &c. &c. are its chief productions and wealth. Lausanne is its capital. Pop. about 200,000.

VAUDEVILLE, s. [Fr.] a popular song; a short and trifling species of drama.

VAUDOIS, (called also VALDENSES, or WALDENSES,) in Ecclesiastical History, a people of the mountain valleys of Piedmont, who (although lying in the very centre of Roman Christendom, and subjected to repeated persecutions) have never belonged to the Church of Rome; and (excepting that they receive state pay) are now the same in faith and discipline that they were in the 12th century. They at present occupy the three valleys of Lucerne, St. Martin, and La Perouse, and derive their name from valis, a valley; or, more probably, from vald, a valley in a forest or a wood. Their history is most intensely interesting and instructive, and has given rise to some of the noblest poems in the English language, of which Milton's celebrated sonnet is known to all.

VAUGHAN, HENRY, one of our finest devotional poets. He was a native of Wales, and many of his pieces have lately been reprinted, or imitated in modern verse. He died in 1695, aged 74 years.

VAULT, s. [voulte, Fr., volta, Ital.] a continued arch; a cellar, so called, because arched generally on the top; a cave; a cavern; a repository for the dead under a church.—[voltiger, Fr.] a leap.

To VAULT, v. a. [vouter, Fr.] to arch, or shape like an arch; to cover with an arch.—v. n. [voltiger, Fr., colleggiare, Ital.] to leap, jump, or show postures.

VAULTED, a. arched; concave.

VAULTER, a. a leaper; a jumper; a tumbler.

To VAUNT, v. a. [vauter, Fr.] to boast; to display in an ostentatious manner; to brag; to swagger.—v. n. to talk with ostentation; to make vain show; to boast.

VAUNT, s. a brag or boast.

VAUNTER, a. a boaster; a man given to vain ostentation.

VAUNTINGLY, ad. boastingly; braggingly.

UBERTY, s. [uber, Lat.] fertility; abundance.

UBEROUS, a. plentiful; fertile.

UBICATION, UBILITY, s. [ubi, Lat.] residence or situation in a place.

UBIQUITARIAN, s. [ubique, Lat.] one who holds that Christ's body is every where present.

UBIQUITARY, a. omnipresent.

UBIQUITY, s. [ubiquité, Fr.] omnipresence.

UDDER, s. [uder, Sax. and Belg.] the dug of a cow or other large beast.

UDDERED, a. furnished with udders.

UDINE, a town of the Venetian territory, Austria. It stands at the foot of the Alps, and is surrounded by walls. It has some fine churches and public buildings. Its manufactures and trade are chiefly in silk. Pop. about 25,000. Lat. 46. 4. N. Long. 13. 10. E.

VEAL, (veel) s. [veel, old Fr.] the flesh of a calf.

VECTION, VECTITATION, s. [vectito, Lat.] the act of carrying, or being carried.

VEDA, s. [Sanscr.] the name given to the sacred books of the Hindus. They contain many noble moral precepts, but along with them enjoin, with equal authority, many puerile and degrading superstitions.

To VEER, v. n. [virer, old Fr.] to turn about.—v. a. to let out; to turn; to chant.

VEGA, LOPE DE, or LOPE FELIX DE VEGA CARPIO, the great Spanish dramatist. He was well educated, and studied partly at Alcalá, and his first engagement was as secretary to the Duke of Alva. Obligated to fly in consequence of a duel, he remained for some time an exile from Madrid, and on his return his wife died. He was one of the military embarked in the Armada that was called in vain hope the Invincible, and it was the world's good fortune that he returned in safety. Another period of domestic life and secretarship followed, and on losing his second wife he took holy orders. His literary life now properly began, and never was poet so honoured before. He received his apotheosis before his death. The pope himself sent him testimonials of the greatest regard, and he was made, as one of the highest marks of national respect, familiar to the Inquisition. When he appeared in the streets he was surrounded by crowds, as if he were a sovereign. He died in 1635, aged 63 years, and was buried with the honours of a prince. His dramas, entirely original, were about 2000 in number, and of them about 500 have been printed. This astonishing fertility may be understood by a computation which has been made, and which shows that he must have written not less than 21,300,000 verses, beside prose. He was properly the creator of the Spanish comedy, and his pieces have proved a rich mine to the playwrights of other nations.

VEGETABLE, s. [Fr.] in Natural History, a plant, as distinguished from an animal, or from a mineral. Generally, an esculent plant, root, &c.

VEGETABLE, a. [vegetabilis, Lat.] having the nature of a plant; belonging to a plant. Vegetable ivory, is the kernel of a kind of nut, which grows in Peru; and which is so hard as to admit of its being used for most purposes to which ivory is applied. But it is not so durable as the genuine ivory, nor does it always keep its colour.

To VEGETATE, v. n. [vegeto, Lat.] to grow; to shoot out.

VEGETATION, s. [Fr.] growth; increase of bulk, parts, and dimensions, applied to trees, plants, shrubs, &c.

VEGETATIVE, a. [vegetativus, Fr.] producing growth, or causing to grow.

VEGETE, v. a. [vegetus, Lat.] vigorous; active; sprightly.

VEHEMENCE, VEHEMENCY, s. [vehēmentia, Fr. vehementia, Lat.] violence; ardour; vigour.

VEHEMENT, a. [Fr. vehemens, Lat.] violent; eager; fervent; forcible; ardent.

VEHEMENTLY, ad. forcibly; pathetically.

VEHICLE, s. [vehicule, Fr. vehiculum, from veho, Lat.] that in by which any thing is carried or conveyed.

To VEIL, v. a. [velo, Lat.] to cover the face with any thing; to cover or hide. See VAIL.

VEIL, s. [velum, Lat.] a cover used to conceal the face; a cover or disguise.

VEIN, s. [vena, Fr. vena, Lat.] in Anatomy, a vessel which conveys the blood from the arteries back to the heart. Figuratively, a hollow or cavity; the course of metal or mineral in a mine; tendency, or turn of mind; the time when any inclination is strongest; humour, or temper; current; streak; variation, as the veins of marble.

VENED, VENNY, a. full of veins; streaked; variegated.

VELASQUEZ, DIEGO RODRIGUEZ DE SILVA, a celebrated Spanish painter, who had the good fortune to have such incompetent teachers, that he was compelled to resort to the models by which he was surrounded for models and scenes for his canvasses. Having visited Madrid, he was soon employed by the court; and so charmed Philip IV. that he was made royal painter. He was persuaded by Rubens, then visiting Madrid, to travel in Italy, which he did, and was received with the greatest respect. He afterwards again visited that country, and was even more highly honoured. But his chief honours were received from his own monarch; he was ennobled by him; he had apartments in the palace; and was at last appointed to a court office, the duties of which were to prepare the royal lodgings during a journey, and which caused his death by over fatigue in this mental occupation, in 1660, aged 61 years. His portraits are his most characteristic and splendid works; but his historical pictures are marked by the same excellency. He is the first of the imitators of actual life; and stands in extreme contrast with Raphael, Michael Angelo, and all who idealized their themes, and worked as artists, and not merely as painters.

VELLETTY, s. [vellété, Fr.] the lowest degree of desire.

To VELLICATE, v. a. [vellico, Lat.] to twitch; to pluck; to stimulate.

VELLICATION, s. [vellicatio, Lat.] a twitching.

VELLUM, s. [velum, Fr.] the skin of a calf dressed for writing; the finest sort of parchment.

VELOCITY, s. [velocitas, Fr. velocitas, from velox, Lat.] speed; quickness of speed; swiftness.

VELVET, s. [veluto, Ital.] a kind of silk manufacture with a short pile or fur upon it.—a. made of velvet; soft; delicate.

VELVETLEAF, s. in Botany, the plant also called sea-tree mallow.

VENAL, a. [Fr. venalis, from veneo, Lat.] capable of being bought or purchased; mercenary; contained in the veins.

VENALITY, s. [venalitas, Fr.] a disposition that renders a person ready to flatter, or agree to any thing, for gain; prostitution; mercenariness.

VENATION, s. [venor, Lat.] the exercise or practice of hunting.

To VEND, v. a. [vendo, Lat.] to sell; to offer for sale.

VENDEE, a. department of France, lying on the Atlantic Ocean, and bounded by the departments of Loire Inférieure, Maine et Loire, Deux Sèvres, and Charente Inférieure. It is about 80 miles long, by about 50 in breadth. The surface is hilly on the inland side, but none of its elevations exceed 500 feet; and the rest is almost level. Its rivers are small, the two named Sèvre, the Vendée, &c. Off its coast, and belonging to it, are the islands D'Yeu, Noirmoutier, &c. Coal, iron, building-stone, &c. are found. Corn of various kinds, fruits, wine, &c. are produced in tolerable abundance; and timber and cattle are raised. The manufactures of the towns are not of great value; nor is the trade great. Some of the places of the coast attend to the fisheries. Bourbon-Vendée is the chief town. Pop. about 400,000. This department gave the name to a long and sanguinary civil war, which formed part of the Revolution of 1789.

VENDEE, v. n. in Law, the person to whom any thing is sold.

VENDRE, VENOR, v. [vendere, Fr.] in Law, a seller.

VENDIBLE, a. [vendibilis, Lat.] saleable; marketable.

VENDITION, s. [venditio, Lat.] the act of selling or disposing of any commodity; a sale.

VENDÔME, LOUIS JOSEPH, COMTE DE, a celebrated French general. Before the peace of Nimègue he served in Holland, under Turenne and De Crequi. In the war ended by the peace of Ryswick, he was second in command in the Netherlands and in Italy, and chief in Spain; and gained a distinguished reputation. In the Spanish war of succession, he commanded in Italy and Holland, and wrested the victory more than once from Prince Eugene, by his impetuosity, rather than by his generalship, but was defeated at Oudenarde by Marlborough. In Spain, he completely restored the cause of Philip, and was by him, in gratitude, honoured as a prince of royal birth, which, in fact, he was, being grandson of Henri IV., and the beautiful Gabrielle d'Estres. He died in that country in 1712, aged 58 years.

VENEER, s. a very thin slice of wood. It is only the finer kinds of mahogany, rosewood, and other rare and beautiful woods, that are cut into veneers; and this operation is performed by saw-mills, with machinery so exquisitely made, that a whole log is cut out lengthwise into sheets hardly thicker than brown paper.

VENEER/RING, s. in Cabinet-making, the covering of common wood with veneers of rarer or more beautiful kinds, for ornament and cheapness; a kind of inlaying, or marquetry.

VENEFICIAL, a. [venenum and facio, Lat.] acting by poison; bewitching.

VENENOUS, a. [venenum, Lat.] full of poison; poisonous.

VENENIFEROUS, a. [venenum and fero, Lat.] bearing poison.

VENERABLE, a. [Fr. venerabilis, from veneror, Lat.] to be regarded with awe or reverence.

VENERABLY, ad. in a manner that excites reverence.

To VENERATE, v. a. [rénerer, Fr. veneror, Lat.] to regard with awe or reverence.

VENERATION, s. [Fr. veneratio, Lat.] great respect; reverence.

VENEREAL, VENEREOUS, a. [venereus, from Venus, Lat.] relating to love; lustful.

VENERY, s. [venerie, Fr.] hunting; lasciviousness.

VENESE/CTION, s. [vena and seco, Lat.] the act of letting blood.

VENEZUELA, one of the S. American republics. It lies on the Caribbean Sea and the Atlantic Ocean, and is bounded by New Granada, Brazil, and Guyana. It is about 1500 miles in length, and 700 in its mean breadth. The Andes cross the W. part of this state, and other ranges of mountains run in other directions through it; the greatest elevation of any of its peaks is about 15,000 feet. It has amongst the mountains, table-lands at an elevation of above 10,000 feet. The river Orinoco is the largest stream; and Lake Maracibo, the widest expanse of inland water in S. America is connected with it by a narrow channel. Most of the metals, and coal, are found here, but not in great quantities. Its vegetable productions, which consist of all the usual kinds found in the tropical regions of the New World, are its chief wealth. Horses and cattle of all kinds abound. Its fisheries, also, are valuable and extensive. Its manufactures are yet in their infancy; but its trade is considerable, and it has some fine harbours. Caracas is its capital. Pop. about 1,250,000, of which above 50,000 are slaves, and a large proportion either free persons of colour, Indians or negroes, and mixed races.

To VENGANCE, v. a. [venger, Fr.] See To AVENGE.

VENGANCE, s. [Fr.] punishment; or penal retribution; avengement. To do with a vengeance, is to do vehemently, or completely.

VENGFUL, a. vindictive; retributive.

VENIABLE, VÉNIAL, a. [venia, Lat.] pardonable; permitted; or allowed; excusable.

VENICE, the capital of one part of Austrian Italy, stands on the islands which form the border of the lagoons at the mouth of the Po. This situation has given to this city its peculiar character, it has canals for main streets, and there are above 300 bridges over them, connecting the lesser streets, the chief of which is the Rialto, 90 feet in length, and built of white marble. It is a city of palaces, and presents to the architect some of the most splendid works of art of that kind. Its churches are not less magnificent. It has also a university with a fine library, an academy of arts with many celebrated paintings and sculptures, a noble arsenal, &c. Its manufactures are not of great importance, and its commerce is but the shadow of what it was when Venice was a free state. Pop. about 120,000. Lat. 45. 25. N. Long. 12. 20. E. The glory of this city is its history, and it is at this hour maintaining a contest with Austria for the purpose of recovering its independence, which it has lost now for above fifty years. See LOMBARDO-VENETIAN KINGDOM.

VENISON, (venzon) s. [venaison, Fr. from venor, Lat.] the flesh of deer; game, or beasts of chase.

VENOM, s. [venin, Fr.] poison.

VENOMOUS, a. poisonous; mischievous; malignant.

VENOMOUSLY, ad. poisonously; malignantly.

VENOMOUSNESS, s. poisonousness; malignity.

VENOUS, a. [venosus, from vena, Lat.] full of veins.

VENT, s. [fente, Fr.] a small aperture or hole, by which any vapour transpires; passage from secrecy to public notice; passage; discharge.—[vente, Fr.] sale.

To VENT, v. a. [venter, Fr.] to let out at a small hole or aperture; to give way to, or free from restraint; to utter; to publish; to sell; to carry to sale.

VENTER, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, any cavity of the body, but particularly the abdomen. In Law, a womb, or mother.

VENTIDUCT, s. [ventus and ductus, Lat.] a passage for the wind.

To VENTILATE, v. a. [ventilo, from ventus, Lat.] to fan with the wind; to winnow; to examine or discuss any controverted point.

VENTILATION, s. [ventilatio, Lat.] the act of fanning, or gathering wind; the act of winnowing corn; refrigeration. It also signifies the art of constructing apparatus for supplying buildings with pure air, and removing that which has been used in respiration, &c., and become unwholesome.

VENTILATOR, s. an apparatus for the removal of noxious or unwholesome, and the supply of fresh, air in any place.

VENTO-SITY, s. [ventosus, Lat.] windiness.

VENTRICLE, s. [ventricule, Fr. ventriculus, from venter, Lat.] the stomach; any small cavity, particularly those of the heart and of the brain.

VENTRILOQUIST, s. [venter and loquor, Lat.] one who speaks in such a manner that the sound seems to issue from the air, or from other persons or inanimate things.

VENTURE, s. [aventure, Fr.] hazard; an undertaking of chance and danger; hap; chance; a stake. At a venture, is at hazard; without consideration or premeditation.

To VENTURE, v. n. to dare; to run a hazard. Used with at, on, or upon, to engage in an attempt without any prospect or certainty of security.—v. a. to expose to hazard; to put or send on a venture.

VENTURER, s. one who ventures.

VENTURESOME, a. bold; daring.

VENTURESOMELY, ad. in a bold or daring manner.

VENTUROUS, a. fearless; daring; bold; apt to run hazards.

VENUÉ, s. [Fr.] in Law, the county in which a cause is to be tried. There are particular rules for determining it, but large scope is given to a prosecutor.

VENUS, s. [Lat.] in Astronomy, the second planet in order from the sun, and the next nearest to it from our earth. Its distance from the sun is about 69,000,000 miles, and it revolves round it in about 225 days. Its rotation on its axis is accomplished in rather less than 24 hours; and its diameter is about 7800 miles. It is well known from its remarkable brilliancy, and from its never exceeding a certain distance from the sun. It is alternately a morning and an evening star; and is known by the names of Phosphorus, and Hesperus. It is not unfrequently visible in the day-time, and in full sun-light; and it may be seen under favourable circumstances to cast a shadow. Viewed through a telescope it exhibits phases like the moon, but its full circle is rarely seen, because it must at such a time be most distant from the earth, and close to the sun. Its surface presents dark spots, &c. like that of the moon. Like Mercury, when it passes between the sun and the earth, it occasionally appears crossing its disk like a black spot. But its transits are not so frequent as those of Mercury; happening at alternate intervals of about 8, and 123 years;—the following are all that will occur to 2004 A. D.

Year.	Day.	Time of the Middle.		Dist. of centres.
		H.	M.	"	"
1874	Dec. 9.	4	6 morn.	13	2 N.
1882	Dec. 6.	5	13 aft.	12	0 S.
2004	June 8.	6	30 morn.	9	9 S.

(See MERCURY, for an explanation of this table.) In the Heathen Mythology, the goddess of love and beauty. In Chemistry, copper metal. In Heraldry, the green colour in the arms of sovereign princes.

VERACITY, s. [vérité, Fr. from verax, Lat.] truth; consistency of words with facts; or consistency of deeds with words.

VERA CRUZ, a sea-port of Mexico: It stands on the level shore of the Gulf of Mexico, with dry sand hills behind it, and its only harbour is a road within shoals, which are very dangerous. It is fortified and well built, but has not very fine public edifices. Opposite to it is a small island or rock, called S. Juan de Ulloa, on which is a fort. It is a place of considerable trade, although very unhealthy. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 19. 10. N. Long. 96. 8. W.

VERANDA, s. a lightly built porch or piazza, used chiefly in cottage architecture.

VERB, s. [verbe, Fr. verbum, Lat.] in Grammar, the name of the class of words which denote activity, with which is included the word expressing existence in its simplest form, to be. They are complete in themselves, or intransitive, or they require an object, and are called transitive. According as the subject and object are different, or the same, they take the active, reflexive, or passive forms. Mood, tense, and person are their principal inflections, but in some languages they express gender also. (See these terms.) They are classified under different conjugations, according to their mode of inflection. In different grammatical systems other technical divisions are made, but these are the most general, and the most easily understood.

VERBAL, a. [Fr. verbalis, from verbum, Lat.] spoken, opposed to written; oral; consisting only in words; literal, or having word for word.

VERBALITY, s. mere bare words.

VERBATIM, ad. [Lat.] word for word.

To VERBERATE, v. a. [verbero, Lat.] to beat or strike.

VERBERATION, s. [Fr. verberatio, Lat.] the act of beating or striking; blows; beating.

VERBOSE, a. [verbosus, from verbum, Lat.] abounding or tedious with words; prolix; wordy.

VERBOSITY, s. [verbosité, Fr.] exuberance of words; much prattle.

VERDANT, a. [Fr.] green.

VERDELLIO, s. a touchstone for trying metals.

VERDERER, VÉDERER, s. [verder, Fr.] a judicial officer of the king's forest.

VERDICT, s. [verum and dictum, Lat.] the determination of a jury on any cause; a decision; judgment; opinion.

VERDIGRIS, s. [vert de gris, Fr.] in Chemistry, the diacetate of copper, formed by exposing the metal to the fumes of vinegar in a warm place. It is a bluish green, and is used as a pigment.

VERDITER, s. a blue pigment made by the decomposition of the nitrate of oxide of copper with chalk.

VERDURE, s. [Fr.] green colour.

VERE, the name of two eminent English military commanders of the 16th century. Sir Francis Vere obtained his renown in the wars in the Netherlands, where he was engaged in several campaigns, and his last service was the holding of Ostend for nearly three quarters of a year, with 1700 men against 12,000. He also took part in the Cadiz expedition, with equal distinction. He was in the English parliament, and was made governor of Brill. He died in 1608, aged 54 years. Horace Lord Vere, his younger brother, served with him in his most gallant actions. He commanded the English forces sent to relieve the Palatinate, but was unsuccessful, through want of means. He died in 1635, aged 50 years.

VERECUND, a. [verecundus, Lat.] modest; bashful.

VERGE, s. [Fr. verga, Lat.] a rod, or something in that form, carried before a person in office.—[ergo, Lat.] the brink, edge, or utmost border. In Law, the compass about the king's court, bounding the jurisdiction of the lord's steward, and the corner of the king's house.

To VERGE, v. n. [ergo, Lat.] to tend or bend downwards, used with towards.

VERGENNES, CHARLES GRAVIER, COMTE DE, one of the ministers of France in the period immediately preceding the Revolution. He was descended from a legal family, recently elevated to the magistracy, and early introduced into diplomatic business. His great talent for that kind of public business procured him rapid promotion. At Stockholm, and various capitals of Germany, he conducted difficult negotiations with great success, and was made minister for foreign affairs. On the death of Maurepas, he was raised to his post of prime minister, and managed the business of that office in those difficult times with the same skill he had showed in his former positions. He died in 1787, aged 70 years. It was not however by such talent as he had that France could be saved, or Europe, and though not to be condemned for being no greater man than he was, to him history attributes a share in precipitating the frightful catastrophe that commenced two years after his death.

VERGER, s. a tipstaff to a judge; an officer who carries a rod tip with silver before a bishop, a dean, &c.

VERGNAUD, PIERRE VICTORIN, the orator of the Girondins in the French Revolution. He was a barrister at Bourdeaux, and embraced the new political principles with the greatest ardour. That city returned him to the Legislative Assembly, and he soon took one of the highest places as a speaker. But even his oratory was not fitted for the times; classical, elegant, unpractical, he swayed the Assembly by the cadences of his voice, by the music of his periods, by the lofty strain of his passionate perorations. His history is that of the party he belonged to. Indolent, dreamy, respectable, he knew neither himself nor his country; he helped to bring on the contest with the "Mountain," and he made some of his finest speeches against its leaders. His course could not succeed, and he expired his error of policy, under the glaive of the guillotine, in 1793, aged 35 years.

VERDICAL, a. [verus and dico, Lat.] speaking truth.

To VERIFICATE, v. a. [verus and facio, Lat.] to prove a thing to be true.

VERIFICATION, s. [Fr.] the act of proving a thing, or making good an assertion.

VERIFIER, s. one who assures a thing to be true.

To VERIFY, v. n. [verifier, Fr.] to prove true, or justify.

VERILY, ad. in truth; indeed; assuredly; certainly.

VERISIMILAR, a. [verus and similis, Lat.] probable; likely.

VERISIMILITUDE, s. probability; likelihood; resemblance of truth.

VERITY, s. [verité, Fr. veritas, Lat.] truth; consonance to the reality of things.

VERJUICE, s. [verjus, Fr.] the juice of unripe grapes or crab apples.

VERMICELLI, s. [Ital.] in Cookery, long slender strings of paste, made with flour, eggs, cheese, sugar, and saffron, dried; used in soups, &c.

VERMICULAR, a. [vermis, Lat.] acting like a worm; continued from one part of the body to the other.

VERMICULATED, a. [vermiculatus, Lat.] inlaid; wrought with chequer-work, or pieces of various colours.

VERMICULATION, s. the breeding of worms; continuation of motion from one part to another. In Physics, a pain in the intestines occasioned by worms.

VERMICULE, s. [vermiculus, Lat.] a little worm.

VERMICULOUS, a. [vermiculosus, Lat.] full of worms.

VERMIFORM, a. [vermis and forma, Lat.] shaped like a worm.

VERMIFUGE, s. [vermis and fugio, Lat.] a medicine that destroys or expels worms.

VERMILION, s. [vermillon, Fr.] a brilliant red colour; the bisulphuret of mercury, powdered.

VERMIN, s. [vermine, Fr. vermis, Lat.] a collective name including all kinds of small animals or insects which are hurtful or troublesome to men, beasts, fruits, &c.

VERMIPAROUS, a. [vermis and pario, Lat.] breeding vermin.

VERMIVOROUS, a. [vernis and voro, Lat.] devouring or feeding on worms.

VERMONT, one of the United States, N. America. It lies next to Canada; and is bounded by New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and New York. It is about 150 miles long, and 90 broad; and is divided into 14 counties. The Green Mountains run almost the whole length of this state; and there are some points of more than 4000 feet in height. It has some large rivers; and several lakes, of which Lake Champlain is the most extensive. Iron and other metals, marble, &c. &c. are found here. It is generally fertile; corn and other agricultural produce is abundant. The woods yield excellent timber. Its manufactures and commerce are of less importance as sources of wealth than its agriculture. It has 19 banks, and 3 colleges. Montpelier is its capital. Pop. 291,948.

VERNALCULAR, a. [vernaculus, from verna, Lat.] of one's own country; natural; native.

VERNAL, a. [vernus, from ver, Lat.] belonging to the spring. Vernal equinox, in Astronomy, is the time when the sun crosses the equinoctial line in the spring, about the 21st of March; when day and night are of equal length.

VERNALGRASS, s. in Botany, a species of grass, which gives out a delicious odour when dried, called also spring-grass.

VERNET, the name of two celebrated modern French painters. Claude Joseph excelled as a marine painter. He studied for many years in Italy and the neighboring parts, devoting himself to natural scenes, and shipping, rather than to the works of other masters. Here he obtained his celebrity. On his return to France, meeting with a storm, with genuine enthusiasm for his art, he had himself lashed to the mast, and sketched some of the most remarkable effects. He painted views of the seaports of France, and maintained his reputation with almost unexampled success. He died in 1789, aged 75 years. Carle, his son, studied at Paris and at Rome; and excelled in battle-pieces; and was honoured in various ways by the emperor Napoleon. He died in 1836, aged 78 years.

VERNIER, s. in astronomical and other scientific instruments, is a very ingenious scale for measuring with extreme accuracy very small parts of degrees, &c. It was invented by a French mathematician of the 17th century, named Vernier; is sometimes called a Noniue, from the name of a mathematician of the preceding century, who suggested another method of effecting the same object. It is used especially in quadrants, sextants, theodolites, &c. &c.

VERNILITY, s. [vernitas, from verna, Lat.] servile, flattering behaviour.

VERNON, EDWARD, a celebrated English admiral of the beginning of last century. He served in various naval engagements; and was at last made a member of parliament. In consequence of one of his opposition speeches, he was made, an admiral, and embarked in the expedition which is always remembered with his name, that of taking Porto Bello, with 6 ships. He was unsuccessful however in an attack on Carthage, a year and a half afterwards. His other services were in parliament, and in the English seas, during the Pretender's rebellion in 1745. He died in 1757, aged 73 years.

VERONA, a large, ancient, and famous town of Austrian

Italy; and capital of a province of Venice, of the same name. The streets are neither clean nor straight; but there are many very handsome public buildings and palaces, and a very splendid Roman amphitheatre. It has numerous fine works of art, and a good library. It is fortified; and has a good trade. It is seated on the river Adige, which is navigable for merchandise to Venice. This river divides it into two parts, which communicate by four handsome bridges. It is 62 miles from Venice. Pop. about 60,000. Lat. 45. 26. N. Long. 11. 1. E.

VERONESE, PAUL, (properly Cagliari, a great painter of Italy. Venice and Rome, but particularly the former, were the scenes of his greatest labours, and are the places where the best of his paintings are to be seen. It was as a colourist that he was specially celebrated. He died in 1588, aged 56 years.

VERREL, s. a ferrule; a little brass or iron ring, fixed round the end of a cane or handle of a tool.

VERSAUVLLES, a town in the department of Seine et Oise, France. There is a magnificent palace here, which was the usual residence of the kings of France. The gardens, with the park, are 5 miles in circumference, and surrounded by walls. From the residence of royalty here the town has arisen; and is now a place of importance, with some valuable manufactures and a brisk trade. It is 12 miles from Paris. Pop. about 35,000. Lat. 48. 49. N. Long. 2. 2. E.

VERSATILE, a. [versatilis, Lat.] changeable; variable; mutable; easily applied to a new task; that may be turned round.

VERSE, s. [vers, Fr. versus, from verso, Lat.] poetry; a stanza of a poem; a line of a stanza; a small paragraph of a prose writing.

To be VERSED, v. n. [versor, Lat.] to be skilled in, or acquainted with.

VERSIFICATION, s. [Fr. versus and facio, Lat.] the act or practice of making verses.

VERSIFIER, s. one that makes verses; a paltry rhymist.

To VERSIFY, v. n. [versifier, Fr.] to make verses.—v. a. to relate in verse.

VERSION, (vershon) s. [Fr. versio, from verso, Lat.] change; translation; change of direction. In general, version is used to designate ancient translations of works in foreign languages; and translation, those made in recent times. But this distinction is purely conventional.

VERSTEGAN, RICHARD, an English antiquary of the end of the 16th and beginning of the 17th centuries. He was of Dutch extraction, and was educated at Oxford; but being a Romanist, deemed it safest to leave England and reside at Antwerp. There he published, printed, and wrote his Restitution of Decayed Intelligence, a small book, of some research and greater ingenuity of speculation, respecting the early history of the most renowned and noble English nation. He died in about 1635.

VERT, s. [Fr.] any thing that bears a green leaf. In heraldry, a green colour.

VERTEBRA, s. [Lat.] a joint of the spine or backbone.

VERTEBRAL, a. [vertebra, Lat.] relating to the joints of the spine.

VERTEX, s. [Lat.] the zenith or point over the head; the top of any thing.

VERTICAL, a. [Fr.] placed in the zenith, or over the head; placed perpendicular to the horizon.

VERTICALLY, ad. in the zenith.

VERTICILLATE, a. [verticillus, from verso, Lat.] in Botany, applied to plants, whose flowers are intermixed with small leaves, growing in a kind of whorls about the joints of the stalks.

VERTICITY, s. [verso, Lat.] rotation; circumvolution; power of turning.

VERTIGINOUS, a. [vertiginosus, Lat.] giddy; rotatory.

VERTIGO, s. [Lat.] a disease wherein objects, though fixed, appear to turn round, attended with a fear of falling, and dimness of sight; a dizziness.

VERTOT, RENE AUBERT DE, an eminent French historian, who was for some time a brother in the order of Capuchins, and afterwards in that of the Premonstratenses, which he also quitted, and obtained a benefice as a curé. His works obtained for him a salary in connexion with the Academy, and the appointment of historiographer to the Knights of Malta, with other distinctions. He died in 1735, aged 80 years. The History of the Order of the Knights Hospitaliers, &c., the History of Revolutions in Sweden, of those at Rome, &c., are his great works.

VERTUE, GEORGE, a distinguished engraver and antiquary of the former part of the last century. He rose into note first through the patronage of Sir Godfrey Kneller and the Earl of Orford, and afterwards was made engraver to the Society of Antiquaries. His works are very numerous, and embrace a great variety of subjects, but those which he made from sketches of churches taken by himself in various tours, and from drawings of antiquities and interesting and authentic portraits, are most valued. Accuracy, rather than artistic genius, characterizes his engravings, and gives them their conventional worth. He died in 1756, aged 72 years. Lord Orford's Anecdotes of Painting were collected by him.

VERVAIN, s. [verveine, Fr. verben, Lat.] in Botany, a plant called also simpliers' joy. Many elegant species are cultivated in gardens, but the small wild species, which possesses no known medical properties, has been deemed a sacred plant by almost all the ancient people of Europe.

VERUS, LUCIUS, an emperor of Rome, conjointly with M. Aurelius Antoninus, his father-in-law, next in succession of time to Antoninus Pius. He had the credit of many brilliant victories, gained by his lieutenants chiefly, over the barbarians on the frontiers. And his debaucheries hastened his end, and the deliverance of Rome from his influence. He died in 169, aged about 40 years, having been for 10 on the throne.

VERV, a. [verax or veri, Fr. verus, Lat.] true; real; the same, or identical.—ad. in a great degree.

VESALIUS, ANDREW, a celebrated anatomist of the 16th century. He was born at Brussels, and studied in France; and such was his celebrity, that he became a lecturer on anatomy before he was 20 years old. At Louvain, Pisa, Pavia, Bologna, and Madrid, he pursued his studies and demonstrations with ever-growing fame, and made several great discoveries in the human frame. He went from Madrid as a pilgrim to Jerusalem, (according to the uncontradicted report of his own day,) because he had caused the death of one of his patients, whose body, thinking he was dead, he was beginning to dissect. Whilst thus engaged, he was invited to succeed Fallopius at Padua; but being shipwrecked near Zante, perished by toil and hunger, in 1564, aged 50 years.

VESICA, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, a bladder; any membranous substance in which a fluid is contained.

To VESICATE, v. a. [vesico, Lat.] to blister.

VESICATORY, s. a medicine which raises blisters in the skin.

VESSICLE, (vesick) s. a little bladder.

VESPASIANUS, TITUS FLAVIUS, commonly called Vespasian, succeeded Vitellius as emperor of Rome, at the will of the army in Syria, of which he was in command. He had already gained great distinction, and his accession was hailed by all the empire, though not effected without tumult and bloodshed in Rome itself. His reign was beneficial to the state; his measures added to the stability of the empire, and recruited the exhausted treasury. He beautified the cities with fine buildings, and promoted education to the best of his power. In war he was as prosperous; and two events occurred of world-wide interest,—the wars against the Jews, which ended with the destruction of Jerusalem, and the dispersion of that people; and the wars of Agricola in Britain, by which the Roman power was established here. He died in 79 A. D., aged 69 years, having reigned nearly 10.

VESPER, s. [Lat.] the evening star; the evening.

VESPERG, s. s. in the Roman Church, evening prayers.

VESPUCCI, AMERIGO, a merchant of Florence, whose share in the discovery of the New World is commemorated in his name, America. Having settled in Spain, he was induced by his love of adventure and science together, to undertake several voyages in the track Columbus had already set forth on. These he accomplished partly by the aid of the king of Spain, and partly by that of the king of Portugal. He was not, however, a commander in any case; his account of his voyages, and of the lands he touched on, has associated his name with them, however, indissolubly. He died in Spain in 1512, aged 61 years.

VESSEL, s. [casselle, Fr.] any thing in which liquors, or other things, are put; any vehicle by which things are conveyed on the water.

VESSETS, a kind of cloth.

VESSICNON, a common horseman, a windgall or soft swelling on the inside and outside of a horse's hoof.

VEST, s. [veste, Fr. vestis, Lat.] a close-fitting body-garment.

To VEST, v. a. [vestio, Lat.] to dress; to make possessor of; to put into possession.

VESTA, in Astronomy, one of the asteroids or small planets that revolve between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. It was the 4th discovered, and in consequence of a conjecture that the first two might be only fragments of a planetary body, of which more might yet be met with; there are now nine, in all known. It is about 225,000,000 of miles from the sun, and performs its revolution in about 1330 days. In Heathen Mythology, a maiden goddess, to whom the fireside or hearth was dedicated. She was both in the Greek and in the Roman religion a deity, who, though classed amongst the minor gods, had more important functions ascribed to her than even the dwellers on Olympus themselves. She was the deification of the idea of society, including every branch of it, from the circle at home to the city and the empire itself. At Rome, the flame on her altar was not suffered to go out; or, if casually or negligently extinguished, to be lighted again by common fire; and her priestesses were virgins, on whom no breath of scandal might fall.

VESTAL, s. [vestalis, Lat.] a virgin consecrated to Vesta. Figuratively, a pure virgin.

VESTIBULE, s. [vestibulum, Lat.] the porch or first entrance of a house.

VESTIGE, s. [Fr. vestigium, Lat.] a footstep, or mark by which any thing may be traced.

VESTIMENT, s. [vestimentum, Lat.] a garment.

VESTRY, v. [vestiare, Fr. vestiaire, Lat.] a room in a church, wherein a minister puts on his surplice, or stays till it is time to perform his function; an assembly of the heads of the parish. Vestry clerk is an officer who keeps the accounts of the parish.

VESTURE, s. [vestura, Ital.] a garment or robe; dress.

VENTURIUS, a large volcano, 8 miles from Naples, in Italy. It was formerly of much greater size, for the hill called Summa is plainly part of a former crater. Its height is about 3500 feet. Its first recorded eruption was that in which Herculaneum, Pompeii, and Stabiae were overwhelmed, and Pliny the elder perished. The traces of earlier eruptions were evident to naturalists before that time. Since then it has rarely had a few years of repose. It is much visited by tourists, both from the beauty of the surrounding country, the abundance of volcanic products easily obtained around it, and also because it lies in the heart of Italy.

VETCH, s. [vicia, Lat.] in Botany and Farming, chick-peas; a kind of pulse; tares.

VEITCHY, a. made of vetches; abounding in vetches.

VETERAN, a. [veteranus, from vetus, Lat.] long practised in war; long experienced.

VETERAN, s. an old soldier; a one long experienced or practised in any thing.

VETERINARY ART, s. the practice of medicine and surgery applied to domesticated and other animals, based on the study of animal anatomy and physiology. It was formerly called farriery, and was almost wholly empirical, but is now studied as a science, with marked and beneficial results.

To VEX, v. a. [vexo, Lat.] to make uneasy or angry; to torment; to harass; to disturb.

VEXTION, s. [Fr. from vexo, Lat.] the act of troubling, or state of being troubled: the cause of trouble or uneasiness.

VEXTIOUS, a. afflictive; troublesome; teasing.

VEXTIOUSLY, ad. troublesomely; uneasily.

VEXTIOUSNESS, s. troublesomeness; uneasiness.

VEXER, s. one who vexes.

VGLINESS, s. deformity; the quality of being disagreeable to the sight, or void of beauty; moral depravity.

UGLY, a. deformed; offensive to the sight; void of beauty.

VIADUCT, s. [via and duco, Lat.] in Architecture and Engineering, a roadway carried over a valley or at a higher level than the general level of any tract, upon arches. The great lines of railway exhibit some of the finest specimens of this species of structure.

VIAT, s. [phiale, Gr.] a small bottle.

VIAND, s. [viande, Fr.] food; meat dressed.

VIATKA, a government of Asiatic Russia, bordering on Russia in Europe. The Uralian chain of mountains lies on that side, and the river Viatka is its chief stream. It yields iron, and some other valuable metals and minerals. Corn timber, 890 and cattle are produced. Its capital, of the same name, stands on the river also so called, and is a place of considerable trade. It is a substantially built place, and has several churches and other fine public edifices. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 58. 20. N. Long. 49. 45. E. Pop. of government, about 1,750,000.

VIATICUM, s. [Lat.] provisions for a journey. In the Romish Church, the sacrament of extreme unction, which is administered immediately before death.

To VIBRATE, v. a. [vibro, Lat.] to brandish or move to and fro with a quick motion; to make to quiver, — v. n. to play up and down, or to and fro, alternately; to quiver; to swing; to undulate.

VIBRATION, s. [Fr.] the act of moving to and fro, or upwards and downwards, alternately; undulation.

VIBRATORY, a. undulating; quivering.

VICAR, s. [vicaire, Fr.] one who possesses an appropriated or impropriated benefice; a clergyman who receives only the small tithes; one who performs the duty of another.

VICARAGE, s. the cure or benefice of a vicar.

VICARIOUS, a. [vicarius, Lat.] deputed; delegated; acting by commission.

VICARSHIP, s. the office of a vicar.

VICE, s. [Fr. vitium, Lat.] an action contrary to the laws of virtue; a fault. — [vicijs, Belg.] a kind of small iron press used in holding any thing fast, and moving by screws; gripe; grasp. — Vice, [Lat.] in composition, signifies one who acts instead of a superior, or is the second in command; as, Vice-chancellor, one who governs a university under a chancellor.

VICEGERENT, s. a deputy; a lieutenant.

VICENARY, a. [vicem, Lat.] belonging to twenty.

VICENZA, a large and flourishing town of Austrian Italy, capital of a province of the same name. It is adorned with several palaces, and has several fine squares, churches, convents, &c. It is fortified, and has several ancient ruins. There is an academy, whose members meet in the Olympic theatre, a masterpiece of workmanship by Palladio; and several educational institutions; also a good library. Its trade is good, and its manufactures are chiefly of silk. It is seated between the rivers Bacchiglione and Ronco, and two mountains, in a fertile plain, 36 miles from Venice. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 45. 26. N. Long. 11. 43. E.

VICEROY, s. [viceroi, Fr.] one who governs in place of a king with regal authority.

VICEROYALTY, s. the dignity of a viceroy.

VICINITY, s. [vicinitas, from vicinus, Lat.] nearness; neighbourhood.

VICIOUS, [vishious] a. committing actions contrary to virtue; addicted to vice.

VICIOUSNESS, [vishiousness] s. wickedness; faultiness.

VICISSITUDE, s. [Fr. vicissitudo, Lat.] regular change, wherein things return in succession; revolution.

VICO, JOHN BAPTIST, an Italian philosophic writer, of the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th centuries. He was extensively learned, and was appointed rhetorical professor at Naples; where he died in 1744, aged 76 years. His chief work is entitled Principles of a New Science; and in fact a "Philosophy of History." It contains much acute and original thinking, and may be studied with great benefit.

VICTIM, s. [victime, Fr. victima, Lat.] a sacrifice; something slain in sacrifice; something destroyed.

VICTOR, s. [Lat.] a conqueror; one who gains the advantage in any contest.

VICTOR, the name assumed by three Roman pontiffs; the 3rd of whom was the eminent patron and promoter of learning, Desiderius, Abbot of Casimiro. To his zeal in accumulating and transcribing MSS. may much of the glory of Italy in the revival of learning be attributed. He was pope for less than a year, it being a stormy period; and during that he was opposed by a rival claiming the pontificate, as the true successor of St. Peter. He died in 1057.

VICTORIOUS, a. [victorieux, Fr.] having obtained conquest, or the advantage; producing or betokening conquest.

VICTORIOUSLY, ad. successfully; triumphantly.

VICTORIOUSNESS, s. the state or quality of being victorious.

VICTORIOUS, or VETTORE, PETER, an Italian scholar of the 16th century. He studied partly at his native city, Florence, and partly at Pisa; and was appointed classical professor, by Duke Cosmo I. He died in 1585, aged 86 years. His editions and commentaries on the classic authors were valuable works.

VICTORY, s. [victricia, from vincere, Lat.] conquest; success in any contest; triumph.

VICTRESS, s. a female who conquers.

VICTUAL, (vitt) v. a. to furnish with provisions.

VICTUALS, (vitts) s. [victualia, Fr.] meat; food; sustenance.

VICTUALLER, (vittler) s. a publican; one who furnishes or provides provisions; a ship that carries provisions for a fleet.

VICUGNA, s. in Zoology, a kind of camel sheep, found in South America.

VIDAME, s. in France, the judge of a bishop's secular jurisdiction.

VIDELICET, ad. [Lat.] to wit; that is. It is usually written concretim, thus, viz.

VIDUITY, s. [viduitas, from vidua, Lat.] widowhood; the state of a woman who has buried her husband.

TO VIE, v. a. to show or practise in opposition or competition; to emulate, followed by with.—v. n. to contest for superiority.

VIENNA, the capital of the empire of Austria, in Germany. It stands at the confluence of the Vienne with the Danube, and has several very fine bridges. The city itself is not large, being limited by a very strong fortification, but the suburbs are very extensive. The streets in general are narrow, and in part crooked, and the houses built high; but some of the public buildings are magnificent. It abounds with fine churches, palaces, government-buildings, theatres, &c. &c. Here also is a fine university, and a very large and noble library. It has also numerous museums, and educational and charitable institutions. Amongst its public promenades, the most beautiful is the Prater, a kind of park. The manufactures of this city are numerous, and the trade extensive, which is chiefly carried on by the river, which is a sort of harbour, with quays, warehouses, &c. &c. Pop. about 400,000. Lat. 48. 12. N. Long. 16. 23. E. The Treaty of Vienna, is the famous agreement respecting the territories of the states that had taken part in the overthrow of Napoleon, or had suffered during his wars. It was made in 1815.

VIENNE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Charente, Haute Vienne, Indre, Indre et Loire, Maine et Loire, and Deux Sèvres. It is 80 miles in length, by 50 in breadth. It has few hills; and the Vienne is its principal river, after which it is named. It yields some iron; and there is abundance of lime and building stone, &c. Corn, wine, brandy, fruits, with walnuts, &c., are produced plentifully; and many cattle and sheep are reared. It has a few manufactures in its towns, which are also the centres of some inland trade. Poitiers is its capital. Pop. about 300,000.

VIENNE, HAUTE, a department of France, bounded by the departments of Vienne, Indre, Creuse, Corrèze, Dordogne, and Charente. It is about 60 miles long, and about 50 broad. Some hills or mountains in this department exceed 3000 feet in height. The Vienne is its chief river. Iron, building-stone of the most durable kind, lime-stone, &c. &c., are procured here. It produces corn, wine, fruits, &c. in no great abundance; but cattle are numerous; good timber also is plentiful. Several small manufactures are carried on in the towns. Its trade is all inland. Limoges is its capital. Pop. about 325,000.

VIENNE, a very ancient and considerable city in the department of Isère, France. It is seated on the left bank of the Rhone, over which it has a good bridge. It has some handsome public buildings, and several Roman relics. Its commerce consists in wines, silk, and cutlery, which last is highly esteemed. The well-known Hermitage red wine is produced here. It is 265 miles from Paris. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 45. 31. N. Long. 4. 55. E.

VIETA, FRANCIS, a celebrated French mathematician, of the 16th century. He was "master of requests;" but has no life worth recording, except in connexion with his scientific pursuits; and that is, for popular purposes, summed up in the fact that he brought algebra into its present form, and so gave to mathematicians an instrument of the greatest power in their researches. He was not so happy in his studies of the calendar, respecting which he committed some grave errors. His works are of no interest except to such as inquire into the history of mathematical science. He died in 1603, aged 63 years.

TO VIEW, (veu) v. a. [veu, Fr.] to survey, or look on by way of examination or curiosity; to look at; to see.

VIEW, (veu) s. a prospect; sight; survey; the reach of sight; appearance or show; exhibition, or display to the mind; intention or design; prospect of interest.

VIGIL, s. [veigle, Fr. vigilia, Lat.] a watch, or devotion, paid to saints while other persons are generally at rest; the fast kept before a holiday.

VIGILANCE, VIGILANCY, s. [Fr. from veigle, Lat.] forbearance of sleep; watchfulness.

VIGILANT, a. [Fr.] watchful; circumspect; attentive.

VIGILANTIUS, in Church History, one of the earliest opponents of the Church of Rome, and advocates of what is generally meant by Protestantism. He was born in France, and became a presbyter in Spain; and after travelling in Palestine and Egypt, wrote several treatises against the prevailing superstitions and falsehood of the Roman Church. He was opposed by the celebrated Jerome, with no common acrimony; and it is in his writings alone that we find any record of the opinions which have led to the inclusion of this excellent and learned man's name in the list of heretics. He retired at last into the remotest valleys of Piedmont, and lives yet in the churches of the wildernesses. He lived in the 4th and 5th centuries.

VIGILANTLY, ad. watchfully; circumspectly.

VIGNETTE, s. [Fr.] a small engraving introduced into the title-page of a book.

VIGNOLA, GIACOMO BAROZZIO, OF, a celebrated architect of Italy. He studied at Rome, and was taken by Primaticcio to France; but afterwards settled at Rome, and was made architect to the pope, and superintendent of St. Peter's. The church of Petronius, and several fine palaces at Bologna, are his work; and he constructed several magnificent buildings at Rome. He died in 1573, aged 67 years. His work on the Five Orders of Architecture, is held in high repute.

VIGOROUS, a. [vigoreux, Fr. from vigo, Lat.] full of strength and life; stout; lively; strong; energetic.

VIGOROUSLY, ad. forcibly; without weakness.

VIGOROUSNESS, s. force; strength.

VIGOUR, s. strength, force, or power of body or mind; energy.

VILE, a. [vil, Fr. vilis, Lat.] base; mean; despicable; wicked; sordid; worthless.

VILELY, ad. basely; meanly; shamefully.

VILENESS, s. meanness; baseness; wickedness.

TO VILIFY, v. a. to debase; to defame, or endeavour to make contemptible.

VILLA, s. [villa] a country-seat.

VILLAGE, s. [Fr.] a small collection of houses in the country, less than a town.

VILLAGER, s. an inhabitant of a village.

VILLAIN, s. [vilain, Fr.] a bondman, or servant; one who holds of another by base tenure; a wicked and base wretch.

VILLANAGE, VILLENAGE, s. the state of a villain; base servitude; infamy; baseness.

TO VILLANIZE, v. a. to debase; to degrade; to defame.

VILLANOUS, a. base; vile; wicked; sorry; used sometimes to heighten the idea of any thing low and base.

VILLANOUSLY, ad. wickedly; basely.

VILLANY, s. wickedness; baseness; depravity.

VILLARS, MONTEAUCON DE, a French writer of the 17th century. He was an abbé, and enjoyed great popularity as a preacher at Paris; but having published his witty Count de Gabalis, a sort of novel, in which the Rosicrucian mysteries are satirically expounded, he was suspended. He was assassinated in 1673, aged about 50 years.

VILLARS, LOUIS HECTOR, DUC DE, a celebrated French marshal, who gained his knowledge of the art of war under Turenne, and was at first engaged in diplomacy, having been from his earliest manhood in command of a regiment. His first considerable service was the suppression of an insurrection in Languedoc, and afterwards in Flanders, although he once only foiled Marlborough, and that by inaction in a position of impregnable strength; he gained many successes over Eugene and the Austrian commanders. He negotiated the peace of Rastadt, and took part in the political storms of the regency, after the death of Louis XIV. In his old age, he once more appeared as a general, and conducted some campaigns in Italy. He died in 1734, aged 81 years.

VILLEHARDOUIN, GEOFFROY DE, the historian of the first crusades. He had attained a high post in Champagne, when the fourth crusade was planned. He accompanied the Count of Champagne on this expedition, and was rewarded for his services with the marshalship of Romania and other dependencies. There he afterwards resided, and died in 1213, aged about 55 years. His History of the Taking of Constantinople, is a valuable work to the student of those expeditions, which, originating in military fanaticism, had so great and beneficial an influence on Christendom.

VILLI, s. [Lat.] in Physiology and Anatomy, a delicate kind of fibres, with which many organs are furnished.

VILLOISIN, JEAN BAPTISTE GASPARD D'ANSE DE, a great scholar of France, in the last century. He began his career by publishing the Homeric Lexicon of Apollonius, which raised him at once into the first ranks of classic scholars in Europe. He afterwards travelled in Europe and the East, searching the great libraries for Greek manuscripts, and was rewarded by the discovery of some of great value, which he published at various places. During the Revolution he suffered much in loss of property, and was made Greek professor in the College of France by Napoleon. He died in 1805, aged 55 years. His works and editions are of great value for the vast erudition they display; and he stands amongst the greatest Greek scholars of the last few generations.

VILLOUS, a. [cillous, from cillus, Lat.] rough; shaggy.

VIMINEOUS, a. [vimen, Lat.] made of twigs.

VINCE, SAMUEL, a distinguished English mathematician and astronomer. He was born in humble circumstances, and received the groundwork of his education and the taste for mathematics at a country school. Being helped to a course of study at Cambridge, he rose by his own exertions to be Pluvian professor of astronomy and experimental philosopher there. Afterwards, entering the church, he obtained some valuable benefices, and died in 1821. His works on mathematical subjects are yet used as text-books, and some theological works he also published are not uninteresting. He is one of the many who may serve to encourage those who, in spite of all difficulties, are bent on the attainment of knowledge.

VINCENT, ST., an island of the W. Indies, lying between St. Lucia and Grenada. It is about 18 miles long, by 10 broad. Here is a volcano of considerable size, being about 3000 feet in height, and which is occasionally active. It produces all the usual articles of these islands in abundance. Kingstown is its capital. Pop. about 30,000. It belongs to Great Britain.

VINCI, LIONARDO DA, a celebrated Italian artist, whose vast extent of scientific knowledge places him amongst the greatest men that have ever lived. He studied under Verocchio, but it was only in the mechanical parts of painting; his genius, style,—all that made his works immortal, was his own. He first entered the service of "the Moor" Sforza, Duke of Milan, as engineer, civil and military, painter, sculptor, &c. He executed there his work, which, though destroyed, will never be forgotten, the Last Supper. He next went to Florence, but soon after engaged himself to Cæsar Borgia, general to Pope Alexander VI. At Rome, Florence, and Milan, he worked for some years, till Francis I. of France took him into his service. But he did not live to realize the expectations of that chivalrous monarch: after but three years of broken health and energy spent in France, he died at Fontainebleau in 1519, aged 67 years. His Treatise on Painting, and some fragments of his miscellaneous thinking and writing, have been published, but his most remarkable writings are yet unnoticed.

VINCIBLE, a. [vincibilis, from vinco, Lat.] conquerable; that may be overcome.

VINCTURE, s. [vinctura, from vinco, Lat.] a binding.

VINCULUM, s. [Lat.] in Mathematics, is a character in form of a line or stroke drawn over a factor, divisor, or dividend, when compounded of several letters or quantities, to connect them, and show they are to be multiplied or divided, &c. together by the other term. Thus  $d \times a + b - c$ , shows that  $d$  is to be multiplied into  $a + b - c$ .

VINDELICIA, in Ancient Geography, a country S. of the Danube, lying between Helvetia and Rætia. The Inu watered it. It was named from the principal tribe which inhabited it. Augusta Viudelicorum, in the time of the Romans, was its capital.

To VINDICATE, v. a. [vindico, Lat.] to justify from any charge or accusation effectually; to revenge; to avenge.

VINDICATION, s. [Fr. vindicatio, Lat.] defence; apology; justification; assertion.

VINDICATIVE, VINDICTIVE, a. given to revenge; revengeful.

VINDICATOR, s. one who justifies from a charge or accusation; a defender; an assertor.

VINDICTIVENESS, s. revengefulness.

VINE, s. [vinea, Lat.] in Botany, the well-known plant whose fruit is the grape, and which thrives in the warmer parts of the temperate zone. It is not grown, except in hot-houses, with success in this country. In Italy it is trained on trees and poles in the manner of our hop-grounds. See WINE, GRAPE, &c.

VINEGAR, s. [vinaigre, Fr.] wine or other liquors grown sour; any thing sour. Vinegar is manufactured just as wine and beer are, but by causing the product of the vinous fermentation to pass through the subsequent process, called the acetous fermentation. See ACETIC ACID.

VINEYARD, s. [vineyard, Sax.] a ground planted with vines.

VINOUS, a. [vinum, Lat.] having the qualities of or resembling wine.

VINTAGE, s. the season for making wine; produce of wine for the year.

VINTAGER, s. one who gathers the vintage.

VINTNER, s. one who sells wine; a tavern-keeper.

VIOLA, s. [Ital.] a stringed instrument of music, larger than a violin, but not so large as the violoncello.

VIOLACEOUS, a. [violaceus, Lat.] resembling violets.

To VIOLATE, v. a. [violat, Lat.] to injure or hurt; to infringe; to break any thing venerable; to injure by irreverence; to ravish.

VIOLATION, s. [violatio, Lat.] infringement, or injury of something sacred; a rape; the act of deflowering.

VIOLATOR, s. [Lat.] one who infringes or injures something sacred; a ravisher.

VIOLENCE, s. [Fr. violencia, Lat.] force; unjust application of strength; assault; murder; vehemence; outrage; injury; ravishment.

VIOLENT, a. [Fr. violentus, Lat.] forcible; acting with force or great strength; produced by force; not natural; not voluntary; murderous.

VIOLENTLY, ad. forcibly; vehemently.

VOILET, s. [violette, Fr.] in Botany, a well-known wild flower, which has ever been celebrated for the sweetness of its odour, and the simplicity and gracefulness of its form and foliage. White varieties are very common. Some species cultivated in gardens, which flower freely in autumn, are not natives of this country.

VOILET, s. a purple.

VOILIN, s. [Fr.] a fiddle; a musical instrument well known.

VIOLONCELLO, s. [Ital.] a small bass violin, half the size of the common bass violin, and its strings half as thick and half as long.

VIPER, s. [vipere, Fr. vipera, Lat.] in Natural History, a species of serpent, found in low marshy grounds, in England, whose bite is venomous. It is beautifully chequered with black and white on its back.

VIPEROUS, a. [vipereus, Lat.] belonging to a viper.

VIPERGRASS, s. in Botany, a plant, called also viper's bugloss.

VIRAGO, s. [Lat.] a female warrior; a masculine woman.

VIRELAY, s. [Fr.] a sort of little ancient French poem, that consisted only of two rhymes and short verses, with stops.

VIRENT, a. [virens, Lat.] green; not faded.

VIRGE, s. [virga, Lat.] a dean's mace.

VIRGIL, or P. VIRGIlius MARO, the great Roman poet, was a native of the vicinity of Mantua, and was well instructed in all the knowledge of those times. When Augustus divided Italy amongst his legions, Virgil was one of those dispossessed, but, happier than most of the others, he recovered his patrimony, and became an ardent admirer and panegyrist of the emperor. He afterwards lived chiefly at Rome, occasionally visiting the fashionable sea-ports. He died as he was returning from a visit to Greece, and his tomb yet remains in the neighbourhood of Naples. This was in 19 B. C., when he was 51 years old. His poems are one of the classics invariably read in schools, and in eloquence and melody they are equalled by few. His Georgics are replete with curious agricultural information, and his Æneid is mainly intended to glorify Rome, by tracing its origin to the prince of Troy, and Augustus, by tracing his lineage to the heroic endurer of so many woes. Critics have endeavoured to institute comparisons between this epic and the Homeric rhapsodies, but a severer and more correct taste has prevented the recurrence of such idle criticism in late years.

VIRGIL, POLYDOR, an English historian of the 16th century. He was a native of Italy, and a priest, and being sent on papal business to England, spent almost all the rest of his life here; enjoying valuable church preferment, till the time of the Reformation, when he returned to Italy, and died there in 1555. He was a man of considerable learning, and his English History stands at the head of his writings.

VIRGIN, s. [virgo, Lat.] a maid; any thing not used or sold. A sign of the zodiac, which the sun enters in August.

VIRGIN, a. maidly; belonging to a virgin.

VIRGINIA, one of the United States of North America; lying on the Atlantic, and bounded by North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Maryland. It is about 370 miles in length, and 180 in breadth. The range of the Alleghenies cross the inland part. The principal rivers are James, York, Rappahannock, Potomac, Roanoke, and Kanaway Great and Little, all which are full of convenient and safe harbours. Gold, iron, and other metals, with marble and valuable kinds of stone, are found. The richest lands lie near the branches of the rivers, and abound with various sorts of timber, surprisingly large. The principal produce is tobacco, wheat, and Indian corn. There are manufactures of cloth, iron, &c. The foreign trade is considerable; and there are 8 banks. There are 5 colleges for the study of literature and science, beside others for theology, law, medicine, &c. It is divided into 119 counties, and Richmond is the capital. Pop. 1,239,797, of whom 448,987 are slaves.

VIRGIN ISLANDS, the name given to that part of the W. Indian islands, which lies immediately E. of Porto Rico. They are described under their separate names.

VIRGINITY, s. [virginité, Fr. virginitas, Lat.] the state of a woman that is a virgin.

VIRIATHUS, a Spanish chieftain, who for about 12 years maintained with great success a contest for the independence of his country against the Roman power. He was at last overcome through treachery, in 140 B. C.

VIRIDITY, s. [viridis, Fr.] greenness.

VIRILE, a. [viril, Fr. virilis, from vir, Lat.] belonging to or becoming a man.

VIRILITY, s. [virilité, Fr. virilitas, Lat.] manhood; power of procreation.

VIRTUAL, a. [virtuel, Fr.] having the efficacy, though not the sensible or material part.

VIRTUALLY, ad. in effect, though not materially.

VIRTUE, s. [virtus, Lat.] a habit of acting agreeable to the rules of morality, which improves and perfects the possessor; moral goodness; moral excellence; a medicinal quality or efficacy; power; excellence; the third order of angels in the celestial hierarchy. Cardinal virtues, among moralists, are prudence, temperance, justice, and fortitude.

VIRTUELESS, a. wanting virtue; deprived of virtue; not having efficacy.

VIRTUOSO, s. [Ital.] one who affects scientific and artistic knowledge; a miscellaneous collector.

VIRTUOUS, a. [virtus, Lat.] morally good; chaste; efficacious; having medicinal qualities.

VIRTUOUSLY, ad. in a virtuous manner; according to the rules of virtue.

VIRTUOUSNESS, *s. the state or character of being virtuous.
VIRULENCE, s. acrimony of temper; malignity; bitterness; mental poison.*

VIRULENT, a. [virulentus, from virus, Lat.] poisonous; venomous; poisoned in mind; bitter; malignant.

VIRULENTLY, ad. malignantly; with bitterness.

VISAGE, (visage) s. [Fr.] the countenance, face, or look.

VISCERA, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the contents of the abdomen, consisting of the larger and smaller intestines, the bladder, &c.

VISCERAL, s. [viscerous, a. belonging to the bowels.]

To VISCERATE, v. a. to embowel, to take out the bowels.

VISCID, a. [viscidus, Lat.] glutinous; tenacious.

VISCIDITY, s. [viscosité, Fr.] clamminess; a gluish or sticking quality; glutinousness; tenacity; ripeness; glutinous substance.

VISCONTI, the name of a great Italian family of the middle ages, which plays a distinguished part in the history of the struggles for freedom amongst the Italian republics. Amongst them the following are the most celebrated individuals. Otho Visconti, archbishop of Milan, a Ghibeline, having been exiled by Napoleon della Torre, chief of the republic of Milan, returned in 1277, conquered Napoleon, and made Milan a principality, which he governed himself. Matteo Visconti, his nephew, being made captain of the people, governed it despotically, and was exiled; but being recalled by Henry VII., he resumed his absolute sovereignty. He was successful in his wars with the Guelphs, and against Philip of Valois, who had invaded Italy. Afterwards, dethroned at the papal excommunication, he abdicated, and soon after died, in 1322. Galeazzo, his son, was his successor; and he was treacherously deposed and imprisoned by Louis of Bavaria, and afterwards banished. His son, Azzo Visconti, governed as vicar to the king of Bohemia, and subsequently as an independent prince. He promoted the prosperity of the state, and beautified the city, although he completely destroyed it as a republic. He died in 1329, after a reign of 11 years. Luchino succeeded him, who was a false and ferocious, but able prince. He had the reputation of loving justice, because of his severity, and he died by poison, in 1340. John, archbishop of Milan, who had been nominally a partner of his power, then assumed the crown. He was ambitious of increasing his territory, and terrified the pope into the sale of Bologna; he menaced Florence, and would have injured it had not other wars broken out, which implicated him. He died in 1354. His 3 nephews succeeded him, one of whom was soon poisoned by his brothers Barnabas and Galeazzo. The former made himself a name by his ferocity; and once he forced two legates of the pope, who were sent to him with a bull of excommunication, to eat the bull, parchment, lead, and silken strings together. The latter was more completely Italian in the intelligence and coolness of his cruelties. Both of them strove to increase their principality, and embroiled the whole peninsula. Galeazzo died in 1378; and Gian Galeazzo, his son, took his share of the throne. This man seized his uncle, and let him die in prison in 1385. Gian Galeazzo endeavoured to subjugate the whole of Italy, and carried out the ambitious schemes of his father and his uncle to the furthest bound. He was cut short in the midst of his wars, by the plague, in 1402. He was made duke of Milan by the emperor Wenceslaus. Gian Maria, one of his sons, succeeded him. He was a mere child, and his territory was greatly lessened during his minority. This inflamed his natural cruelty to the pitch of insanity, till he was assassinated in 1412. His brother, Filippo Maria, succeeded him; and he was at the same time timid and ambitious. He regained almost all the territory his brother had lost; but his disposition led to evils almost as great as the ferocious madness of his brother, for the people at large, and prevented his trusting to his wisest counsellors and his most able generals. He thus lost some of his conquests, for his greatest commander sided with Florence against him. His last deed was to provoke Francesco Sforza against him; but he died before the fruits of that were apparent, in 1447. After the loss of Milan, the family yet retained the position they held before they obtained that principality, and in most of the Italian states were to be found nobles who boasted their descent from the house of Visconti.

VISCONTI, GIOVANNI BATTISTA ANTONIO, a celebrated Italian antiquary, who succeeded Winckelmann in his official situation at Rome, and was the chief agent in the formation of the museum, under Clement XIV. and Pius VI. He died in 1784, aged 62 years.

VISCONTI, ENNIO QUIRINO, his son, a more distinguished student of archeology. He was first a librarian of the Vatican, and afterwards he succeeded to the post his father held. He was whirled by the revolutionary storm into the provisional government, and, afterward, the consulate of Rome; and on the fall of that short-lived constitution, took refuge in France; where he was made a professor of antiquities, with a situation in the museum at the Louvre. He died in 1818, aged 67 years. His writings are on archeological subjects, and are valuable, although more accurate studies have changed the whole aspect of this branch of historic science.

VISCOUNT, (vicount) s. [vicomte, Fr.] an order or dignity next to an earl. The coronet bears 16 pearls.

VISCOUNTLESS, (vicountless) s. the wife of a viscount.

VISCOUS, a. [viscous, Lat.] sticky; glutinous; tenacious.

VISHNU, in Hindu Mythology, one of the great triad of deities, who represents the preservation and support of the universe. His history, and avatars, (or incarnations,) abound with all the usual characteristics of those legends, and in some cases are plainly allegorical.

VISIBILITY, (visibility) s. [visibilité, Fr. from video, Lat.] the quality of being seen; conspicuousness.

VISIBLE, (visible) a. [Fr. visible, Lat.] perceptible by the eye; apparent; open; conspicuous.

VISIBLY, (visibly) ad. in such a manner as to be seen or perceived.

VISION, (vision) s. [Fr. visio, Lat.] sight; the act or faculty of seeing; a supernatural appearance, spectre, or phantom.

VISIONARY, (visionary) a. imaginary; affected by phantoms, or imaginary impressions.—s. one whose imagination is disturbed.

To VISIT, (visit) v. a. [visiter, Fr. visito, Lat.] to go to see; to take a survey or inspection of.

VISIT, (visit) s. [visita, Fr.] the act of going to see another.

VISITATION, (visitation) s. [Fr.] the act of visiting; objects of visits; a survey or inspection.

VISITOR, (visitor) s. [visiteur, Fr.] one who comes to see another; one appointed to visit a monastery or religious house; one who relieves the evils of any society.

VISON, s. in Zoology, a kind of otter.

VISOR, s. used likewise visard, visar, vizard, and vizor; a mask used to disguise or disguise.

UIST, the name of two of the Western Islands of Scotland, lying S. of Lewis, and separated by the island of Benbecula. N. Uist is about 16 miles long, and 12 broad, and abounds in lochs and bays. It has some mountains of under 1000 feet high, and one of about 2000 feet. It yields a little corn, and some cattle are reared. S. Uist is about 20 miles in length, by 6 in breadth, and has numerous bays and lochs. The mountains are usually about 1000 feet high, and in some points above 2000 feet. Corn and cattle are produced. On both islands game and deer are found, and the fishing is not much attended to. They are both in Inverness-shire. Pop. N. Uist, 3788. S. Uist, 5093.

VISTA, s. [Ital.] a view or prospect through a wood, &c.; an avenue.

VISTULA, a great river of Europe, which rises in the Carpathian mountains, in Austria, crosses part of Russia, and then enters Prussia, and after a course of about 640 miles, falls into the Baltic Sea, near Dantzic. Cracow, Warsaw, Thom, &c. stand on it.

VISUAL, (visual) a. [visuel, Fr.] used in sight; belonging or conducive to sight.

VITAL, a. [vitalis, from vita, Lat.] contributing to, necessary to, or containing, life; being the seat of life; essential.

VITALITY, (vitalitas, Lat.) the property or power of subsisting in life.

VITALLY, ad. in such a manner as to give life.

VITALS, s. (without a singular,) parts necessary or essential to life.

VITELLIUS, AULUS, a Roman emperor, appointed by the German legions, which he commanded, on the death of Galba, and after defeating Otho, was acknowledged by the senate and the provinces. His debaucheries and cruelties however were so great, that the Syrian legions proclaimed Vespasian, and in the contest which ensued Vitellius was slain, in 69 A. D. He had not reigned a year, and was 57 years old.

VITEPSK, a government of Russia. It is surrounded by the governments of Smolensk, Mohilev, Minsk, Vilna, Courland, Livonia, and Pskov. It is very level, and is watered by the Dwina and several other smaller rivers. It has also several lakes. Iron, and some kinds of building and other stone are found here. Corn, fruits, timber, cattle, &c. are abundantly produced. Its trade is considerable. The capital, of the same name, stands on the Dwina, and is fortified. It has some fine buildings, and a castle of great antiquity. There is a brisk trade carried on here by means of the river. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 55. 0. N. Long. 30. 10. E. Pop. of government about 1,000,000.

VITERBO, a city of the Papal States, Italy, standing near the Arcone, at the foot of Mount Soriano. It is fortified, and has many handsome buildings. It has a good trade, being situated in the midst of a fertile country, and being a place of traffic between Tuscany and Rome. It is 42 miles from Rome. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 42. 26. N. Long. 12. 10. E.

To VITIATE, (vishiate) v. a. [vitio, from vitium, Lat.] to corrupt, debase, or spoil.

VITIATION, (vishiation) s. the act of debasing, spoiling, or deflowering; depravation; corruption.

To VITILIGATE, v. n. [vitiosus and litigo, Lat.] to detract; to cavil; to contend in law.

VITREOUS, a. [vitrum, Lat.] glass; resembling glass; consisting of glass.

VITRIFICATION, s. [Fr. vitrum and facio, Lat.] the act of turning any thing to glass by the force of fire.

To VITRIFY, v. a. [vitrifier, Fr.] to turn to glass.—v. n. to become glass.

VITRIOL, OIL OF, s. the common name for sulphuric acid. Blue vitriol, the common name for the sulphate of the protoxide of copper. Green vitriol, the common name for the sulphate of the protoxide of iron. White vitriol, the common name for the sulphate of the oxide of zinc.

VITRIOLATED, part. in Chemistry, impregnated with vitriol.

VITRIOLIC, ad. [vitriolicus, Fr.] resembling vitriol; containing vitriol.

VITRUVIUS, M. POLLIO, the celebrated Roman writer on architecture, of whom little more is known than that he lived in the times of Julius and Augustus Cæsar, immediately before the Christian era. His work is simply entitled On Architecture, and, as was commonly the case in days when the boundaries of the sciences were not rigidly defined, and as is ever the case when a writer is stored with various knowledge, and of a communicative disposition, it contains much curious information on other points beside the chief subject.

VITULINE, a. [vitulus, Lat.] of, or belonging to, a calf.

VITUPERATION, s. [vitupero, Lat.] blame; censure.

VIVACIOUS, (vivacious) a. [vivax, from vivo, Lat.] long-lived; sprightly; active; gay; lively.

VIVACIOUSNESS, (vivaciousness) s. [vivacitas, Fr. vivacitas, Lat.] sprightliness; liveliness; briskness; longevity.

VIVENCY, s. [vivo, Lat.] manner of supporting or continuing life, or vegetation.

VIVES, LUDOVICUS, a Spanish scholar and writer of the 16th century. He studied at Paris and Louvain, and afterwards resided for some time in England, as tutor to the Princess Mary. He was imprisoned by Henry VIII. when he showed that he remained steadfast in his respect for the unhappy Catharine of Aragon; and after his release returned to the continent, and finally settled near Brussels, where he died in 1541, aged 48 years. His works are numerous, and are amongst the most valuable of those of that period to the scholar.

VIVID, a. [vividus, Lat.] lively; quick; striking.

VIVIDLY, ad. with quickness; with strength.

VIVIDNESS, s. liveliness; briskness; vigour.

To VIVIFICATE, v. a. [vivus and facio, Lat.] to quicken or give life. In Chemistry, to recover from such a change of form as seems to destroy the essential properties.

VIVIFICATION, s. [Fr.] the act of enlivening or quickening.

To VIVIFY, v. a. [vivifier, Fr.] to quicken or enliven; to animate.

VIVIPAROUS, a. [vivus and pario, Lat.] bringing forth its young alive, opposed to oviparous. In Botany, applied to stems or stalks producing bulbs that are capable of vegetation. In toothwort and star of Bethlehem, they are found at the base of the leaves; in small bistort, on the lower part of the spike; in some species of garlic, at the origin of the bundle of flowers; and on the spikes of some of the grasses, as in the cat's-tail canary.

VIVIANI, VINCENIO, an eminent mathematician of Italy, of the 17th century. He was instructed by Galileo and Torricelli, and was chief engineer to the Grand Duke of Tuscany. His reputation brought him invitations and honours from most of the countries of Europe; but he remained in Florence all his life, and died in 1703, aged 81 years. He completed the works of some ancient geometers, which were partly lost, and wrote other valuable works.

VIXEN, s. [old feminine of fox,] a woman who is both subtle and abusive; a froward child.

VIZ-, [the contraction of videlicet, Lat.] to wit; that is.

VIZIER, s. [weezir, Turk.] the prime minister of the Turkish empire.

VLADIMIR, a government of Russia, lying in the midst of the governments of Moscow, Tver, Jaroslav, Costroma, Nischnei-Novgorod, and Riasan. It is a vast level, the surface being varied, but not broken, by a few hills. The Oka and numerous smaller rivers water it; lakes and morasses are also numerous. It yields iron, and several kinds of useful earth and stone. Corn, fruits, and timber, cattle, &c. &c. are tolerably abundant. There are in the towns many kinds of valuable manufactures, but the trade is not so good as increased facilities of transport would make it. Vladimir, its capital, stands on one of the chief rivers, called the Chliasma, and is a curious relic of ancient Muscovy, most of its fine buildings being older than the empire. Pop. about 35,000. Lat. 56. 5. N. Long. 40. 5. E. Pop. of government, about 1,500,000.

ULCER, s. [ulcers, Fr. ulcus, Lat.] in Surgery, an open sore, or abscess, arising from local inflammation. Figuratively, an evil of long standing.

To ULCERATE, v. a. [ulcero, Lat.] to affect with sores or ulcers.

ULCERATION, s. [Fr. ulceratio, Lat.] the act of breaking out in sores or ulcers.

ULCEROUS, a. [ulcerosus, Lat.] belonging to or full of sores or ulcers.

ULIGINOUS, (g soft), a. [uliginosus, from uligo, Lat.] slimy; muddy.

ULIAGE, s. in Gauging, so much of a cask, or other vessel, as it wants of being full.

ULLOA, ANTONIO DE, a Spanish mathematician of the last century. He was one of those sent to measure a degree of the meridian in Peru, by the Spanish government. He was there ten years, and was taken prisoner by the British as he was returning. He received due honour when he reached Spain; and after various miscellaneous engagements, was for a short time governor of Louisiana, and then a naval commander; but he had too little of practical talent for these posts, and narrowly escaped disgrace. He died in 1795, aged 79 years. He wrote an account of the expedition in S. America, and beside it several other works.

ULLM, a town of Württemberg, in Germany. It stands on the Danube, at the junction of two other streams, and has five bridges, one being a handsome stone bridge over the Danube. It is walled, and has some fine buildings, of which the cathedral is especially worthy of note. It is a place of considerable manufacturing industry, and a brisk trade. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 48. 24. N. Long. 9. 53. E.

ULPHILAS, a bishop of the Goths of Mesia, of the 4th century. He holds a distinguished place in his age and nation; and having invented an alphabet for the people, he translated the whole of the Scriptures into the Gothic language (except the Books of Kings). He was employed on several embassies to the emperor, and effected the pacific settlement of 200,000 Goths in the empire, and under the Roman laws. It is hardly doubtful that he was an Arian. He died in about 385 A. D.

ULPIAN, or DOMITUS ULPIANUS, a Roman jurist. He was tutor and minister to the Emperor Alexander Severus, and by him made pretorian prefect. His soldiers murdered him in the palace in 228 A. D. His works are chiefly valuable to students of law and jurisprudence.

ULSTER, a province of Ireland, lying on St. George's Channel, the Northern Ocean, the Atlantic Ocean, and bounded by Leinster and Connaught. It is about 116 miles long, and 100 broad. Ulster is mountainous, abounds with lakes, and is generally fertile. Its rivers are the Bann, the Foyle, &c. It is the most prosperous and civilized district of the whole island, abounding with signs of beneficial Saxon influence. It is also the seat of the chief linen manufactures. It contains the counties of Antrim, Donegal, Londonderry, Tyrone, Fermanagh, Monaghan, Cavan, Armagh, and Down. Pop. 2,386,373.

ULTERIOR, a. [Lat.] farther.

ULTIMATE, a. [ultimus, Lat.] intended as an end; last in a train of consequences; final; last.

ULTIMATELY, ad. in the last consequence.

ULTRAMARINE, a. [ultra and mare, Lat.] from beyond sea; being beyond sea; foreign; transmarine.

ULTRAMARINE, s. among painters, the finest sort of blue colour, produced from the calcination of lapis lazuli. It may be made by heating sulphuret of sodium with a mixture of silicic acid and alumina.

ULTRONEOUS, a. [ultra, Lat.] spontaneous; voluntary.

ULUGH-BEIGH, a Tatar prince, whose name was really Mohammed Taragai, of the 15th century, who greatly promoted the study of astronomy by erecting an observatory, and encouraging mathematical study and writing at Samarcand. The works which he procured thus to be written, have been of some service to astronomy, and are translated into English. He was assassinated by one of his sons in 1449.

ULULATION, s. [ululo, Lat.] the act of howling like a dog or wolf.

ULYSSES, (in Greek, ODUSSEUS,) one of the Grecian heroes who took part in the Trojan war. He was king of Ithaca, and would have avoided the fulfilment of the oath by which he was bound to avenge the rape of Helen. During the war, he distinguished himself by his bravery, and still more by his prudence in council. It was he who, with Diomedes, carried off the Palladium. He made the famous horse. He secured the arms of Achilles, after the death of that famous warrior. Returning from Troy, he was driven about to various lands, for ten more years, and at length arrived to find his wife Penelope, a pattern of constancy, beset with suitors, whom he, with his son, slew. He is always spoken of in the legends as the friend of Athene, and is called, customarily, in the Homeric poems, polymetis, the many-counselled. Of the actual existence and adventures of this king we have no means of judging.

UMBELLIFEROUS, a. in Botany, applied to those plants that are gathered into umbels or rundles. See RUNDLE.

UMBELS, s. in Botany, the round tufts or heads of certain plants set thick together, and all of the same height.

UMBER, UMBRE, s. in Painting, a kind of earth, which contains a large proportion of the oxides of iron and manganese, and makes a rich brown pigment.

UMBILICAL, a. [umbilicus, Lat.] pertaining to the navel.

UMBRAGE, s. [umbra, Lat.] a shade; a screen of trees; a shadow; resentment, offence, suspicion of injury.

UMBRAGEOUS, a. [umbragius, Fr.] shady; yielding shade.

UMBRAGEOUSNESS, s. shadowiness.

UMBRELLA, s. [umbrella, Ital.] a portable defence against rain, made of cotton or silk fastened to ribs, which expand into a circular canopy around the handle by which it is carried. It is made of various materials in other countries, and is used as a screen from the sun. See PARASOL.

UMPIRAGE, s. the power of deciding a controversy; the power of an umpire; arbitration.

UMPIRE, s. an arbitrator; one chosen to decide a dispute.

UN, in Composition, implies negation, contrariety, and dissolution, or the not being so and so, together with the destroying of something already done.

UNABASHED, a. not confounded; not ashamed.

UNABLE, a. wanting ability; weak; impotent.

UNACQULVED, a. not freed; not acquitted.

UNACCEPTABLE, a. unpleasing; disagreeable; not welcome.

UNACCEPTED, a. not received.

UNACCOUNTABLE, a. inexplicable; unreasonable; not to be accounted for; irregular; not to be controlled.

UNACCOUNTABLENESS, s. unreasonableness; intricacy.

UNACCOUNTABLY, ad. strangely.

UNACQUOTED, a. not used; not habituated; unusual.

UNACQUAINTED, a. ignorant; not knowing.

UNACTIVE, a. idle; sluggish; without employment; not brisk; not busy; having no efficacy.

UNADVISED, a. rash; without thinking or deliberating; imprudent; indiscreet.

UNAFFECTED, a. free from affectation; real; natural; open; candid; sincere; not mentally touched.

UNAFFECTEDLY, ad. really; without any attempt to produce false appearances.

UNAFFECTING, a. not interesting; not touching the passions; not pathetic.

UNAIDED, a. unassisted; not helped.

UNALIENABLE, a. not to be made over to another; not transferable.

UNALTERABLE, a. fixed; settled; not to be altered; unchangeable; immutable.

UNALTERABLY, ad. unchangeably; immutably.

UNALTERED, a. not changed; unchangeable.

UNAMIALE, a. disagreeable; not to be desired.

UNANIMITY, s. [unanimité, Fr. from unus and anima, Lat.] concord; agreement; conformity; or union of sentiments.

UNANIMOUS, a. of one mind; agreeing in opinion.

UNANIMOUSLY, ad. with one mind.

UNANSWERABLE, a. that cannot be denied or answered; not to be refuted.

UNANSWERED, a. not confuted; not opposed by a reply.

UNAPPROACHABLE, a. not to be come near; inaccessible.

UNARMED, a. without defence, or armour; disarmed.

UNASKED, a. not required; not sought.

UNASSISTED, a. not helped.

UNATTAINABLE, a. not to be come at, or obtained.

UNATTEMPTED, a. never tried at; not assayed.

UNATTENDED, a. having no attendants; unaccompanied; forsaken.

UNAVOIDABLE, a. not to be prevented; inevitable.

UNAVOIDABLY, ad. inevitably.

UNAWARE, UNAWARES, ad. unexpected; not looked for; suddenly.

To UNBAR, v. a. to remove the bolt of a door; to unbolt.

UNBECOMING, a. not consistent with decency and good manners; indecorous; indelicate; unsuitable.

UNBELIEF, a. incredulity; irreligion.

UNBELIEVER, s. an infidel; one that does not believe in the gospel.

UNBELIEVING, a. difficult to be convinced; incredulous; diffident; infidel.

To UNBEND, v. a. to loosen or slacken; to relax; to remit; to ease; to refresh the mind. To unbend a cable, is, among mariners, to take it from the anchor.

UNBENEVOLENT, a. unfriendly; unkind.

UNBEWAILED, a. unlamented.

UNBIASED, a. unprejudiced; impartial.

UNBID, UNBIDDEN, a. not desired; uninvited; spontaneous; uncommanded.

UNBLAMABLE, a. innocent; irreproachable; inculpable.

UNBLAMABLY, ad. without taint or fault.

UNBORN, a. not yet born; future.

To UNBOLT, v. a. to set open; to unbar.

To UNBOSOM, v. n. to lay open one's mind; to disclose.

UNBOUND, a. loose; wanting a cover, used of books.

UNBOUND, a. unrestrained; having no bounds; unlimited; infinite; interminable.

UNBURI, a. not interred; not honoured with the rites of funeral.

To UNBUTTON, v. a. to loose any thing buttoned.

UNCANONICAL, a. in the Churches of Rome and England, not agreeing with the canons.

To UNCEASE, v. a. to take out of a case; to skin; to flay.

UNCERTAIN, a. doubtful; unsettled.

UNCERTAINTY, s. doubtfulness; contingency; something unknown.

UNCHANGEABLE, a. immutable.

UNCHANGEABLY, ad. without change.

UNCHARITABLE, a. void of charity.

UNCHARITABLY, ad. in a manner contrary to charity.

UNCHASTE, a. lewd; libidinous; not continent.

UNCIAL, (uncial) a. of an inch in length. It is applied to those ancient MSS. and inscriptions which are written wholly in capital letters, in opposition to such as are written in small letters, for the most part, with capitals used after the modern fashion, which are called cursive.

UNCIRCUMCISED, a. not circumcised.

UNCIRCUMCISION, s. omission of circumcision; state of not being circumcised.

UNCIVIL, a. impolite; not agreeable to the rules of complaisance.

UNCLE, (unkel) s. [oncle, Fr.] the father or mother's brother.

UNCLEAN, (unklen) a. foul; lecherous; polluted.

UNCLEANNESS, s. want of cleanliness; lewdness; incontinence.

UNCLOUDED, a. free from clouds; not obscured.

UNCOMFORTABLE, a. affording no comfort; gloomy; melancholy.

UNCOMMON, a. not usual; not frequent.

UNCONCERNED, a. having no interest; not anxious.

UNCONDEMNED, a. not condemned.

UNCONNECTED, a. not coherent; lax; loose; vague.

UNCONSCIOUS, a. having no mental perception; unacquainted; unknowing.

UNCONSUMED, a. not wasted; not destroyed by any wasting power.

UNCONVERTED, a. unchanged; in its primitive condition; not having the affections turned towards God.

To UNCOVER, v. a. to strip of a covering; to deprive of clothes; to strip off the roof; to show openly.

UNCOUTH, (unkoth) a. [uncouth, Sax.] odd; strange; unusual; unaccustomed.

UNCOUTHNESS, (unkothness) s. oddness; strangeness.

UNCTION, (unkhon) s. [unction, Fr.] the act of anointing, or rubbing with oil or other fatty matter. Extreme unction, is a sacrament of the Roman Catholic Church, for those who are dying, as a viaticum, or security for their salvation. It consists in anointing the dying person with oil, accompanied by certain prayers, &c.

UNCTUOUS, a. [unctueux, Fr.] fat; clammy; oily.

UNCULTIVATED, a. [in and colo, Lat.] untilld; not improved; uncivilized; not civilized; not instructed.

UNDAUNTED, a. not frightened; firm; resolute.

UNDAUNTEDNESS, s. intrepidity; courage.

UNDECAGON, (undecain, Lat. and gone, Gr.) a figure of eleven sides and angles.

To UNDECEIVE, v. a. to free from the influence of a fallacy.

UNDEFEATIBLE, a. such as cannot be denied.

UNDER, prep. [Sax.] in a state of subjection to; beneath; below; in the state of; in a less degree than; with the show or appearance of; in a state of oppression or depression by; in a state of protection; in a state of subordination; for less than; attested by.

UNDER, ad. in a state of subjection; less, opposed to over or more; inferior; subordinate. In the last sense it is generally used in composition.

UNDERBEARER, s. in funerals, those that sustain the weight of the body, distinct from those who are bearers of ceremony, and only hold up the pall.

UNDERCLERK, s. a clerk under the principal clerk.

To UNDERGO, v. a. to suffer; to sustain; to pass through.

UNDERHAND, ad. in a secret and clandestine manner.

UNDERHAND, a. secret; clandestine.

UNDERLING, s. an inferior agent; a mean person.

To UNDERMINE, v. a. to make hollow underneath; to circumvent; to supplant.

UNDERMINER, s. he that saps; a clandestine enemy.

UNDERMOST, a. lowest in state, condition, or place.

UNDERNEATH, (underneath) ad. below; beneath.

UNDERPLOT, s. in Dramatic Poetry, a by-plot, a subordinate intrigue; a clandestine scheme.

To UNDER-RATE, v. a. to undervalue.

To UNDERSELL, v. a. to sell for less than the worth; to defeat by selling cheaper.

UNDERSHERIFF, s. the deputy of the sheriff.

To UNDERSTAND, v. a. preter. undertook; [understandan, Sax.] to have a perfect knowledge or proper idea of; to comprehend or conceive.—v. n. to be informed.

UNDERSTANDING, s. popularity, knowledge; judgment; correspondence; skill; terms of communication. In Metaphysics, that faculty of man which judges according to sense. It is found in the lower orders of animals, in a less developed form, as instinct, and may be traced in the vital functions of the bodily organs, which act, as an inferior agent; all of which are characterized by the adaptation of means to ends; the ends being proposed to them, and not discovered by them. The understanding has to do with the reports of the senses, which it treats according to its own laws or forms. It is thus distinguished from reason, which is the faculty of the super-sensual, and is the source of spiritual truth in man. Logic, as generally expounded, is the organ of the understanding, and therefore is inapplicable to the truths of reason. See INSTINCT, REASON, &c.

To UNDERTAKE, v. a. pret. undertook, past part. undertaken; to attempt; to engage in; to engage with, or attack.—v. n. to assume any business or province; to venture; to promise or warrant, after dare.

UNDERTAKING, s. a design formed; enterprise; attempt; engagement.

UNDERTREASURER, s. an officer subordinate to the treasurer, who is to chest up the king's treasure, and see it carried to the treasury.

To UNDERVALE, v. a. to value less than a thing is worth.

UNDERVALUER, s. one who esteems lightly.

UNDERWENT, the pret. of To UNDERGO.

UNDERWOOD, s. any wood that is not reckoned timber; coppice.

To UNDERWORK, v. a. to work cheaper; to labour less than enough; to supplant.

To UNDERWRITE, v. a. to write under something else.

UNDERWRITER, s. in Commerce, one who undertakes to insure goods, ships, &c. for a stipulated premium.

UNDESIRABLE, a. not merited; not incurred by fault.

UNDESIGNING, (undesinting) a. well meaning; honest; sincere; guiltless.

UNDAPHANOUS, a. not pellucid; not transparent.

UNDISCIPLINED, a. not reduced to order; not trained; not taught.

UNDIVIDED, a. unbroken; whole; not parted.

To UNDO, v. a. preter. undid, past part. undone; to ruin; to destroy; to loose; to unravel; to change.

UNDOUBTEDLY, ad. without doubt.

UNDRESS, s. a loose or negligent dress.

UNDUE, a. not right; not agreeable to duty.

To UNDULATE, v. a. [undulo, from unda, Lat.] to make to roll like waves; to drive backward and forward.—v. n. to play as waves in curls.

UNDULATION, s. [undulation, Fr.] a waving motion.

UNDULATORY, a. proceeding in waves, or undulations. It is employed to designate a particular theory in optics, which represents light to be caused by certain undulations in an ether every where diffused, instead of in the emission of lucifer particles from the luminous body. It is now generally received, although the recent discoveries in photography make it plain that it is very imperfect as a theory of light.

UNDUTIFUL, UNDU'TE'OUS, a. disobedient; rebellious; behaving with irreverence; not performing duty.

UNDUTIFULNESS, s. disobedience; behaviour inconsistent with the respect we owe our superiors or parents.

UNEASINESS, (uneasiness) s. inconvenience; trouble; disquiet; perplexity.

UNEASY, a. painful; disturbed; peevish.

UNEQUAL, a. not equal; not even; disproportionate.

UNEQUALLED, a. unparalleled; unrivalled in excellence.

UNEERRING, a. committing no mistake; incapable of error.

UNEVEN, a. not even; not level; not equal.

UNEXAMPLED, a. not known by any precedent.

UNEXCEPTABLE, (unexceptable) a. irreplicable; not liable to objection.

UNEXPECTED, a. not thought on; sudden; not provided against.

UNFAIR, a. not honest; disingenuous.

UNFAITHFUL, a. perfidious; treacherous; impious.

UNEIGNED, a. not feigned; not hypocritical; sincere.

UNEINGLEDLY, ad. without hypocrisy; sincerely.

To UNFOLD, v. a. to expand; to spread; to display; to open; to explain; to tell; discover; reveal.

UNFREQUENTED, a. rarely visited; rarely entered.

UNGRADUATION, s. wickedness; neglect of God.

UNGRADUALLY, a. negligent of God and his will; impious; wicked; irreligious.

UNGUENT, s. [unguo, to anoint, Lat.] ointment.

UNHAPPY, a. miserable; distressed; calamitous.

UNHOLY, a. profane; impious; wicked.

UNHURT, a. free from harm.

UNI, [Lat.] in Composition, implies one, or single.

UNICORN, s. [unus and cornu, Lat.] a beast that has only one horn; likewise a bird. It is commonly employed to denote a fabulous beast, having the body of a horse, the tail and mane of a lion, the feet of a stag, and a single horn, proceeding from its forehead, in form like that of the archale.

UNIFORM, a. [unus and forma, Lat.] regular; even; having all forms alike.

UNIFORM, s. a dress peculiar to the different corps of an army.

UNIFORMITY, s. [uniformité, Fr.] even tenor; conformity; agreement in all its parts; the same shape and fashion.

UNIFORMLY, ad. regularly; after one manner.

UNIFORMED, a. untaught; not instructed.

UNINHABITED, a. having no dwellers.

UNION, s. [Fr. from unus, Lat.] the act of joining two or more, so as to make them one; concord; conjunction. In English History, it is applied to the acts of parliament, incorporating first England and Scotland under one crown, and next Great Britain and Ireland.

UNISON, s. [unus and sonus, Lat.] a string that is in the same sound with another; a single unvaried note.

UNIT, s. [unitas, from unus, Lat.] one; the name of the last place on the right hand in the numeration of integers.

UNITARIAN, s. one who professes Unitarianism.

UNITARIANISM, s. in Theology, the system of doctrine, of which the principal feature is the denial of the Divinity of the Saviour, and of the Spirit. It is ostensibly built on the absolute unity of God, a dogma which every true theology must needs contain. Its actual foundation can only be discovered by a closer examination of its other doctrines, and of the arguments by which they are supported. It excludes both sin, and redemption or atonement; and its main argument is, that what is incomprehensible is not to be believed. Thus it is purely an intellectual system, for the understanding alone comprehends; and it is an unspiritual system, for super-sensual and eternal truths can never be comprehended. Consistently, it is developed a priori, and not from the real or experimental knowledge of religion. Sin is a fact only for a spiritual mind; and if there is no such thing as sin, there can be no redemption, nor any Redeemer; so that Jesus can be regarded only as a teacher, as a martyr (witness to death) to what he taught; and his resurrection (which is received, inconsistently as it respects the system, but consistently as to its argumentative foundation, for it is an undeniable fact) has a greater worth for us than his life or his death, for it proves the immortality of man. The textual evidences alleged, as is usually the case in polemics, are but supports to foregone conclusions, and need not to be referred to here. Very valuable treatises have been written in defence of the Duty of Christ, but it is impossible by any weight of scriptural learning, or strength of logical reasoning, to establish that truth, as if it were a fact, for the heart, which can only know spiritually. The history of Unitarianism is a sufficient reply to it as a system, and the rapid spread amongst the teachers of this system of the revived spiritual philosophy, may awaken brighter hopes respecting the ultimate abandonment of it as a religious system, than the most satisfactory proof that its detached doctrines are untenable by any who know God, and study the Scriptures as a revelation of his will for man. It is customary, amongst the adherents of this system, to claim as its peculiar and distinguished sign, freedom of inquiry after truth;—but, though Servetus was burnt by Calvin, and other Unitarians by other Trinitarians, and the annals of martyrdom do not display one case in which the parties were reversed, there is nothing in this system; any more than in any other, which makes this, which is a God-given right and privilege of man, its special attribute. And this is made convincingly clear, by the habit, which these writers share with those they reprobate, of judging respecting the spirit of the search by the conclusion arrived at by the inquirer.

To UNITE, v. a. to join so as to make one; to make to agree; to join.—v. n. to concur; to coalesce; to grow into one.

UNITED BRETHREN. See MORAVIANS, &c.

UNITED STATES OF NORTH AMERICA, a great federal Republic of the New World, whose territories stretch from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, and from the Gulf of Mexico to the lakes and the river St. Lawrence; and which is bounded by the British Possessions, and by the United States of Mexico. This vast tract of country is about 3000 miles in length, and about 1700 miles in breadth; and embraces every variety of physical feature and climate. It has two great ranges of mountains; the Rocky Mountains, which run parallel to the Pacific Ocean; and the Alleghanies, which run in a bold curve through the principal States between the Mississippi and the Atlantic. The general height of the latter is about 2000 or 3000 feet, while there are peaks exceeding 6000. The general height of the former is about 9000 feet, with points that are estimated at about 20,000 feet in elevation above the sea. There are smaller ranges; but most of the remainder of the country may be described as consisting of vast undulating plains. It is watered by vast rivers, of which the greatest are the Mississippi, the Missouri, the Ohio, the Columbia, &c. Michigan and Champlain are its largest lakes. It shares with Great Britain the possession of the Lakes Superior, Huron, &c. Its principal coast features are the promontories of Florida and California; Capes Ann, Cod, Charles, Hatteras, St. Lucas, &c.; Rhode Island, Long Island, and Albemarle and Pamlico Islands; the Gulfs of Florida and California, and Chesapeake, Delaware, Massachusetts and Penobscot Bays. It is rich in all manner of mineral treasure; and its soil is generally fertile; whilst its climate allows all the growths of the temperate zone, with much of a tropical character to be cultivated. In manufactures and trade it stands second only to England. And the development of the wealth and capabilities of the soil, &c. is constantly advancing with the increase of its population, and of every other stimulus to production and commerce. Its government is a federal republic, each State being under its own laws, &c.; and the interests of the whole being managed by a general congress, a senate, and a president. There are now 28 constituted States, a district called Columbia, round the seat of congress, and 4 or 5 territories in which settlements are being begun, or being spread, the germs of numerous other States. Of these, 14 States and the district of Columbia, all lying in the S., are Slave States; the rest have more legalized slavery, although in only a few of them it is clearly illegal, and in almost all, the general prejudice of the citizens is against the coloured races. Religion is, throughout the Union, left to the maintenance of its professors; and, excepting the inconsistent prejudice of colour, all are free citizens, enjoying equally their political rights and privileges. The activity of the people is to be seen in the canals, railroads, banks, &c. which abound in all parts of the States; and not less in the numberless colleges and academical institutions. Yet the W. regions of the States, between the Atlantic and the Mississippi, are covered by vast tracts of forest and prairie; and W. of that river the land is only in sparsely scattered spots redeemed by cultivation. Buffaloes in immense herds, a species of panther, deer, alligators, and other wild animals abound. But the gradual spread of the settlements lessens their numbers continually. It is profoundly to be regretted, that the aborigines of the continent are disappearing in the same manner, and almost by the same means. Washington is the seat of government. Pop. 17,002,666; of whom 2,487,113 are slaves. See the separate States, Territories, &c., INDIANS, SLAVERY, &c.

UNITEK, s. the person or thing that unites.

UNITY, s. [unitas, from unus, Lat.] the state of being but one; concord; conjunction; uniformity.

UNIVERSAL, a. [universus, Lat.] general; catholic; extending to all; total; whole; comprising all particulars.—s. in Logic, applied to a proposition, which includes every particular of the things it relates to, whether affirmative or negative.

UNIVERSALITY, s. [universalité, Fr.] not particularity; extension to the whole.

UNIVERSE, s. [univers, Fr.] the whole system of created being and things.

UNIVERSITY, s. [université, Fr.] a collection of colleges, where all the liberal arts are taught.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, Oxford, was founded in the 13th century, on a still older foundation. It is a very wealthy institution, and has a fine range of buildings. A college of the same name belongs to London University, and was first called by that name. It is constituted on a different plan from the old colleges, being, in fact, a proprietary institution. Lectures are given here to extensive classes on all the subjects of a scientific, legal, medical, and literary education; and it has proved of the greatest value to those classes which are excluded, by diversity of creed, from the colleges of Cambridge and Oxford. An excellent junior school is connected with it, under the superintendence of one or more of the college professors.

UNIVOCAL, a. [unus and vox, Lat.] having but one meaning; regular; certain; not equivocal.

UNJUST, a. [injusto, Fr. from in and justus, Lat.] iniquitous; contrary to justice.

TO UNKEENNEL, v. a. in Hunting, to drive or force from a hole or retreat.

UNKIND, a. not benevolent; not favourable.

UNKINDNESS, s. malignity; ill-will.

UNKNOWN, a. not known; greater than is imagined.

TO UNLACE, v. a. to undq a lace. To unlace a covey, in carving, is to cut it up.

UNLAWFUL, a. contrary to law; illegal.

UNLEAVENED, a. not fermented or leavened.

UNLESS, conj. except; if not.

UNLUCKY, a. unfortunate; ill-omened; inauspicious.

UNMERECIFUL, a. cruel; exorbitant; severe.

UNMINDFUL, a. not heedful; negligent.

TO UNMOOR, v. a. among mariners, to weigh anchor, in order to put to sea.

UNNECESSARY, a. needless; useless.

UNPARALLELED, a. not matched; not to be matched; having no equal.

UNPRECEDENTED, a. not justifiable by an example.

UNPROFITABLE, a. useless; serving no purpose.

UNRECLAIMED, a. not reformed; unturned. In Falconry, untamed; wild.

UNRIGHTEOUS, (unrighteous), a. wicked; sinful; unjust.

UNRIGHTEOUSNESS, s. wickedness; injustice.

UNSAVOURY, a. tasteless; fetid; disgusting; ill-tasted.

UNSEARCHABLE, a. inscrutable; not to be explored.

UNSEASONABLE, (unseasonable) a. not suitable to time or occasion; unfit; untimely; ill-timed; late; as, unseasonable time of night.

UNSEMLY, a. unbecoming; indecent.—ad. unbecomingly.

UNSKILFUL, a. wanting art or knowledge.

UNSTEADY, (unsteady) a. inconstant; variable.

UNTERWALDEN, a canton of Switzerland, one of the forest cantons. It is bounded by the cantons of Uri, Berne, Lucerne, and Schwitz. It is of very limited extent. Some of its heights reach 10,000 feet above the sea. It is watered by small streams, and borders on the lake of the forest cantons. The grazing of sheep and cattle is its chief source of wealth; and corn, wine, dairy produce, timber, &c. are its articles of trade. Sarnen is its chief town. Pop. about 25,000.

UNTHANKFUL, a. ungrateful.

UNTIL, ad. to the time that; to the place that; to the degree that.

UNTO, prep. See To.

TO UNTRUSS, v. a. to ungird or untie.

UNWARY, a. imprudent; hasty; incautious; heedless.

UNWHOLESOME, a. insalubrious; tainted; corrupt.

UNWORTHY, a. wanting merit; not adequate; unbecoming; mean.

VOCABULARY, s. [vocabularium, Fr. vocabularium, from vox, Lat.] a book containing a collection of words with their explanations, or a word-book, or lexicon.

VOCAL, a. [Fr. vocalis, Lat.] having a voice; uttered or sounded by the voice.

VOCATION, s. [Fr. from voco, Lat.] a summons; a trade, employment; the secret calling of God to any particular office.

VOCATIVE, s. in Grammar, that form of a noun which is used in direct address.

VOCIFERATION, s. [vox and fero, Lat.] clamour; outcry.

VOGUE, (vogue) s. [Fr.] fashion; mode; general custom.

VOICE, s. [vox, Lat.] the sound produced by the larynx, whether for speech, song, exclamation, &c.; a vote; suffrage; opinion. In Grammar, the forms by which is expressed, the relation of the action of a verb to its subject. The active form indicates the subject to be the agent, as I praise;—the passive, that it is the recipient, as I am praised;—and the reflexive, (of some languages,) that it is agent and recipient at once, as I praise myself.

VOID, a. [vide, Fr.] empty; vacant; containing nothing; vain or ineffectual; null; vacuous; unsupplied, or having no possessor; destitute of substance; unreal.

VOID, a. empty space; vacancy; vacuum.

TO VOID, v. a. [voider, Fr.] to quit or leave empty; to vacate; to emit or pour out; to annul or nullify.

VOIDER, s. a basket or trough in which meat and other things are carried from table.

VOITURE, VINCENT, a distinguished French writer, of the 17th century. He studied at Paris; and obtained, chiefly through the reputation he acquired at the outset of his career, a subordinate situation in the ministry. He travelled; and wrote pieces in verse and prose, with ever-increasing celebrity; and held an office in the royal household at last. He died in 1648, aged 50. He is one of the French classics; and is to be ranked amongst those who have aided in forming the French language.

VOLANT, a. [Fr. volans, from volo, Lat.] flying or passing through the air; nimble.

VOLATILE, a. [volatilis, from volo, Lat.] flying or passing through the air; spirituous, or dissipating in the air; lively, fickle.

VOLATILIZATION, s. the act of making volatile.

VOLCANIC, a. connected with or thrown up from a volcano.

VOLCA/NO, s. [Ital.] in Geology, a mountain upheaved by the expansive force of fused matter which is thrown up through its hollow summit, (called the crater), with fragments of rock, ashes, &c. &c., with fire, smoke, lightning, &c. For descriptions of particular volcanoes, see ÆTNA, HÆCLA, VESUVIUS, STROMBOLI, &c. See also, LAVA, PUMICE, &c.

VOLE, s. [Fr.] in Gaming, a stake wherein a person plays alone, and undertakes to win all the tricks.

VOLGA, the largest river in Europe, which has its source in two small lakes, in the government of Pleskof, in Russia, about 80 miles W. of Tver. It begins to be navigable a few miles above that town. It receives the waters of many large streams at different parts of its course, and flows through some of the finest provinces in the Russian empire; and passing by Yaroslav, Costroma, Nishnei-Novgorod, Casan, Simbirsk, and Saratov, enters the Caspian Sea, by several mouths, below Astracan. It is about 2000 miles in length.

VOLHY/RIA, a government of Russia, lying next to Austria, and bounded by Podolia, Kiev, Minsk, and Grodno. It is generally level, but has in the S. part ranges of mountains, with heights of 1000 feet. It is watered by the Dnieper and its tributaries, and has several lakes. It yields some kinds of building and other stone, but agriculture is its great source of wealth, corn, fruits, wine, timber, cattle, &c. being produced in great abundance. It has several valuable kinds of manufactures, and a good trade. Zytmistr is its capital. Pop. about 2,000,000.

VOLITION, s. [volō, Lat.] the act of willing; inclination; the power of choice exerted.

VOLLEY, s. [volée, Fr.] a discharge or flight of shot; a burst; emission of many at a time.

VOLNEY, CONSTANTINE FRANÇOIS CHASSEBŒUF, COMTE DE, a celebrated French writer of the last and the beginning of the present centuries. He studied first at Angers, and afterwards in the medical schools of Paris. Instead, however, of practising, he travelled in Egypt and the East. After his return, he was drawn into the vortex of the Revolution, the only advantages of which to him at first were, appointments in Corsica, and imprisonment in the Terror. After the fall of Robespierre he was made professor of history in the normal school, and next year went to America. He was honoured in various ways by Buonaparte, but gradually withdrew from his public life, and on the restoration of the Bourbons was raised to the peerage. He died in 1820, aged 63 years. His chief book is called the Ruins of Empires, and is an attack on Christianity in the style then in fashion. It is a remarkable book in one respect, that it confirms, by testimony the most unimpeachable, the fulfilment of the ancient prophecies respecting many eastern nations. His other works are numerous, and he was not deficient in learning.

VOLOGDA, a government of Russia, bounded by those of Novgorod, Olonetz, Archangel, Tobolsk, Perm, Viatka, Costroma, and Yaroslav. It is generally level, but the Uralian chain runs along its E. border. The Vdrina and other large rivers water it, and there are several lakes. It yields iron, copper, with other metals, building-stone, &c. &c. Corn, cattle, timber, &c. &c. constitute its agricultural wealth. Its trade is good, although all inland; and it has some manufactures. Vologda, its capital, stands on a river of the same name, and is a place of some note for industry in trade and manufactures. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 59. 17. N. Long. 40. 0. E. Pop. of government, about 1,000,000.

VOLT, VOLTE, s. in the menage, a round or circular tread; or a gait of two treads made by a horse going sideways round a centre.

VOLTA, ALESSANDRO, a celebrated natural philosopher of Italy, who was first professor at Pavia, and in that office conducted those experiments which led to such fruitful results in electrical science. He travelled in various parts of Europe, and received great honour from Napoleon, from his first invasion of Italy to his days of greatest power. The latter part of his life he spent in scientific retirement, and died in 1826, aged 81 years. His name is intimately associated with galvanic electricity, which is often called, after him, Voltaism. The voltaic pile, the electrical battery, the electrophorus, and other valuable instruments and amusing scientific toys, were invented by him.

VOLTAGRAPHY, s. [Volta and grapho, Gr.] See ELECTRO-TYPE.

VOLTAIC, a. See GALVANIC.

VOLTAIRE, FRANÇOIS MARIE AROUET DE, the great French writer of the last century. He was educated at the Jesuits' college of Louis le Grand, and at the outset of his career was introduced to the celebrated libertine, Ninon de l'Enclos, who left him a legacy for the purchase of a library. He was soon initiated into all the pleasures of Paris, being connected with the noblesse, and having the means of dissipation at command. After a short engagement in Holland, he tried the study of law, but soon relinquished it. He now began to write, and was rewarded for some of his verses by two imprisonments in the Bastille. His next step was a visit to England, which confirmed him in his opinions of civil and religious licentiousness. In a few years he commenced his intimacy with Frederick the Great of Prussia, whom he frequently visited, and once, at least, as a secret agent of the French king. His longest residence at Frederick's court was about three years. They were both too exacting to allow cordial esteem to exist between them, and the quarrel which terminated it was a scandal to both royalty and literature. At length he brought his wanderings to an end by settling at Ferney, where he continued to write against priests and kings, and to confound religion and order with them in his bitter and unscrupulous attacks. He also did not cease to quarrel with other writers, and especially with his fellow labourer, Rousseau, against whom he had long entertained a pique. Here, also, great part of his letters to Frederick, (with whom he was on friendly terms again,) to Catherine of Russia, to the Encyclopædists of Paris, and others, relating to that fond dream of his sensual heart, the overthrow of religion, were written. As a fitting close to such a restless and mischievous life, he visited Paris, and there received such honours as the French of that day alone could give to the man whom they delighted to honour. It was the apotheosis of perversity. "Stiffed with roses," as he said, he sank, and shortly after died, in 1778, aged 84 years. He was buried with all the accustomed ceremonies of the church, on the ground of a profession of the Catholic faith, written (apparently) with a view to this. At the Revolution his ashes were transferred to the Pantheon. His works are very numerous, and consist of history, biography, fiction, criticism, epic and dramatic poems, &c. &c. They are elegantly and elaborately written, but his learning was shallow pedantry; and instead of any reality that the heart could respond to, the jeering sardonic laugh of the man who believed nothing is met with in every page. Yet it is due to Voltaire to say, that though great part of his life was worthy of his writings, at Ferney he acted in such a way towards the poor and the oppressed as to deserve their gratitude and regard; and even in his most hateful features, those of pretended reverence for what he had throughout his life reviled, he was not worse than the greater part of the religious teachers of his age. Our poet-philosopher, Coleridge, has called him, with admirable discernment, the Erasmus of the Revolution.

VOLTAISM, s. See GALVANISM and ELECTRICITY.

VOLUBILITY, s. [volubilitas, Fr. volubilitas, from volō, Lat.] the act of rolling; aptness to roll; activity of tongue; fluency of speech; mutability.

VOLUBLE, a. formed so as to roll easily; rolling; fluent of speech; nimble, active, applied to the tongue.

VOLUME, s. [volumen, from volō, Lat.] something rolled up; as much as is rolled or convolved at once.—[Fr.] a book, or that part of any work which is bound up as a single book. In Natural Philosophy, solid content; space occupied by any kind of body.

VOLU/MINOUS, a. consisting of many volumes; consisting of many complications; copious, diffusive.

VOLUNTARILY, ad. willingly; freely; without compulsion; spontaneously.

VOLUNTARINESS, s. willingness.

VOLUNTARY, a. [voluntaire, Fr. voluntarius, from volo, Lat.] done by a motion of the will; free from compulsion; willing; acting by choice.

VOLUNTARY, s. a volunteer; a piece of music played at will, without any settled rule; generally applied to the pieces played at church between the psalms and the first lesson.

VOLUNTEER, s. a soldier who enters of his own accord, or serves without pay.

VOLUPTUARY, s. [voluptuaire, Fr. voluptuarius, from voluptas, Lat.] a man given up to pleasure and luxury.

VOLUPTUOUS, a. [voluptueux, Fr. voluptuosus, Lat.] given to excess of pleasure; sensual; luxuriously.

VOLUPTUOUSLY, ad. luxuriously; with indulgence of excessive pleasure.

VOLUPTUOUSNESS, s. luxuriousness; addictiveness to excess of pleasure.

VOLUTE, s. [Fr.] a member of a column representing a spiral scroll.

VOMICA, s. [Lat.] in Medicine, an encysted tumor in the lungs.

TO VOMIT, v. n. [vomo, Lat.] to discharge from the stomach by the mouth; to throw up with violence.—v. a. to throw up from the stomach.

VOMIT, s. the matter thrown up from the stomach; an emetic medicine.

VONDEL, JOOST VANDEN, the great Dutch poet of the 17th century. His writings consist of dramas, lyric pieces, &c. &c. In his old age he was a drudge for his living,—such was the honour in which the greatest poet of the country was held. He died in 1679, aged 92 years.

VOPI/SCUS, FLAVIUS, a Roman writer of the 4th century of our æra. He was born at Syracuse, and wrote the Lives of several of the later emperors.

VORA/CIOUS, (voracious) a. [vorace, Fr. vorax, from vor, Lat.] greedy; ravenous; immediately eager after food.

VORA/CIOUSNESS, VORA/CITY, s. [voracitè, Fr.] greediness; glutting; ravenousness.

VORONETZ, a government of Russia, surrounded by the territory of the Don Cossacks, and the governments of Ekaterinoslav, Slobodsk-Ukraine, Saratov, and Tambuff. ~ It is almost level, and is watered by the Don. Iron and some kinds of building and lime-stone are found here. Corn, fruits, timber, and cattle are the staple commodities of the district. Voronetz, its capital, stands on a river of the same name, and is a large and important place. It is well built, and has some fine public edifices. Its manufactures are thriving, and its trade is considerable. Pop. about 45,000. Lat. 51. 44. N. Long. 39. 27. E.

VORSTIUS, CONRAD, a theological writer of some celebrity, in the end of the 16th and beginning of the 17th centuries. He studied at Cologne (his native place) and Düsseldorf; and having openly avowed himself a Protestant at Herborn and Heidelberg, he was made professor of theology at Steinfurt, and was invited to succeed Arminius at Leyden. He had been unjustly charged with Socinianism before, and now he found the whole fanaticism of the country leagueed against him. Our James I., even, was fain to contribute to the madness; and the synod of Dort banished him. He escaped with his life, and died in Holstein, in 1622, aged 53 years.

VORTEX, s. in the plural vortices, [Lat.] any thing whirled round. In Meteorology, a whirlwind, or sudden and rapid circular motion of the air; also an eddy, or whirlpool. In the system of Descartes, it was by concentric vortices in the ether that fills up the heavenly spaces, that the planets were supposed to be borne along in their orbits. It is needless to point out the impossibility of such an hypothesis serving to elucidate the facts of our solar system.

VOSGES, a chain of mountains in France, forming part of the boundary of the valley of the Rhine, and containing heights of 3000 and 4000 feet above the sea. They yield coal, iron, lead, copper, &c., with valuable kinds of building and lime-stone, salt, &c. &c.

VOSGES, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Meurthe, Bas Rhin, Haut Rhin, Haute Saône, Haute Marne, and Meuse. It is about 80 miles long, and 40 broad. It is traversed by the mountain chain after which it is named, and has heights of above 4000 feet. The Moselle, Meuse, Saône, &c. are its rivers. Coal and iron are found here in abundance; it yields also many kinds of durable and valuable stone, &c. Some corn, &c. is grown here; fruit, wine, timber, cattle, &c. are plentifully produced. Various kinds of manufactures flourish in the towns, and it has a brisk trade. Epinal is its capital. Pop. about 450,000.

VOSS, JOHN HENRY, a great scholar of Germany, in the latter part of the last and the beginning of the present centuries. He received a common education, but such was the force of his mind, that with it he laid the foundation of his subsequent scholarship. He had already entered manhood when he began to study at Göttingen. He held no higher station in the learned world than that of master of a gymnasium, or grammar-school; but he required no adventitious circumstances to advance his reputation. After he retired from his post, he lived at Jena, whence he removed to Heidelberg, and there died in 1826, aged 75 years. He edited various classics, with critical notes, &c.; and he translated many of the poets in the most poetical and accurate manner. His essays and reviews are full of learning and genius. There was one controversy, or quarrel, however, which clouds his life,—that with Heyne, which began with his student-life and was never composed.

VOS/SSIUS, the name of two great Dutch scholars of the 17th century. Gerard studied at Dort and Leyden, and held professorships at Leyden, Amsterdam, &c. He died in 1649, aged 72 years. It was his lot to be a sharer in the persecution which the Dutch fanatics raised against all suspected of Arminianism at that time, but he triumphed over the efforts of his enemies. His numerous works are of great value to classical scholars. His son, Isaac, was educated by himself, and rivals him in fame. He travelled in Europe, resided for some years at the court of Christina of Sweden, and afterwards settled in England, under the patronage of Charles II. He died in 1688, aged 70 years. His works are numerous and erudite, but he was a sensual sceptic, although holding a canonry in the English Church.

VOTARY, s. one devoted, as by a vow, to any particular religion or opinion, &c.; a votarist; one devoted to any person.—a. consequent to a vow.

VOTE, s. [votum, from vorere, Lat.] a voice or suffrage.

TO VOTE, v. a. to choose by suffrage; to determine by suffrage; to give by vote or suffrage.

VOTER, s. one who has the right of giving his vote.

VOTIVE, a. [votivus, Lat.] given by vow.

TO VOUCH, v. a. [voucher, Norm.] to call to witness; to attest, maintain, or support.—v. n. to bear witness, or give testimony.

VOU/CHER, s. one who gives witness to any thing; any thing used in evidence, or as a proof; a document.

TO VOUCHSAFE, v. a. to condescend.—v. n. to deign, condescend, yield.

VOU/ET, SIMON, a great French painter of the 17th century. He studied in Italy, and returned to his own country on the invitation of Louis XIII., who appointed him royal painter, and employed him in adorning several palaces and churches. He formed a celebrated school at Paris, and died in 1641, aged 59 years. He was the instructor of almost all the great painters of the age.

VOU/SSOUR, s. [Fr.] in Architecture, the name of the stones of an arch, the centre one being called the key-stone.

VOW, (the ow pron. as in now), s. [vœu, Fr. votum, Lat.] any promise made to a divine power; a solemn promise.

TO VOW, v. a. [vower, Fr. voveo, Lat.] to give or dedicate to a religious use by solemn promise.—v. n. to make vows, or solemn promises, or declarations.

VOW/EL, s. [voyelle, Fr.] in Grammar, a letter which expresses a simple sound of the larynx. The vowels, in their natural order, are, i, e, a, o, u, in all languages.

VOY/AGE, s. [Fr.] any distance passed, or to be passed, by water; the practice of travelling.

UP, ad. [Sax. up, Belg. and Dan.] aloft, on high, opposed to down; out of bed, or arisen from a seat; in a state of preference, climbing, insurrection, or being erected or built; from younger to elder years. Up and down, here and there; dispersedly; backward and forward. Up to, to an equal height with; adequately to. Up with signifies the raising any thing to strike with.

UP, interj. is used to exhort a person to rise from a seat or bed; or to rouse him to action.

UP, prep. from a lower to a higher part, opposed to down.
UPAS, s. [Mal.] in Botany, the name of a poisonous tree found in the island of Java. It was formerly believed that the odour or vapour emitted by this tree was destructive to all animal and vegetable life; some traveller having discovered a valley in the island in which the mephitic vapours arising from the earth had actually destroyed all vegetation, and were equally fatal to animals that had strayed within their reach; and (by a slight mistake) having attributed this destruction to a tree, known to contain a deadly poison, but which grew nowhere near the spot.

To UPBRAID, v. a. [upgebroeden, Sax.] to charge contemptuously with any thing disgraceful; to mention by way of reproach; to reproach with having received favours.

UPBRAIDER, s. a reproacher.

UPHELD, preter. and past part. of Uphold.

To UPHOLD, v. a. to elevate; to support or maintain.

UPHOLSTERER, s. one who deals in household furniture.

UPLAND, s. a high ground.—a. higher in situation.

UPMOST, a. [an irregular superlative of up.] highest; topmost.

UPON, prep. [Sax.] on the top or outside; put over the body, as clothes, &c.; in consequence of; by; after; in consideration of; according to; by inference from; on pain of; in a state of view. Sometimes it denotes reliance, trust, or situation over or near.

UPPER, a. superlative uppermost: [comparative from up.] higher in place or power; superior.

UPRIGHT, (adj.) a. straight; perpendicular; erect; honest; without the least bias to the contrary; sincere; just.

UPRIGHTLY, ad. perpendicularly to the horizon. Figuratively, honestly; without deviation from the right.

UPRIGHTNESS, (adj.) s. straightness; perpendicular erection; honesty; sincerity; justness.

UPROAR, s. [uproer, Belg.] tumult; disturbance; confusion; riot; bustle.

UPSALA, a town of Sweden, which stands in a wide plain, and is built with great regularity and on a grand plan. Its cathedral is ancient, and is a noble edifice; and it has other fine buildings.

Its celebrity, however, arises from its university, which is well conducted, and has long maintained its character, especially in the department of natural science. Its library, museum, &c. are excellent. Pop. about 5000. Lat. 59. 48. N. Long. 17. 38. E.

UPSHOT, s. the issue, end, or success of an undertaking.

UPSIDE DOWN, ad. with total reversement; in complete disorder; topsy-turvy.

UPSTART, s. one who has suddenly rose from meanness and obscurity to riches and opulence.

UPWARD, UPWARDS, ad. towards a higher place; towards heaven, or any source; more than, applied to quantity or number, and followed by of.

URAL, the name of a river and of a mountain range of the Russian empire. The mountains run from near the shores of the icy Ocean, in an almost direct line southerly, and are connected with the Altaic chain, which divides Siberia from Tatar. The length is above 1200 miles, and the average breadth is about 50 miles. They are not very lofty, the highest points being only about 4000 feet above the level of the sea; and the greater part of the range being of a much lower height. The mineral wealth found in the Uralian mines is very great, gold, silver, iron, copper, platinum, &c. being obtained in great quantities. Long before gold was discovered here, the celebrated traveller, Humboldt, suggested that it might be found; having noticed the similarity of structure and character in this range to the mountains of S. America and Mexico. The river springs from this mountain chain, and flows by a somewhat circular course, of near 1000 miles in length, into the Caspian Sea. The river and the mountains form part of the boundary between Europe and Asia.

URANIA, s. in Heathen Mythology, one of the nine Muses, said to preside over astronomy.

URANIUM, s. in Chemistry, a metal of a reddish brown colour, crystalline, and possessing the characteristic lustre. It is chiefly known in its oxides, particularly the mineral called in Germany, plumbene. It is used in the fine arts for imparting a fine lemon yellow colour.

URANUS, in Astronomy, the planet discovered by the astronomer Sir W. Herschel, whose orbit lies next beyond that of Saturn. It is above 1,800,000,000 miles from the sun, and its diameter is nearly 35,000 miles. It completes its revolution in its orbit in about 84 of our years, but its rotation on its axis has not been observed. It is so distant from us that it never appears more brilliant than a star of the 6th magnitude, and thus is very rarely noticeable by the naked eye. The discoverer asserted that he observed at different times 6 moons accompanying this planet, but subsequent observers have never been able to detect more than 2. There is however this great peculiarity respecting these 2 satellites,—they revolve round the planet from E. to W. instead of in the usual direction, and their orbits form a very large angle with the plane of the ecliptic,—from which data the place of another planet (whose existence was long surmised) was calculated by two young astronomers, in France and England, in complete independence of each other, and the planet itself, having been discovered in consequence of these calculations, has been called Neptune. In Heathen Mythology, the parent of Saturn, one of the Titanic dynasty of gods, evidently a personification of the heavens.

URBAN, the name assumed by eight pontiffs of the Roman Church; of whom the most remarkable are, the second, under whom the crusades commenced, and who resolutely aided the advance of the papal authority, although troubled with a rival pope during all his pontificate, and who died in 1099, after a reign of 11 years. The fifth, who removed the see during part of his reign from Avignon to Rome, and who reformed many of the disorders into which Italy had fallen, and in particular with a firm hand checked the overweening insolence of the Visconti. He was also idly owned as being supreme over the Greek as well as the Roman Church, and some hopes of healing the great schism were thereby awakened. He died in 1370, having worn the tiara for 8 years. Urban the eighth was one of the pontiffs who wholly forgot the church in the state of Rome, whose whole measures were those of a military statesman rather than of a churchman. He opposed Austria in the struggle then going on, and was actually a private partisan of Gustavus Adolphus, who was fighting for Protestantism against the Papacy. Such are the absurdities which spring from the anomalous and incongruous position any one must be in, who is officially both a statesman and an ecclesiastic. He was an elegant scholar, and a confirmed nepotist; he beautified Rome with new churches, and strengthened the castle of St. Angelo. In the war of Castro, he was so near being driven to extremities, that some who yet saw in him the head of the church, mediated a peace for him. He died in 1644, having been pope for 21 years.

URBANITY, s. [urbanité, Fr. urbanitas, from urbs, Lat.] civility; politeness; elegance; courtesy; complaisance; facetiousness; merriment.

URBINO, a city of the Papal States, Italy. It contains a ducal palace, a university or academy, (one of the most ancient in Italy,) a noble college, with several churches and convents. The palace contains many noble works of art. Great quantities of fine earthenware are made here. It is situated on a hill, at the union of the two rivers, near the head of the Foglio, 120 miles from Rome. Pop. about 5000. Lat. 43. 44. N. Long. 12. 38. E.

URCHIN, s. [heurechin, Armoric.] a hedge-hog. Applied to a child in slight anger, or contempt.

URTERS, (sisters) s. [ures, Gr.] in Anatomy, membranous vessels which convey the urine from the kidneys to the bladder.

URETHRA, (urthra) s. in Anatomy, the passage through which the urine is discharged from the bladder.

To URGE, v. a. [urgeo, Lat.] to incite; to push; to provoke; to importune; to press; to enforce; to offer by way of objection.—r. n. to press forward.

URGENCY, s. pressure of difficulty or necessity.

URGENT, a. [Fr. urgens, Lat.] cogent; pressing; violent; importunate.

URI, a canton of Switzerland; bounded by Schwitz, the Grisons, Glarus, Ticino, the Valais, Unterwalden, and Bern. It is about 30 miles in length, and 12 in breadth. It is in the heart of the Alps, and has heights of above 10,000 feet; St. Gotthard, its most famous mountain, is not so high. The Ruess water it; and the lake of Uri, and of the Four Cantons. Its chief wealth are its cattle. Altdorf is the principal town. Pop. about 15,000.

URIM AND THUMMIM, s. [Heb.] the name of the golden breast-plate worn by the high-priest of the Jews, in which were set 12 precious stones, to represent the 12 tribes; and by means of which God was wont at times to notify his will concerning any particular matter on which the priest consulted him. The words signify light and perfection; or doctrine and judgment.

URINARY, a. relating to the urine.

URINE, (urine) s. [Fr. urina, Lat.] in Physiology, the water which passes through the urethra from the bladder.

URN, s. [urne, Fr. urna, Lat.] any vessel having its mouth narrower than the body; a water-pot; the vessel in which the remains of the dead, after being burnt, were anciently deposited.

URSA-MAJOR, s. [Lat.] the Greater Bear; a northern constellation, of which number the three bright stars that form the tail, and the four principal ones of the body in form of a trapezium, go by the names of Charles's Wain, the Plough, and the Chariot of David.

URSA-MINOR, s. [Lat.] the Lesser Bear; a northern constellation, of which the star at the tip of the tail is called the pole-star, which is distant only  $1^{\circ} 45' 35''$  from the north-pole of the heavens.

URSINUS, ZACHARIAS, one of the early Protestant divines of Germany. At Wittenberg, Geneva, and Paris he cultivated those different branches of scholarship which were held needful accomplishments for a theologian. He received a professorship at Heidelberg, and afterwards held one at Neustadt. He was involved in troubles respecting the sacrament; and was through this controversy deprived of his post at Heidelberg. He died in 1583, aged 49 years. The friendship of Melancthon for him is a great commendation both of his character and parts.

URSULINES, an order of nuns in the Roman Catholic Church, founded in the 16th century, for the purpose of that kind of work which the Jesuits had undertaken. They have become, however, much the same as other orders, distinguished only by dress, and other superficial distinctions.

URUGUAY, or BANDA ORIENTAL, a republic of S. America, lying on the Atlantic, and bounded by La Plata, Paraguay, and Brazil. It is about 500 miles long, and 240 miles in breadth. It is hilly; and is watered by the Parana, and La Plata, the Uruguay, and the Rio Negro. Near the sea, and communicating with it, are two large lakes. It yields copper, and several valuable kinds of earth, &c. Corn, fruits, wine, and cattle are produced abundantly. Its manufactures are only in its infancy; and the unsettled state of the country has greatly interfered with the progress of its commerce. Monte Video is its capital. Pop. about 100,000.

US, the oblique case of We.

USAGE, (usage) s. [Fr.] treatment; practice long continued; manners; custom.

USANCE, (usage) s. [Fr.] use; interest paid for the use of money. In Commerce, applied to the time generally given for the payment of a bill of exchange, which differs in different countries.

USBC/CS. See TATARY.

USE, (use) s. [usus, from utor, Lat.] the act of employing any thing to any particular purpose; quality which makes a thing proper for any purpose; need, or occasion; practice, habit; advantage; convenience, or help; usage; a custom; money paid for interest.

To USE, (enze) v. a. [usus, Fr.] to employ to any particular purpose; to accustom; to treat; to practise.—v. n. to be wont; to be accustomed.

USEFUL, (useful) a. convenient, profitable, or conducive to any end.

USEFULLY, ad. in such a manner as to help forward some end.

USEFULNESS, (usefulness) s. profitableness; convenience; the quality of assisting in any end.

USELESS, a. answering no purpose; serving no end.

USELESSLY, ad. without the quality of answering any purpose.

USELESSNESS, s. unfitness to any end.

USER, s. one who uses.

USHER, s. [usher, Fr.] one who is employed in introducing strangers, or in preparing the way before any great person; a harbinger; a schoolmaster's assistant.

To USHER, v. a. to introduce.

USHER, DR. JAMES, an eminent Irish prelate of the 17th century. He studied at Trinity College, Dublin, and was early distinguished for his learning and ability in preaching. In consequence of these qualifications, and by means of powerful friends, he rose rapidly in the Church, and was finally made archbishop of Armagh. He used frequently to visit the English universities for the purpose of carrying on his studies; and after the Irish rebellion and massacre, he resided wholly in this country, where he received honour from both parties in the great contest that was then commencing. He was not so rigid an episcopalian as not to make attempts to meet the demands of the great multitude of dissidents from the English Church; but his efforts were rejected by the king first, and by the parliament afterwards. He died in 1656, aged 76 years, and was buried in Westminster Abbey, with a public funeral, by the Protector's orders. His works are numerous and valuable, especially that on the Chronology of Scripture.

USQUEBAUGH, (uskebech) s. [Erse.] an alcoholic or spirituous liquor, also called ushky, much used in Ireland.

USTION, s. [Fr. ustus, from uro, Lat.] in Surgery, the act of burning; the state of being burned.

To USTULATE, v. a. to burn or sear.

USTULATION, a. in Chemistry, the roasting of ores, to separate whatever is of a volatile nature, that is connected with the metal. When the matter is preserved which flies off, the process is called sublimation; but when this matter is neglected, the operation is called ustulation.

USUAL, (usual) a. [usual, Fr.] common; customary; frequently occurring.

USUALLY, ad. commonly; frequently; customarily.

USURFUCT, (usufruct) s. [usus and fructus, Lat.] the temporary use or enjoyment of any thing, without power to alienate.

USURER, (usurier) s. [usurier, Fr. from utor, Lat.] one who lends money out at interest, vulgarly applied to one who takes exorbitant interest.

To USURP, (usurper) v. a. [usurper, Fr. usurpo, Lat.] to seize or take possession of by force, and contrary to right; to possess without right.

USURPATION, (usurpation) s. [Fr.] the act of wrongfully taking or possessing what belongs to another.

USURPER, s. one who seizes that to which he has no right.

USURY, (usury) s. [usure, Fr. usura, from utor, Lat.] money paid for interest; demand of exorbitant interest.

UTENSIL, (utensil) s. [utensile, Fr. from utor, Lat.] an instrument used in a house, kitchen, or trade.

UTERINE, a. [uterin, Fr. uterinus, from uterus, Lat.] belonging to the womb.

UTERUS, s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, the womb.

UTILITY, (utility) s. [utilité, Fr. utilitas, from utor, Lat.] usefulness; profit; advantage; convenience.

UTMOST, a. [utmost, Sax.] extreme; in the highest degree.—s. the most that can be conceived or done.

UTOXETER, or UTTOXETER, (Uxeter) Staffordshire. It is seated on a rising ground, near the river Dove, among excellent pastures for feeding and breeding cattle. Its market is the greatest in this part of England, for corn, cattle, hogs, sheep, butter, and cheese. It is 136 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 4735.

UTRECHT, a province of the kingdom of the Netherlands, lying on the Zuyder Zee, and bounded by the provinces of Holland and Guelderland. It is about 30 miles long, by about 25 broad. It is very flat, and has considerable tracts of fertile soil, with here and there heaths and sands. It produces corn, fruits, cattle, dairy stuff, &c. &c. There are also good manufactures carried on in its towns. Utrecht, its capital, stands on the Rhine, and, like all Dutch towns, abounds in canals and bridges. Its fortifications are strong, and it has a noble cathedral and other fine buildings. There is an old and famous university here, and several valuable manufactures are carried on. Pop. about 50,000. Lat. 52. 5. N. Long. 5. 14. E. Pop. of province, about 175,000. The treaty of Utrecht was made in 1712, after the wars in which the Duke of Marlborough played so distinguished a part, and was the most important, before that of Vienna, to the peace of Europe.

UTTER, a. [Sax.] situated on the outside, out of any place; extreme, excessive, utmost; entire; complete.

To UTTER, v. a. to speak, pronounce, or express by the voice; to disclose; to sell or expose to sale; to disperse.

UTTERANCE, s. the manner or power of speaking.

UTTERER, s. one who pronounces; a divulger; a discloser.

UTTERLY, ad. fully; completely; perfectly.

UTTERMOST, a. in the highest degree; most remote.—s. the greatest.

UVEA, (uvea) s. in Anatomy, is the third or outermost coat of the eye.

VULCAN, in Roman Mythology, the god of fire; called by the Greeks Hephaistos.

VULGAR, a. [vulgaire, Fr. vulgaris, from vulgus, Lat.] suiting to, or practised among, the common people; vernacular, national, mean, low.

VULGAR, s. [vulgaire, Fr.] the common people.

VULGARLY, ad. commonly; in the ordinary manner; among the common people.

VULGATE, s. the name by which the translation of the whole sacred Scriptures from the Septuagint, aided by the originals, made by Jerome, in the 4th century, is known. It was declared inspired by the Council of Trent, and is the only Bible formally acknowledged by the Roman Church.

VULNERABLE, a. [Fr. from vulnus, Lat.] capable of receiving wounds.

VULNERARY, a. [vulneraire, Fr. vulnerarius, Lat.] useful in the cure of wounds.

VULTURE, s. [vultur, Lat.] in Ornithology, the general name of a large class of birds of prey, which feed on dead and even putrid bodies, have few feathers on the head and neck, and are distinguished in many remarkable respects from the eagles and hawks. The Condor, the King of the Vultures, the Turkey Buzzard, &c. are well-known species. After a long controversy, it seems to be well determined now that these birds are no less remarkable for the keenness of their sight than for their acute sense of smell, and that both senses are used in directing them to their food.

VULA, (euclava) s. [Lat.] in Anatomy, a round, soft, spongy body, suspended from the palate, near the foramina of the nostrils, perpendicularly over the glottis.

UXORIOUS, a. [uxor, Lat.] excessively fond of a wife.

W

W IS the twenty-first letter of our alphabet. The Hebrews, Greeks, and Romans had it not; it is peculiar to the northern nations, the Teutons, Saxons, Britons, &c. It is not used by the Italians, French, Spaniards, nor Portuguese, except in proper names, and other terms borrowed from languages in which it is originally used, and even then it is sounded like single v. This letter is of an ambiguous nature, being a consonant at the beginning of words, and a vowel at the end. It may stand before all the vowels except u, as in weaver, well, wife, worship; and follows the vowels, a, e, o, and unites with them into a kind of double vowel, or diphthong, as in law, crew, cow, &c. It also goes before r, and follows s, and th, as in wrong, swift, theatrical; it likewise goes before h, though in reality it is sounded after it, as in why, when, where, what, &c. In some words it is obscure, as in scow, shadow, widow; and in others it is silent, as in wrong, write, &c.

WACE, ROBERT, an Anglo-Norman poet of the 12th century. He was in the service of Henry I., and composed various rhymed chronicles, one of the most interesting of which is the Roman du Rou, or Rollo, in which is an account of the Battle of Hastings.

WAD, s. [wad, Sax.] a bundle of straw thrust close together; black lead, of which pencils, &c. are made.

WADDING, s. [wad or vad, Isl.] a kind of soft stuff loosely woven, used for stuffing the sides of men's coats, and between the two coverings of cloaks. In Gunnery, the paper, flax, &c. rammed into a gun to keep the bullet from rolling out, and close to the powder.

To WADDLE, v. n. [wagghelen, Belg.] to walk unevenly; to shake from side to side in walking, like a duck.

To WADE, v. n. [zadam, Lat.] to walk through waters. Figuratively, to pass with difficulty and labour.

WADERS, s. in Natural History, the name given to those birds which, like the snipe and woodcock, frequent marshy and watery places, but are not swimming birds.

WADHAM COLLEGE, Oxford. It was founded in the 17th century, and has many livings in its gift, with scholarships, &c. &c. Its buildings are handsome and spacious, and it has produced some distinguished scholars.

WAD-HOOK, s. in Gunnery, is a rod with an iron screw at the end to draw the wadding, when the loading is to be drawn out of a gun.

WADSTRÖM, CHARLES BERN, a Swedish traveller of the last century; who was first noted for his knowledge of mineralogy, &c., and received some valuable appointments under government. He made several tours in different parts of Europe; and at last visited Africa, where his observations led him to write and act in the cause of the abolition of slavery. He was a witness before a committee of the English House of Commons respecting the trade; and attempted to stir up the French Directory to aid in this work. He died in 1799, aged 53 years. His writings are of little value now.

WATER, s. [watfel, Belg.] a thin cake; dried paste used in closing letters. Among Romanists, consecrated bread in the eucharist.

To WAFT, v. a. to carry through the air or on the water; to beckon.—v. n. to float.

WAFTE, s. a floating body; the motion of a streamer, &c. given as a signal or means of information.

To WAG, v. a. [wagian, Sax. waggen, Belg.] to move or shake lightly.—v. n. to be moved or go; to be in quick or ludicrous motion.

WAG, s. [wegan, Sax.] any one archly merry or ludicrously mischievous.

To WAGE, v. a. to attempt; to set to hire; to hire for pay; to make or carry on, followed by war.

WAGER, s. a bet; or any thing deposited as a stake. Wager of Battle, was formerly allowed in some cases as a mode of proving, or disproving, an accusation. The only trace left of the custom is in the form of our customary legal oath, which ends with the expression, inapplicable to any thing but a duel, "So help me God."

WAGES, s. seldom used in the singular; [wegen or wegen, Teut.] money paid for service. In the singular, pledge, gage, security.

WAGGERY, (wag-ery) s. mischievous merriment; wantonness; ludicrous mischievousness.

WAGGISH, (wag-ish) a. knavishly or mischievously merry; frolicsome.

To WAGGLE, v. n. [wagghelen, Teut.] to move from one side to another; to waddle.

WAGGON, WA'GON, s. [wagen, Sax. waeghens, Belg.] a heavy carriage going on four wheels; a wain.

WAGGONER, WA'GONER, s. [waeghener, Belg.] one that drives a waggon.

WAGTAIL, s. in Ornithology, a genus of small birds thus denominated from the peculiar motion of the tail.

WAHABEE'S, the name of a Mohammedan sect which originated in the last century, in the attempts of an Arab sheik to restore Islam to its original purity. He did also, in some respects, deviate from the original creed, but not so much so as to be guilty of heresy in the eyes of the mutis and mollahs. It was not till his followers proceeded to put his doctrines into practice, that any offence was taken, and then they were coerced by the sword, and an end put to their reforms. They are not numerous now, and have little power of disturbing the peace of the Ottoman empire.

WAIFS, s. sometimes written welf, or welf; in Law, goods of a thief, being pursued, leaves behind, and are forfeited to the king, or lord of the manor; also, strays, or strayed cattle claimed by nobody, which become the property of the lord of the manor.

To WAIL, v. a. [quolare, Ital.] to moan; to lament; to bewail.—v. n. to express sorrow; to grieve audibly.

WAILING, s. lamentation; moan; audible sorrow.

WAIN, s. a contraction of WAGGON, which see.

WAINROPE, s. a large cord with which the load is tied on the waggon; a cart-rop.

WAINSCOT, s. [wageschoot, Belg.] the wooden covering laid over a wall within the house.

To WAINSCOT, v. a. [wagenschotten, Belg.] to line or cover walls with boards; to line.

WAIR, s. a piece of timber two yards long and a foot broad.
WAIST, s. (Lycæa, from gwaen, Brit.) the smallest part of the body; the part below the ribs; the middle deck or floor of a ship between poop and prow.

WAISTCOAT, s. an inner coat; a short close coat without sleeves, worn by men, reaching to the waist.

To WAIT, v. a. (vacat, Belg.) to expect, or stay for; to attend; to attend as a consequence of something—v. n. to expect, or stand in expectation of. Used with on or upon, to attend as a servant; with for, to stay till a person comes.

WAIT, s. an ambush; as, to lay wait, to lie in wait. A musician paid for attending on processions in a town.

WAITER, s. an attendant; a piece of plate or wood, on which glasses, &c. are presented.

To WAKE, v. a. (weccian, Sax. weccan, Belg.) to rouse from sleep; to excite to action; to bring again to life.—v. n. to watch; to be roused from sleep or stupor.

WAKE, s. the feast kept in commemoration of the dedication of a church, so called because formerly kept by watching all night; vigils.

WAKE, DR. WILLIAM, a learned English prelate, who studied at Oxford, and first distinguished himself by his opposition to the movements of James II. He was of course rewarded at the Revolution of 1688, and rose by rapid preferment to the see and primacy of Canterbury. He was not so liberal to dissenters from the Anglican Church as he was to Romanists, for he opposed the repeal of the Test Act, and he attempted to effect a union between the English Church and the Roman Catholic Church of France. He was involved in several controversies, and he died in 1737, aged 80 years. His translation of the Apostolical Fathers is the only work of his writing which keeps its stand in England.

WAKEFIELD, Yorkshire, W. Riding. It is seated on the river Calder, which is navigable from Castleforth to Eland and Halifax. It has many handsome public buildings, and has become a place of great importance. The principal trade is in white cloths and tanneries. It is 182 miles from London. Markets, Thursdays and Fridays, the latter for woollen cloth. Pop. 14,784.

WAKEFIELD, GILBERT, a Unitarian writer of the last century. He studied at Cambridge, and became a clergyman of the Church of England; but in the next year, he avowed his opinions by leaving the Church and becoming a tutor at Warrington Academy. He also preached occasionally for some time, till he arrived at the conclusion that public worship was a mistake, and abstained from it for the future. He next opened a school at Nottingham, and then was a tutor at Hackney Academy. After a short time, however, he left this situation, and lived as writer merely; till having thought good to write against a war sermon of the bishop of Landaff, he was tried for his offence, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment. Soon after his release he died, in 1801, aged 45 years. His works display a considerable extent of learning, but are all tinged with the advocacy of a controversialist, and the haste of one with whom conviction was bigotry.

WAKEFUL, a. not inclining to sleep; vigilant.

To WAKEN, v. n. to cease from sleep.—v. a. to rouse from sleep or stupor; to produce; to excite.

WAKEROBIN, s. in Botany, the cuckoo-pint, or common arum.

WALCH, the name of several eminent scholars of Germany, of whom the most distinguished are the following. Johann George, the father, studied at Jena, where he held for many years a professorship of divinity. He died in 1757, aged 64 years. His works are partly theological and partly classical, and are full of erudition. He edited all Luther's works. Christian Wilhelm Walch, his son, studied at Jena, and travelled in France, Italy, &c. He held professorships at Jena and Göttingen, and died in 1784, aged 58 years. His works are of the same kind; and amongst them his History of Heretics is one of the most valuable. Johann Ernest Immanuel, his brother, studied and travelled with him, and was made eventually professor at Jena. He died in 1778, aged 53 years. His works contain natural history, as well as theology and literature. His writings on ecclesiastical history are valuable.

WALDECK, a principality of Germany. Its territory consists of two detached portions, of a total area of about 450 square miles. They lie between Prussia, Hanover, Lippe-Detmold, and Hesse-Darmstadt. This principality is mountainous, and is watered by the Weser and other smaller streams. It yields iron, copper, lead, &c. &c. Corn, timber, cattle, &c. &c. are reared in abundance. Various manufactures are carried on, and trade is active. Pop. about 60,000.

WALDEN, commonly called SAFFRON WALDEN, Essex. It stands on the Cam, and has a fine church. Its chief trade is in malt. It is 42 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Population, 5111.

WALDO, PETER, one of the Protestants before the Reformation. He was a rich merchant of Lyons, and procured the translation of some books of Scripture, from which he learned a better doctrine than he had ever heard from priest or monk. He distributed all his goods amongst the poor, and became a preacher of his new-found truths. His followers were called the poor men of Lyons. He is supposed to have derived his name from the Waldenses, or Vaudois, whom he closely resembled in his faith. Having been visited with the censures of the Church in 1172, he fled to Bohemia, and there died. He was one of those who connect the early witnesses against "the Babylonian woe" with the later and successful martyrs; for from the time of the Waldensian immigration into Bohemia may be dated the stir against Roman corruption there, which gave Huss and Jerome to the flames, and brought on that country the unmingled evils of the Hussite wars.

WALE, s. (wel, Sax.) a rising part in the surface of cloth.
WALES, a principality of England. It lies on the Irish Sea, with St. George's Channel and Bristol Channel on the S., and it is bounded by the counties of Chester, Salop, Hereford, and Monmouth. It is about 180 miles long, and 60 in mean breadth. It comprehends 12 counties; namely, Anglesey, Caernarvonshire, Denbighshire, Flintshire, Merionethshire, and Montgomeryshire, in North Wales; Brecknockshire, Cardiganshire, Caermarthenshire, Glamorganshire, Pembrokeshire, and Radnorshire, in South Wales; and contains 751 parishes, and 58 market towns. The country is very mountainous, and abounds with iron, copper, lead, and coal mines, with quarries of free-stone, slate, &c. &c. Some of its mountains exceed 3000 feet in height. Snowdon and Plinlimmon are the most celebrated. It is watered with many rivers, of which the principal are the Dee, Wyre, Usk, Conway, Clwyde, and Towy. Corn and the usual agricultural produce of the island are abundant. Its fisheries are good, but its manufactures are not considerable. It has some fine ports and harbours, and a good trade. It returns 20 members to parliament. Pop. 911,321. It gives the title to the eldest son of the reigning monarch of Great Britain.

WALES, NEW SOUTH, the name of the S. E. part of Australasia. It lies on the Indian Ocean and Bass's Straits, and is about 1000 miles in length. It consists of wide plains intersected by ranges of mountains, some of which exceed 6000 feet in height. The chief rivers are the Hunter, George's, Hawkesbury, Glenelg, Darling, Macquarrie, Murray, Brisbane, &c. &c. Coal is found here in abundance, and other valuable minerals are known to exist. Its agricultural produce is increasing yearly, as wider tracts are brought under the plough; at present its chief wealth is its sheep and cattle. The natural growth of timber is also of considerable value, and the fisheries, particularly the whale-fisheries, are excellent. Its trade is hardly developed, but it keeps pace with the advance of the settlements and the increase of native produce. Its chief drawback has been its origin as a penal settlement. The aborigines have either been driven into the interior, or destroyed by diseases introduced by the convicts and drunkenness. Sydney is its capital. Pop. about 130,000. For other particulars, see AUSTRALASIA, BOTANY BAY, PORT PHILIP, SYDNEY, &c.

WALES, WILLIAM, an English mathematician and astronomer, who was sent to observe the transit of Venus in 1769, at Hudson's Bay, and accompanied Captain Cook on his voyages. He was afterwards a master in Christ's Hospital school, and secretary to the Board of Longitude. He died in 1798, aged about 65 years. His writings are of value only to scientific inquirers.

WALHA'LLA, or VALHALLA, in Teutonic Mythology, the name of the paradise of heroes, where all who fell bravely in battle enjoyed an elysium, such as only northern taste could have invented or appreciated. It is also the name of a vast building, resembling in form a Doric temple, standing on a stupendous mass of apparently solid architecture, with flights of steps and terraces; erected by the late king of Bavaria, for the commemoration of the heroes of Germany. It stands on the Danube, near Ratisbon, and is one of the most magnificent structures of the kind in the world.

To WALK, (travail) v. a. [wealcan, Sax.] to move by leisurely steps, by placing the feet alternately before each other; to be in motion; to act in sleep; to come or go; to act on any occasion, or in any particular manner; to range; to move about; to move off.—v. n. to pass through on foot; to lead out for the sake of exercise or air.

WALK, s. the act of moving on foot; gait, step, or manner of moving; the distance to which a person goes on foot; an avenue set with trees; a way, or road; the slowest or least raised pace of a horse.

WALKER, s. one that walks.

WALKER, CLEMENT, a political writer during the Puritan Revolution of the 17th century. He studied at Oxford, and represented Wells in the parliament of 1640. He was a Presbyterian royalist, and being unable to prevent the ascendancy of the Independents, thought to molest them with his pen. His History of Independency is sadly scurrilous, and has had the merit of being a favourite with such as feared and hated what it misrepresented. Having written against Cromwell, he was imprisoned, and died in the Tower, in 1651, aged about 55 years.

WALKER, JOHN, an English clergyman of the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th centuries, of whom nothing is surely known, except that he enjoyed certain livings in the Church, and wrote a book which he called the Sufferings of the Clergy, which is an unpleasantly written and fabulous account of the proceedings against the semi-papist and wholly incompetent and improper persons who held livings in the Church of England at the time when the Long Parliament and Cromwell were intent upon having none but true shepherds, in the place of "idol shepherds" and hirelings. Walker seems to have supposed that these persons were officially sacred, and that therefore they were martyrs in a good cause. The matter is better understood now than it was when he wrote.

WALKER, SIR EDWARD, an English historical writer of the 17th century. He was in the service of Charles I. as a secretary of state, and accompanied Charles II. in his exile. After the Restoration he was rewarded by a secretaryship, and the post of Garter King-at-Arms. He died in 1677. His works are of a miscellaneous character, but are valuable for the information they give respecting some parts of the "Great Rebellion."

WALKER, DR. GEORGE, a clergyman of the Irish Protestant Church, whose zeal for Orangism was so great that he raised a regiment against James II. in Ireland, defended Londonderry in that heroic manner that all history tells of, and was finally shot at the battle of the Boyne, in 1690. He wrote a few pamphlets in aid of the cause also.

WALKER, ROBERT, an English portrait painter of the 17th century. His portraits of Cromwell, and of his great generals and officers, are his best works. He was high in the Protector's favour, and died in 1660. Very little is known of his history beside this.

WALKER, JOHN, a writer on the English language, in the last century. He was first an actor, and subsequently a teacher of elocution; and died in 1807, aged 75 years. To aid the poetasters of this country he compiled a Rhyming Dictionary, but the most valuable of all his works is his Pronouncing Dictionary, which continued till the last few years the standard work of reference on that subject.

WALL, s. [wal, Brit. walle, Belg.] a pile of brick or stone regularly cemented with mortar; the sides of a building; works built for defence. To take the wall, is to take the upper place. To give the wall, is to yield or acknowledge one's inferiority.

To WALL, v. a. to enclose or defend by a wall.

WALLACE, SIR WILLIAM, of Elderslie, a Scottish hero of the 13th century. The national poets and chroniclers have amplified and exaggerated the narratives of his deeds, till his popular story has become a mere legend. But it is certain that, being a man of great personal strength, and of undaunted courage and patriotism, when Edward I. had made himself master of Scotland, he began a desultory kind of warfare against the English, at the head of bands of patriots and outlaws, who were attracted by his prowess, or compelled by circumstances to resort to this as the only defence of their country. In carrying this system on, he invaded England; and having obtained, as he well deserved, the chief power, he strove vainly to liberate the land, but the jealousy of the nobles, and the discipline and archery of the English army, made it impossible, and he was defeated at Falkirk. After another season of adventures and escapes, he was betrayed to the English king by Sir John Menteith; and at London was put to death in the cruel manner that was for so long the punishment awarded to traitors, in 1305, aged about 30 years.

WALLACE, WILLIAM, an eminent mathematician of Edinburgh. He was a self-educated man, and obtained the friendship of Robinson and Playfair by his distinguished attainments in mathematics and astronomy. His first post was at Perth; and he afterwards obtained an appointment in the military college of Sandhurst. On the death of his friend Playfair, he was called to a professorship at Edinburgh, which he held till near the close of his life. He died in 1843, aged 75 years. He wrote several valuable papers on different branches of his favourite sciences.

WALLACHIA, a principality of Europe, lying on the Danube, about 250 miles in length, and 125 in breadth. It is bounded by Austria, Turkey, and Russia. The Carpathian mountains form part of its N. boundary, and it is watered by the Danube and its tributaries. Several kinds of metals are found in the mountains, and the sands of the rivers yield gold. Rock-salt is also abundant. Corn of various kinds, wine, wool, &c. &c. are produced plentifully. The forests yield good timber. The trade is chiefly carried on by means of the Danube. Bucharest is its capital. Pop. about 1,000,000. This country is dependent on Turkey, but Russia arrogates a greater interest in it, and it is not unlikely to be absorbed in that ever-growing empire before long.

WALLENSTEIN, or WALDSTEIN, ALBERT WENCESLAUS EUSEBIUS, Duke of Friedland, Mecklenburg, &c., the great imperialist general of the 30 years' war. He was early instructed by the Jesuits, though of Protestant family, and travelled and studied in Italy and Switzerland. He had distinguished himself in war before the outbreak of the great war in which he acquired his immortality of renown. After 1618, his history is that of Germany itself. Against Count Mansfeld, Balthasar Gabor, Christian IV. of Denmark, he gained many and important victories. He usually raised his own armies, and gathered together soldiers and adventurers from every nation, making the motley assemblage a mere instrument of his powerful and all-compelling mind. He freely advanced money to the emperor from his own resources, and repaid himself by the purchase of duchies and counties. His victories were wrested from time and nature: Stralsund alone seemed able to withstand him. But he had powerful enemies at work, and at length the emperor dismissed him. He retired to his estates in silence. Meanwhile the great Gustavus Adolphus entered on the contest; Tilly was defeated and slain; the imperialist cause seemed ruined. Wallenstein was recalled, and received irresponsible power: he alone could save the empire. At Nuremberg he practically defeated the Swedes by inaction: at Lützen he lost the day, but Gustavus fell. And now his enemies again began to undermine him. The emperor interfered with his plans, and Wallenstein haughtily refused to obey. He was charged with conspiracy against Ferdinand—in truth, he was the victim of a conspiracy. His troops were of materials for a skilful plotters. He was kept from the hearing of the emperor. His plans for self-preservation were all foiled, and made to look like proofs of treason; and at last, at Eger, whither he had resorted for safety, he was assassinated by the order of the emperor, in 1634, aged 51 years. He was a consummate general, but he betrayed his weakness in an inordinate faith in astrology.

WALLER, SIR WILLIAM, one of the leaders in the civil wars of the 17th century. He studied at Oxford, and served with the Protestant armies in Germany. Entering parliament, he joined the opposition party, and at the outbreak of war received a command from the Parliament. He was not on the whole a successful soldier, and the turn of affairs which brought the Independents into power was far from agreeable to him. He was concerned in the Cheshire insurrection, just before the Restoration, and died in 1668, aged 71 years. He wrote a Vindication of himself, and some pious Meditations.

WALLER, EDMUND, an English poet of the 17th century.

He studied at Cambridge, and entered parliament, in which he served under James I. and Charles I., to the wars. He was a royalist, but at one time joined the opposition party. He was only known as a poet, till he was detected in a plot to raise London against the parliament, and escaped by the display of great meanness, on paying a fine of £10,000. He went to France, but returned during Cromwell's supremacy, whom he flattered exceedingly. He played the same part by the restored Charles with better success, and died in 1687, aged 82 years. His poems are elegantly written, but are not so highly estimated now as they were by some of his contemporaries.

WALLET, s. [scallian, Sax.] a bag in which a traveller carries his necessities; a knapsack; a budget; a protuberance or swelling.

WALLEYE, s. in Surgery, a disease in the crystalline humour of the eye; the glaucoma.

WALLEYED, a. having white eyes.

WALLFLOWER, s. in Botany, a common flower, of the stock kind, with a rich yellow blossom, and an agreeable scent, found in old walls.

WALLINGFORD, Berkshire. It stands on the Thames, over which it has a bridge. It is a neat place, with three churches, and was formerly much more extensive and important. The trade is that of a central county town, with some malting. It is 45 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 2780.

WALLIS, JOHN, an English divine, mathematician, and man of letters, in the 17th century. He studied at Cambridge, and became a clergyman, and was one of the Assembly of Divines. He was eminent even then for his scientific attainments, and was appointed to a professorship at Oxford, by the parliament. His weightiest engagements at this time were scientific pursuits and controversies. After the Restoration, he appears chiefly as a scientific writer, except that he was on the committee which revised the Common Prayer Book, and so helped in the English Bartholomew. He died in 1703, aged 87 years. His most important work is the Arithmetic of Infinites, which led the way to Newton's discoveries. His place in the history of mathematical science is particularly eminent.

To WALLOP, v. n. [wealan, Sax.] to boil.

To WALLOW, (wallow) v. n. [wealhan, Sax.] to move in a heavy or clumsy manner; to welter; to roll in mire, or any thing filthy; to live in a state of filth or gross vice.

WALLRUE, s. in Botany, an herb found on old walls.

WALLWORT, s. in Botany, the dwarf-elder, or danewort.

WALNUT, (walnut) s. [wealnūt, Belg.] in Botany, a large and handsome tree, bearing the well-known kind of nut that is called by the same name.

WALPOLE, SIR ROBERT, Earl of Orford, the great statesman or minister of the first half of the last century. He studied at Cambridge, and entered parliament. Here he soon gained sufficient reputation to be made secretary at war, and to have other appointments; but a change in the position of parties deprived him of his offices, and sent him to the Tower. On the accession of the House of Hanover, he was in ascendancy; and from 1714 to 1742, with the exception of three years, during which the South Sea scheme was in full operation, he wielded the affairs of Great Britain. His personal history is lost here in that of England; and, certainly, excepting his avowed partisans, few will look on that long period as one in which this country was even maintaining its reputation for honesty. He ruled the Commons by bribes, and the king by grossest flattery,—by the queen, by his mistresses. He was raised to the peerage as a reward for his services, and died in 1745, aged 69 years.

WALPOLE, HORACE, Earl of Orford, son of the preceding, a virtuoso and dilettanti writer of the last century. He studied at Cambridge, and for a time served in parliament, but soon gave up public life, and amused himself with adorning Strawberry-hill with his collections of all kinds of works of art, with his writings, and his printing-press. He was, in pretence, a great democrat, but his taste and affections belied his pretence. He died in 1797, aged 80 years. His Castle of Otranto is an English classic; some of his other books are good, especially that respecting Richard III. But his Letters are his best productions, and contain most authentic disclosures of the age and its heroes. The admirers of Chatterton will not easily forget the treatment the inspired boy received from the elegant amateur in literature.

WALRUS, s. in Zoology, a kind of large amphibious animals, inhabiting the regions lying round the north pole.

WALSALL, Staffordshire. This town stands in the midst of the midland coal and iron district, and is one of the great seats of the iron manufactures of England. It has some handsome public buildings, but it is not a well-built place. Its trade is necessarily considerable, but the condition of the lower classes of labourers is wretchedness itself. It is 120 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 20,852.

WALSINGHAM, SIR FRANCIS, a statesman of the reign of Elizabeth, who was educated at Cambridge, and afterwards travelled in Europe. His first engagements were diplomatic, and he visited the courts of France, Netherlands, Scotland, &c., as English ambassador. He was a commissioner at the trial of the unhappy Mary Queen of Scots. He seems also to have been minister of foreign affairs; and in that office to have used such espionage as, in these days, the commonest morality would forbid. Even his Holiness's pockets could not guard his keys from Walsingham's agents. The tales of his feats in this way, for the honour of his mistress, and the glory of England, surpass modern belief. He died in 1590, aged 54 years.

WALTER, JOHN GOTTLÖB, a celebrated anatomist of Germany. He studied at Frankfurt and Berlin, and became professor of anatomy and midwifery at the latter place. After a laborious and useful life, he died in 1818, aged 70 years. His works and treatises are very valuable, and contain the results of his long and accurate studies.

WALTON, BRIAN, a learned English prelate of the 17th century. He studied at Oxford, and suffering great losses during the civil wars, took refuge in that university. There he published his great Polyglott Bible. On the Restoration, he received the bishopric of Chester, and died in 1661, aged 61 years.

WALTON, IZAAK, the famous angler, was a London tradesman, but connected with some church dignitaries by marriage, and intimate with others. He lived at Winchester during the civil wars, and was highly thought of by the royalists. He died in 1683, aged 90 years. His Complete Angler, and Lives of Hooker, Herbert, Donne, Wotton, &c. have deservedly maintained his fame. Few works are so full of genuine beauty as that manual of piscatory art.

WALTZ, s. [Germ.] a kind of dance lately very fashionable in England; in it the dancers, half embracing, whirl round each other, at the same time moving in a circle.

To WAIBLE, (waimbl) v. n. [weemelen, Belg.] to roll with sickness or squeamishness, applied to the stomach.

WAN, a. [weann, Sax.] pale; sickly; having a languid look.

WAND, s. [wand, Dan.] a small stick or twig; a long rod; a staff of office; a charming-rod.

To WANDER, v. n. [wandrian, Sax.] to rove; to move or go about without any certain course or settlement; to deviate; to ramble; to go astray.—v. a. to travel over without any certain course.

WANDERER, s. a rover; a rambler.

WANDERING, s. uncertain peregrination; aberration; mistaken way; uncertainty.

To WAYNE, v. n. [see To WAN; wanian, Sax.] to decrease or grow less, applied to the moon; to decline; to sink; to diminish.

WANE, s. the decrease of the moon; decline; diminution; declension.

WANNESS, s. paleness; languor.

To WANT, v. a. [wana, Sax.] to be without, or stand in need of something fit or necessary; to be defective, or fall short; to wish for, or desire; to lack.—v. n. to be defective in any particular; to fail; to be missed; not to be had; to be improperly absent.

WANT, s. need or necessity; deficiency; the state of not having; poverty; indigence.—[wand, Sax.] a mole.

WANTON, a. lascivious; lustful; gay; frolicsome; superfluous or luxuriant; licentious; unrestrained; luxurious.

To WANTON, v. n. to behave in a lascivious or gay manner; to revel; to move merrily and irregularly.

WANTONLY, ad. lasciviously; frolicsomerly; sportively; carelessly.

WANTONNESS, s. lasciviousness; sportiveness; licentiousness.

WAPENTAKE, s. [woepenn, Sax. and take], a hundred, so called from a meeting, wherein a hundred men, who were under their elder-man, assembled and touched his or each other's weapons, in token of their fidelity and allegiance.

WAPITI, s. in Natural History, a kind of deer, found in Canada.

WAR, (weur) s. [weerre, old Belg.] active hostility between nations, or parties in a nation. Poetically, the instruments of war; an army; forces; the profession of a soldier; act or state of opposition; hostility.

To WAR, v. a. to carry on armed opposition against an enemy; used with on, or upon, against, or with.—v. n. to be in a state of hostility.

WARBECK, PERKIN, or PETER, a young man who, during the reign of Henry VII., claimed the crown, as being the Duke of York, who was said to have been smothered in the Tower with Edward V. by their uncle Richard. His claim was believed by many; and he invaded England and besieged Exeter; but his army being dispersed by the king's forces, he took refuge in Beaulieu Abbey, Hampshire; and being drawn from it by a promise of pardon, suffered the cruel punishment awarded to traitors, in 1499. His claims have been recently re-asserted, and at the same time it has been shown that Richard III.'s character has been unjustly blackened by those who were interested in excluding him from sympathy.

To WARBLE, v. a. [weerelen, Teut.] to quaver in singing; to modulate; to sing out like birds.—v. n. to be quavered; to be uttered melodiously; to sing.

WARBURTON, DR. WILLIAM, an English prelate, who was very eminent as a theological, controversial, and critical writer, in the last century. He did not receive a university education, but he compensated for the lack of it by private study and original talent. He was raised to the episcopal bench by George II., and died in 1770, aged 81 years. His works are very numerous, and the chief of them are, The Divine Legation of Moses, in which he endeavours to prove that the Israelitish nation must have been maintained by miraculous means, because Moses does not appeal to the doctrine of a future state, and which is full of erudition and original disquisitions; The Alliance of Church and State; an Essay on Miracles, &c. &c. He was a great friend of Pope, and helped Theobald in his Commentaries on Shakspeare. His controversies were not carried on in a very agreeable spirit, and he seems not to have been a profound believer in his own arguments.

WARD, DR. SETH, an English prelate, distinguished for his knowledge of mathematics and astronomy. He studied at Cambridge, and was appointed to a professorship at Oxford by the parliamentary commissioners. After the Restoration he received valuable church preferment, and died in 1689, aged 72 years. He published several works both on scientific and theological subjects.

WARD, [weard, Sax.] used at the end of motions in Composition, implies the tendency or direction of any motion.

To WARD, v. a. [weardian, Sax.] to guard or watch; to defend or protect, followed by from; to force off.—v. n. to act with a weapon upon the defensive; to be vigilant; to keep guard.

WARD, s. [wearda, law Lat.] the district or division of a town; confinement; an apartment in an hospital or prison; the part of a lock which hinders its being unlocked by any but the proper key; an orphan under guardianship; the state of a person under a guardian; the act of guarding; guard by a weapon in fencing; garrison.

WARDEN, [waerden, Belg.] a keeper; a guardian; a chief officer. Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, is the governor of these havens, having the authority of an admiral, and issuing writs in his own name. Warden of the Mint, an officer who receives the bullion, pays for it, and has the superintendence of the other officers.

WARDER, s. one who keeps watch; a guard; a truncheon by which an officer of arms forbade fight. Warders of the Tower of London, a detachment of the yeomen of the guard, who wait at the gates to take an account of persons coming into the Tower, and to attend state prisoners.

WARDMOT, s. [weard and mot, Sax.] a meeting; a court held in every ward in the city of London, for choosing officers, and doing other business of the ward.

WARDROBE, s. [garderobe, Fr.] a room where clothes are kept.

WARE, preter. of TO WEAR, more frequently written WORE.

WARE, a. See AWARE.

WARE, s. [waere, Belg.] something exposed to be sold.

WARE, Hertfordshire. The New River head is not far from this town. It is 20 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 4653.

WAREHAM, Dorsetshire. It stands near the rivers Frome and Piddle, over which are bridges, about 3 miles from the sea. It has several ancient ruins, and was once of greater extent than it is now. It has a small trade by chasting vessels. It is 110 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 2746.

WAREHOUSE, s. a storehouse of merchandise.

WARFARE, s. [waere and faren, Sax.] a state of enmity; a state of war and opposition; military service or life.

To WARFARE, v. n. to lead a military life.

WARHAM, WILLIAM, an English prelate of the 15th and 16th centuries. He was educated at Oxford, and, as was customary in those times, advanced in civil and ecclesiastical preferment with equal steps, being at last archbishop of Canterbury and lord chancellor. He was opposed to the marriage of Henry with the widow of his brother Arthur, which afterwards was the occasion of such vast changes, and found a formidable rival in Wolsey. He at length resigned the great seal, and died in 1532, aged about 75 years. He was a great patron of learning, and was one of the English friends of Erasmus, but he was not above the superstitions of the age.

WARILY, ad. prudently; cautiously; circumspectly.

WARINESS, s. prudence; circumspection; cautiousness; timorous scrupulousness.

WAR, s. [Sax.] used at the end of words; building or work.

WARLIKE, a. [wearlige, Sax.] belonging to the military art; martial; valiant; stout.

WARLOCK, WA'RLUCK, s. [weerlog, Sax.] a male witch; a wizard.

WARM, a. [Goth. and Belg. wearm, Sax.] heated in a small degree. Figuratively, zealous, ardent, violent, furious, passionate, fanciful, enthusiastic, busy in action.

To WARM, v. a. [wearmian, Sax.] to heat gently; to free from cold; to make vehement, or affect with any passion; to heat mentally.

WARMINGPAN, s. a covered brass pan for warming a bed by means of hot coals.

WARMLY, ad. with gentle heat; eagerly; ardently.

WARMNES, s. [wearme, Teut.] heat; passion; fervour of mind.

WARMTH, s. gentle heat. Figuratively, zeal, or ardour.

To WARN, v. a. [wearnen, Belg. wearnian, Sax. wearna, Swed.] to caution against any ill or danger; to give notice of some future ill; to admonish, or put in mind of something to be performed or forborne.

WARNING, s. a notice given beforehand of some evil or danger, or of the consequence of any action.

WARF, s. [wearp, Sax. werp, Belg.] the thread which crosses the wool in weaving.

To WARP, v. n. [weerpen, Belg.] to change in form or position by weather or time; to turn awry.—v. a. to contract or shrink; to turn aside from the true direction, or from justice. Among mariners, to haul a ship to a particular place, by a rope fastened to an anchor, against the tide or wind.

To WARRANT, v. a. [garantir, Fr.] to support, maintain, or attest; to give authority to; to justify; to exempt; to secure; to privilege; to declare upon surety.

WARRANT, s. a writ conferring some right or authority, or giving an officer of justice the power of detaining or arresting; a commission by which a person is justified; attestation; right; legality.

WARRANTABLE, a. that may be justified or maintained; defensible; justifiable.

WARRANTY, WARRANTY, s. in Law, a covenant entered into by the seller to make good the bargain against all persons and demands; authority; justificatory mandate; security.

WARREN, s. [wearande, Belg.] a kind of park or enclosure for rabbits, hares, pheasants, partridges, &c.

WARREN, DR. JOSEPH, one of the American patriots of the war of Independence. He studied at Harvard College, and had become a physician of considerable eminence in Boston, before the open resistance of the colonies of Great Britain called him to other pursuits. He stood high in the estimation of his fellow citizens, and at the battle of Bunker's Hill was killed by a ball, in 1775, aged 35 years.

WARRINGTON, Lancashire. It stands on the Mersey, and is not a well-built town, but it has some good public buildings. It is one of the chief manufacturing places in that part of the county; and, beside cottons, glass, iron-ware, gunpowder, beer, &c. &c. are made in great quantities. Vessels of small burden can come quite up to the town. It is 190 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 21,901.

WARRIOR, s. a soldier; a military man.

WARSAW, a large and populous city of Poland, and capital of Mazovia, Russia, surrounded with walls and ditches, and defended by a fort. It contains several palaces, some noble churches, and other splendid buildings. It is divided into the Old and New Town, to which may be added the suburbs of Cracow and Praga, both very well built. Its trade and manufactures are both considerable. It is seated at the end of large open fields, on the river Vistula, over which it has a bridge. Pop. about 150,000. Lat. 52. 14. N. Long. 20. 45. E.

WART, a. [weart, Sax. weert, Belg.] a horny excrescence growing on the hands or other parts.

WARTON, DR. JOSEPH, a scholar and writer of the last century. He studied at Oxford, and entered the church, in which his connexions and abilities secured him ample patronage. His writings obtained for him also a mastership in Winchester grammar-school, and he in time became head master. He died in 1800, aged 78 years. He wrote an Essay on Pope and his Works, and several poetical pieces, amongst which were translations from Virgil.

WARTON, THOMAS, brother of the preceding, a poetical and critical writor of the last century. He studied at Oxford, and became professor of poetry at that university. Late in life he was made poet laureate, and held a professorship of history at Oxford. He had some small livings in the church, and died in 1700, aged 62 years. His chief work is his History of English Poetry; he also wrote and edited many poems, and some miscellaneous essays.

WARTY, a. grown over with warts.

WARWICK, (Warrick) Warwickshire. It is seated on a rock near the river Avon, and was fortified with a wall which is now in ruins, but it has still a strong and stately castle. It contains two parish churches, and in that of St. Mary's are several handsome tombs. The houses are well built, and the town principally consists of one regular built street, at each end of which is an ancient gate. It is adorned with a good free-school and a market-house. It enjoys a good trade, and is 91 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 9775.

WARWICK, the title of an English earldom, which has been borne by several men of celebrity. Guy, Earl of Warwick, the earliest on record, is a purely legendary character, an English Theseus, whose deeds of hardihood have a spice of homely comedy in them, compared with those of the great Attic hero: as that in which he slew the dun cow, that had been a sore pest to the country. His adventures are the themes of many amusing and instructive ballads. If ever there were such a person, he lived in the 9th or 10th century. Richard Nevill, the "king-maker," was the most distinguished actor in the wars of the Roses. He had a great reputation for valour and liberality before the war; and first fought on the side of the Yorkists, gaining several battles, the result of which was the imprisonment of Henry, and the coronation of Edward. After a period of stormy uncertainty, during which Edward contrived to alienate the Earl, Warwick joined Henry's party, drove Edward from the throne, and re-crowned the old king. At length, he was slain at the battle of Barnet, in 1471, aged about 50 years. See EDWARD IV., HENRY VI., &c.

WARWICKSHIRE, (Warrickshire) an English county, 50 miles in length, and 35 in breadth; bounded by Worcestershire, Oxfordshire, Gloucestershire, Northamptonshire, Leicestershire, and Staffordshire. It contains 158 parishes, and 17 market towns. The air is mild and healthful, and the soil fertile, producing corn and pastures, particularly in the S. part, called the Vale of Red Horse. It has few hills; and is watered by the Avon, the Trent, and their feeders. Coal, iron, lime and building stone, &c. are abundant. It has some manufactures, and a good trade. Warwick is the chief town. Pop. 401,715. It sends 10 members to parliament.

WARY, a. [weer, Sax.] cautious, or taking care of doing any thing amiss; prudent; circumspect.

WAS, the preter, of To Be.

TO WASH, v. a. [waschen, Belg. wascan, Sax.] to cleanse by rubbing with water, &c.; to moisten; to colour by washing.—u. n. to perform the act of cleansing with water, &c.

WASH, s. a marsh, a fen, a bog, a quagmire; a liquor used to beautify; a superficial stain or colour; the liquor given hogs, &c.; the act of cleansing the linen of a family by rubbing them when wetted; the linen washed at once.

WASHINGTON, GEORGE, the patriot-general of the United States, in the revolutionary war. He was born of a respectable and moderately wealthy family, of Virginia; and educated as well as the local schools and private study could, especially in mathematics. He began life as a surveyor; and in the armament of the provinces against the French, was appointed to a command, in which he had the opportunity of learning the rudiments of the art of war, being present at several engagements, and having to conduct, or advise, respecting several important undertakings. His next appearance, after an interval of private life, was as a politician in the last session of the House of Burgesses; and at the commencement of the Revolution, in the first congress. He was appointed by this body commander-in-chief, which office he retained through the whole war. Against every possible difficulty, and those on the side of the patriots were far more harassing than those of the enemy, he contended; and in various battles proved himself no mean general. The six years following his resignation of the post of commander-in-chief, he spent on his estates, with the exception of his duties in the convention; and at the end of them he was elected first president of the United States. At the expiration of his term of office he was re-elected; and during the European war, maintained a wise neutrality, although the general feeling of the people was in favour of war with England and the other opponents of France. He died in 1799, aged 67 years. Washington's name has become synonymous with genuine patriotism; and this is his noblest claim to fame. In his eminent situations he was distinguished for unconquerable courage and the most consummate prudence; but he never displayed any of the higher and more brilliant qualities, that have immortalized statesmen and warriors whose lives were far less momentous to humanity than his. He was, in the most remarkable manner, the man needed by the times; and he nobly fulfilled his destiny. His private life was unsullied;—for it must not be imputed to him as a crime that he was a slaveholder, when only a few men of rare piety and humanity in England, and the leaders of the Reign of Terror in France, were the opponents of that long-established system.

WASHINGTON, the capital of the United States, N. America. It is in Columbia District, and stands on the Potomac, over which is a bridge, upwards of a mile long. There are 3 other bridges over Rock Creek and the Anacostia. It is a regularly planned and nobly built city, but is very far from being completed yet. The public buildings give it its chief splendour. The capitol, where congress meets, is the finest senate-house in the world, after the magnificent pile of buildings now erecting for the British parliament. The president's house, the government offices, the navy yard, &c. &c. are all studies in different styles of architecture. An institution for the Promotion of Science, a public library, the Columbia College, and other institutions, maintain the credit of the States for regard to education. In trade and manufactures it yields to the neighbouring city of Baltimore, being less favourably situated. It cannot compare with the capitals of European states, both from its recent origin, and because the economy of republican institutions forbids the lavish expenditure of public money which has adorned them. Pop. 23,364. Lat. 32. 54. N. Long. 77. 2. W. There are 101 other places in the States similarly named.

WASP, a. [weasp, Sax.] in Entomology, a stinging insect, of about the size of a bee, of a yellow colour, with black bands and spots. They build their nests of a kind of paper, and their economy is as remarkable as that of the hive bee. There are other kinds of wasps, that live solitarily, and make their nests in walls, banks, &c.

WASPSH, a. easily provoked; peevish; malignant; irritable; fretful; humourous; spiteful; venomous.

WASSEL, WASSEL, [waschel, Sax.] a liquor made of roasted apples, sugar, and ale; a drinking-bout.

To WASTE, v. a. [woosten, Belg.] to consume gradually, or diminish; to squander; to destroy or desolate; to spend without profit or advantage.—v. n. to dwindle; to be in a state of consumption.

WASTE, a. destroyed or ruined; desolate or uncultivated; superfluous; lost for want of occupiers; worthless; of no use. Waste-book, in Book-keeping, an account book in which articles are entered promiscuously as they occur, without regard to debtor or creditor.

WASTE, s. wanton or luxurious consumption; loss; the act of squandering; desolate, uncultivated, or unoccupied ground.

WASTEFUL, a. destructive; ruinous; lavish; prodigal; desolate; uncultivated.

WASTER, s. one that consumes dissolutely and extravagantly; a squanderer; a vain consumer.

WATCH, s. [wecece, Sax.] forbearance of sleep; attendance without sleeping; attention; guard; a watchman, or person set as a guard; the office of a guard in the night; a period of the night; a pocket horologe. Among mariners, it is the space of four hours, during which one half of the crew keep on deck, and are then relieved by the other.

To WATCH, v. n. [weccian, Sax.] to keep awake; to keep guard; to look with expectation, attention, or cautious observation, with intent to seize.—v. a. to guard, or have in custody; to observe secretly, or in ambush, in order to prevent, detect, or betray; to tend, applied to cattle.

WATCHER, s. one who sits up; a diligent overlooker or observer.

WATCHET, a. [weaced, Sax.] blue, or pale blue.
WATCHFUL, a. vigilant; cautious; attentive.
WATCHFULNESS, s. vigilance; cautious regard; heed.
WATCHHOUSE, s. the place where the watch is set.
WATCHMAKER, s. one whose trade is to make watches.
WATCHMAN, s. a guard; a sentinel; one set to keep ward.
WATCHTOWER, s. a tower on which a sentinel was placed for the sake of prospect.

To WATER, (water) v. a. to irrigate; to moisten; to supply with water; to diversify as with waves, applied to calendaring.—v. n. to shed moisture; to get or take in water; to be used in supplying water. The mouth waters, implies that a person longs, or has a vehement desire, for something.

WATER, (water) s. [weater, Belg. water, Sax.] in Chemistry, the well-known fluid, which, correctly described, is protoxide of hydrogen. It was formerly thought an elementary substance. In its solid state, it is called ice; vaporized, it forms steam. Its utility to man in all its forms, and the important part it plays in nature, are familiar to all. Figuratively, the sea, opposed to the land; urine; the peculiar clearness of a diamond. To hold water, is used for being sound and tight, literally or figuratively.

WATERCOLOURS, s. in the Fine Arts, pigments formed by grinding earths, and animal and vegetable substances, with gum and water, insglass, &c.

WATERCOURSE, s. a natural or artificial channel for the passage of water in low grounds and meadows.

WATERCRESS, s. in Botany, a well-known plant found in brooks and running water, much used as a salad.

WATERFALL, s. a cataract; a cascade.

WATERFLAG, s. in Botany, the water flower-de-luce.

WATERFORD, a county of Munster, Ireland. It lies on St. George's Channel, and is bounded by Wexford, Kilkenny, Tipperary, and Cork. It is 50 miles in length, and about 30 in breadth. It is generally mountainous, and has heights exceeding 2500 feet. Its rivers are the Blackwater, the Suir, the Barrow, &c.; and its chief bays, Waterford Harbour and Dungarvan Bay. Iron, copper, lead, and other metals, with slate, building-stone of different kinds, &c. are found here. It produces some corn, with cattle, butter, and other dairy stuff. Its fisheries are good, but not much attended to; and its manufactures chiefly of a domestic kind. Waterford, its chief town, stands on the Suir, over which is a bridge. Its situation is excellent, and it has some fine buildings. Ships of considerable size can come up to the town, and the quays along the river banks are very fine. Its trade is excellent. It is 95 miles from Dublin. Pop. 23,216. Pop. of county, 172,971. It sends 3 representatives to the imperial parliament.

WATERFOWL, s. fowls that live or get their food in water.

WATERGRUEL, s. food made of oatmeal boiled in water.

WATERHEN, s. in Ornithology, a species of rail, which is common in this country, and is known by the name of dropper, &c.

WATERLAND, DR. DANIEL, an eminent English divine of the last century. He studied at Cambridge, and obtained valuable preferments in the church, being at the time of his death, chancellor of York, archdeacon of Middlesex, canon of Windsor, and vicar of Twickenham. He died in 1740, aged 57 years. His most important works relate to the Trinitarian controversy; he also wrote on the Eucharist, and against Tindal.

WATERLILY, s. in Botany, an elegant water-plant, with broad floating leaves, and white or yellow blossoms. The white species is particularly fine.

WATERMAN, s. a ferryman; a boatman.

WATERMARK, s. the utmost limit of the rise of the flood.

WATERMILL, s. a mill turned by water.

WATERMOSS, s. in Botany, a sort of moss.

WATER-OUZEL, s. in Ornithology, a bird allied to the thrush, which haunts streams, and is capable of sustaining complete submersion, although not constructed like a swimming or diving bird.

WATERPEPPER, s. in Botany, a plant, the same with the lakeweed.

WATERPINE, s. in Botany, the plant called also waterwort.

WATERPLANTS, s. in Botany, those species which grow under water, or which grow only in water, although their leaves and flowers are above the surface. The submerged leaves of these plants are usually divided into fine segments. The breathing pores of the floating leaves, instead of being on the under side, as is usual, are on the upper surface.

WATERPROOF, a. impervious to water. The prepared cloth, called, after the inventor, Macintosh, is the most commonly employed water-proof cloth; that prepared with oil, or paint, is also used when large surfaces have to be covered.

WATERRAT, s. in Natural History, a kind of rat that lives in holes in river and ditch banks, and gets its food in the water.

WATERSOLDIER, s. in Botany, a very elegant aquatic plant, found in slow streams and ditches, called also water-alee, and freshwater soldier.

WATERSPANIEL, s. in Natural History, a variety of the dog kind, resembling the spaniel, but taking the water spontaneously.

WATERPOUT. See Spout.

WATERWHEEL, s. a wheel with flat boards placed edgewise across its circumference, so as to catch the water falling over a milldam, and act thus as the moving power of mill-work, &c.

WATERWORK, s. artificial spouts of water; any hydraulic performance; machines, canals, &c. used for the purpose of supplying a town or district with spring water.

WATERY, (watery) a. aqueous; liquid; insipid; tasteless; vapid; wet; consisting of water; relating to water.

WATSON, DR. RICHARD, a distinguished English prelate, who studied at Cambridge, and was successively professor of chemistry and divinity at that university. He held some valuable livings, and was accounted a skillful pamphleteer. This led to his appointment to the see of Llandaff, which he held along with all his other appointments in church and college. He died in 1816, aged 79 years. His writings are numerous, and the chief is his Apology for the Bible, which was designed as a reply to Paine's Age of Reason.

WATSON, DR. ROBERT, a Scottish historian. He studied at St. Andrew's, Glasgow, and Edinburgh, and was after a while made professor of logic at St. Andrew's. He died in 1780, aged 50 years. His History of Philip II. is his principal work.

WATT, JAMES, the celebrated engineer, was sickly in childhood, and received only a common education, but he early displayed the bent of his mind, and was remarkable for his mechanical ingenuity; he also became a tolerable proficient in natural science. In London he learned to be a mathematical instrument-maker, and afterwards opened a shop in that line at Glasgow, and received the appointment of instrument-maker to the university. At this time he was acquainted with most of the eminent men of science and literature in that city, and stimulated by their society, devoted himself to those studies which have immortalized his name. He became a civil engineer, and planned and surveyed canals, and invented a micrometer, and a machine for drawing in perspective. From Glasgow he removed to Soho, Birmingham, where, in partnership with Boulton, he greatly improved upon his steam-engine, for which he repeatedly took out new patents. He had, in the course of this honourable career, not only the customary opposition of those who are bigoted adversaries to all improvement, but that kind of opposition which he had to meet by legal process, and which was not quashed till after nearly ten years of litigation. Most of the applications of the newly-invented power were suggested by himself; and, in addition to this vast list of inventions, there must be mentioned a copying-press, a machine for drying linen, and a machine for copying sculpture. He also bore a part in the discovery of the composition of water, introduced the use of chlorine in bleaching, proposed to warm buildings and apartments by steam, and joined in the establishment of the pneumatic institution at Clifton, at which Sir Humphrey Davy laid the foundation of his fame. Honours of a literary and scientific nature were freely accorded him, and he died in 1819, aged 83 years. The admiration of his countrymen has erected statues and columns to him,—worthily, for, in practical science, he must ever stand in the foremost ranks of the benefactors of man; having, by the force of his genius, effected a revolution in all the arts of civilization, and given to manufacturing industry a means of multiplying indefinitely the things most needful for man, and to commerce a servant of unwearied activity, in effecting the interchange of the commodities of the different countries of the earth; whilst war itself has, by the same means, become, in a more eminent degree than ever, the conflict of strategic minds, rather than of mere animal force and courage. In agriculture, also, a change of the like nature is slowly going on. The results of the invention of the steam-engine can be compared only with those of the printing-press; and, in the history of mankind, they will hold places of equal eminence.

WATTEAU, ANTOINE, an eminent French painter. He began as a scene-painter, but soon rose into notice and fame, from that comparatively humble occupation. His landscapes are particularly admired, but he never reached the highest style of art. He once visited England, and died in 1721, aged 37 years.

To WATTLE, v. a. [vatelas, Sax.] to bind with, or form by plaiting, twig.

WATTLE, s. a hurdle; the bars or loose red flesh that hangs below a cock's bill.

WATTS, DR. ISAAC, a theological writer and poet of the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th centuries. He was descended from a true nonconformist stock, and his earliest recollections related to the imprisonment of his own father for conscience' sake. He was educated by Mr. Rowe of London, and after being tutor in the family of Sir John Hartopp, became a Dissenting minister. After awhile, however, his health failed, and he went, on the invitation of Sir Thomas Abney, to live with him at Stoke Newington; and in his family he spent the rest of his life, and died in 1748, aged 75 years. Of his numerous works, his Hymns have ever enjoyed the widest popularity, being used as the expressions of devotion by all denominations of Christians, from the Episcopalian of the Church of England down to the field preachers and Primitive Methodists. And richly have they deserved their fame, but not more than his Hymns for Children, which are, perhaps, the most remarkable compositions of that kind. His Logic was for ages a text-book at Oxford; his Improvement of the Mind has been printed in every possible popular form. His other works are almost forgotten, except his Horæ Lyricæ, which Southey lately edited. An attempt has been made, on the ground of some MS. speculations, written late in life, to impeach the orthodoxy of Dr. Watts, but it has failed, as all such attempts must needs fail,—the nature of the subject-matter being considered, and the vast array of opposing evidence which all his most carefully prepared works afford.

WAVE, s. [waegh, Belg.] water rising in swellings above the level of the surface; a billow; a line bending in and out alternately; unevenness; fluctuation; inequality.

To WAVE, v. n. to play loosely; to float; to be moved as a signal; to fluctuate.—v. a. to raise into inequalities; to move loosely, or to and fro; to beckon; to put aside, or decline for the present; to waft, or remove any thing floating.

To WAVER, v. n. [waefan, Sax.] to play or move loosely to and fro. Applied to the mind, to be unsettled, undetermined, or to fluctuate between different opinions.

To WAWL, v. n. to cry, howl, or make a loud cry expressive of distress, used in contempt.

WAX, s. [weaxe, Sax. weax, Dan. wacks, Belg.] the thick tenacious matter of which bees form their cells; and the same substance melted down and purified, for various uses in art, &c.

To WAX, v. a. to smear, rub, cover, or join with wax.

To WAX, v. n. [weaxan, Sax. wachsen, Teut.] to increase in bulk, height, or age; to grow; to pass into any state; to become.

WAXCHANDLER, s. a maker of wax candles.

WAXEN, a. made of wax.

WAY, s. [wey, Sax. weigh, Belg.] a path which leads to any place; the length of a journey; course; advancement notwithstanding obstacles, used with make: access; passage or room to pass; sphere of observation; method; intermediate step; retreat or submission, after give; tendency to any meaning or act; custom peculiar to a person. By the way, implies without necessary connexion with what precedes. To go or come one's way, or ways, is to come or go without further delay.

WAYFARING, a. travelling; being on a journey.

To WAYLAY, v. a. to watch in order to seize; to beset by ambush.

WAYWARD, a. [wa and weard, Sax.] froward, or perverse; vexatious; morose; peevish.

WE, pron. [Sax.] the plural of the first personal pronoun, I.

WEAK, (week) a. [weace, Sax. week, Belg.] void of strength or health; feeble; not strong; infirm; pliant; soft; not stiff; not powerful; unfortified; scarce audible, or low, applied to sound; wanting spirit, discernment, or caution, applied to the mind; not well supported by argument.

To WEAKEN, (wecken) v. a. to deprive of strength; to debilitate; to enfeeble.

WEAKLY, ad. feebly; faintly; without efficacy; indiscreetly.—a. not strong; not healthy.

WEAKNESS, (weakness) s. infirmity; unhealthfulness; feebleness; defect; failing; want of strength, ability, judgment, resolution, or support.

WEAKSIDE, (weakside) s. a foible; deficiency; infirmity.

WEAL, (weel) s. [welan, Sax.] happiness or prosperity; a state; a republic; public interest or policy.

WEAL, (weel) s. [welan, Sax.] the mark left by a stripe.

WEALD, WALD, WALT, (weald, Sax.) in Composition, signify a wood or forest.

WEALTH, (wealt) s. [wealt, Sax.] riches, whether consisting in money or goods.

WEALTHY, a. rich; opulent; abundant.

To WEAN, (ween) v. a. [wenan, Sax.] to keep a child from sucking that has been brought up by the breast; to withdraw from any habit or desire.

WEAPON, (weapn or wēpn) s. [Sax.] any instrument by which another may be hurt, or one be defended.

To WEAR, (weare) v. a. pret. wore, past part. worn; [wearan, Sax.] to waste, or consume with use or time; to consume or spend tediously, used with away, and applied to time; to bear or carry appendant to the body; to exhibit in appearance; to affect by degrees. Used with out, to harass, fatigue, or destroy.—v. n. to be wasted with time or use; to pass by degrees; to be tediously spent.

WEAR, WEIR, WEER, (weare) s. [wear, Sax. wēr, Teut.] a dam to shut up or raise the water. Also the act of wearing; the thing worn. In the two last senses the first orthography is only used.

WEARINESS, (weariness) s. the quality of being tired, fatigued, or incommode; fatigue; impatience; tediousness.

WEARISOME, a. troublesome; tedious.

WEARISOMENESS, s. the quality of tiring; the state of being easily tired.

WEARY, (weéry) a. [wearen, Belg.] tired; fatigued; wearisome; tiresome; impatient.

To WEARY, (weéry) v. a. to tire; to fatigue; to incommode; to harass; to make impatient.

WEASAND, (weasen, Sax.) the windpipe.

WEASEL, s. [weasel, Sax. and Belg.] in Natural History, a small species of carnivorous quadrupeds, nearly allied to the ferret and the polecat; found in all countries of the N. temperate zone.

WEATHER, (wēther) s. [weader, Sax.] the state of the air with respect either to heat or cold, wet or dryness; tempest, storm.

To WEATHER, (wæðer) v. a. to pass with difficulty; to expose to the air. Followed by a point, to gain a point against the wind; to accomplish against opposition. Used with out, to endure so as to surmount.

WEATHERBEATEN, (wæðerbeeten) a. harassed by, or seasoned to, hard weather.

WEATHERCOCK, (wæðercock) s. a vane to show the direction of the wind. See TOUCH-ME-NOT.

WEATHERGAGE, (wæðergage) s. any thing that shows the weather. At sea, a ship is said to have the weathergauge that is to the windward of another.

WEATHERGLASS, s. a glass that shows the weight of the air; a barometer.

WEATHERWISE, (wæðerwise) a. skilled in foretelling the change of the weather.

To WEAVE, (wæfan, Sax. wæven, Belg.) to form any stuff in a loom with a shuttle; to unite or form, by inserting one part into another.—v. n. to work with a loom.

WEAVER, (wæfwer) s. one who makes woollen or linen cloth.

WEAVER BIRD, s. in Ornithology, a general name given to several species of African birds, which build their nests, either singly or in company, in the most artful and beautiful way; the materials being so skillfully interwoven as to form a kind of felt; and the whole structure, in the case of the sociable species, resembling a vast honey-comb.

WEAVING, s. the art of forming by means of a loom those fabrics specially designated textile. There are various kinds of weaving, used for the production of different stuffs. The power-loom has now almost superseded hand-loom weaving.

WEB, (wæbbe, Sax.) any thing woven; a tissue or texture formed of threads interwoven with each other; a kind of film that hinders the sight; a cataract; a suffusion; the net and nest of a spider.

WEBBE, SAMUEL, a distinguished English composer, who was apprenticed to a cabinet-maker, but gave up this trade, and gained a scanty living by copying music, till his compositions brought him into notice. He held offices both in the Cathedral and the Glee-club, and gained nearly 30 medals for prize glees, &c. He died in 1817, aged 77 years. His glees are amongst the finest of the English school of music; they are well known. He also wrote some masses and other sacred music, songs, &c. He had acquired, by his own study, a considerable proficiency in various languages and other studies.

WEBER, CARL MARIA VON, an eminent German composer. He received the best instruction in his art that Germany could afford, but he owes his celebrity to his own genius. He made professional tours throughout the whole of Germany, and resided for some time at Breslau, Vienna, Carlsruhe, Dresden, &c., holding in some of these places official situations, and always increasing his fame. At last he visited London, and superintended a new opera; and died there, in 1826, aged 40 years. His Der Freischütz, and Oberon, are his two greatest pieces.

WE/FOOTED, a. having films between the toes, applied to water-fowl.

WEBSTER, DR. NOAH, the American lexicographer. He studied at Yale College, served in the war of Independence, and finally, at New York and Newhaven, edited a newspaper, kept a school, and published various works on different subjects. His Dictionary is one of the best of the English language, but it is disfigured by Americanisms; and in the essential parts, such as etymology, is not as advanced as a work of the last age ought to be. He died in 1843, aged 81 years.

To WED, v. a. [wæddian, Sax.] to marry; to take for husband or wife; to join in marriage; to unite indissolubly, or for a long continuance; to unite by love or fondness.—v. n. to contract matrimony.

WEDDING, s. the marriage ceremony; a marriage.

WEDGE, s. [wegge, Belg. wegge, Dan.] in Natural Philosophy, one of the mechanical powers, consisting of a body with a sharp edge, continually growing thicker, and used in cleaving timber. A mass of metal; any thing in form of a wedge.

To WEDGE, v. a. to fasten or force together with wedges; to stop or straiten with wedges; to cleave with wedges; to fix as a wedge.

WEDGWOOD, JOSIAH, the great improver of English pottery, rose from humble circumstances by his taste and ingenuity. He especially excelled in the manufacture of ornamental ware, vases, seals, cameos, &c.; whilst in common ware he introduced such improvements that England now rivals all the countries which are celebrated for their potteries. He invented a pyrometer, projected the Grand Traction canal, and expended the large fortune he realized with enlightened munificence. His seat near Newcastle-under-Lyme was called by him Etruria. He died in 1795, aged 65 years. Some kinds of earthenware are called, after him, Wedgwood-ware.

WEDLOCK, s. [wæd and lœc, Sax.] matrimony; marriage; nuptials.

WEDNESDAY, s. [Wolensdag, Sax.] the fourth day in the week; named from Teuton god, Woden.

WEE, a. [wægan, Belg.] little; small.

WEED, s. [wæd, Sax.] a noxious or useless herb growing spontaneously.—[wæda, Sax. wæd, Belg.] any kind of garment or dress.

To WEED, v. a. to clear from or remove noxious or useless plants. Figuratively, to free from any thing noxious, or from an ill habit; to root out.

WEEDER, s. one that takes away any thing noxious.

WEEDY, a. consisting of or abounding with weeds.

WEEK, s. [wæke, Belg.] the space of seven days.

WEEKDAY, s. a working-day, opposed to Sunday, the day of rest.

WEEKLY, a. happening, produced, or done once a week.—ad. once a week.

WEEL, s. [wæel, Sax.] a whirlpool; a snare for fish, made of willow twigs.

To WEEN, v. a. [wænan, Sax.] to think, imagine, or fancy.

To WEEP, v. n. preter. and past part. wæpt. [wæpan, Sax.] to express sorrow by tears; to shed tears.—v. a. to bewail or lament with tears; to bemoan; to shed moisture; to abound with wet.

WEEPER, s. one who sheds tears; a mourner; part of the costume worn at funerals.

To WEET, v. n. preter. wote or wote; [wæton, Sax. wæten, Belg.] to know; to be informed. Seldom used, except in the preterite.

WEEVER, JOHN, an English antiquary of the 17th century. He studied at Cambridge, but little is known of him, save his work called Funeral Monuments, which is of considerable value and interest. He died in about 1632.

WEEVIL, s. [wæwel, Teut.] in Entomology, the general name of a tribe of small beetles, easily recognised by their long and narrow rostra, or snouts. They are very destructive to nuts, fruit trees, vines, wheat, &c. The species that bores into old wood is well known. Some species are very beautiful in the colours of their elytra.

WEFT, s. [wæfta, Sax.] the woof of cloth. See WAIF.

To WEIGH, (wæy) v. a. [wæyhen, Belg.] to find the weight of any thing by balance or scales; to equal in weight; to pay, allot, or take by weight; applied to an anchor, to take up; to examine or balance in the mind; followed by down, to overbalance, or exceed in weight or importance; to overburden or depress, applied to difficulties.—v. n. to contain in weight; to raise the anchor; to sink by its own weight; to be looked on as important, to determine the judgment, followed by with.

WEIGHER, s. he who weighs.

WEIGHING-MACHINE, s. an instrument for ascertaining the weight of goods, &c. The largest are those for weighing hay, the machinery of which is very simple, being a combination of levers, and can be seen in almost all country towns.

WEIGHT, (wæit) s. [wæht, Sax.] quantity found by balancing in scales; a mass by which other bodies are examined in scales; a ponderous or heavy mass; the quality by which bodies tend towards the centre; pressure; burden; importance, power, influence, or efficacy.

WEIGHTY, (wæditi) a. heavy; ponderous; efficacious; momentous; important.

WEIMAR, the capital of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, Germany. It stands on the Ilm, over which are 2 bridges. The palace, the churches, and the public buildings are fine structures. It has a fine library, and several excellent educational institutions. Its trade is inconsiderable. Pop. under 15,000. Lat. 51. 0. N. Long. 11. 23. E.

WEINBRENNER, FREDERIC, an eminent German architect. He studied his art by travelling in Europe, and particularly in Italy. On his return to Germany, he erected many noble buildings in his native place, Carlsruhe, in Baden, Leipsic, Strasburg, &c. He died in 1826, aged 60 years. His works are of great value to students and practical architects.

WEIßSE, CHRISTIAN FELIX, a German poet, of the last century. He studied at Leipsic, and wrote dramas, &c. at that city. There also he edited a literary journal, and published his books for children. He held an office under government, by which he was mainly supported; and died in 1804, aged 78 years. His works are very numerous; but his reputation is somewhat eclipsed by the greater men of letters who have adorned Germany since his day.

WE'LCOME, a. [willcome, Sax. welkom, Belg.] received with gladness, kindness, or care; pleasing, or conferring pleasure, by being present.

WE'LCOME, s. the ceremony paid to a visitant at his first appearance; kind reception of a new comer.

To WE'LCOME, v. a. to receive with kindness.

To WELD, v. a. to beat one mass into another.

WELDON, JOHN, an eminent English composer, of the last century. He studied under Purcell, and was first an organist at Oxford. Afterwards he became organist of the Chapel Royal, of St. Bride's, and of St. Martin's in the Fields. His anthems were very fine. He died in 1736, aged about 55 years.

WE'LFARE, s. happiness; success; prosperity.

WE'LKIN, s. [welken, Sax.] the sky; the visible regions of the air.—a. sky-coloured.

WELL, s. [welle, Sax.] a spring or fountain; a deep narrow pit of water; the cavity in which stairs are placed.

WELL, a. not sick; happy; convenient; proper; being in favour; recovered from any sickness or misfortune.

WELL, ad. [Sax.] in health; not ill; in a skilful, proper, sufficient, or good manner; favourably; conveniently; pleasingly. As well as, used conjunctively, implies together with. Well nigh, signifies nearly, or almost. In composition it expresses any thing right, proper, laudable, handsome, or free from defect.—conj. used to introduce a new sentence, containing a change of thought, unexpected by the reader.

WE'LLADAY, interject. alas.

WELLBE'ING, s. happiness; prosperity.

WELLBRE'D, a. polite; elegant of manners or behaviour.

WELLESLEY, RICHARD COLLEY, MARQUIS, son of the musical Earl of Mornington, a distinguished statesman. He studied at Eton and Oxford; and coming to his title, sat in the Irish House of Peers, and entered the British House of Commons. He soon won the favour of the king; and was sent, when but 37 years old, as governor-general to India. The period of his government was a momentous one; and against the expected attempts of Buonaparte, against the rebellions of the native princes, his proceedings were alike energetic and successful. In the subsequent part of his life he was ambassador at Madrid, and lord-lieutenant of Ireland. He once attempted to form a ministry; but was unsuccessful, but he held office under Lords Grey and Melbourne. He died in 1842, aged 82 years. The Marquis was a fine scholar, and a man of considerable parts; although not so distinguished at home as abroad.

WELLINGBOROUGH, Northamptonshire. It is seated on the ascent of a hill, on the western bank of the river Nen; and is a large place, with a considerable manufacture of lace, and is reckoned the second town in the county; 68 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 5061.

WELLS, Somersetshire. It is seated at the foot of a hill, and has its name from the wells and springs about it. The public and private buildings are very good; and the cathedral in particular a stately pile, whose W. end is adorned with images and carving. The bishop's palace is like a castle, being surrounded with walls and a moat; the houses of the prebendaries are handsome, and the market-house is a fine structure, supported by pillars. It is a bishop's see in conjunction with Bath. It is 120 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 7050.

WELLS'PRING, s. [wellgesprig, Sax.] a fountain; a spring.

WELSH, a. belonging to Wales.

WELSHPOOL, Montgomeryshire. It stands in a rich vale, on the river Severn, and has a good trade. Powis Castle is a large, stately structure. It is 169 miles from London. Market, Monday. Pop. 4620.

WELT, s. a border, ground, or edging.

To WELTER, v. n. [welteren, Belg.] to roll in water, mire, blood, or any filth; to wallow.

WEM, s. [Sax.] a spot; a blemish; a scar.

WEN, s. [Sax.] a kind of tumour growing on different parts of the body; they are sometimes fleshy and almost solid; but at others they contain serum, &c.

WENCH, s. [wenche, Sax.] a young woman; a prostitute.

To WEND, v. n. pret. went; [wendan, Sax.] to go and pass to and from. Its pret. went is now only in use.

WENTLETRAP, s. in Conchology, an elegant spiral shell, having at intervals transverse ribs, which mark the successive growths. There are several species.

WERE, the plural of WAS, the preter-imperfect of BE; [wæren, Sax.] likewise the imperfect singular and plural of the subjunctive mood of the same verb.

WERNER, ABRAHAM GOTTLIEB, the father of Neptunian Geology, a celebrated German mineralogist. He studied at Leipsic, and published a work on mineralogy, which gained him a professorship in the School of Mines at Freiburg. He was afterwards made Counsellor of Mines for Saxony. He here formed and taught his theory of formations, insisting that all beds and rocks, nay, even basalt and metallic veins, were formed by deposition from water. His services to mineralogical science, and the charm of his lectures, obtained him a host of disciples; and better than that, he raised up a well-trained set of observers, of whom it is enough to say that Alexander Humboldt was one. He died in 1817, aged 67 years. His splendid collections he patriotically sold for far less than their worth to the state.

WERTH, WERTH, WYRTH, [werthig, Sax.] in the names of places, signifies farm, court, or village.

WESER, a large river of Germany. It is formed by the confluence of the Werra and the Fulda; and flows through Hanover, Brunswick, Prussia, and other smaller states, and falls into the N. Sea, after a course of above 200 miles, between Oldenburg and Hanover, near Bremen.

WESLEY, the name of a family which has produced a number of eminent divines; and which is nearly related to the Wellesley family, and did at one time bear that name. The most famous are the following: John Wesley, the founder of the Wesleyan Methodist Society, was the son of Samuel Wesley of Epworth, and studied at Oxford. There, with his brother Charles, the equally famous George Whitefield, Hervey of the "Meditations," and several others, he joined in a religious association, which in spirit and forms exactly resembled modern Puseyism, except in the circumstance of their neither professing nor practising such unbounded submission to Church authority, as the recent devotees of Oxford have done. The mystical writer, Law, next exerted his influence on Wesley's plastic mind; and, as if for the maturing of what he had already gained, he went out to Georgia, with General Oglethorpe, as a kind of chaplain. He here became acquainted with the Moravians; and, in spite of much that seems unaccountably imprudent, was a far more fervent and devout preacher than the colonies usually were favoured with. He left hastily, and in the Downs passed a vessel carrying out Whitefield to the colony, after having begun the public stir, which has been often, not very sagely, called the second Reformation. After his return he places the date of his conversion; and as he was deeply interested in the Moravians, he next went to Herrnhut, to study their system at the fountain-head; and stayed on the continent for some months. During the whole of this time, from before his joining the Oxford Methodists, he had been a clergyman of the English Church; and now he began his unauthorized career. In spite of canons, he preached wherever a congregation could be gathered: Whitefield was his associate. The formation of associations for religious improvement; the erection of meeting-houses; lay preaching (as it is called); the separation from his associates, Whitefield and the Moravians, from whom he differed on so many points; the assumption of episcopal power, in the ordination of ministers; the assumption of patriarchal or even loftier power, in the organization of a distinct ecclesiastical body; the laying down of doctrines to which all ministers were to subscribe, &c. &c.—all this followed, step by step, in necessary sequence. The toils he endured, the opposition (at times threatening his life) he calmly braved, the strange fervours he for a time encouraged,

WESTMORELAND.

COAT OF ARMS

REFERENCE to the H-PLAN

1	First Ward
2	Bar Ward
3	Rendel
4	Landale

The County maps 2 numbers.

his domestic trials;—all these are set forth in the full histories of his life, and must be sought there. He died in 1791, aged 88 years. Impartiality demands that to Wesley should be ascribed the praise of theological learning considerably above that of the average of religious teachers;—of a zeal, which, with whatever admixtures, never slumbered nor grew cold;—and of an amount of knowledge of human nature (in good part perhaps unconscious, yet not the less operative on that account,) which only the fewest leaders of men have possessed. Amongst the benefactors of his race he takes no unworthy rank. But he displayed along with these rare excellencies, almost all that enters into the idea of the priest;—the timorous boldness, the astuteness, the unrelaxing grasp of power once gotten. His writings are numerous, and of them his practical and devotional works are by far the best; by his followers, of course, his dogmatical and polemical works are equally highly esteemed. Amongst these writings we find also some popular histories, a work on Medicine, and another on Natural Philosophy. Charles Wesley, the brother and coadjutor of the foregoing, preceded him in the fervours of the first Methodism of Oxford, and faithfully and zealously co-operated with him in his great work. He surpassed his brother as a preacher; but he would have left no such memorial behind him as he has, had not that brother been the man of knowledge and power he was. He died in 1788, aged 80 years. He contributed the greater number of original hymns to the collection published by John Wesley; and amongst them are many that prove his title to a high place amidst our sacred poets. His sons are eminent as musical performers and composers. Charles was organist of St. George's, Hanover Square; and died in 1815, aged 58 years. Samuel was remarkable for the precocious development of his talent, and for his maintenance to the close of his life of his earliest renown. He was one of the finest extemporizers on the organ this country could ever boast. And he was in general learning and classical attainments no mean proficient. An accidental fall, in which he injured his head, deprived him of much of his energy and time: its effects were apparent at intervals, for the rest of his life, and it eventually overcame him. He died in 1837, aged 71 years.

WESLEYAN METHODISM, in Ecclesiastical History, the system of church-government and of doctrine founded by John Wesley, and maintained by the Wesleyan Society. Its creed is contained in certain specified sermons of its founder, which are subscribed by all its itinerant preachers, and is almost pure Arminianism. Its government-system is somewhat complicated, and has received some modifications since the death of its author, but only to the more complete and effectual realization of his idea. The Wesleyan Methodists form but one ecclesiastical body, although scattered through many lands; and the whole affairs are managed by the Conference, a yearly meeting of itinerant ministers alone, with a president, secretaries, committees, &c. The ministry consists of local preachers, (lay agents,) probationers for the regular ministry, and itinerant ministers. The first class preach at the places in their own neighbourhood to which they are appointed; the others are located at central situations by the management of the Conference, and take their turns in preaching at the different stations round them, and are rarely suffered to remain in one place for more than three years. (This regulation is only slightly modified in the case of missionaries.) The number appointed to a place depends on the extent of labour required, and one is always made higher than the others by the office and title of superintendent. Dwelling, furniture, pay, are all arranged by strict and inviolable laws. The whole field of the Society's operations is mapped out into circuits, named after the central places, and the local business is transacted by the circuit-ministers and officers. Admission to the Society is easy, and exclusion also. Occupation is given to all the active spirits, by the organization of classes and bands, over which they are set as leaders; but all things are under the eye and hand of the ministers, who are themselves under Conference. Provision is made for the maintenance of the most restless agitation, by periodical meetings of districts, circuits, classes, bands, &c. &c.; by celebration of love-feasts; and by stated and by no means unfrequent calls for contributions. No one is his own; every one is a public character; and the Conference, without auricular confession, knows, or could know, the whole of every individual member of the Society.

In missionary operations all this momentum has proved eminently effective, and their agents may be compared in many points advantageously even with those of the Moravians. Such a system—the very perfectest embodiment of church power the world has ever witnessed—could not work so long as it has without creating new sects; at least four other bodies of Methodists have separated from the Wesleys, on different allegations, in this country. In America, the most of them have become Episcopalian. Wealth, rank, respectability, find its most iron rules pliant to their requirements. Its exclusiveness is one of its most wonderful features; its members admit freely the help of all denominations in their work; they reluctantly stretch forth the hand to aid any in return. Eventually, its compactness and perfection must cause its downfall; it can change, but not so fast as mankind is changing, nor yet to the same extent. Already it is retrograding, and its wisest leaders seem not to discern the cause. A gigantic system of Protestant propagandism, and direction, its work is necessarily finished when those whom it has called to life have outgrown its nurture, and there are no more fairly within the reach of its voice. It has conferred blessings not few, nor trifling, on innumerable hearts; and when its day is ended, historians who trace its plan and its career, will place it unhesitatingly amongst the grandest—because most daring and most successful—schemes of ecclesiastical legislation.

WEST, s. [Sax.] that point of the heavens where the sun sets when in either of the equinoxes.

WEST, a, being toward, or coming from, the region of the setting sun when in the equinox.

WEST, GILBERT, a poet and writer of the last century. He studied at Oxford, and obtained first an office under government, and finally the treasurership of Chelsea Hospital. He died in 1756, aged 50 years. His translation of Pindar, and his Observations on the Resurrection, are his principal works.

WEST, BENJAMIN, a celebrated painter of the English school, was born in the United States, of a Quaker family, and displayed, in his first attempt at painting, the determination and talent which were a prelude to his subsequent success. He visited Italy, and attracted the attention of the artists and connoisseurs by his paintings, which led to his visiting England, and finally settling there. He enjoyed the patronage of George III. for forty years; and on the death of Reynolds, was made president of the Royal Academy. He died in 1820, aged 82 years. His paintings are mostly of the historical kind, and are very numerous; they are familiarized to all by the engraved copies. To students they are valuable for the composition; but he never rose to the highest rank of his art.

WESTALL, RICHARD, an English painter. He was first an heraldic engraver, but relinquished that for the study of art. He is chiefly known as an illustrator of popular poets, Milton, Shakspeare, More, Crabbe, Goldsmith, &c. &c. He died in 1836, aged 71 years.

WESTERLY, a, tending or being toward the west.

WESTERN, a, being in the west, or toward the part where the sun sets.

WEST INDIES, the general name of the islands lying between the United States and S. America, which are the natural boundaries of the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea. Cuba is the largest of the islands. They are described under their individual names. Of these, St. Domingo, or Hayti, is independent; Spain possesses Cuba, Porto Rico, Culebra, and Bique; Great Britain, the Bahamas, Jamaica, all but five of the Virgin Islands, Anguilla, Barbuda, St. Christopher, Nevis, Montserrat; Antigua, Dominica, St. Lucia, Barbadoes, St. Vincent, Granada, Grenadines, Tobago, and Trinidad; France, Guadeloupe, with several small islands near it, and Martinique; Denmark, St. John, St. Thomas, and Santa Cruz; the Netherlands, St. Martin, St. Eustathius, and Saba; and Sweden, St. Bartholomew. Pop. of the whole, about 3,500,000.

WESTMINSTER, Middlesex. It stands on the Thames, and forms part of the English metropolis. In it are situated the Houses of Parliament, the great government offices, the chief law courts, &c. Its Abbey is one of the most magnificent of our collegiate churches, and is the British Wallhalla. Pop. 222,053. See LONDON.

WESTMORELAND, an English county, 40 miles in length, and 21 in breadth, bounded by Cumberland, Lancashire, and Yorkshire. It contains 26 parishes and 8 market towns. The air is very sharp and cold, but healthy. It is a mountainous country; two ridges cross the county, with peaks about 3000 feet high, and run towards the sea to the S. W., where a bay of it washes this county. There are some valleys fruitful in corn and pastures, and the hills serve to feed a great number of sheep. The principal rivers are the Eden, the Ken, the Loan, the Eamon, the Tees, the Lowther, the Hunna, the Winster, the Lavenet-beck, and the Blinken-beck. There also four noted lakes, called Ulles-water, Broad-water, Horns-water, and Winander-meer. It yields coal, slate, building- tone of all kinds, and other valuable minerals. The principal town is Appleby, but Kendal is the most considerable for size, trade, and population. Pop. 56,454. It sends 3 members to parliament.

WESTPHALIA, a province of Prussia. It adjoins Hanover, the Netherlands, Brunswick, Hesse-Cassel, and Darmstadt; and is bounded by the other Rhenish provinces of Prussia. It is about 100 miles long, by about 80 broad. It has several ranges of low mountains, and is watered by the Weser, the Ems, &c. Iron, lead, copper, &c. are found here. It produces corn, fruits, timber, &c. It is a country of great manufacturing industry. Münster and Paderborn are its chief places. Pop. about 1,500,000. The Treaty of Westphalia was made at the close of the 30 years' war, in 1648.

WEST POINT, a town of New York, United States. It stands on the Hudson river, and is of importance as the seat of the United States Military Academy; an institution which may be favourably compared with the best of the same kind in Europe. It is 278 miles from Washington. Pop. (exclusive of the school), 900. Seven other places in the States have the same name.

WESTWARD, ad. [westward, Sax.] toward the west.

WET, a. [wet, Sax.] moist; rainy; humid; having some moisture adhering.

WET, s. water; moisture; rain; humidity.

To WET, v. a. to make moist; to plunge or soak in any liquor; to drench with drink.

WETHER, s. [weder, Sax. and Belg.] a castrated ram.

WETNESS, s. the state of being wet; moisture; humidity.

WETSTEIN, JOHN JAMES, a learned critic and theologian, of the beginning of the last century. He studied at Basel; and after travelling in England, France, &c. for the purpose of consulting the Greek MSS. of the New Testament, prepared for the publication of his Critical Edition. He was obliged however to leave Basel, and became a professor at Amsterdam, where his valuable edition appeared. He died there in 1754, aged 61 years. He was an able critic, and greatly advanced the correct study of the Greek Scriptures; but his work is superseded by later editions, based on a more accurate collation of far more numerous MSS.

To WEX, v. a. [properly wax], to grow; to increase.

WEXFORD, a county of Leinster, Ireland. It lies on the Atlantic Ocean and St. George's Channel; and is bounded by Waterford, Kilkenny, Carlow, and Wicklow. It is about 50 miles long, by 25 broad. Its mountains are often above 2000 feet high; the Slaney is its chief river, and Wexford Haven its largest harbour. It yields lead, copper, slate, building-stone, &c. &c. Its agriculture is in a flourishing condition, and its fisheries are of considerable value. Its trade is carried on chiefly with England. Wexford, its chief town, stands on Wexford Haven, at the mouth of the Slaney, over which is a bridge. It has some handsome buildings and quays, and a considerable trade. Its manufactories and fisheries are also important. It is 70 miles from Dublin. Pop. 11,252. Pop. of county, 202,033. It send 4 members to the imperial parliament.

WEYMOUTH, Dorsetshire. It stands on the bay called by the same name, and is connected by a bridge with Melcombe-regis (which see). It was formerly of great repute for trade, and as a watering-place, but is now much declined. It is 130 miles from London. Pop. 2609.

WHALE, s. [huale, Sax.] in Zoology, the name of a tribe of mammalian marine animals, of which there are many genera and species. (See DUGONG, CACHALOT, SPERM-WHALE, &c.) Its chief value to man arises from the oil extracted from its fat, or blubber; to obtain which, a vast number of ships are constantly employed, both in the N. or icy Sea, and in the S. Pacific, in the capture of whales. This fishery is attended with the utmost danger, both from the inhospitable character of the seas in which it is carried on; and from the way in which alone these monsters can be attacked, viz. in boats, by a harpoon. Their strength is so great that they have frequently been known to shiver a boat to atoms by one blow of their tails. As they are, in the organs, like land animals, and not like fishes, they are obliged to come to the surface for the purpose of breathing; and they blow, out of holes in the upper part of the head, the water they have taken into their mouths, like large fountains. They bring forth their young alive, and suckle them; and always show the greatest attachment to them when they are attacked by whalers.

WHA/LEBONE, s. a substance of a horny and very elastic nature, which is found in the mouth of many species of whales, and is supposed to be used in the retention of their prey, instead of teeth. It is used for many purposes in the useful arts, and particularly in various parts of female dress.

WHA/LER, s. a vessel equipped for the sole purpose of capturing whales, and obtaining their oil.

WHARF, s. [Swed. werf, Belg.] a bank from which vessels are laden or unladen.

WHA/RFAGE, s. money paid for landing or shipping goods at a wharf.

WHA/RFINGER, s. the owner of a wharf; one employed in shipping and landing goods.

WHAT, pron. [huat, Sax. eat, Belg.] that which; which part; which of several. It is also used interrogatively. What time, at the time when. What day, on the day when. When used before two or more subordinate sentences, which designate the means, or the manner of the action, it signifies partly.

WHATE/VER, WHA/TSOEVER, pron. being one or another, either generically, specifically, or numerically; all that; the whole that.

WHEAT, (wheet) s. [hueteat, Sax.] in Botany, Agriculture, Commerce, &c., a plant of the order of grasses, whose seeds are large and abundantly farinaceous, for which reason it has always been greatly cultivated for the purpose of supplying the staff of life—bread. It grows to greatest perfection in the temperate zone; and has, in process of time, divided into many varieties, which are valuable for different peculiarities. In Agriculture, it is the most important of all the crops that are grown; and almost all the modern improvements in that useful art have been directed to the perfection of the wheat-crop. Egyptian wheat, is a variety that produces many ears on one stalk. Indian wheat, see MAIZE. Works on farming must be consulted for full descriptions of the different sorts most grown in England.

WHE/ATEAR, (wheetear) s. in Ornithology, a small song-bird, which is found on heaths in summer in this country, and is accounted a great delicacy by epicures.

WHE/ATEN, (wheeten) a. made of wheat.

To WHEE/DLE, v. a. to entice by soft words; to flatter; to persuade by kind words.

WHEEL, s. [huwel, Sax. wiel, Belg.] a circular body that turns round upon an axis; a circular body; a carriage with wheels; an instrument of spinning; an instrument on which criminals are tortured; rotation; revolution; compass about.

To WHEEL, v. n. to move on wheels, or turn on a centre; to turn; to revolve; to fetch a compass.—v. a. to put into a circular course.

WHEEL AND AXLE, s. in Natural Philosophy, one of the mechanical powers, consisting of a small cylindrical beam, to one end of which a wheel or crank is attached, by the turning of which a rope, on which any weight is suspended, is coiled round the cylinder, and the weight raised. It is only a modification of the lever.

WHEE/LBARROW, s. a small carriage driven forward by two bandies, on a single wheel.

WHEE/LWRIGHT, (wheetlrit) s. one who makes wheels.

To WHEEZE, v. n. [hucoosen, Sax.] to breathe with noise.

To WHELM, v. a. [welhifan, Sax. wilma, Isl.] to cover with something which cannot be thrown off; to bury; to throw upon something so as to cover or bury it; to turn the open side of a vessel downwards.

WHELP, s. [welp, Belg.] the young of a dog, or beast of prey.

To WHELP, v. n. to bring forth young; applied generally to beasts of prey.

WHEN, ad. [whan, Goth.] at the time; at what particular time; after the time that. Used interrogatively, at what time? When a., signifies at the time when.

WHENCE, ad. from what place, person, or cause; from which premises; from what source. Sometimes from is used with it, but very improperly.

WHENEVER, WHENSOEVER, ad. at whatsoever time.

WHERE, ad. [where, Sax. weor, Belg.] at which or what place; at the place in which. Any where, at any place.

WHEREAS, ad. when on the contrary; but on the contrary; notwithstanding.

WHEREBY, ad. by which.

WHEREFORE, ad. for which or what reason.

WHEREVER, ad. at whatsoever place.

WHEREOF, ad. of which.

WHERESOEVER, ad. at what place soever.

WHEREUPON, ad. upon which.

WHEREY, s. a light small boat, or barge, with the mast in the forepart, and a mainsail and jib, used on rivers.

To WHET, v. a. [whetten, Sax. wetten, Belg.] to sharpen any instrument; to give an edge, or make angry.

WHET, s. the act of giving an edge; any thing that promotes appetite or hunger.

WHETHER, ad. [whether, Sax.] used in a disjunctive proposition or question, to set one part of the sentence in opposition to the other, and to affirm or deny, even though the other part do not hold good.

WHETHER, pron. which of the two.

WHETSTONE, s. a stone on which any thing is sharpened by rubbing.

WHETTER, s. one who whets or sharpens.

WHEY, s. [wey, Belg. wey, Sax.] the thin serous part of milk, separated from the curds; any white or thin fluid.

WHICH, pron. [which, Sax.] a relative pronoun, used only in referring to things, as who is used for persons. It is likewise used as a demonstrative and interrogative. "Take which you will.—Which is the man?" It sometimes has whoso in the genitive case.

WHICHOTE, DR. BENJAMIN, one of the most eminent of the latitudinarian divines of the 17th century. He studied at Cambridge, and prospered as well under the Commonwealth as under the restored monarchy. He died in 1683, aged 73 years. A volume of Apothecisms by him contains much that is suggestive of thought.

WHIFF, s. [chwyth, Brit.] a blast or puff of wind.

To WHIFFLE, v. n. to move as if driven to and fro by the wind; to play on the life.

WHIFFLER, s. one that blows strongly; one that plays on the flute; a mere trifler; a pitiful, mean, sorry fellow; a lackey who clears the way before the mayor.

WHIG, s. [wey, Sax.] wey. In Politics, the name given to that party in the state which is opposed to the Tories. This name originated in Scotland, but did not long retain its first meaning. The true ground of difference between the Whigs and the Tories was, that these were partisans of the Stuart dynasty, and those were opposed to it, and held by the "glorious" Revolution of 1688. When the cause of the Pretender was proved to be hopeless, the Whigs began to be reformers; and during the whole of the revolutionary wars, took part with more or less steadfastness against the attacks on France. The removal of the civil disabilities of the Dissenters and the Romanists supplied the next distinction of this party from the Tories; and the Reform Bill, and some others that naturally arose from it, served to maintain them separate a little longer. But, from the middle of the last century, it had been seen, with growing distinctness, that though the Whigs and Tories formed two parties, they were actuated, in the main, by the same principles. After the passing of the Municipal Corporation Bill, this was made demonstratively clear, by the breaking up of the Tory party, and the organization of a new one, under the title of Conservatives. This party was itself broken up by the repeal of the Corn Laws; and now it is evident that the parties in parliament are composed of the followers of the different disputants for place and power, but that all (with the exception of a very few independent members) are seeking to carry out the same schemes, and to establish the same aristocratic principles.

WHIGGISM, s. the tenets and practice of the Whigs.

WHILE, s. formerly written quile, [weill, Goth.] time; a space of time.

WHILE, WHILES, WHILST, ad. [while, Sax.] during the time that; as long as; at the same time that.

WHILOM, ad. [hwilom, Sax.] some time ago; formerly; once; of old. Obsolete.

WHIM, s. a freak, caprice, or odd fancy; a conceit.

WHIMBREL, s. in Ornithology, a species of curlew found as a migratory bird in this country; and spread over the whole of the N. countries of the E. hemisphere.

To WHIMPER, v. n. [wimieren, Teut.] to cry without making any loud noise.

WHIMSICAL, (whimsikal) a. capricious; oddly fanciful; fantastical; freakish.

WHIMSY, (whimsy) s. an odd fancy or caprice.

WHIN, s. [cheyn, Brit.] in Botany, the low prickly shrub also called gorse, or furze.

WHINCHAT, s. in Ornithology, a small migratory British warbler, found on wide commons; where it makes its nest amongst the gorse, or whins.

To WHINE, v. n. [weanian, Sax. weenen, Belg. cryno, Brit.] to lament in a low voice; to complain affectively; to draw out any sound; to make a plaintive noise.

WHINE, s. a plaintive noise; mean or affected complaint.

To WHINNY, v. n. to make a noise like a horse or colt.

WHINYARD, s. a sword, in contempt.

To WHIP, v. a. [weopan, Sax. weipan, Belg.] to strike with any thing tough and flexible; to sew slightly; to lash with sarcasm; to drive or correct with lashes; to take any thing suddenly or nimbly.—v. n. to move nimbly.

WHIP, s. [weop, Sax.] an instrument used in driving horses, &c.

WHIPCORD, s. a cord of which lashes are made.

WHIPHAND, s. the advantage over another.

WHIPPER, s. one who punishes with whipping.

WHIPPOORWILL, s. in Ornithology, a kind of goatsucker, found in the United States, whose note somewhat resembles the words which it has received as its common name.

WHIPSTAFF, s. on shipboard, a piece of wood fastened to the helm, which the steersman holds in his hand to move the helm and turn the ship.

WHIPSTER, s. a nimble fellow; a prating insignificant fellow; a sharper.

To WHIRL, v. [cheyran, Sax.] to turn round rapidly.—v. n. to run round swiftly.

WHIRL, s. a quick and violent circular motion; gyration; quick rotation; any thing moved with rapid rotation.

WHIRLIGIG, s. a toy which children spin round.

WHIRLPOOL, (whirlpool, Sax.) a large eddy or vortex in moving water. See MAELSTROM.

WHIRLWIND, s. a stormy wind moving circularly.

WHISK, s. [weisen, Teut.] a small hand-besom or brush.

To WHISK, v. a. to clean with a whisk; to move nimbly.

WHISKER, s. the hair growing on the side of the face in men; the mustachios.

WHISKING, a. great; swinging.

WHISKY, s. a distilled liquor, obtained, in Scotland and Ireland, from barley. Also a kind of one-horse chaise.

To WHISPER, v. n. [whisperen, Belg.] to speak so low to a person as not to be heard by another.—v. a. to speak to in a low voice; to sururate; to prompt secretly.

WHISPER, s. a low soft voice; susurration.

WHIST, a. still or silent.—interj. be still or attentive.

WHIST, s. a game at cards, so called from its requiring silence and deep attention.

To WHISTLE, v. n. [hwistlan, Sax.] to form a kind of musical sound by contracting the lips together, so as to leave a small round aperture between them; to make a sound with a small wind instrument; to sound shrill.—v. a. to call by a whistle.

WHISTLE, (hwistle, Sax.) sound made by the modulation of the mouth; a small wind instrument; a sound made by a small wind instrument; the mouth; a call, such as sportsmen use to their dogs; the noise of winds.

WHISTLER, s. one who whistles.

WHISTON, WILLIAM, a distinguished mathematician of the beginning of the last century. He studied at Cambridge, and entered the Church. By Sir Isaac Newton's means, he procured a professorship at Cambridge; but lost it by adopting Arianism and Antipedobaptism. He was also prosecuted as a heretic, and annoyed in many ways; till an Act of Grace relieved him from this ignoble persecution, and his judges from the difficulty of determining what heresy was, and whether he was guilty of it. He continued to speculate and write on science and theology during the rest of his life. He died in 1752, aged 85 years. Of all his numerous writings, but one keeps its ground, a Translation of Josephus. His theory of the deluge has been a matter for mirth ever since it was propounded.

WHIT, s. [whit, Sax.] a point, or jot; the least perceptible quantity; a title.

WHITBY, Yorkshire, N. Riding. It is commodiously seated near the mouth of the river Esk, over which is a bridge; and is a considerable sea-port, building many ships for the coal trade. It has some handsome public buildings. Market, Saturday. Pop. 11,682.

WHITBY, DR. DANIEL, a theological writer of considerable name amongst those who agree with his doctrinal tenets. He studied at Oxford, entered the Church, and enjoyed a good proportion of Church preferment. He died in 1726, aged 88 years. His writings are very numerous, and are almost all of a controversial character. His Commentary, and works respecting the ever mooted "five points," are the only ones that are read in these days. He seems to have been an Arian in the latter part of his life, which may possibly detract somewhat from the weight of his name in controversy.

WHITCHURCH, Hampshire. It consists principally of one street, and has a manufacture of paper, for the use of the Bank of England. The situation is low. It is 56 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 1741.

WHITE, a. [hwit, Sax. wit, Belg.] having that colour which is formed by the mixture of the 7 colours of the solar spectrum in certain proportions; snowy; pale; having the colour of fear; pure or unspotted; innocent; gray with age.—s. any thing white. The albuginous part of an egg; the white part of the eye.

TO WHITE, WHITEN, v. a. to make white, or like snow in colour.

WHITE, GILBERT, the naturalist, studied at Oxford, and became curate of Evington, and afterwards of the parish he has made classic ground to the votaries of natural science. He lived there a retired useful life, and never wished a worthier lot. The results of the observations he made during many years, are contained in his charming book of letters, called the Natural History of Selborne. He died there in 1793, aged 73 years. Few more exquisite books, on that exquisite pursuit, have ever been written; and the greater part of it was not intended for publication, but was written in the course of correspondence with the author's scientific friends, Pennant and Davies Barrington. He added a sketch of the Antiquities of Selborne to complete the work; and subsequent naturalists have enriched their editions with notes and illustrations.

WHITE, DR. JOSEPH, a learned divine of the English Church, who rose from very humble circumstances by his own industry and ability. He was enabled to study at Oxford by a gentleman who had taken notice of his talents, and he became Arabic professor there. Other preferments rewarded his perseverance and his learning. He died in 1814, aged 68 years. His Diatesaron, or Harmony of the Four Gospels, is well known: most of his other works were intended for advanced scholars. His Hampton Lectures, a comparison between Christianity and Mohammedism, proved afterwards to be chiefly written by Dr. Parr and others.

WHITE, HENRY KIRKE, an English poet. His father was a butcher, and he was at first intended for the same business, and received only a common education. Afterwards he was put to the hosiery trade, and after that to a lawyer. During these changes he had made a diligent use of all his opportunities of study, and had begun to write poetry. The publication of some of his pieces interested many friends in him, and he obtained a sizarship at Cambridge. Here he studied with great diligence, but gradually and rapidly sank under the influence of his application on a feeble constitution. He died in 1806, aged a little more than 21 years. The late laureate, Southey, edited his Remains, &c., and aided in the establishment of his deserved reputation.

WHITE, JOSEPH BLANCO, a theological and miscellaneous writer, descended from an Irish family which had settled in Spain. He was first engaged in his father's counting-house, but afterwards studied for the priesthood, and entered the Roman Church.

Here he gradually settled down into a kind of atheism, and at last left it and his native country together, and came to England. Here he was engaged in various journals, mostly for circulation in Spain; and, in time, professed himself a convert to the Church of England, and took the preliminary steps to becoming a clergyman. Meanwhile his connexion with Lord Holland and his writings had gained him numerous distinguished friends, and made his name popular in many circles. He did not remain long in the Church; before he could be ordained, he had renounced its creed, and became a Unitarian; and then, that in its turn was renounced for a most incomprehensible, yet grossly material kind of scepticism. He died in 1841, aged 66 years. His best writings are Doblado's Letters from Spain, a reply to Tom Moore's Irish Gentleman in search of a Religion, the Poor Man's Preservative against Popery, &c. He was, amidst all his wonderful changes, a most ardent devotee to truth; but he worshipped it as an idol, instead of seeking to realize it as an idea; and so renounced what he perceived untrue, in such precipitation as to fall into even worse errors.

WHITFIELD, GEORGE, a distinguished preacher of the last century, and a coadjutor of Wesley in his revival. He was son of an inn-keeper, and was induced by a companion to obtain a servitorship, and study at Oxford. There he joined the Wesleys in forming the Methodist party; and when his term of study was over, was ordained, and commenced his career as preacher. At London, at Bristol, and elsewhere, he electrified the overflowing congregations which his fame soon drew to hear him, by his impassioned elocution, and by the fervour with which he insisted on the evangelical doctrines. Pressed by John Wesley, he went out to Georgia, and passed the ship that was bringing Wesley back. On his return, despising canons and formularies, for the congregations he attracted could be contained in no church existing, he began to preach in the open air, and continued this course to the end of his life. He soon separated from Wesley: the interminable controversy respecting free-will and free-grace drove them asunder. He visited America frequently, and died there in 1770, aged 56 years. He did not found a society, but acted as a pioneer to others; his connexion with a particular communion at all, arose out of his being chaplain to the Countess of Huntingdon. His Sermons, as published, do not maintain his reputation for pulpit oratory.

WHITE FRIARS, in Ecclesiastical History, a religious order instituted in Syria, on Mount Carmel, (whence they are also called Carmelites,) in the 12th century, by Albert, patriarch of Jerusalem. Their first habit was striped with white and gray, according to the tradition that such a dress was worn by Elijah, the great prophet of Carmel; but in the 13th century it was changed to pure white, "for the honour of the Blessed Mary the Virgin," though how it was so we are not told. They were numerous in England.

WHITEHALL, the name of a royal palace in London, the only part of which that remains is the Banqueting House, the architecture of which is worthy of Inigo Jones.

WHITEHAVEN, Cumberland. It has a good artificial harbour, defended by a long pier, and employs a great many ships. The working of the coal mines forms the principal business of the place; some of which are carried to a vast distance under the sea. It is 296 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 11,854.

WHITELAND, s. in Chemistry, &c., the carbonate of the protoxide of lead; the kind used by painters, which is the purest, is called ceruse.

WHITELATHER, s. a tough sort of leather dressed with alum.

WHITLOCKE, BULSTRODE, a prominent actor in the Puritan revolution of the 17th century. He was a learned lawyer, and espoused the patriot cause; he drew up the charges against Strafford, and prudently kept out of the trial of Charles I. He was sent on an embassy to Christina of Sweden, and employed by Cromwell in various ways. At the Restoration, he trimmed his sails, and wrote his Memoirs, which need to be read with remembrance of the date of their publication; and died in 1676, aged 71 years.

WHITEMEAT, s. food made of milk.

WHITE MOUNTAINS, a range of about 20 miles long, and from 8 to 10 miles broad, in New Hampshire, United States. The highest peak is above 6000 feet in elevation, and there are its harbour has been much improved. It is 24 miles from Dublin. Pop. 2794. Pop. of county, 126,143. It sends 2 members to the imperial parliament.

WIDE, v. [Sax.] broad; having a great space included between the sides. Figuratively, remote, deviating.

WIDE, ad. at a distance; with great extent.

WIDELY, ad. with great extent each way; remotely; far.

To WIDEN, v. a. to increase extent from the sides; to extend. — v. n. to grow wide; to extend itself.

WIDENESS, s. extension in breadth.

WIDGEON, s. in Ornithology, a kind of wild duck, not so large as the mallard.

WIDOW, (widō) s. [widua, Sax. weddu, Brit. weduwe, Belg.] a woman whose husband is dead.

To WIDOW, (widō) v. a. to deprive of a husband; to strip of any thing good; to endow with a widow-right.

WIDOWER, (widōer) s. one who has lost his wife.

WIDOWHOOD, (widōhood) s. the state of a widow; estate settled on a widow.

WIDOWHUNTER, s. one who courts widows for a jointure.

WIDTH, s. breadth; extension from one side to the other.

WIELAND, CHRISTOPHER MARTIN, an eminent German writer; who received his first instructions from his father, a minister at Biberach; and afterwards studied at Tübingen. After a long time spent as a literary man, or a private tutor, he was made professor of philosophy at Erfurt; and thence removed to Weimar, into the service of the Duke. He died in 1813, aged 80 years. His writings are very numerous, and consist of poetry, tales, essays, &c. &c. Oberon is one of the chief of his works; it also translated some plays of our Shakespeare. It was his glory to be the friend of Herder, Schiller, and Goethe, at Weimar.

To WIELD, (wield) v. a. [wæltian, Sax.] to manage or use without obstruction, as being not too heavy.

WIELDY, a. manageable.

WIE/RY, a. [wær, Sax.] wet, or moist. Obsolete.

WIFE, s. plural wives: [wif, Sax. wif, Belg.] a woman that has a husband; a married woman.

WIG, (wig, Sax.) used in the end of names, signifies war, or hero.

WIG, s. [contracted from perriwig] a covering made of hair for the head; a kind of cake, called likewise a bun.

WIGAN, Lancashire. It has manufactures of cottons, rugs, blankets, linen. There are coal mines and ironworks in its neighbourhood; cannel coal is found here. Wigan is situated on a small stream, called Douglas, which is navigable to the Ribble, and is joined by a canal from Lancaster; 197 miles from London. Markets, Monday and Friday. Pop. 51,988.

WIGHT, ISLE OF, an island belonging to Hampshire, England, and separated from it by a narrow channel, called the Solent Sea. It is about 20 miles long, and 12 broad. It is crossed by a range of chalk hills, none exceeding 700 feet in height; and has a rather high level on the S. side, one point being above 800 feet in elevation, but on the N. side is lower and more level. It has some most romantic scenery amongst its hills; and at the W. extremity are those remarkable detached masses of chalk, called the Needles. It has a rich soil, and produces corn, &c. abundantly. The beauty of the scenery, and its agreeable climate, make it a favourite resort for invalids and pleasure-takers. To the geologist it offers some very remarkable studies. Cowes is its principal place of maritime trade, and Newport its chief town. Pop. 42,550.

WIGHT, (wit) s. [wiht, Sax.] a being; a person.

WIGHT, [Sax.] in the composition of names, signifies strong, nimble, or lusty.

WIGTON, a shire of Scotland, forming a promontory, washed by the Irish Sea and the Irish Channel; and bounded by the counties of Ayr and Kirkcubright. It is about 30 miles long, by 15 in mean breadth; but is of a very irregular form. It is hilly, but has no heights of 1000 feet; and its rivers are all small. The Mull of Galloway is a bold headland, on which is a light-house. It is principally a grazing county; and its cattle are sold in almost all English markets of any note. There was a breed of ponies peculiar to it, and called, from its old name, Galloways. Wigton, its chief town, stands at the mouth of the Cree, on Wigton Bay, and has a good harbour, with some trade. It is 105 miles from Edinburgh. Pop. 2562. Pop. of county, 39,195. It sends 1 member to parliament.

WILBERFORCE, WILLIAM, a distinguished philanthropist. He studied at Cambridge; and entered parliament as a representative of his native town, Hull, on coming of age. He had been a friend of Pitt's, at the University; and during his long parliamentary career, generally pursued his line of policy. But it is not as a partisan, or statesman, that his name is recorded in the history of human progress; he laboured incessantly to effect the annihilation of slavery; and if he was not the first in the field, and if his own personal labours did not bring that question to its triumphant close, he still deserves the lofty praise of having devoted himself to it with a pertinacity of courage, and an earnestness of zeal, that no fellow-labourer, before or since, ever surpassed. In 1807 he obtained the abolition of the Slave Trade, and he lived just long enough to hear of the abolition of Slavery itself. As occasion offered, he endeavoured to impress the statesmen and leaders of other countries with the same views; and was not uncheered by success, or at least by hope, even in those quarters. He spent the last years of his life in honourable retirement; and died in 1833, aged 74 years. He wrote several fugitive pamphlets, and one work of more permanent interest, a Practical View of the prevailing Religion of the upper and middle Classes, contrasted with Christianity.

WILD, a. [Sax. and Belg.] not tame; furious or fierce; savage, uncivilized; licentious; propagated by nature, opposed to cultivated; desert, opposed to inhabited; without art or elegance; merely imaginary; ungovernable; turbulent; inconstant; strange; uncouth.

WILD, s. a desert, or tract not cultivated or inhabited.

WILD, HENRY, a tailor of Norwich; who by unremitting diligence in study, although hardly earning his bread by his trade, made himself master of Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Arabic, and 3 other Oriental languages. After suffering much from poverty, he was appointed to some inferior office in the Bodleian library, and afterwards removed to London, where he died in about 1730, aged about 50 years.

To WILDER, v. a. to lose or puzzle in a pathless or intricate place.

WILDERNESS, s. a desert, or place uninhabited, or uncultivated. In Gardening, a grove of trees or shrubs planted in walks, mews, labyrinth, &c.

WILDFIRE, s. a composition of inflammable materials, easy to take fire, but hard to be extinguished.

WILDGOOSE-CHASE, s. a fruitless pursuit.

WILDING, s. a wild sour apple.

WILDLY, ad. without cultivation; with disorder; heedlessly; capriciously; irregularly; without judgment.

WILDNESS, s. the state of a desert and uncultivated place; rudeness; fierceness or discomposure, applied to the looks of a person; levity of behaviour; irregularity; inordinate vivacity; alienation of mind.

WILE, s. [Sax. wiel, Isl.] a deceit, stratagem, cunning or sly trick; a fraud; artful practice.

WILFUL, a. [will and full] stubborn; contumacious; perverse; inflexible; not hearkening to reason or persuasion; done or suffered by design.

WILFULLY, ad. obstinately; stubbornly.

WILFULNESS, s. stubbornness; contumacy; perverseness; obstinacy.

WILFULLY, ad. by stratagem; fraudulently.

WILINESS, s. cunning; guile.

WILKES, JOHN, a political agitator of the last century. He studied at Leyden, and was only notorious for his profligacy and his elegant scholarship, till he entered parliament as representative of Aylesbury. He published a paper called the North Briton, against Lord Bute's ministry; and for No. 45 of it was sent to the Tower by a general warrant, but was released by the chief justice Pratt, before whom he was brought by Habeas Corpus. His paper was declared libellous, and riots and bloodshed arose when it was burnt publicly. He afterwards retired to France, was outlawed for writing an indecent poem, and became the popular idol of the day. His next affair was of more moment to the country than to himself, but it raised him to the summit of his fame. He was returned for Middlesex, and the House of Commons refused to admit him; this was repeated on both sides, whilst Wilkes was in prison, and treated as a martyr; and the most violent disturbances occurred in the metropolis, and lives were lost by the fire of the soldiery in putting them down. At length the

REFERENCE.

See Malta
East 27

The County of Malta, number
LIMING TO.

Scale of Miles

William II
1099-1100. S. 100.

Commons owned their proceedings illegal, or unconstitutional, and Wilkes, released from his outlawry, made his amends to the powers that were, and took his seat in parliament. The last manifestation of popular feeling for him was the making him alderman, sheriff, and lord mayor of London; and when it had wholly passed away, he was made city chamberlain. He died in 1797, aged 70 years. He used to say himself that he was not a Wilkie. He was the great denagogue of the last century, on the genuine history of which, his life might cast not unimportant light.

WILKIE, SIR DAVID, a distinguished painter of the preceding part of this century. He was the son of a Scottish minister, and early displayed the determined bent of his mind. He studied his art first in an academy at Edinburgh, and then entered the Royal Academy of London. His career was from the beginning one of growing popularity and renown, and some of his last works were amongst the finest he ever produced. He twice visited the continent to study the old masters in France, Spain, Italy, &c.; and at last crossed Europe with some friends for a tour in the East. He did not lay aside his pencil during the journey, and made portraits of the sultan, and of eminent persons. In Egypt, he first had fears respecting his health; and before he could reach Gibraltar, he died, in 1841, aged 56 years. His paintings are familiarized to all in England by some of the happiest efforts of the most accomplished engravers.

WILKINS, DR. JOHN, an English prelate of the 17th century. He was educated at Oxford, and held various collegiate and university posts under the Commonwealth and Protectorate, and was married to the sister of Oliver Cromwell. He lost his appointments at the Restoration, but contrived to gain the favour of the court, and ultimately rose to the bench of bishops. He was an eminent student of natural philosophy, and promoted the formation of the Royal Society. He died in 1672, aged 58 years. His writings are on scientific and theological subjects, and contain much that shows ingenuity in speculation, without great profundity of scientific knowledge.

WILKINS, SIR CHARLES, an eminent Oriental scholar, who was in the service of the East India Company. He held, latterly, an appointment in connexion with the colleges at Haileybury and Addiscombe; and died in 1836, aged 85 years. His works are a Sanscrit Grammar, and translations of Hindu poems, &c. &c.

WILKINS, WILLIAM, an eminent architect. He studied at Cambridge, and travelled in Italy and Greece. Just before his death he was appointed professor of architecture in the Royal Academy. He died in 1839, aged 61 years. The buildings which he designed are numerous; and in London, one of the best is University College. The National Gallery in Trafalgar Square was also designed by him. He published several works on his art.

WILL, s. [willu, Sax.] in Psychology, the faculty with which man is endowed of being determined to action by the ideas of reason; it is peculiarly the distinctive feature of man, making him a spiritual and responsible being. Generally, choice; command; inclination; desire; determination; discretion; disposition. In Law, an instrument by which a person disposes of his property after death. See FREWILL.

To WILL, v. a. [willan, Sax.] to act with regard to the ends proposed for reason; also, to desire the attainment of any end; to command in a positive manner; to direct; to order. It is used in common with shall, as an auxiliary verb to express the future tense.

WYLDENOW, CARL LOUIS, a German botanist of some distinction. He was director of the botanic garden at Berlin, and went to Paris to aid Humboldt in the arrangement and naming of his American plants. He died in 1812, aged 47 years. He published some excellent works on botany.

WILLIAM I., commonly called the Conqueror, the first king of England of the Norman line. He was the son of Robert, duke of Normandy, by a mistress named Arlete, and succeeded him in the duchy. It was said that Edward the Confessor, who had no issue, and was much prejudiced in favour of the Normans, had made him his heir, and that Harold was sent in his name to confirm the kingdom to William. William, by subtlety, obtained an oath of service from Harold over the relics of the saints, and detained him, as a prisoner at large, for some time in Normandy. When Harold was made king, the Duke William, by liberal promises, obtained the aid of his barons to substantiate his claims to the English throne; and in the battle of Hastings, overthrew and slew Harold, in 1066. During the next six years, he was engaged in completing and organizing his conquest; he defeated the Saxons in numerous engagements, dispossessed almost all of them of their lands, which he granted to his own followers; and at last, by the suppression of the Camp of Refuge, near Ely, pacified the island. He had almost depopulated the country N. of the Humber, and he ruled with a strong hand both his turbulent barons and the righteously-discontented Saxons. He suppressed many attempts against his throne both in England and Normandy, and had the misery of finding his own sons in insurrection against him. The French king having aided the revolt of his son, and taunted him on his sickness, he began a campaign against him; and at the taking of Mantes, fell from his horse by an accident, and died, in 1087, aged 60 years, and after a reign of 52 years over Normandy, and 21 over England. He was a great king, the ideal of a feudal monarch. And his reign was a sharp but needful process for England to go through in its preparation for its after-work. The Saxon chroniclers have recorded with praise the swift and stern justice that made property secure in a marvellous manner in his days; and also, with fitting lamentations, the terrible severity of the forest and game laws, which have so long weighed like a curse upon England. The most remarkable record of this reign, is the Jomeland Book, disclosing, as it does, the social and domestic state of the whole country.

WILLIAM II., called Rufus, his son and successor on the throne of England, had at first to resist the attempts of his elder brother, Robert, who held the duchy of Normandy; and soon carried the war into Normandy, and threatened the duchy. He acquired it, at last, by mortgage, when Robert joined the crusaders under Godfrey de Bouillon. There was war against both Scotland and Wales, but it did not last long in any case; and there were several insurrections amongst the barons, which the king speedily put down. He had once to repress a like attempt in Normandy, after he had bought it; and he did it almost single-handed. He was shot, at length, either by accident or design, by a knight of his train, as he was hunting in the New Forest, in 1100, aged 44 years, and after a reign of 13. That New Forest remains yet as his memorial; begun by his father, it was extended and completed by Rufus, at an enormous waste of cultivated land, and to the utter ruin of the evicted owners. One of the Conqueror's younger sons was killed by a stag in it; and now Rufus fell there. He was a cunning and avaricious man; yet not destitute of that personal courage and that cultivated intelligence, which made his reign even an advance towards better things. He was especially unsparring in his pillage of church property; which is the chief reason for the horrible character given him by the monks, the only chroniclers of the times.

WILLIAM III., the successor of James II. by means of the Revolution of 1688. Before attaining this throne he had been raised to the post of stadtholder of the United Provinces, by the same popular tumult that had so horribly murdered the two De Witts. He was Prince of Orange by birth; his mother was a daughter of Charles I.; and he had married a daughter of James II. In the struggle of the Netherlands against Louis XIV. he had displayed the courage and ability of both a statesman and a warrior; and although connected with the house of Stuart so closely, he was regarded, by the Protestant world, as the great champion of religious liberty. When the contest between the aristocracy and James II. was proceeding, William was minutely informed of every step that was taken, and held himself in readiness to take his father-in-law's crown and avenge the Protestant faith, which was threatened by James's countenance of Romanism in England, and by the birth or appearance of the "Pretender." At last all was prepared, and William sailed for Torbay; the abdication of James, the strides in the Convention parliament, followed; and the Bill of Rights and the Act of Settlement established him, and his consort, as William III. and Mary II., on the throne of England. In Scotland he was for a short time opposed by Dundee. In Ireland he had to combat James himself; but the victory at the Boyne, and the taking of Limerick, put an end to the contest. He next resumed the war against Louis XIV., which was brought to a close, without much honour to England, by the Peace of Rys-wie. William was next embroiled in the party contests which have never ceased to harass England since; and found both Whigs and Tories alike obstructive to his policy, and alike open to corruption. The death of his queen in 1694 added to his troubles, for he was now regarded as an alien king; and his own natural preference for the United Provinces confirmed that feeling. He was annoyed by the continual discovery of conspiracies, not only amongst the partisans of the Stuarts, but amongst the party that had invited him to the throne. At length, as he was preparing to enter upon a new war with Louis XIV. respecting the Spanish Succession, he died, in consequence of a fall from his horse, in 1702, aged 52 years; having been stadtholder of the United Provinces for 30 years, and king of England for above 11. During this reign the national debt was commenced; and the standing army; but undoubtedly absolutism and hierarchical priestism received a deadly blow. It has always been customary to date English liberty from this reign; yet it is plain that the only liberty gained was for the aristocracy, who now began that career, by which they have since reduced the royal power to a nullity and vexed England. In respect of religious freedom, much cannot be said respecting a freedom fettered by Test and Corporation Acts, and by the civil disability of all religionists except the members of the Church of England alone. But persecution had been suspended just sufficiently long to enfeeble the weakly descendants of the Puritans and Nonconformists; and as William professedly was the hero of Protestantism against all forms of Papacy, they followed him and applauded him, as if he had been the hero of the cause they so unworthily represented. In the reaction against the counter-revolution of the Stuarts, England had attained, not a revival of Puritanism, but a miserable Erastian latitudinarianism, under which growth in liberty was impossible.

WILLIAM IV., brother and successor to George IV., and immediate predecessor of her Majesty Queen Victoria, on the English throne. Before his accession he had served with credit, if without distinction, in the royal navy, and had lived a life undistinguished by such intellectual ability, and by such monstrous profligacy, as had marked one or more of his brothers. The history of his reign is a mere detail of ministerial measures, which were themselves the effluence of party strength. The Reform Bill was carried after a severe contest, by the force of the public excitement which followed the Revolution of July in France. This gave to the Whig party sufficient power to retain their offices almost without interruption to the end of the reign. The Reform of the Municipal Corporations; the New Poor Law; the various Church Bills for England and Ireland, were the other measures of this party; they also aided in the measure for finally abolishing slavery in the British possessions. The statesmen of the present day, with the exception of Lord Grey and Lord Spencer, who have since died, and Lord Melbourne and others who do not now take a prominent part in public affairs, are those who have given to the reign of William whatever lustre it possesses of this kind. This king died in 1837, aged 72, and having reigned 7 years. The general propriety of his later life, and the popularity of most of the measures of his ministers, aided by the contrast with the life and deeds of his predecessor, won for him a reputation which excused the mediocrity of his talent, and made the nation forget his early dissipation and the cruelty with which he deserted the mother of his children.

WILLIAMS, JOHN, an English prelate and statesman, of the early part of the 17th century. He studied at Cambridge; and after spending some time as a country parson, was made chaplain by Lord Egerton, then lord chancellor. He now patiently laboured for better things, and devoting himself to Buckingham, helped to overthrow Lord Bacon, and was installed in his room as lord keeper of the great seal. This he held till the accession of Charles I.; and then was attacked by Laud, who succeeded in inflicting on him a severe sentence. When the struggle began between the king and the parliament, Williams's star rose again, and he was made archbishop of York. He and 11 more of the bench of bishops were imprisoned for a very idle fancy that their absence, under protest, could suspend the business of the House of Lords. Later, he fortified and held Conway Castle, for the king; but being ousted by one Owen, in the king's name, he applied to the parliament, and regained possession of his castle, to hold for the parliament's use. He died in 1650, as his biographer Hacket supposes, from grief at Charles's martyrdom, aged 68 years.

WILLIAMS, DR. DANIEL, an eminent Presbyterian minister of England, of the latter part of the 17th and beginning of the 18th centuries. He resided for some time in Ireland, and was once chaplain to the Countess of Meath. He was a person of some consideration, both as a theologian, and in his standing in the country. His controversy with the Antinomians was a good service done to truth, and at great cost. He died in 1716, aged 73 years. His works are yet read by those who in general follow his system of doctrine. The library in Red Cross Street was bequeathed by him to the public. He left other useful bequests, and by these yet lives in the memory of Dissenters in England.

WILLIAMS, JOHN, a distinguished Missionary to the S. Sea Islands, where he laboured with great diligence, for many years, teaching the natives the arts of civilized life, as well as the truth of the gospel. He discovered an island of the Society group, called Karotonga, and was the first evangelist there. He visited England in the latter part of his life, and succeeded, by the universal interest which he excited, in obtaining funds for the purchase of a ship, to aid the labours of the mission. During the first missionary voyage he made in it, on the island of Erromanga, he fell a victim to an unexpected attack of the natives, who had been provoked by some outrage to revenge themselves on the next Europeans that visited them. He died, a martyr to the gospel, in 1839, aged 43 years. His Narrative of Missionary Enterprises is a most interesting account of what he had witnessed in the course of his work.

WILLIAMS, ROGER, founder of Rhode Island, United States, was educated at Oxford (in England) by the kindness of the great Sir Edward Coke. He left this country hoping to find in the New England colony a place where he might enjoy freedom of conscience. To his utter astonishment, he soon became the object of a relentless persecution on the part of the very men who had fled thither from the persecution of Laud and his party. Williams was compelled to leave his ministry at Salem, and to seek refuge with the Indian tribes near the settlement. He afterwards visited England, obtained the necessary documents, and purchased land of the Indians for a settlement, which he called Providence. Some years after this he was forced again to visit England, to defend the claims of this new colony. He died in 1683, aged 82 years. His writings are chiefly controversial, against George Fox, and against the persecuting tenets of the New Englanders; another work is entitled a Key into the Language of New England.

WILLING, a. inclined, or not averse, to do a thing; consenting; desirous; favourable; pleased; ready or condescending; chosen.

WILLINGLY, ad. without dislike; without reluctance.

WILLINGNESS, s. freedom from reluctance; ready compliance; consent.

WILLIS, DR. BROWNE, an eminent English antiquary. He studied at Oxford, and was afterwards noted for his devotion to archaeological pursuits. He died in 1760, aged 78 years. He published several works, the chief of which is a Survey of the Cathedrals of England. He also made valuable presents of MSS., &c. to the university at which he had been educated.

WILLIS, DR. FRANCIS, an English physician, distinguished for his skill in the treatment of insane persons. He studied at Oxford, and was first a clergyman, but he relinquished this profession for medicine, and especially for the study and cure of insanity. He had the care of George III., and afterwards of the queen of Portugal, and died in 1807, aged 90 years.

WILLOW, *s. (see, Sax. willow, Brit.)* in Botany, the name of a large genus of trees and shrubs which grow in wet and marshy soils. Their general characters are well known.

WILLOWHERB, s. in Botany, a genus of handsome British marsh-plants; one species has its stem and leaves covered with glandular hairs, that secrete an agreeable acid.

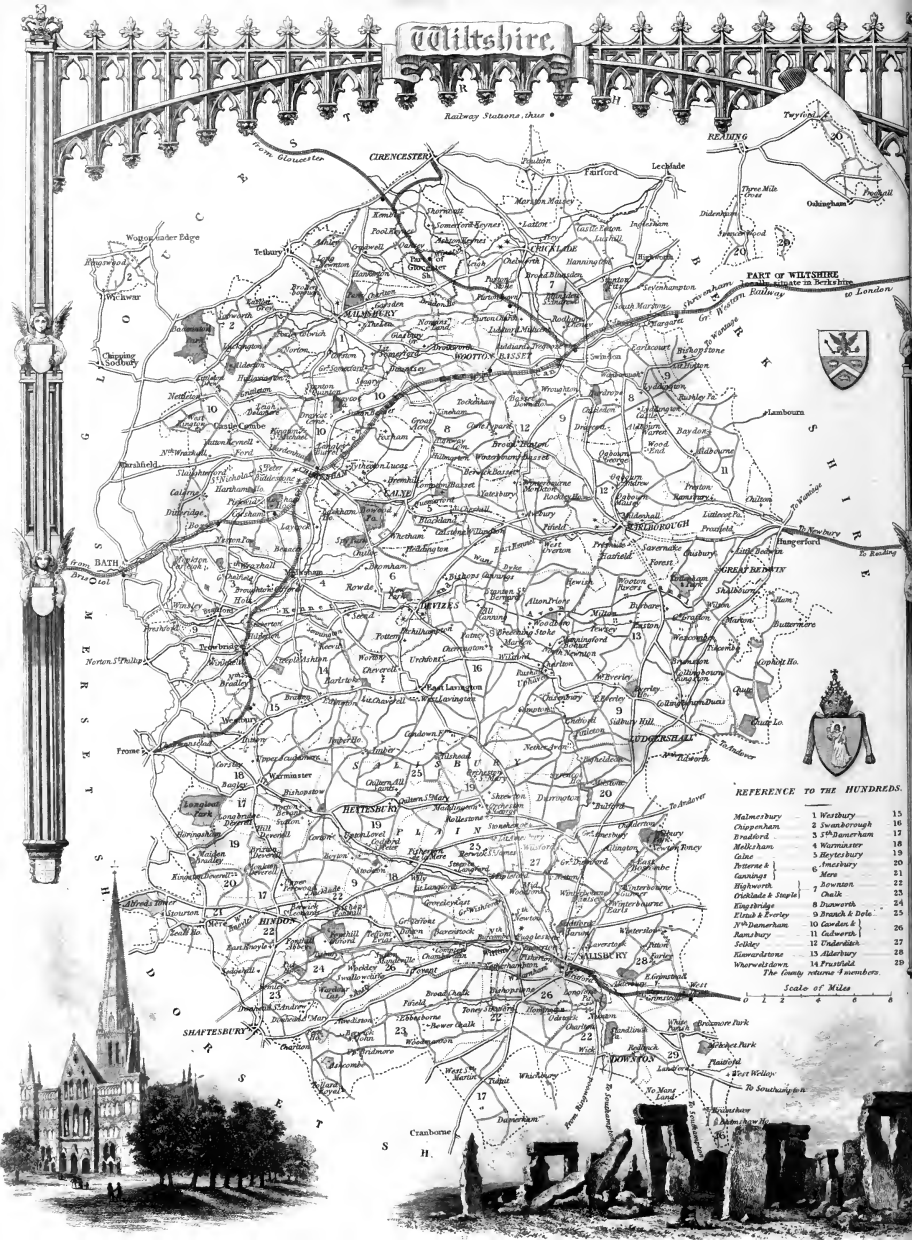

WILLUGHBY, FRANCIS, an eminent naturalist of the 17th century. He studied at Cambridge, and then became acquainted with Ray, with whom he afterwards travelled on the continent. His works were edited by his friend after his death. He died in 1672, aged 37 years. His Ornithology was a remarkable book for the times, and its value is not wholly lost even for these days.

WILNA, a government of Russia, lying on the Baltic, and # Wiltshire.

Railway Stations, &c.

REFERENCE TO THE HUNDREDS.

1	Wootton Bassett	15
2	Swindon	16
3	Marlborough	17
4	Salisbury	18
5	Devizes	19
6	Amesbury	20
7	Chippenham	21
8	Highworth	22
9	Cricklade & Staple	23
10	Englebridge	24
11	Stratton & Dole	25
12	Salisbury	26
13	Salisbury	27
14	Salisbury	28
15	Salisbury	29

The County returns 100 hundreds.

Scale of Miles

bordering on Prussia, bounded by the governments of Poland, Grodno, Minsk, Vitepsk, and Courland. It is about 200 miles in each direction. It has a generally level surface, with no hills of great elevation. The Dwina, the Beresina, the Dauge, &c. are its chief rivers. Building-stone, &c. are found here, but its chief wealth arises from the cultivation of the soil. Corn, cattle, timber, &c. &c. are abundantly produced. Its manufactures are chiefly domestic, and its trade is flourishing. Wilna, its capital, stands on the Wilia, and is a place of some importance, but generally ill-built. It has some fine churches, &c., and had formerly a university with a noble library, but has now only schools for medicine and theology. Pop. about 60,000. Lat. 54. 40. N. Long. 25. 8. E. Pop. of government, about 1,500,000.

WILSON, RICHARD, a distinguished landscape painter of the last century. He first painted portraits, but after a visit to Italy, devoted himself to that branch of his art in which he has met with such deserved fame. He was not so much admired in his life-time, and was glad of the appointment of librarian to the Royal Academy. He died in 1782, aged 68 years.

WILSON, ALEXANDER, the celebrated American ornithologist, was first a weaver at Paisley, Scotland, and afterwards a pedlar. He used at this time to amuse himself by writing verses, but finding all prospects in the old country dark, he emigrated to America, and landed in the United States with a few shillings and a gun as his only possessions. For ten years he lived an unsettled life, weaving, keeping school, travelling as a pedlar, working as a copper-plate printer, doing almost any hand's turn for a livelihood. An excursion on foot to the Falls of Niagara made him first acquainted with the true path for him to excel in. He laboured incessantly for nine years in travelling to all parts of the States to procure specimens, and became acquainted with the habits of its feathered inhabitants. He sketched the birds himself, and the great book, now in 12 volumes, on American Ornithology, raised him to the height of his fame: every European sovereign subscribed to it. He died in 1813, aged 48 years. The last quarter of the work was by Charles Lucien Buonaparte, and it is one of the most exquisite works on natural history ever written.

WILTUN, Wiltshire. It is seated at the conflux of the Willey and Nadder, and is an ancient place, formerly the chief of the county. It has a famous manufactory of carpets, and another of thin woollen stuffs. It is 85 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 1698.

WILTSHIRE, an English county, bounded by Somersetshire, Gloucestershire, Berkshire, Hampshire, and Dorsetshire, being 54 miles in length, and 33 in breadth. It contains 304 parishes, and 21 market-towns. The principal rivers are the Willey, the Adder, the two Avons, the Tems, the Kennet, &c. The air is generally good, though sharp upon the hills and downs in winter, but milder in the vales and bottoms. The N. part is hilly, and the S. level, and the middle full of downs, intermixed with bottoms, wherein are rich meadows and corn-fields. There are several towns in it noted for the woollen manufacture. It abounds with relics of antiquity, the most interesting being ancient British earth-works, temples, tombs, &c. Salisbury is the principal town. Pop. 258,733. It sends 18 members to parliament.

WILY, (velly) a. full of stratagem; sly; cunning; artful; tricking.

WIMBLE, s. [veimpele, Belg. from veemelen,] an instrument with which holes are bored.

WIMBORN MINSTER, Dorsetshire. It is seated between the rivers Stour and Allen, and has a fine church or minster. It was anciently a considerable place. It is 101 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 4326.

WIMPLE, s. [guimpe, Fr.] a hood or veil.

WIN, [win or winna, Sax.] used in the compound names of men, signifies war, strength, &c.; or popularity. In the names of places, it denotes a battle fought there.

To WIN, v. a. pret. and past part. won; [winna, Sax. winnen, Belg.] to gain by conquest; to gain the victory in a contest or game; to gain something withheld; to obtain or overpower by superior charms or persuasions.—v. n. to gain the victory or advantage. Used with upon, to influence, gain ground or favour, or to overpower.

To WINCE, v. n. [weingo, Brit.] to shrink or kick with pain; to kick in order to throw off a rider, applied to beasts of carriage.

WINCH, s. [guincher, Fr.] an instrument by which an axle or spindle is turned by hand, to set machinery in motion, &c.

WINCHESTER, Hampshire. It stands on the Itchen, and has six parish churches, besides the cathedral, which is a large and beautiful structure, and in which are interred several Saxon kings and queens. The other remarkable buildings are, the bishop's palace, the hall where the assizes are kept, and the college or school, which last is without the walls. It is 62 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 10,732.

WINKELMANN, JOHN JOACHIM, a celebrated German antiquary, of the last century. He was born in humble circumstances, but by energetic perseverance surmounted the difficulties of his position; and studied at Halle. After various engagements as tutor, schoolmaster, and secretary to a nobleman, he was induced to profess Romanism, and obtained a pension, by which he was enabled to continue his study of the philosophy of the arts at Rome. Here he was rewarded for his writings and his erudition by the posts of librarian and keeper to the Gallery of Antiquities; and afterwards by those of antiquary to the Camera Apostolica, and librarian to the Vatican. He visited Germany for a short time, and as he was returning, was assassinated at Trieste, in 1768, aged 51 years. His works and letters are valuable to philosophical students of art; and his History of Ancient Art was the first treatise on a most interesting and instructive branch of antiquarian science.

WIND, s. [Sax. and Belg.] a stream or current of air occasioned by the rarefaction of the atmosphere in the part to which it is directed; the direction of the air from any point; breath; any thing insignificant, particularly applied to threats. To take or have the wind of, signifies to have the ascendancy or advantage of. To take wind, applied to secrets, implies their being disclosed or made public.

To WIND, (wind) v. a. preter. and past part. wound; [weinden, Sax. weiden, Belg.] to blow or sound by the breath; to turn round; to twist; to manage by shifts or expedients; to follow by the scent; to change or alter; to enfold, entwine, or encircle. Used with out, to extricate from any difficulty; with up, to bring to a small compass; to raise by means of a winch or key; to raise by degrees; to put in order by a certain end or regular action; to straiten a string by turning that on which it is rolled; to put in order for regular action.—v. n. to alter or change; to turn or twist round; to move round; to move in crooked lines; to be extricated from any difficulty or perplexity, followed by out of.

WINDBERRY, s. in Botany, the same with the bilberry.

WINDBOUND, (windbound) a. hindered from sailing by contrary winds.

WINDDEGG, s. an egg that does not contain the principle of life.

WINDER, (winder) s. an instrument or person by which any thing is turned round. In Botany, a plant that supports itself by winding round others.

WINDERMEIRE, or WINDANER-MERE, a very beautiful lake, lying between Westmoreland and Lancashire, England. It is about 11 miles long, and at its greatest breadth a mile broad. It has several islands, and receives the waters of numerous small streams.

WINDFALL, (windfall) s. fruit blown down from a tree; a tree blown down; an unexpected legacy.

WINDGALLS, s. in Farriery, soft, yielding tumours which grow upon each side of the fetlock joints, and make a horse to run as if lame.

WINDHAM, WILLIAM, a statesman of the end of the last and beginning of the present centuries. He studied at Oxford, and afterwards travelled in different parts of Europe. He next, after several unsuccessful attempts, entered parliament, and at once acquired considerable reputation. His first ministerial appointment was that of secretary at war under Pitt, and his next, under Lord Grenville, in the same post, with the addition of the colonies. In opposition, he attacked the peace of Amiens, the Copenhagen expedition, and the expedition to Walcheren. He died in 1810, from the effects of a surgical operation, aged 60 years.

WINDING, (winding) s. [windur, Isl.] any crooked or bending path; flexure; meander.

WINDINGSHEET, (windingsheet) s. a sheet in which the dead are wrapped.

WINDLASS, s., a machine which is a modification of the wheel and axle, and used for similar purposes; in ships, it is employed to weigh the anchor. It is distinguished from the capstan, which is vertical, by being fixed horizontally.

WINDLE, s., a spindle.

WINDMILL, s., a mill whose machinery is moved by sails turned by the wind.

WINDOW, (windō) s. [vindue, Dan.] an aperture in a building, by which the light and air are let into a room; the frame of glass, &c. that covers the aperture.

To WINDOW, (windō) v. a. to furnish with windows; to place at a window; to break into openings.

WINDPIPE, (windpipe) s. in Anatomy, the common name of the trachea.

WINDSOR, Berkshire. It is pleasantly seated on the banks of the Thames, in a healthful air, and is a handsome, large, and well-inhabited place; but chiefly famous for its magnificent castle, which is a royal palace, and is surrounded by a fine park, in which is the beautiful artificial lake, called Virginia Water. It is 22 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 7528; of Old Windsor, 1600.

WINDWARD, (windward) ad. towards the wind.

WINDY, (windy) a. consisting of wind; next the wind; empty, airy, or having no solidity; tempestuous, molested with the wind; puffy; fatulent.

WINE, s. [vin, Sax.] a liquor made of the juice of the grape, or any other saccharine fluid, by fermentation.

WING, s. [vinge, Dan.] in birds and insects, the members by which they are enabled to fly. Bats are the only animals whose fore-extremities are true wings. The flying-fishes have their pectoral fins so large as to be capable of a similar use. Amongst reptiles, the fossil and extinct pterodactyle alone is furnished with wings. Generally, flight; a fan; to winnow; any side-piece. In War, the two extreme bodies on the sides of an army. In Architecture, the two detached sides of a building.

To WING, v. a. to furnish with wings; to enable to fly; to supply an army with side bodies.—v. n. to pass by flight; to exert the power of flying.

WING, VINCENT, an English astronomer and astrologer of the 17th century, who published Annals, Ephemerides of the places of the planets, and other works of a tolerably scientific character, but containing some very remarkable mistakes and misquotations. He died in about 1608.

WINGATE, EDMUND, a mathematician of the 17th century. He studied at Oxford, and afterwards at Gray's Inn; but he never attained any legal eminence. He resided for some time in France, and instructed Henrietta Maria in the English language, when she was about to become queen to Charles I. In the civil wars and commotions he espoused the popular side, and was in one of Oliver's parliaments. He died in 1650, aged 63 years. He published an Arithmetic, and other mathematical works, and an Abridgment of the Statutes.

WINGED, a. furnished with wings; swift, rapid. In Botany, applied to flowers, leaves, leaf-stalks, seeds, &c., when the parts either by their use, form, or arrangement, resemble the wings of birds, &c.

WINGSHELL, s. in Natural History, the elytron, or wing-cover of insects.

To WINK, v. n. [winken, Belg.] to shut the eye partially and rapidly; to hint, or direct by the motion of the eyelids. Figuratively, to pass by a fault without taking notice of it; to connive; to seem not to see; to tolerate.

WINK, s. the act of partially and rapidly closing the eye; a hint given by the motion of the eye.

WINNER, s. one who wins.

WINNING, part. attractive; charming; overpowering by elegance of address and behaviour.

WINNING, s. the sum won at any game.

WINNIPEG, a lake of British N. America. It lies almost midway between the S. part of Hudson's Bay and the Rocky Mountains; and is about 240 miles long, and from 5 to 55 miles broad. It receives the waters of many rivers, the largest of which is the Saskatchewan, flowing from the Rocky Mountains. Its waters are discharged by the rapid Stony river into Slave Lake. W. of it lies a smaller lake, called Little Winnipeg. The river Mississippi flows through both of them.

To WINNOW, (winnō) v. a. [winnow, Sax.] to separate by means of wind; to separate grain from the chaff; to fan, or beat as with wings. Figuratively, to sift, examine, or separate.—v. n. to part corn from chaff.

WINNOWER, s. he who winnows.

WINSLOW, JAMES BENIGNE, an anatomist of Denmark. He studied at Paris; and having embraced Romanism, became first assistant, and then successor to Duverney, the professor of anatomy and surgery in the Jardin du Roi. He was held in high esteem for his general knowledge, as well as for his surgical skill; and died in 1760, aged 91 years. His great work is an Anatomical Exposition of the Structure of the Human Body.

WINTER, s. [Sax. Dan. Tent. and Belg.] the cold season of the year. Winter solstice, is the time when the sun enters the tropic of Capricorn, making the shortest day, which now is December 21.

To WINTER, v. n. to pass the winter.—v. a. to feed in the winter.

WINTER, JAN WILLIAM DE, a Dutch admiral, who having joined the revolutionary party in Holland, was forced to fly to France, where he served in the army under Dumouriez and Pichegru. He returned to the Netherlands at the time of the French invasion, was made Admiral of the Texel fleet, and defeated and taken prisoner by Admiral Duncan. After his exchange he served the French power in Holland; and died in 1812, aged 62 years.

WINTER, PETER VON, or CANON WINTER, an eminent German musician and composer. He was at an early age appointed to a situation in the elector's orchestra at Mannheim; and after travelling in Germany and Italy, settled at Munich, in the service of the king of Bavaria, who treated him with deserved honour. He travelled again in Germany and Italy; and died in 1825, aged 70 years. His masses, operas, &c. &c. are numerous and much admired.

WINTER-BERRY, s. in Botany, an ornamental shrub, several species of which are cultivated in this country, and which is a native of America.

WINTER-CHERRY, s. in Botany, a small plant, the seed-vessel of which is richly coloured, and remains to a late period of the year. It is somewhat narcotic in its nature.

WINTERGREEN, s. in Botany, a plant with spear-shaped leaves, and white blossoms on long fruit-stalks. It is found in woods and heaths, and flowers in June. The different species of pearl-leaf go also by the name of wintergreen.

WINTERLY, a. such as is suitable to winter; of a wintry kind.

WINTRY, a. brumal; suitable to winter.

WINTWOOD, SIR RALPH, a statesman of the reigns of Elizabeth and James I. He studied at Oxford, and afterwards travelled on the continent. He was employed as diplomatic agent at Paris, and in Holland; and was subsequently made a secretary of state. He died in 1617, aged 53 years. His Memoirs of his employments are a valuable work for students of History.

To WIPE, v. a. [wipen, Sax.] to rub softly; to cleanse by rubbing softly; to strike off gently; to clear away; to cheat or defraud. Used with out, to efface.

WIPE, s. the act of cleansing; a blow or stroke; a gibe; a jeer; a sarcasm.

WIRE, s. metal drawn into slender rods, or threads, by passing it through holes cut of the required size, in a steel plate.

To WIREDRAW, v. a. to draw metal into wire; to draw out into length; to draw by art or violence.

WIREDRAWER, s. one who spins wire.

WIRE-GAUZE, s. a textile fabric made of very fine wire; used in the fabrication of safety lamps, and fireproof dresses, because of its possessing the remarkable property of not transmitting flame through its interstices.

WIRE-WORM, s. in Natural History, and Farming, the common name of the larvæ of several species of beetles, which destroy corn, &c. by destroying the roots. Rooks and moles, with other animals and birds, usually denominated vermin, do good service in clearing the ground of them.

WIRKS WORTH, Derbyshire. It is seated in a valley, near the spring-head of the river Ecclesbourn; and is remarkable for having the greatest lead-mine in England. It is 139 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 7891.

To WIS, v. a. pret. and past part. sciet; [wysen, Belg. wissen, Tent.] to know. Obsolete.

WISBADEN, the capital of Nassau, Germany. It stands in a pleasant situation; and is chiefly noted for its medicinal springs. The palaces and other government buildings, the library, museum, and other institutions, are handsome structures. Pop. about 10,000, but more than double that in the bathing-season. Lat. 50.4. N. Long. 8. 11. E.

WISBEACH, Cambridgeshire. It is seated in a fenny part of the county, in the isle of Ely, between two rivers; and is a well-built town, possessing a considerable trade in the export of corn, &c. It has some large and handsome public buildings. It is 89 miles from London. Market, Saturday. Pop. 10,461.

WISCONSIN, one of the United States, N. America. It adjoins to the British territories, and lies on Lake Michigan, being bounded by Michigan, Illinois, Mississippi, and the Iowa Territory. It is about 600 miles long, and 150 broad; and is divided into 22 counties. It has a varied surface, consisting partly of undulating prairies, partly of hills, and partly of high table-land; but it is not yet perfectly surveyed. The Wisconsin and other tributaries of the Mississippi are its chief rivers; and it has several lakes. Lead, iron, copper, and other minerals are abundant. Cattle and timber are plentiful; and more corn is raised yearly as the settlements and clearings advance. Its manufactures and trade are scarcely developed. It has one bank. Madison is the seat of government; but Milwaukee is its chief place. Pop. 30,945.

WISDOM, (wisdom) s. [Sax.] the highest and most spiritual kind of knowledge; prudence or discretion.

WISE, (wise) a. [wis, Sax. wis, Belg. and Dan.] versed in the highest and best kinds of knowledge; grave, or betokening wisdom; sapient; prudent; skillful; skilled in hidden arts.

WISE, (wise) s. [Sax. wise, Belg. weise, Tent.] manner; way of being or acting. This word is now corruptly spelt WAYS.

WISE, MICHAEL, a composer of sacred music, who held offices in Salisbury cathedral, Chapel-royal, and St. Paul's cathedral. He was killed in a street-fight, in 1688. His anthems are yet sung, and are greatly admired.

WISEACRE, (wiseaker) s. [wiseegger, Belg.] a person pretending to wisdom without reason; a fool; a dunce.

WISELY, ad. judiciously; prudently.

To WISHL, v. n. [wiscian, Sax.] to have a strong and longing desire for any thing. Used with well, to be disposed or inclined.—v. a. to desire or long for any future or absent good; to recommend by wishing; to imprecate; to ask.

WISH, s. a longing desire; the thing desired; desire expressed; a sort of basket.

WISHART, GEORGE, the Scottish martyr, was one of the first who embraced the doctrines of the Reformation in Scotland. He fled to England, and there recanted his creed, but afterwards returned to Scotland and preached anew the Reformed faith with great fervour. It appears that, with a mixture of fanaticism, not uncommon nor to be much wondered at, under the circumstances of such a man, he was implicated in plots against Cardinal Beaton's life. Beaton, aware of it, seized him, and burnt him as a heretic in 1546. It was to this cruel martyrdom that much of the fiery impulse of the Scottish Reformation may be traced.

WISHLFUL, a. longing; expressive of longing.

WISKET, s. a vessel made with twigs, rushes, &c. woven together; a sort of basket.

WISP, s. [Swed. and old Belg.] a small bundle of hay or straw.

WISTFUL, a. attentive; earnest; full of thought; grave.

To WIT, v. n. [wiscan, Sax.] in legal documents, that is to say, WIT, s. [gwid, Sax.] in Psychology, that exercise of the fancy by which thoughts or expressions are connected in a legitimate manner, but so as to produce an agreeable or ridiculous feeling of surprise. Judgment; genius; sense; a man of genius; a man of fancy. In the plural, a state wherein the understanding is sound; a sound mind; contrivance; stratagem; power of expedients.

WITCH, s. [vice, Sax.] a woman who pretends or is supposed to possess supernatural powers, by the agency of an evil spirit.

WITCHCRAFT, s. the supposed or pretended exercise of supernatural power, by the agency of an evil spirit; fascination. The belief in this kind of sorcery has always been found in connexion with imperfect cultivation of the mind, both in men and peoples; and the only effectual extirpation of it has been the diffusion of knowledge, both religious and scientific. The annals of its history in Europe are most remarkable, and present some of the most wonderful delusions in the parties professing to be witches that can be found any where. But these may be partly explained by the terror of the cruel tortures and punishments to which they were exposed, and to a species of mania, of which these are not the only expressions or phases. The use of the words witch and witchcraft in our translation of the Bible, which was made when almost every one believed such sorcery possible, has, undoubtedly, served to keep alive in many persons a sort of half-belief in it, against their better knowledge and judgment.

WITENAGE/MOTE, (witan and gemote, Sax.) the great assembly of ecclesiastical and secular lords, vassal kings, &c. &c., which formed the council of state under our Saxon kings, and was the germ of our present parliament.

WITH, prep. [Sax.] by, applied to note the cause, instrument, or means by which any thing is done; upon; amongst; together, or inseparably. Sometimes it denotes union, conjunction, or society. Sometimes it signifies mixture. Sometimes it denotes comparison. Sometimes it implies opposition or against. Followed by that or this, immediately after. With, in Composition, generally signifies opposition or privation.

WITHA'L, (withal) ad. along with the rest; likewise; at the same time. Sometimes used in the sense of with, to denote the cause, means, or manner of an action.

To WITHDRAW, v. a. to take back or deprive of; to estrange; to alienate; to call away, or make to retire.—v. n. to retire, or retreat.

WITHE, s. [witthe, Sax.] a willow twig; a band; properly, a bunch of twigs.

To WITHER, v. n. to fade or grow sapless; to dry up. Figuratively, to waste or pine away; to want or lose.—v. a. to make to fade, shrink, or decay; to want of moisture use to wither.

WITHER, GEORGE, an English poet of the 17th century. He studied at Oxford, was imprisoned by James I. for satire, fought against the Scotch under Charles I., and against Charles under the Parliament, and was once taken prisoner; became one of Cromwell's major-generals, was again imprisoned for satire before the Restoration, lost the property he had acquired when the king came back, and was once more put in confinement; and died, at length, in 1667, aged 79 years. In the revival of the taste for ancient poetry, Wither has had tardy justice done to his abilities, but his verses are far from being all equal to those which are generally known now as specimens of his poems.

WITHERING, DR. WILLIAM, a physician and botanist of the last century. He studied at Edinburgh, and practised at Stafford and Birmingham with great success. In his last years he visited Lisbon for his health, and died in 1799, aged 58 years. He wrote several works, but that by which his name is yet known, is one on the plants of Great Britain, which is still used, although more recent treatises have quite superseded it in value.

WITHERS, s. in horses, the juncture of the shoulder-bone at the bottom of the neck and mane, towards the upper part of the shoulder.

To WITHHOLD, v. a. to refrain, hold back, or keep from action; to keep back or refuse.

WITHIN, prep. [withinan, Sax.] in the inner part of; not beyond some boundary, applied to place, time, or things.

WITHIN, ad. in the inner parts; in the soul or mind.

WITHOUT, prep. [withutan, Sax.] not within; not within; in a state of absence from; in the state of not having; on the outside; beyond; not within the compass of; with exemption from.

WITHOUT, ad. on the outside; out of doors; externally. WITHOUT, conjunct. unless; if not; except.

To WITHSTAND, v. a. preter. withstood; [withstandian, Sax.] to oppose, resist, or contest with; to act against.

WTHWIND, s. in Botany, a name of the common bind-weed.

WITLING, s. [a diminutive of wit:] a person who pretends to wit and humour; a man of petty smartness.

WITNESS, s. [witnesse, Sax.] a testimony; attestation; a person who gives his evidence or testimony for or against a thing. With a witness, implies effectually, or to a high and extravagant degree.

To WITNESS, v. a. to attest; to subscribe one's name to a writing, in order to attest its being authentic.—v. n. to give or bear testimony.

WITNEY, Oxfordshire. It is noted for its manufactory of the finest blankets, and other thick woollen goods. It is 64 miles from London. Market, Thursday. Pop. 5707.

WITT, DE, the name of two celebrated statesmen of the United Provinces, in the 17th century. Cornelius de Witt was burgomaster of Dort, and a deputy to the States-General. He held an official appointment of no great elevation; but was twice sent out with the Dutch fleet in the war, as a government commissioner. He supported the proceedings of his brother, and fell a victim to the mob, in the tumults that ensued when the House of Orange was restored to power; being barbarously murdered in prison, after having been judicially tortured, in 1672, aged 49 years. John de Witt, his brother, was first pensionary of Dort, and afterwards grand pensionary of Holland. He displayed the most noble powers as a statesman and diplomatist during the period of his government; in which he had to rule a disorderly republic; to introduce order into its financial system; to oppose England, or France, or both united, in war; to repair defeats both by land and sea; and to watch against the pretensions to the supreme power, made by the Prince of Orange. He had at different times to negotiate with Turin and Temple, and, both in his treaties of alliance and peace, showed consummate skill. On one occasion he successfully piloted the fleet, after a defeat, from the Texel to the harbour of Antwerp, for refitting, after the regular pilots had refused to attempt it. At last the recovery of power by the House of Orange was effected in the panic caused by the invasion by the French army; his brother was imprisoned, tortured, and sentenced to be banished for ever from the United Provinces. And he, when visiting him in prison, was, with him, murdered by the mob, in most barbarous manner; in 1672, aged 47 years.

WITTEMBERG, a fortified town of Prussian Saxony. It stands on the Elbe, over which it has a bridge, and has some fine public buildings. Its university is ancient and famous, having been the cradle of the Reformation, and the principal scene of the labours of Luther and his brave companions in travail. It has some manufactures; and a good trade, by the Elbe. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 51. 51. N. Long. 12. 40. E.

WITTICISM, s. an attempt at wit.

WITTIENESS, s. the quality of being witty.

WITTINGLY, ad. [uitan, Sax.] knowingly, by design, or with deliberation.

WITTY, a. judicious; ingenious; full of imagination; sarcastic; taunting; scoffing.

TO WIVE, v. a. to marry. Seldom used.

WIVES, the plural of WIFE.

WIZARD, s. a man who pretends, or is supposed, to possess supernatural powers, by the agency of an evil spirit.

WOAD, s. [wead, Sax.] in Botany, a British plant, with yellow flowers, found in corn-fields and under hedges; formerly used by dyers for its blue colour. Wild Woad is a plant of the same genus as the nignonette; and yields a yellow dye, for which it is cultivated in some parts of England.

WOBBURN, Bedfordshire. It is a neat town, with some good buildings; and was formerly famous for its abbey, which now belongs to the Duke of Bedford, and is his country seat. Near it is found great plenty of fullers' earth. It is 42 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 1914.

WODROW, ROBERT, a Scottish ecclesiastical historian. He studied at Glasgow, and devoted himself to the elucidation of the Church history of his native country, in the retirement of a country parish. He lived to publish only his History of the Sufferings of the Kirk of Scotland from the Restoration to the Revolution; and died in 1734, aged 55 years. Parts of his vast collections of documents and unpublished MSS. have been edited by the Wodrow and Maitland Societies; and other parts will in all probability be edited soon.

WOE, Wo, s. [we, Sax.] grief; calamity; sorrow; misery; a state of misery.

WOFUL, a. full of sorrow; causing excessive grief; calamitous; afflictive; mournful; petty; wretched; sorry.

WOFULLY, ad. sorrowfully; mournfully; wretchedly.

WOFULNESS, s. misery; calamity.

WOLCOTT, DR. JOHN, or Peter Pindar, a clergyman of great keenness, was a medical practitioner, and a scribbler. He went to Jamaica with Trelawney, first in one capacity, and a second time in the other, but did not succeed in either. After his return to England, he attempted to find a practice in Cornwall, and lighted upon Opie, whose skill he recognised, and with whom he went to London. There he soon commenced his Pindaric satires, and obtained a pension from the parties he had pilloried. He died in 1819, aged 81 years.

WOLD, [Sax.] in the compound names of places, signifies a plain open country, or a tract without woods.

WOLF, [wulf], s. [Belg. wulf, Sax.] in Zoology, a fierce animal of the dog kind, species of which are found in almost every country of Europe, Asia, and America. In England they were exterminated in the 10th century, in Scotland in the 17th, and in Ireland in the beginning of the last century.

WOLF, FREDERIC AUGUSTUS, a celebrated German scholar. His father had intended him to be a musician, but he soon left the study of that profession for the highest walks of scholarship. He studied at Göttingen; and after some inconsiderable scholastic appointments, was made professor of philosophy at Halle. Whilst there, he published his chief works, and obtained a wide and enduring reputation for learning. During the revolutionary war, he was obliged to retire to Berlin, where he resided for many years, holding some appointment in the university there, and continuing his studies and writings. He died whilst on a tour in France, in 1824, aged 65 years. His works are numerous, and of the greatest value to scholars. The Dissertations on Homer, in which he started the hypothesis, that the Iliad and Odyssey were the work of many writers, and subsequently collected under the name of the immortal blind bard, are the most widely known of all his writings.

WOLFDOG, s. in Natural History, a dog of a very large breed, kept generally to guard sheep.

WOLFE, JAMES, a British general of the last century. He displayed at an early age great military talent, and rose rapidly in the army. At Laford, Minden, Rochfort, and other engagements in the old continent, and in America, he played a distinguished part. He was appointed to command the army sent against Canada, and fell in the hour of victory before Quebec, the French general, Montcalm, being also killed. He died in 1759, aged 33 years.

WOLFE, CHARLES, a poetical writer of promise, of the present century. He studied at Dublin, and entered the Irish Protestant Church; and, after a life of continued activity and exertion, died in 1823, of consumption, aged 32 years. His poem on the Burial of Sir John Moore, and some others of his Remains, show that he possessed great poetical power.

WOLFF, JOHN CHRISTIAN VON, a celebrated philosopher of Germany, in the last century. He studied at Jena and Leipsic, and became intimate with Leibnitz and other men of distinction. His first appointment was to the mathematical professorship at Halle, from which he was ejected in consequence of the plots of the other professors, on the charge of infidelity and irreligion. He was next made professor of mathematics and philosophy at Marburg; and, after many years, was restored to Halle, where he received the greatest honours and distinctions. He died in 1754, aged 75 years. His works are on mathematics, metaphysics, philosophy, natural and international law, &c. &c., and his system was the ruling system of Germany till the rise of the Critical Philosophy, for which it had undoubtedly prepared the way. It has little interest now, except to such as study the historical development of theories, and to such as seek severe discipline in abstract studies.

WOLFISH, (wulfish) a. ravenous; cruel; resembling a wolf in qualities.

WOLFSBANE, s. in Botany, a name of the aconite.

WOLFSCLAW, s. in Botany, a name of the common clubmoss.

WOLLASTON, WILLIAM, a theological and philosophical writer of the 17th and 18th centuries. He studied at Cambridge, and entered the Church, and was first assistant-master at Birmingham grammar-school. But coming to considerable property, he settled in London, where he carried on his studies for his own entertainment, but published nothing considerable of all his numerous writings, except the Religion of Nature Delineated. He died in 1724, aged 66 years.

WOLLASTON, DR. WILLIAM HYDE, an eminent chemist and natural philosopher, grandson of the preceding, studied at Cambridge, and practised as a physician first at Bury St. Edmund's, and afterwards in London. There he devoted himself chiefly to the study of science, and died in 1829, aged 62 years.

He invented the goniometer and camera lucida; he discovered the two metals, palladium and rhodium; he was the first who reduced platinum from the raw state into a condition in which it could be used for crucibles, retorts, &c. in the useful arts; he demonstrated the identity of electricity and galvanism; and beside these discoveries and inventions, in many other ways served the cause of science. He was able, by means of the discovery of the art of working platinum, to support himself in comparative affluence; and he left a sum to be devoted to the promotion of scientific study, by the bestowal of medals annually on meritorious and successful students. His name, though not placed in the first rank of philosophers, stands amongst the foremost of those whose labours have been devoted to the advancement of particular sciences, and who have combined practical utility with profound acquaintance with pure science.

WOLSEY, THOMAS, the celebrated cardinal and statesman of the reign of Henry VIII. His father was a grazier of Ipswich, and he studied at Oxford, distinguishing himself by his early proficiency in the scholarship of that not unlearned age. He entered the Church, and after a few years, during which he manifested the same superiority of intellect, and the same profligacy of manners, that characterized his later life, was made one of Henry VII.'s chaplains. His intelligence and unwonted diligence in an embassy to Flanders, raised him to the highest pitch in the royal confidence. Henry VIII. showed him the same favour his father had, and he rapidly rose in rank and influence,—such was the priest's courtiership, and such the king's partiality,—till he was archbishop of York and chancellor of England. The pope gave him the cardinal's hat, and appointed him legate à latere for England. His wealth was enormous; his prodigal generosity and splendour of parade equalled it: in the height of his power, there was but one step more,—the papal tiara,—the attainment of which was open to his vast ambition. He intrigued in vain for it, and that was the first step in his declining state. The many enemies his greatness and his manners had made, were indefatigable in their plots against him. The part he took in reference to the king's divorce of Catharine and marriage of Anne Boleyn, led to his first fall. He was convicted of having incurred the penalties of the statute of præmunire, and all his riches were forfeited to the king, whilst he lost all his numerous and lucrative appointments, both secular and ecclesiastical. Henry, touched with pity at so great a fall, restored to him soon after some of his dignities, and he prepared for his installation at York. But the malicious zeal of his adversaries prevented it: he was arrested for high treason, and travelled as far as Leicester towards London for trial. There he died, in 1530, aged 59 years. Shakespeare has drawn his character, and the contrasted scenes of his pride of place and his death-bed, with such fidelity and power, that nothing can be added to make this most instructive episode in English history fully understood. It only remains to be said, that Christ-Church, Oxford, was founded by Cardinal Wolsey.

WOLVERHAMPTON, Staffordshire. It is a large, irregularly built town, standing on the edge of Staffordshire coal and iron district. It has a fine old church, and many handsome public buildings and institutions. Here are numerous mines for coal and iron, and vast establishments for the manufacture of all kinds of hardware, and iron-works of the most extensive description. Its trade is carried on by means of railway and canal with all parts of England. It is 130 miles from London. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 70,370.

WOLVERINE, v. in Zoology, a very strong animal of the bear kind, about the size of a wolf, which inhabits the northern regions of America.

WOMAN, s. in the plural women, (pron. wëmen), [weifman, Sax.] the female of the human race; a female attending more particularly on a lady.

To WOMANISE, v. a. to soften; to make effeminate.

WOMANISH, a. effeminate.

WOMANKIND, s. the female sex; the race of women.

WOMANLY, a. becoming or suiting a woman; feminine.

WOMB, (woom), [wamb, Sax.] in Anatomy, the place of conception. Generally, the place whence any thing is produced; any cavity.

To WONDER, (wünder) v. n. [Belg. wundrian, Sax.] to be affected or astonished at the presence of something very strange or surprising.—v. a. to be astonished, used with at.

WONDER, (wünder) s. [wunder, Sax.] any thing which causes surprise by its strangeness; surprise; admiration; amazement; astonishment.

WONDERFUL, (wünderful) a. admirable; astonishing; marvellous; surprising; strange; amazing.

WONDERFULLY, ad. in a wonderful manner; to a wonderful degree.

WONDERSTRUCK, a. amazed.

WON'DROUS, (wünderous) a. so strange as to cause astonishment; admirable; marvellous; surprising; strange.

To WONT, To be WONT, v. n. [weunan, Sax.] to be accustomed or used to use.

WONT, (wont) a. a contraction of will not.

WONTED, a. usual; accustomed.

To WOO, v. a. [woogod, Sax.] to court, or to endeavour to gain the affections of a person as a lover; to invite with earnestness and kindness; to importune.—v. n. to court; to make love.

WOOD, s. [wude, Sax. woud, Belg.] a large and thick plantation of trees; the solid substance whereof the branches or trunk of a tree consist, when stripped of the bark; timber.

WOOD, ANTHONY A, an eminent English antiquary and biographer. He studied at Oxford during the height of the Puritan revolution; and being possessed of private wealth, devoted himself to his favourite pursuits, the results of which were, his History and Antiquities of Oxford, and his Athenæ Oxonienses. He was not without controversies, even of a legal sort, arising from his outspoken biographical sketches in the latter work; and he died in 1695, aged 65 years. His MSS. are yet at Oxford.

WOOD, JOHN, a celebrated architect of the last century, whose great work is the present city of Bath, which is not without beauty as an example of street architecture. He died in 1754. He published a few architectural and topographical works, of little interest now.

WOODBINE, v. in Botany, a name of the honeysuckle.

WOODBIDGE, Suffolk. It is seated on the river Deben, with very safe and deep water, but the bar is difficult and uncertain. A considerable corn trade is carried on here, and it has some salt works. It is situated about 6 miles from the sea, and 76 from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 4954.

WOODCOCK, s. [woducco, Sax.] in Ornithology, a migratory bird, appearing in this country in the autumn; it is allied to the snipes, &c.

WOODCUT, s. an impression from an engraving on wood.

WOODCUTTER, s. one who cuts wood; an engraver on wood.

WOODEN, a. made of wood. Figuratively, clumsy, or awkward.

WOODHOUSE, ROBERT, a distinguished English mathematician and astronomer. He studied at Cambridge; and was successively Lucasian and Plumian professor, and afterwards keeper of the Observatory. He died in 1827, aged 54 years. He wrote several valuable works on his favourite sciences, and aided greatly in advancing the study of them in England.

WOODLAND, s. ground covered with trees; woods.

WOODLARK, s. in Ornithology, a kind of lark, which perches on trees, but nests on the ground; sings as it flies.

WOODLOUSE, s. in Natural History, a kind of crustaceous animal, common in moist places, which rolls itself up into a small ball, when touched.

WOODYMAN, s. one whose trade is to fell timber; a sportsman; a hunter.

WOODNYMPH, s. a fabled goddess of the woods.

WOODNOTE, s. wild or native music.

WOODOFFERING, s. wood burnt on an altar.

WOODPECKER, s. in Ornithology, a genus of birds, which lives on insects, which it obtains by piercing the decayed parts of trees with its strong beak; and which is furnished with a long and curious tongue.

WOODPIGEON, s. in Ornithology, a name of the wild pigeon.

WOODROOF, s. in Botany, a small sweet-scented plant, allied to the common plant called goose-grass.

WOODSORREL, s. in Botany, an elegant little British plant, with triple leaves, and a pendulous flower, delicately pencilled. It is by some thought to be the true shamrock of Ireland.

WOODSTOCK, Oxfordshire. Near it is Blenheim House, a fine palace, built for the Duke of Marlborough, at the public expense; which is one of the noblest seats in Europe. The town used to have a valuable manufacture of gloves. It is 62 miles from London. Market, Tuesday. Pop. 1412.

WOODWARD, DR. JOHN, one of the early English geologists. He did not study medicine at any of the regular schools; but he held a respectable rank as a practitioner, and was made Gresham Professor of Physic. It is, however, as a scientific student that he is best known. He travelled in England for the purpose of studying the structure and contents of the different strata, and made an extensive collection of specimens. His lucubrations, which were sadly at variance with facts, he published in his Natural History of the earth; he also published a Classified Catalogue of English Fossils, in which minerals, geological specimens, fossil remains, &c. were all included under the same general head. He died in 1728, aged 63 years. His system of cosmogony (for it is not properly geology) and his other works would hardly have preserved his name to this day, except amongst the curious in natural science, had he not bequeathed his collection to the university of Cambridge, and endowed a professorship, which has been made illustrious by some of the most accomplished scientific students which have appeared in this country.

WOODY, a. abounding in wood or trees; consisting of timber; relating to woods; sylvan.

WOOFER, s. one who courts a woman.

WOOF, s. [wiſta, Sax.] the cross threads shot by a weaver with a shuttle, between and across those of the warp; texture; cloth.

WOOL, s. [wul, Sax.] in Natural History, a fleecy covering with which many animals are furnished, and particularly the sheep. It differs in its structure from hair, and is distinguishable from it by the fact that it can be made into a felt, which hair cannot. It is of great value to man, as the most serviceable parts of his dress are made from it.

WOOLLEN, a. consisting of wool; made of wool.

WOOLLEN, s. cloth made of wool.

WOOLLY, a. clothed with wool; consisting of wool; resembling wool.

WOOLWICH, Kent. It is seated on the Thames, and is of great note for its fine dockyards, where men of war are built; as also for its arsenal, where there are vast magazines of great guns, mortars, bombs, cannon-balls, powder, and other warlike stores. It has an academy, where the mathematics are taught, and young officers instructed in the military art. It has the chief barracks of the Artillery, and many other institutions of a military and naval kind. It is 8 miles from London. Market, Friday. Pop. 25,785.

WORCESTER, (Wūster) Worcestershire. It is seated on the river Severn, over which is a beautiful stone bridge. The principal manufactures are of horse-hair, broad cloth, gloves, and elegant china ware. Here are 9 parish churches, 3 grammar-schools, 7 hospitals, an infirmary, a water-house, and a well-contrived quay. It is 11 miles from London. Markets, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday; and a considerable hop market on Saturday. Fairs on the eve of Palm Sunday, the Saturday after Easter, August 15th, and September 19th. Pop. 26,306.

WORCESTER COLLEGE, Oxford, was founded in the last century, and was before that called Gloucester Hall. Its buildings are partly ancient, and partly of modern date. It is wealthy, but has produced few eminent men.

WORCESTERSHIRE, (Wūstershire) an English county, bounded by Warwickshire, Gloucestershire, Herefordshire, Staffordshire, and Shropshire; being about 35 miles in length, and 30 in breadth. It contains 152 parishes, and 12 market-towns. Some parts are hilly, but it is generally level. The principal rivers are the Severn, the Avon, the Salwarp, the Teem, and the Stour. The air is very healthy, and the soil in the vales and meadows very rich, producing corn and pasture; while several of the hills feed large flocks of sheep. The chief commodities of this county are corn, hops, wool, cloth, cheese, cider, perry, and very fine salt. It has manufactures for pottery, iron, glass, &c., and a good trade by canals, &c. The chief town is Worcester. Pop. 233,336. It sends 12 members to parliament.

WORD, (wūrd) s. [Sax. wōord, Belg.] an articulate utterance of the human voice, expressing either a distinct notion, or the relation of one notion to another, or to the speaker; the characters that represent such an utterance in writing, &c.; a short discourse or conversation; a promise; a token; a narrative; a command. In the New Testament, one of the designations of our Lord Jesus Christ.

To WORD, v. a. to express in proper words.

WORDY, (wūrdy) a. abounding in words, or making use of more than what are necessary; verbose; loquacious.

WORE, preter. of To WEAR.

To WORK, (wūrk) v. n. preter. and past part. worked or wrought; [weorcan, Sax. werken, Belg.] to labour, to toil, to travail; to be in action or motion; to act as a manufacturer; to ferment, applied to liquors; to operate, or have effect; to obtain by assiduity to act as on an object; to refine, used with up to; to be tossed or agitated as if in a fermentation.—v. a. to make by degrees, or continual application of strength; to perform; to labour or manufacture; to produce by action; to bring by action into any state; to embroider, or perform by the needle; to manage or direct, applied to ships. Used with out, to effect by continual labour; to erase, or efface; with up, to raise, excite, or provoke.

WORK, (wūrk) s. [weorc, Sax. werk, Belg.] constant application of strength or mind; labour or employ; toil; a state of labour; a bungling attempt; any thing made by the needle, or any manual art; an action or deed; operation. To go to work with, is to manage or treat. To set on work, to employ, engage, or excite to action.

WORKER, s. one that works.

WORKHOUSE, s. a building in which relief, sustenance, &c. are provided, under the Poor Law, for paupers and vagrants.

WORKINGDAY, s. a week-day, in distinction from Sunday the day of rest.

WORKINGTON, Cumberland. It is seated on the S. side of the river Derwent, near its mouth. A little up the river there are extensive iron works, and a fine salmon fishery. Its trade is chiefly in coal, and it is 311 miles from London. Market, Wednesday. Pop. 6694.

WORKMAN, s. an artificer; a maker of any thing; one that works any trade.

WORKMANSHIP, (wūrkmanſhip) s. manufacture; the skill of a worker; the art of working.

WORLD, (wūrlđ) s. [Sax.] the whole system of created things; the earth; the present state of existence; a secular life; the pleasures and interests of the present state, in opposition to the interests, &c. of truth and eternity; the public; universal empire; trouble of life; course of life; a great multitude; mankind. In the world, implies, existing, in being, or possible. For all the world, exactly. World without end, signifies throughout eternity, or time without end; from the Saxon, wherein world generally signifies time.

WORLDLINESS, (wūrlđlīness) s. a state wherein a person pursues his present, to the neglect of his future and eternal, interest; covetousness; avarice; desire of gain.

WORLDLING, (wūrlđlīng) s. one who cares only for this world.

WORLDLY, (wūrlđlī) a. secular; relating to this life, in contradistinction to that which is to come; bent entirely upon this world; human; common; belonging to the world.

WORLDLY, ad. with relation to the present life.

WORM, (wūrm) s. [Belg. wyrm, Sax.] in Natural History, the general name for all annulose, soft-bodied animals, without feet, eyeless, whether living on vegetable matters, in the earth, or in the intestines of animals; specially applied to the common earth-worm. The spiral tube of a silk.

To WORM, (wūrm) v. n. to work slowly and secretly.—v. a. to drive by slow and secret means.

WORMEATEN, a. consumed by worms; old, worthless.

WORMIUS, OLAUS, an eminent Danish antiquary. He studied theology at Marburg; but relinquishing that pursuit for medicine, visited the most famous schools in Italy, France, and Germany. He also travelled in England. His first appointment was that of professor of literature at Copenhagen; and he was afterwards royal physician, and dean of Lund. He died in 1654, aged 66 years. His works relate to medicine, and historical archaeology; and the last are a valuable repository for the students of Northern antiquities. He was a good anatomist also, and some parts of the skull are yet called, after him, the Wormian bones.

WORMS, a city of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. It stands on the Rhine; but has greatly fallen from its former importance and opulence. It has a fine old cathedral, and some other

Worcestershire.

REFERENCE TO THE HUNDREDS.

- 1 Blackheath.
- 2 Doulton.
- 3 Hales.
- 4 Oswaldslow.
- 5 Pershore.

Railway Stations shown.

Scale of 0 1 2 3 4 5 Miles
The County returns 1 member.

ancient buildings; and there are a few manufactures and a brisk trade. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 49. 36. N. Long. 8. 20. E.
WORMSEED, s. in Botany, a genus of plants of which the hedge-mustard and winter-cress are species.

WORMWOOD, s. in Botany, the name of a common plant allied to the garden plant called southernwood, of a very bitter taste: used as a tonic, &c.

WORMY, (würmy) a. abounding in worms.

WORN, (wörn) past part. of TO WEAR.

TO WORRY, v. a. [weren, Sax.] to tear, mangle, or shake like beasts of prey. Figuratively, to tease, to harass, or persecute brutally or inhumanly.

WORSE, (wörse) a. [wirre, Sax.] having fewer or less good qualities than another person or thing.

TO WORSE, (wörse) v. a. to put to disadvantage.

WORSHIP, a. [weorthscype, Sax.] eminence; excellence; dignity which requires reverence and respect; a character of honour; adoration; religious act of reverence; the title of a justice of peace; honour; civil deference; respect.

TO WORSHIP, v. a. to adore, or pay divine honours to; to honour, or treat with great reverence.—v. n. to perform acts of devotion.

WORSHIPFUL, a. claiming respect by any character or dignity.

WORSHIPPER, s. an adorer; one that worships.

TO WORST, (wörst) v. a. to defeat; to overthrow.

WORST, s. the utmost height or degree of any thing ill.

WORTSTED, (wörsted) s. yarn, or coarse thread, made of wool. It was first made at a village of Norfolk named Wortstead.

WORT, (wört) s. [Belg. weert, Sax.] in Horticulture, a plant of the cabbage kind.—[hyrt, Sax.] new beer, either unfermented or fermenting.

WORTH, (wörth) s. [weerth, Sax.] price or value; excellence; virtue; importance; valuable quality.

WORTH, (wörth) a. equal in price or value to; deserving of; equal in possessions to.

TO WORTH, (würth) v. n. [weorthan, Sax.] to be. This word is only used in the phrase worth nothing.

WORTHINESS, s. desert, merit, excellence, dignity.

WORTHLESS, (wörthless) a. having no value, vile, base; of bad principles, applied to persons.

WORTHY, (wörthy) a. deserving, used with of: valuable; suitable; meritorious.

WORTHY, (wörthy) s. a person of eminent qualities, particularly valour, and deserving esteem.

TO WOT, v. n. [witan, Sax.] to know or be aware of. Obsolete.

WOTTON, SIR HENRY, an English diplomatist of the reigns of Elizabeth and James I. He studied at Oxford, and then travelled on the continent. His first appointment was that of secretary to the Earl of Essex, whom he accompanied on his Spanish expedition, and to Ireland. On the fall of Essex, he fled to the continent, and settled at Florence, where he employed himself in writing a political work on the state of Christendom. The grand duke of Tuscany employed him in conveying information to James, then king of Scotland only, of a plot against his life; which he did most romantically and successfully, under the title of the Signor Octavio Baldi. James, to show his gratitude, on his accession to the English throne, employed him on various missions to the states of Italy and Germany, knighted him, and at last made him provost of Eton College. To qualify himself, in conscience, for this office, he was ordained in the Church of England; and he died in 1639, aged 71 years. His poetical Remains are his best writings, and perhaps he owes most of his fame to his biography, the inimitable Isaac Walton.

WOTTON, DR. WILLIAM, a learned English writer of the end of the 17th and beginning of the 18th centuries. He was distinguished in his boyhood for his attainments, and studied at Cambridge, where he acquired a great reputation for his knowledge of languages. He became a clergyman, and his studies and writings were the chief events of his life. He died in 1726, aged 60 years. His Reflections on Ancient and Modern Learning, his principal work, abounds in proofs of erudition, but relates to a controversy of no interest now, except as it serves to illustrate the intellectual character of the age in which it was carried on with so much warmth.

WOULD, the preter. of WILL, used as an auxiliary verb to express the optative and subjunctive moods.

WOULDING, s. an inclination or desire; propensity; primary purpose or intention.

WOUND, s. [wound, Sax. wonde, Belg.] in Surgery, an incision in the soft parts of the body, however made, and whether accompanied by contusion or not.

TO WOUND, v. a. to hurt by violence or accident.

WOUND, preter. and past part. of TO WIND.

WOUNDWOIT, s. in Botany, the common golden-rod.

WOUVERMAN, PHILIP, a celebrated Dutch painter. He lived at Haerlem, and his paintings, which are greatly admired, were landscapes, battle-scenes, hunting-pieces, &c., into each of which he is said to have introduced, for the sake of the effect, like Sir George Beaumont's dead bough, a white horse. He died in 1668, aged 48 years.

TO WRANGLE, v. n. to dispute or quarrel in a peevish or perverse manner.

WRANGLE, s. a quarrel; a perverse dispute.

WRANGLER, s. a perverse, peevish, disputative person. The academical title of those students who are placed in the highest class of the Tripes, at the examination for the bachelor's degree in arts, at Cambridge.

TO WRAP, v. a. pret. and past part. wrapped or wrapt; [werffler, Dan.] to roll together in folds; to complicate; to cover with something rolled, or thrown round; to involve; to comprise; to contain. Used with up, to cover, hide, or conceal.

WRAPPER, s. one who wraps; any thing used as a cover.

WRASSE, s. in Ichthyology, the name of a fish which abounds on the shores of Wales and Cornwall.

WRATH, s. [Sax.] anger excited to a high degree by some great offence; fury; rage.

WRATHFUL, a. angry; furious; raging.

TO WREAK, (reek) v. a. [weracan, Sax.] to revenge; to execute any violent design.

WREATH, (reeht) s. [wereth, Sax.] any thing curled or twisted; a garland or chaplet.

TO WREATHLE, (reethe) v. a. preter. wreathed, past part. wreathed or wreathen; to curl; to twist; to convolve; to interweave or entwine in one another; to encircle with, or surround like, a garland.—v. n. to be interwoven.

WREATHY, a. spiral; curled; twisted.

WRECK, or, more rarely, WRACK, s. [wraccen, Sax. wrache, Belg.] the destruction of a ship by winds or rocks. Figuratively, dissolution by violence; ruin; destruction.

TO WRECK, v. a. to destroy by rushing on rocks or sands; to ruin.—v. n. to suffer wreck.

WRECKIN, the name of a well-known mountain in Shropshire. It is 1320 feet in height.

WREN, s. [wrenna, Sax.] in Ornithology, a familiar English bird, whose little bustling figure, and gay energetic song, as well as the legendary sanctity ascribed to it along with the red-breast, are known to all. Gold-crested Wren. See GOLD-CREST.

WREN, SIR CHRISTOPHER, a famous English architect, of the 17th century. He studied at Oxford, and was renowned for his attainments in mathematical and natural science. Before he was thirty years old, he had held with distinction the Gresham Astronomical professorship, and the Savilian professorship at Oxford. But he soon outshone the reputation he had gained in science, by his magnificent architectural works. During a long life he planned and accomplished a series of structures, unrivalled in variety and effect; amongst which were St Paul's Cathedral; the Monument; the Royal Exchange, the Custom House (both since destroyed by fire); the towers of Westminster Abbey; Hampton Court; the Sheldonian Theatre at Oxford; a number of churches in the metropolis, and of buildings and chapels at both universities. And he had planned the rebuilding of London, after the great fire, on a scale that would have prevented the necessity of many modern improvements, and also secured a symmetry that is now hopeless. He was surveyor-general for half a century, and held other appointments also. His scientific fame procured him the president's chair of the Royal Society, and he had a seat in parliament. He died in 1723, aged 90 years; and was buried publicly in St Paul's, his chef-d'œuvre, which is thus, as his epitaph states, his splendid and befitting monument.

TO WRENCH, v. a. [wringan, Sax. wrenghen, Belg.] to pull by violence; to wrest; to force; to strain; to distort.

WRENCH, s. a violent pull or twist; a sprain.

To WREST, v. a. [wrestan, Sax.] to twist by violence; to exert by violence; to writh; to distort; to force; to apply a word to an uncommon meaning, as it were with violence to its common acceptance.

To WRESTLE, v. n. to struggle with a person in order to throw him down. Figuratively; to contend, to struggle with great force, in order to surmount some opposition, followed by with.

WRESTLER, s. one who wrestles, or contends in wrestling.

WRETCH, s. [wrecca, Sax.] a person in extreme misery; a person of no worth or merit.

WRETCHED, a. miserable; afflictive; calamitous; unhappy; unfortunate; pitiful; despicable; worthless; paltry; sorry; hateful; contemptible.

WRETCHEDNESS, s. misery; unhappiness; affliction; pitifulness; despicableness.

WREXHAM, Denbighshire, and Flintshire. It has an ancient Gothic church, whose lofty steeple, for curious architecture, is reckoned one of the finest in England. Here is a considerable manufactory of Welch flannel, and a large cannon foundry. It is seated on a river which falls into the Dee, in a country affording plenty of lead; 188 miles from London. Fairs, March 23d, Holy Thursday, June 6th, and September 19th. Markets, Monday and Thursday. Pop. 12,921.

To WRIGGLE, v. n. [wriggan, Sax. ruggelen, Belg.] to move to and fro with short twists.—v. a. to put in a quick reciprocating motion; to search; to insinuate.

WRIGHT, (rit) s. [wrikhta, Belg. or wyrhta, Sax.] a workman; a maker; an artificer; a manufacturer: generally applied to one that works in wood.

WRIGHT, JOSEPH, of Derby, an eminent English painter. He studied under Hudson the portrait painter, and travelled in Italy. His best pictures are of the historical class; but he executed others, such as landscapes, and pieces intended solely as exhibitions, or imitations of the effect of strange lights, successfully. He died in 1797, aged 63 years.

To WRING, v. a. preter. and past part. wringed and wrung; [wringan, Sax.] to twist or turn round with violence; to writh; to force moisture out of a thing by twisting it; to squeeze; to pinch; to distort; to torture; to persecute with extortion.—v. n. to twist with anguish.

WRINKLE, s. [wrinkle, Sax. wrinkel, Belg.] a corrugation; a furrow of the skin or face; any roughness or unevenness.

To WRINKLE, v. a. [wrinchen, Sax.] to corrugate or contract the skin into furrows; to make uneven or rough.

WRIST, s. [wyrst, Sax.] that part by which the hand joins to the arm.

WRISTBAND, s. the band at the extremity of a shirt or shift sleeve.

WRIT, s. any thing written. In Law, it signifies the king's precept in writing under seal, issuing out of some court, directed to the sheriff, or other officer, and commanding something to be done in relation to a suit or action.

WRIT, the old preter. of To WRITE.

To WRITE, v. a. pret. writ or wrote, past part. written, wrote, or writ; [writan, Sax.] to form letters, or express by a pen; to engrave; to impress; to produce, as an author.—v. n. to convey one's ideas by letters formed with a pen; to compose; to tell in books; to send letters.

WRITER, s. one who writes; an author. In Scottish Law, an attorney. Writer to the Signet, the title of certain attorneys in Scotland, who enjoy some privileges, and are competent to some kinds of law business, from which other attorneys are excluded.

To WRITHE, v. a. [writhan, Sax.] to distort; to twist with violence; to wrest; to twist.—v. n. to be convolved with agony or torture.

WRITING, s. the act of forming letters, words, &c. with a pen; a paper containing writing; any legal instrument; a composition; a book.

WRITING-MASTER, s. one who teaches to write.

WRITTEN, past participle of To WRITE.

WRONG, s. [wronghe, Sax.] any thing done with a design to injure another; an action inconsistent with moral rectitude; an error; detriment.

WRONG, a. inconsistent with morality, propriety, or truth; improper; unfit; unsuitable.

To WRONG, v. a. to deprive a person of his due; to injure. WRONGFUL, a. injurious; unjust.

WRONGHEAD, WRONGHEADED, a. obstinate; having a perverse understanding.

WRONGLY, WRONG, ad. amiss; unjustly.

WROTE, preter. and past participle of To WRITE.

WROTH, a. [wrad, Sax.] angry; irritated; very much provoked by some offence.

WROUGHT, preter. and past part. of To WORK; [wrogt, Sax.] performed; prevailed upon, or influenced, used with upon; operated; formed; excited or produced by degrees; produced; caused; effected; used in labour.

WRUNG, preter. and past part. of To WRING.

WRY, a. from WRITHE, crooked; distorted; perverted; wrested; wrung.

To WRY, v. n. to be contorted or writhed; to deviate.—v. a. to distort; to make to deviate.

WRYNECK, s. in Ornithology, a common English bird, so called from its odd motions and gesticulations with its head.

WURTEMBERG, a kingdom of Germany, bounded by Switzerland, Baden, Hohen-Zollern, and Bavaria. It is about 140 miles in length, and 100 in breadth. The surface is generally mountainous, and it has heights exceeding 4500 feet, although most of its mountains are less elevated. The Danube, the Neckar, the Iller, and other streams which fall into these, or into the Rhine, water it. It touches the lake of Constance, and has other small lakes within its borders. Iron, copper, lead, with other metals, many valuable kinds of stone and earth, and salt, are its mineral treasures. It produces corn, fruits, wine, honey, timber, cattle, &c. &c. abundantly. Its trade and manufactures are also flourishing. Its capital is Stuttgart. Pop. about 1,750,000.

WÜRZBURG, a city of Bavaria, Germany. It stands on the Main, over which is a long and handsome bridge. The cathedral, the palace, the university, the town hall, and many of the churches are fine structures. It has a good library, and several excellent educational and charitable institutions. There is a strong fortress on a hill called the Marienberg. The trade of the place is good. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 50. 0. N. Long. 10. 0. E.

WYATT, SIR THOMAS. The elder, the poet, studied at Cambridge, and afterwards travelled in France, and it seems, served in some of the wars then being carried on. He was connected with the court after his return, and was one of those whose names were used by Henry to accomplish the destruction of Anne Boleyn. After being restored to favour, he was engaged in embassies to the emperor, and was twice imprisoned and tried for imaginary crimes, chiefly through the instrumentality of Bonner, because of his friendship for Lord Cromwell. He received other proofs of royal favour subsequently, and died in 1542, aged 39 years, having brought on a fever by the haste with which he travelled to obey a royal command. His poetry is of the same kind as Earl Surrey's, but embraces a wider range of topics. His defence at one of his trials is as well known and as much admired as his poetry. The younger, his son, was a friend of Earl Surrey, and was implicated with him in a foolish riot, for which both were imprisoned and tried. He served in the French wars afterwards, and was concerned in Lady Jane Grey's short reign. At last, joining in an attempted rebellion, he was taken and executed for treason, in 1554, aged 34 years.

WYATT, JAMES, an eminent architect. He studied architecture and painting at Rome, and was made, after his return, surveyor-general, and, for a time, president of the Royal Academy. He built the Pantheon in Oxford Street, Kent Palace, Fonthill Abbey, &c., and superintended the alterations of Windsor Castle. He died in 1813, aged 67 years.

WYATT, or WYATTVILLE, SIR JEFFRY, his nephew, also an eminent architect, is chiefly known as the restorer or rebuild of Windsor Castle. He erected or enlarged many nobleman's seats, and died in 1840, aged 74 years.

WYCH-HAZEL, a. in Botany, a genus of shrubs or trees, found in America, China, and other parts of Asia, grown here for ornament in shrubberies.

WYCHERLY, WILLIAM, one of the dramatic writers of the latter half of the 17th century. He travelled in France, and afterwards studied law in the Middle Temple. But he relinquished that study for the life of a man of fashion. His career was such as persons of that kind gloried in, in the most licentious period of English history. He died in 1715, aged 75 years. His plays are not deficient in dramatic skill, but they are so gross, both in language and plot, as to be unfit for perusal.

WY'KEHAM, WILLIAM OF, an English prelate of the 14th century. He studied privately, by the aid of patrons, who had noticed his intelligence, though his circumstances were unfavourable to its development. He was engaged by Edward III. as an architect, and he built Windsor Castle, and other royal residences. He was rewarded by clerical appointments, and rose to be bishop of Winchester. He was also made keeper of the privy seal, royal secretary, governor of the council, and chancellor of England. He built and endowed New College, Oxford, and St. Mary's College, Winchester, and enjoyed universal esteem for his character and learning. He died in 1404, aged 80 years.

WYNANTS, JOHN, a distinguished landscape painter of Haarlem. In his designs and in his colouring he was equally skilful; and he was the Wouverman's master, and materially helped in forming his taste. He died in about 1680, aged about 80 years.

WY'NDHAM, SIR WILLIAM, a statesman of the former part of the last century. He studied at Oxford, and travelled on the continent; and, entering parliament, soon attained a high rank amongst the orators of the House. Under Queen Anne, he held the offices of secretary at war and chancellor of the exchequer; but in the following reign, was imprisoned on suspicion of being concerned in the attempt of the Old Pretender. He was never tried, and the rest of his life was that of a leader of opposition. He died in 1740, aged 53 years. His speeches are yet admired for their unadorned power and dignity.

WYTTENBACH, DANIEL, an eminent German scholar. He studied at Marburg and Göttingen, and became professor of Greek and philosophy at Amsterdam, and afterwards professor of eloquence at Leyden. He died in 1820, aged 74 years. He edited several classical works, with valuable commentaries, and was deservedly celebrated for his learning.

X

X IS the twenty-second letter of our alphabet, and a double consonant. It is pronounced like z, or zh, at the beginning of words, and like ks in other positions. Neither the Hebrews nor ancient Greeks used it, but expressed it by its component parts, ks, gz, or chs. Neither have the Italians this letter, but express it by ss. X begins no word in the English language, but such as are of Greek original, and we find it in few words, but what are of Latin derivation, as perplex, reflexion, deflexion, azle, &c. We often express this sound by single letters; as in books, decks, &c.; by ks, in brooks, rocks; by cc, in access, accident; by ct, in action, unction, &c. In numerals, it expresses 10, and as such seems to be made of two V's placed one over the other. When a dash is over it, thus,  $\bar{x}$ , it signifies 10,000.

XANTHUS, the capital of the ancient kingdom of Lycia, in Asia Minor. It stood about 10 miles from the sea, now called the Levant, on a river of the same name; and was a place of great extent and importance. There have lately been brought from its ruins many sculptures and relics, of great interest both to historians and artists, which are deposited in the British Museum, under the title of the Xanthian Marbles.

XAVIER, ST. FRANCIS, an eminent Jesuit missionary, of the 16th century. He was of noble family, a native of Navarre, Spain; and joined Ignatius Loyola in forming and organizing the Society of Jesus. When it was determined that missions to heathen nations should be undertaken by the Society, he was sent by the king of Portugal, with some companions, to the Portuguese settlements in the E. Indies. He travelled in various parts of S. E. Asia, and as far as Japan, and others of the E. Indian islands, preaching and labouring with most devout earnestness. He died, as he was about to extend his labours to China, in 1552, aged 48 years. A few writings on theological subjects are all that he left, and they are of little moment.

XEBE'C, a small three-masted vessel, used in the Mediterranean Sea, and on the coasts of Spain, Portugal, and Barbary.

XENO'CRATES, a Greek philosopher, who was a disciple of Plato; and after the death of Speusippus, was the principal teacher of the academy. Many apocryphal stories of his incor-ruptibility by gold and more powerful temptations, and of the ingratitude of the Athenians to so eminent a citizen, are told; but are of little value beyond assuring us of the high esteem he had obtained, and of the reputation that city yet possessed of preferring show to worth. He died in 314, aged 82 years. He differed from his master chiefly, it appears, in the value he set on mathematical knowledge.

XENOPHONES, a Greek philosopher and poet, who founded the Eleatic school. He wandered in Sicily, after his banishment from Colophon, his native city; and at last settled at Elea, where he died at a great age. He flourished in the 6th century B. C. His philosophy was communicated in rhapsodies, or poems, and seems to have been of a highly spiritual cast, but confused by the verbal logic of the day. See ELEATICS.

XENOPHON, a celebrated Grecian warrior, philosopher, and historian. He was a disciple of Socrates, and was saved by his master in the battle of Delium. He also fought in the latter part of the Peloponnesian war. He accompanied Cyrus in his attempt on Persia; and after the fatal battle of Cunaxa conducted the famous retreat of the 10,000 Greeks. Afterwards, he engaged in the expedition of Agesilaus, the Lacedæmonian king, into Asia; and being banished from Athens, and deprived of his citizenship, he settled at Scillus, near Olympia, where he wrote most of his works. He died in about 360 B. C., aged about 95 years. His writings are partly historical, and of these the Anabasis, or Expedition of Cyrus, is justly admired for its elegance and unaffected simplicity of style. His History of Greece supplies authentic information of the period after that the history of which Thucydides wrote. Others of his works are philosophical; and of these his Memorabilia, or Memoirs of Socrates; and his Cyropædia, or account of the Education of Cyrus, are very interesting. There are other works of value to historians and scholars. It is remarkable that he differs very considerably from Plato, in his picture of his master; and yet the elements of the character appear to be the same.

XERE'Z, a town of Spain standing on the Guadalete. It is not very regularly built, nor has it many handsome public edifices; but it gives the name to that agreeable white wine, known and esteemed in this country as Sherry, the trade in which is very important. Pop. about 35,000. Lat. 36. 42. N. Long. 6. 8. W.

XER'IF, a title given to a prince, or chief governor, of Barbary.

XEROCOLLY'RUM, s. [zeros and kollurion, Gr.] a dry plaster for the eyes.

XER'EXES, the name of a famous Persian king, (as the Greeks spell it,) who invaded Greece, crossing the Dardanelles by a bridge of boats, with an immense army. He cut a canal through the neck of the promontory on which Mount Athos stands. And after destroying the Spartan force at Thermopylæ, and burning Athens, which had been deserted by its inhabitants, was defeated in the great sea-fight at Salamis; when he retreated and returned to Asia. The battles of Plataea and Mycale, in the next year, obtained over his generals, completed his discomfiture, and freed Greece. He was assassinated in about 465 B. C., by one of his officers, after a reign of about 20 years.

XIMENEZ, CARDINAL, or FRANCIS XIMENEZ DE CISNEROS, a celebrated Spanish ecclesiastic, of the 15th century. He studied at Salamanca and Rome; and becoming a Franciscan, was made by Isabella her confessor. He was after her death earnestly to promote the interests of the kingdom. He died in 1517, aged 80 years. He is most widely known and most highly esteemed for the Complutensian Polyglott Bible, which he edited. He founded a college, was celebrated for the encouragements he gave to learning, and collected a great number of Biblical MSS. of great value from all countries.

XIPHOD'ES, (xíphodes) s. [xiphos and eidōs, Gr.] in Anatomy, the name of a cartilage at the bottom of the sternum, or breast-bone, and so called from its resembling the point of a sword.

XYLANDER, (or properly HOLZMANN,) WILLIAM, a great scholar of the 16th century. In spite of poverty, he studied at Augsburg and other universities, and was made professor of Greek at Heidelberg. He died in 1576, aged 44 years. He edited and translated many Greek and Latin classics; and wrote a treatise on Logic, and other works.

XYSTUS, s. [Gr.] in Architecture, a long spacious portico, wherein the athletes, such as gladiators, wrestlers, &c., exercised

Y

Y IS the twenty-third letter of our alphabet, and is one of the ambigvalent letters, being a consonant in the beginning of words, as in yard, youth, York, &c., whilst in other positions it is a vowel. It stands in some words instead of ie: as in try, fly, &c.: and in words derived from the Greek, for the Greek u, as in type, chyle, &c. Y was much used by the Saxons, whence it is found for i in our English writers. Y is also a numeral, signifying 150, and with a dash over it 150,000.

YACHT, (yowt) s. a sailing vessel, used now very much by amateurs in navigation.

YALDEN, DR. THOMAS, an English poet of the beginning of the last century. He studied at Oxford, and was intimate with Addison and Satchell, his fellow students. He entered the Church, and enjoyed various livings and appointments, but his poetical publications were the main incidents of his life. He died in 1736, aged 65 years. His poems are not without talent, but are far from entitling him to a high place amongst the poets of Great Britain.

YAM, s. in Botany, a plant of the W. Indies, whose tubers, like our potatoes, form a very valuable esculent vegetable.

YANG-TZE-KIANG, a large river of E. Asia, which, rising in the mountains of Thibet, flows through that country and China, and after a course of above 3000 miles, falls into the Pacific Ocean. Nanking stands on it, at no great distance from its mouth. Its tributaries are very numerous, and its mouth forms a small estuary.

YARD, s. [geard, Sax.] enclosed ground belonging to a house; a measure containing three feet; long pieces of timber fitted across the masts, and used as supports for sails.

YARDWAND, s. a measure of a yard.

YARE, a. [georce, Sax.] ready; eager; dexterous. Not in use.

YARMOUTH, GREAT, Norfolk. It is seated on the mouth of the river Yare, and on the Bure; over both of which it has bridges. There are a few pretty wide streets, a vast number of narrow lanes, called rows, and a spacious market-place. Its church is a large and noble structure, and it has several fine public buildings. It has a considerable trade, although the harbour has a bar which keeps out all large vessels, and the navigation of the roadstead is difficult and dangerous. It is chiefly famous for its herring-fishery, which is of great importance to its numerous sea-faring population. It has also a good mackerel fishery. Markets, Wednesday and Saturday. Pop. 24,086.

YARN, s. [gearn, Sax.] wool spun into threads; woollen thread.

YAROSLAV, a government of Russia, surrounded by the governments of Kostroma, Volodga, Novgorod, Tver, and Vladimir. It is about 200 miles long, and about 130 miles broad. It is generally level, and is watered by the Volga and its tributaries. Its soil is fertile, and produces abundance of corn, fruit, timber, &c. &c. It has also many and important manufactures. Its capital, of the same name, stands on the Volga, and has some churches and other buildings of good appearance, but is not itself a fine place. There is a citadel, several educational institutions, &c. &c. It has also some good manufactures. Pop. about 30,000. Lat. 58. 0. N. Long. 39. 30. E. Pop. of government, about 1,250,000.

To YARR, v. n. to growl or snarl like a dog.

YARROW, s. in Botany, a plant, of which there are two species, viz. the bastard pellitory, and milfoil.

YAWL, s. a boat or small vessel belonging to a ship.

To YAWN, v. n. [geonan, Sax.] to gape; to open wide; to express longing by gaping.

YAWN, s. the act of gaping; oscitation.

YAWNING, a. sleepy; slumbering; drowsy.

YAWS, s. in Sea Language, a ship makes yaws when she does not steer steady.

YCLE/PED, a. [elopan, Sax.] called; named; termed; denominated.

YE, pron. the nominative plural of Thou, used when speaking to more than one person.

YEA, (yay) ad. [ea or gea, Sax.] yes; truly. It is sometimes used emphatically for, not only so, but more than so.

To YEAN, (yeen) v. n. [eanian, Sax.] to bring forth young, applied to sheep.

YEANLING, (yeenling) s. the young of sheep.

YEAR, (yeer) s. [gear, Sax.] the space of time measured by the revolution of the earth in its orbit. A solar year consists of 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 45½ seconds. A lunar year consists of 354 days, 8 hours, 48 minutes, and 36 seconds, and is the year now used by the Turks. The civil year is that which each nation has contrived to compute time by, and generally consists of whole days; the common civil year consists of 365 days, and the Bisectile, or leap year, consists of 366 days, and has one day more than the common, viz. February 29, which is called the intercalary day. See CALENDAR, &c.

YEARLING, (yeerling) s. a beast a year old.

YEARLY, (yeerly) a. happening every year; lasting a year.—ad. once a year; annually.

To YEARN, (yern) v. a. [earnan, Sax.] to feel a strong sympathy, affection, or tenderness; to be affected with internal uneasiness.

YEAST, (yeest) s. [gest, Sax.] a light frothy substance produced by the fermentation of beer, &c., and capable of producing fermentation in bread, beer, &c.; barm.

To YELL, v. n. [yle, Isl.] to make a horrible cry through sorrow or agony.

YELL, s. a cry expressive of horror.

YELLOW, (yello) a. [ghelence, Belg. gealece, Sax. giallo, Ital.] of a bright colour resembling gold.

YELLOWWEY, s. in Botany, a plant with yellow blossoms, also called small swine's succory.

YELLOW FEVER, s. in Medicine, a dangerous and contagious disease, common in the coast region of warm countries, and at sea in the same latitudes. It is named from the yellow hue assumed by the skin of those attacked by it.

YELLOWHAMMER, s. in Ornithology, a common English bird, called also the yellow hunting.

YELLOWISH, a. approaching to yellow.

YELLOWNESS, (yellowness) s. the quality of being yellow.

YELLOW RIVER, or HOANG-HO, a large river of Asia. It springs in the mountains of Thibet, crosses Tataria, and flows along the N. part of China, frequently being crossed by the Great Wall. At length, after a course of about 2500 miles, it falls into the Yellow Sea. Peking stands near its mouth. The Great Canal joins it with the Yang-tze-kiang.

YELLOWS, s. in Veterinary Surgery, a disease in horses, resembling the jaundice in the human subject.

YELLOWWEED, s. in Botany, a genus of plants of which there are two British species, viz. the wild wood, or dyer's weed, and base rocket.

To YELP, v. n. [geulpan, Sax.] to bark or make a noise like a hound in pursuit of its prey.

YEOMAN, (yeman) s. a freeholder who farms his own land; the next class of landholders below the gentleman. Also, a title of office in the king's household between an usher and a groom. Yeomen of the guards, are foot guards that attend the king's person, dressed after the manner of Henry VIII.'s time.

YEOMANRY, (yemantry) s. the collective body of yeomen.

To YERK, v. a. to jerk; to move or throw out with a spring.

YERK, s. a spring or quick motion.

YES, ad. [gise, Sax.] a term used to imply consent, assent, or affirmation, opposed to no. It is also used emphatically for, even so; not only so, but more.

YESTER, a. [ghister, Belg.] being on the day preceding the present. Seldom used, unless in composition.

YESTERDAY, s. [gistan-day, Sax.] the day last past; the day immediately preceding the present.—ad. on the day last past.

YESTERNIGHT, s. the night last past.—ad. on the night last past.

YET, conj. [gyt, or get, Sax.] nevertheless; notwithstanding; however.

YET, ad. beside; over and above; more than has been mentioned; still; without any alteration; once more; at least; hitherto. It denotes increase or extension to the sense of the words to which it is joined. It is used as a kind of emphatical addition to a negative, importing, even; after all. With, or without a negative, it has also the signification of, at this time, or so soon.

YEW, s. in Botany, a tree of the fir kind, a native of England, valued for its rapid and thick growth, and for the durability of its wood.

To YIELD, (yeld) v. a. [geldan, Sax.] to produce; to afford;

YORKSHIRE. WEST RIDING.

REFERENCE
1	Swire's
2	Standard
3	Quo
4	Maple
5	Richmond
6	Wetherby
7	Ilkley
8	Swire's
9	Wetherby
10	Wetherby
11	Wetherby

REFERENCE

1. English Region
2. Division of
3. Division of
4. Division of
5. Division of
6. Division of
7. Division of
8. Division of
9. Division of
10. Division of
11. Division of
12. Division of
13. Division of
14. Division of
15. Division of
16. Division of
17. Division of
18. Division of
19. Division of
20. Division of
21. Division of
22. Division of
23. Division of
24. Division of
25. Division of
26. Division of
27. Division of
28. Division of
29. Division of
30. Division of
31. Division of
32. Division of
33. Division of
34. Division of
35. Division of
36. Division of
37. Division of
38. Division of
39. Division of
40. Division of
41. Division of
42. Division of
43. Division of
44. Division of
45. Division of
46. Division of
47. Division of
48. Division of
49. Division of
50. Division of
51. Division of
52. Division of
53. Division of
54. Division of
55. Division of
56. Division of
57. Division of
58. Division of
59. Division of
60. Division of
61. Division of
62. Division of
63. Division of
64. Division of
65. Division of
66. Division of
67. Division of
68. Division of
69. Division of
70. Division of
71. Division of
72. Division of
73. Division of
74. Division of
75. Division of
76. Division of
77. Division of
78. Division of
79. Division of
80. Division of
81. Division of
82. Division of
83. Division of
84. Division of
85. Division of
86. Division of
87. Division of
88. Division of
89. Division of
90. Division of
91. Division of
92. Division of
93. Division of
94. Division of
95. Division of
96. Division of
97. Division of
98. Division of
99. Division of
100. Division of

Scale of Miles.

The following returns 2 numbers.

Railway Stations shown.

YORKSHIRE EAST RIDING

to give as a due; to allow. Used with up, to resign or surrender. —v. n. to submit as conquered; to comply; to admit or allow; to give place to as an inferior in excellence or any other quality.

YELDER, s. one who yields.

YOKE, s. [yece, Sax.] the bandage placed on the neck of a draught-horse. Figuratively, a mark of servitude; bondage; slavery; a link, chain, or bond; a couple or pair; a piece of wood placed on the shoulders, by means of which two pairs are carried at once. Yoke of land, in our ancient customs, was so much land as two oxen could plough in a day.

To YOKE, v. a. to fasten to a carriage by a yoke. To join or couple with another; to enslave or subdue.

YOKEFELLOW, YOKEMATE, s. a companion in labour; a mate; fellow.

YOLK, s. in Physiology, that part of the eggs of birds which furnishes nutriment to the embryo during incubation; the yellow part of an egg.

YON, YOND, YONDER, ad. and a. [geond, Sax.] at a distance within view.

YONNE, a department of France, surrounded by the departments of Côte-d'or, Nièvre, Loiret, Seine et Marne, and Aube. It is about 80 miles long, and about 50 broad. There are no hills of any consequence; and the chief rivers are the Yonne (after which it is named) and its associated streams, the Loing, &c. &c. It yields iron, and some other metals; building-stone, and other kinds of stone and earth. It produces some corn and cattle; abundance of wine, timber, &c. There are also some manufactures, iron-works, &c. Its trade is flourishing. Its capital is Auxerre. Pop. about 375,000.

YOKE, Or YORE, ad. [geogara, Sax.] long; of old time, or long ago.

YORK, Yorkshire. It is seated on the river Ouse, and is a large and beautiful city, adorned with many fine buildings, both public and private; containing about 30 parish churches and chapels, besides its cathedral or minster, which is a most magnificent structure. It is divided by the river into two parts, which are united by a stately stone bridge of five arches. The eastern part is most populous, the houses standing thicker, and the streets being narrower. It is surrounded by a strong wall, on which are many turrets, or watch-houses; and there are four gates and five posterns. It is a city, and the see of an archbishop. With its ainsty, or liberty, it constitutes a county. It is a place of considerable trade. It is 198 miles from London. Markets, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Population of city, 28,842; of city and ainsty, 38,320.

YORKSHIRE, the largest county of England. It lies on the N. sea, and is bounded by the counties of Durham, Westmoreland, Lancaster, Chester, Derby, Nottingham, and Lincoln. It is about 120 miles in its greatest length, and 90 in its extreme breadth. It consists of two highlands, divided from each other by the Ouse and its tributaries. That on the W. of the Ouse valley has heights of from 2000 to nearly 3000 feet above the sea. The other is of a lower elevation, but its sea-cliffs are lofty and steep, and inland it is sometimes above 1000 feet above the sea. The rivers are the Ouse, the Swale, the Wharfe, the Derwent, the Aire, the Don, the Humber, &c. Coal, iron, building and lime-stone, &c. &c. are found abundantly. It is very fertile, and produces in great plenty corn of all kinds; and there are excellent pastures, where cattle, sheep, horses, &c. are reared in abundance. Its manufactures are various and most valuable; the iron-works are numerous, and all kinds of cutlery and hardware, all kinds of cloth, woollen and cotton goods, silks, &c. &c. are made in vast quantities. The trade of this extensive and populous district is carried on by means of numerous canals and railways, communicating with all parts of the kingdom, and by the port of Hull, on the Humber, with foreign parts. York is its capital city, but there are many other places of great importance. It is divided into three parts, called the North, West, and East Ridings; and another smaller division is the ainsty of the city of York. Pop. of N. Riding, 204,122; of W. Riding, 1,154,101; of E. Riding, 194,936; of the entire county, 1,591,480. It returns 37 members to parliament.

YORK NEW. See NEW YORK.

YOU, (yi) pron. [yow, Sax.] the nominative and accusative plural of thou; used when we speak to more than one person; but customarily used when we address a single person. It is sometimes used indefinitely for any person.

YOU'GHALL, Cork, Ireland. It has a very commodious harbour, and a fine, well-defended quay. It is seated at the mouth of the river Blackwater, and has some good buildings, and a brisk trade. It is about 120 miles from Dublin. Pop. 12,054.

YOUNG, (yüing) s. [yeung, Sax. jong, Belg.] not born many years; being in the first part of life. Figuratively, ignorant, unexperienced; applied to vegetables, newly grown.

YOUNG, (yüing) s. the offspring of animals collectively.

YOUNG, DR. EDWARD, an English poet of the last century. He studied at Oxford, for the profession of law, but never practised. He began as a tutor in a nobleman's family, and as a literary man; and afterwards entered the Church. In his calling he never rose higher than royal chaplain and clerk of the closet, and he died in 1765, aged 83 years. Of his poems and plays the Night Thoughts is the only one that continues to be generally read, because of its religious character, and also because of its peculiar style, which, however unfit for poetry, is full of weighty thought, and most felicitous and condensed illustration. The Centaur not Fabulous, and Remarks on Original Composition, are his chief prose works.

YOUNG, DR. MATTHEW, an Irish priest, distinguished for his mathematical knowledge. He studied at Trinity College, Dublin, and became professor of natural philosophy there. His knowledge and character obtained for him the see of Clonfert, and he died in 1800, aged 50 years. He published several valuable mathematical works, and communicated various papers of interest to the transactions of the Irish Academy, in the formation of which he greatly assisted.

YOUNG, ARTHUR, a celebrated agricultural writer. He was first a clerk in a merchant's counting-house, and afterwards became a farmer; but his zeal for improvements was so great that he was well nigh ruined by it. Out of his reverses, however, proceeded his ultimate success. Unfitted at that time for practical farming, he was a keen observer, and a shrewd critic of the practice of others; and his works, in which he detailed his observations made during tours in various parts of England and Ireland, in France, Italy, and Spain, raised him to the highest reputation in agricultural science. He obtained a European fame, noblemen from Russia were sent to profit by his instructions, and solid rewards attested his success. He was ultimately made secretary to the Board of Agriculture; and died in 1820, aged 79 years. He published a Farmer's Calendar, and conducted the Annals of Agriculture. His political tracts were characterized by the same features as his other writings. His Tours are interesting works; and that in France is full of graphic sketches of incidents which he observed during the Revolution of 1789.

YOUNG, DR. THOMAS, a learned and scientific writer and student, who was distinguished in boyhood for his linguistic attainments. He studied medicine at Edinburgh and Göttingen, became physician to St. George's Hospital, secretary to the Board of Longitude, and foreign secretary to the Royal Society. He died in 1829, aged 56 years. His Lectures on Natural Philosophy are his most popular and excellent scientific work. He also published some medical treatises, investigated the atomic theory of chemistry, the undulatory theory of light, and contributed to the discovery of the interpenetration of the biographic writing of the ancient Egyptians.

YOUNGISH, somewhat young.

YOUNGSTER, YOUNKER, (yünker) s. a young person. It is a word of contempt.

YOUR, (yüre) pron. [cover, Sax.] belonging to you. It is used in speaking to one person, as well as, correctly, in addressing more than one. Yours, is the genitive of you.

YOURSELF, (yürself) pron. you, exclusive of any other.

YOUTH, (yüth) s. [yeugth, Sax.] that part of life which is between childhood and manhood; adolescence; a young man. Young men, used collectively.

YOUTHFUL, (yüthful) a. young; suitable to youth; vigorous; playful.

YPRES, a town of W. Flanders, Belgium, standing on the Ypern, with a good navigable canal connecting it with Bruges and with the sea. It has some handsome public buildings, which contain many relics of its former splendour, and it is well fortified. The manufactures of linen, woollen, cotton, and silk goods, &c. are valuable and extensive; and it has a good trade. Pop. above 15,000. Lat. 50. 50 N. Long. 2. 50 E.

YRIARTE, TOMAS DE, a Spanish poet and writer of fables, was general archivist to the high council of war, and translator to one of the ministerial departments of state at Madrid. He translated French dramas, wrote a didactic poem, called Musée, and several Latin poems. He was once brought before the Inquisition, because of his knowledge of French literature; and he died in 1790, aged 40 years.

YTTRIM, s. in Chemistry, a metal of scaly texture, and grayish-black colour; brittle, and when heated to redness, burns with great brilliancy. Its oxide is an earth called yttria, from Ytterby, in Sweden, where it was discovered.

YUCATAN, a republic of N. America, consisting of a peninsula or promontory of the Gulf of Mexico, and bounded by Honduras and Guatemala. It is above 300 miles long, and about 150 broad. It is generally level, having few hills of greater elevation than 500 feet. Its rivers are not considerable; Rio Palisado is the largest. It has lagunes along part of its coast. The mineral resources of the country are imperfectly known; in other respects its productions resemble those of the tropical regions of the New World generally. The inhabitants are partly European, partly Indian, and partly of a mixed race. Civilization is slowly advancing here; and as commerce increases, and as the condition of the adjoining republics becomes more settled, more rapid and sure advances may be expected. Merida is its capital. Pop. about 750,000.

YUCCA, s. in Botany, a genus of plants found in the warmer parts of N. and S. America, commonly called Adam's needle, from their long, narrow, sharp-pointed leaves. They are occasionally grown in English gardens.

YULE, s. [yool, geol, or yehul, Sax.] the time of Christmas, or Christmas-tide.

Z

Z IS the twenty-fourth letter of our alphabet. It is a consonant, and its sound is that of a guttural s, though some reckon it a double consonant, having the sound of ds, which is incorrect, since we often double it, as in puzzle, muzzle, guzzle, &c. Among the ancients, Z was a numeral, signifying 2000, and with a dash over it, thus, Z, it signified 2000 times 2000, or four millions. It is placed before all vowels, but before none of the consonants, except t, as in puzzle, guzzle, &c.

ZAANDAM, or SAARDAM, a town of the Netherlands, seated on the river Zaan. It is a sea-port, with a good trade and many valuable manufactures. It is built in the fashion of most Dutch towns, and "guarded by an army" of wind-mills. It was formerly noted for its ship-building; and Peter the Great, of Russia, worked here for some time. It stands not far from Amsterdam. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 52. 25. N. Long. 4. 48. E.

ZACHARIA, JUSTUS FREDERIC WILLIAM, an eminent German poet. He studied at Leipzig, and was appointed professor of poetry at the Caroline College, Brunswick. He died in 1777, aged 51 years. His poems are numerous, and are justly esteemed by critics. Amongst them is a translation of Paradise Lost.

ZACHARIAH, or ZECHARIAH, one of the latest Hebrew prophets. He entered upon the prophetic office at the same time with Haggai, in about 527 B. C., and was sent to the Jews upon the same message, to encourage them in erecting the temple, and restoring Divine worship, after their return from the captivity, and to lead them into the service of God, by warnings, instructions, and predictions of future glory to God's people. His writings are not so highly poetical as most of the prophets, and in parts are very obscure.

ZAFFRE, s. in Chemistry, an impure oxide of cobalt.

ZAHARA. See SAHARA.

ZAIRE, a great river of Congo in Africa. Its course is yet very imperfectly explored.

ZALEUCUS, the famous Locran legislator. He was, according to the doubtful account we possess of him, a slave in one of the Greek colonies of S. Italy, and was set free when he distinguished himself as a lawgiver. There are many fabulous stories respecting him, such as that of his having submitted to lose one of his own eyes to save his son who had been sentenced to lose both for adultery, and that of his having put himself to death, because he had forgetfully violated the senate-house by entering it armed. He flourished in the 6th or 7th century B. C.

ZAMORA, a town of Spain, seated on the Douro, over which is a noble bridge. It is a fine old walled town, with numerous and handsome churches and public buildings, and extensive suburbs. It has little importance in trade, &c., but is rich in historical associations. Pop. about 12,000. Lat. 41. 37. N. Long. 5. 50. W.

ZAMO/SKI, JOHN, a distinguished jurist and statesman of Poland, in the 16th century. He studied at Paris and Padua, and obtained the rectorship of the last university. He speedily became one of the leaders of the turbulent barons of the country, and it was by his influence that Henry of Anjou, Stephen Bathory, and Sigismund III. were elected to the throne. Under the two last of those kings he held the offices of grand-chancellor and generalissimo. And he distinguished himself as greatly as a warrior, as he had already done as a statesman. In his private life, for he found time for retirement in the intervals of his stormy and troubled career, he proved himself a patron of education and learning, and a good lord to his serfs. He died in 1605, aged 64 years, leaving as great a name behind him as the history of Poland can boast.

ZANCHI, GIROLAMO, a theologian of the 16th century. He was a Romanist ecclesiastic; and having abjured the papal faith, fled to Switzerland and Germany, where he was made professor of theology at Heidelberg. He published various works on divinity, and deservedly enjoyed a high reputation for his learning. He died in 1590, aged 74 years.

ZANGUEBAR, the name of a region of E. Africa, opposite to the island of Zanzibar, by which name it is often called. It is inhabited by Arab and Negro tribes, and carries on a considerable trade with the E. Indies, in the produce of the country. It is most imperfectly explored; and the chief town is named Magadoxo. Its coast is about 1000 miles in length.

ZANTE, one of the Ionian Islands, lying off Cape St. Nicholas in the Morea. It is about 24 miles long, and 12 broad. It has mountains of 1500 and 2000 feet high; and is very subject to earthquakes. There are also hot-wells and bituminous springs, and other evidences of its being a seat of active volcanic agencies. It produces fruit of all kinds, and especially currants, wine, oil, corn, &c. &c. Its trade is considerable. Zante, its chief town, stands on an open bay, and is the only place of importance in it. Pop. about 20,000. Lat. 37. 30. N. Long. 20. 55. E. Pop. of island, about 40,000.

ZANY, s. a person who endeavours by odd gestures and expressions to excite laughter; a merry-andrew, or buffoon.

ZARA, a city of Dalmatia, Austria. It stands on a small peninsula, and is fortified. There is a fine harbour; but it is not a well-built place, although it has a few noble buildings, some of which are of considerable antiquity. Its institutions, manufactures, fisheries, and trade are flourishing. Pop. about 10,000. Lat. 44. 0. N. Long. 15. 10. E.

ZARNICH, s. in Chemistry, a solid substance in which orpiment is found. The common kinds are green and yellow.

ZEAL, (zeel) s. [zelos, Gr. zelus, Lat.] a passionate ardour or affection for any thing, person, or cause.

ZEALAND, a province of the Netherlands. It lies on the German Ocean, bordering on Belgium; and is bounded by Holland and Brabant. It consists of 8 islands, 3 of which, Walcheren, Schouwen, and Tholen, are pretty large, lying in the mouth of the Scheldt; and some small tracts on the mainland. It is a flat country, preserved from the sea, under the level of which most of it lies, by vast dikes. It produces corn and cattle abundantly; its fisheries are very valuable; and its trade excellent. Middleburg is its capital. Pop. about 175,000.

ZEALAND, an island of Denmark, in the Baltic, almost of a round form, and about 700 miles in circumference. It is surrounded by the Scagerrack, the Sound, the Baltic, and the Great Belt. The coast is much intersected with large bays; and within the country are several lakes, which, together with the rivers, abound in fish. It is the largest of the isles of Denmark, and exceedingly fertile; producing grain of all sorts, and in great plenty, and abounding with excellent pasture. It is particularly famous for its breed of horses. Copenhagen, the capital of Denmark, is seated on the east shore of this island. Pop. about 400,000.

ZEALAND, NEW, the name of two large islands of the S. Pacific Ocean, which are almost the antipodes of England, being a little further from the S. pole, than the British Islands are from the N. pole. The strait which divides them is called

Cook's Strait. The N. island is about 500 miles long, and varies from a few miles to 150 in breadth. It has high lands and hills of considerable elevation above the sea, broad plains, fine rivers, noble harbours, and a fertile soil. Its immense resources are but now beginning to become apparent, and the settlements are increasing continually in number and extent. The S. island, which is comparatively unknown, is about 450 miles long, and about 100 in its average width. It has a range of mountains along the centre, the general height of which is about 3000 feet. Around its shores are numerous small islands. The aborigines of this country are of the same race as those of most of the Australian and Polynesian islands; and were characterized by the same religious superstitions, the same cruelties, &c., and a language very closely resembling theirs. Wars and European diseases have greatly reduced their numbers; but efforts have been made, and those not without success, to introduce Christianity and civilization amongst them. These islands are the seat of a British colony, of which Auckland is the chief town; the New Zealand Company has also commenced a colony here, and its chief town is Wellington. These are both in the N. island. Pop. about 105,000. Amongst the peculiarities of this country, the Apteryx, a bird of the ostrich kind, but of smaller size than others of that kind, may be mentioned. Its Flora has many serviceable plants and trees; and the neighbouring seas abound in whales and other fish.

ZÉALOT, (zēlot) s. [zelos, Gr.] one that espouses any cause with a great ardour or passion; a bigot. It is generally used in dispraise.

ZÉALOUS, (zēlous) a. espousing any cause with passion.

ZÉALOUSLY, ad. with passionate ardour.

ZÉBRA, s. in Natural History, an animal of the horse tribe, of a white colour, very beautifully striped with black. It is less than a horse in size; and inhabits Africa and the East.

ZÉCHIN, (zēkin) s. [from Zecha, in Italy;] a gold coin worth about nine shillings sterling.

ZED, s. the name of the letter z. Figuratively, a crooked person, formed like the letter Z; a worthless, insignificant person.

ZÉDOARY, s. [zedoaria, Fr.] in Botany, a spicy plant, somewhat like ginger in its leaves, but of a sweet scent.

ZEND, s. the name of the book containing the dogmatic and preceptive parts of the religion taught by Zoroaster; and now applied to the language of Persia, of the age of that book, which exhibits many remarkable analogies to the Hindu, the classic, Teutonic, and other tongues.

ZENIC, s. in Zoology, an animal of the weasel kind, which is striped like a zebra, and inhabits the south of Africa.

ZÉNITH, s. [Arab.] in Astronomy, the point in the heavens directly over one's head, opposed to the Nadir.

ZÉNO, the name of two distinguished Greek philosophers. Zeno of Elea was a pupil of Parmenides, and carried on his studies in that small colony, leading a noble life, and gaining no little renown. He occasionally visited Athens, and was one of the teachers of Pericles. At that time all the love of liberty that characterized the Ionic race was inflamed to the utmost by the Persian wars, and this philosopher shared in the general enthusiasm.

Finding on his return from Athens, after his last visit, that Nearchus had seized the tyranny of Elea, he conspired against him, was taken, and put to a cruel death, in about 435 B. C. He was the inventor of dialectic logic, and the famous quibble of Achilles and the tortoise is ascribed to him. Of his other opinions it is needless but to say that they belonged to his logic, and that he was the first of the long line of inquirers, which is not yet ended, who have earnestly laboured by that inefficient instrument to find truth. Zeno of Citium studied in succession the Socratic, Cynic, Megaric, and Platonic systems, and finally commenced a new school, the Stoics. At Athens, in the painted piazza or porch of Polygnetus, he continued to expound his lofty and stern morality, and in the midst of that luxurious city his life was as instructive as his doctrine. He broke his finger by a fall, and strangled himself in about 260 B. C., aged about 95 years. See Stoics.

ZÉNO, NICHOLAS AND ANTHONY, the names of two celebrated Venetian navigators of the 14th century. They were brothers, nephews of the admiral who figures in the war of Chi-ozza. Nicholas in the course of his travels came to Friesland, and entered into the service of some chief or prince there. He next invited his brother to join him, and they engaged in expeditions of the same kind as those of the ancient Scandinavian sea-kings; in the course of which they visited Greenland, if not the continent of N. America. Nicholas died in about 1399, and Anthony in about 1405.

ZENO, APOSTOLO, an eminent Italian literary man and poet, to whom is ascribed the beginning of the genuine Italian opera. He resided for some time at Vienna, in the service of the emperor Charles VI., and died in 1750, aged 82 years. His musical dramas, which are both tragic and comic, are deficient in that which would make them fine dramatic poems, whilst the music to which they were recited or sung, is deficient in the genuine operatic character. His other writings seem to be of a higher order.

ZÉNOBIA, SEPTIMIA, the celebrated queen of Palmyra, in the 3rd century of our æra. Her husband, Odenatus, after having gained some celebrity by his wars against Persia, was assassinated; upon which she took possession of the government, but was never acknowledged at Rome. She increased the dominions she ruled over, and at the height of her power possessed Syria, Egypt, and part of Asia Minor. She was defeated twice by the emperor Aurelian, and taken prisoner, and most probably lived in Italy, after the emperor's triumph, till about 273 A. D. She was possessed of a masculine intelligence, and not deficient in learning, as well as in the power to animate the hearts of her soldiers with her own spirit. Locusinus, the celebrated critic, was her secretary. Palmyra was destroyed soon after her overthrow.

ZEPHANIAH, one of the minor prophets of the Jewish nation. He prophesied in the time of King Josiah, about 626 B. C., a little after the captivity of the ten tribes, and before that of Judah. His prophecies predict both the coming judgments on Judah, and the future glory of the true Israel. They also relate to other nations; and contain many powerful exhortations to penitence.

ZÉPHYR, ZEPHYRUS, s. [zephyrus, Lat.] the west wind; poetically applied to any calm, soft, or gentle wind.

ZÉRO, s. the point from which a scale is graduated.

ZEST, s. a relish or taste superadded to any thing.

To ZEST, v. a. to heighten by an additional relish.

ZÉTETIC METHOD, s. [zēto, Gr.] in Mathematics, the method made use of to investigate or solve a problem.

ZÉUGMA, s. [zeugnum, Gr.] in Rhetoric, a mode of speech wherein an adjective or verb, which agrees with the next word, is likewise applied to one or many more remote.

ZÉUXIS, a celebrated Greek painter, some of whose pictures were greatly admired by the critics of the day, who have left us accounts of them. His Helen, Centaurs, Hercules, &c., are specially described. He once contested the superiority of Parrhasius in his art, but whilst the birds were deceived by his grapes, and not alarmed at the boy who was represented as carrying them, he was himself deceived by the curtain, which Parrhasius had painted; and so was held, on some unknown principle of criticism, to have failed. He flourished in about 400 B. C.

ZVIBET, s. in Zoology, an animal which nearly resembles the civet cat, and inhabits the Indian Isles.

ZIEGENBALG, BARTHOLOMEW, an eminent missionary in India. He was sent out by Frederick IV. of Denmark, to Tranquebar; and after some years of labour, returned to Europe to print a Dictionary of the Malabar language. At the end of a year he returned to India; and died in the midst of his work, in 1819, after 16 years of devoted labour.

ZIMMERMANN, JOHANN GEORGE VON, an eminent physician of Switzerland, who studied at Göttingen. He practised with considerable reputation, and extended his name by his writings. After a time he was appointed royal physician at Hanover; and wrote and practised with constantly increasing fame. But he had already manifested symptoms of derangement; and these grew to such a height, that he imagined himself the object of countless plots, and involved himself in endless difficulties. The outbreak of the French Revolution completed his insanity, and he died in 1795, aged 67 years. He published many works, which obtained an extensive circulation in literary and scientific circles of Europe; but his Essay on Solitude was made known by translations to the people in every country of Europe, and was every where admired. His Essay on National Pride has also been translated and widely circulated in England and other countries.

ZINC, s. in Chemistry, a metal of a bluish-white colour; lamellated in structure; hard, but both malleable and ductile, except at a high temperature. It is extensively employed in the useful arts, for vessels for liquids, water-piping, door plates, metallic roofing plates; and also in the same way that stone is employed in lithography. It was used for dairy vessels, but being acted on by one of the components of milk it is laid aside as injurious. In Voltaic electricity it is one of the most generally used metals. See GALVANISM.

ZINCOGRAPHY, s. [zinc and grapho, Gr.] in the Arts, the use of zinc plates, in the same way that stone is used in Lithography (which see).

ZINGIBER, Zy'ziber, s. [Lat.] ginger.

ZINZENDORF, NICHOLAS LOUIS, COUNT VON, an eminent character in the history of the church of the United Brethren. He was educated at Halle and Wittenberg, and imbibed the principles of the excellent Franke. He afterwards travelled in Holland, France, and Switzerland, and manifested unabated zeal for religion. Having settled on his estates, an exile from Moravia requested an asylum, and the result was the colony of Herrnhut. The Count made the greatest exertions to secure the retreat of all the courageous members of the persecuted Hussite church; and aided in the formation of the church of the United Brethren, as it at present exists. To the establishment of this church, and the maintenance of its missionaries, which were soon sent forth, he gave up all his property; and at length devoted himself to the ministry in it. For many years he was exiled from his country because of his religious earnestness. He was ordained a bishop at Berlin, by the Prussian king. He visited most European countries, as a preacher of the gospel; and was met with determined and peremptory hostility in two, Russia and Sweden. Thrice he visited the New World, once to aid the missionaries in the W. Indies, and twice to preach in the British colonies of N. America. At length, after a life of earnestness and unwearyed labours, he died in 1760, aged 60 years. His writings are all theological or devotional, and are faithful exhibitions of his heart and mind. To his influence may be traced those features in the Moravian Brethren, which most powerfully move the feelings, and which most effectually repel such as can abide by the truth alone.

ZISKA, JOHN, of Trocznow, the great Hussite warrior, was a Bohemian noble, who embraced the party of John Huss, through disgust and hatred of the priests, one of whom had brought his sister to shame. When Huss was martyred, he excited the barons to rebellion; and after Jerome of Prague's death, spread devastation and death over the whole of Bohemia. He spared neither church nor convent; and suffered no ecclesiastic to live, unless he joined him. He was the chief of the Taborite party; and not only successfully defied all the power of the emperor, but kept down the Calixtines, and exterminated several lesser sects of fanatics. He had lost one eye before the Hussite wars, and the other was blinded by an arrow during a siege; but he continued to direct the movements of his army, and to lead his soldiers to victory, notwithstanding his blindness. At length, Sigismund, finding that all his efforts to gain the crown of Bohemia by arms were fruitless, endeavoured to effect a compromise; and offered Ziska the kingdom, on condition of being acknowledged in name, at least, as sovereign. He never received a reply, for Ziska, at that very time, died of the plague, in 1424, aged about 55 years.

ZO'CLE, s. in Architecture, a small sort of stand or pedestal, being a low square piece or member, serving to support a bust, statue, or the like, that needs to be raised; also a low square member serving to support a column instead of a pedestal, base, or plinth.

ZODIAC, s. [zoon, Gr. zodiacus, Lat.] in Astronomy, a belt of about 16 degrees broad, drawn on celestial globes, and supposed to include the paths of all the bodies of the solar system; that of the sun, or the ecliptic, running through the centre of it. But the angles made by some of the asteroids with the equator is so great, that they pass many degrees beyond the boundaries of the zodiac. It belongs to a former age of the history of astronomy, and figures chiefly in astrology now.

ZODIACAL, a. connected with, or placed in, the zodiac. Zodiacal light, is the name given to a faint luminosity, which appears, in favourable circumstances, before sun-rise and after sun-set. It assumes an elongated conical form, and seems to proceed from the sun, in the plane of the ecliptic. Various con-jectures have been entertained respecting its nature, the most probable of which is, that it is a sort of atmosphere, or ether, to the sun.

ZOFFANY, JOHN, an eminent painter, of the last century. He was born in Germany, studied in Italy, and after residing for some time at Coblenz, came to England, where he obtained considerable reputation. Subsequently he visited Italy again, and resided for a time at Lucknow in Hindustan. He died in England, in 1810, aged 75 years. Some of his pictures have been engraved, and are well known.

ZOILUS, a rhetorician of Greece, in the 3rd century B. C., of whose life nothing certain is known. He obtained, however, a reputation for hyper-criticism, which has made him a proverb for that unamiable quality. He seems to have exercised his critical talents on Homer, and to have written several works, all of which are lost.

ZOLLIKOFER, GEORGE JOACHIM, a distinguished Swiss preacher of the last century. He studied at Bremen and Utrecht, and was pastor of various churches in his native country, where he obtained such renown for his oratorical powers, that he was at last settled at Leipzig, where he died in 1788, aged 58 years. His Sermons, Devotional Exercises, Hymns, and other writings, are yet read, and have been translated into other languages.

ZONARAS, JOHANNES, an eminent Greek theologian and historian of the 12th century. Before he entered on the life of a monk, he held high stations under the emperor at Constantinople. He died in one of the monasteries of Mount Athos at a very advanced age. His Annals contain a compendious history of the world from the earliest period to 1118 A. D. He also wrote several Commentaries, Letters, &c.

ZONE, s. [zonē, Gr.] in Physical Geography, a division of the earth's surface by circles parallel to the equator. There are usually reckoned five zones; the torrid, between the tropics; the N. and S. frigid, within the arctic and antarctic circles; and the N. and S. temperate, between the tropical and arctic circles. This is, however, a very imperfect and incorrect generalization of the phenomena of climate, and is used only when a loose and popular notion is intended to be expressed. See CLIMATE.

ZOOGRAPHER, (zōōgrāfer) s. [zoon and grapho, Gr.] one who describes the nature, properties, and forms of animals.

ZOOGRAPHY, (zōōgrāfy) s. a description of the forms, nature, and properties of animals.

ZOOLOGICAL, a. connected with zoology. Zoological Garden, is a name now given to a menagerie, in which animals, birds, &c. &c. are kept alive in large cages, or enclosures, in which their habits can be better observed than they could be when confined in small close dens, as was formerly the custom. There are two excellent establishments of this kind in London, one in Regent's Park, which is very extensive and well supplied; the other, which combines more popular entertainments, as well as zoological recreations, to the visitor, is called the Surrey Zoological Gardens.

ZOOLOGIST, s. one who studies or writes upon zoology.

ZOOLOGY, (zōōlogy) s. [zoon and logos, Gr.] the science of animated nature; which embraces all beings, from the zoophyte, which can with difficulty be distinguished from a plant, up to man. It is not a mere classificatory science; the researches of comparative anatomists, and the extension to animals of the idea of morphology, which was at first confined to plants, having raised it to the true rank of a science. The following are the classes into which the animal kingdom is divided, according to the most recent zoologists:—1. Mammals; 2. Birds; 3. Reptiles; 4. Fishes; 5. Molluscs; 6. Articulated animals; 7. Radiated animals; 8. Annulose animals; and 9. Polyps, or Zoophytes.

ZOO'PHORIC, (zōōphōrīk) s. [zoon and phero, Gr.] bearing an animal. A zoo-phoric column, in Architecture, is that which bears or supports the figure of an animal.

ZOO'PHOROUS, (zōōphōras) s. in Architecture, the frieze of a column, or that part which is between the architrave and cornice; so called from the ornaments, resembling animals, carved upon it.

ZOO'PHYTE, (zōōphyte) s. [zoon and phuton, Gr.] in Zoology, the general name for those animals which rank lowest in the scale of animated being, and most resemble plants; polyps, coral-insects, sponges, &c. belong to this class.

ZOOTOMIST, s. [zoon and temno, Gr.] a person who dissects animals.

ZOO/TOMY, s. the dissection of the body of beasts; called likewise comparative anatomy.

ZORILLA, s. in Zoology, an animal of the weasel kind, which has a very strong scent, and inhabits South America.

ZOROASTER, or properly, ZENDUSIR, the founder of the Magian religion; respecting whose life nothing is certainly known, than that after many years of contemplative retirement, during which he wrote the Zend-avesta, (which is the sacred book of the Parsees), he commenced his work of reforming or founding the national religion, being aided by the king, who was one of his earliest converts or disciples; and that, after a career of great labour and zeal, he died in 513 B. C., aged about 75 years. There are, as is usual, very many most absurd and incredible stories told respecting him; and the contradictions are so numerous between the different legends, that many have unnecessarily supposed that several men of wisdom and learning, of this name, attained to eminence amongst the Persians. The peculiar doctrine of the religious system of Zoroaster, was the existence of an evil deity, named Ahriman, co-ordinate in power, &c. with Ormuzd, the good deity, and to be propitiated by worship and sacrifice. There are however abundant traces of faith in one spiritual and supreme God, in the Zend-avesta; and of these conflicting deities being of inferior rank, and but the ministers of his will. This is the metaphysical part of the system. Another part, the worship of fire and the heavenly bodies, the cultivation of astronomy, or rather of astrology, &c., is the scientific part. The spiritual and noble character of many of the precepts and predictions of the Zend-avesta has engaged the attention of men of learning, and has given rise to many improbable conjectures as to their source. There is no fear of diminishing the authority or of impugning the character of the Sacred Scriptures which we possess now, if we admit both the predictions and the precepts of Zoroaster to have been the expressions of the knowledge and the aspirations of a man of rare spiritual wisdom; on the contrary, we shall find in all such correspondencies a proof of the Divinity of the revelation of Jesus Christ, inasmuch as it alone accurately answers to and completely satisfies those feelings which found expression in the words of sages and poets of other people, and earlier ages of the world.

ZUCCARELLI, FRANCESCO, an eminent painter of Italy. After having obtained considerable repute in his own country, he visited England, where he resided for many years, and acquired not only fame but wealth, most of which he unfortunately lost after his return to Italy. He died in 1788, aged 80 years. Amongst his paintings are some excellent designs for tapestry.

ZUCCHERO, FRÉDÉRIC, a distinguished historical painter of Italy. He studied with his brother Taddeo, who attained almost equal renown; and after acquiring a great reputation in Italy, gave offence to the papal court by some caricatural pictures, and came to England. Here he increased his reputation, and obtained forgiveness from the parties he had offended. After his return he visited Spain; and died in Rome, in 1699, aged 66 years.

ZUG, one of the cantons of Switzerland, bounded by Zurich, Lucern, Argau, and Schwitz. It is above 12 miles long, and about 10 miles wide. It is mountainous, is watered by the Reuss and other rivers, and has several beautiful lakes. Corn, wine, fruit, cattle, dairy produce, &c. &c. are plentiful, and there are excellent fisheries. Zug, its capital, stands on the lake of the same name, and has some good buildings, and charitable and educational institutions. Pop. about 3000. Lat. 47. 9. N. Long. 8. 36. E.

ZÜNGLIUS, or ZWINGLI, ULRICH, the celebrated Swiss Reformer. He studied at Basel, Berne, and Vienna, became a priest, and devoted himself to the knowledge of the Scriptures. He was awakened to the abuses and mischievous errors of Romanism by seeing the evils of indulgences and practices of penance and pilgrimage, and opposed them with some success. From this he was easily led to other questions of a more vital nature, and correspondence with those who shared his views, and with whom he had but then become acquainted, deepened his convictions. He also obtained followers, and was charged with being a heretic. A council was called at Zurich, and there Zuinglius gained his first triumph. He proceeded gradually to remove all that could not abide the test of Scripture in the ecclesiastical system of Zurich; other cantons embraced the same views; schools and universities were employed most judiciously to foster and spread the new doctrines. After a period spent thus, disturbed only by threats from Rome, and by Anabaptist troubles, the great Sacramentarian controversy broke out between Luther and Zuinglius. At the conference at Marburg it first fairly commenced; and it was carried on with great acrimony on Luther's part, and with great power on the part of the Swiss Reformer. A sorer trial next befell;—the cantons of Switzerland that remained steadfast in the Romish faith, took up arms to coerce those which had embraced the Reformed doctrines to submit to the authority of the pope. A battle happened, when the Reformed army was least expecting an attack; and in the defeat Zuinglius was killed, in 1531, aged 47 years. His body was burnt by the victors. His writings are all theological, and most of them are Commentaries on various books of Scripture. They are characterized by all the learning and love of simple truth that marked his whole course. He was one of the noblest of the Reformers of the 16th century. Having shaken off the chains with which Rome bound her sons, he did not, as Luther did, forge other chains, and insist on their being worn as the sign of freedom from the pope. He was snatched away too early (as we may, not irreverently, say) to develop all the principles of the gospel that he had so humbly and fervently received; and it is only in these last few years that they have reached that point to which the Reformer was evidently tending,—the completest religious freedom. After him, the Protestants of Switzerland are often called Zuinglians.

ZURICH, a canton of Switzerland. It is about 50 miles in length, and 30 in breadth, and is bounded by the duchy of Baden, Schaff-hausen, Schwitz, Thurgau, St. Gall, Argau, and Zug. It has mountains of nearly 3000 feet in height, and is watered by the Rhine, the Limmat, the Thur, &c. It yields corn, wine, fruits, cattle, timber, &c.; and has also some valuable manufactures of silk and cotton goods. Zurich is its capital, and is seated on the lake of the same name, on the Limmat. It has some fine buildings, and is a place of great industry and trade for its size. Its university and other institutions for promoting science and education are thriving. Pop. about 15,000. Lat. 47. 21. N. Long. 8. 32. E. Pop. of canton, about 250,000.

ZUYDER ZEE, a large gulf or bay of the kingdom of the Netherlands, communicating with the N. Sea, and across the mouth of it the islands of Texel, &c. lie. It is about 50 miles long, and about 40 in its broadest part. Several rivers flow into it.

ZYGOMA, s. [zeugma, Gr.] in Anatomy, is a bone of the head, otherwise called os jugale, being a union of two processes, or eminences of bones, the one from the os temporis, the other from the os male: these processes are hence termed the zygomatic processes, and the suture that joins them together is denominated the zygomatic suture.

ZYGOMATIC, a. See ZYGOMA.

ZYMOGIC, s. [Gr.] any thing which promotes or causes fermentation.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE

REMARKABLE EVENTS, FROM THE CREATION TO THE PRESENT TIME.

B. C.

- 4004 CREATION of the world, according to Archbishop Usher, who follows the Hebrew text of the Old Testament. According to the Samaritan Pentateuch it is 4700; and according to the Version of the Seventy, 5872. Kennedy affirms that there are as many as 300 different opinions respecting the length of time which elapsed between the creation of the world and the birth of Christ. It must be observed that by creation of the world, nothing more can be understood now than the introduction of the human race into it; the science of geology having demonstrated that it is utterly impossible to assign a date to its creation.
- 3875 Abel murdered by Cain, his brother.
- 3017 Enoch translated.
- 2349 The Deluge.
- 2188 Kingdom of Egypt founded by Menes, or Misraim, son of Ham.
- 2059 Kingdom of Assyria founded by Ninus, son of Belus.
- 1996 Abraham born at Ur, in Chaldæa.
- 1921 Call of Abraham.
- 1897 The cities of the plain, Sodom, &c., destroyed.
- 1800 The Pelasgians, under Inachus, settle in Peloponnesus about this time.
- 1706 The deluge of Ogyges, in Attica.
- 1728 Joseph sold into Egypt.
- 1706 The Israelites settle in Egypt.
- 1700 The Pelasgians settle in Thessaly about this time.
- 1680 The Hyksos, or shepherd kings, from Arabia, or Phœnicia, subjugate Egypt about this time.
- 1600 Settlements made in Greece by adventurers from Egypt, Phœnicia, Mysia, &c.; from about this time till about 1400.
- 1582 The Parian Chronicle, in the Arundelian Marbles, Oxford, begins with this year, when it states that Cecrops settled in Attica.
- 1571 Moses born. The Israelites in bondage in Egypt. Sesostris begins to reign in that country, according to some; others fix this event as late as 1451.
- 1503 The deluge of Deucalion, in Thessaly.
- 1491 Departure of the Israelites, under Moses, from Egypt. The Law given on Mount Sinai.
- 1453 The Olympic games said to have been first celebrated.
- 1451 The Israelites enter Canaan under Joshua.
- 1443 Joshua dies.
- 1400 Pelasgians and Tyrrhenians settle in Italy about this time.
- 1356 The Eleusinian mysteries introduced at Athens, according to some.
- 1326 The Isthmian games said to have been instituted.
- 1300 Minos, the lawgiver of Crete, flourishes: others assign him a much earlier date.
- 1263 The Argonautic expedition, said to have been undertaken about this time.
- 936

B. C.

- 1255 Tyre founded, according to Josephus.
- 1184 Troy taken, after a siege of ten years.
- 1104 The return of the Heraclidæ; or settlement of the Dorians in the Peloponnesus.
- 1100 The prophet Samuel flourishes.
- 1095 Saul anointed king of Israel.
- 1068 Codrus, king of Athens, falls in a war with the Dorians. Monarchy ceases at Athens; the government of decennial archons begins.
- 1050 The Greek colonies of the W. part of Asia Minor settled about this time.
- 1048 David acknowledged as king by all Israel.
- 1015 Solomon, king of Israel, begins to reign alone.
- 1004 The Temple of Solomon completed.
- 975 The separation of the kingdom of Israel, under Jeroboam, from the kingdom of Judah, under Rehoboam.
- 971 Jerusalem taken, by Shishak, or Sesonchis, king of Egypt.
- 950 Homer supposed to have flourished about this time.
- 896 The prophet Elijah carried up to heaven.
- 888 Death of Sardanapalus, and conclusion of the first Assyrian monarchy.
- 884 Lycurgus frames the Spartan constitution, according to some authorities; others assign him an earlier date. The Olympic games re-established.
- 880 Carthage founded about this time.
- 813 The Macedonian kingdom founded about this time.
- 800 The prophets Amos, Hosea, and Jonah flourish about this time.
- 790 The second Assyrian monarchy founded, by Pul, about this time.
- 777 The Bacchiadæ rulers of Corinth.
- 776 The æra of the Olympiads begins, on July 23, in this year, when the victors at Olympia were first registered; Coræbus being the first victor enrolled.
- 775 The prophets Isaiah and Micah flourished about this time.
- 753 The æra of the building of Rome begins, on April 20, in this year, according to Varro. Other chronologists have assigned other dates to this event.
- 750 Hesiod, the Greek poet, flourished about this time.
- 747 The æra of Nabonassar begins, on February 26, in this year.
- 743 The first war between Messenia and Sparta begins.
- 727 Gyges, king of Lydia.
- 725 Habakkuk and Nahum prophesy about this time.
- 721 The city of Samaria taken by Salmanaser, king of Assyria. The ten tribes of Israel carried into captivity.
- 719 Syracuse built.
- 717 The Medes revolt from the Assyrian king.
- 713 Sennacherib, king of Assyria, invades Egypt, in the reign of Sethos, a priest of Ptutha; and is driven back by a pestilence.
- 710 Sennacherib's army destroyed whilst besieging Jerusalem.
- 685 The second war between Messenia and Sparta begins.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

B. C.

- 684 The government of Athens changed from decennial to annual archons.
- 656 Psammetichus sole monarch of Egypt.
- 624 Draco, the Athenian lawgiver, flourishes.
- 610 Zephaniah and Joel prophesy about this time.
- 606 Nineveh taken and destroyed, and the second Assyrian monarchy overturned, by Cyaxares of Media, and Nabopolassar of Babylon.
- 594 Legislation of Solon at Athens.
- 587 Jerusalem taken by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and the kingdom of Judah overturned.
- 585 A solar eclipse, predicted by Thales, occurs, which puts an end to the war between the Medes and the Lydians. Some chronologists place this eclipse as early as 625, and others in intermediate dates.
- 580 Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel prophesy about this time.
- 572 Old Tyre taken and destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar.
- 569 Amasis king of Egypt, during whose reign the intimate intercourse between that country and Greece began.
- 560 Peisistratus becomes tyrant of Athens.
- 559 Cyrus elected general of the Persians; overthrows the empire of the Medians.
- 546 Sardis taken by Cyrus, and the kingdom of Lydia overturned.
- 540 Pythagoras, the philosopher, flourishes.
- 538 Babylon taken by Cyrus.
- 536 The edict for the return of the Jews, and the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the Temple, sent forth by Cyrus.
- 535 Thespis, the first tragedian, flourishes.
- 525 Cambyzes, king of Persia, conquers Egypt.
- 520 Hecateus, the historian, flourishes.
- 515 The Temple at Jerusalem completed.
- 514 Hipparchus assassinated at Athens.
- 510 The Peisistratidae expelled from Athens.
- 509 Monarchy abolished at Rome; the consular government established.
- 508 Darius, king of Persia, invades Scythia about this time.
- 500 Revolt of the Ionian cities from Darius, under Aristagoras.
- 499 Sardis burnt by the Ionians and Athenians.
- 498 The struggle between the plebeians and the patricians commences at Rome. Lartius the first dictator.
- 495 Miletus taken after a great naval engagement near it, in which the Persians gained the victory.
- 493 Tribunes of the people appointed at Rome.
- 490 The grand Persian invasion of Greece, by Datis and Artaphernes. Battle of Marathon gained by Miltiades over the Persians.
- 486 Revolts in Egypt, against Persia, begin.
- 480 Xerxes, king of Persia, invades Greece. Battles of Thermopylae, Artemisium, and Salamis.
- 479 Battles of Plataea and Mycale.
- 477 Athens begins to acquire the ascendancy amongst the states of Greece.
- 475 Hiero I., tyrant of Syracuse. Pindar, Æschylus, Simonides, and other Greek poets, flourish under his patronage.
- 471 Themistocles banished.
- 470 Cimon's twofold victory on the Eurymedon.
- 464 Revolt of the Helots of Sparta. The third Messenian war begins.
- 458 Ezra, sent from Babylon to Jerusalem; restores the national institutions.
- 452 Decemvirs created at Rome. The laws of the Twelve Tables compiled, and established.
- 447 Battle of Coronea.
- 444 First military tribunes appointed at Rome.
- 443 Censors first appointed at Rome.
- 440 Pericles gives his name to the age, by his splendid administration of Athenian affairs. Herodotus, Æschylus, Sophocles, Anaxagoras, Aspasia, Pheidias, &c. &c. flourished.
- 431 The Boeotians attempt to surprise Plataea;—the commencement of the Peloponnesian war.
- 430 The plague at Athens, which lasted for five years, begins. The Spartan ambassadors to the king of Persia are betrayed by Sitalces, king of Thrace, to the Athenians,

B. C.

- who put them to death. About this time Malachi prophesies, and the latest books of the Old Testament are written.
- 425 Aristophanes, the comic dramatist of Athens, flourishes.
- 415 Expedition of Alcibiades and Nicias to Sicily.
- 414 Amynteus frees Egypt from the Persian yoke.
- 413 Nicias totally defeated in Sicily on August 27, when an eclipse of the moon happened.
- 411 Athens becomes an oligarchy.
- 406 Dionysius I., tyrant of Syracuse.
- 405 The battle of Ægospotamos, in which Lysander totally defeats the Athenian fleet.
- 404 Athens taken by Lysander. The government of the Thirty Tyrants established. Sparta becomes the ruling state in Greece.
- 403 Thrasybulus recovers Athens, and restores the ancient constitution.
- 401 The retreat of the 10,000 Greeks under Xenophon;—Cyrus, who had revolted from his brother, having been slain at Cunaxa.
- 400 War between Sparta and Persia.
- 399 Socrates put to death at Athens. Euripides and Plato flourish.
- 395 Athens and Thebes join Corinth against Sparta.
- 394 Battle of Coronea, in which Agesiades defeats the allies. Sea-fight at Cnidus, in which Conon defeats the Spartans.
- 390 The long walls of Athens rebuilt. Rome taken and burnt by the Gauls. Camillus defeats the Gauls, and saves Rome.
- 387 Peace of Antalcidas. Persia obtains the sovereignty of the Asiatic Greeks.
- 384 Manlius thrown from the Capitol at Rome.
- 382 Thebes seized by Sparta.
- 379 The Lacedæmonians expelled from the Cadmeia, or citadel, of Thebes.
- 378 The Licinian laws passed at Rome.
- 376 Battle of Naxos; the ascendancy of Sparta terminated.
- 374 Persia vainly attempts to recover Egypt.
- 371 Battle of Leuctra gained by Epaminondas of Thebes, over the Lacedæmonians.
- 369 Messene restored to freedom by the Theban invasion of Peloponnesus.
- 367 Epaminondas delivers Pelopidas, who was a prisoner to Alexander of Thebes.
- 366 Plebeian consuls at Rome.
- 365 Alliance of Thebes with Persia. Pretors instituted at Rome.
- 362 Battle of Mantinea; Spartans defeated, but Epaminondas slain. Theban supremacy in Greece ends.
- 359 Philip, son of Amyntas, becomes king of Macedonia.
- 357 Social war in Greece begins.
- 356 Phocian sacred war, which lasted ten years, begins. Dion expels Dionysius II. from Syracuse. Temple of Diana at Ephesus, burnt.
- 351 Sidon destroyed by the Persians.
- 350 Egypt reconquered by Persia.
- 349 Dionysius reinstated at Syracuse.
- 348 Treaty of commerce between Rome and Carthage.
- 347 Olynthus taken by Philip of Macedon.
- 343 War of the Romans against the Samnites begins. Timoleon expels Dionysius again from Syracuse.
- 339 Amphissian sacred war. Carthaginians defeated by Timoleon.
- 338 The battle of Cheronea, August 2, in which the Athenians and Thebans were defeated by Philip. Macedonian ascendancy in Greece. Latins and Campanians subdued by Rome.
- 336 Philip assassinated. Aristotle, Demosthenes, and Æschines flourish.
- 335 Alexander the Great enters Greece to suppress an insurrection, obliges the Athenians to submit, and destroys the city of Thebes. He is appointed generalissimo of the Greeks against the Persians.
- 334 Battle of the Granicus, in Phrygia, gained by Alexander over Darius, May 22. Apelles of Cos, the painter.
- 333 Battle of Issus, gained by Alexander, in October. Calisthenes, the philosopher.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

- B. C.
- 332 Tyre taken by Alexander, August 20, after a siege of seven months. He shows favour to the Jews. Alexandria, in Egypt, founded.
  - 331 Decisive battle of Arbela, or Gangamela, by which the Persian monarchy is overthrown. Sparta revolts, unsuccessfully.
  - 330 Samaritan temple, on Mount Gerizim, built about this time.
  - 327 Alexander's expedition into India against Porus.
  - 326 Voyage of Nearchus from the Indus to the Euphrates, with Alexander's fleet. New war between the Romans and Samnites.
  - 323 Alexander dies, April 21. The Lamian war between the Athenians and Antipater.
  - 322 A Macedonian force puts down the democracy at Athens.
  - 321 The Roman army passes under the yoke, at the Caudine forks.
  - 320 Perdices dies. Judea conquered by Ptolemy son of Lagus.
  - 317 Agathocles, tyrant of Syracuse. Phocion dies.
  - 316 Eumenes dies.
  - 315 Thebes restored.
  - 312 The Romans begin the Etruscan war. Seleucus Nicator takes Babylon, from which begins the era of the Seleucide.
  - 311 Peace concluded between Antigonus and all his enemies except Seleucus.
  - 307 Demetrius Poliorcetes restores the Athenian constitution.
  - 306 The title of king first assumed by the successors of Alexander.
  - 301 Antigonus defeated and slain at the battle of Ipsus.
  - 295 Athens taken by Demetrius Poliorcetes, after a year's siege.
  - 284 The Septuagint translation of the Old Testament is thought to have been made about this time. The Pharos of Alexandria built.
  - 280 Rise of the Achaean League.
  - 278 The Gauls who had invaded Greece are driven out, and pass into Asia. Epicurus flourishes.
  - 275 Alexandria the seat of learning and trade. Pyrrhus defeated in Italy by Curius Dentatus.
  - 272 The Samnites and Tarentines defeated by the Romans.
  - 269 The first coining of silver at Rome, under the consulship of Fabius Pictor and Gulo.
  - 266 Athens under the power of Macedonia. Sparta free. All Lower Italy subdued by the Romans.
  - 264 The first Punic war begins, which continued 23 years.
  - 261 The Romans first concerned themselves in naval affairs.
  - 260 The Carthaginians defeated at sea by Duilius, who had the first naval triumph in November.
  - 256 Regulus, the Roman general, is defeated and taken prisoner by the Carthaginians under Xanthippus. Arsaces, governor of Parthia, makes it independent of Syria.
  - 249 The Romans, under Claudius Pulcher, are totally defeated by the Carthaginians under Adherbal, off Drepanum, Sicily.
  - 245 Aratus, general of the Achaean League.
  - 242 The Carthaginians defeated by Lutatius, the Roman general, at the Isles of Ægates, which finishes the first Punic war.
  - 235 The temple of Janus shut for the first time since Numa.
  - 232 Athens, freed from its Macedonian garrison, enters the League.
  - 231 Sardinia and Corsica subdued by the Romans.
  - 226 Cleomenes reforms Sparta.
  - 225 The Gauls enter Italy, but are defeated in Etruria, by L. Æmilius, the Roman consul.
  - 224 The Colossus of Rhodes thrown down by an earthquake.
  - 223 Antiochus the Great, king of Syria.
  - 222 Upper Italy a Roman province. Battle of Sellasia: Sparta taken by Antigonus.
  - 220 The social war in Greece between the Ætolians and the Achæans begins, and continues 3 years.
  - 219 Saguntum taken and destroyed by Hannibal.
  - 218 The second Punic war begins with Hannibal's passing the Alps, and continues 17 years. The Romans defeated at Ticinum and Trebia.

- B. C.
- 217 The Romans defeated by Hannibal at the lake of Trasymene.
  - 216 The Romans, under Fabius Cunctator, totally defeated in the battle of Cannæ, in Apulia, by Hannibal.
  - 215 Alliance between Hannibal and Philip, king of Macedonia. Hannibal suffers reverses in Italy.
  - 212 Syracuse taken by Marcellus, after a siege of two years; Archimedes slain.
  - 210 Sicily conquered by the Romans, and made a province.
  - 207 Asdrubal, having entered Italy with a large army to reinforce Hannibal, is defeated and killed by Claudius Nero, at the Metaurus.
  - 206 Peace of Philopemen.
  - 202 The battle of Zama, in Africa, where Hannibal is totally defeated by Scipio. Judea submits to Antiochus the Great.
  - 201 The Carthaginians have a peace granted them on very ignominious terms, which finishes the second Punic war.
  - 200 Athens implores the aid of Rome, against Macedonia.
  - 197 Battle of Cynoscephalæ, in which Philip of Macedonia is defeated by the Romans under Flaminius.
  - 192 The war of Antiochus the Great with the Romans begins.
  - 190 The first Roman army enters Asia under L. C. Scipio.
  - 189 Antiochus the Great defeated by the Romans, at Magnesia.
  - 187 Antiochus the Great is defeated and killed in Media, after plundering the temple of Jupiter Belus in Elymais.
  - 183 Philopemen put to death. Hannibal dies, at the court of Prusias of Bithynia. Scipio Africanus dies.
  - 172 Terence flourishes.
  - 171 Ptolemy's generals defeated by Antiochus in a battle between Pelusium and Mount Casias. The second Macedonian war begins.
  - 170 Antiochus Epiphanes takes Jerusalem, and two years after robs and pollutes the temple.
  - 168 The battle of Pydna, June 22, in which Perseus, king of Macedon, is totally defeated by P. Æmilius, the Roman general. The Jews free themselves from the Syrian yoke.
  - 163 The government of Judea by the Asmonean family, or Maccabees, begins, and continues 126 years.
  - 162 Hipparchus begins his astronomical observations at Rhodes, which he continues for 34 years.
  - 150 The clepsydra invented by Scipio Nasica, 134 years after the introduction of sun-dials.
  - 149 The third Punic war begins, and continues 3 years. Prusias, king of Bithynia, is put to death by his son Nicomedes, surnamed Philopater.
  - 147 The Romans make war against the Achæans, which is finished by Mummius the following year.
  - 146 Carthage destroyed by P. Scipio, and Corinth by L. Mummius, who brought from thence the first fine paintings to Rome.
  - 142 Macedonia becomes a Roman province.
  - 141 The war of Numantia begins, and continues 8 years.
  - 140 Death of Viriathus, the Lusitanian chief.
  - 138 The Roman army, under Mancinus, ignominiously defeated by the Numantines.
  - 136 Scipio Africanus, with Sp. Mummius and Metellus, made the famous embassy into Egypt, Syria, and Greece.
  - 135 The history of the Apocrypha ends. The servile war begins in Sicily, and continues 3 years.
  - 133 Numantia taken and destroyed by Scipio. The kingdom of Pergamus annexed to the Roman empire, according to the will of Attalus, its last king. Tiberius Gracchus slain in a tumult.
  - 128 John Hyrcanus declares himself independent of Syria.
  - 123 Carthage rebuilt by order of the Roman senate.
  - 121 The province in S. Gaul acquired. Caius Gracchus proscribed and slain.
  - 116 Cleopatra assumes the government of Egypt.
  - 111 The Jugurthine war begins, and continues 5 years.
  - 109 The Teutones and Cimbri begin their attack on the Roman empire, which continues 8 years. Jugurtha, the king of Numidia, defeated in two battles by Metellus. Ptolemy Lathyrus is defeated, and Samaria taken by John Hyrcanus.
  - 106 Jugurthine war concluded by Marius and Sylla.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

B. C.

- 105 Cæpio and Manilius ignominiously defeated by the Teutones, &c. on the banks of the Rhone.
- 102 The Teutones defeated by Marius in two great battles at Aquæ Sextie, now Aix in Provence.
- 101 Marius and Catullus defeat the Cimbri as they were endeavouring to enter Italy through Noricum, now the Tyrol.
- 99 Lusitania conquered by the Romans, under Dolabella.
- 91 The Social or Marsic war begins, which continues 3 years.
- 89 The Mithridatic war begins, and continues 26 years.
- 88 The civil war between Marius and Sylla begins, and continues 6 years.
- 87 Marius takes Rome. Sylla takes Athens.
- 86 Marius dies.
- 82 Sylla takes Rome, and is made dictator.
- 80 War with Sertorius in Spain, begins.
- 79 Sylla resigns the dictatorship, and dies the year after.
- 73 The Servile war begins under Spartacus. Sertorius murdered.
- 71 Spartacus defeated and killed by Crassus and Pompey, which finishes the Servile war. Spain completely recovered.
- 69 Lucullus defeats the two kings Mithridates and Tigranes, in a great battle in Armenia, the day before the nones of December; and takes Tigranocerta, with all the royal treasures.
- 67 Pompey conquers the pirates of the Mediterranean.
- 66 Mithridates defeated by Pompey in a night-battle in the Upper Armenia. Crete conquered by Metellus, after a war of two years, and reduced to a Roman province.
- 65 The reign of the Seleucidæ ends in Syria, which is reduced by Pompey to a Roman province.
- 63 The conspiracy of Catiline detected by Cicero, in October, and defeated by Antony, about the middle of December. Jerusalem taken by Pompey, who restores Hyrcanus. Mithridates kills himself.
- 60 The first triumvirate, of Pompey, Cæsar, and Crassus.
- 55 Cæsar conquers the Germans, and invades Britain.
- 54 Crassus plunders the Temple at Jerusalem.
- 53 Crassus killed, and his army cut to pieces by the Parthians, under Surenas, at Sinnace in Mesopotamia, June 9.
- 50 The civil war begins on the 22nd of October, when the senate ordered Cæsar to disband his army. Cæsar besieges Pompey in Brundisium, Dec. 26. Cicero, Lucretius, Sallust, and other distinguished Roman writers and poets flourish.
- 49 Pompey sails from Brundisium, Jan. 3; Cæsar enters it on the 4th, and comes to Rome about the 19th. He besieges Marseilles in the spring, defeats Pompey's lieutenants in Spain in the summer, returns to Rome in September, and passes into Epirus, Oct. 15.
- 48 The battle of Pharsalia, May 12. Pompey murdered. Antipater made governor of Judea, and Cleopatra, queen of Egypt, by Cæsar.
- 47 The war of Alexandria; that city taken by Julius Cæsar. He conquers Pharnaces, king of Bosphorus.
- 46 The war in Africa; Cato kills himself at Utica, Feb. 5. Battle of Munda, in Spain.
- 44 Cæsar killed in the senate-house, by Brutus, Cassius, and the other conspirators.
- 43 The second triumvirate, of Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus, began Nov. 27. Cicero put to death, Dec. 7. Battle of Mutina.
- 42 Cassius and Brutus defeated at Philippi in two battles, having an interval, in October. They kill themselves.
- 41 The short Persian war, in which Antony's brother Lucius is overpowered by Octavius.
- 40 Jerusalem occupied by Antigonus, assisted by the Parthians. Herod made king of Judea at Rome.
- 39 Lepidus expelled from the triumvirate.
- 37 Jerusalem taken by Socius and Herod, Jan. 1; and Antigonus soon after put to death, which terminates the government of the Maccabees.
- 36 Sextus Pompeius conquered in Sicily.
- 32 War between Octavius and Antony begins.
- 31 The battle of Actium, Sept. 2; in which Antony and Cleopatra are totally defeated; which made Octavius emperor.

B. C.

- 30 Egypt reduced to a Roman province. Deaths of Antony and Cleopatra.
- 27 Octavius, by a decree of the senate, Jan. 13, obtains the title of Augustus Cæsar, and the absolute power of the state.
- 25 Coin first used in Britain. Virgil, Horace, Ovid, Tibullus, and other eminent poets and writers flourish at Rome.
- 12 Pannonians subdued. Victories of Drusus in Gaul.
- 8 The temple of Janus shut by Augustus.
- 4 JESUS CHRIST born, about the close of the 4000th year of the world, and 4 years before the vulgar Christian æra.
- AFTER CHRIST.
- 9 Arminius, or Hermann, recovers the territory in Germany conquered by Drusus.
- 14 Augustus dies; Tiberius becomes emperor.
- 19 Germanicus poisoned.
- 21 Arminius killed.
- 26 Jesus baptized in the wilderness by John the Baptist.
- 31 Sejanus, the chief minister of the state, put to death.
- 33 Crucifixion of our Saviour; placed by some in 29, and by others in 31.
- 36 Saul of Tarsus converted, and afterwards called Paul.
- 37 Tiberius dies; Caligula becomes emperor.
- 39 Matthew writes his Gospel. Pontius Pilate kills himself. Herod Antipas banished.
- 40 The name of Christians first given at Antioch to the followers of Christ. Philo the Jew flourishes at Alexandria.
- 41 Claudius made emperor.
- 43 Claudius Cæsar's expedition into Britain.
- 44 Mark writes his Gospel.
- 49 London founded by the Romans.
- 51 Caractacus, the British king, sent in chains to Rome, by Ostorius Scapula.
- 52 The conference of the apostles at Jerusalem, improperly called the First Council.
- 55 Luke writes his Gospel. Seneca, Petronius, and Flavius Josephus flourish.
- 58 Mona (Anglesey) conquered by Paulinus; the Druids massacred.
- 60 Christianity said to have been preached in Great Britain.
- 61 Boadicea, the British queen, defeats the Romans; but is conquered soon after by Suetonius, governor of Britain.
- 62 Paul's first imprisonment at Rome.
- 63 The Acts of the Apostles written.
- 64 Great fire at Rome, upon which the first persecution against the Christians commenced.
- 65 Paul's second imprisonment at Rome.
- 66 The first Jewish war begins, in May.
- 67 Peter and Paul put to death at Rome.
- 68 Vespasian conquers Judea.
- 70 Titus, the Roman general, takes Jerusalem, Sept. 8, which is razed to the ground.
- 73 The philosophers expelled Rome.
- 79 Herclaneum, Pompeii, and Stabia overwhelmed by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius, and Pliny the naturalist loses his life. Quintilian flourishes.
- 85 Julius Agricola builds a line of forts between the rivers Forth and Clyde; defeats the Caledonians, under Galgacus, on the Grampian hills; first sails round the island. Britain considerably advanced in Roman civilization.
- 90 Juvenal and Epictetus flourish about this time.
- 95 The second persecution against the Christians begins about November, and continues till the death of Domitian, in the next year.
- 96 Tacitus, Pliny the Younger, Suetonius, Plutarch, and other writers flourish about this time.
- 97 John the evangelist wrote his Gospel.
- 98 Trajan emperor of Rome.
- 103 Dacia reduced by Trajan to a Roman province.
- 107 The third persecution against the Christians.
- 117 The Euphrates the eastern boundary of the empire.
- 118 The fourth persecution against the Christians. Alia Capitolina built on the site of Jerusalem.
- 121 The Caledonians reconquer from the Romans all the southern part of Scotland; upon which the emperor Adrian builds a wall between Newcastle and Carlisle.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

A. D.

- 131 The Jews rebel, and begin a second war.
- 135 The second Jewish war ends, when they were all banished Judea.
- 138 Claudian, Ptolemy, and Arrian flourish.
- 139 Justin writes his first Apology for the Christians.
- 140 Lollius Urbicus builds the wall along the line of Agricola's forts, called Antoninus's wall.
- 145 Antoninus Pius defeats the Moors, and afterwards the Germans and Dacians.
- 161 Galen, A. Gellius, Apuleius, and others flourish.
- 174 The miracle of "the Thundering Legion."
- 180 The Goths on the coast of the Black Sea.
- 183 A violent war in Britain, ended by Marcellus, the British governor.
- 192 The Saracens first appear in history, in a victory over the Romans in Arabia.
- 193 The empire sold by auction to Didius Julianus.
- 202 The fifth persecution against the Christians begins about April, and continues two years.
- 209 Severus builds his wall across Britain from the Frith of Forth, and dies at York two years afterwards.
- 222 Origen flourishes. Dion Cassius and Herodian eminent.
- 225 The Franks and Germans begin to threaten the empire on the Rhine.
- 226 The empire of the Parthians subverted by Ardshir, or Artaxerxes, the founder of the dynasty of the Sassanides. War against Rome.
- 235 The sixth persecution against the Christians.
- 248 The existence of Rome for a millennium celebrated.
- 250 The barbarians begin their irruptions into the Roman empire. The seventh persecution against the Christians.
- 254 The Goths paid an annual tribute not to molest the empire.
- 257 The eighth persecution against the Christians.
- 260 Valerianus, the Roman emperor, taken prisoner by Sapor, king of Persia, and flayed alive. The Germans advance to Ravenna.
- 264 Odenatus conquers Persia.
- 272 The ninth persecution against the Christians.
- 273 Palmyra conquered; Zenobia taken prisoner.
- 274 Silk first brought from India. Dacia given up to the Goths.
- 286 The Roman empire attacked by northern nations, and several provinces usurped by tyrants.
- 303 The tenth persecution begins at Nicomedia, Feb. 23.
- 306 Constantine the Great begins his reign, July 25: there were six emperors at this time.
- 308 Cardinals first appointed.
- 311 Constantine embraces Christianity. Lactantius flourishes.
- 313 The tenth persecution ends by an imperial edict.
- 325 The first general council at Nice; began June 19, and ended August 25.
- 328 Constantine removes the seat of empire from Rome to Byzantium, thereafter called Constantinople.
- 350 The Franks in Gaul. The contest along the whole European and Asiatic borders of the empire continues.
- 361 The Goths divide into the Ostrogoths and Visigoths, or Eastern and Western Goths.
- 363 The emperor Julian, surnamed the Apostate, endeavours in vain to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem.
- 364 The Roman empire divided into the Eastern (Constantinople the capital) and Western (of which Rome continued to be the capital); each being under the government of different emperors.
- 365 The Saxons begin to make descents on the eastern coasts of Britain.
- 373 The Bible translated into the Gothic language.
- 375 The barbarian invasions increase in frequency and force. The great migration of the nomadic nations of Scythia, Sarmatia, &c.
- 376 The Ostrogoths are conquered by the Huns.
- 395 Alaric plunders the Peloponnesus. Augustine, bishop of Hippo, flourishes. Silicho minister to Honorius.
- 400 Bells invented by Paulinus of Campagna.
- 401 Alaric devastates Italy.
- 402 The Roman troops begin to be withdrawn in great numbers from Britain.

A. D.

- 404 The kingdom of Caledonia, or Scotland, revives under Fergus.
- 406 The Vandals, Alans, and Suevi spread into France and Spain, by a concession of Honorius, emperor of the West.
- 409 The Suevi begin their kingdom over a part of Spain; Hermeric their first king.
- 410 Rome taken and plundered by Alaric, king of the Visigoths, August 24.
- 412 The Vandals begin their kingdom in Spain, under Gunderic. Honorius gives up Britain.
- 413 The kingdom of the Burgundians begins in Alsace, under Gundicar.
- 414 The Visigoths begin the kingdom of Toulouse, under Ataulfus.
- 420 The kingdom of the Franks begins upon the Lower Rhine, under Pharamond.
- 426 The Romans withdraw their last troops from Britain.
- 428 Nestorius bishop of Constantinople.
- 438 The Theodosian Code compiled and published.
- 439 Genserich takes Carthage, and begins the kingdom of the Vandals in Africa, Oct. 19.
- 446 The Britons, greatly harassed by the Scots and Picts, vainly implore aid from Rome.
- 447 Attila, "the Scourge of God," with his Huns, ravages the Roman empire.
- 449 Vortigern, king of the Britons, invites the Saxons into Britain, against the Scots and Picts.
- 451 Attila defeated at Chalons sur Marne.
- 452 Venice founded.
- 455 Hengist and Horsa found the kingdom of Kent.
- 468 The Romans expelled from Spain by the Visigoths.
- 474 The Visigoths receive written laws.
- 476 The Western empire is overturned by Odoacer, king of the Heruli.
- 490 Ella founds the kingdom of Sussex.
- 493 The kingdom of Italy passes from the Heruli to the Ostrogoths by the taking of Ravenna by Theodoric the Great, Feb. 27, after a siege of near 3 years. Silkworms introduced into Europe.
- 496 Clovis, king of France, baptized, and Christianity began in that kingdom.
- 507 Clovis conquers the Visigoths, and firmly establishes the kingdom of the Franks: the country being afterwards called France.
- 508 Prince Arthur begins his reign over the Britons.
- 511 Frankish kingdom divided into Austrasia and Neustria.
- 515 Benedictine rule established.
- 516 The use of the Christian æra introduced by Dionysius the monk.
- 519 Cerdic founds the kingdom of Wessex.
- 527 Essex founded about this time.
- 530 Pandects of Justinian established.
- 533 Belisarius begins his successful campaigns in defence of the empire.
- 547 Kingdoms N. of the Humber established by the Angles.
- 557 A terrible plague all over Europe, Asia, and Africa, which continues near 50 years.
- 558 Chlotaire sole monarch of France.
- 568 The kingdom of the Lombards begins under Alboin.
- 569 Exarchs are sent to Ravenna, by the Eastern emperors, against the Lombards. The Roman pontiff acquires the supreme power in the city.
- 575 East Anglia founded by Uffa.
- 580 Latin ceased to be spoken about this time in Italy.
- 583 The Suevi in Spain conquered by the Visigoths, which finishes that kingdom.
- 586 Mercia founded by the Angles.
- 596 Augustin, the monk, sent into England with 40 monks, by Pope Gregory I.
- 600 Laws of Ethelbert, king of Kent.
- 606 Boniface III. styled oecumenical bishop by Phocas.
- 609 Mohammed begins to preach Islamism.
- 622 The Hegira, or flight of Mohammed from Mecca, on July 12; from which the Mussulmans compute their time.
- 628 "The Invention of the Cross" by Helena.
- 629 Mecca taken.
- 632 Mohammed dies.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

- A. D.
637 Jerusalem taken by the Saracens, or followers of Mohammed.
638 The Saracens conquer Syria. The power of the mayors of the palace in France begins, through the incompetence of the kings.
640 Alexandria in Egypt taken by the caliph Omar.
651 The Saracens conquer Persia.
653 Rhodes taken by the Saracens.
660 Organs introduced into churches.
663 Constans II. plunders Rome.
664 Glass brought into England by Benalt a monk.
669 The Saracens make an attack upon Sicily.
673 Constantinople ineffectually besieged by the Saracens for 7 years, Callinicus having invented the Greek fire.
685 The Britons, after a struggle of near 150 years, are totally defeated by the Saxons, and driven into Wales and Cornwall.
688 Ina, king of Wessex, publishes his laws about this time.
696 Anastaso, the first doge of Venice.
698 The Saracens take Carthage.
700 Christianity introduced into Croatia.
714 The Saracens conquer Spain, after a war of 3 years.
717 Constantinople ineffectually besieged a second time by the Saracens.
720 The controversy about images begins, and causes many insurrections in the Eastern empire.
727 Ina, king of Wessex, begins the tax of Peter-pence for the support of a college at Rome.
732 The Saracens defeated by Charles Martel, between Tours and Poitiers, in October.
736 Leo Isauricus, the Eastern emperor, destroys all the images in his dominions, and persecutes the monks.
746 A dreadful pestilence over Europe and Asia for 3 years.
748 The computation of years from the birth of Christ began to be used in history.
749 The dynasty of the Abbasides obtains the caliphate.
752 The exarchs of Ravenna conquered by the Lombards, after having continued 183 years. Pepin king of France.
755 Commencement of the pope's temporal dominion.
756 The Saracens in Spain, revolting from the house of Abbas, found the Omniade kingdom of Cordova.
758 Oud, king of Mercia, begins to reign.
762 The golden period of the Saracenic empire. Bagdad built. Abbaside caliphs promote learning.
768 Charlemagne king of the Franks.
774 Pavia taken by Charlemagne, which finishes the kingdom of the Lombards, after it had lasted 206 years.
780 Haroun-Al-Raschid caliph at Bagdad.
787 First descent of the Danes upon the English coast.
800 Charlemagne king of the Franks, crowned as emperor at Rome. Leo III. holds the pontificate as a vassal of Charlemagne. Rise of the scholastic philosophy.
822 Constantinople, a third time, ineffectually besieged by the Saracens.
823 The Saracens of Spain take possession of Crete, and call it Candia.
826 Harold, king of Deumark, dethroned by his subjects for being a Christian.
828 Egbert, king of Wessex, the tenth Bretwalda, or supreme king of England.
838 The Scots and Picts united under Kenneth, with which begins the second period of the Scottish history.
842 Theodora restores the worship of images.
850 Cyrillus, the apostle of the Bohemians and Moravians.
861 Schism between the Roman and Greek Churches.
863 Ragnar Lodbrok put to death in Northumbria.
867 The Danes extend their ravages in England.
868 Egypt becomes independent of the caliphs of Bagdad, under Ahmed, the Saracen governor.
870 Malta conquered by the Saracens.
871 Battle of Otranto, the Saracens are defeated.
872 Clucks first brought to Europe from the East.
877 The hereditary feudal system introduced into France.
878 Alfred the Great, after many unsuccessful engagements with the Danes, gains a victory at Ethandune, and establishes Guthrum in E. Anglia.
881 Revival of the Gothic power in Spain.

- A. D.
885 Paris besieged by the Danes or Northmen.
886 The University of Oxford founded by Alfred.
904 Russians before Constantinople.
912 Rollo, or Robert, first duke of Normandy. The patronage of the papal chair in the hands of harlots.
915 The University of Cambridge founded.
924 Athelstan first sole monarch of England.
934 Influence of the Turks in the Saracenic empire begins to be paramount.
936 The Saracen empire is divided, by usurpation, into seven kingdoms.
942 The Eastern emperors take possession of Naples.
955 Dunstan, at the head of the clergy, acquires great influence in England. Hungarians finally driven out of Germany.
961 Nicephorus Phocas, afterwards emperor of the East, recovers Candia from the Saracens.
962 Cities of imperial Italy begin to acquire independence.
964 Otho I. crowned emperor of Germany.
969 The Abbasides lose Egypt, which is seized by the Fatimides, who build Grand Cairo.
987 Dynasty of Capet ascends the French throne.
991 The Arabic numerals introduced into Europe.
996 Otho III. makes the empire of Germany elective.
999 Boleslaus first king of Poland.
1000 Paper made of cotton rags in use. Vladimir the Great of Russia baptized. Christianity in Sweden.
1002 Massacre of all the Danes in England, on St. Brice's day.
1009 A civil war among the Saracens of Spain, which continues till 1091, when they become tributary to the Saracens of Africa.
1014 Canute the Great, king of Denmark, ascends the throne of England.
1015 Children forbidden by law to be sold by their parents in England.
1030 Dismemberment and downfall of the caliphate of Cordova.
1031 Romanus II., emperor of the East, drives the Saracens out of Syria.
1032 The kingdom of Arles, or Burgundy, bequeathed to Conrad II., emperor of Germany, by Rodolph.
1035 The kingdoms of Castile and Arragon begin under Ferdinand the Great and Ramirez.
1040 The Danes, after several engagements with various success, are finally driven out of Scotland about this time.
1041 The Saxon line restored under Edward the Confessor.
1042 The Turks take possession of Persia. The Danes expelled from England.
1050 The Cid, Ruy Diaz del Visar, in the height of his fame in Spain.
1054 Leo IX. the first pope that kept up an army.
1056 Milan a republic. Other cities followed its example.
1057 Malcolm III., king of Scotland, kills the tyrant Macbeth at Dunsinane, and marries the Princess Margaret, sister to Edgar Atheling.
1058 Robert Guiscard, the Norman, drives the Saracens out of Sicily.
1065 The Turks take Jerusalem from the Saracens.
1066 The conquest of England by William, duke of Normandy. Battle of Hastings, October 14, where Harold is slain.
1070 William introduces the feudal law. Musical notes invented.
1073 Hildebrand becomes pope, under the title of Gregory VII.
1075 Henry IV., emperor of Germany, deposed by the pope, restored, after penance, towards the end of January, 1077. Justices of the peace first appointed in England. Penance granted to the pope by William the Conqueror.
1080 Domesday Book began to be compiled by order of William I. from a survey of all the estates in England, and finished in 1086. The Tower of London built.
1085 Toledo and Madrid taken from the Saracens by Alphonso VI., king of Castile.
1086 Order of Carthusians began.
1087 William the Conqueror invades France.
1091 The Saracens in Spain call in Joseph, king of Morocco, who thus gets possession of all their dominions in Spain.
1095 Council of Clermont.
1096 The first Crusade.
1099 Jerusalem taken on July 15. Godfrey of Boulogne made king. Knights of St. John.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

- A. D.
- 1106 Henry I. of England joins Normandy to his kingdom.
- 1108 Louis VI. of France encourages corporations, as a counterpoise to the effects of the feudal system.
- 1110 Edgar Atheling, the last of the Saxon princes, dies in England, where he had been permitted to reside as a subject. Venice acquires great wealth by the commerce opened by the Crusades.
- 1118 The order of Knights Templars instituted. John Comnenus regains Armenia from the Turks.
- 1135 Alphonso III. master of Spain.
- 1138 David I. of Scotland defeated in the "Battle of the Standard."
- 1139 Alphonso, defeats five Saracen kings at Ouriques, takes Lisbon, and is proclaimed king of Portugal.
- 1144 Rebellion of Arnold da Brescia, at Rome.
- 1147 The second Crusade. Moscow founded.
- 1150 Abelard flourishes. Philosophy of Aristotle in greatest favour.
- 1154 The house of Plantagenet obtains the English throne.
- 1163 London bridge, consisting of 19 small arches, first built of stone.
- 1172 Henry II., king of England, takes possession of Ireland; which, from that period, is governed by an English viceroy, or lord-lieutenant.
- 1176 England divided by Henry into six circuits for the administration of justice. Frederick Barbarossa defeated at Como.
- 1180 Glass windows begin to be used in private houses in England. Bills of Exchange used in commerce.
- 1181 The digest of the laws of England made, about this time, by Glanville.
- 1186 Sept. 16. A conjunction of all the planets known, at sunrise.
- 1187 Saladin destroys the Christian kingdom of Jerusalem.
- 1189 The third Crusade begun.
- 1190 Knights of the Teutonic order instituted.
- 1191 Ptolemais taken by the Crusaders.
- 1192 The battle of Ascalon, in Judea, in which Richard, king of England, defeats Saladin's army.
- 1194 Dieu et mon Droit first used as a motto by King Richard on a victory over the French.
- 1196 Henry VI., emperor of Germany, takes full possession of Naples and Sicily.
- 1200 First mention of the mariner's compass. Universities begin to be generally established. Surnames occasionally used.
- 1202 The fourth Crusade.
- 1204 Constantinople taken by the French and Venetians, July 20. Normandy conquered and reunited to France. Dominicans and Franciscans. The Inquisition established.
- 1205 The state of Venice possesses the Morea, Candia, and other islands.
- 1206 Gengis Khan founds the Mogul, or Tatar, empire. Paris University established.
- 1208 London incorporated, and obtained its first charter from King John. Crusade against the Albigenses.
- 1212 The Saracens vanquished at Tolosa.
- 1214 Roger Bacon flourishes.
- 1215 Magna Charta signed by King John and the barons of England. Court of Common Pleas established.
- 1217 The fifth Crusade.
- 1218 Switzerland united to the German empire.
- 1220 Astronomy and geography revived in Europe, by the Moors of Spain.
- 1222 The assemblage of states in France called a Parlement. Salamanca University founded.
- 1224 Thomas Aquinas flourishes.
- 1228 The sixth Crusade.
- 1233 The Inquisition in the hands of the Dominicans. The houses of London and other cities in England, France, and Germany still thatched with straw.
- 1236 The Tatars take Moscow.
- 1241 The Hanseatic league begins.
- 1248 The seventh Crusade. St. Louis of France.
- 1250 Malek al Salek, sultan of Egypt, dethroned and slain by the Mamelukes. The Guelph and Ghibeline contests in Italy. Genoa at the height of prosperity.
- A. D.
- 1253 The famous astronomical tables composed by Alphonso XI., king of Castile.
- 1258 The Tatars take Bagdad, which finishes the empire of the Saracens.
- 1261 The Greek emperors recover Constantinople from the French in July.
- 1264 The Commons of England first summoned to parliament about this time.
- 1273 The house of Hapsburg obtains the imperial crown.
- 1279 The Tatars subdue China.
- 1282 Llewellyn, prince of Wales, defeated and killed by Edward I., who unites that principality to England. "The Sicilian Vespers."
- 1284 Edward II., born at Caernarvon, is the first prince of Wales.
- 1285 Alexander III., king of Scotland, dies, and that kingdom is disputed by 2 candidates, who submit their claims to the arbitration of Edward, king of England.
- 1291 End of the Crusades.
- 1293 The regular series of English parliaments begins.
- 1296 Edward I. of England subdues Scotland.
- 1297 Sir William Wallace attempts to deliver Scotland.
- 1298 The present Turkish empire begins in Bithynia, under Ottoman. Silver-hafted knives, spoons, and cups, a great luxury.
- 1299 Spectacles invented.
- 1300 Dante flourishes. Albuffa flourishes.
- 1302 The mariner's compass invented, or improved, by Flavio. Cambridge University re-established.
- 1307 The Helvetic Confederation. William Tell.
- 1308 The popes remove to Avignon, where they continue for 70 years.
- 1310 The knights of St. John take Rhodes, and settle there. Lincoln's Inn Society established. Chimneys used in domestic architecture. The Visconti lords of Milan.
- 1312 Knights Templars wholly suppressed by the pope and the king of France.
- 1314 The battle of Bannockburn between Edward II. and Robert Bruce, which establishes the latter on the throne of Scotland, July 25.
- 1315 The battle of Morgarten.
- 1319 Dublin University established.
- 1320 Gold first coined in Christendom.
- 1328 House of Valois ascend the throne of France.
- 1336 Flemings introduce textile manufactures to England.
- 1340 Gunpowder invented by Swartz, a monk of Cologne.
- 1341 Petrarch crowned at Rome.
- 1344 The first creation to titles by patents used by Edward III.
- 1345 Fire-arms used in battle. The Genoese discover the Canary Islands.
- 1346 The battle of Crecy, August 26. Oil painting first made use of by John Vanek. Herald's college instituted in England.
- 1347 Rienzi the last of the Roman tribunes. University of Prague. David of Scotland taken prisoner by Queen Philippa.
- 1349 The order of the Garter instituted in England by Edward III. Persecution of the Jews.
- 1352 The Turks first enter Europe.
- 1353 The Swiss republic established.
- 1354 The coronation of Iue de Castro.
- 1356 The battle of Poitiers, September 19. The Golden Bull, defining the rights of the electors of Germany.
- 1357 Coals first brought to London.
- 1358 Arms of England and France first quartered by Edward III.
- 1361 The Turks take Adrianople, and establish their footing in Eastern Europe.
- 1362 The law pleadings in England changed from French to English. The military order of the Janizaries established among the Turks.
- 1364 Philip the Bold made Duke of Burgundy.
- 1369 John Wickliffe, the English reformer, begins to be publicly known by his disputes with the friars.
- 1371 The Stuart family possess the throne of Scotland.
- 1377 The popes return from Avignon to Rome, January 17.
- 1378 Two popes claim the tiara at once.
- 1379 The war of the Chiozza, between Venice and Genoa.
- 1381 Wat Tyler's rebellion.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

- A. D.
 1384 The first Navigation Act in England.
 1386 A company of linen weavers from the Netherlands established in London. Windsor Castle built. The battle of Sempach.
 1388 The battle of Otterburn, or Chevy Chase.
 1391 Cards invented in France for the king's amusement.
 1393 Sigismund, king of Hungary, defeated by Bajazet I., king of the Turks, at Nicopolis, September 28.
 1399 Westminster Abbey and Hall rebuilt and enlarged. Order of the Bath instituted at the coronation of Henry IV. The house of Lancaster reforms the English throne.
 1400 John Huss, the Bohemian Reformer, commences his ministry. The Medici supreme in Florence.
 1402 The battle of Angoria, in which Bajazet I., king of the Turks, is taken prisoner by Tamerlane, July 28.
 1409 The council of Pisa appoints a third pope.
 1410 Guildhall, London, built.
 1411 University of St. Andrew founded.
 1414 The council of Constance assembles, and deposes the rival popes.
 1415 John Huss burnt at Constance. Capture of Ceuta. Battle of Agincourt.
 1416 Jerome of Prague burnt at Constance.
 1417 The Hussite wars begin under Ziska. Gypsies first mentioned in European annals.
 1418 Madeira discovered, through the encouragement given to adventure by Henry the Navigator.
 1420 Joan of Arc takes command of the French army, and raises the siege of Orleans.
 1432 The Portuguese discover the Azores.
 1433 Lisbon made the seat of government.
 1435 Naples and Sicily united by Alphonso V.
 1436 John Gutenberg invents the art of printing. End of the Hussite wars. The Hanseatic League declines.
 1442 The beginning of the Negro Slave-trade.
 1444 The battle of Varna gained by the Turks over Ladislaus, king of Hungary, Nov. 10. Cape Verde Islands discovered.
 1446 The sea breaks in at Dort, and drowns 100,000 people, April 17.
 1450 The house of Sforza lords of Milan.
 1453 Constantinople taken by the Turks, May 29, under Mohammed II., their first emperor. This finishes the Roman empire of the East. The English lose all their French dominions except Calais.
 1454 University of Glasgow founded.
 1457 Glass first made in England. The refugee Greeks in Italy begin the restoration of learning there.
 1460 Engraving and etching on copper invented.
 1464 Stages, stage-coaches, and posts used in France.
 1470 The first almanack published.
 1471 Caxton introduces printing into England.
 1477 University of Aberdeen founded.
 1478 Inquisition set up in Spain. Lorenzo the Magnificent (De' Medici) escapes from the attempt of the Pazzi.
 1479 The kingdoms of Castile and Arragon united.
 1481 End of the domination of the Tatars in Russia. The Helvetic confederation extended. Venice makes fresh acquisitions among the Greek islands, and in Italy.
 1485 Richard III., king of England, and last of the Plantagenets, defeated and killed at the battle of Bosworth, August 22, by Henry (Tudor) VII., which puts an end to the civil wars between the houses of York and Lancaster, after a contest of 30 years. Henry establishes fifty yeomen of the guards, the first standing army. Vienna taken by Matthias Corvinus, of Hungary.
 1486 Diaz discovers the Cape of Good Hope.
 1489 Maps and sea-charts first brought to England by Barth. Columbus.
 1491 William Grocyen introduces the study of the Greek language into England.
 1492 The Moors lose Granada, their last possession in Spain. America first discovered by Columbus, a Genoese in the service of Spain. Algebra first known in Europe.
 1493 Alexander VI. divides the newly discovered lands between Spain and Portugal.
 1496 Sebastian Cabot discovers Newfoundland and N. America, for Henry VII. of England.
- A. D.
 1497 The Portuguese first sail to the East Indies by the Cape of Good Hope. South America discovered by Amerigo Vespucci.
 1499 The Moors expelled from Castile. Perkin Warbeck executed.
 1500 Cabral discovers the Brazils. Savonarola and Machiavelli flourish at Florence. The Turks conquer the Morea.
 1505 Shillings first coined in England. Almeida sails to the E. Indies, reduces Ceylon, &c.
 1508 The Spaniards colonize Cuba, Jamaica, and Porto Rico. The League of Cambray.
 1509 Gardening introduced into England from the Netherlands, whence vegetables were before imported.
 1510 Albuquerque's conquests in the E. Indies begin.
 1513 Battle of Flodden Field. The Helvetic confederation includes every canton of Switzerland.
 1515 Battle of Marignano.
 1517 Luther opposes indulgences. Cairo taken from the Mamelukes, and Egypt reduced into a Turkish province, by Selim I.
 1518 Magellan, in the service of Spain, first discovered the straits of that name in S. America. Portuguese trade with China commences.
 1519 Magellan first sails round the world.
 1520 Henry VIII., for his writings against Luther, receives the title of Defender of the Faith from the pope. Luther burns the pope's bull.
 1521 Luther at the diet of Worms. Gustavus Vasa, with his Dalecarlians, begins the liberation of Sweden. The Eastern Archipelago discovered. The conquest of Mexico.
 1522 Rhodes taken from the Turks by the Knights of St. John, Dec. 25. Reformation in Switzerland.
 1524 The Chevalier Bayard killed in battle.
 1525 Prussia made an hereditary dukedom by A. de Brandenburg, grand-master of the Teutonic order. Francis I. taken prisoner at the battle of Pavia.
 1526 The Ottoman Porte subjugates the Danubian principalities.
 1527 Albert Durer dies.
 1528 The conquest of Peru. Andrea Doria makes Genoa independent.
 1529 The name of Protestant given to those who protested against the Church of Rome, at the diet at Spire, in Germany. The Turks before Vienna. The Religious Peace in Switzerland.
 1530 The Confession of Augsburg. Knights of St. John established in Malta.
 1531 Zuinglius, the Swiss Reformer, killed in battle.
 1533 Ariosto dies.
 1534 Henry VIII. makes himself head of the English Church.
 1535 The Anabaptists of Munster.
 1536 Erasmus dies.
 1537 Religious houses dissolved in England.
 1539 The first English edition of the Bible authorized. About this time cannon began to be used in ships. The "Six Bloody Articles" in England.
 1540 Society of the Jesuits established, Sept. 27. Variation of the compass discovered. Reformation at Geneva.
 1543 Silk stockings first worn by the French king. Pins first used in England, before which the ladies used skewers. Copernicus dies.
 1544 Lutheranism in Sweden.
 1545 The general council of Trent begins.
 1546 Luther dies.
 1547 First law in England establishing the interest of money, at 10 per cent. The orange first cultivated in Portugal.
 1549 Lord-lieutenants of counties instituted in England. Telescopes invented.
 1550 Horse-guards instituted in England.
 1552 The treaty of Passau.
 1553 The English go by sea to Archangel.
 1554 Lady Jane Grey beheaded.
 1555 The Russian Company established in England.
 1560 Melancthon dies. The Reformation in Scotland.
 1563 Knives first made in England. The council of Trent concluded.
 1567 Counts Egmont and Horn beheaded.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

- A. D.
1568 The Duke of Alva's "bloody tribunal" at Brussels.
- 1569 Royal Exchange built. Cosmo I. Grand Duke of Tuscany.
- 1571 The island of Cyprus taken by the Turks. The victory over the Turks at Lepanto, Oct. 7.
- 1572 The massacre of the Huguenots at Paris, on St. Bartholomew's day, Aug. 24.
- 1579 The Dutch shake off the Spanish yoke, and the republic of Holland begins, Jan. 22. English East India Company incorporated; Turkey Company incorporated.
- 1580 Sir Francis Drake returns from his voyage round the world, being the first English circumnavigator. Parochial registers first appointed in England. The kingdom of Portugal seized by Philip II. of Spain, Sept. 12.
- 1581 The United Provinces declare themselves independent.
- 1582 Pope Gregory XIII. introduces the New Style in Italy, the 5th of October being counted the 15th.
- 1583 Tobacco first brought from Virginia into England.
- 1587 Mary, queen of Scots, beheaded, Feb. 8, after 18 years' imprisonment.
- 1588 The Spanish Armada destroyed, July 27.
- 1589 Coaches first introduced into England. The Bourbons ascend the throne of France.
- 1590 Band of Pensioners instituted in England.
- 1595 Tasso dies. Dutch factories established in Java.
- 1597 Watches first brought into England from Germany.
- 1598 Henry IV. publishes the Edict of Nantes.
- 1600 The East India Company established.
- 1602 Decimal arithmetic invented at Bruges. Dutch East India Company.
- 1603 The kingdoms of England and Scotland united under James I., son of Mary, queen of Scots.
- 1605 The Gunpowder Plot discovered, Nov. 5.
- 1606 Oaths of allegiance first administered in England.
- 1608 Galileo discovers the satellites of Jupiter.
- 1609 The Moors expelled from Spain. The Bermudas occupied by the English.
- 1610 Henry IV. murdered at Paris, by Ravaillac, a priest. Hudson's Bay discovered.
- 1611 Barons first created in England by James I., May 22. Moscow burnt by the Poles.
- 1614 Sir Hugh Myddleton brings the New River to London. Logarithms invented.
- 1616 Shakspeare dies. Cervantes dies.
- 1618 Beginning of the Thirty Years' War.
- 1619 Harvey discovers the circulation of the blood. Barneveldt beheaded.
- 1620 New England planted by the pilgrim fathers.
- 1624 Massacre at Amboyna.
- 1625 The island of Barbadoes colonized by the English.
- 1626 Lord Bacon dies.
- 1630 Kepler dies. Des Cartes flourishes.
- 1631 The sack of Magdeburgh.
- 1632 Battle of Lutzen; Gustavus Adolphus killed.
- 1634 Death of Wallenstein. Battle of Nördlingen. The Dutch take Curaçoa.
- 1635 French Academy founded. France and Sweden allied against Spain and Austria.
- 1636 John Hampden resists the ship-money tax.
- 1638 The Solemn League and Covenant.
- 1640 The Irish massacre. The independence of Portugal recovered by John, duke of Braganza, Dec. 1. The Long Parliament meets.
- 1642 Charles I. attempts to seize the five members. The great civil war in England begun.
- 1643 Torricelli invents the barometer.
- 1644 Hugo Grotius dies.
- 1645 War between Venice and the Turks in Candia. Battle of Naseby.
- 1647 Insurrection of Masaniello at Naples.
- 1648 Treaty of Westphalia. The Netherlands are acknowledged independent by Spain. The wars of the Fronde.
- 1649 Charles I. beheaded at Whitehall, Jan. 30.
- 1651 The sect of Quakers begins. Navigation Act passed in England. Battle of Worcester, Sept. 3.
- 1653 Cromwell made Lord Protector.
- 1655 The English take Jamaica. Waldenses persecuted by the Piedmontese.

- A. D.
1656 Prussia recognised as independent.
- 1658 Cromwell dies, Sept. 3, and is succeeded in the protectorship by his son Richard. Dunkirk surrendered to England.
- 1659 Peace of the Pyrenees. Richard Cromwell resigns the Protectorship.
- 1660 Charles II. restored, May 29.
- 1662 The Royal Society established at London, July 15, by Charles II. Sale of Dunkirk. Act of Uniformity.
- 1663 Bombay taken by the English.
- 1665 The great plague at London.
- 1666 The great fire of London, begun Sept. 2, and continued 3 days. Tea first used in England.
- 1667 Milton flourishes.
- 1668 Peace of Aix-la-Chapelle. Corneille, Racine, Moliere, La Fontaine, and Boileau flourish.
- 1669 Canea, the capital of Candia, taken from the Venetians by the Turks, Sept. 1, after 23 years' siege.
- 1672 The Poles deliver up Cameniec, with 48 towns and villages in the territory of Cameniec, to Mohammed IV., the Turkish sultan. This is the last victory by which any advantage accrued to the Ottoman Turks, or any province was annexed to the ancient bounds of their empire. The De Witts massacred, Aug. 12.
- 1673 The Test Act passed.
- 1677 War between Russia and Turkey.
- 1678 The Habes Corpus Act passed. Peace of Nimuegen.
- 1682 Philadelphia founded by Wm. Penn.
- 1683 John Sobieski raises the siege of Vienna by the Turks.
- 1685 Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. Massacres and exile of the Protestants.
- 1686 Air-pump invented. Calderon flourishes.
- 1688 The "glorious" Revolution. Abdication of James II. Invasion of the Prince of Orange.
- 1689 William III. and Mary II. proclaimed, Feb. 13. The land-tax passed in England. The Toleration Act passed. Several bishops deprived for not taking the oath to King William. Episcopacy abolished in Scotland.
- 1690 The battle of the Boyne, gained by William III. over James in Ireland, July 1. The English establish themselves at Calcutta.
- 1692 The English and Dutch fleet, commanded by Admiral Russel, defeat the French fleet off La Hogue, May 19.
- 1693 Bayonets first used. Bank of England established by the King William. The first public lottery drawn.
- 1694 Stamp duties instituted in England.
- 1697 Charles XII. of Sweden begins his reign. Peace of Ryswick.
- 1700 The Dutch and Protestants of Germany introduce the New Style, by omitting the last 11 days of February.
- 1701 Prussia erected into a kingdom under Frederic, Jan. 18. War of Succession in Spain.
- 1703 St. Petersburg founded by Peter the Great.
- 1704 Gibraltar taken from the Spaniards, by Admiral Rooke, July 24. The battle of Blenheim won by the Duke of Marlborough and allies against the French, Aug. 2.
- 1706 The battle of Ramilies won by Marlborough and the allies, May 12. The Treaty of Union betwixt England and Scotland signed, July 22.
- 1707 The first British parliament.
- 1708 Sardinia erected into a kingdom, and given to the duke of Savoy. Battle of Oudenarde.
- 1709 Charles XII. at Bender. Battle of Malplaquet. The bull "Unigenitus" issued against the Jansenists.
- 1710 St. Paul's cathedral, London, rebuilt by Sir Christopher Wren. Livonia, Courland, &c. conquered by Peter the Great.
- 1713 The Peace of Utrecht signed, March 30.
- 1714 Interest reduced to 5 per cent. Peace of Rastadt.
- 1715 The rebellion of Scotland begins in September, under the Earl of Mar, in favour of the Pretender. The action of Sheriffmuir, and the surrender of Preston, both on November 13, when the rebels disperse.
- 1716 Liebnitz dies. An act passed for septennial parliaments.
- 1718 Law's Mississippi scheme.
- 1720 The South-Sea bubble in England, begun April 7, was at its height at the end of June, and quite sunk about September 29.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

- A. D.
- 1725 Sir Isaac Newton dies.
- 1727 Inoculation first tried with success. Russia, formerly a dukedom, is now established as an empire.
- 1730 "Augustan age" of English literature.
- 1732 Koulî Khan usurps the Persian throne, and conquers the Mogul empire.
- 1738 Westminster bridge begun; finished in 1750.
- 1739 Nadir Schah's conquests.
- 1740 War of the Austrian Succession. Maria Theresa.
- 1742 Frederic the Great acquires Silesia.
- 1743 The battle of Dettingen, won by the English and allies, June 16.
- 1744 Commodore Anson returns from his voyage round the world.
- 1745 The allies lose the battle of Fontenoy, April 30. The rebellion breaks out in Scotland, in July. The battle of Prestonpans, Sept. 21.
- 1746 The Pretender's army defeated by the Duke of Cumberland, at Culloden, April 16. Earthquake at Lima.
- 1748 The peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, Oct. 7.
- 1749 The interest of the British funds reduced to 3 per cent.
- 1752 The New Style introduced into Great Britain, the 3rd of September being counted the 14th.
- 1753 The British Museum begun at Montague House.
- 1755 Lisbon destroyed by an earthquake. Lord Clive in India.
- 1756 146 Englishmen confined in the Black Hole at Calcutta, by order of the Nabob, and 123 found dead the next morning. The Seven Years' War.
- 1757 Damien attempts to assassinate the French king, Jan. 5. Battle of Rossbach.
- 1759 The Jesuits expelled Portugal, Sept. 3. General Wolfe killed in the battle of Quebec, which is gained by the English, Sept. 18. Battle of Minden.
- 1760 Blackfriars bridge begun; finished in 1770. The Jesuits expelled from France.
- 1763 The Peace of Paris, Feb. 10.
- 1764 The parliament grants £10,000 to Mr. Harrison, for his discovery of the longitude by his timepiece.
- 1765 The sovereignty of the Isle of Man annexed to the crown of Great Britain.
- 1766 The American stamp act repealed, March 18. The Jesuits expelled Bohemia and Denmark.
- 1767 The Jesuits expelled Spain, Genoa, and Venice, April 2.
- 1768 The Jesuits expelled Naples, Malta, and Parma. France purchases Corsica from Genoa. The Royal Academy established.
- 1770 Tax upon tea in N. America.
- 1771 Capt. Cooke's first voyage round the world.
- 1772 Poland dismembered by Russia, Prussia, and Austria. The king of Sweden changes the constitution of that kingdom, Aug. 19.
- 1773 The pope suppresses the order of the Jesuits. Insurrection at Boston, N. America, against the tea tax.
- 1774 Peace proclaimed between the Russians and Turks. The colonists of British America deny the right of the British parliament to tax them. Deputies from the several American colonies meet at Philadelphia, as the first general congress, Sept. 5.
- 1775 The first action happened in America between the king's troops and the provincials at Lexington, April 19. Battle of Bunker's Hill, June 17. General congress of 13 provinces of British N. America.
- 1776 The congress declare the American colonies free and independent states, July 4. The Americans driven from Long Island, New York, in August, and the city of New York taken. Hume and Adam Smith die.
- 1777 General Howe takes Philadelphia, Oct. 3. Lieutenant-general Burgoyne obliged to surrender his army at Saratoga, in Canada, to the American generals, Gates and Arnold, Oct. 17.
- 1778 A treaty of alliance concluded at Paris between the French king and the American colonies, in which their independence is acknowledged by France, Feb. 6. Philadelphia evacuated by the British, June 18. An engagement fought off Brest between the English fleet, under the command of Admiral Keppel, and the French fleet, under the command of the Count d'Orville, July 27. Pondicherry surrenders to Great Britain, Oct. 17. The war between the Russians and Turks. The society of Jesuits suppressed by the pope's bull of Aug. 25. War of the Bavarian succession. Siege of Gibraltar.
- 1780 Admiral Rodney takes 22 sail of Spanish ships, Jan. 8. The same admiral gains a victory over a Spanish fleet, near Cape St. Vincent, Jan. 16. The Protestant Association, to the number of 50,000, petition for the repeal of an act passed in favour of the Papists, June 2. Riots in the city of London, and Southwark, for several successive days, which are at length suppressed by the military. Five English East Indians and fifty English merchant ships taken by the combined fleets of France and Spain, Aug. 9. Earl Cornwallis obtains a signal victory over General Gates, near Camden, in South Carolina, Aug. 16. Major Andre hanged as a spy at Tappan, in New York, Oct. 2. War declared against Holland, Dec. 20. War of England against Hyder Ali. Kant, Goethe, Schiller, and Wieland flourish. The Armed Neutrality of the North.
- 1781 St. Eustatia taken by Admiral Rodney and General Vaughan, Feb. 3; retaken by the French, Nov. 27. The planet Uranus discovered by Herschel, March 13. Tobacco taken by the French, June 2. Naval engagement between Admiral Parker and a Dutch squadron off the Dogger-bank, Aug. 5. Earl Cornwallis, with a British army, surrendered to the American and French troops, under General Washington and Count Rochambeau, at York-town, in Virginia, Oct. 19. The frontier fortresses of the Netherlands dismantled.
- 1782 Trincomalee in Ceylon taken by Admiral Hughes, Jan. 11. Minorca and Florida surrendered to Spain, Feb. 5. The House of Commons address the king against any further prosecution of the war in North America, March 4. Admiral Rodney obtains a signal victory over the French fleet under Count de Grasse, near Dominica, in the West Indies, April 12. The French destroy the forts, &c. on Hudson's Bay, Aug. 24. The Spaniards defeated in their attack on Gibraltar, Sept. 13. Treaty between Holland and the United States, Oct. 8. England acknowledges the independence of the United States of N. America, Nov. 30. Russia acquiesces the Crimea.
- 1783 Peace of Versailles, Jan. 20. The order of St. Patrick instituted, Feb. 5. Earthquakes in Calabria and Sicily, Feb. 5, 7, and 28. Armistice between Great Britain and Holland, Feb. 10. Volcanic eruption in Iceland. Ratification of the treaty of peace between Great Britain, France, Spain, and the United States of America, Sept. 3.
- 1784 The great seal stolen from the lord chancellor's house, March 24. Treaty of peace between Great Britain and Holland, May 24. Commemoration of Handel, May 26.
- 1785 The Germanic League.
- 1786 The Landgrave of Hesse paid for Hessian soldiers lost in the American war, £30 per man, Nov. 21. The Sinking Fund established.
- 1787 Warren Hastings, formerly governor-general of Bengal, impeached, May 21. The first Assembly of Notables in France. The Abolition of the Slave-trade first agitated by Clarkson and Wilberforce. The hereditary stadtholder reinstated in Holland. War between Russia and Turkey.
- 1788 A second Assembly of Notables at Paris. Necker recalled to the ministry of finance. Alliance between England and Prussia. The king's first illness, Nov. War between Austria and Turkey.
- 1789 Insurrections in Hungary and the Netherlands. Assembly of the States-general, May 5. National Assembly June 17. Necker dismissed, July 11. The taking of the Bastille, July 14. Feudal system abolished, Aug. 4. The king brought to Paris, Oct. 6. New constitution of the United States. Democratic societies in Great Britain.
- 1790 Crown and church lands confiscated in France; assignats issued. Necker's final retirement. Benjamin Franklin dies, April 17.
- 1791 Riots at Birmingham, July 14. Jacobin Club begins to be famous. The king's attempt to fly from France, June 21. Royal acceptance and inauguration of the constitution, Sept. 14. Legislative Assembly, Sept. 30.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

A. D.

The emigrants proscribed. Sweden, Austria, &c. declare their hostility to the French Revolution.

1792 The peace of Jassy, Jan. 9. Assassination of the king of Sweden, by Ankerström, March 16. Peace with Tippoo Sultan, March 19. The French declare war against the emperor, April 20. The king of Poland compelled by Russia to restore the old constitution, July 23. The coalition against France, July 26. The Tuileries stormed; the king deposed, and committed to the Temple, Aug. 10. Massacres in the prisons, Sept. 2 and 3. The National Convention summoned; the Republic declared, Sept. 21. The coalized forces driven out of France, and the Netherlands invaded by Dumourier. Battle of Jemappes, Nov. 6. Savoy invaded. Custine penetrates Germany.

1793 Louis XVI. beheaded, Jan. 21. The French declare war against England and Holland, Feb. 1. Battle of Neerwinden, March. Defection of Dumourier, April. The French driven back by the Germans and Prussians. Alien Bill passed in England. Tobago taken by the English, April 14. Foulon taken by Lord Hood, Aug., and evacuated, Dec. Marie Antoinette beheaded, Oct. 16. The second partition of Poland. French settlements in Hindustan reduced by the English. The Second Constitution; the fall of the Girondists; and the Reign of Terror.

1794 Lord Howe's victory, June 1. Corsica submits to England, June 21. Fall of Robespierre, July 28. Pichegru victorious in Holland; the French occupy the whole left bank of the Rhine, Oct. French penetrate into Spain. The war in La Vendée. The French possessions in the E. and W. Indies reduced by the English. Revolution in Poland under Kosciuszko; the Massacre of Praga, Nov. 4. Treaty with America, Nov. 19. Acquisition of Horne Tooke, Hardy, and Thelwall. Unsuccessful expedition of the English to Flanders.

1795 Warren Hastings acquitted, after a trial which commenced on Feb. 12, 1788, April 25. Pichegru completes the conquest of Holland. Peace between France and Prussia, April. The Batavian Republic, May. Lord Bridport's victory over the French fleet near L'Orient, June 23. Battle of Loano, in Piedmont, July 22. Cape of Good Hope taken, Sept. 16. The third Constitution in France; the Directory; the last insurrection suppressed by Buonaparte, Oct. 5. Discontents in Ireland. The third and final partition of Poland. Assaults on George III. Mungo Park begins his African travels.

1796 The king of Poland compelled to abdicate, March. Buonaparte's campaign in Italy; battle of Lodi, May 10. Sir Ralph Abercrombie takes St. Lucia, May 25. A large Dutch fleet surrenders to Admiral Elphinstone, near the Cape of Good Hope, Aug. 16. General Washington resigns the presidency of the United States, the 17th, and is succeeded by Mr. Adams. Milan taken. Moreau's retreat through the Black Forest, Sept. Battles of Arcola, Nov. 15 and 17. Spain declares war against Great Britain, Oct. 10. Catherine II., empress of Russia, dies, Nov. 17. Corsica evacuated by the English, Nov. The French fleet attempts to land troops at Bantry Bay, Ireland, Dec. 24. Ceylon taken by the English, and other Dutch settlements in the E. and W. Indies. Italy overawed by the French.

1797 Buonaparte's campaign in Italy; battle of Rivoli, Jan. 14. Mantua taken, Feb. 2. Sir John Jervis's victory over the Spanish fleet, off Cape St. Vincent, Feb. 16. Avignon given up to France, Feb. Trinidad surrendered to England, Feb. 21. The French land at Fishguard in Wales, Feb. 22. Bank prohibition bill, Feb. 26. Mutiny at Spithead, April 15, and at the Nore, May 12. Admiral Duncan defeats the Dutch fleet, off Camperdown, Oct. 12. Venice given up to Austria; the Ligurian and Cisalpine Republics; Peace of Campo Formio, Oct. 17.

1798 Congress of the Peace of Rastadt. Republic of Leman, Jan. New constitution in Holland, Jan. 22. Roman Republic, Feb. 10. Rebellion in Ireland, April 2. Helvetian Republic, April. The British troops, under General Coote, in Holland, compelled to capitulate to the French, 946

A. D.

May 20. Geneva and Piedmont incorporated with France. Nelson opens the harbours of Naples. Buonaparte takes Malta, June 11; and lands in Egypt, July 1. Defeat of the Irish rebels, near Gore's-bridge, July 1. Nelson's victory off the Nile, Aug. 1. The French land in Killala bay, Ireland, the 24th. Switzerland overrun by the French, Sept. Victory of Sir J. B. Warren over the French fleet off Ireland, Oct. 20. The king of Sardinia forced to abdicate by the French, Dec. 9. The Ottoman Porte unites with Russia and England against France. Independence of St. Domingo. Income tax imposed in England.

1799 Naples taken by the French, Jan. 24. Florence a republic, Mar. 15. Suwarrow's successes against the French, April 27, 28, June 19, and Aug. 15. Seringapatam taken, Tippoo Saib killed, May 4. Siege of Acre; Sir Sidney Smith defends it successfully against Buonaparte, May 21. General Massena successful against the Austrians, May 25 to 28. Massena defeated by the Archduke Charles, June 5. The Pope dies a prisoner in France, Aug. 29. The Ionian Islands taken from the French. Battle of Trebbia, June 19. Battle of Eylau, Aug. 15. Surinam taken from the Dutch, Aug. 23. Dutch fleet taken by Admiral Mitchell, the 28th. Buonaparte arrives in France from Egypt, Oct. 16. Effects another revolution, and is appointed first consul, Nov. 10. General Washington died, the 15th. Secret expedition against Holland, when the whole of the Dutch fleet surrendered; but the expedition failed, Oct. 18. The French lose almost all their conquests in Italy.

1800 The Italian republics restored. The French masters of Switzerland. The republic of the Ionian Islands, March 21. Battle of Stockach, May 4. Hadfield shoots at the king at Drury-lane playhouse, May 15. Buonaparte crosses the Alps, May 16 to 27. The siege of Genoa, Massena capitulates, June 4. Battle of Marengo, the 14th. Kleber assassinated in Egypt, ibid. Unsuccessful attempt of the English upon Ferrol, in Spain, Aug. 25. Malta taken by the English, Sept. 5. Conspiracies to kill Buonaparte, Oct. 10 and Dec. 24. Embargo laid by Russia upon British ships, Sept. 10 and Nov. 27. Russia, Sweden, and Denmark unite against England. Battle of Hohenlinden, Dec. 3.

1801 Union of Great Britain and Ireland, Jan. 1. Lavater dies, Jan. 3. The first parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland meets, the 22nd. Peace of Luneville, Feb. 9. Victory over the French in Egypt, March 21, in which Sir R. Abercrombie is killed. Paul I., emperor of Russia, assassinated, March 23, and is succeeded by Alexander. Peace between France and Naples, the 28th. The Danes take Hamburg, the 20th. Sir Hyde Parker and Lord Nelson destroy the fleet at Copenhagen, and make peace with the Danes, April 2. Conquest of Egypt completed by General Hutchinson, July. Lord Nelson's unsuccessful attempts on the flotilla at Boulogne, Aug. 6 and 15. Preliminaries of peace signed with France, Oct. 1. Georgia incorporated with Russia. Prussia attempts to occupy Hanover.

1802 Buonaparte president of the Italian republic, Jan. 26. Peace of Amiens, Mar. 27. Catholic religion restored in France, April. Legion of Honour, May 19. Buonaparte consul for life, Aug. Attempts to recover St. Domingo. Secret jealousies between France and England. France gains Louisiana from Spain. Vaccination established as a preventive of the small-pox.

1803 War declared by Great Britain against France, May 16. St. Lucia taken by the English, June 20, and Tobago on the 30th. Insurrection in Dublin, and murder of Lord Kilwarden, July 23. Hanover taken by the French. French army at Cape François, in St. Domingo, Nov. 19, and afterwards submit to an English squadron, the 30th. Invasion of England threatened. Louisiana sold to the United States, April. British travellers in France seized and detained till the end of the war. Victories of the British in India; battle of Assaye, Sept. 23.

1804 A French squadron in the East Indies, under Admiral Linois, beat off by the English East India fleet, Feb. 15.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

A. D.

- 1805 Buonaparte proclaimed emperor, May 20. Coronation of Buonaparte by the pope, at Paris, Dec. 2. The Duke D'Enghien shot by Buonaparte's order, March 14. The "Code Napoleon." War declared by Spain against England, Dec. 12. Dessalines emperor of Hayti, October. Ohio one of the United States. The Jesuits restored by the pope.
- 1805 The French emperor assumes the title of King of Italy, May. Lord Melville impeached for misapplying the public money as treasurer of the Navy, June. Sir Robert Calder's decisive victory over the combined fleets of France and Spain, July 22; after which he is recalled, tried by court-martial, and dismissed the service. Austria and Russia unite against France, Aug. General Mack surrenders at Ulm to Buonaparte, Oct. 20. Massena successful in Italy against the Archduke Charles, Oct., Nov. Victory off Cape Trafalgar, by the English fleet, under Lord Nelson, who is killed, Oct. 21. French enter Vienna, Nov. 12. The English invade Hanover, and Sir Sydney Smith fails in an attack on the Boulogne flotilla, Nov. King of Sweden declares against France. British and Russian army received by the Neapolitans, in violation of a treaty just concluded with France, Nov. 20. Battle of Austerlitz, Dec. 2. Peace of Presburg, the 27th. Bavaria and Wurttemberg erected into kingdoms by the favour of Buonaparte; and other great changes in Germany.
- 1806 Cape of Good Hope taken by General Baird and Admiral Sir Home Popham, Jan. 10. Mr. Pitt dies, Jan. 23. The French subjugate Naples; the English and Russian army, and the royal family, retreating to Sicily. Admiral Duckworth defeats the French squadron near St. Domingo, Feb. 6. Joseph Buonaparte king of Naples, March 30. The king of Prussia shuts the ports of the Baltic against the English, Mar. 28; takes definitive possession of Hanover, April 1. Embargo laid on Prussian vessels in British ports, April 5. The "Continental System." Orders issued to capture and destroy all Prussian vessels, May 29. Louis Buonaparte proclaimed king of Holland, June 11. Lord Melville acquitted, June 12. War declared in London against Prussia, June 14. Buenos Ayres taken from the Spaniards by Sir Home Popham, June 28. Francis II. resigns the titles of Roman Emperor and King of Germany; the German empire dissolved, Aug. 6. Buenos Ayres retaken, Aug. 12. Hon. Charles James Fox dies, Sept. 13. Battles of Jena and Auerstadt, Oct. 14. The Turks declare war against the Russians, Dec. 30. The Confederation of the Rhine, July 12. Palm, the Nuremberg bookseller, shot by order of Napoleon, Aug. 26. Saxony a kingdom, Dec. 11. Overwhelming influence of Napoleon in Germany. The "Berlin Decree," Nov. 21. Battle of Maida, July 4. Neufchâtel seized by France. Slave-trade abolished, June 11. French occupy Hanover, Nov. War declared by Russia and Prussia against France, Oct. 9. Battle of Poltuck, Dec. 26. St. Domingo revolutionized again.
- 1807 The island of Curaçoa surrendered to the British, Jan. 1. The British take possession of Monte Video, Feb. 3. The battle of Prussian Eylau, Feb. 8. A British squadron threatens Constantinople, in vain, March 1. Alexandria, in Egypt, taken, March 21. The English defeated at Rosetta, March 31. Insurrection of the Janissaries, who depose Selim III., May. Dantzic surrendered to the French, May 26. Battle of Friedland, May 14. The French enter Koningsberg, the 16th. Treaty of Tilsit, July 6. Unsuccessful British attack on Buenos Ayres, July 6. South America evacuated by the British, Sept. The republic of Ragusa annexed to the kingdom of Italy, Aug. 14. Bombardment of Copenhagen by the British, Sept. 6. Alexandria evacuated by the English, Sept. 22. Portugal shuts her ports against the English, Oct. 20. The Russians declare war against England, Oct. 26. The English government declares France in a state of blockade, Nov. 11. The house of Braganza deposed by Buonaparte, and the prince regent of Portugal sails for the Brazils, the 29th. The French enter Lisbon, Nov. 30. Etruria delivered up to France, the 10th. Jerome

A. D.

- Buonaparte king of Westphalia, Dec. 17. The English declare war against Russia, the 18th. An embargo laid by Congress on all vessels of the United States, the 22nd. Treaty between France and Spain, for the partition of Portugal, Nov. 30. The "Milan Decree," Dec. 17. Slave-trade abolished by Act of Parliament, Mar. 25. Retaliative orders in council, by Great Britain, to the French decrees, Nov. 11 and 25.
- 1808 Morat enters Madrid, April 24. Insurrection and massacre in Madrid, May 2. Charles and Ferdinand abdicate the throne of Spain, in favour of Buonaparte, on compulsion, May 20. Joseph Buonaparte declared king of Spain, June 6. Murat proclaimed king of the Two Sicilies, Aug. 1. Battles of Rolica and Vimiera, Aug. 21. Convention of Cintra, by which the French, &c. evacuate Portugal, 30th. Meetings of the emperors of France and Russia at Erfurth, Sept. 27. Buonaparte leaves Paris for Spain, 30th. The French re-enter Madrid, Dec. 4. Defence of Saragossa by Palafox, Aug. 14, during 63 days. Retreat of the British army under Sir John Moore begins, Dec. 27. British army lands in Portugal, Aug. 6.
- 1809 Sir John Moore's army reaches Corunna, is attacked unsuccessfully, and embarks; he is killed, Jan. 16. Buonaparte returns to France, Jan. The king of Sweden deposed, March 13. War between France and Austria, April 9. The Austrians defeated at Abersberg, Landshut, Ehmuhl, and Ratisbon, April 20 to 23. The French enter Vienna, May 13. Battles of Aspern, Essling, and Wagram, May 21 and 22, July 5 and 6. Battle of Talavera, July 21. Expedition to Walcheren, July 30. Returns fruitlessly in Dec. Peace of Vienna, May 14. Papal territories annexed to France, May 17. Josephine divorced by Napoleon, Dec. 16. Second siege of Saragossa, the French take it; Palafox made a prisoner, Feb. 20. The British army enters Spain from Portugal, June. Soult enters Portugal and takes Oporto, March 29. The passage of the Douro, by Wellesley, who retakes Oporto, May 12. Cayenne taken by the British, Jan. 12. Martinique taken, Feb. 24. The Ionian Islands recovered from France. Sweden cedes Finland to Russia, Sept. 17. Non-intercourse Act in the United States, against France and Great Britain, Mar. 1.
- 1810 Buonaparte marries Maria Louis, Archduchess of Austria, April 1. Holland, &c. annexed to France, July 9. Bernadotte nominated crown prince of Sweden, August 18. Hanover annexed to Westphalia, Jan. 14. Anders Hofer shot by order of Buonaparte, Feb. 20. Rome incorporated with France, Feb. 17. Battle of Busaco, Sept. 27. The lines of Torres Vedras, Oct. 8. The Valais annexed to France, Nov. 12. The British reduce most of the Dutch possessions in the Eastern Archipelago. George III. becomes hopelessly deranged, Oct. 25. Sir F. Burdett committed to the Tower. The Revolution in Spanish S. America begins. Confederation of Venezuela, April 19.
- 1811 Prince of Wales appointed regent, Feb. 6. French begin their retreat from Portugal, March 5. Buonaparte has a son born, (king of Rome,) March 23. Battle of Albuera, May 16. Blockade of Almeida, May 5. The French garrison evacuate Almeida, May 11. French take Taragona, June 28. Batavia taken by the English, Aug. 8. Guerilla chiefs in Spain. Battle of Fuentes d'Onoro, May 3 and 5. The Luddite riots commence, Nov. Mohammed Ali massacres the Mameluks at Cairo, March 1. Importation of British merchandise prohibited in the United States, Jan. 22.
- 1812 The king of Sicily abdicates his throne, Jan. 16. Ciudad Rodrigo taken, Jan. 19. Badajoz taken, April 6. Mr. Perceval shot by Bellingham, May 12. Battle of Almaraz, May 19. The British orders in council revoked, June 24. Peace between England, Russia, and Sweden, July 18. Battle of Salamanca, July 22. Lord Wellington enters Madrid, Aug. 14. France makes alliance with Austria and Prussia against Russia, Feb. and March. The invasion of Russia by the Grand Army; the Niemen crossed, June 24. Moscow entered, Sept. 14. Moscow

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

A. D.

- burnt, and the retreat commenced, Oct. 19. Buonaparte abandons his army, Dec. 6, and reaches Paris, Dec. 18. The pope brought to Fontainebleau. War declared by the United States against Great Britain, June 18. Peace of Bucharest, between Russia and Turkey.
- 1813 Alliance of Russia and Prussia, March 1. Hamburg evacuated by the French, March 13. Prussia proclaims war against France, March 17. Battle of Lutzen, May 2. Battle of Bautzen, May 21. Catholic Emancipation bill thrown out, May 24. The engagement of the Chesapeake and the Shannon, June 1. Battle of Vittoria, June 21. Sweden declares war against France, July. Battles of the Pyrenees, July 25 to Aug. 2. Austria declares war against France, Aug. 10. Battle of Grossbeeren, Aug. 23. Battle of the Katzbach, Aug. 26. Battles of Dresden, Aug. 26 and 27. St. Sebastian taken, Aug. 31. Renewal of the E. India Company's charter, which opens the trade to India and the Oriental Archipelago. Battle of Dennewitz, Sept. 6. Lord Wellington invades France, Oct. 17. Alliance of Denmark with France, Oct. Battle of Leipsic, Oct. 16, 18, and 19. Battles of Hannau, Oct. 30 and 31. Italy attacked by the Austrians, Nov. 2. Denmark attacked by the Swedes, Oct. and Nov. The British pass the Nivelle, Nov. 10. Rapp capitulates at Dantzig, Nov. The French army driven across the Rhine at Hochheim, Nov. 9. Insurrection against France in Holland, Nov. William Frederic recalled, and proclaimed king of the Netherlands, Dec. 3. Peace of Valencia, which is not ratified, Dec. 11. The allies cross the Rhine at Basle, Dec. 20. Geneva reduced by the allies, Dec. 23. Great changes in the German states.
- 1814 Murat joins the allies, Jan. 11. Peace of Kiel, Jan. 14. Battle of Brienne, Feb. 1 and 2. Battle of Orthes, Feb. 27. Battle of Laon, March 9. Battle of Fère Champeuse, March 25. The allies enter Paris, March 31. The French evacuate Italy, April. Buonaparte deposed, April 2. Louis XVIII. proclaimed, April 6. Lord Wellington at Toulouse, April 10. Buonaparte abdicates at Fontainebleau, and becomes emperor of Elba, April 11. Buonaparte at Elba, May 4. Ferdinand enters Madrid, May 14, and restores the Inquisition, the Jesuits, and absolutism. The pope reinstated at Rome, May 24. The Peace of Paris, May 30. Hamburg evacuated, May 31. The Charter of France, June 4. The allied sovereigns visit England, June 7. Great changes on the continent, and in the colonies, in the restoration, &c. &c. of conquests, and the reduction of affairs to the status quo ante bellum. Restoration of the Jesuits, Aug. 7. Washington taken by the English, Aug. 24. Norway joined to Sweden, Oct. 20. Hanover made a kingdom, Oct. 26. Peace between Holland and Great Britain, Oct. 29. The congress of Vienna opens, Nov. 1. Genoa joined to Sardinia, Dec. 12. Peace of Ghent with the United States, Dec. 24.
- 1815 Attack on New Orleans, which fails, Jan. Buonaparte quits Elba, Feb. 26, and lands in France, March 1. The Corn bill passed, in spite of popular demonstrations against it, March. Buonaparte enters Paris, and Louis XVIII. quits it, March 20. Murat attempts a diversion in favour of Napoleon, and attacks Upper Italy, March 30; but is defeated and forced to flee to France, May 3. Naples taken by the Austrians, May 20. Congress of Vienna closes, June 11. Battles of Quatre-Bras and Igny, June 16. Battle of Waterloo, June 18. Buonaparte deposed, June 22. Allies enter Paris, July 7. Buonaparte surrenders to the English, July 15. The Holy Alliance, Sept. 26. Murat shot, Oct. 15. Buonaparte lands in St. Helena, Oct. 17. Republic of the Ionian Islands, Nov. 5. General pacification of Paris, Nov. 20, which modifies and completes the arrangements, restorations, compensations, &c. agreed to at the congress of Vienna. Brazil declared an empire, Dec.
- 1816 Lord Amherst's embassy to China leaves England, Feb. Independence of Buenos Ayres proclaimed, July 9. Lord Exmouth bombards Algiers; the captives set free, Aug. 27. Riots in various parts of England. The Spa-fields mob.

A. D.

- 1817 The completion of the 3rd century from the beginning of Luther's Reformation celebrated throughout Protestant Germany. Cash payments resumed at the Bank of England. France, Spain, and Holland abolish the Slave-trade. Disturbances in various parts of England.
- 1818 Bernadotte becomes king of Sweden, as Charles XIV., Feb. 5. The first Infant School established in Westminster. Congress at Aix-la-Chapelle. France admitted to the alliance of the great powers, Oct. The army of occupation withdrawn from France, and the frontier fortresses restored.
- 1819 Discontents in the manufacturing districts. Southwark iron bridge opened, March, having occupied nearly four years in erection. The Antarctic continent coasted by an English captain, named Smith. Lord Sidmouth's circular. The meeting for Reform and Retrenchment at Manchester put down by the yeomanry cavalry, who kill and wound a great number of men and women assembled to petition parliament, and are thanked by parliament for their services, Aug. 16. Mr. Peel's first Currency bill.
- 1820 Commencement of the Spanish Revolution; the Cortes proclaim the constitution of 1812, Jan. 1. George III. dies, Jan. 29. Cash-payments at the Bank resumed, Feb. 1. The Duc de Berri assassinated, Feb. 13. The Cato-street conspiracy suppressed, Feb. 23. The king of Spain swears to the constitution of the cortes, and suppresses the Inquisition, March 8. Massacre at Cadiz, March 10. The Jesuits expelled from Russia, March 25. The revolution at Naples breaks out, May 15. Accusation against Queen Caroline, July 5. Revolution in Portugal commences, Aug. 24. Revolt in Hayti; a republic proclaimed, Oct. 8. Florida ceded to the United States, by Spain, Oct. 24. The Arctic expedition of Franklin and Parry. Conference of the Holy Alliance at Troppau and Laybach; the king of Naples summoned to the latter, Dec. 28. Insurrection in Mexico, under the command of Iturbide. Bolivar heads the patriots of S. America.
- 1821 Revolution in Brazil, Jan. 1. Congress of Laybach, Jan. 8, and May. Austrian army occupies Naples, Jan. 29. Insurrections in Greece and the Danubian provinces of Turkey, March. Russia threatens Turkey. Disturbances in Piedmont, March, April. Brazil obtains the Portuguese constitution, April. Napoleon Buonaparte dies at St. Helena, May 5. King of Portugal returns from Brazil and accepts the new constitution, July 4. Austrian army occupies Sardinia, July 20. George IV. visits Ireland, Aug. 17. Russia seizes on the N. W. coast of N. America, Sept. 16. Hereditary nobility abolished in Norway. Guatemala proclaims its independence, Sept. 24. Talleyrand Perigord dies, Oct. Turks driven out of the Morea. Spanish Hayti proclaims its independence, Dec. 1. Catholic Emancipation rejected by the Lords.
- 1822 The Greeks declare themselves free, Jan. 27. Spanish Hayti incorporated with the republic, Feb. United States of N. America recognise the independence of the S. American republics, March 8. The massacre of Scio, April 12. Iturbide emperor of Mexico, May 21. Massacres in Madrid, July 2. Victories of the Greeks at Thermopylae, Larissa, and Salonica, July 8 and 14. Army of the Faith, Aug. 14. King of Portugal swears to the new constitution, Oct. 1. Brazil declared independent; Don Pedro emperor, Oct. 12. Congress of Verona opened, Oct., and continues till Dec.
- 1823 Spanish cortes rejects the mediation of Russia, Prussia, and Austria, Jan. 9. The cortes carries the king to Cadiz, March 20. French army enters Spain, April 7. Iturbide dethroned in Mexico, April 19. French occupy Madrid, May 23. Counter-revolution in Portugal, the constitution suppressed, June 5. British consuls appointed in the S. American republics, Oct. French occupy Cadiz, Oct. 3. Mexican constitution proclaimed, Oct. 4. The king re-enters Madrid, and suppresses the constitution, restoring the former despotism, Nov. 13. Riego executed, Nov. 27.
- 1824 English troops defeated by the Ashantees, Jan. 21. United

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

A. D.

- States of Central America, an independent republic. Bolivar named dictator by the congress at Peru, Feb. 10. War declared against the Birman empire, March 5. Disturbances at Lisbon, April. Rangoon taken, May 5. Ipsaca destroyed by the Turks, July 3. Turbide shot, July 19. Provisional government in Greece, Oct. 12. Disorder and revolt against the government of Greece. Inundation at St. Petersburg, Nov. 23. Mechanics' Institutions founded by Dr. Birkbeck. Catholic rent collected in Ireland.
- 1825 Treaties between Great Britain and Mexico, and the other new republics of America, Jan. and Feb. Ibrahim Pacha invades Greece, Feb. 26. Bolivar again elected dictator of Peru, March 10. Insurrection in Java. Conquest of Arracan, April. Independence of Hayti confirmed by France, April 17. Independence of Brazil acknowledged by Portugal, May 13. Ibrahim reduces Navarino, May 18. The Bolivian republic established, Aug. 6. The first steam vessel to India sails, Aug. 10. The Spaniards lose their last possession in N. America, Nov. 10. Missolonghi invested, Nov. War between Brazil and Buenos Ayres, Dec. Insurrection at St. Petersburg, speedily quelled, Dec. Great commercial distress, and many failures in the money-market.
- 1826 S. America completely delivered from Spanish dominion, Jan. 19. Missolonghi relieved, Jan. 25. Birman war concluded, Feb. 24. Missolonghi taken, April 23. Charter given to Portugal by Don Pedro, April 26. Festival in Denmark to commemorate the introduction of Christianity into the country, 1000 years before, May 14. The Danubian principalities evacuated by the Turks, May 19. Insurrection of the Janissaries at Constantinople, against the introduction of European discipline, and general slaughter of the insurgents, June 14 and 15. Insurrections in Portugal, July, &c., against the charter. Chili a confederate state, July 11. Russia at war with Persia, Sept. 28. Athens taken, Aug. 15. The treaty of Ackermann, Oct. 26. Lotteries abolished in England, Oct. 18. Slave-trade abolished by Brazil, Nov. Portugal invaded by rebels from Spain, Nov. Bolivar president of Peru for life, Aug. 19. British troops arrive at Lisbon, in aid of the constitutionalists, Dec. 25.
- 1827 Rebels in Portugal totally defeated, Jan. 9. Bolivar deprived of the presidency of Peru. The king of France disbands the National Guard, April. The Acropolis of Athens surrenders to the Turks, June 2. Treaty of London, with France and Russia, in favour of Greece, July 6. Parry returns from his Arctic expedition, Sept. 29. Hammersmith suspension-bridge opened, Oct. 6. The battle of Navarino, Oct. 20. The Porte declares war against Russia, Dec. 20.
- 1828 The Count Capo d'Istria president of Greece, Jan. 18. Peace between Russia and Persia, Feb. 22. Don Pedro abdicates the throne of Portugal in favour of his daughter, Donna Maria, March 3. Don Miguel regent. New constitution in Peru, March 21. Russia declares war against Turkey, April 26. Bolivar proclaimed dictator at Bogota, June 13. Miguel usurps the throne of Portugal, June 30. Oporto, the head-quarters of the constitutionalists, blockaded. The Miguelites take Oporto, July 3. The siege of Varna, July to Oct. A French force still remains in Spain, Aug. Tripoli bombarded by a Neapolitan squadron, Aug. 23. Independence of Banda Oriental established, Aug. 29. The queen of Portugal takes refuge in England, Sept. 25. University College, London, opened, Oct. 1. Ibrahim Pacha evacuates the Morea, Oct. 4. Turks evacuate the Morea, Oct. 30. Russians fall back to Jassy, Nov. 10. The Bosphorus blockaded by Russia, Dec. 31.
- 1829 York minister burnt down by an incendiary, Feb. 2. The Catholic Association dissolved, Feb. 12. Catholic Relief bill carried in the House of Lords, April 10. Guatemala taken, April 13. Riots at Manchester, May; and in other manufacturing places. Lepanto taken by the Greeks, May 9; Missolonghi taken, May 17. Civil war in Buenos Ayres, June. Tampico, in Mexico, taken by the Spaniards, Aug. 4, and the captors surrender to San-

A. D.

- ta Anna, Sept. 11. The Russians enter Adrianople, Aug. 20. Trial of locomotive engines on the Liverpool and Manchester railroad, Oct. Revolution in Mexico, Nov. 23.
- 1830 Bolivar resigns the presidency of Colombia, but afterwards recalls the resignation, Jan. 20. Spain claims its former possessions in Hayti, Feb. 6. French Chamber of Deputies vote an address in reply to the royal speech hostile to ministers, March 16, and are prorogued, 19. Bolivar renounces the presidency of Colombia, April 11. French Chamber of Deputies dissolved, May 16. The French expedition against Algiers sails, May 25. Capital of Algiers taken by the French, July 5. Ordinances issued by Charles X., suppressing the liberty of the press, and otherwise infringing the rights of the people, July 26. The people resist the enforcement of the ordinances, and the conflict begins, July 27. The "three days of July," by which another Revolution is effected in France, by a desperate struggle of the populace against the military, some regiments of which join the people; the National Guard reorganized, July 28, 29, 30. Louis Philippe, Duke of Orleans, appointed lieutenant-general of the kingdom, July 31. Abdication of Charles X., Aug. 2. Louis Philippe I. king of the French, Aug. 9. Revolution begins at Brussels, Aug. 25. Incendiary fires numerous in the agricultural districts of England, Sept. Insurrections at Brunswick, Berlin, Dresden, Hamburg, &c., Sept. Liverpool and Manchester railroad opened, when Mr. Huskisson was accidentally killed, Sept. 15. Independence of Belgium proclaimed, Oct. 4. Disturbances at Paris, Oct. 17. Dutch troops driven into the citadel of Antwerp, and begin to cannonade the town, Oct. 27. Polish revolution commenced at Warsaw, Nov. 29. Belgium recognised as independent by the allied powers, Dec. 26.
- 1831 Insurrection at Modena, Feb. 5. Battle of Grochow, near Warsaw, in which the Poles defeat the Russians, Feb. 20. The Reform bill introduced into the House of Commons, March 1. The Austrian troops suppress the insurrection at Modena, March 10. Disturbances at Antigua, March 20. Disturbances in Belgium, March 31. The Poles defeat the Russians at Wawz, April 1. Revolution in Brazil, April 7. Victory of the Poles at Siedlez, April 10. Reform bill defeated, April 20. Disturbances in Ireland proclaimed, May 10. Disputes begin between the British and Chinese at Canton, May 19. Battle of Ostrolengia, Poles again victorious, May 26. Prince Leopold elected to the throne of Belgium, May 27, and June 4. Leopold enters Brussels, July 21. New London bridge opened, Aug. 1. War of the Dutch against Belgium commences, Aug. 2. Capitulation of Warsaw to the Russians, Sept. 7. Reform bill thrown out of the House of Lords, Oct. 7. Riots in various towns of England, Oct. Riots of Bristol, Oct. 29. The cholera in England, Nov. 4. Riots at Lyons, Nov. 21. General Torijos shot at Malaga, Dec. 4. A new Reform bill introduced to the House of Commons, Dec. 12. Insurrection of slaves in Jamaica, Dec. 22.
- 1832 Conspiracy to dethrone Louis Philippe detected and crushed, Feb. 1. Cholera reappears in England, Feb. 13. The kingdom of Poland united to the empire of Russia, Feb. 26. Goethe dies, March 22. Defeat of the Reform bill in the Lords, May 7. Insurrection in Paris on occasion of the funeral of General Lamarque, June 3. Reform bill passed, June 7. Assault on William III. at Ascot races, June 19. Don Pedro's expedition against Don Miguel sails, June 26. Ibrahim Pacha takes Acre, July 2. Napoleon Buonaparte's only son, the Duke of Reichstadt, dies, July 24. The Grand Seigneur defeated in Syria by Ibrahim Pacha, July 30. The French army commences the attack on the citadel of Antwerp, Nov. 30; which surrenders, Dec. 24. Disputes between the legislature of S. Carolina and congress, Dec. Battle of Koniah, the Turks defeated, Dec. 21.
- 1833 Otho, the newly-elected king of Greece, arrives at Napoli, Jan. 31. Negotiations between Turkey and Russia, for aid against the Pacha of Egypt, Feb. Riot at Frankfort, April 3. Cholera disappears from England, April. Santa Anna president of Mexico, April 18. Reconciliation of the Pacha of Egypt to the Porte, May 6. A public meeting in Coldbath Fields dispersed by the police, May 13. Disturbances in Bavaria, June 25. Treaty between Russia and Turkey, July 8. The Constitution-

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

A. D.

 22. The queen dowager of Spain assumes the regency, Sept. 29. Captain Ross returns from his Arctic expedition, after having been given up as lost, Oct. 18. Incendiary fires in the eastern counties, Dec.

1834 Carlist insurrections in Spain, Jan. Treaty between Russia and Turkey, Jan. 27. Post-office established in Turkey, Feb. 14. Nearly 100 banks in the United States fail, in consequence of the president's determination to suppress the United States bank, March. Riots at Lyons, April 5 to 15. Attempted insurrection in Paris, April 13. Zumalacarre, the Carlist general, defeats the queen's forces, April 22. Treaty at London between England, France, Spain, and Portugal, for the pacification of the last-named countries, April 22. War in Portugal ended, May 26. Don Carlos leaves Portugal, and arrives in England, June 18. Termination of slavery in the British colonies, Aug. 1. Don Pedro resigns the regency of Portugal; the queen is declared of age, Sept. 15. The Houses of Parliament completely burnt, Oct. 16. The Caffres attack Graham's Town, S. Africa, Dec. 25.

1835 A mutiny at Madrid, Jan. 17. Riot, with loss of life, at Wolverhampton, May 27. The British legion raised in aid of Queen Christina, of Spain, leaves England, July 2. The "infernal machine" of Fieschi; Louis Philippe escapes unhurt, July 28. The tercentenary commemoration of the printing of the first English Bible, by Miles Coverdale, Oct. 4. The conferences of Kalisch and Töplitz, held by the emperors of Russia and Austria and the king of Prussia, Oct. Texas declared independent of Mexico, Nov. Lives lost in tithe affairs in Ireland, Dec.

1836 Cracow occupied by Russian and Austrian troops, Feb. The life of the king of the French attempted by Alibaud, June 25. Armand Carrel shot in a duel by Emile Giscard, July 24. Revolt at Malaga, Cadiz, Seville, &c., July 25. Revolution at Madrid, Aug. 12. Revolution at Lisbon, Sept. 9. Louis Napoleon, nephew of the emperor, makes a foolish attempt at an insurrection at Strasburg, for which he is sent away to America, Oct. 29. An attempted counter-revolution at Lisbon, Nov. 8. Louis Philippe's life again attempted, Dec. 27.

1837 Anti-Church-rate meeting at the Crown and Anchor, Feb. 2. Great commercial panic in the United States, March, April, &c. Accession of Queen Victoria, June 20. The Duke of Cumberland, now king of Hanover, enters his dominions, June 27. The Carlists approach Madrid, and occupy the palace of La Granja, Aug. 11. The new king of Hanover, having already abrogated the constitution granted by William IV., suppresses the fundamental law of the state, Nov. 1. Riots at Montreal in Canada, Nov. 6. Revolution at Bahia, Nov. 7. The insurgents in Canada are defeated at St. Eustace, and dispersed, Dec. 14.

1838 The Canadian insurgents attack Toronto, Jan. 5. The Royal Exchange at London burnt, Jan. 10. Riots at Lisbon, Feb. 13. Bahia taken by the Brazilian troops, Mar. 16. The lunatic Thom, calling himself Sir W. Courtney, having collected a great rabble, and committed a murder, is attacked by the military and killed; other lives being lost, May 31. Hostilities between France and Mexico begin, July. The Druses submit to Ibrahim Pacha, July 16. Revolution at Lima, July 29. Slavery abolished in the East Indies, Aug. 1. The London and Birmingham railway opened throughout, Sept. 16. Hostilities pending between France and Switzerland, respecting Louis Napoleon, Sept. and Oct. Hostilities between France and some of the S. American republics, Oct. Rebellion in Canada, Oct. and Nov.; suppressed, Nov. 17.

1839 Decision of the conference of London, respecting the 950

A. D.

Dutch and Belgian question, announced, Jan. 23. Convention between the secretary of the United States and the English ambassador, respecting the boundary line of Maine and New Brunswick, Feb. 27. War in Peru ended, Mar. 4. War between France and Mexico ended, Mar. 9. Capt. Elliot arrested by the Chinese government, and the contraband opium seized, April 15. Riots in Paris, May 11. Ibrahim Pacha defeats the Turks near Nesby, June 25. Riots at Birmingham, arising from the prevention of a Chartist meeting, July 15. Shah Soojah restored to the sovereignty of Cabul, by the British, Aug. 7. Zurich attacked by the peasantry, because of some religious grievances, Sept. 6. The Chartists attack Newport, to deliver Vincent, imprisoned there, and are defeated, and their leaders taken, Nov. 4. Banks in United States suspend cash payments, Nov. The trade between England and China stopped by Commissioner Lin, Nov. 24. The Slave-trade prohibited by a Papal bull, Dec. 3.

1840 Penny postage comes into operation, Jan. 10. Her Majesty married to Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, Feb. 10. The Carlist cause in Spain given up as hopeless, July. Prince Louis Napoleon lands at Boulogne and makes another foolish attempt to excite an insurrection; he is arrested, Aug. 6. Revolution at Madrid, Sept. 1. The fortifications of Paris decreed, Sept. 20. New Zealand claimed as British territory, Sept. 26. Fire in Plymouth dockyard, Sept. 27. Fire in Sheerness dockyard, Oct. 9. Attempt to assassinate the king of the French, Oct. 15. Bombardment of Acre by the allied fleet, Nov. 6. Ibrahim Pacha agrees to evacuate Syria, Nov. 27. The remains of Napoleon Buonaparte deposited in the Hôtel des Invalides, Paris; having been removed from St. Helena, by the consent of Great Britain, Dec. 15.

1841 Insurrection in Switzerland, Jan. 10. The two Canadas united by proclamation, Feb. 10. Meetings throughout the country against the Corn Laws, Jan., Feb., Mar., &c. War in China, May 21. The Great Western railway opened throughout, June 30. Great destitution in the manufacturing districts, Aug. and Sept. Macead acquitted by the American law-court, Oct. 4. Queen Christina attempts an insurrection against her daughter, the queen of Spain, to recover the regency, Oct. Fire at the Tower of London, Oct. 30. General rising against the English in Cabul, Nov. 2.

1842 Massacre of the British troops in the Khoord-Cabul pass, by the Afghans, Jan. 6 to 8. Jellalahad relieved by General Pollock, April 5. An imperial edict for bettering the condition of the serfs in Russia, April 14. Disturbances and strikes in the manufacturing districts, April, May, June. The British take Shanghai in China, June 19. The Boers at Port Natal, S. Africa, defeated, June 26. Disturbances in the coal and iron districts, July. The young Duke of Orleans accidentally killed, July 13. Disorders and riots, attended with loss of life, in the midland manufacturing districts, Aug. The treaty with the United States respecting the boundary question announced in England, Sept. 15. General Pollock recaptures Cabul, Sept. 16. Failures in the corn trade, Sept. Cabul evacuated, Oct. 12. Provincial deputies at Berlin decide that Prussia does not require a constitution, Oct. 18. The French take possession of the Marquesas, in the Pacific Ocean, Dec. 20.

1843 Repeal agitation in Ireland approaches its height, Jan. The Amers of Scinde defeated; Hyderabad occupied, and Scinde annexed to the British empire, Feb. 17 and 20. "Rebecca and her daughters" attack and destroy the turnpike gates in Wales, Feb. The occupation of the Oregon territory resolved by the senate of the United States, Feb. 23. The Anti-Corn-law league opens its campaign in London, Mar. 15. The Thames tunnel opened for foot passengers, Mar. 25. Secession of the ministers of the Kirk of Scotland opposed to government intrusion, and formation of the Free Kirk, May 18. Insurrections in various parts of Spain, May. Victory of the insurgents in Spain, July 23. The monster Repeal meeting at the hill of Tara, Aug. 22. Queen Victoria visits

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF REMARKABLE EVENTS.

A. D.

- the king of the French at Chateau d'Eg, Sept. 2. Insurrections in Italy, Aug. and Sept. Revolution at Athens, Sept. 14. French Protectorate at Tahiti, Sept. The "Rebecca" riots in Wales suppressed, and the ring-leaders tried, Oct. O'Connell and the leading repealers tried for conspiracy, Nov. 2. Territory of Gwalior in India subjugated by the British, Dec. 23.
- 1844 O'Connell and the repealers convicted, Feb. 12. French authorities seize on Mr. Pritchard, the ex-consul for Great Britain, Mar. 5. New Greek constitution, Mar. 16. Strikes in the collieries, April to Aug. The Anti-State Church conference at London, April 30. Street riots with loss of life at Philadelphia, May 3 to 6. Hostilities between France and Morocco, May 30. Riots at Philadelphia again, July 5. New Bank Charter Act, July 19. War in New Zealand begins, July 25. Insurrectionary fires in Suffolk, July. Report of the Secret Committee respecting the opening of letters at the post office, Aug. 5. Tangier bombarded by the French, Aug. 6. Battle of Isly, Aug. 14. Bombardment of Mogador, Aug. 15. Sentence on O'Connell and the repealers reversed by the House of Lords, Oct. 4. Peace between France and Morocco, Oct. 6. Attempt made to revolutionize Lucerne, because of its encouraging the Jesuits, Dec. 8.
- 1845 The New Catholic Church movement in Germany, by Ronge, Jan. Texas annexed to the United States, Mar. 1. War in New Zealand, March. Lucerne attacked by the opponents of the Jesuits, April 1. Hungerford suspension-bridge opened, May 1. Atrocious suffocation of an Arab tribe in a cave, by the French army in Algiers, June 20. War in Algeria against Abd-el-Kader continued, June to the end of the year. Insurrection attempted in the Papal States, Sept. 23. Railway mania, through Oct. and Nov., reaches its height, Nov. 30. War on the Parana, France and England united against Rosas, Nov. War between the Sikhs and the British begins, Dec. 18. * Revolt of Yucatan, Dec. 31.
- 1846 Meeting of agricultural labourers at Gt. Heath, Wiltshire, by moonlight, to petition parliament against the Corn Laws, Jan. 5. War in New Zealand ended, Jan. 19. Failure of the potato crop in Ireland announced, Jan. 20. Battle of Aliwal, on the Sutlej, Jan. 28. Battle of Soobraon, on the Sutlej, Feb. 10. The British occupy the citadel of Lahore, Feb. 20. Revolution attempted in Poland, Feb. 22. Fortifications of Paris completed, March 21. Caffre war begins, April 4. Attempt to assassinate Louis Philippe repeated, April 16. Insurrections in Portugal and Spain, April. War in Algeria against Abd-el-Kader continued, April. War of the United States against Mexico, May. Louis Napoleon escapes from the castle of Ham, May 26. The Oregon question settled, June 12. Corn Laws repealed, June 26. Pope Pius IX. begins his reforms, July 16. Louis Philippe's life attempted for the seventh time, July 29. Santa Anna resumes the chief power in Mexico, Aug. 16. Monteney, in Mexico, taken by General Taylor, Sept. 24. Revolution at Geneva, Oct. 7. The Spanish marriages, Oct. 10. Insurrections in Portugal, Oct. Famine in Ireland, Nov., Dec. Cracow annexed to Austria, and Poland made a Russian province, Nov. 16. Fever follows the famine in Ireland, Dec. Labuan ceded to

A. D.

- Great Britain, Dec. 18. Insurgents in Portugal defeated at Torres Vedras, Dec. 22.
- 1847 Increase of famine and pestilence in Ireland, Jan. and Feb. Constitution granted to Prussia, Feb. 3. Scarcity in England, and all the W. of Europe, Feb. Vera Cruz surrenders to the Americans, March 29. New House of Lords first occupied, April 15. Disclosures of infamous corruption on the part of some government functionaries in France, May 3. Great Britain, France, Spain, and Portugal concur to suppress the insurrection in Portugal, May 21. The pope authorizes a National Guard in the Roman States, July 8. Austria occupies the citadel of Ferrara, July 17. Immense failures in the corn trade, Aug. Disturbances in the small duchies of Italy, Sept. Enemies at Milan, Sept. 8. Mexico taken by the Americans, Sept. 16. A municipal council decreed for Rome by the pope, Oct. 2. Insurrection in Naples, Oct. Panic in the money market, Oct. Murderous outrages in Ireland, Oct. Fribourg surrenders to the federal army, Nov. 13. Reform banquet at Compiegne, Nov. 21. Lucerne submits to the federal army, Nov. 24. Civil war in Switzerland terminated, Dec. 1. Insurrection in Sicily, Dec. 2. The Jesuits expelled from Lucerne, Dec. 2. Reform banquet at St. Denis, Dec. 14. Jesuits expelled from Uri, Dec. 17. Palermo seized by the insurgents, Dec. 20. Reform banquet at Rouen, Dec. 26. Insurrection at Naples, Dec. 14.
- 1848 Caffre war ended, Jan. 1. Massacre at Milan, Jan. 3. Riots in Tuscany, Jan. 9. Riots at Pavia, Jan. 20. Revolution at Caracas, S. America, Jan. 24. Civil war in Sicily, Jan. Military cruelties in Lombardy, Jan. Reform agitation at Paris, Feb. 12. The pope decrees a constitution, Feb. 15. French Revolution; street combats, Feb. 22. Flight of Louis Philippe, Feb. 24. Proclamation of the Republic, Feb. 25. Disturbances in Austria and Hungary, March. Neuchâtel declares its independence, March 4. Revolution at Vienna; flight of Metternich, March 13. Agitation throughout Germany, March. Revolt in Milan, March 17. Revolution at Berlin, March 18. Revolutionary movement throughout Italy, March. Venice proclaimed a Republic, March 23. Milan evacuated by the Austrians, March 24. Insurrection at Madrid, March 26. Rising in the Tyrol, March 28. The diet at Frankfurt publishes a new federative constitution, March 30. Expulsion of the Jesuits from Rome, March 29. Hungary declared independent, April 1. War in Silesia, April. War in Lombardy, April. Risings in Poland, April. Attempted Communist insurrection at Paris, April 17. New constitution in Holland, April 20. Revolt in Moulton, April 20. Disturbances in St. Domingo, April 23. Battle of Flensburg, April 25. Insurrection in Greece, April 30. Slavery abolished in the French colonies, May 3. National Assembly of France opened, May 4. Invasion of the National Assembly by the Communists, May 15. Massacre at Naples by the Lazzaroni, at the king's command, May 17. German Parliament opened at Frankfurt, May 18. Battle of Goito; Peschiera taken by Charles Albert of Sardinia, May 30. Lombardy annexed to Piedmont, June 4. Insurrection at Prague, June 12. Battle of Rivoli, June 18. Prague bombarded, June 18. Dreadful street combats in Paris; the Red Republicans defeated by General Cavaignac, June 21 to 26.

THE END.

JOHN CHILDS AND SON, BUNGAY.

APPENDIX.

OUTLINE OF ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

INTRODUCTION.

THE science of language has, during the last twenty-five years, made most remarkable progress; having been studied by men of extensive learning, indefatigable research, and rare powers of philosophical investigation. One means which has been employed is entirely new,—the comparison of the languages of different races and peoples; and from it have been derived some of the most wonderful conclusions respecting the original oneness of the human race, which were ever presented to the consideration of the thoughtful. These conclusions were little expected, perhaps little intended, by the philosophical scholars to whom we owe them. But, as if overruled by that Providence, which even “from seeming evil still produces good,” their studies have given to us, as an established fact of science, what till this time was nothing more, in the opinions of most men, than a dogma of theology,—that mankind must needs have sprung from one common origin. This fact rests in part on the discoveries of identical forms in languages apparently most diverse; and in part, on the discovery that the laws of all languages are the same.

It is the purpose of this Outline to exhibit these laws in explanation of our English tongue. As far as possible, technical terms will be dispensed with; but this cannot be done in all cases, yet such definitions will be given as will make their meaning clear to all who are willing to pay sufficient attention. It must not be thought that, because the arrangement, &c. of this Outline differs considerably from that usually adopted in English Grammars, it cannot be understood so well as they, nor turned to such useful purposes. It will be found universally, that where there is a clear method employed in communicating any knowledge, it can be more readily, and far more certainly, received. Nothing can be more wearisome for a learner, nothing is less easily retained, than a set of arbitrarily arranged rules, such as are to be found in the common English Grammars. As much attention as is given by school-boys in committing those rules to memory as a task, will enable any one to obtain a scientific knowledge of the language. And one who has obtained this scientific knowledge has, superadded to his acquaintance with his own tongue, a serviceable outline of the structure of all languages, and can, with infinitely less trouble, acquire any he may desire to learn.

A few examples of identity of forms in different languages, will show at a glance the nature of the study of “Comparative Grammar,” (as it has been named,) and also the character of the proof of the common origin of the family of man afforded by it. Take as one example, the English word know: it is found in the Latin in the verb, no-sco, or gno-sco; having probably been borrowed from the Greek, which has gi-gno-sco: in the Sanscrit, which is the old, parent language of Hindustan, it is gnā. In the same way, our word stand is found in the Latin, sta-re; in the Greek, hi-sta-nai; and in the old languages of Hindustan and Persia, sthe. Our word, used now only by lawyers in the well-known phrase, to wit, is found in the old Gothic, the Latin, Greek, old Persian, and Sanscrit, as vid, with various endings attached: the Greek has, however, the v most usually changed into an o, or even dropped altogether, so that vid becomes eid, or id; and it is in this same form that this word is found in the Hebrew language, ida. Old Verstegan, in his amusing book, the “Restitution of decayed Intelligence,” had noticed that our word daughter was represented in Persian by dochter, which is plainly the same word: and thus our word brother is, in Sanscrit, bhratri; our word mother, in Latin mater, in Greek meter, and in Sanscrit matrī. Our word better (the comparative of good) seems to have no kindred amongst us; it is in Persian behter, the comparative of beh, good. The third person plural of verbs in Latin, Greek, Sanscrit, and several other languages, has for its ending nt, as in ama-nt, Latin, they love, and ama-nt-ur, they are loved; and it was known that this ending signified they, but it was not known for some time in what language a pronoun like it could be found; the study of the Welsh language supplied it, the person ending there being the same, and the pronoun itself hwynt, or ynt. These examples must suffice for the present purpose, which is merely to show the kind of resemblance between the languages of far distant people, which recent studies have brought to light; and that the argument founded on it respecting the intimate relation of the different races of man, is not idle nor inconclusive. Every year produces a rich harvest of well-established results from the studies pursued in this branch of knowledge; and whilst they confirm the conclusions of former inquirers, they also apply the principles, which have been already found to explain so well the facts of the languages and dialects, which have long been the favourite studies of the learned, to barbarous and (before) unknown tongues, with exactly the same consequences.

It is worthy of notice, in passing, that the actual principles of the new study of language, are no other than those of the

Novum Organon of our own immortal Bacon; and that the students who have most successfully laboured in this field are, of all people, those most nearly related to our Anglo-Saxon race—the Germans.

The foundation on which both the scholars who have investigated Comparative Grammar, and the philosophers who have constructed the science of language, have proceeded, has been the meaning of words; and this has produced the difference between the old grammatical systems and the new. In the old systems, meaning was always subordinated to form, and the result was, that language was treated as if Hobbes's famous aphorism of words being "money to wise men but counters to fools," was taken literally. The French Academy carried this system out to the fullest extent. They coined new words and put them in circulation; they recalled the old trite words, and suppressed them, or stamped them over again and re-issued them; nothing was to be deemed a legal tender in conversation, oratory, or writing, that did not bear their mint-mark. It is not at all unlikely that the well-known character of the French language is in part owing to this unphilosophical treatment. It is a wonder that the process did not destroy it. That it did not, must be ascribed to the millions in France who spoke what they were minded to say without heeding or even knowing the laws of the Academy. For language is an organism; its various parts are connected with and dependent on one another; all are adjusted with a view to one end; and it has (as we may say) a life of its own, which each part, the connexion of all the parts, and the relation of each and of all to the end, manifest. It is the living garment of thought, which weaves it for itself. Grammatical tailoring, like carving or peeling the bark of a tree, can only damage the inward life of the organism. Language may safely be left to itself. The most copious, the most precise, the most flexible and rhythmical of all the tongues of the earth—the Greek—attained its utmost development without the aid of either academy or grammarian. It was already declining through barbarian intermixtures before such helps were invented, and they could not stay its fall. The modern system undertakes nothing more than the investigation of the laws of language, and their methodical exhibition. And it pursues these objects (as was just now said) in the spirit of the Inductive Philosophy of Lord Bacon. Compared with the old system, it is like the Newtonian solar system compared with that of Ptolemy. This seems to be the simpler of the two, but it does not explain any save the simplest phenomena; and to be adapted to those of a more complicated nature, it must receive addition after addition to its machinery, till some Alphonso of Castile should say that he could have given valuable hints had he been consulted in time. The other, in appearance most complex, is nothing but the development of one single principle, and not only explains all phenomena observed, but even suggests the discovery of others yet unknown.

These remarks are offered by way of Introduction to this Outline, both to explain the novelty of its form as an English Grammar to most of its readers, and also to carry out the general intention (as expressed in the Preface to this book) of making every part, as far as is possible, instructive and serviceable in the very highest degree, and in the best manner.

And now nothing remains but for the Editor to express his obligations to the German Grammar, and the "Organism of Language," of Dr. Karl Ferdinand Becker, whose highly philosophical system has been adopted here, and the application of which to the English language has been so materially aided by his well-chosen illustrations from our native tongue.

OUTLINE.

1. Language, or speech, is the natural expression of man's thoughts by means of words.

2. A sentence is the complete expression of a thought; which may be either an assertion, as,—The river is deep, the horse runs; or a wish, as,—May you be happy! Fear God!

3. The materials of thought are notions of persons, things, and actions; the form of it, the relations those notions bear to one another, and to the thinker. Hence sentences are made up of words expressive of notions, and words, or word-endings, expressive of relations. In the sentences given above, river, deep, horse, run, happy, fear, God, express notions; and the, is, may, you, be, with the word-ending run-s, express relations.

4. The words which express notions are, substantives, which express notions of existence; verbs, which express notions of activity when an assertion is intended; and adjectives, which express notions of activity when no assertion is intended.

5. The words which express relations are, pronouns of all kinds; the verb to be (which is also used to express the abstract notion of existence); auxiliary verbs of mood and tense; numerals of all kinds; prepositions; conjunctions; and adverbs. Interjections express neither notions nor relations, and are not related to thought, but to feeling; being the utterance of joy, sorrow, pain, wonder, &c.

6. The word-endings which express relations are, those of case and number in substantives; those of mood, tense, number, and person in verbs; and those of comparison in adjectives and adverbs.

7. Verbs which express a complete notion, are called intransitive, as,—he runs, it rains, I stand, you sleep; though other notions may be associated with those expressed by such verbs, as,—he runs to the gate, you sleep soundly. Those which require an object to complete their notion are called transitive, as,—we bless you, they blamed me.

8. Substantives are names of persons, as,—father, man; or of things, as,—horse, sword. Some names of things are abstract, as,—friendship, justice. Substantives are also generic, as,—iron, money; or specific, as,—house, tree; or individual, as,—John, Thames, Oxford. These are also called names of materials, common names, and proper names. Other substantives are collective, as,—family, society, parliament, nation.

9. When adjectives are used in connexion with substantives they are called attributive, as,—a lofty tower, a fine house; when they are used with the verb to be, as predicates in sentences, instead of verbs, they are called predicative, as,—he is good, the house is fine. Sometimes they are used as substantives, as,—the good, the wise.

10. Relations are either those of notions one to another; or of notions to the person who speaks; or of thoughts to thoughts.

11. The relations of notions one to another are, those of the predicate to its subject, in the simple sentence; of the attribute to its substantive; and of the object to its predicate. Examples of these are;—1. The man runs. He is falling. 2. A green field. Deep rivers. 3. He struck me. They rode on horses. Honour the brave!

12. The relations of notions to the person who speaks are, in the case of notions of activity, those of mood, by which the actual existence, or the possibility, or the necessity, of the notion are expressed; or those of time, by which are expressed whether the notion is conceived as present, past, or future; and of degree, which express whether it is conceived indefinitely, or as being in course of accomplishment, or as completed and perfect; under which head those relations of intensity, expressed by adverbs, are also classed. Examples of these relations are the following:—1. He runs. He is not coming. It may happen. He should be advised. It must be done. Follow me.—2. He is here. It was raining. It will fall.—3. I write. I am writing. I have written. A swift horse. A swift runner. The swift flight.

13. The relations of notions to the person who speaks are, in the case of notions of existence, those of personality, which express whether he speaks in his own name, or addresses another, or of a third party; those of locality; and those of number and quantity. Examples of these are:—1. I speak. You write. He reads.—2. It is here. He went thither. He is beyond the sea. We were in the house.—3. There are ten volumes. He has some bread.

14. The relations of thoughts to thoughts, are expressed by accessory sentences; and are those of co-ordination, as,—I came, I saw, I conquered; I read and write; and those of subordination, where a cause or reason is given, as,—It rains, for the ground is wet; I went, because he ordered me; or where a contrast or opposition is expressed, as,—Were he never so powerful, he shall be punished.

15. A sentence, or a thought expressed in words, consists of two parts, essentially; which are called the subject, or thing spoken of, and the predicate, or what is predicated or asserted respecting it; as,—the plant grows, snow is white; in which plant and snow are the subjects, and grows and white the predicates, the is in the latter sentence being called the copula, or tie, which connects the predicate, white, with the subject, snow. The relation of the predicate to the subject is named the predicative relation; and the combination of notions resulting from it, the predicative combination.

16. When the notion of an activity is associated with the notion of an existence, without any assertion on the part of the speaker, the relation of the two notions is called attributive; and the resulting combination, the attributive combination; as,—green fields, Queen Victoria, a father's love; in which green, queen, and father's, are attributive words, and as such related to the substantives, fields, Victoria, and love.

17. When any notions stand in the relations of cause or effect, place, time, or manner, to a predicate, they are said to be in the objective relation; and the combination that results from this relation is called the objective combination, as,—I am reading a book, he went to London, it happened yesterday, they consented gladly; in which sentences, a book, to London, yesterday, gladly, are objects to the predicates reading, went, happened, consented. Attributives are also capable of being used as if they were predicates, and are followed by an object; as,—man frail by nature, flowers beautifully fragrant; in which by nature, and beautifully, are related as objects to frail and fragrant.

18. Sentences are called principal or accessory, according to their prominence in the mind of the speaker. Principal sentences express an assertion, a question, a wish, or a command; as,—it is good, does it rain? pardon my faults, begone! thou flatterer. Accessory sentences are called substantive, adjective, or adverbial sentences, according to the relation in which they stand to the principal sentence; as,—he does not know that he is deceived, he who fights and runs away will live to fight another day, I found him where I left him.

19. From all that has preceded, it will be perceived that grammar teaches the value and meaning of words expressing notions, and of words and signs which express relations; and the proper use of them, according to their respective meanings.

It also follows that grammar is divided into two parts;—that which treats of words by themselves, their classification, formation, and the changes in their forms by derivation and inflexion, which is called Etymology;—and that which treats of the combinations of words in sentences, which is called Syntax.

THE FORMATION AND DERIVATION OF WORDS.

20. The articulate sounds which make up speech, are represented, with more or less accuracy, by the letters of the alphabet. These are, in English, twenty-six; which are commonly arranged thus:

A a	H h	O o	V v
B b	I i	P p	W w
C c	J j	Q q	X x
D d	K k	R r	Y y
E e	L l	S s	Z z
F f	M m	T t
G g	N n	U u

Our alphabet is, however, both defective and redundant; having (for example) two characters for one sound, as,—s-ingle, c-ircle; g-iant, j-oyous; c-alendar, k-alendar; and none for the sounds represented by th, sh, ch, &c. The scale of vowel sounds differs also from that of all other anciently written languages, our a having their e sound, our e their i sound, &c.

21. The letters are divided into vowels and consonants; the former being the representatives of the sounds which are produced by the uninterrupted transmission of the breath through the larynx and mouth; and the latter by the interruption of the breath by the voluntary action of the throat, the tongue and palate, the lips, and the teeth.

22. The vowels, arranged according to their natural order, which exhibits also the alteration of the form of the mouth, produced by voluntary muscular action, during the transmission of the breath, are,—

i e a o u

W and y, used as vowels, are related, y to i, and w to u; next to which they might respectively be placed.

23. The consonants are divided into three classes, mutes, sibilants, and liquids. The mutes may be arranged thus:—

	non-aspirated.		aspirated.
	sudden.	gradual.	sudden.	gradual.
guttural	k, c, q(u)	g	ch	gh
dental	t	d	th	dh
labial	p	b	ph, f	bh, v

In this table ch has the sound it expresses in the Scotch word loch; th, the sound it has in thistle; dh, the sound of th in this. The letter h represents a very faint ch sound; ng represents a naso-guttural sound: w and y ought, perhaps, always to be regarded as vowels; at least their sounds, when they are commonly called before consonants, do not differ perceptibly from the sounds of oo and i, before vowels: x simply represents the combination of a guttural with a sibilant.

24. The sibilants may be arranged in this way,—

	sudden.	gradual.
dental simply	s	z
dental and palatal	sh	zh
dental and guttural	j (French)	j (English)

Zh represents the sound of the ch in church. The liquids regarded in the same way, will be arranged in the following order,—

r l n m

r being uttered by the throat and tongue, l by the tongue and palate, n by the tongue and teeth, and m by the lips; a nasal sound being faintly mingled with the last two.

25. Two or more vowels are sometimes united to express vowel sounds of an intermediate nature, as,—ae, ai, au, ee, ei, ie, oe, oi, oo, ou, eau, &c. The combinations of consonants are too numerous to be noticed here; neither can the anomalous use of some letters, as in laugh, cough, which are pronounced la-ff, co-ff, be more than hinted at.

26. About five-eighths of the words in the English language are of pure Teutonic origin, being descended to it from the Anglo-Saxon. The words introduced from other languages are for the most part the technical terms of science, words introduced by the influence of the Norman conquerors and settlers from the continent in later periods of English history, and terms invented by such writers as Dr. Johnson, who were not satisfied with the sinewy strength of their mother tongue. The following sections on the derivation of words are intended to apply only to those of Saxon origin; as it would occupy too much space to trace the derivation of the others, and it is done already in this Dictionary, under each word, as far as was possible for useful purposes.

27. The original forms from which words are derived are called roots; and those forms which are derived immediately from these roots, and are in their turn the parents of other words, are called stems.

28. In the English, as in most Teutonic languages, the roots are found almost always in the old verbs, those, namely, which form their past tenses and participles by the modification of the vowel sound, as,—lead, led; sing, sang, sung; or which did so originally, though now they have assumed the modern forms, and make their past tenses and participles by the addition of d, or ed, to the root, as,—climb, clomb (now climbed); rive, rove (now rired), riren.

29. The first kind of derivatives, sometimes called stems, are formed by the modification of the vowel sound of the root, or by a slight alteration in the consonants; the second kind are formed by the addition of certain endings to the roots or stems whence they are derived, most of which are traceable in English or the allied languages as independent words. For the exhibition of the process of derivation, a few examples are added.

Roots.	First Derivatives.	Second Derivatives.
Be-reave	raven	ravenous
Bind	f band, bond, l bound	bandage, bondage, bundle
Bite	bit	biter
Child		childish
De-file	filth, foul	filthy, fulsome
Duck	duck ( subst. )	duckling
Fall	fell, foal
Find		foundling
Forth		further, furtherance
Gird	girdle, girder
Gold	golden, gild	gilt, gilding
Guile	guilt	guilty, guiltiness
Heal (old word, meaning to cover, hide, conceal)	hell, hold (of a ship), hole	hellish hollow

Hard	hardy	hardihood
Hate		hated
King		kingdom
Lead	lode (-star)	leader
Lead	loan
Man		mannikin
Melt	smelt
Rise	raise, rouse
See	sight	sightly
Sing	song	songster, songstress
Sit	set, ( verb. ) seat	settle, settler
Strong	strength	strengthen
Trow	truth	truthfulness
Wake	watch	wakeful, waken
Win		winsome
Wring	wrench, wrong
Writhe	wreath, wry

30. Another method of forming words, viz. by composition, may be mentioned. These compound words are very numerous in English, though not so numerous as in some other languages, the German for example, which have not been exposed to such powerful influences from without as our own tongue has, but have been left to develop their own capabilities and resources. We are obliged to resort to Latin and Greek for many compound words, which the German expresses by compounding words of its own. Our compounds consist of words of all classes; as,—forgive, couchsafe, mistake, undersell, overcome, untie, sunshine, thunderstorm, hothouse, midnight, daybreak, handicraftsman, fairhaired, seasick, everlasting, into, nevertheless, therefore, (compounded of there and for.) elsewhere, moreover, however, &c. &c.

31. New words are also made by the use of prefixes; as,—arise, befriend, ashore, because, never, to-day, &c. Anciently, these prefixes were more numerous, but they have gradually fallen out of general use; yelept is an example of one of them, which is still occasionally used in comic writing. Prepositions, adverbs, the negative un-, &c. are used as prefixes in compound words.

VERBS.

32. Verbs have been defined to be words which express notions of activity, when an assertion respecting the activity is intended by the speaker.

33. They have also been divided into transitive and intransitive, according as they did, or did not, express these notions completely, without the addition of an object.

34. When the agent of the verb is the subject, the form of the verb is called active; as,—I love, he reads the book, the king opened parliament. When the immediate object of the verb is the subject, the form is called passive; as,—I am loved, the book is read, parliament was opened by the king. Verbs, the agent of which is also the immediate object, are said to be reflexive; as,—he loves himself, they deceive themselves, she appointed herself this task; but they do not differ in form from active and passive verbs.

35. Verbs whose subjects are expressed quite indeterminate by the pronoun it, are called impersonal; as,—it rains, it thundered, it is freezing, it was cold. It seems, methinks, methought; are verbs of this class.

36. Beside these classes of verbs, there are others which express, not notions of action, but relations of action; these are the verb to be, and those called auxiliary verbs, which are divided into verbs of mood, and verbs of tense, according as they express the relations of mood, or of time.

37. The relations of the predicate to the subject, and to the speaker, are expressed by the verb to be, whenever the predicate is not a verb representing a notion; as,—the fields are green, the corn is ripe, the dog is barking, the boys are playing, thou art the man, Socrates was a true philosopher, we have been there. All the moods, tenses, &c. of the passive form of verbs are made by the verb to be.

38. The auxiliary verbs of mood are, can, dare, let, may, must, ought, shall, will; as,—we can go, they could stay, I dare say, thou durst not tell, let me read it, you may speak, he might know, the darkest day must end, men ought always to pray, you shall obey, none should despair, I will have it so, few would choose that lot.

39. The auxiliary verbs of tense are, be, be about, be going, begin, do, have, shall, will; as,—you are reading, I was writing, they are about to send, he was going to tell you, men begin to believe, I do entreat you, we did invite them, they have departed, no one had seen it before, we shall see, truth will prevail, he would often testify his regard for me.

40. The conjugation of verbs expresses the different relations of the notion expressed by the verb to the speaker. The forms of conjugation are, moods for the relation of reality; tenses for the relation of time; and persons, in the singular and plural numbers, for the relation of the predicate to the subject, and for the relation of the latter to the speaker.

41. There are three moods:—the indicative, for real existence asserted by the speaker; as,—he fears, he feared, he will fear:—the conjunctive, (in accessory sentences,) for possible existence, whether regarded as probable or not; as,—this shall not happen, if I be master: though he slew me, I would trust in him:—and the imperative, for necessity enforced by the will of the speaker; as,—fear the Lord, and serve him in truth. Other relations of mood are expressed by the help of various auxiliaries; such as those of possibility, by be able, dare, may, and can; as,—he is able to walk, I dare say that, it may rain, we might enter, he can read, they could write:—those of obligation, by have, make, be, must, ought, and shall; as,—it has to be done, they will make him see, it is to be, we must attend, I ought to go, thou shalt not steal, you should obey:—those of determination of will, by will; as,—he will not obey, we would go:—those of desire, by like, might, could, and would; as,—like to have their own way, might I but see it! could we but enter, would it were so:—those of permission, by may and let; as,—you may depart, they might read it, let him enter:—those of necessity, by used; as,—we need not remind you of your duty:—those of emphatic assertion, by do; as,—it does pain me, you did say it, &c. Some of these are often inserted in grammars as distinct moods, and are called potential, optative, jussive, &c., but they may be all classed with the indicative.

42. There are three tenses, the present, the past, and the future; and there are three degrees of completeness in reference to the time asserted of an action, the indefinite, the imperfect, and the perfect:—as, I write (indef. pres.), I am writing (imperf. pres.), I have written (perf. pres.), I wrote (indef. past), I was writing (imperf. past), I had written (perf. past), I shall write (indef. fut.), I shall be writing (imperf. fut.), I shall have written (perf. fut.). In the conjunctive mood, however, the forms express rather the amount of probability than the time of the action; and when expressing time, do so only relatively, the actual time being determined by the principal sentence; as,—if he say so, it is well: were it true, I should have been informed: were he a giant, I would not fear him: though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: he will do it, if he have time: remember, that thou keep holy the sabbath day: though thou detain me, I will not eat. Other relations of time are expressed by the help of various auxiliaries; as, that of progressive action, by have been; as,—we have been walking, they had been riding:—that of continued and repeated action, by keep and would;

as,—I keep expecting him, they kept hoping; (but this is hardly sanctioned by good usage, although quite correct and conformable to the genius of our language;)—a' would manage you his piece thus, and a' would about and about, and away would a' go, and again would a' come:—that of futurity, by be about, and be going: as,—I am about to leave town, we are going to the sea-side: that of inceptive action, by be going, and begin: as,—we are going to read, they began to suspect deceit.

43. Questions and negative sentences are constructed without the help of any special auxiliaries; as,—is he praised? fearest thou God? love not the world, we are going to:—and by the help of the auxiliary verb do: as,—does he praise? did we fear? do not attend to him, we do not think of renouncing our honour.

44. The personal forms of conjugation have been almost entirely lost in English, and their place is supplied by the use of personal pronouns. These are now employed in all cases, whether the person-ending is preserved or lost; as,—I hope, thou hopest, he hopes, we hope, you hope, they hope.

45. The infinitive and the participles are in meaning and use substantives and adjectives which admit of an objective relation; as,—the standing corn, moving is more economical than reaping, to pity the unfortunate is a sign of a sympathizing spirit, I am to go. They admit of modifications to express the relation of time also; as,—to love, to have loved, to be about to love, loving, loved, having loved, going to love. The preposition to used before the infinitive has been handed down from the Anglo-Saxon gerundial forms; the genuine infinitive is preserved in the tenses formed by auxiliary verbs; as,—he should dance, we may sing; and it is used after such verbs as see, hear, &c.; as,—I hear him speak, we see him go, bid me discourse.

46. Tenses which are formed by the inflexion of the verb itself are called simple: those formed by the combination of an auxiliary verb with a participle are called compound. There are only two simple tenses in English, the present and past indefinite; as,—I love, I loved: the remainder are compound; as,—I have loved, I did love, I shall love.

47. In all the Teutonic languages, and in others of the great family of languages to which they belong,—the Indo-European,—there are two different modes of conjugation. The first, called the ancient conjugation, belonging almost entirely to radical verbs; the other, called the modern conjugation, belonging almost exclusively to derivative verbs. There is, however, a great tendency to reduce all verbs to one standard mode of conjugation; and as the derivative verbs are far more numerous than the radicals, many of the latter have become assimilated to the former in this respect; and many are yet in process of assimilation; as,—hang, hung or hanged, hung or hanged. There is also a remarkable anomaly observable in some English verbs, arising from the arbitrary proceedings to which English words have been subjected, in respect of spelling;—many verbs belong to the ancient conjugation in speech, which are conformed in writing to the modern conjugation;—as, step, stepped, pronounced stept; walk, walked, pronounced walkt.

48. The ancient conjugation comprises those verbs which in the old grammars are called irregular, and which by etymologists are denominated strong verbs, because of their power of expressing modifications of meaning by modifications of form, without such recourse to endings as characterizes modern verbs. They are divided into three sorts; those which form their past indefinite tense and participle by the modification of the radical vowel, with the addition of n or en to the participle in some cases;—as, spring, sprung, sprung; throw, threw, thrown:—those which in addition to the modification of the vowel have t appended; as,—buy, bought, bought:—and those which retain the same form in present, past, and participle; as,—put, put, put. Verbs which differ in less considerable particulars from each other are classified under these divisions, partly for the sake of avoiding unnecessary multiplication of classes, and partly because, in course of time, changes are effected which require for their solution an investigation of the history of the words, which would be out of place in such an Outline as this.

49. The modern conjugation comprises the great mass of English verbs, which form their past indefinite tense and participle by the addition of d or ed to the present indefinite; as,—love, loved; kill, killed.

50. Beside these are a few verbs which are wholly irregular, the past tense and participle being formed by parts of other verbs, or in a manner quite different from either ancient or modern conjugations.

51. The verbs belonging to the three divisions of the ancient conjugation may be classified so as to exhibit some of the most common laws of the changes of vowels expressive of modifications of the meaning of the root. But it must be remembered that the present tense is not by nature or necessity the root, and that in many instances in the following lists, it will be found that the vowel of that tense has been modified, rather than that of the past tense or participle. The verbs of the first two divisions are arranged by the vowel sound of the present indefinite tense; the natural scale of the vowel sounds being followed.

52. First Division of Ancient Verbs.

1st Class: y sound.

(a.)

Begin	began	began
Cling	clung	clung
Dig	dug, digged	dug, digged
Drink	drank	drunk, drunken
Fling	flung	flung
Ring	rang, rung	rung
Shrink	shrank, shrunk	shruok, shrunken
Sing	sang, sung	sung
Sink	sank, sunk	sunk, sunken
Sling	slang, slung	slung
Slink	slank, slunk	slunk
Spin	span, spun	spun
Spring	sprang, sprung	sprung
Stick	stuck	stuck
Sting	stung	stung
Stink	stank, stunk	stunk
String	strang, strung	strung
Swim	swam, swum	swum
Swing	swang, swung	swung
Wring	wrang, wringed	wrung

(b.)

Bid	bade, bid	bidden, bid
Give	gave	given
Sit	sat	sat, sitten
Spit	spat, spit	spat, spit, spitten

(c.)

Win	won, wan	won
Wit	wot

2nd Class: e (short) sound.

Get, beget, forget	gat, got	gotten, got
Help	help, helped	helpen, helped
Melt	molt, melted	molten, melted

Swell
Tread

swoll, swelled
trod, trode swollen, swelled trodden

(a.)

Beat	beat	beaten
Bleed	bled	bled
Breed	bred	bred
Eat	ate, eat	eaten
Feed	fed	fed
Lead	led	led
Meet	met	met
Read	read	read
Speed	sped	sped

(b.)

Cleave (adhere)	clave, cleaved	cleaved
Cleave (split)	clave, clove, cleft	cloven, cleft
Freeze	froze	frozen
Heave	hove, heaved	hoven, heaved
Speak	spake, spoke	spoken
Steal	stole	stolen
Weave	wove	woven

(c.)

Seethe	sod, seethed	sodden
--------	--------------	--------

(d.)

See	saw	seen
-----	-----	------

3rd Class: e (long) sound.

(a.)

Betide	betid	betid
Bite	bit	bitten, bit
Chide	chid, chode	chidden
Hide	hid	hidden, hid
Light	lit, lighted	lit, lighted
Slide	slid	slidden, slid

(b.)

Abide, bide	abode	abode
Climb	clomb, climbed	climbed
Drive	drove, drove	driven
Ride	rode, rid	ridden, rid
Rise, arise	rose	risen
Rive	rove, rived	riven
Shrive	shrove	shriven
Smite	smote	smitten
Stride	strode, strid	stridden
Strive	strove	striven
Thrive	throve, thrived	thriven
Write	wrote	written, writ, wrote
Writhe	writhen	written, writhed

(c.)

Shine	shone, shined	shone, shined
-------	---------------	---------------

(d.)

Bind	bound	bound, bounden
Fight	fought	fought, foughten
Find	found	found
Grind	ground	ground
Wind	wound, winded	wound

(e.)

Strike	struck	struck, stricken
--------	--------	------------------

(f.)

Fly	flew	flown
-----	------	-------

(g.)

Lie	lay	lain, lien
-----	-----	------------

5th Class: ai sound.

Freight	fraught, freighted	fraught, freighted
Slay	slew	slain

6th Class: a (short) sound.

(a.) Hang	hung, hanged	hung, hanged
-----------	--------------	--------------

(b.) Stand	stood	stood
------------	-------	-------

(c.) Wax	wox, waxed	waxen, waxed
----------	------------	--------------

7th Class: a (long) sound.

Awake, wake	awoke, awaked	awaked
Bake	baked	baken, baked
Bear (bring forth)	bore, bare	born
Bear (carry)	bore, bare	borne
Break	broke, brake	broke, broken
Forsake	forsook	forsaken
Grave	graved	graven, graved
Lade	laded	laden
Shake	shook, shaken	shaken, shaken
Shape	shaped	shapen, shaped
Shave	shaved	shaven, shaved
Shear	shore	shorn
Swear	swore, sware	sworn
Take	took	taken
Tear	tore, tare	torn
Wear	wore	worn

8th Class: au sound.

Draw	drew	drawn
Fall	fell	fallen
Saw	sawed	sawn, sawed

9th Class: o sound.

(a.) Blow	blew	blown
Crow	crew, crowed	crowed
Fold	folded	folden, folded
Go, forego		gone
Grow	grew	grown
Hold, behold	held	holden, held
Know	knew	known
Load	loaded	loaden, loaded
Mow	mowed	mown, mowed
Rot	rotted	rotten, rotted
Show	showed	shown, showed
Sow	sowed	sown, sowed
Strow, strew	strowed	strown, strowed
Throw	threw	thrown
Wash	washed	washen, washed

(b.) Clothe	clad, clothed	clad, clothed
-------------	---------------	---------------

10th Class: oo sound.

Choose	chose	chosen
Shoot	shot	shotten, shot

11th Class: u (short) sound

Come, become	came	come
Run	ran	run

12th Class: eu sound.

Hew	hewed	hewn hewed
-----	-------	------------

53. Second Division of Ancient Verbs.

1st Class: y sound.

Bring	brought	brought
Spill	spilt, spilled	spilt, spilled
Think	thought	thought
Will	would
(Wis)	wist

2nd Class: e (short) sound.

Dwell	dwelt, dwelled	dwelt, dwelled
Sell	sold	sold
Tell	told	told

3rd Class: e (long) sound.

Bereave, reave	bereft, bereaved	bereft, bereaved
Beseech	besought	besought
Creep	crept	crept
Deal	dealt	dealt
Dream	dreamt, dreamed	dreamt, dreamed
Feel	felt	felt
Flee	fled	fled
Hear	heard	heard
Keep	kept	kept
Kneel	knelt, kneeled	knelt, kneeled
Leap	leapt, leaped	leapt, leaped
Mean	meant	meant
Reach	raught, reached	raught, reached
Seek	sought	sought
Sleep	slept	slept
Sweep	swept	swept
Teach	taught	taught
Weep	wept	wept

4th Class: ei sound.

Buy	bought	bought
-----	--------	--------

5th Class: ai sound.

Lay	laid	laid
May	might
Pay	paid	paid
Say	said	said

6th Class: a (short) sound.

Can	could
Catch	caught, catched	caught, catched
Shall	should

7th Class: o sound.

Owe	ought, owed
-----	-------------	--

8th Class: oo sound.

Do	did	done
Lose	lost	lost
Shoe	shod	shod

9th Class: u (short) sound.

Work	wrought, worked	wrought, worked
------	-----------------	-----------------

54. Third Division of Ancient Verbs.

(a.) Bend	bent, bended	bent, bended
Build	built, builded	built, builded
Gild	gilt, gilded	gilt, gilded
Gird	girt, girded	girt, girded
Lend	lent	lent

Rend	rent	rent
Send	sent	sent
Shend	shent	shent
Spend	spent	spent
(Wend)	went
(b.)
Burst	burst	burst
Cast	cast	cast
Cost	cost	cost
Cut	cut	cut
Hit	hit	hit
Hurt	hurt	hurt
Knit	knit, knitted	knit, knitted
Let	let	let
Lift	lift, lifted	lift, lifted
Must	must
Ought	ought
Put	put	put
Quit	quit, quitted	quit, quitted
Quoth	quoth
Roast	roasted	roast, roasted
Rid	rid	rid
Set	set	set
Shed	shed	shed
Shred	shred	shred
Shut	shut	shut
Slit	slit, slitted	slit, slitted
Split	split, splitted	split, splitted
Spread	spread	spread
Sweat	sweat, sweated	sweat, sweated
Thrust	thrust	thrust
Wet	wet, wetted	wet, wetted

55. The following verbs are irregular:—

Are	was	been
Dare	durst	dared
Have	had	had
Make	made	made

It will be evident to all readers that had and made are contractions for haved and maked; and that am, was, and been are parts of three different verbs. It is very remarkable that in other languages a similar irregularity exists in the relational verb.

56. The following examples, with the annotations upon them, will be sufficient for the illustration of all the peculiarities in the conjugation of English verbs. The simple tenses of the auxiliary verbs are given in the succeeding section; and for the exhibition of the full conjugation an ancient verb—to lead—has been selected, as being one of the simplest specimens which could be found, and as serving, also, to show that the old title of Irregular was not fitting to this description of verb.

57. AUXILIARY VERBS.

1. To be.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Present Indefinite.		Past Indefinite.
Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1. I am	1. We are	1. I was	1. We were
2. Thou art	2. You are	2. Thou wast	2. You were
3. He is	3. They are	3. He was	3. They were

CONJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Probable. Sing. and Plu. (If) I, thou, he, we, you, they be.

Improbable. Sing. and Plu. { (If) I were, thou wert, he, we, you, they were.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

PARTICIPLES.

Pres. Indef. To be. Pres. Imperf. Being. Past Indef. Been.

Note. The old form of the indicative, pres. indef., of this verb, which occurs in the English Bible, and other works, is,—Sing. 1. I be, 2. Thou beest, 3. He be; Pla. 1. We be, 2. You be, 3. They be, or been.

2. Can.

INDICATIVE AND CONJUNCTIVE MOODS.

Pres. Indef. and Probable (If). Past Indef. and Improbable (If).

Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1. I can	1. We can	1. I could	1. We could
2. Thou canst	2. You can	2. Thou couldst	2. You could
3. He can	3. They can	3. He could	3. They could

3. To dare.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Present Indefinite.

Past Indefinite.

Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1. I dare	1. We dare	1. I durst	1. We durst
2. Thou darest	2. You dare	2. Thou durst	2. You durst
3. He dares	3. They dare	3. He durst	3. They durst

CONJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Probable. Sing. and Plu. (If) I, thou, he, we, you, they dare.

Improbable. Sing. and Plu. (If)—as Past Indefinite.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

PARTICIPLES.

Pres. Indef. To dare. Pres. Imperf. Daring. Past Indef. Dared.

4. To do.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Present Indefinite.

Past Indefinite.

Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1. I do	1. We do	1. I did	1. We did
2. Thou doest,	2. You do	2. Thou didst	2. You did or dost
3. He doth, or	3. They do	3. He did	3. They did does

CONJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Probable. Sing. and Plu. (If) I, thou, he, we, you, they do.

Improbable. Sing. and Plu. (If)—as Past Indefinite.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

PARTICIPLES.

Pres. Indef. To do. Pres. Imperf. Doing. Past Indef. Done.

5. To have.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Present Indefinite.

Past Indefinite.

Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1. I have	1. We have	1. I had	1. We had
2. Thou hast	2. You have	2. Thou hadst	2. You had
3. He hath,	3. They have	3. He had	3. They had or has

CONJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Probable. Sing. and Plu. (If) I, thou, he, we, you, they have.
Improbable. Sing. and Plu. (If)—as Past Indefinite.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

PARTICIPLES.

Pres. Indef. To have. Pres. Imperf. Having. Past Indef. Had.

6. May.

INDICATIVE AND CONJUNCTIVE MOODS.

Pres. Indef. and Probable (If). Past Indef. and Improbable (If).

Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1. I may	1. We may	1. I might	1. We might
2. Thou mayest	2. You may	2. Thou mightest	2. You might or mayst		or mightst
3. He may	3. They may	3. He might	3. They might

7. Shall.

INDICATIVE AND CONJUNCTIVE MOODS.

Pres. Indef. and Probable (If). Past Indef. and Improbable (If).

Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1. I shall	1. We shall	1. I should	1. We should
2. Thou shalt	2. You shall	2. Thou shouldst	2. You should or shouldst
3. He shall	3. They shall	3. He should	3. They should

TO LEAD.—ACTIVE FORMS.

MOODS. TENSES.

INDEFINITE.

IMPERFECT.

PERFECT.

INDICATIVE.	Present.	Sing. 1. I lead, 2. Thou ledest, 3. He leadeth, or leads.	Sing. 1. I am leading, 2. Thou art leading, 3. He is leading.	Sing. 1. I have led, 2. Thou hast led, 3. He hath led.
		Plur. 1. We lead, 2. You lead, 3. They lead.	Plur. 1. We are leading, 2. You are leading, 3. They are leading.	Plur. 1. We have led, 2. You have led, 3. They have led.
	Past.	Sing. 1. I led, 2. Thou leddest, 3. He led.	Sing. 1. I was leading, 2. Thou wast leading, 3. He was leading.	Sing. 1. I had led, 2. Thou hadst led, 3. He had led.
		Plur. 1. We led, 2. You led, 3. They led.	Plur. 1. We were leading, 2. You were leading, 3. They were leading.	Plur. 1. We had led, 2. You had led, 3. They had led.
	Future.	Sing. 1. I shall lead, 2. Thou shalt lead, 3. He shall lead.	Sing. 1. I shall be leading, 2. Thou shalt be leading, 3. He shall be leading.	Sing. 1. I shall have led, 2. Thou shalt have led, 3. He shall have led.
		Plur. 1. We shall lead, 2. You shall lead, 3. They shall lead.	Plur. 1. We shall be leading, 2. You shall be leading, 3. They shall be leading.	Plur. 1. We shall have led, 2. You shall have led, 3. They shall have led.
	Probable.	Sing. 1. (If) I lead, 2. (If) thou lead, 3. (If) he lead.	Sing. 1. (If) I be leading, 2. (If) thou be leading, 3. (If) he be leading.	Sing. 1. (If) I have led, 2. (If) thou have led, 3. (If) he have led.
		Plur. 1. (If) we lead, 2. (If) you lead, 3. (If) they lead.	Plur. 1. (If) we be leading, 2. (If) you be leading, 3. (If) they be leading.	Plur. 1. (If) we have led, 2. (If) you have led, 3. (If) they have led.
	Improbable.	Sing. 1. (If) I led, 2. (If) thou leddest, 3. (If) he led.	Sing. 1. (If) I were leading, 2. (If) thou wert leading, 3. (If) he were leading.	Sing. 1. (If) I had led, 2. (If) thou hadst led, 3. (If) he had led.
		Plur. 1. (If) we led, 2. (If) you led, 3. (If) they led.	Plur. 1. (If) we were leading, 2. (If) you were leading, 3. (If) they were leading.	Plur. 1. (If) we had led, 2. (If) you had led, 3. (If) they had led.
	PART. INFIN. IMPERATIVE.	Sing. 1. Let me lead, 2. Lead thou, 3. Let him lead.	Sing. 1. Let me be leading, 2. Be thou leading, 3. Let him be leading.	To have led.
		Plur. 1. Let us lead, 2. Lead ye, 3. Let them lead.	Plur. 1. Let us be leading, 2. Be ye leading, 3. Let them be leading.	Having led.

To lead.
To be about to lead.

Led.
About to lead.

Leading.
About to be leading.

8. Will.

INDICATIVE AND CONJUNCTIVE MOODS.

Pres. Indef. and Probable (If). Past Indef. and Improbable (If).

Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
1. I will	1. We will	1. I would	1. We would
2. Thou wilt	2. You will	2. Thou wouldst	2. You would or wouldst
3. He will	3. They will	3. He would	3. They would

Let and must have no inflexions. Ought has only that of the second person singular,—thou oughtest.

Note. When dare signifies to challenge, it is conjugated according to the modern forms. Will, also, meaning to will, has as its indicative, pres. indef. sing. 3. He wills. To be, To do, To have, are also used to express notions of action, but have no difference in conjugation.

58. The following example will illustrate the conjugation of English verbs of both ancient and modern kinds. It is arranged in a tabular form to enable those who may be desirous of comparing the structure of verbs in other languages, to do so with greater facility than would otherwise be possible; the Table furnishing an outline, or plan, of the verbs of all languages; and our English example, a specimen of the arrangement of a verb in such a Table.

TO LEAD.—PASSIVE FORMS.

MOODS. TENSES.		INDICATIVE.	CONJUNCTIVE.	PART. INFIN. IMPERATIVE.	IMPERFECT.	PART. PERFECT.
INDICATIVE.	Present.	Sing. 1. I am led, 2. Thou art led, 3. He is led.	Sing. 1. (If) I be led, 2. (If) thou be led, 3. (If) he be led.	Pres. To be led.	Sing. 1. I am being led, 2. Thou art being led, 3. He is being led.	Sing. 1. I have been led, 2. Thou hast been led, 3. He has been led.
		Plur. 1. We are led, 2. You are led, 3. They are led.
	Past.	Sing. 1. I was led, 2. Thou wast led, 3. He was led.	Plur. 1. (If) we be led, 2. (If) you be led, 3. (If) they be led.	Fut. To be about to be led.	Sing. 1. I was being led, 2. Thou wast being led, 3. He was being led.	Plur. 1. We have been led, 2. You have been led, 3. They have been led.
		Plur. 1. We were led, 2. You were led, 3. They were led.
	Future.	Sing. 1. I shall be led, 2. Thou shalt be led, 3. He shall be led.	Improbable. 1. (If) I were led, 2. (If) thou wert led, 3. (If) he were led.	Pres. To be led.	Plur. 1. We shall be led, 2. You shall be led, 3. They shall be led.	Sing. 1. I shall have been led, 2. Thou shalt have been led, 3. He shall have been led.
		Plur. 1. We shall be led, 2. You shall be led, 3. They shall be led.
CONJUNCTIVE.	Probable.	Sing. 1. (If) I be led, 2. (If) thou be led, 3. (If) he be led.	Plur. 1. (If) we be led, 2. (If) you be led, 3. (If) they be led.	Fut. To be about to be led.	Sing. 1. I am being led, 2. Thou art being led, 3. He is being led.	Plur. 1. We have been led, 2. You have been led, 3. They have been led.
		Plur. 1. (If) we be led, 2. (If) you be led, 3. (If) they be led.
	Improbable.	Sing. 1. (If) I were led, 2. (If) thou wert led, 3. (If) he were led.	Plur. 1. (If) we were led, 2. (If) you were led, 3. (If) they were led.	Pres. To be led.	Sing. 1. I was being led, 2. Thou wast being led, 3. He was being led.	Sing. 1. I had been led, 2. Thou hadst been led, 3. He had been led.
		Plur. 1. (If) we were led, 2. (If) you were led, 3. (If) they were led.
	Improbable.	Sing. 1. Let me be led, 2. Be thou led, 3. Let him be led.	Plur. 1. Let us be led, 2. Be ye led, 3. Let them be led.	Fut. To be about to be led.	Plur. 1. We were being led, 2. You were being led, 3. They were being led.	Plur. 1. We had been led, 2. You had been led, 3. They had been led.
		Plur. 1. Let us be led, 2. Be ye led, 3. Let them be led.
PART. INFIN. IMPERATIVE.	Pres. Fut.	To be led. To be about to be led.	Pres. Past. Fut.	Led. About to be led.	Being led.	To have been led. Having been led.

Notes. (1.) This Table might have been greatly enlarged by the insertion of the various moods formed by the auxiliaries can, may, &c.; by the insertion of the additional tenses formed by do, have been, keep, begin, &c.; and by the introduction of the numerous combinations of auxiliaries, under separate columns and headings. In many languages there are distinct words, formed by inflexion, for the expression of the meanings conveyed by these compounded terms of our tongue; this hint is therefore given to such as would compare the verb of other languages with that of ours, as exhibited in this Table.

(2.) Active, Indic. Pres. and Past Perf. Some few verbs form these tenses by to be, as well as, or instead of, by have; as,—I am come, they were come.

(3.) Respecting the Conjunctive Moods, see § 42, and observe that all the auxiliaries mentioned in § 41 may be employed as conjunctives also.

(4.) Active, Imperative. A Perfect form is colloquially used in the case of some verbs; as,—have done!

(5.) Passive, Imperfect Tenses. It is evident that the combinations of the verb to be required by analogy, are inadmissible in some of these tenses. There is also a form in common and authorized use, made by the combination of to be with the Pres. Imperf. Participle, Active, but not for all verbs, since it is in many cases an ambiguous expression; as,—the work is preparing, the book was printing, the houses are repairing, the church was building.

The origin of this anomaly may be traced in the full form of the expression; as,—the ark was a preparing (Engl. Bible).

(6.) It will be observed that the Past Indef. Participles of both Active and Passive forms are the same: this occurs in other languages also.

SUBSTANTIVES.

59. The gender of substantives is determined by the natural sex of the person or being they represent, being called masculine or feminine, as the existences they denote are male or female. Inanimate beings, abstractions, and existences that have no natural sex, are called neuter. But sex is attributed figuratively to many existences which do not naturally possess it; as,—the sun, he rises; a ship, she founders; virtue, she is not a shade:—it is also common to speak of beings which are minute, or whose sex is not a distinguishing attribute, as having none; as,—the bee, it is a most industrious creature; an infant, it is totally helpless.

60. Feminine substantives are sometimes formed from masculine substantives, by change of termination; or distinguished from them, by peculiar affixes;—in other instances there are distinct words for the sexes; as,—actor, actress; executor, executrix; landgrave, landgravine;—he-goat, she-goat; man-servant, maid-servant;—duck, drake; boy, girl.

61. The distinction of individuality in persons and things, as expressed by substantives, is pointed out by two words commonly called articles. The definite article, the, is, in fact, a demonstrative pronoun; and the indefinite, an, or, a, is a numeral. The a is applied to both numbers; an, or, a, only to the singular number, and to plurals preceded by an indefinite numeral. The singulars out the notion expressed by the substantive or word it is attached to, from all other notions of its kind; as,—the man is here, the boys have run away, the book you gave me is lost, the flowers we gathered are withered, the good practise virtue, the wicked fear not to sin, the many are not made for the benefit of the few, he loves the right, it was not in the old times as it is now, the then bishop of London. An, or, a, singles out the notion expressed by the word it is attached to, simply as one of many; as,—a horse, a tree, a great many, it happened an hour ago, a little while and I am with you. There are many substantives used without articles, such as proper names, abstract substantives, and names of materials; as,—Cæsar, Luther, religion, peace, cloth, land. But when these are employed in other senses, and admit of being individualized, articles are used with them; as,—the Cæsars, the Luthers of these days, the religions of mankind, the lands you have visited.—Note. An is the full form of the indefinite article, and is connected with the numeral one, by the Scotch word used for both article and numeral, ane; the n is dropped before a consonant and a vocalized h.

02. The plural number of substantives is formed, in English, in three ways;—by the modification of the vowel sound; as,—man, men; tooth, teeth;—by the addition of en, or, n, to the singular; as,—ox, oxen;—and by the addition of es, or, s, to the singular; as,—flower, flowers; tree, trees. Some euphonic changes take place when es, or, s, are added; as,—lady, ladies; (but y is unchanged when it forms part of a diphthong, as,—boy, boys;) life, lives. Such changes as in brother, brethren, indicate a participation of both the most ancient ways of forming the plural. Some words have one plural in the ancient form, and another in the modern; as,—penny, pence and pennies; where the former refers to money and the latter to coins. Some words, in both singular and plural forms, are used to express both numbers; as,—sheep, scissors. Foreign words commonly retain their proper plurals; as,—beau, beaux; memorandum, memoranda; phasis, phases; seraph, seraphim; virtuoso, virtuos. There are apparent irregularities in the plural forms of some words; many words ending in f and fe, and all ending in ff, except one, retain those letters unchanged; as,—chief, chiefs; life, lives; stuff, stuffs; the exceptional one being staff, staves. Other seeming irregularities are relics of old forms, or are irregular in spelling only; as,—child, children; mouse, mice. Swine and kine are anomalous in spelling only. In the provincial dialects many words are rendered plural in the old forms, which in good English follow the modern forms; as,—housen, Norfolk, for houses. The names of measures, numbers, and weights, when preceded by numerals, do not take the plural inflexion; as,—six foot long, two pair of shoes, two dozen of wine, a hundred head of game, six pound ten shillings, twenty hundredweight are a ton.

03. In the declension of English substantives, only one case is formed by inflexion, the rest being made by the use of the prepositions which convey the same signification as the various cases of other languages do. This single case is that which is employed in associating one substantive with another as an attribute; and it is formed by the addition of es, or, s, to the word. The common way of writing this case, which, however unphilosophical and incorrect, must be followed till the arbiter of language—usage—shall have pronounced in favour of the proper method, is by adding s with an apostrophe to the nominative; as,—man, man's; men, men's; for mans and mens; James,

James's, for Jamesses, as it is pronounced. The use of the apostrophe in this case of modern plural forms is quite correct, the second s being omitted in pronouncing these words to avoid excessive sibilation; as,—boys' sports, my friends' cares, the enemies' camps. The apostrophe is also correctly used when after a sibilant ending the s is omitted in singular words; as,—for peace's sake, Apelles' paintings.

04. The form of substantives is the same, whether they are the subjects or the immediate objects in sentences; so that the declension of these words in our tongue may be briefly exhibited by the following example:—

	SINGULAR.	PLURAL.
Nominative, or Subjective case.	Hope	Hopes
Attributive, or Possessive case.	Hope's	Hopes'
Accusative, or Objective case.	Hope	Hopes

The genitive case is thus expressed, of hope or hopes; the dative, or personal case, thus, to hope or hopes; the ablative, thus, from hope or hopes; the case of means, thus, by hope or hopes; the case of locality, thus, in hope or hopes, &c.

ADJECTIVES.

05. The adjective in English has no inflexions of number or case, and admits of the cases made by the aid of prepositions only when it is used as an abstract substantive; as,—the lofty mountain, foreign countries, of various hues, by the great oak, the idea of the beautiful.

06. The notion expressed by the adjective admits of modification by the relation of intensity. This relation originates what are called the degrees of comparison, which are two, the comparative and the superlative. The adjective when not used in this relation is erroneously stated by some writers to be in the positive degree; but as no comparison is made by it, we may exclude it from further notice here.

07. The distinction between the comparative and superlative degrees is this, that the former represents the notion of the adjective as more intense in some instance, or instances, than in others; the latter represents it as being in the most intense degree conceivable; but it is possible to express these degrees by the united use of the comparative and superlative forms; as,—wood is hard, stone is harder than wood, but diamond is the hardest substance; or, iron-wood is the hardest kind of wood, but diamond is harder than any other substance.

08. These degrees are formed by inflexion, and by the use of auxiliary words. The comparative degree is formed by the addition of er, or, r, to the adjective; as,—hard, harder; large, larger. The superlative degree is formed by the addition of est, or, t, to the adjective; as,—hard, hardest; large, largest. The comparative and superlative are also formed by the auxiliary use of more and most; as,—hard, more hard, most hard; large, more large, most large. This method is, however, almost restricted to adjectives of more than one syllable, where euphony rejects the comparison by inflexion; as,—certain, more certain, most certain; but in many instances the inflexions are employed; as,—holy, holier, holiest; able, abler, ablest. In some instances the superlative is formed by using most as an affix; as,—love, lover, loveloost, or loveest.

09. A less distinct or definite expression of intensity is made by the use of the words too, very, exceedingly, &c.; as,—it is too bad, he is very ill, beautiful exceedingly. A comparison of depreciation is effected by the aid of less and least: as,—fair, less fair, least fair. There is also a termination employed to signify a diminution or depreciation of the notion expressed by the original adjective; as,—white, whitish; long, longish: but this is doubtless the same as that employed to form certain adjectives from substantives; as,—scot, wolfish; Scot, Scottish.

70. The following comparisons are irregular, or formed by parts of other adjectives.

Bad, evil	worse	worst
Far	farther, further	farthest, furthest
Fore	former	foremost, first
Good	better	best
Late	later, latter	latest, last
Little	less, lesser	least
Many, much	more	most
Near, nigh	nearer, nigher	nearest, next
Old	older, elder	oldest, eldest.

There are also a few comparative and superlative adjectives which are derived from adverbs or prepositions; as,—

In	inner	inuermost, inmost
Out	outer, utter	outermost, uttermost, outmost, utmost
Up	upper	uppermost, upmost

Some comparatives, borrowed from the Latin, are used in English without expressing any relation of intensity by comparison; as,—superior, interior, exterior.

PRONOUNS.

71. Pronouns are employed to indicate the relations of persons and things to the speaker. Those which express only the relation of personality are called personal pronouns. Those which express, beside the relation of personality, the individuality of the person or thing referred to, are called demonstrative pronouns. Interrogative pronouns are those which ask what relations of personality or individuality any persons or things stand in. When the demonstrative relation of a person or thing refers to another notion, that notion is always expressed by an accessory sentence, which is connected with the principal sentence by an interrogative pronoun, which in these instances is called a relative pronoun. These pronouns, thus applied to persons and things, are also called substantive pronouns; but when they are employed as attributes to substantives, they are called adjective pronouns. From demonstrative and interrogative pronouns are derived a class of words, which, beside expressing the relations conveyed by these pronouns, at the same time express the relation of time, place, or manner; these are called adverbial pronouns. There are also some words which express persons or things in an indefinite manner, and are called indefinite pronouns.—Examples. I bad you tell him. You know them. They do not alarm us. This is more beautiful than that. Those are to be preferred to these. Who is a good man? Which is the best remedy? Who calls so loud? The flowers which you gathered are withered. The men whom you pursue have escaped.—This rose is most beautiful. His father instructed him. Whose interests do you seek?—I live here. Whence do you come? Speak it thus. When did you arrive?—One is astonished at nothing now. Somebody must have informed him. Nothing has been discovered.

72. The personal pronouns of the substantive class are thus declined:

	FIRST PERSON.		SECOND PERSON.
	Sing.	Plur.	Sing.	Plur.
Nominative, or Subjective.	I	we	thou	you, or ye
Attributive, or Genitive.	mine	ours	thine	yours
Accusative, or Objective.	me	us	thee	you, or ye
THIRD PERSON.
	Sing.			Plur.
	M.	F.	N.	All genders.
Nom.	he	she	it	they
Gen.	his	hers	its	theirs
Acc.	him	her	it	them

The reflexive pronouns, which are used as the objects of verbs, when the object and subject are the same, are, myself, ourselves; thyself, yourselves; himself, herself, itself, themselves. But the personal pronouns are often used with a reflexive sense; as,—be-think thee! he bewailed him for his woes. One another, and each other, are employed to express reciprocal action; as,—they hated and feared one another, they asked each other of their welfare.

Note. Thou, thine, and thee are not ordinarily used in addressing individuals, except when strong feelings of love or hatred and anger are expressed; in other cases the plural is employed. The Society of Friends do not conform to this custom; but they most frequently employ thee as if it were the nominative case. In prayer and addresses to God, Thou, &c., alone are used.

73. Personal pronouns of the adjective class, which are in grammars usually called possessives, are derived from the genitive cases, singular and plural, of the substantive forms. They are my or mine, thy or thine, his, her or hers, its, our or ours, your or yours, their or theirs.

74. The demonstrative pronouns of the substantive class, are this, plural these, and that, plural those. The reflexive pronouns are also used demonstratively; as,—he followed it himself, they themselves were ashamed. And a more emphatic form is given to it by the use of own: as,—I discovered it my own self.

75. Demonstrative adjective pronouns are, beside those of the substantive class, such, youn, and yonder, the, the same, the other, &c.; as,—such fate awaits the wicked, youn flowerly arbours, yonder alleys green, the tree I planted, the same thief robbed me, on the other hand it is asserted thus. In the same way are used even, former and latter, &c.; as,—even he believed the story, the former statement contradicts the latter assertion. Many of these are also used substantively.

76. The adverbial demonstratives are such as here, there, hither, thither, hence, thence, yonder, then, thus, so, &c.; as,—here we laugh and there we sing, the waters were divided hither and thither, take these things hence, thence shall my hand take them, I see him yonder, then shall it happen, he spake thus, so it was.

77. Interrogative and relative pronouns of the substantive class are thus declined:—

	Sing. and Plur.
Nominative	who
Genitive	whose
Accusative	whom

Which and what have no inflexions, but all cases of them may be made by the aid of prepositions.

78. The adjective pronouns of the interrogative and relative kinds are which and what; as,—which book will you read? I know which man it was; what goods have you purchased? what evil has been done, no one can say.

79. Adverbial interrogative and relative pronouns are, where, whither, whence, when, how :—as, where have you been? we know where he is; whither goest thou? we know not whither thou goest, and how can we know the way? whence they came is a mystery; when did you arrive? I will tell you how I learned this.

80. These pronouns are often compounded; as,—whosoever, whosoever, whichever, whichever, whatever, wherever, whencesoever, however, herein, therein, therefore, wherefore, hereat, thereunto, &c.

81. The indefinite pronouns are of the description of substantive pronouns; as,—one needs to have all one's wits about one, it is useless to mind what people say, nought is every thing and every thing is nought, there is nothing the matter, it may prove something for aught I know, any one can say that. The personal pronoun they is also used indefinitely; as,—they say he has mines of wealth. Other words are also occasionally employed in this way.

NUMERALS.

82. Numerals are words which do not express notions, but only the relations of number and quantity; and are divided into definite and indefinite, according as they imply a definite number; as,—one, ten, a hundred :—or an indefinite number or quantity; as,—many men, much bread, some houses. The definite numerals, which express number alone, are called cardinal numerals; as,—two, nine, fourteen, twenty-one, five hundred and six, eighteen hundred and forty-nine. Those which express the place in the series of cardinal numbers which any person or thing holds, are called ordinal numerals; as,—it is the first anniversary, he was in his eightieth year.

83. The following numerals are formed from cardinals and ordinals :—distributives; as,—one by one, two and two, by fives, by nines, by hundreds :—multiplicatives; as, single or simple, double or twofold, sixty-fold; and in the same way from the indefinite numeral many, manifold :—reiteratives; as,—once, twice, thrice, ten times, a hundred times :—fractionals; as,—a third, a fourth or a quarter, a tenth; with a half instead of second. From ordinal numerals are also formed adverbial numerals; as,—firstly, secondly, nineteenthly.

84. In some instances such words as next, other, both, either, neither, again, are employed as numerals; as,—he departed the next day after that, give me another glass of wine, I follow both professions, either would suit me, I like neither of them, I never saw her again.

85. Indefinite numerals are such as all, none, some, any, few, many, little, much, enough, every, each, one, other, several; as,—all mine are thine, none of these things move me, some affected ignorance, did you see any men? few find what many seek, little could be said, much has been left untouched, it is enough, it is what every man expected, each for himself shows the selfish man, one is hungry, another is drunken, several angels flew over the plain, no riches could save him, I bought the whole draught. These are employed variously as substantives or adjectives; and a remarkable difference in meaning is expressed by the use or omission of the indefinite article with little, &c., in some instances; as,—little attention was bestowed on him, here I received a little attention. To the list above must be added whether, employed as a substantive sometimes, but more often as an adjective; as,—let them take whether they will, whether is easier to say? But the use of this word as an indefinite numeral is almost obsolete.

ADVERBS.

86. Adverbs, properly so called, are inflexible words, expressing the relations of time, place, manner, &c.; but those forms of substantives, adjectives, pronouns, and numerals, which express the same relations, are to be regarded as adverbial; as,—summer will come soon, the news got abroad, carry it thus :—he arrived before night, they live in the country, we left in great haste. Adverbs which are formed from substantives and adjectives are strictly notional words; those formed from pronouns and numerals, relational words; but there are many adverbs which have lost their notional signification, and express nothing but the relations of place, time, &c., with reference to the speaker; as,—it is fortunate indeed, he waits below, I wish to speak to you now.

87. The following are a few of the relational adverbs :—of place: here, there, where, hither, thither, whither, hence, thence, whence, above, below, beneath, before, behind, around, in, out, off, near, far, back, backwards, forwards, aside, abroad, upward, downward, &c. :—of time: then, when, now, lately, already, after, before, yet, still, soon, hitherto, henceforth, &c. :—of frequency and intensity: once, twice, thrice, &c., seldom, often, again, very, quite, even, nearly, too, only, entirely, almost, hardly, much, rather, &c. :—of mood: yes, yet, however, really, no, not, if, perhaps, probably, neither, likely, may be, &c. :—of causality: wherefore, therefore, notwithstanding, nevertheless, why, &c. :—of manner: so, thus, how, as, otherwise, exactly so, &c.

88. A few adverbs of time and place, and most of those of manner, are notional words; as,—the road lies uphill, the light appeared eastward of us, we are paid daily, he speaks fluently, she sings exquisitely, he studies indefatigably, it stands advantageously, we were invited pressingly to stay, he returned hastily and suddenly set out for Rome, they obey their priests blindly.

89. Adverbs of manner, and some others, admit of degrees of comparison, which are formed in the same way as those of adjectives are; as,—often, oftener, oftenest; kindly, more kindly, most kindly. Some adverbs in frequent use are evidently comparatives and superlatives; as,—after, next, ere, erst, almost, &c.

PREPOSITIONS.

90. Prepositions are words expressive (literally) only of relations of place; and were originally adverbs of place; but they can now convey no meaning unless used in connexion with a substantive or pronoun. Figuratively, but universally, prepositions are employed to represent other relations beside those of place; as,—it lies on the table, stand by me, I am going to London, we came from the house :—of time; as,—it happened on Sunday, we shall be there by the evening, from day to day :—of causality; as,—on this consideration I pardon you, led by no presumption, now to our cost your emptiness we know, you are good from a nobler cause :—of manner; as,—on this wise he spake, seize her by force, he speaks to the purpose, from my heart I forgive him :—of the immediate object of an action; as,—I rely on your honour, he does well by us, they acceded to the proposal, this differs from that :—of the attribute to its substantive; as,—a house on fire! travels by land and water, he is brother to the emperor, relief from sickness.

91. Beside the prepositions strictly so called, such as in, with, from, by, at, to, after, for, &c., there are other words, and combinations of words, which are employed as prepositions, such as because of, by means of, instead of, on account of, with respect to, between, beyond, past, near, till, among, within, without, &c. They are originally either participles, substantives, adjectives, or adverbs; as,—during, by virtue of, round, below; and some are still used as such.

92. The cases of substantives, &c., which in many other languages are formed by inflexions, are in English formed by the help of prepositions; of being used for the genitive, to for the dative, from for the ablative, &c. A fact which shows what cases really are; especially when it is understood that the inflexions are formed by syllables or letters affixed to the root of the word, and that they, as well as the prepositions, primarily denoted relations of place; added to which is the custom of writing the prepositions as forming one word with those substantives, which prevails in the best ancient inscriptions and manuscripts, in the Latin language in particular; and in the old Latin, the use of the prepositions as affixes, exactly in the same way as the case-endings are used, and which was retained in some instances to the latest period of its use as a living tongue.

93. Prepositions are much used in composition with verbs; but they lose their peculiar meaning and have an adverbial signification, in such connexion; as,—I have undertaken the task, that is a difficulty I cannot overcome, he underwent great fatigue. In many cases the preposition, though in sense thus attached to the verb, is separated from it; as,—he passed by on the other side, the engagement was broken off, he went on with his story, train up a child in the way he should go.

CONJUNCTIONS.

94. Thoughts which are related in the mind of the speaker, and such as are parts of one wider thought, are joined in expression by the relational words called conjunctions. When two or more sentences have any essential part in common, such as the subject, predicate, &c., they are commonly contracted into one sentence by the aid of a conjunction, which, seeming to connect two words, really connects two sentences, part of one of which is suppressed; as,—they ate and they drank, contracted to they ate and drank; the boy works here and the man works there, contracted to the boy and the man work here.

95. Conjunctions are divided into co-ordinative and sub-ordinative, according as the sentences they connect express thoughts which are independent of, though related to, each other; or those which are dependent on each other, and properly form but one thought in the speaker's mind. Co-ordinative conjunctions are such as simply enlarge or complete a thought by adding other sentences, and which are called copulative; as,—*the boy and his mother walked together; we neither expect nor hope for such aid; he is both tyrannical and servile; there was not only the brother, but the sister also;—or such as limit or even deny the thought expressed in the antecedent sentence, and are called adversative; as,—*you cannot help, it is true, but you need not hinder; it does not harm me, truly, yet it does me no good; he came though he was not invited; they have all that heart can wish, and still are unsatisfied; I did not blame him, on the contrary, I praised him; it was carefully explained to him, he nevertheless seemed not to understand it; you should not say Sibboleth, but Shibboleth; be lovable, else you will never be loved; either you are mad, or I am; he promised me faithfully, but he does not keep his word;—or such as express the relation of causality, and are called causative; as,—*it must have rained, for the ground is wet; he avoided me, hence I conclude that my suspicions are correct; his daughter is ill, on that account he stays at home; I have married a wife, therefore I cannot come; he left early, and so must have reached home already; I heard you were in town, consequently I did not call at your house.

96. Subordinative conjunctions connect dependent accessory sentences with the principal sentence, that is, such sentences as may be considered as standing in place of a substantive, adjective, or adverb; as,—he reported that the king was dead; he was at his work before the sun rose; he who acts hastily will repent at leisure; I know where you pass your time; I shall finish my work, while you are playing; since I saw you, I have written to my brother; he cannot walk, because he has broken his leg; as the gentleman was a foreigner, I addressed him in French.

97. Many of the words used above to illustrate the definitions will be found to be adverbs, and some are pronouns; but being employed in the connexion of detached or imperfect thoughts, they are in meaning conjunctions. Words which have no other meaning are distinguished as conjunctions proper.

SYNTAX.

THE PREDICATIVE COMBINATION.

98. A predicative combination constitutes a sentence, and expresses an action, which is asserted to be the action of a person or thing; as,—we write, the man writes; in which the action of writing is asserted respecting the persons designated by we, and the man.

99. The predicate is the word which expresses the action;—the subject, the word which expresses the person or thing of whom the action is asserted: in the preceding examples, we, and the man, are subjects; write, and writes, predicates.

100. The subject of a sentence may be expressed by substantives, pronouns, the infinitive mood of verbs, or by substantive accessory sentences. The consideration of the last is deferred to the sections which treat especially of accessory sentences. Examples.—Birds fly. Flowers bloom. Clouds gather. I run. You speak. They are preparing. To live is to think, with an educated man. With me, to live is Christ, and to die, gain.

101. The predicate of a sentence may be expressed by verbs, adjectives, substantives, the infinitive mood of verbs, adverbs, numerals, pronouns, and by accessory sentences. These last are deferred to the sections especially devoted to them. Examples.—He reads. The man was working. Our house is finished. I should have been satisfied. The well is deep. Those mountains are lofty. He had been a soldier. That is the road. It is of great importance. Those papers are of consequence to us. They were from home. He was in the house. He that is not against me is for me. This is to die. To live is to think, with an educated man. Are you there? It is to-morrow. It was so. It is the same. It is I. These be they. We are seven. I am the first and the last.

102. When the verb to be is not part of a compound tense, as in he is praised, it is called the copula, or tie, which connects the predicate with the subject. It can be used alone, when it denotes abstract existence; as,—God is. In many of the examples given in the last paragraph this verb is neither a verb of existence, nor yet a mere relational verb or copula, but signifies to live, to dwell, &c.; or there is an ellipse, or omission; as in, the book is out, i. e. sent out, or published; the battle is over, i. e. passed over, or finished.

103. The subject of a sentence always stands in the nominative case; which has, therefore, in the preceding part, been occasionally designated the subjective case. When the second person, singular or plural, of the imperative mood is used, the subject is commonly omitted; as,—tell me, bring flowers.

104. The subject of impersonal verbs, which is rather formally than really the subject, is the indefinite pronoun it: as,—it thunders, it becomes me, it seemed to be raining. In cases when peculiar emphasis is to be employed in respect of the subject, or when a certain liveliness is to be given to a narration, a formal subject, there, or it, stands in the proper place in the sentence, and the real subject follows the verb, or copula; as,—there were giants in the earth, it was a friar of orders gray went forth to tell his beads, is there no balm in Gilead? there be many that say this, there is a lad here. The pronoun it is also occasionally used as the formal subject when the infinitive mood of a verb is the real subject; as,—it is delightful and honourable to die for one's country, it is good for us to be here.

105. The relation of the predicate to the subject is expressed by the former being in the same number as the latter; and also by their being both put into the same personal relation to the speaker; as,—the boy plays, the boys play, this field is green, the fields are green, I am here, thou lovest righteousness, they fear him.

106. When two or more subjects, in the singular number, connected by the conjunction and, have but one predicate, as in contracted or compounded sentences, the relation of the predicate to the subject is expressed by its being put in the plural number; as,—Shakespeare and Milton are the greatest poets of this country, Mercury and Venus are called inferior planets, pomp and ostentation speak not greatness of misery but smallness of mind. Sometimes, however, the conjunction is omitted; as,—now abide faith, hope, charity, these three. But when the subjects, thus connected, may be conceived as constituting but one general notion, the predicate is in the singular number; as,—here is my knife and fork, toil and sorrow is the common lot of man. When the connecting conjunction is or, or nor, the predicate is in the singular number; unless one of the subjects is in the plural number, when the predicate is in the plural number; as,—either hope or fear impels him, neither hope nor fear impels him, either he or they are to blame, neither he nor they are to blame.

107. Collective substantives, as generally expressing single notions, have their predicates in the singular number; but when they plainly imply a plural notion, the predicate is plural; as,—the council was unanimous, the council were divided in their views, my people doth not consider, people say that it portends famine, the parliament is assembled, the multitude was averted at his boldness, the crowd is dispersed, the careful couple join their pious prayers, here is a dozen of wine.

108. When the predicate is a substantive or personal pronoun, it is put in the same number, case, and gender as the subject, as far as the language permits; as,—she is a poetess, kings are but men, I am he. This does not exclude the employment of other cases, when the predicate expresses an attribute, property, &c., rather than an identical notion; as,—that hat is Robert's, the house is on fire, he is with us. The genitive of personal pronouns is not employed as a predicate, but instead of it the forms mine, thine, his, hers, ours, yours, theirs; as,—that hat is mine, the loss is ours, the gain is theirs. When the indefinite pronoun it stands as formal subject in a sentence, the predicate of which is a personal pronoun, that predicate must be, in English, in the nominative case; as,—it is I, it is thou, it is he, it is we, it is they; and not me, thee, him, us, and them, as is common in colloquial English; these predicates being the real subjects of the sentences, and the verb to be not a mere copula. Before comparatives and superlatives, the definite article is employed in the predicate; as,—this is the larger of the two, he is the wisest. When a masculine term signifies a class, as well as sex, it may be employed as a predicate to a feminine subject, if the class, rather than the sex, is intended to be expressed; as,—she is a poet.

109. The relation of personality in a sentence is expressed by the use of the appropriate pronouns, when the subject is a pronoun; and by the predicate being put in the corresponding personal form. If the assertion is made in the speaker's own person, the first person is employed; as,—I am he, we speak that we do know. If it is addressed to another person, the second person is used; as,—thou art the man, ye have forsaken me. If it is made of another person, or of a thing, the third person is used; as,—he knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are but dust, the ox knoweth his owner, they have gone away backward, they are put to confusion, the crane and the scallion observe the time of their coming, the earth did quake and the rocks were rent.

110. In contracted sentences, when there are different relations of personality expressed by the different subjects, the predicate is put into that form which expresses the nearest of those relations to the speaker, the number being determined as in (106); as,—thou and I will be first in the throng, my brother and I have returned, you and that man were witnesses. As, however, there are no personal inflexions in the plural of our verbs, the usage here described is not apparent unless the subjects are again referred to by means of a personal pronoun; such reference would be made in the first and second of these examples by we, and in the third by you.

111. The relation of time in a sentence is expressed by the tenses of verbs, by auxiliary verbs of tense, and by a peculiar use of some forms, which do not, in themselves, imply such relations; as,—I am writing, I am going to write, I am to write as soon as I have obtained the necessary information. The relation of intensity modifies this relation of time; actions being capable of being represented indefinitely, as not completed, or as completed and perfect, &c.; as,—I write, I am writing, I have written.

112. The present tenses are employed when the action expressed by the predicate coincides with the present existence of the speaker; as,—indefinite,—my heart is turned to stone, I strike it and it hurts my hand; I remember the days of old; the wicked flee when no man pursueth;—imperfect,—the sun is setting, the heavens are telling the glory of God;—perfect,—what I have written, I have written; we have done that which it was our duty to do. General truths and facts are expressed by the present indefinite tense; as,—God is a spirit, there is a spirit in man, two and two are four, discontent is immorality. This tense is also employed in animated historic narration; as,—blood flows, the element of new madness; the wounded are carried into houses of the Rue Cersaie; the dying leave their last mandate not to yield till the accursed strong-hold fall. On his plank, swinging over that stone-ditch, he hovers perilous; the Swiss holds a paper through his porthole, the shifty Usher snatches it, and returns;—terms of surrender;—accepted,—sinks the draw-bridge, rushes in the living deluge; the Bastille is fallen! Future time is also expressed by the present tense, when the relation of time does not require to be pointed out; as,—I go to London next week, I set out to-morrow morning.

113. The past tenses are used to signify that the action spoken of occurred before the time of its being mentioned by the speaker; as,—indefinitely,—her father loved me, oft invited me, still questioned me the story of my birth. Then brought he me out of the way, and led me unto the outer gate. It was condemned in parliament, and prejudged in the common opinion of the realm;—imperfect,—there was no thought of pleasing you when she was christened; the fishermen were washing their nets; while I was speaking, and praying, and confessing my sin, the man Gabriel touched me;—perfect,—when he had spoken such words I became dumb, he had prepared for him a great chamber, he had been well instructed in his younger days. The imperfect past tense is commonly employed in animated narration; as,—his law-studies were already ended, and he was now bringing a wife home; mother and wife were to live together; the sisters had got, or were getting married. The indefinite and perfect past tenses are used to express events which have relation to another event; as,—when he arrived I departed, when I arrived he had set out. The indefinite past tense is also used when the events are referred to a division of time, and not to another event; as,—I supped with him last night.

114. The future tenses are employed when the action is spoken of as not having taken place at the time the speaker is naming them; as,—indefinite,—I shall go first, you will go next, and he will follow you: there will be no play to-night; dost thou think because thou art virtuous there shall be no more cakes and ale? our children shall see this and bless Heaven:—imperfect,—they will be still praising thee; we shall be travelling all night; you will be sleeping while we are on our journey:—perfect,—he will have left us when your brother arrives; I shall have finished my task before you have half done yours; then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father, when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power. Respecting the other uses of the auxiliary verb shall and will, see (118). There are other forms by which the relation of time is expressed, and which are sufficiently noticed in the Etymology of this “Outline,” to which the reader is referred.

115. The relation of mood in sentences is expressed by the employment of the moods of verbs, by the auxiliary verbs of mood, and by peculiarities in the arrangement of the words composing the sentence; as,—he reads, he has read, he will be reading, he can read, he ought to read, he might read, if he read let him write also, had I but read that letter!

116. The indicative mood is employed when the sentence contains the assertion or denial of actual existence by the speaker, and also when it is an inquiry respecting such existence; as,—not to know of things remote, but to know that which before us lies in daily life, is the prime wisdom; Sheba was never more covetous of wisdom and fair virtue, than this pure soul shall be; the ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib, but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider: how sleep the brate? what said these men? and from whence come they? what have they seen in thy house?

117. In the Etymology of this “Outline” all the auxiliary verbs of mood are treated of; some further remarks upon some of them remain, however, to be made. The verbs which are usually referred to the conjunctive (or subjunctive) mood, were there referred to the indicative: it will be shown here that the common use of them is assertory: and that, when they are employed to express more or less probable possibility, they follow the same laws as the rest of the indicative auxiliaries, will appear in the sections that treat of the conjunctive mood.

118. Power or ability is asserted by can; as,—he can play and we can sing; cannot you understand me? I could ride and run, in my young days, better than you, my masters! how could it have happened thus? But could has not always a past sense; as,—I could do it, an' I would; could you oblige me so far? Liberty is asserted by may; as,—you may go further and fare worse; what he may do is of two kinds, what he may do as just, and what he may do as possible; may we know what this new doctrine is? I might be about ten years old then; he might have had the appointment you received. Might, also, has not always a past sense; as,—I might go if I chose; might I ask you one question? Obligation or constraint is asserted by shall; as,—I shall submit, shall I? thou shalt not covet; it is a mind that shall remain; shall remain! mark you his absolute shall? things have not, of late, been as they should be; I told him, he should do it; he should have complied with their request for civility's sake.

Should, when it is not used as the past historic tense of shall, is employed to express a less violent constraint than shall implies; as,—you should go, for it is kind of him to invite you, and you may be instructed or amused; you shall go, if not willingly, then unwillingly, for I will make you; in which sentences, and in others like them, the words shall and should cannot be transposed. An antiquated and provincial use of should is worthy of remark;—there is a narration, that there should be an herb that growth in the likeness of a lamb; I have heard that he should declare this. Intention and resolution are asserted by will; as,—I will return again to you, if God will; I will not be inquired of by you; wilt thou not say unto me from henceforth, Thou art the guide of my youth? if I knew, then would not I tell thee? thus would he sit for hours together; he would not slay him; we would know what these things mean; he made as though he would have gone further; he would not have suffered his house to be broken into. Would has not always a past sense, as some of the preceding examples show.

119. The distinction between the use of shall and will, as auxiliaries of tense, and as auxiliaries of mood, may be pointed out here. The former of these verbs is derived from an Anglo-Saxon verb, signifying to owe, so that in its strict and original meaning, it is nearly synonymous with ought. It is used so in the first English writers, Chaucer, Wicliff, &c. The radical meaning of the latter verb is preserved in the notional verb and the substantive derived from it. Both verbs imply futurity in their radical meanings; and hence, when our future inflexions were lost, they were adopted to form, by composition, our future tenses. Both verbs are employed in this way in all the persons of these tenses, and in both numbers; but, generally, in affirmative assertions, will is restricted to the first persons, and shall to the second and third; perhaps, because the speaker could speak of his own future intentions, but could only speak of others' future obligations. (In questions and negative assertions, the reverse of this is the general law respecting these verbs of tense.) Usage has determined that when futurity alone, or principally, is to be expressed, this is the law for the employment of these auxiliaries. But when either obligation, or intention, is principally, or alone, to be expressed, this law does not hold good; the words must then be employed according to their radical meaning. The following examples may exercise the ingenuity of the readers in determining when they are used as tense and when as mood auxiliaries; instances of both kinds, and some of very difficult determination, have been selected:—We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied. There will a worse come in his place. Those that will hear me speak, let them stay here; those that will follow Cassius, go with him. Read the will; we will hear it, Antony; you shall read us the will; Caesar's will. Will you be patient? will you stay awhile? I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death. Be angry when you will, it shall have scope. Thou shalt see me at Philippi. It is well done; and thou shalt sleep again; I will not hold thee long; if I do live, I will be good to thee. It shall be done, my lord. He shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people, and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. He will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this. What will ye do in the day of visitation? to whom will ye flee for help? where will ye leave your glory? I will shake the heavens, and the earth shall remove out of her place. Thou hast said in thy heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God, I will ascend above the heights of the clouds, I will be like the Most High; yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit; they that see thee shall narrowly look upon thee, saying, Is this the man that made the earth to tremble? How much more glorious will those former deliverances appear, when we shall know them not only to have saved us from greatest miseries past, but to have reserved us for greatest happiness to come! When the gentle west wind shall open the fruitful bosom of the earth, then the flowers put forth and sprig, and then the sun shall scatter the mists, and the manning hand of the tiller shall root up all that burdens the soil. This will cure all straight; one sip of this will bathe the drooping spirits in delight, beyond the bliss of dreams. Ye shall not eat thereof, nor shall ye touch it, lest ye die. Man shall find grace; and shall grace not find means? Thou will not leave me in the loathsome grave. Night will bring silence; and sleep, listening to thee, will watch. It will not speak; then I will follow it. You shall not go, my lord.

120. The use of the indicative in accessory sentences will be treated of subsequently. Its use in questions exactly resembles its use in assertions; but, in English, compound tenses are more frequently employed than simple ones; and that which expresses emphatic assertion supplies our usual form of interrogation; the arrangement of the words, and, in some cases, the tone of voice in uttering them, indicate the questions; as,—what think you of this young Percy's pride? what hast thou to do with the time of the day? canst thou not tell? what portents are these? call you that backing of your friends? how came Falstaff's sword so hacked? do you see these meteors? dost thou speak like a king? which is Bolingbroke? wherefore do I tell these news to thee? you confess, then, you picked my pocket? doth he hear it? doth he feel it? could not all this flesh keep in a little life?

121. The conjunctive mood is employed in accessory sentences; but it is also used in principal sentences, expressing a wish, or making a concession in argument; as,—long live the king! thy will be done! be it so, yet the matter is not hopeless. These forms, which are usually attributed to the imperative mood, are parts of the conjunctive, as is evident from the contingency, with probability, that they imply. Our language in this exactly resembles the Latin, &c., where the third persons of the tense called the present subjunctive, or potential, in common grammars, is so employed. For the usage of the conjunctive mood, the reader is referred to the sections on Accessory Sentences.

122. When a sentence expresses a command, the imperative mood is used; as,—know thou this truth, enough for man to know; launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught; depart from me; let my people go! let him be anathema! come, son, let's away! let me alone! be praised, all the saints, for this release. There are other ways of expressing commands, or necessity enforced by the speaker's will, as may be seen in (118).

123. In sentences by which the speaker intends to represent the agent as the subject, and to give prominence to what is declared respecting it, the predicate, if a verb, is put in the active form; as,—her father loved me, oft invited me, still questioned me the story of my birth; what shall Cordelia do? love and be silent; I heard no letter from my master since I wrote him; nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise to yield me often tidings; have ye not heard? have ye not known? have ye not understood? flee from idolatry.

124. But when the agent is the immediate object of the verb, and is the prominent thought, the passive form is employed; as,—the pastures are clothed with flocks, the valleys also are covered over with corn; I am sprigged with a fool, frightened, and angered worse; Sinai itself was moved at the presence of God; who will not be scandalized at the warmth and vivacity of those meetings? it was built by Romulus. The passive form is also used where the activity is attributed to no agent at all, and where it is not expressed; as,—peace will be speedily re-established; they are reconciled; Rome was built above seven hundred years before Christ, Troy was taken about five hundred years earlier; will it not be received that they have done it? thou shalt not be put to shame; he was oppressed, and he was afflicted, he was cut off out of the land of the living, for the transgression of my people was he stricken; it is said that the cross on which our Lord suffered was made of the wood of the aspen poplar; it was generally believed that the child was supposititious; no one is required to criminate himself; it is thought that the Whigs are kept in power more by the weakness of their opponents than by their own strength; it is established conclusively that the sun is the central body of our system; it is opposed to common sense that kings should arrogate a right divine.

125. When the agent and the object are the same, the reflexive form is used; which, however, is the same as the active and passive forms; as,—whilst I am preparing myself for the audience, an agreeable concert regales me; he excused himself from fulfilling his promise; they will persuade themselves that they are martyrs; I am prepared for all that may happen; they were ashamed of their selfishness; she will be pleased when she learns this.

126. When the sentence is formed by the copula, to be, and when the verb that stands as predicate is in a compound form, the relations of person, number, tense, mood, &c. are expressed by the inflexions of the copula, or of the auxiliaries; as,—thou art the man, the nation had long groaned under this tyranny, their pretences were both shallow and unsupportable, many have been the favours I have received from him, you have discovered my secret, thou shalt understand this.

127. There is no difference in the grammatical construction of affirmative and negative sentences; as,—he is my brother, he is not my brother, he fears me, he does not fear me. In replies to questions, yes is used for simple affirmation, and no for simple denial; as,—Do you mean good faith? Yes, my lord. Is he not able to discharge the money? Yes, twice the sum. Did he take interest? No, not take interest? Have you heard any imputation to the contrary? No, no, no.

THE ATTRIBUTIVE COMBINATION.

128. When a notion of activity is associated with a notion of existence, without any assertion on the part of the speaker, but only for the fuller characterization of the principal notion, the relation of the two is called attributive; and the expression is designated the attributive combination; as,—green fields, William the Conqueror, a child's obedience. These expressions may be changed into assertions, to show the notion of activity more clearly; thus,—the fields are green, William conquers, a child obeys.

129. The principal member of this combination always expresses a notion of existence, and must be either a substantive, a personal pronoun, or an adjective or other word used substantively; as, the secrets of the grave this viperous slander enters; poor I am stare; the mighty dead; mark you his absolute shall? many such like as's of great charge.

130. The attribute is most frequently expressed by an adjective; and as in our language this class of words has no inflexions to signify the modifications of gender, number, and case, it is only by its position and by the manifest meaning that its relation to the substantive is shown; as,—is not this a lamentable thing? all his golden words are spent; 'tis danger- ous, when the baser nature comes between the pass and fell incensed points of mighty opposites; is't not perfect conscience? The substantive is, however, frequently omitted; as,—the just shall live by faith; he was lamented by all; the wise and good are the support of the state.

131. Participles, numerals, adjective pronouns, substantives used as adjectives, adverbs, and conjunctions, are also employed to express attributes; and the relation of the demonstratives, the and an or a, is of this kind; as,—what envious streaks do lace the severing clouds of yonder east! my friend professed; ah! that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline! any man may answer a letter; which way can he? what day is this? take thy fingers from my throat! this grave shall have a living monument; a ministering angel shall my sister be; sweets to the sweet! none but he shall have her, though twenty thousand worthier come to have her; they set spurs, and away, like three German devils, three Doctor Faustuses; the very butcher of a silk button; thou art but a youth; I sit at ten pounds a week; yon dissembling knight! to repay that money will be a biting affliction; I am attended at the cypress grove; the iron duke.

132. Substantives in the possessive case are largely used attributively; and for this reason that case was named attributive in the Etymology of this Outline; as,—he will answer the letter's master; adversity's sweet milk, philosophy; the sad and solemn priests still sing for Richard's soul; they will pluck the gay new coats o'er the French soldiers' heads; I had my father's signet in my purse; reasons importing Denmark's health, and England's too; the courtier's, soldier's, scholar's eye, tongue, sword. But in some instances the principal substantive is omitted, though only when it is readily understood by means of the context; as,—will you come to your father's? I will go with you as far as St. Gregory's; the king will come to St. James's to-morrow; he went into the stationer's.

133. Frequently, instead of the possessive case of substantives, the objective with the preposition of, signifying the cause of an effect, possession, mutual connexion, or quality, is employed; as,—more than prince of cats, he is the courageous captain of compliments; what a pair of spectacles is here! I do spy a kind of hope; Venus smiles not in a house of tears; I cannot sum up half my sum of wealth. The participle (act. pres. indef.) is sometimes used with of, to express an attribute; as,—nothing but the fear of offending prevents me; the hope of seeing you sustained him; the care of providing for so numerous a family; the happiness of making others happy. There is another use of this form which is commonly designated the partitive, and in it the substantive with the preposition is the principal word in the combination, and the other member, which is either the comparative or superlative of an adjective, an interrogative pronoun, or a numeral, is the attributive word; as,—a word with one of you; I am the youngest of that name; thou hast more of the wild goose in one of thy wits, than I have in my whole five; three of the carriages are, in faith, very dear to fancy; rapier and dagger, that's two of his weapons; in what place of the field doth Calchas keep? you know every man of them; which of these shall I choose? There is another use of the substantive with the preposition, which is peculiar to the English language; it can be rendered into other languages only by a substantive in apposition; as,—the kingdom of England, the republic of France, the city of London the university of Oxford, the port of Yarmouth, the month of May. Sometimes the substantive used with of, is not in the objective, but in the possessive case; as,—a friend of Antony's; as if it were intended to express not simply Antony's friend, but one of Antony's friends.

134. Beside the preposition of, other prepositions are employed to connect the attributive substantive with the principal word in this combination; as,—an envious thrust from Tybalt bit the life of stout Mercutio; it is some meteor to light thee on thy way to Mantua; I'll send to one in Mantua; thy wit, that ornament to shape and love; he is a kinsman to the Montague; rebellious subjects, enemies to peace; the beast with many heads butts me away. Yet it is plain that some of these are contracted from fuller forms, such as will be exhibited in the sections which treat of the Objective Combination.

135. Another mode of expressing the attributive notion is by a substantive in apposition; as,—adversity's sweet milk, philosophy; thy wit, that ornament to shape and love; Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet; here is one Lucianus, nephew to the king; Pyrrhus old grandsire Priam seeks; say! Father Thames! Roscius the actor; O! Jephthah, judge of Israel; my good Lord Hamlet; Shakespeare, the prince of poets. Under this head may be classed titles of honour and courtesy, distinctive names, &c.; as,—holy Saint Francis; Signor Ranes! Doctor Faustus; Earl Grey; Prince Rupert; King David; John Baptist; Father Laurence; Sir John Falstaff; James Barclay; Mr. Brougham; Mrs. Mainwaring. A substantive is sometimes put in apposition with a pronoun; as,—I, a mere youth, cannot teach thee, an old man.

136. The relation of the substantives in apposition is expressed partly by their being put in the same number, and partly by their position; they are not always in the same case; as,—grandsire Priam's tears; King David's Psalms; Earl Grey's Reform Bill; Lord Brougham's speeches.

137. The infinitive mood of a verb is frequently used as an attributive substantive; as,—these woes shall serve for sweet discourses in our time to come. Accessory sentences are also thus employed; and these will be spoken of subsequently.

138. Many of the examples given in the preceding sections show that it is not uncommon for one substantive to be attended by more than one attributive expression; in these cases it will be seen that all the attributes do not bear the same relation to the principal notion, some of them being attributes of that notion only as it is characterized or completed by one or more other attributes, which, with it, form but one notion, and stand as the principal member in a new combination with these additional attributive forms; as,—that dissembling, abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy, dotting, foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm; in the first of which instances that individualizes varlet, Diomed, and the other two adjectives are appended subordinately to varlet; and in the second, the whole cluster of attributives is gathered round sleeve, the first in subordination being knave's, to which are subordinated young, of Troy, and the adverb there; that same individualizes the young knave; and the other three are added out of Thersites' exuberant affection and respect for that same young knave of Troy there.

139. When the same attributive word or phrase refers to more than one substantive, whether connected by conjunctions or not, it is frequently omitted before all but the first; as,—the prayers of priests, nor time of sacrifice, shall lift up their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst my hate to Marcus; he, the sacred honour of himself, his queen's, his hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander, whose sting is sharper than a sword's; Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition.

140. When two attributive combinations, connected by a conjunction or not, and having the same substantive referred to, are contracted, the substantive takes the plural number; as,—uncles of Gloucester and of Winchester, the special watchmen of our English weal; the contending kingdoms of France and England; the dukes of Orleans, Calaber, Bretagne, and Alençon.

THE OBJECTIVE COMBINATION.

141. When two notions, one of which is a notion of activity, and the other modifies it in any way, are united, the objective combination is employed; as,—he wrote his letter, they are overburdened with assistance, founded on fact. In which examples, wrote, overburdened, and founded express notions of activity, and are modified by his letter, with assistance, and on fact; and the former are called the predicates, the latter the objective factors or members of the combination.

142. The predicate is always a notional word, that is, a verb or adjective; but the infinitive mood, and participles, are also capable of standing in this position; and substantives, even, which involve the notion of activity, are used with attributive forms very closely resembling objective factors;—majesty stoops to folly, she was dear to us, to shield thee from diseases of the world, new-adapted to our hate; dowered with our curse, and strangered with our oath; conferring them on younger strengths, my services to your lordship, I profess myself an enemy to all other joys. (See § 134.)

143. The objective factor may be represented either by a notional or by a relational word; as,—give me the map there, speak again, I know no answer, Kent bids you all adieu. But every notion referred to a verb or adjective, in whatever form it be expressed, is to be considered as an objective factor; as,—we did hold her so, I will not part from thee yet, I will look further into it, I have not seen him this two days, I would fain learn to lie, something he left imperfect in the state, you are not worth the dust which the rude wind blows in your face.

144. The relation of the objective factor to the predicate is distinguished as that of causality, that of place, that of time, and that of manner.—Examples. 1. Hortensia is afraid of you. Time it is to smile at scapes and perils overlorn. 2. Now, by my holidame, here comes Katharina! I have seen them in the church together. 3. To-morrow is the wedding-day. I must away to-day, before night come. I have watched so long, that I am dog-weary. 4. He kills her in her own humour. I come not well. Thus I'll visit her.

145. The relation which is named that of causality must be understood in a wider sense than that word commonly conveys, and as signifying not only what is properly the cause of any action, but also the objects to which it is directed, and even the effect or purpose of it; as,—we may out-run, by violent swiftness, that which we run at, and lose by overrunning; this top-proud fellow, whom from the flow of gall I name not, but from sincere motions; you lost your office on the complaint of the tenants;—he makes a supper, and a great one, to many lords and ladies; this night he dedicates to fair content and joy; I am beholden to you, cheer your neighbours;—I find him a fit fellow; the king, your father, was reputed for a prince most prudent; I utterly refuse you for my judge; whom I hold my most malicious foe, and think not at all a friend to truth.

146. Language conceives and represents every causation as a motion; and are accordingly distinguished in this relation of causality two directions, analogous to the directions of local motion;—the relation of the objects conceived as causes, properly so called, corresponding to the direction from; and that of those conceived as receiving the action, or as the effects and purposes of it, to the direction towards.

147. The relations of an object which are conceived as causing an action, or whence the action is conceived as proceeding, are expressed by the objective or accusative case with various prepositions, which express kindred relations; as,—if I am free of your report, I am not of your wrong; my soul grows sad with troubles, why should we, good lady, upon what cause, wrong you? what, amazed at my misfortunes! may he do justice for truth's sake and his conscience! thou hast forced me out of thy honest truth to play the woman; fling away ambition, by that sin fell the angels; their life of laziness and pleasure arises partly out of the plenty of their country, and partly out of the temper of their climate; a person languishing under an ill habit of body: men are much pleased with variety; through her nourish'd posers enlarged by thee, she springs aloft; I was abashed at her; pride goes hated, cursed, abominated by all; your great goodness, out of holy piety, absolved him with an axe; he accused the spring of sloth; I have acquitted myself of the debt which I owed to the public; I will make many people amazed at thee; I ought to apologize for my indiscretion; not ashamed of the word of God; who can him assure of happy day; astounded at the voice he stood; from the beginning to the end, all is due to supernatural grace; who boast themselves of idols; never despair of God's blessings here, or of his reward hereafter; their young men shall die by the sword; she died of that fatal fever; the jannissaries were disappointed of their prey; minds distempered by interest, passion, or partiality; how nicely jealous is every one of us of his own repute; he was often provoked by the insolence of some of the bishops.

148. There are other ways occasionally employed of expressing this kind of causal objective relation; viz. by adverbs, by the infinitive mood of verbs, by the substantive without a preposition, &c.; as,—therefore the world hateth you; fear ye not therefore; I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come; who then can be saved? if children, then heirs; useless, and thence ridiculous; whence it will follow, that can drive to no certain point; wherein have we wearied him? shall I tell you why? ay, sir, and wherefore, for they say every why hath a wherefore; whereat are you offended? whereupon there had arisen a war betwixt them; she might not be affrighted to hear a serpent speak; how didst thou grieve then, Adam, to behold the end of all thy offspring! Syphax, I joy to meet thee; lest bad men should boast their specious deeds; comfortless, as when a father mourns his children; he rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.

149. The relations of objects which are conceived as receiving the action, or towards which the action is conceived as directed, are two, the immediate, and the mediate; as,—give the book to me, tell him the tale, forgive us our trespasses; in which the book, the tale, our trespasses, are immediate objects; and to me, him, and us, mediate to the predicates, give, tell, and forgive.

150. The relation of the immediate object is most commonly expressed by the objective or accusative case, without a preposition; as,—I crave your pardon, my present business calls me from you now; I'll limit thee this day to seek thy help, thy beneficial help; try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus; there, take you that, sir knave! perhaps some merchant hath invited him; in conclusion, he did beat me there; fetch thy master home; often touching will wear gold; when the sun shines let foolish goats make sport, but creep in crannies when he hides his beams; I want wit in all one word to understand; I never saw her till this time; how can she thus then call us by our names? if we obey them not, this will ensue, they'll suck our breath, or pinch us black and blue; get thee from the door! fetch me an iron crow! have patience, sir! slander's for ever housed, where once it gets possession; got you home, and fetch the chain; I pray you, sir, receive the money now, for fear you ne'er see chain nor money more.

151. But sometimes it is expressed by the objective case with prepositions; as,—I will not let him stir, till I have used the means to make of him a formal man again; after whom dost thou pursue? after a dead dog, after a flea; he escaped out of their hands; he that trusteth in his own heart is a fool; he trusted on the Lord that he would deliver him; if he trust to his own righteousness and commit iniquity, he shall die for it; it lengthens out every act of scorching.

152. The immediate object is brought into relation with the predicate by a preposition, and by being put in the objective case, in every instance when that predicate is an adjective or a substantive; as,—they are victorious over temptation; he has always been a friend to me. And it is the same with all other kinds of objective relations; as,—it was a narrow escape from death; the lion was voracious from hunger. Participles and adverbs have objective factors connected with them in the same way; as,—he is beloved for his generosity; up to the brim; you are near to Warwick by blood and by alliance.

153. The infinitive mood of verbs is also used as the immediate objective factor; as,—he loves to rise early; Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence; he hopes to live; not that I fear to stay, but love to go; if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us with some few bands of chosen soldiers, I'll undertake to land them on our coast.

154. The mediate or remoter object towards which an action is directed, is expressed most frequently by the objective case with a preposition; but also by the objective case alone; as,—not that I pity Henry's misery, but seek revenge on Edward's mockery; tell me their words; the common people by numbers swam to us; he is now committed to the bishop of York; I here resign my government to thee; thus far fortune maketh us amends; here lives a caittif wretch would sell it him; give me thy torch, boy; see thou deliver it to my lord and father; so shalt thou show me friendship; we owe allegiance unto Henry; fear not, but yield me up the keys; I'll leave you to your fortune; he shall pardon thee these outrages; look here, I throw my infamy at thee; two of thy name have sold their lives unto the house of York; my sick heart shows that I must yield my body to the earth, and, by my fall, the conquest to my foe; thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge, whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle; commend me to my valiant brother; sweet rest to his soul! I need not add more fuel to your fire; so first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece, and next his throat unto the butcher's knife; what a peevish fool was that of Crete, that taught his son the office of a fowl! give attendance to reading; he has promised you more than that; buy me the ballad; a Puritan amongst them sings psalms to hornpipes; comparing spiritual things with spiritual; I will liken him unto a wise man; he began to teach them many things.

155. The last kind of objective relation is that which shows the effect or purpose of an action; which is expressed in various ways; as, by the nominative or subjective case of substantives; as,—the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord; I only remain a prophet of the Lord; God called the light day, and the darkness he called night; I say again, let no man think me a fool; man became a living soul; young people reckon their own friendship a sure price of another man's; that also was accounted a land of giants; he made the water wine; who made thee a prince and a judge over us?—by the objective case with certain prepositions; as,—impatience turns an ague into a fever; this mock of his hath turn'd his balls to gunstones; why should damage grow to the hurt of the king? some Tories will take you for a Whig, some Whigs will take you for a Tory; I might have taken her to me to wife; hold such in reputation; I hold Chaucer in the same degree of veneration as the Grecians held Homer; I myself must hunt this deer to death; we shall soon persuade both him, and all his brothers, unto reason; this won't pass for a fault in him; if he ask for bread, will he give him a stone? let the husbandman hope for a good harvest; the prisoners to his own use he keeps; I will call him to so strict account, that he shall render every glory up; amazed he lies, and sadly looks for death; they cast anchor, and wished for the day; Macbeth is ripe for shaking; things were just ripe for a war; this fury fit for her intent she chose; this man with his eye marks and points out each man of us to slaughter; now to our cost your emptiness we know; he hath a pretty young man to his son, whose name is Civility;—by the nominative with as, after some verbs; as,—behold, the man is become as one of us; they looked upon themselves as the happiest people of the universe; the managers have been represented as a second kind of senate; he took our offer as an insult;—by the nominative or objective with a preposition, connected with the predicate by the relational verb to be; as,—I am too far in years to be a pupil now; I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you; if any man think himself to be a prophet, let him acknowledge the things that I write; he lives not now, that knows me to be in love; those pearls of dew she wears, prove to be presaging tears;—by the infinitive mood of verbs; as,—thou hast metamorphosed me, made me neglect my studies, lose my time; I come to bury Cesar, not to praise him; I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death; I come not, friends, to deal away your hearts; it is a creature that I teach to fight, to wind, to stop, to run directly on; bid the commanders prepare to lodge their companies to-night; they mean to warn us at Philippi here; if you dare fight to-day, come to the field; I am compelled to set upon one battle all our liberties; 'tis the first time that ever I was forced to scold; we petty men peep about to find ourselves dishonourable graves; he scorned his spirit that could be moved to smile at any thing; you cast yourself in wonder to see the strange impatience of the heavens; O conspiracy! sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by night? not Erebus itself were dim enough to hide thee from prevention;—or by an adjective or adverb, with or without the relational verb to be, as a connective; as,—thou hast made wit with musing weak, heart sick with thought; put your head into the mouth of a wolf, and when you've brought it out safe and sound, talk of a reward; he told me I had turn'd the wrong side out; the choler of a hog turned syrup of violets green; not to admire is all the art I know, to make men happy, and to keep them so; and all his fortune find to be so airy and so vain; his peers have found him guilty of high treason; the analogy holds good; he for the time remained stupidly good; how is it now become so dreadful to thee? blind men say black feels rough, and white feels smooth; with every minute you do change a mind, and call him noble that was now your hate, him vile that was your garland; he is grown too proud to be so valiant, too wise to err, too good to be unkind.

156. Accessory sentences are employed to express the relation of causality in all its kinds, as will be shown when they are treated of.

157. The objective relation of place is expressed by adverbs, and by prepositions with the objective case; as,—by foul play were we heaved thence, but blessedly help hither; here have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit than other princes can; come away, servant, come! I come—to dive into the fire, to ride on the cur'd clouds; was not this high shore? in troops I have dispers'd them 'bout the isle; safely in harbour is the king's ship; in the deep nook, where once thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew from the still-ree'd Bermoothes; there she's hid; the mariners all under hatches stowed; they are upon the Mediterranean flote, bound sadly home for Naples; thou think'st it much to do me business in the veins o' the earth; where was she born? sir, in Angier; there's wood enough within; come forth, I say; sitting on a bank, this music crept by me upon the waters; thence have I followed it; I hear it now above me; say, what thou seest yonder; how it looks about; put thy sword up, traitor; hence, haug not on my garments: come on, obey; were I in England now, there would this monster make a man; how cam'st thou hither? I escaped upon a butt of sack, which the sailors heaved overboard; my cellar is in a rock by the sea-side, where my wine is hid; hast thou not dropt from heaven? I can go no further, sir; they have left their viands behind; we now are near his cell; hast thou no mouth by land?

158. The relation of place is also expressed by the substantive without prepositions; as,—they had no power to flee this way or that way: when he is gone his way, then he boasteth; he departed from him a little way: what way went he? he went another way: the good man is gone a long journey. The measure of space or distance is expressed in the same manner; as,—let a gallows be made fifty cubits high; full fathom five thy father lies; fifteen cubits upwards did the waters prevail; the king made an image of gold, whose height was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof six cubits; a village which was from Jerusalem threescore furlongs.

159. The objective relation of time is also expressed by ad-verbs and by prepositions with the objective case; as,—by the next moon, upon that day either prepare to die, or else to wed Demetrius; for aught that ever I could read, could ever hear by tale or history, the course of true love never did run smooth; more tuneable than lark to shepherd's ear, when wheat is green, when hawthorn buds appear; a proper man as one shall see in a summer's day: the king doth keep his revels here to-night; sometimes lurk I in a gossip's bowl; how long within this wood intend you stay? perchance till after Theseus' wedding-day: the herb I show'd thee once: I'll put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes; sing me now asleep; by and by I will to thee appear; since night you left me; have you come by night? it seems to me that yet we sleep; in the night how easy is some bush supposed a bear! in the most high and palmy state of Icome, the graves stood tenantless; it faded on the crowing of the cock; I will watch to-night, perchance 'twill walk again; he hath very oft of late given private time to you; I am thy father's spirit, doomed for a certain term to walk the night, and for the day confined to fast in fires; the glow-worm shows the matin to be near: I'll hear thee speak out the rest of this morn; I'll leave you till night: how does your honour for this many a day? the guards from you high eastern hill already move; sometimes walking, not unseen, by hedge-row elms, o'er hillocks green; Francis! anon, anon, sir!

160. The substantive without a preposition is often used when duration of time, or definite length of time, is expressed; as,—how long hast thou to serve? forsooth, five years: what we two nights have seen; all day long have I been plagued; why stand ye here all the day! Daniel desired that he would give him time; if men lived but twenty years, we should be satisfied if they died about sixteen or eighteen; Enos lived ninety years.

161. The objective relation of manner is expressed by adjectives, participles, adverbs, and the objective case with prepositions; as,—thus speaks the king of France; depart in peace; this might have been prevented, and made whole, with very easy arguments of love; thou dost shame thy mother, and wound her honour with this diffidence; your brother did employ my father much; I like thee well; Madam, I'll follow you unto the death; what brings you here to court so hastily? is it Sir Robert's son, that you seek so? before Angiers well met, brave Austria! I give you welcome with a powerless hand; my lord Chatillon may from England bring that right in peace, which here we urge in war; what England says, say briefly, gentle lord, we coolly pause for thee; many a widow's husband groveling lies; to him in favour shall she give the day; by this knot thou shalt most surely tie thy now unsure assurance to the crown; speak England first! I alone, alone do me oppose against the pope; without my wrong there is no tongue hath power to curse him right; do so, good Philip, hang no more in doubt; what canst thou say, if thou stand excommunicate and curs'd? thou may'st hold a serpent by the tongue, a cased lion by the mortal paw, a fasting tiger safer by the tooth, than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold; the sun's o'ercast with blood; if thou couldst see me without eyes, hear me without thine ears, and make reply without a tongue, using conceit alone, without eyes, ears, and harmful sound of words, I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts; it does not become us to live in jest: I shall die alone; the morn begins her rosy progress smiling; my breath grew short; when he has shot his best, he is sure none ever did shoot better; it savoureth of good conceit and some reading; chariot and charioteer lay overturn'd; the world's victor stood subdued by sound; Satan stood confounded.

162. The same relation is also expressed by the substantive with like, and as; as,—be thou as lightning in the eyes of France; my hand, like a poor beggar, railleth on the rich; hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side? thou, like a civil war, sett'st oath to oath; this act is as an ancient tale new-told; the poison is, as a fiend, confined to tyrannize on unperceivable condemned blood; what will be my confusion, when he sees me neglected and forsaken like himself; they roared like lions caught in toils; thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself; ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

163. The accessory sentences expressive of the relations of place, time, and manner, will be treated of in the following division.

ACCESSORY SENTENCES.

164. When two or more sentences are connected so as to be independent of one another, their relation is said to be that of co-ordination; as,—I put myself to thy direction, and unspeak mine own detraction; their malady convinces the great assay of art, but, at his touch, they presently ascend; dispute it like a man. I shall do so, but I must also feel it as a man; did Heaven look on, and would not take their part? I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report; I cannot fly, but, bear-like, I must fight the course; they keep the word of promise to our ear, and break it to our hope; your cause of sorrow must not be measured by his worth, for then it hath no end; whether he was combined with Norway, or did lice the rebel with hidden help and vantage, or that with both he labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not, but treasons capital, confess'd, and prov'd, have oerthrown him; first, metals are more durable than plants, secondly, they are more solid and hard, thirdly, they are scholly subterraneous, whereas plants are part above the earth and part under the earth.

165. But when they are so connected that any one of them can be considered as standing in place of a substantive, adject-tive, or adverb, as factor in a combination, their relation is said to be that of subordination; and the sentence which is used as a factor in the combination is called an accessory sentence, the sentence to which it is subordinately related being called the principal sentence; as,—this is the sergeant, who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought 'gainst my captivity; were such things here, as we do speak about? do you not hope your children shall be kings? if chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me, without my stir: I have spoke with one that saw him die: the love that follows us, sometime is our trouble, which still we thank as love: herein I teach you, how you shall bid God yield us for your pains, and thank us for your trouble: would'st thou live a coward in thine own esteem, letting I dare not wait upon I would, like the poor cat i' the adage? when you durst do it, then you were a man.

166. The syntax of accessory sentences is subject to the same laws as that of principal sentences; and the syntax of each sentence, principal or accessory, is complete in itself, and not modified or interfered with by that of any other; as,—the earth hath bubbles, as the water hath, and these are of them: false face must hide what the false heart doth know; is this a dagger which I see before me? I have thee not, and yet I see thee still: thou sure and firm-set earth, hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear thy very stones prate of my where-about, and take the present horror from the time, which now suits with it.

167. According to the relation in which accessory sentences stand to the principal sentence, they are substantive, adjective, or adverbial sentences. When an accessory sentence stands instead of the subject to a principal sentence, or in the relation of causality to the predicate, it is termed a substantive sentence; when it is equivalent to an adjective used attributively, it is termed an adjective sentence; and when it stands in the relations of place, time, or manner, to a predicate, or indicates a cause, condition, concession, or comparison, which is connected with the principal sentence by an adverbial pronoun, it is termed an adverbial sentence. These different classes of accessory sentences will now be more fully considered and illustrated.

168. Substantive sentences employed as subjects to principal sentences, are connected with them by that, who, which, what, where, when, whether, if, &c.; as,—what's done, is done; what's to come of my despised time, is nought but bitterness; neither my place, nor ought I heard of business, hath rais'd me from my bed; that I have ta'en away this old man's daughter, it is true; that she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit; how comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot? I have lost the immortal part, sir, of myself, and what remains is bestial; my suit to her is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona procure me some access; those that be not, would they might seem none! who steals my purse, steals trash; whoever doth to temperance apply his steadfast lip, and all his actions frame, trust me, shall find no greater enemy than stubborn perturbation to the same; whoever is really brave, hath always this comfort, when he is oppressed; whatsoever is first in the invention, is last in the execution; whate'er the ocean pales, or sky inclips, is thine; when he will come, where he will live, and how he will obtain a livelihood, are as yet uncertain; whether the ceremonial will be conducted in the same way as it was in former times, has not been determined; which is a wonder, how his grace should glean it.

169. They are also employed in the causal relations of causality to a predicate; and are connected with the principal sentence by that, who, which, what, where, &c., and sometimes by prepositions also; but that is frequently omitted; as,—you know not what you do: right glad I am, he was not at this fray: I gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me; could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow, we would as willingly give cure as know; see, where he comes: tell me in sadness, who she is you love; O! teach me how I should forget to think; what doth her beauty serve, but as a note where I may read, who pass'd that passing fair? find those persons out whose names are written there, and to them say, my house and welcome on their pleasure stay; thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age: what, good man boy!—I say, he shall,—go to! I would not for the world they saw thee here; I have forgot why I did call thee back; thy earliness doth me assure, thou art uppos'd by some distemp'rance; when, and where, and how we met, and woo'd, and made exchange of vows, I'll tell thee as we pass; I anger her sometimes, and tell her that Paris is the properer man; do you not see that I am out of breath? resolve whether you will or no; let them take whether they will: Romeo, that spoke him fair, bade him bethink how nice the quarrel was; art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art; my lord, I'll tell my lady you will come; then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long, but send him back; then I hope thou wilt be satisfied; I pray you tell my lord and father, madam, I will not marry yet; and when I do, I swear it shall be Romeo; proud can I never be of what I hate; we scarce thought us bless'd, that God had sent us but this only child; I would I knew not why it should be slow'd; that you do love me I am nothing jealous; for which of these works do ye stone me? what you would work me to I have some aim; I follow you, to do I know not what.

170. Substantive sentences are frequently abridged into infinitives and participles, which have then the power of substantives; as,—whither go they? up to the eastern town, to see the battle; let it please you both to hear Ulysses speak; 'tis mad idolatry to make the service greater than the god; Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us such things as might offend the weakest spleen, to fight for and maintain; so to be valiant is no praise at all; there is a law in each well-ordered nation, to curb those raging appetites that are most disobedient and refractory; to persist in doing wrong, extenuates not wrong; I was discouraged for the want of something I could think worth sending fifteen hundred miles; those corpuses of colour insinuating themselves into all the pores of the body to be dyed, may asperate its superfluities; for avoiding the watering of them we wet their hay; whom not to know, argues one's self unknown; advise, if this be worth attempting; I should ill become this throne, if aught of danger could deter me from attempting; anxiety has hindered my eating till this moment; his being a foreigner is no fault, nor any reason for injuring him; he insists upon being admitted; we are proud of being born Britons; having served your country never so well, will not save you from suspicion; his entering on such a pursuit gives no assurance of a successful issue; I was weary with forbearing; I was dismayed at seeing it; thinking is but idle waste of thought. Illustrations of these forms have been given in the former part of the Syntax of this Outline.

171. Adjective sentences, used attributively, are connected with the principal sentence by the relative pronouns, which assume the gender and number of the substantive to which they refer, but in case are determined by their relations in their own sentence,—and it must be observed that these pronouns are frequently omitted, when the meaning is clear without them; when such is used in the principal sentence, it is commonly referred to by as in the accessory; as,—the sweet south, that breathes upon a bank of violets, stealing and giving odour; she that hath a heart of that fine frame, to pay this debt of love but to a brother, how will she love, when the rich, golden shaft hath kill'd the flock of all affections else that live in her; I saw your brother bind himself to a strong mast, that li'd upon the sea;

the daughter of a count, that died some twelvemonth since; then leaving her in the protection of his son, her brother, who shortly also died: they are scoundrels, and subtractors, that say so of him: would that I had bestowed that time in the tongues that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting: those that are fools, let them use their talent; infirmity, that decays the wise, doth ever make the better fool; the rudeness that hath appeared in me, have I learned from my entertainment; I see you what you are, you are proud; with groans that thunder low, with sighs of fire; that old and antique song we heard last night: I am ever since a fresh admirer of what I saw there: ancestry, whose grace chalks successors their way; a gift that Heaven gives him, which buys a place next to the king; temperance, that's the appliance only which your disease requires; worthy Wolsey, who cannot err, he did it; that dye is on me, which makes my whitest part black; language unmanly, yea, such which breaks the sides of loyalty, and almost appears in loud rebellion; you frame things that are known alike, which are not wholesome to those which would not know them: exactions, whereof my sovereign would have note; whom I most hated living, thou hast made me, now in his ashes, honour; such animals as live in the water.

172. Accessory adjective sentences frequently stand in apposition to a whole sentence: the sentence being regarded substantively, or as equivalent to one single thought; as,—he was unsatisfied in getting, which was a sin; he has lost his fortune, which I did not know; I had my trial, which makes me a little happier than my wretched father; with a baser man of arms, by far, once, in contempt, they would have bartered me, which I, disdainingly, scorn'd; he did upbraid me with my father's death, which obliquely set bars before my tongue; they shall obey, unless they seek for hatred at my hands, which if they do, they shall feel the vengeance of my wrath; yet had we not determined he should die, until your lordship came to see his end, which now the loving haste of these our friends, somewhat against our meaning, hath prevented; they, like dumb statues, or breathless stones, stared on each other, and looked deadly pale, which when I saw, I reprehended them; men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes, which afterwards give leisure to repent; as he spoke, a braying ass did sing most loud and clear, whereat his horse did start, as he had heard a lion roar.

173. When the accessory sentence has for its subject the substantive expression, with which it is connected as an attributive, its verb is put into that personal form which will show that relation; as,—we give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, who art, and vast, and art to come; unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given; God hath chosen things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: grace be unto you, from him, who is, and who was, and who is to come; thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them which do such things, and doest the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God? he that is of God, heareth God's words; I that speak unto thee, am he; my name is Caius Marcins, who hath done to thee particularly, and to all the Volces, great hurt and mischief.

174. Adjective sentences are frequently abridged into participles, and into adjectives also; as,—contention, like a horse [who is] full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose; after him came, spurring hard, a gentleman, [who was] almost forsworn with speed; a sullen bell, [which is] remember'd knolling a departing friend; my limbs, renewed with grief, being now enrag'd with grief, are thrice themselves; the gain [which was] propo'd, chok'd the respect of likely peril [which was] fear'd; else, we fortify in paper, and in figures, using the names of men instead of men: there is a history in all men's lives, figuring the nature of the times [that are]

deceased; your flock, assembled by the bell, encircled you to hear with reverence your exposition on the holy text; he is tired of a business liable to various chances; never king of England had nobles richer, and more loyal subjects; to pardon willing, and to punish loth, you strike with one hand, but you heal with both; earth may with her part averse from the sun's beam meet night, her other part still luminous by his ray.

175. The meaning and use of the conjunctive mood of verbs must be exhibited before we proceed to the consideration of adverbial accessory sentences. The history of our language has been so peculiar, that we shall find little assistance in understanding this subject from the special laws of other languages. And at the same time, English grammarians have so sedulously endeavoured to fit their language to the forms under which other languages, and especially the classical languages, were developed by the old unphilosophical system, that it is impossible, by the accumulation of examples merely, to arrive at correct knowledge. It will be useful to carry in our minds a principle by which we can select examples of accurate usage, and reject solecisms; and this we shall find in the definitions of mood already given. See § 12, 14, 41, &c.

176. The existence of the activity expressed by a verb may be contemplated by a speaker as being actual, or simply possible, or necessitated by his own will; and the forms by which these various relations are expressed are the indicative, the conjunctive, and the imperative moods, respectively. We have already shown that the auxiliary verbs of mood are to be arranged as subdivisions of the indicative mood, since, essentially, they convey declarations of actual, and not of conditional and contingent, existence. Now it will be seen at a glance, that it is only in the case of a wish or desire, that conditional and contingent existence can be expressed by a single, uncompounded sentence; in other cases there must be a compound sentence employed, and the accessory sentence will convey the notions of conditionality and contingency which exist in the speaker's mind. We have forms for the expression of these notions, just as all cultivated languages have, and they are classed together as the conjunctive mood; but whilst in other languages these forms are numerous, and capable of various application, by which great elegance and accuracy of speech were secured; in our own, these forms are few, and capable of no other use than that of conveying the existence and the degree (and this only, as it were, rudely and approximately) of the conditionality and contingency, under which the notions are regarded by the speaker. These forms do not express these notions absolutely, but solely in their relation to the speaker; and herein is contained the whole rationale of this little understood and much perplexed subject. We may now treat of it more particularly, and give examples of the various applications of which it is capable.

177. In principal sentences, the conjunctive mood is employed to express a wish, or desire, or even an admission in arguments; as,—the Lord be judge, and judge between me and thee, and see, and plead my cause, and deliver me out of thine hand; my God forbid it me, that I should do this thing; the enemies of my lord the king be as that young man is! the God of our fathers look thereon and rebuke it! the Lord hear thee in the day of trouble, the name of the God of Jacob defend thee! according to your faith, be it unto you! Heaven secure him! so be it! be it so, yet I cannot agree to your conclusion; grant that the Fates have firm'd by their decree, the Trojan race to reign in Italy; allow it to be true, does that justify the king's murder? O that thou wert as my brother! O that they were wise!

178. Both in principal and accessory sentences, were, and had,

are used with the significations would, should, &c., be, and would, should, &c., have; as,—it were well, the general were put in mind of it; that were hard to compass, because she will admit no kind of suit; I had been happy, so I had nothing known; if I had not come and spoken unto them, they had not had sin; it were a delicate stratagem, to shoe a troop of horse with felt; had he been where he thought, by this had thought been past; hadst thou been aught but gossamer, so many fathom down precipitating, thou hadst shiver'd like an egg; it had been so with us, had we been there; had I but died an hour before this chance, I had lived a blessed time; many acts which had been blamable in a peaceable government, were employed to detect conspiracies. Of the antiquated forms, I be, thou beest, &c., it is not necessary to give examples. See § 58, (1.)

179. When a conditional notion is regarded as probable, the forms of the conjunctive mood corresponding to the present forms of the indicative are employed; as,—though thou repent, yet I have still the loss; against that time, if ever that time come, when I shall see thee frown on my defects; how like Eve's apple doth thy beauty show, if thy sweet nature answer not thy show; if the flower with base infection meet, the basest weed outbraves his dignity; the summer's flower is to the summer sweet, though to itself it only live and die; if he thrive, and I be cast away, the worst was this,—my love was my decay; an if I live until I be a man, I'll win our ancient right in France again; if he be not born to be hanged, our case is miserable; O Heaven! crown what I profess with kind event, if I speak true; if I have too austere punished you, your compensation makes amends; if you be pleased, retire into my cell, and there repose; if I be a father, where is mine honour? and if I be a master, where is my fear? not that I so affirm, though so it seem; if I be wicked, woe unto me! and if I be righteous, yet will I not lift up my head; go thou thy way till the end be; we have not heard whether there be any Holy Ghost; if God be for us, who can be against us? take heed, lest any man deceive you; if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us; if thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth; thy judgments, which if a man do, he shall live in them; if thou do these things, show thyself to the world; if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; sir, come down ere my child die; add not to his words, lest he reproach thee; doth our law judge any man before it hear him? though thou detain me, I will not eat; though it tarry, wait for it; he shall not eat of the holy things, unless he wash his flesh with water; though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit; I cannot do any thing, till thou be come thither: seek out his wickedness, till thou find none; tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high: whether they be come out for peace, or whether they be come out for war, take them alive.

180. When the contingency of the conditional notion is so great that it is regarded as improbable, or even almost impossible; and when it is intended to show its impossibility, by assuming its probability and thence deducing a conclusion inconsistent with established facts or acknowledged truths; those forms of the conjunctive are used which correspond with the past tenses of the indicative; as,—though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, yet will I gather them from thence; this man, if he were a prophet, would have known who touched him; if ye were of the world, the world would love his own; if the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? if the whole were hearing, where were the smelling? if it were so, why should not my spirit be troubled? if I knew certainly that evil were determined upon thee, then would I not tell thee? the bread is in a manner common, though it were sanctified this day in the vessel;

though I should receive a thousand shekels of silver, yet would I not put forth my hand against the king's son; though these three men were in it, they should deliver neither son nor daughter; though I should die with thee, yet would I not deny thee; the duke of Milan, and his more braver daughter, could control thee, if now 'twere fit to do!'; here lies your brother, no better than the earth he lies on, if he were that which now he's like, that's dead; if you but knew, how you the purpose cherish, whiles thus you mock it; if in Naples I should report this now, would they believe me? if you now behold them, your affections would become tender; 'twould be a sight indeed, if one could match you; if you did, it would not much approve me; if ever I did dream of such a matter, abhor me; she was a wight—if ever such wight were—to suckle fools, and chronicle small beer.

181. The exact difference between the probable and improbable forms of the conjunctive mood is easily seen, when the speeches of a candidate during an election and after his defeat are compared: while the matter is uncertain, he says, if I be elected, I will observe such and such a line of action; when he knows that he is rejected, he says, if I were your representative, the noble principles of the British constitution would never want a champion. But the degrees of contingency are so many, and the conception of it may be so varied, that we find these forms used, in some instances, with almost interchanged signification;—as, if it be a sin to covet honour, I am, the most offending soul alive; if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost; if the ill spirit have so fair a house, good things will strive to dwell with't; all men missed, whether he were the Christ or not; though he were dead, yet shall he live; if thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread; if thou didst ever thy dear father love, revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

182. The distinctive characteristic of the conjunctive mood being conditionality with contingency, it follows necessarily that it can never be applied to past time, but only to the present and the future: we say correctly, if it be possible, I will do it; if I were in a situation to defend myself, I would not flee; but we can only use the indicative mood in speaking of the past; as,—if it had been possible, I would have done it; had I been in a situation to defend myself, I would not have fled. But in quoting a conditional and contingent expression, the conjunctive form to be employed is determined by the tense of the verb in the principal sentence; the probable forms being used with the present and future tenses, and the improbable forms with the past; as,—he says, that he will go, if he be able; he will think, if this be so, I can never succeed; he said, he would go, if he were able; he thought, that, if it were possible, he might succeed.

183. Accessory adverbial sentences of place are connected with the principal sentence by the relative adverbs where, whence, whither, &c.; the demonstratives here, there, &c., being either expressed or understood in the principal sentence; as,—where'er thy navy spreads her canvass strings, homage to thee, and peace to all, she brings; I strayed I knew not whither; I go whence I shall not return; whithersoever the nature and intention of the grace doth drive us, thither we must go; I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest; heaven is here, where Juliet lives; where have you been gadding? where I have learned me to repent the sin of disobedient opposition to you; wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine, his honour and the greatness of his name shall be, and make new nations; where the tree falleth, there it shall lie; where your treasure is, there will your heart be also; where I am, thither ye cannot come; let him walk from whence he came, lest he catch cold on's feet; whithersoever the spirit goes to go, they went.

184. Accessory sentences of time are connected with their prinprincipal sentences by the conjunctions and adverbs, after, as, before, ere, since, as soon as, till, until, when, while, all the while, whilst, &c.; with most of which then is expressed or understood in the principal sentence; and by but, or than, when the words sooner, or no sooner, occur in the principal sentence; as,—after I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee; the frightened Turgis trembled as she spoke; why shouldst thou die before thy time? how long will it be ere they believe me? since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, we have wanted all things; sooner shall you the round world unsphere, than pluck him from the path of right; the sun is no sooner risen, but it withereth the grass; no sooner had I arrived, than fortune turned in his favour; that which ye have, hold fast till I come; there shall he be, until I visit him; when he is come, he will tell us all things; the Lord is with you while ye be with him; our aim was, to take in many towns, ere, almost, Rome should know we were afoot; they were a wall unto us by night and by day, all the while we were with them keeping the sheep; as soon as they hear, they shall be obedient unto me; live whilst you live! what we have, we prize not to the worth, whilst we enjoy it; nor did you think it folly, to keep your great pretences veiled, till when thy needs must show themselves; kings may take their advantage when and how they list; woods and rocks had ears to rapture till the savage clamour drowned both harp and voice; he is the most improved mind, since you saw him, that ever was; when thou doest evil, then thou rejoicest.

185. These sentences are frequently abridged into a participle; as,—being mov'd, he will not spare to gird the gods; such a nature, tickled with good success, disdains the shadow which he treads on at noon; meeting two such weak-men as you are, if he drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it; death, that dark spirit, in 's nery arm doth lie, which being advanced declines, and then men die; being gone, I am a man again; being press'd to the ear, e'en when the navel of the state was touched, they would not thread the gates; being 's the war, their mutinies and revolts, wherein they showed most valour, spoke not for them; being angry, he does forget that ever he heard the name of death; go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand, and thus far having stretched it, say, thou art their soldier; if, seeing me, thou dost not think me for the man I am, necessity commands me name myself; when we banished him, we respected not them, and he returning to break our necks, they respect not us; having read it, bid them repair to the market-place; being banished, he came unto my hearth; I have heard, where many of the best respect in Rome, (except immortal Cæsar,) speaking of Brutus, and groaning underneath this age's yoke, have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes; having brought his treasure where we will, then we take down his load, and turn him off, to shake his ears and graze in commons; being incens'd, he's flint; being moody, give him line and scope. Sometimes the participle is omitted, and the nominative case is made objective; as,—greedy hope to find his wish, and best advantage, us asunder, for we being asunder, or when we are asunder. But this is rather an imitation of a classic idiom, than native to our tongue.

186. Adverbial accessory sentences of manner, are connected with their principal sentences by as, as if, as though, (if and though being frequently understood), and that; so being either expressed or understood in the principal sentence; as,—I will aggravate my voice so, that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove, I will roar you as 'twere any nightingale; when thou dost hear I am as I have been, approach me, and thou shalt be as thou wast; I live as I did, I think as I did, I love you as I did, but all these are of no purpose, the world will not live, think, or love as I do; with the noise it shook as it could fall; men are generally permitted to publish books, and contradict others, and even themselves, as they please; answering their questions, as if it were a matter that needed it; so frowned the mighty combatants, that hell grew darker at their frown; so grant my suit, as I enforce my right; thick as autumnal leaves that strew the brooks in Vallombrosa, where the Etrurian shades high overarch'd embower, so thick between, abject and lost, lay these; treat it kindly, that it may wish, at least, with us to stay; as thou hast said, so must we do; brethren, be as I am, for I am as ye are; think not as though some strange thing happened unto you.

187. The accessory sentence of manner is often abridged into an infinitive or participle, and sometimes into an adjective; the correlatives so and as being either expressed or understood; as,—so we speak, not as pleasing men; he speaks so as to be understood by every body; they have conducted themselves in this matter so as to deserve the good opinion of all; let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave! near him, thy angel becomes a fear, as being overpowered: they seeing, see not, and hearing, they hear not; he rejoiced, believing on the Lord, with all his house; looking up to heaven, he sighed; if she depart, let her remain unmarried; I remained there, astonished, seven days; the fore part stuck fast, and remained immovable; he remained speechless. For other examples, see the former part of the Syntax of this Outline.

188. Adverbial sentences of causality, which denote a motive or moral cause, or a real cause, are most usually connected with the principal sentence by the relative adverbs because and forasmuch as; and those denoting a logical cause, with therefore, expressed or understood, in the principal sentence; or reason, by as, or since; but this distinction is not rigidly observed, and these relative adverbs themselves are sometimes suppressed; as,—we love him, because he first loved us; the hireling fleeth, because he is a hireling; ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled; because I live, ye shall live also; he shall restore the lamb fourfold, because he did this thing, and because he had no pity; let me die, since I have seen thy face; since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection from the dead; since ye say, the burden of the Lord, therefore, thus saith the Lord, because ye say this word, the burden of the Lord, and I have sent unto you, saying, ye shall not say, the burden of the Lord, therefore, behold, I, even I, will utterly forget you, and I will forsake you; will you not, since I have commanded you? I believed, therefore I have spoken; because ye obeyed not, therefore is this thing come upon you; therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord; he that is of God, heareth God's words, ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God; they have no changes, therefore they fear not God; judgment is before him, therefore trust in him; they also are under obligation who did assist in doing the injury, as without them the thing could not have been done; he blushes, therefore he is guilty; since truth and constancy are vain, since neither love, nor sense of pain, nor force of reason can persuade, then let example be obey'd; since he hath got the jewel that I lov'd, and that which ye did swear to keep for me, I will become as liberal as you. Some other words are employed as connectives to causative sentences, occasionally; as,—you should in all sense be much bound to him, for, as I hear, he was much bound for you; I have received no letters from him, nor any tidings of him, these many years, hence I conclude that he is dead.

189. These causative sentences are often abridged into a participle; as,—how knows this man letters, having never learned?

having this confidence, I know that I shall continue with you all; having, therefore, these promises, let us cleanse ourselves from all pollution; who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God; fearing lest they should fall into the quicksands, they strake sail; all the Jews eat not, except they wash their hands oft, holding the tradition of the elders: being justified by faith, we have peace with God; knowing the terror of the Lord, we persuade men; ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures; Demas hath forsaken us, having loved this present world. There is also an antiquated use of the participle being which is found now only in some provinces of England; as,—you loiter here too long, being you are to take soldiers up in the counties as you go.

190. Conditional adverbial sentences are joined with their principals by the relative adverb, if; by the conjunctions, so, unless, an' (for and if); and by the phrases, in case, and provided that (with that most frequently suppressed); with the demonstrative then expressed or understood in the principal sentence; as,—an' the worst fall that can fall, I hope I shall make shift to go without him; if to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages princes' palaces; an' if you will not have me, choose! if he would despise me, I would forgive him; if you had known the virtue of the ring, or half her worthiness that gave the ring, or your own honour to contain the ring, you would not then have parted with the ring; if he steal aught the whilst this play is playing, and 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft; reason thus with life, if I do lose thee, I do lose a thing that none but fools would keep; I take your offer, and will live with you, provided that you do no outrages; a sure retreat to his forces, in case they should have an ill day, or an unlucky chance in the field; if all this be so, then man has a natural freedom; it matters not how they were called, so we know who they are; unless I look on Syria in the day, there is no day for me to look upon; if it be so, why am I thus? if in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men the most miserable; they sleep not, unless they cause some to fall; I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them, two hours together; if thou love me, 'tis time thou wert away; I had been happy, so I had nothing known; he will, an' if he live to be a man.

191. When the relative adverb is omitted, conditional sentences assume the form of interrogative sentences; but this takes place most frequently when the verb is in the past or improbable form; and the demonstrative then is less often omitted in such cases; as,—had he not resembled my father as he slept, I had done 't; had not men been fated to be blind, then had our lances pierc'd the treach'rous wood; had fate so pleas'd, I had been eldest born; so long it not that I regard the presence of the king, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee; were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandise I will; had I been judge, thou shouldst have had ten more; had you been there, I think, you would have begged the ring of me to give the worthy doctor; were I my father's coo, would I do this? live Roderigo, he calls me to a restitution large; seest they not quickly, I should die with laughing.

192. Conditional sentences are often abridged into participles, with if and so sometimes expressed, and into the imperative mood; as,—what judgment shall I dread, doing no wrong? so doing, thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head; pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear, I never more will break an oath with thee; the greatest grace lending grace, ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring their fiery torcher his diurnal ring, this is infirm from your sound parts shall fly; my husband bies him home, where, Heaven aiding, we'll be, before our welcome; not scolding, pity would not let me do 't; if wounding, then it was to show my skill; having ever seen, in the predominate crimes, the youth you breathe of, guilty, be assur'd he closes with you in this consequence.

193. Concessive adverbial sentences are joined with the principal by the conjunctions, though, although, albeit, &c., with yet expressed or understood in the principal sentence; as,—he, who has a probable belief that he shall meet with thieves in such a road, thinks himself to have reason enough to decline it, albeit he is sure to sustain some less though yet considerable inconvenience by his so doing; me, the gold of France did not seduce, although I did admit it as a motive the sooner to effect what I intended; not that I so affirm, though so it seem; though the name of abstracted ideas is attributed to universal ideas, yet this abstraction is not great; though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor; though he were [this should be was] a son, yet learned he obedience by the things that he suffered; in nothing am I behind, though I be nothing; ye will not believe, though it be told you; though he understand, he will not answer; although all shall be offended, yet will not I; though they cry, yet will not I hear them; although the fly tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines, the labour of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat, the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls, yet will I rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation. A partial abridgment of these sentences occasionally takes place, when the verb is in a compound tense; as,—one, whose eyes, albeit unused to the melting mood, drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees; though scotched, the snake is not yet killed.

194. These sentences, when the verb is in the improbable conjunctive form, often omit the conjunction, and appear in the shape of a question; as,—were thou an oracle to tell me so, I'd not believe it; had I a hundred arms, I would not stretch out one to help you; had he conducted the enterprise with ever so astonishing success, he would have received no praise. And sometimes they assume the form of an indirect question, being connected with their principal sentences by however, whoever, &c.; as,—whoever he be, I do not fear him; I shall not change my opinion, whatsoever you say; in whatever way he will manage the business, he will not succeed.

195. Comparative adverbial sentences are those of manner, and those of intensity. The former have been treated of in § 186; we proceed to treat of the latter.

196. Intensity may be expressed in the form of the factive relation by an accessory sentence connected with the principal sentence by but, that, as, &c., so being in the principal sentence; as,—it was so cold, that the rivers were frozen; he is so weak, as to be unable to speak; can nothing great, and at the height remain so long, but its own weight will ruin it? in the midst of this darkness they saw so much light, as to believe that when they died they went immediately to the stars; I shook with holy fear, yet not so much, but that I noted who did the most in song and dance excel; the relations are so uncertain, as they require a great deal of examination; God so loved the world, that he gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him, should not perish, but have everlasting life; so it fell out to him, that the people trod on him and he died.

197. Equality of intensity is expressed by the adverb as in both principal and accessory sentences; as,—he is as rich as he wishes to be; he dances as often as he likes; come as soon as you can; as long as he travels, he is in good health; as far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us; here's a large mouth, that talks as familiarly of roaring lions as maids of thirteen do of puppy dogs; as true as I believe, you think them false; thy uncle will as dear be to thee as thy father was; he will look as hollow as a ghost, as dim and meagre as an ague's fit; you are as fond of grief as of your child; life is as tedious as a twice-told tale; so I were out of prison, and kept sheep, I should be as merry as the day is long; as good to die and go, as die and stay; as confident as is the falcon's flight against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight.

198. This relation of equal intensity is expressed also by two comparatives connected by the; as,—the longer I am acquainted with him, the more I like him; the more he possesses, the more he wishes to possess; the worse, the better; the more they afflicted them, the more they grew and increased; the more I love, the less I am loved; the less they themselves want from others, the less will they be careful to supply the necessities of the indigent; the more the kindled combat rises higher, the more with fury burns the blazing fire; the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is; more light and light? more dark and dark our woes.

199. The infinitive mood used factitively after the adverb too, which has been treated of before, (see § 156.), is employed as an abridged adverbial sentence of intensity; as,—he is too weak to attempt his defence; he is too honest to tell a lie; your father's rough and stern, his will too strong to bend, too proud to learn; I know I am too mean to be your queen, and yet too good to be your concubine; disloyal? the word is too good to point out her wickedness.

200. After the comparative degree in the principal sentence, the accessory sentence of intensity is introduced by than, the comparison being one of inequality; as,—a little more than kin, and less than kind; were we not better to fall at once with virtue, than draw a wretched and dishonour'd breath? more true delight in that small pound, than in possessing all the earth, was found; I never met with a more unhappy conjuncture of affairs, than in the business of that unfortunate earl; I love you for nothing more than for the just esteem you have for all the sons of Adam; these kind of knives in this plainness harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends, than twenty silken ducking overbaunts; the advantages of learning are more lasting than those of arms; 'tis less to conquer than to make wars cease; their learning lay chiefly in flourish, they were not much wiser than the less pretending multitude; he has a horse better than the Neapolitan's; a better bad habit of frowning than the Count Palatine; I have seen better faces in my time, than stand on any shoulders that I see before me at this instant; better a mechanic rule were stretched and broken, than a great beauty were omitted; there are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy.

201. Numerous examples throughout the sections devoted to the Objective Combination, and to Accessory Sentences, have shown that many distinct objective factors may be connected with one predicate; and not only many accessory sentences appended to one principal sentence, but that each accessory sentence may serve as principal to other accessories. A few illustrations are, however, added; as,—(1.) Examples of several objects connected with one predicate: sure, he that made us with such large discourse, looking before and after, gave us not that capability, and god-like reason, to just in us unus'd; this bud of love, by summer's ripening breath, may prove a beautiful flower, when next we meet; with fairest flowers, whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele, I'll sweeten thy sad grave; for two nights together I have made the ground my bed; often, to our comfort, shall we find the sharded beetle in a safer hold than is the full-winged eagle; Eneobarbus, Antony hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with his bounty overplus; at this fusty stuff, the large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling, from his deep chest laughs out a loud applause; in her days every man shall eat in safety under his own vine, what he plants; make way there for the princess.—(2.) Examples of compound accessory sentences: 'twas merry, when you staggered on your angling, when your dicer did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he with ferrency drew up; O Cromwell, Cromwell, had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal I serv'd the king, he would not in mine age have left me naked to mine enemies; when I am forgotten, as I shall be, and sleep in dull cold marble where no mention of me more must be heard of, say I taught thee; you are not to be taught that you have many enemies, that know not why they are so; if we shall stand still, in fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at, we should take root here where we sit, or sit state statues only; you know no more than others, but you frame things, that are known alike, which are not wholesome to those which would not know them, and yet must perforce be their acquaintance; thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge, whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle, under whose shade the ramping lion slept, whose top-branch overpeered Jove's spreading tree, and kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind; though the edge hath something hid ourselves, yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike, we'll never leave till we have hewn thee down.

CONSTRUCTION.

202. Construction is the proper arrangement of the words in a sentence, and serves to point out the unity of the different combinations in a sentence, and the subordination of their several factors. The general rule adopted by every language, with modifications arising from the capabilities of each, and from the purpose of the speaker in any instance, is—to place the principal after the subordinate factor.

203. When this rule is observed the construction is said to be direct; when not, it is called inverted. We will briefly exemplify the construction in each of the combinations.

204. In the predicative combination, the direct construction places the subject first, and the predicate last, with the copula (if there be one) between; as,—she weeps, he smiles, thy place is filled, all is lost, my crown is in thy heart, her Henry is deposed, his Edward is installed, the foe is merciless, it works, he walks, they tremble, they have fed, I will be king, thou canst not.

205. In questions, commands, conditional sentences without the conjunction, where a formal subject as well as the real subject is expressed, and particularly in rhetorical or poetical language, the inverted construction is employed; as,—is he dead? dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns? mount you, my lord! widow, go you along; go ye brothers to the man that took him; hadst thou but loved him half so well as I, thou wouldst have left thy heart-blood there, rather than disinherited thine only son; in dreadful war mayst thou be overcome; be thy title right or wrong, Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence; there was a man dwell by a churchyard; how blessed am I! well hast thou spoken, cousin; deposed he shall be, in despite of all; his is the right, and therefore pardon me; it was the lark, the herald of the morn; note you are heir, therefore enjoy it now; many a battle have I won in France.

206. In the attributive combination the direct construction places the adjective and the genitive case before the substantive, and the objective with the preposition of after it, and that substantive in apposition last which is most emphatic; as,—the northern lords; your oath, my lord; so looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch that trembles under his decouring paws; as for the brat of this accursed duke, whose father slew my father, he shall die; the crown of England, father; the duke of Norfolk; my lord Cobham; the house of Lancaster; King Henry's head; far be the thought of this from Henry's heart; father, tear the crown from the usurper's head; our heart's great sorrow; thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, earl of March; the Lord Protector lost it; Lartius, the dictator; our earl of Warwick Edward's greatest friend.

207. The inverted construction is employed to increase the emphasis of the attribute whose place is altered; as,—writ in remembrance, more than things long past: men lying flatter those that die; Henry, of England, France, and Scotland, king, and lord of Ireland. The adjective, however, stands after the substantive, in common speech, only when it is enlarged into the objective combination; as,—this letter written to my father, bear with thee; the river, smooth from its depth, deceived him; the prince, true to his purpose, would not receive it. And when either the genitive case, or the objective with of is put into the place properly occupied by the other, it assumes the other's form; as,—England's king; in that dead time when Gloster's death was plotted; the love of a father; the tenderness of a mother.

208. In the objective combination, the direct construction places adverbs most usually before the predicate, and sometimes even before the copula, and the subject;—the immediate object next after the predicate; unless the remoter object be in the objective case, when it follows the verb, and the immediate object is placed after it;—the objects of cause and purpose or effect, after the immediate object;—and those of manner, place, and time, in the order we have named them in, unless any one be emphatic, when it is put after its usual place; as,—wisdom and youth are seldom joined in one; there is true joy conveyed to the heart by preventing grace; they had but very obscure apprehensions of those things which urge men most powerfully to forsake their sins; there he stands; the design of the heroic poem is to form the mind to heroic virtue by example; they made room for the old knight at the head of them; I tell thee what, corporal, I could tear her; it grieves me he should desperately venture the loss of his well-deserving life; the division of the time by weeks has been universally observed in the world; webfooted birds do not live constantly upon the land; things may and must differ in their use, but yet they are all to be used according to the will of God. The examples in the foregoing Syntax may be referred to for illustration of this construction.

209. The inverted objective construction is found chiefly in questions and rhetorical or poetical language, where the object is placed at the beginning of the sentence, or any factor of the combination, for peculiar emphasis, put in a position that strongly fixes the attention on it; as,—never any thing was so unbred as that odious man; that law I will consent to, never! her breath, indeed, those hands have newly stopped; a new-formed faction does your power oppose; in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night divide the spoil; another bliss before mine eyes I place; on your head turn he the widows' tears, the orphans' cries; death's dishonourable victory we with our stately presence glorify; unto the French the dreadful judgment-day so dreadful will not be, as was his sight; a holy maid hither with me I bring; her aid she promis'd, and assur'd success, in complete glory she reveal'd herself; this night the sieg'e assurably I'll raise; whom dost thou fear? of whom shall I be afraid? what sayest thou? For more numerous examples the reader is referred to the Syntax of this Outline.

210. The construction of accessory sentences does not differ, in the main, from that of principal sentences; two exceptions have been noted above, that of conditional sentences, in which the connecting conjunction is omitted; and that of adjective sentences, where the relative pronoun is in the objective case. In general, the connecting word comes first; but there are exceptions to this, even in direct construction. The place of the accessory sentence is determined by its relation to its principal; and in this it follows the rules for placing the several factors of combinations, which they represent. We add a few examples, and refer our readers to the illustrations in the foregoing part of this Outline for more.—My lady bids me tell you, that though she harbours you as her uncle, she's nothing allied to your disorders; the various and contrary choices that men make in the world, argue that the same thing is not good to every man alike; before him, a great prophet, to proclaim his coming, is sent harbinger, who all invites; it was a sparing speech of the ancients, to say, that a friend is another self, for that a friend is far more than self; since the clearest discoveries we have of other spirits are imparted by revelation, the information of them should be taken from thence; our foster nurse of nature is repose, the which he lacks; that to provoke in him, are many simples operative, whose power will close the eye of anguish; I repent me that the duke is slain; if ever he go alone, I'll never wrestle for prize; such a place there is, where we did hunt; thus I absolve myself, and excuse him, who saved my life and honour, but praise neither.

ACCENTUATION.

211. Accentuation serves to express the unity of a notion, as well as the subordination of its parts, not only in the combination, but also in each of its factors, and in second derivatives. The unity of the notion is represented by the unity of the accent; and the subordination of its parts by a corresponding subordination of the accent with which they are pronounced.

212. The principal accent falls on the principal factor of the combination, and upon the radical part of each inflected word, or derivative; whilst the subordinate accent falls upon the subordinate factor of the combination, and upon the sign of relation in each factor. Thus in—man is mortal, a skilful teacher, he writes a letter, of gold, by art, has told, loved, founding, thankful: the principal accent is taken by mortal, skilful, letter, gold, art told, lov-, found-, thank-, and the subordinate accent falls upon man, teacher, writes, of, by, has, -ed, -ing, -ful.

213. All signs of relation have the subordinate accent; but we must distinguish those which are unaccented, as the terminations in speaker, golden, mighty, and the pronoun it: from those which are half-accented, as the terminations in wisdom, friendship, lawful, and the auxiliary verbs, has, will, shall, &c.

214. This accentuation must be distinguished from emphasis: which is the stress laid by the speaker on the words and syllables he wishes particularly to point out; as,—the Lord of hosts is with us; i. e. not on the side of our enemies;—He is our help and shield; i. e. we have no other defender;—he was coming away from the house when we met him; i. e. not going to it, as the party addressed supposed;—the princess said to this; i. e. not the prince;—this shoe is my father, no, this left shoe is my father;—we should distinguish between faults of omission and those of commission, when we judge the relations in which others stand to us;—this principle greatly simplifies the processes both of evolution and of evolution;—he is not hypercritical, but hypo-critical in what he says;—I have that within, that passeth show, these, but the trappings and the suits of woe.

PUNCTUATION.

215. In spoken language we observe certain pauses, which serve to convey our thoughts more clearly and accurately to the parties we address. These pauses are expressed in written language by certain characters called stops; and by the dash, the parenthesis, and the notes of interrogation and admiration.

216. The use of the full stop, or period, and of the signs of in*terrogation*, and admiration, does not require any explanation. We will speak briefly of the others.

217. The distinction between the use of the comma, the semi-colon, and the colon, is this;—the comma is placed between those factors of a compound sentence which need to be distinguished as individual factors, but which must not be divided from each other, since they form parts of one combination of notions;—the semi-colon is used to distinguish the several thoughts of a compound sentence, and indicates a grammatical connexion, as well as the connexion and combination of several distinct thoughts into one thought;—the colon separates sentences, both simple and compound, when there is no grammatical connexion between them, and when the logical connexion does not amount to a combination of the several parts into one whole. The following paragraph will illustrate this distinction. “It is not enough that all the world hath armed itself against vice, and, by all that is wise and sober amongst men, hath taken the part of virtue, adorning it with glorious appellatives, encouraging it by rewards, entertaining it with sweetness, and commanding it by edicts, fortifying it with defensives, and twining it in all artificial compliances: all this is short of man’s necessity: for this will, in all modest men, secure their actions in theatres and highways, in markets and churches, before the eye of judges, and in the society of witnesses; but the actions of closets and chambers, the designs and thoughts of men, their discourses in dark places, and the actions of retirements and of the night, are left indifferent to virtue or to vice; and of these, as man can take no cognizance, so he can make no coercitive; and therefore above one half of human actions is, by the laws of man, left unregarded and unprovided for. And, besides this, there are some men who are bigger than laws, and some are bigger than judges, and some judges have lessened themselves by fear and cowardice, by bribery and flattery, by iniquity and compliance; and where they have not, there they have notices but of few causes; and there are some sins so popular and universal, that to punish them is either impossible or intolerable; and to question such, would betray the weakness of the rods and axes, and represent the sinner to be stronger than the power that is appointed to be his bridle. And, after all this, we find sinners so prosperous that they escape, so potent that they fear not; and sin is made safe when it grows great; and innocence is oppressed, and the poor cries, and he hath no helper; and he is oppressed, and he wants a patron. And therefore God hath so ordained it, that there shall be a day of doom, wherein all that are let alone by men, shall be questioned by God, and every word and every action shall receive its just recompence of reward.”

218. It will be seen, however, in the foregoing passage, that the distinctions drawn are not always rigidly observed; but that where no misapprehension could arise, a comma is used for a semi-colon, and a semi-colon for a colon. And in this, punctuation exactly represents the pauses of speech.

219. In poetry, and in inverted construction, the use of the stops must be more frequent, and more exact, than in directly constructed prose; and in general, the safest rule for punctuation is to employ the fewest number that will make the sense of the writing clear.

220. The dash is much employed by modern writers, and is most frequently rather a rhetorical sign than a grammatical one. But where used grammatically, it has the power of a semi-colon, or of a colon; and is frequently added to comma, semi-colon, colon, and period too, with something like the effect of a dot placed after a rest in music; as,—“Let but Society be once rightly constituted,—by victorious Analysis. Labour itself shall be all one as rest; not grievous, but joyous. Wheat-fields, one would think, cannot come to grow untill’d; no man made clayey, or made weary thereby;—unless, indeed, machinery will do it? But if each will, according to rule of Benevolence, have a care for all, then surely—no one will be uncared for. Nay, who knows but, by sufficiently victorious Analysis, human life may be indefinitely lengthened, and men get rid of Death, as they have already done of the Devil? we shall then be happy in spite of Death and the Devil.—So preaches magiloquent Philosopher her Redeem’d Saturnia regna.” “What did he die of?—‘Of hunger:’—the king gave his steed the spur.”

221. The parenthesis is employed to denote a thought, connected with the matter in hand, but diverging from the line already determined in the speaker’s mind; thought worthy of mention, not worthy of pursuit; as,—“Whate’er I read to her, I’ll plead for you, as for my patron, (stand you so assur’d,) as firmly as yourself were still in place: yea, and (perhaps) with more successful words than you, unless you were a scholar, sir.” “The dangers of the days but newly gone, (whose memory is written on the earth with yet-appearing blood,) and the examples of every minute’s instance, (present now,) have put us in these ill-beseeming arms.” “Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant, Death, is strict in his arrest,) O, I could tell you,—but let it be.—” Instead of the parenthesis, commas or semi-colons are frequently used; especially when the thought is not far remote from the line along which the speaker’s thought is proceeding.

OF TEACHING GRAMMAR.

222. THE common school plan of teaching Grammar is open to serious objections, apart from those arising from the grammatical system of the books in general use. It proceeds on the supposition that language is made by grammar; and that certain forms, &c. are employed in speech, because the grammar lays down rules enjoining their use. So that parsing (as the analysis of words and sentences is termed) becomes nothing more than the reference of the forms to one and another rule, which have been committed to memory beforehand. Every child that has been subjected to this drudgery knows how crude, dead, nothing-worth, the results of such teaching are; whilst the process of teaching grammar is one of the most mechanical and most unwelcome of all school tasks. The fundamental axiom of the system on which the foregoing Outline has been drawn up,—that it is meaning which determines form, and not the reverse,—does away with the necessity of this drudgery, and turns into an almost amusing exercise, a process which may be made one of the most effective instruments for disciplining the mind. In the following sections we purpose to show, by a few examples, how grammar may be taught so as to make it something better than dead knowledge, and at the same time to afford a sort of proof of the truth of the system which we have imperfectly exhibited.

223. We should recommend teachers, in the first place, to lay aside all grammars, and to teach orally, that is, to help their pupils to construct their grammar for themselves. The machinery requisite is of the simplest character. For the teacher himself a well-grounded knowledge of the principles of the modern system is, of course, indispensable, and he will soon discover that the knowledge of any development of it in the shape of a grammar constructed in accordance with it, merely, is insufficient; his own experience will soon outstrip whatever such a grammar, even, could impart, and he will be puzzled, and most deservedly so, if he attempt to use the modern system in the spirit of the old system of rules and forms. For the class, a black board, or large slate, on which to write down the examples, and to exhibit the different steps of the analysis, will be all that is wanted. Unless, to make the method more interesting to an advanced class, he should cause them to write down, in blank books, of convenient size and form, the results of their exercises. So equipped, he may begin with pupils of sufficient age to follow a short train of reasoning, and to understand the meaning of the several technical terms he must use, for the sake of exactness and conciseness. Our examples, and our treatment of them, shall be such as such a teacher might employ.

224. The emperor of Russia was my father. This is a simple sentence; and the first thing to be looked at is the assertion, which is called the predicate,—was my father: the next, that respecting which this assertion is made, or the subject,—the emperor of Russia. The principal word in the predicate is father, which is the name of a person, called a substantive, and a common one, because it applies to a great number of persons. The chief word in the subjective part of the sentence is emperor, also a substantive, but not a common one, as it expresses the name of a narrow class of persons. The relation between the subject and the predicate is expressed by was, here used simply as a relational verb; and it shows that relation by its being in the singular number, as emperor is; this relation is further expressed, by father being also in the singular number. There is more, however, to be learnt respecting that verb, was. The speaker is telling of some one different from himself, and not the person or persons addressed, and thus it is put in the third person. He is making an assertion of fact, and so it is in the indicative mood. He is speaking of a time before the moment of his making the assertion, and it is therefore put in the past tense. But we must look a little more at both subject and predicate, since each is characterized or modified by other words associated with it. The predicate, father, has my connected with it, which is equivalent to of me; it is called a pronoun, since it stands instead of the speaker's own name; and it is an adjective pronoun, because it signifies something that more fully characterizes and defines the notion of the speaker conveyed by the term father. Its position is the only outward sign of its relation to that substantive. The subject, emperor, has connected with it the, and of Russia. The latter characterizes it most clearly for the speaker's purpose. Russia is the name of a country, and so a substantive: and it is called a proper substantive, since there is but one country so named. Of is simply the sign of relation between emperor and Russia, and is termed a preposition: it signifies here, possession. The calls distinct attention to the subject; it implies that there was but one person, so named, that the speaker was thinking of; it is called a demonstrative, from this meaning. Its position alone determines its relation to the substantive emperor. To sum up this analysis:—we have here an example of the predicative combination, in the entire sentence; and in both subject and predicate, which compose that combination, an example of the attributive combination, in the former by the association of a substantive with of, and of a demonstrative with emperor; and in the latter by the association of the adjective pronoun, my, with father.

225. We shall not need to examine all our examples so minutely, but the teacher should do so, till every possible relation, and every form of the different relations, that the examples he selects can teach, are brought clearly before the pupils' minds; but he should not repeat ad nauseam the most elementary of those relations and signs; but use the terms predicative, attributive, or objective combination, presuming that the pupils have been sufficiently instructed to know and see the meaning of these terms.

226. After life's fitful fever, he sleeps well. He sleeps is a predicative combination. Life's fitful fever, a compound attributive combination. But what is the relation of well; and what the relation of after life's fitful fever? These are designated objects, and, in connexion with the verb sleeps, they form a compound objective combination. Well denotes how he sleeps; it is called an adverb, and an adverb of manner; and as used here it is an object of manner. Its relation to the verb is shown only by its place. Life's fitful fever is connected with the verb by after, which is a preposition; and here, one of time; so that we call the expression after life's fitful fever, an object of time, to the verb.

227. This guest of summer, the temple-haunting martlet, does approve, by his loved mansionry, that the heaven's breath smells woefully here. The predicative combination here has for subject guest, for predicate does approve. This guest, guest of summer, the martlet, temple-haunting martlet, and this guest—the martlet, are attributive combinations, the last being composed of two substantives in apposition. There are two objective factors; the first is one of manner. How is the approval shown? By his loved mansionry. His mansionry, and loved mansionry, make a compound attributive combination. The second object, and which stands immediately in connexion with the verb, as showing what is approved, is expressed by an accessory sentence. That the heaven's breath smells woefully here. That connects this sentence with its principal, and is called a conjunction, from its use. The predicative combination in this accessory sentence has breath for subject, and smells for predicate. The heaven's breath is a compound attributive combination. Woefully, called an adverb, is the object of manner; and here, another adverb, one of place; so that, together, they form a compound objective combination, with the verb foregoing. This accessory sentence is called a substantive sentence, from its occupying a similar relation to the principal sentence that a substantive would.

228. There is a tide in the affairs of men, which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune; omitted, all the voyage of their life is bound in shallows and in miseries. The principal sentence in this example, put into such a form that we can treat it grammatically, is—a tide is in the affairs of men. This is the predicative combination, unless it should be said, that it stands as predicate here, and not as a relational verb, or copula, merely; and then, in the affairs of men, will be an object of place. Observe that a tide, is an attributive combination; a being, indeed, a numeral. The affairs, and affairs of men, make two attributive combinations. A tide is the real subject; but for emphasis' sake, it is put after is, as though it were the predicate, and its place is filled by the formal subject, there; which is an adverbial demonstrative pronoun. The remainder of the example consists of two accessory sentences, each being also a compound one. They are called adjective sentences, because they stand, truly, in the attributive relation to the subject of the principal sentence, tide. They are contracted into one, by the use of but one relative pronoun, which, to connect both with their substantive. Both are conditional compound sentences, the conditional factors being abridged into participles. In the first, it (understood) leads is the predicative combination, that stands as principal sentence in relation to the abridged conditional sentence. On is used adverbially, and is an object of place, or direction; to fortune is a factive object, as it shows the result of the activity of the verb. The conditional sentence, fully expressed, would be, if it be taken at the flood. the participial predicate alone is retained, and the object of time, at the flood. In the second, voyage, and is bound, are the subject and predicate of the relatively principal sentence, forming a predicative combination. The voyage, all the voyage, their life, voyage of life, are attributive combinations. The predicate bound, has two objects of manner, in shallows, in miseries; which standing in exactly the same relation to the predicate, are co-ordinated, and connected by and. The conditional sentence here, fully expressed, would be, if it be omitted; and here, also, the participle alone is retained.

229. I pray you, in your letters, when you shall these unlucky deeds relate, speak of me as I am. I pray is the chief sentence here; and you the immediate object of its verb. The rest is an accessory sentence, standing in the factive relation to the verb pray. Its verb, speak, is in the imperative; and of me stands as its closest object, being in the relation of cause, or origin; whilst as I am is a subsidiary sentence, standing in the objective relation of manner to speak, being connected with it by as. Earlier in the whole sentence, in your letters, is in the objective relation of time to speak; and the remaining part is another subsidiary sentence in the objective relation of time to speak. This sentence is connected by the relative adverb when with its principal; and has for subject, you; for predicate, shall relate; and for its immediate object, the attributive combination, these unlucky deeds. The accessory sentence is a substantive one; and its subsidiary sentences are both adverbial.

230. Truth is compared in Scripture to a streaming fountain; if her waters flow not in a perpetual progression, they sicken into a muddy pool of conformity and tradition. The first part of the example is a simple predicative combination, with a double objective combination, of place, and of effect. The second part has a conditional accessory sentence prefixed, the subject of which has an attributive factor combined with it; and the predicate has the negative particle; whilst an objective factor of manner, also characterized by the numeral a, and by an adjective, follows it. The subject of the principal sentence, in this part, is a pronoun, the real subject being the same as that of the preceding accessory; the object is factive, showing the result which follows the non-existence of what is stated in the conditional sentence; and it has four attributive factors joined with it; the first a numeral, the second an adjective, and the third and fourth substantives, connected by the conjunction, and, and joined to the substantive they characterize by the preposition, of.

231. The light which we have gained, was given us, not to be ever starting on, but by it to discover onward things more remote from our knowledge. The sentence here has for subject, light; and for predicate, was given. With the subject is connected, first, the demonstrative, the; and next, an accessory adjective sentence, connected with it by the relative pronoun, which; the sentence itself having we for subject, and have gained for predicate; whilst the relative pronoun which serves as connective, is the object to gained. Next after the verb comes an object, us, in what we have called the remote or mediate relation; the verb itself being passive, does not admit an immediate object. Lastly, we have a factive object, stated by two infinitives, to be starting, and to discover, contrasted by the aid of not and but. The former of these infinitives has two objects; one of time, ever; and the other of place, or direction, on;—the latter has, preceding it, an object of manner, by it; it referring to the subject of the principal sentence, light; and following it an object immediately related to it, things, which is characterized by two attributes; the first, onward, and the second, more remote; and associated with the second attribute, and in the objective relation of place to it, is the attributive combination, our knowledge, connected with the adjective it is related to by the preposition, from.

232. Why was this nation chosen before any other, that out of her, as out of Sion, should be proclaimed and sounded forth the first tidings and trumpet of Reformation to all Europe? An interrogative sentence. The interrogative adverbial pronoun, why, indicates the question, and also the kind of answer sought, one that might stand in the relation of causality to the predicate of the inquiry. The question is also indicated by the inverted construction; this nation, the subject, being placed after the inflected part of the predicate, was. The predicate is was chosen; and two objects follow it, the first, of manner, before any other; and the second of purpose, in the form of an accessory sentence. This accessory sentence is connected with the predicate it is related to by the conjunction, that; and it has two subjects, connected by the conjunction, and,—the first tidings,—trumpet of Reformation; the predicate is also double, the parts being also connected by the conjunction, and,—should be proclaimed,—sounded; the first object is one of place, out of her, and it has an abridged comparative sentence associated with it, as out of Sion; with one of the predicates an adverbial object of manner is connected, sounded forth; and at the end of the whole question is another object of place, to all Europe.

233. Though all the winds of doctrine were let loose to play upon the earth, so truth be in the field, we do injuriously by licensing and prohibiting to misdoubt her strength. Let her and falsehood grapple; who ever knew truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter? In this example we have first a principal sentence preceded by two accessories: the first concessive, the second conditional. The principal sentence is simply we do, and it, first, has an adverbial object of manner, injuriously; and secondly, a factive object, to misdoubt; which, again, has first an immediate object, her strength; and next, two objects of manner, connected with it by the preposition, by, and with each other by the conjunction, and. The concessive sentence is connected with the principal sentence by though; its subject is all the winds of doctrine; its predicate, in the conjunctive improbable form, were let loose; and its object, factive, to play; which also has as an object of place, upon the earth. The conditional sentence is joined with the principal by so; truth is the subject; the predicate, in the conjunctive probable form, be; and the object of place, in the field. We have next an interrogative sentence, preceded by a concessive accessory sentence. The interrogation is signified by who; and this is also the subject of the sentence; the predicate is knew; the object of time, ever, precedes the verb; and the immediate object, truth, follows it; a factive object, abridged from an infinitive to a participle, comes next, put; and this again has, first, the factive object, to the worse; and next, the compound object of manner, in a free and open encounter. The concessive sentence is abridged into the imperative, let grapple; and it has two subjects, joined by and,—her, falsehood; her is put instead of truth, which occurs in the foregoing sentence; and it is in the objective case; because, though formally it is the subject of the verb, grapple, really it is the object of the auxiliary, let; by the help of which alone we now form the third persons of the imperative.

234. I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue, unexercised and unbreathed, that never sallies out and sees her adversary, but slinks out of the race, where that immortal garland is to be run for not without dust and heat. The principal sentence here is negative, I cannot praise. The object of the verb is virtue, to which are related, beside the numeral a, the four attributives, fugitive, cloistered, uncexercised, unbreathed; and the two accessory sentences connected with it by that, and contrasted with each other by but. The first of these adjective sentences is negative; but the negation is expressed by the adverbial object never; the subject being the relative pronoun, that; the predicate, sallies, has, beside never, the object of direction, out, and the facitive object, (which is also an accessory sentence, having the same subject as its principal, and one object,) sees her adversary; which is connected with it by the conjunction, and. The second accessory adjective sentence has the same subject as the first; and its predicate, stinks, is followed by the object of direction, out of the race. With this object is associated another accessory sentence of the adjective kind, connected with it by the relative adverb, where; that immortal garland being the subject; is to be run for, the predicate, followed by a double negative object of manner, not without dust and heat.

235. The analysis of the following sentence we give in a tabular form, that the teacher may see in what form the results of the examination of any sentence should appear on the black board; and also, how completely this method of investigating the laws of language simplifies, and reduces under a few clear laws, forms and expressions which appear most complicated, and which are referred to a variety of rules, or else left unnoticed in the common grammars; and, yet again, how the laws of syntax may be both discovered and exhibited so that pupils of any intelligence can perceive and retain them.

This justifies the high providence of God, who, though he commands us temperance, justice, continence, yet pours out before us, even to a profuseness, all desirable things, and gives us minds that can wander beyond all limit and satiety.

I. PRINCIPAL SENTENCE.

Subject.	Predicate.	Immediate Object.

THIS BOOK IS DUE ON THE LAST DATE STAMPED BELOW

AN INITIAL FINE OF 25 CENTS

WILL BE ASSESSED FOR FAILURE TO RETURN
THIS BOOK ON THE DATE DUE. THE PENALTY
WILL INCREASE TO 50 CENTS ON THE FOURTH
DAY AND TO $1.00 ON THE SEVENTH DAY OVERDUE.

OCT 5 1935

OCT 6 1935

OCT 7 1935

JUL 25 1966 8 71

M 11 6687R C

MAY 21 1968 06

REC'D LD

JUL 3 1968

REC'D LD MAY 6 71-11AM 21 02

Library of the English language.

Nov. 26, '18 Lib. School

NOV 22 1920

OCT 3 1935

7 1935

130165

